We are of the opinion that the claims of the defendants are not maintainable. No question is made but that the surrogate had ample power to set aside his decree for fraud, and require a further accounting by the administratrix as to the estate (section 1, chap. 859, Laws 1870); but the claim is that the sureties were not bound by the subsequent adjudications of the surrogate, for the reason that they did not have notice of the proceeding. This claim is clearly untenable. The decree discharging the administratrix and her sureties was, when made, assailable by any party thereby aggrieved either by motion to set it aside or by proceedings on appeal. In neither case was it necessary that the sureties should have notice of the proceeding. The sureties are the privies of the administratrix, and are precluded from questioning any lawful order made by the surrogate in a proceeding wherein she is a party, if obtained without collusion between such administratrix and the next of kin or creditors of the estate. Scofield v. Churchill, 72 N. Y. 565; Gerould v. Wilson, 81 N. Y. 583.

Their bond contemplates that they shall remain sureties as long as the surrogate retains jurisdiction of the proceedings in administration of the estate, and has power to make valid orders therein affecting the property administered upon.

Of course, the sureties would not be bound by an order which the surrogate had no jurisdiction to make; but so long as his jurisdiction continues the liability of the sureties remains. The very language of the bond provides for orders made in proceedings inter alios, and for the liability of the sureties for a nonperformance by the administratrix of any decree or order made by the surrogate's court. The condition of the bond is that liability shall follow her infidelity to her trust, or disobedience of any lawful order or decree, whenever made in the proceedings. It was, we think, never heard of in practice that sureties on an administrator's bond should have notice of proceedings in the administration of an intestate's estate. It could not be claimed that these sureties were entitled to notice of an appeal from the surrogate's decree, or that if an appeal was taken from a decree in favor of an administrator, and the decree should be reversed, they would not still remain liable upon their bond. Such bonds are similar to those given in civil actions upon appeals and otherwise, and have always been held to abide the result of the action.

The real question, therefore, is as to the legality of the arrangement made with the defendants in respect to the custody and use of the funds of the estate during the pendency of proceedings in administration, and the effect of the repayment of such moneys by the defendants to the administratrix under the circumstances disclosed in the case.

We are of the opinion that any employment of trust funds for the individual benefit of a trustee is forbidden by the rules of equity, and constitutes a devastavit authorizing the removal of the trustee, and the reclamation of such funds from anyone receiving them with knowledge of their character. The employment and use of such moneys by executors, administrators and other trustees, during the continuance of the trust, has been from the earliest times the subject of frequent consideration by the courts, and their decisions have displayed a uniform tendency towards that mode of use which should afford the greatest security to the fund. Their employment by the trustees in trade, or as loans to persons engaged in such business, or in the prosecution of mercantile, commercial and manufacturing enterprises or speculative adventures, has been uniformly condemned as illegal, and as constituting a devastavit of the estate. Wilmerding v. McKesson, 108 N. Y. 336, 4 Cent. Rep. 526; King v. Talbot, 40 N. Y. 90; Fellows v. Longyor, 91 N. Y. 324; Wetmore v. Porter, 92 N. Y. 76.

3 L. R. A.

So, too, it is the uniform doctrine of the cases that trust funds so invested by the trustees in the hands of third persons, having knowledge of their trust character, still remain impressed with the obligation of the trust in the hands of the holder, and are subject to be reclaimed by suit in the name of their trustees, or in that of the beneficiaries of the trust, and restored to the trust fund. Wilmerding v. McKesson, supra; Wetmore v. Porter, supra; Rogers v. Squires, 93 N. Y. 50; Clark v. Hougham, 2 Barn. & C. 149; 2 Perry, Trusts, §§ 828-832; 2 Wms. Exrs. 801; Field v. Schieffelin, 7 Johns. Ch. 150.

Neither can the transferee of such fund protect himself from an action brought by the trustee to reclaim them, by showing that such trustee was a legatee under the will as next of kin to an intestate, and thus entitled to an interest in the fund. 2 Perry, Trusts, § 811.

Such interest can become a legal right in any part of such fund only after administration has been had and the decree of the court has provided for division and distribution according to the rules regulating such proceedings. We conceive it to be beyond the power of an executor or administrator to bind the estate they represent to any use of its funds, by contract with third persons having knowledge of the character of the property transferred, except in the ordinary and usual course of administration of the trust, and in furtherance of its objects. The bond in question was executed for the sole purpose of securing the persons interested in the property the administratrix was about to receive, from any loss which they might sustain through her misconduct or dishonesty; and the defendants were well aware of the character of the transaction. The defendants thereby contracted to become sureties for the faithful performance by her of her duties as such administratrix, and the beneficiaries of the estate thereupon became, under the theory of the law, entitled, not only to the security afforded by the bond, but also to that of the funds of the estate remaining in the hands of the administratrix. If this transaction is sanctioned, one of the securities that the law provides to such persons is entirely destroyed, and the funds of the estate are merged in the personal responsibility of the sureties alone, subject to the hazard and casualties which frequently attend persons engaged in trade.

Estates in the hands of administrators are always supposed to be under the immediate control of the surrogate's court, and subject from day to day to such orders as it may make in relation thereto. It would be contrary to the policy of the law to allow an administrator, at the outset of his administration, by contract, to place the funds of the estate beyond the reach of the court, and irreclaimable until after all the duties of administration have been performed by the administrator. It would certainly be no excuse to an administrator, for disobedience to an order of the surrogate as to the disposition of any portion of the estate, to allege that it was impossible for him to obey because he had placed its funds out of his possession. Neither would it be any defense to a third person, in an action by anyone having authority to recover possession of such funds, to plead that he held them by virtue of a contract with a former trustee, entered into with him as such trustee.

We think this proposition was decided in Poultney v. Randall, 9 Bosw. 286. There the general guardian of an infant sued the defendant for moneys collected by such defendant, belonging to the estate of the infant, under a power of attorney from the guardian. The defense set up was that he held the money by virtue of a contract with the guardian to so hold it as security for his obligation upon the guardian's bond, and that the guardian was insolvent. The court held that the facts pleaded constituted no defense, and that the contract was void upon considerations of public policy, and a fraud upon the statute requiring security for the due performance by the guardian of his duties as such. We can see no material distinction between that case and the case at bar, and approve of the reasons therein alleged for the decision. The case of Wilder v. Butterfield, 50 How. Pr. 885, is to a similar effect.

But it is claimed that the surrender, after the decree canceling the administratrix's bond, of the funds of the estate held by the defendants to the administratrix, operates as a defense to this action. The principle upon which the appellants make this point is not very clearly presented in their points, and we are unable to see the exact theory upon which it is based. They do not claim that the plaintiff is estopped from alleging the invalidity of the assignment, or of the decree upon the faith of which the payment was made. They claim, however, that "Of two innocent parties that one must suffer who puts it in the power of the third person to do the act which caused the injury." This contention is probably based upon the familiar maxim that "When one of two innocent parties must sustain a loss from the fraud of a third, such loss shall fall upon the one, if either, whose act has enabled such fraud to be committed." 8 Abb. N. Y. Dig. "Maxims," 84, and volume 4, "Maxims," 332. This maxim has been applied and illustrated in numerous cases in this State, among which are the following: Spraghts v. Hawley, 39 N. Y. 441; Moore v. Metropolitan Nat. Bank, 55 N. Y. 41; Grimbold v. Haven, 25 N. Y. 595; Exchange Bank v. Monteath, 26 N. Y. 505; Sandford v. Handy, 28 Wend. 268; Root v. French, 18 Wend. 573; Voorhis v. Otmstead, 66 N. Y. 116.

These cases generally relate to the authority of agents whose right to deal with the property of their principals was in dispute, and the maxim has been applied by reason of various peculiar circumstances which were deemed sufficient to preclude the principal from availing himself of the agent's want of actual authority; but the general principle involved has been applied in many cases where a loss has followed from the negligence of one party which enabled a fraud to be committed upon another.

We are of the opinion that the maxim has no application to the case in hand, for the reason that no actionable fraud has been shown to have been committed upon the defendants in this transaction, nor has any loss accrued to them in consequence of the surrender of the money referred to. It is probably true that the defendants would not have surrendered to the administratrix the funds of the estate in their possession, or have repaid to her the debt which they owed her, except for the decree produced for their inspection; but it is also very clear that they had no right to retain such funds by virtue of their contract with the administratrix, and there was no intention to commit a fraud upon them by the administratrix in obtaining possession of property to which she was legally entitled. She was entitled to the repayment of her loan as a matter of course, for she held a promissory note therefor payable on demand, and no possible defense could be made against its collection. Neither, as we have seen, could they have resisted a claim made by her or others for the reclamation of the money of the estate. They have done nothing, therefore, in consequence of the decree, except what they were under legal obligation to do, and have therefore suffered no legal loss or injury from the transaction.

The surrender of the property in question would not even have furnished a good consideration for a promise made by the administratrix. Vanderbilt v. Schreyer, 91 N. Y. 892.

It is of the very essence of an action of fraud or deceit that the same should be accompanied by damage, and neither damnum absque injuria nor injuria absque damno by itself establishes a good cause of action. Hutchins v. Hutchins, 7 Hill, 104; Michigan v. Phœnix Bank, 38 N. Y. 9.

Neither can a party claim to have been defrauded who has been induced by artifice to do that which the law would have otherwise compelled him to perform. Thompson v. Menck, 41 N. Y. [2 Keyes] 82; Story v. Conger, 36 N. Y. 673; Randall v. Hazelton, 12 Allen, 412.

The defendants may possibly lose the money which they pay in satisfaction of their bond; but this will result from their contract, and the confidence reposed by them in their principal, and not at all from the surrender of the property held by them. It is not probable, however, that they will lose anything, as, for all that appears, their principal is perfectly responsible, and liable to indemnify them for any sums they may be obliged to pay on her account. It affirmatively appears that in January, 1883, she not only had in her possession all the funds of the estate, but also the additional sum of upwards of $3,000, the result of her own savings during the preceding two or three years, and being an amount largely exceeding the liability of the defendants on their bond.

The main question in the case really seems to be, Who shall pursue the administratrix for the moneys of the estate improperly retained by her? We think it is the duty of the defendants, as the object of their bond was to relieve the next of kin from the necessity of resorting to the personal liability of a dishonest, negligent or absconding administrator. We are further of the opinion that the defendants are precluded from the benefit of the principle contained in the maxim by reason of the obligations of their bond. They are the privies of their principal, and the guarantors of her fidelity in the administration of her trust.

The decree under which the defendants claim discharge from liability was procured by a fraud practiced upon the surrogate through the presentation of papers fraudulently obtained and used by her. It was against the perpetration of such frauds that the defendants' bond was intended to protect the beneficiaries of the estate. The defendants had covenanted that the administratrix should faithfully execute the trust reposed in her, and obey all lawful decrees and orders of the surrogate's court. When she obtained, through fraud, the order of the surrogate awarding the moneys of the estate to her, and canceling her bond, she violated the obligations of her trust, and the defendants became liable for the damages flowing from such breach of duty.

That the defendants were deceived by the administratrix constituted no protection to them, for they had guaranteed that she should deceive nobody in the administration of her trust. The liability of the sureties is coextensive with that of the administratrix, and embraces the performance of every duty she is called upon to perform in the course of administration. It is quite absurd to say that the very fact which creates a cause of action against the sureties should also operate as a defense to them. They cannot stand as innocent parties in relation to an act which they have covenanted to the plaintiff, and all others interested, should never be performed, and they have sustained no legal loss when subjected to a liability which they agreed to assume in the event which is now alleged as the cause of their misfortune. We are therefore of the opinion that the judgments below should be affirmed, with costs.

The decision in action No. 2, between the same parties, is necessarily controlled by the determination in action No. 1, and the judgment in that case must therefore also be affirmed, with costs.

All concur, except Earl and Peckham, JJ., dissenting.

Cornelia A. BEVERIDGE, as Executrix, etc., Appt.,
v.

NEW YORK ELEVATED R. CO. et al.,
Repts.

(.....N. Y.....)

1. A judgment declaring a tripartite agreement between three corporations to be void as to one of them, rendered in an action by that one against the other two, is not res judicata upon any question arising between one of the defendant corporations and the stockholders of the other, or as to the attitude of one of the defendant corporations towards its own stockholders.

2. The power conferred by the New York Act of 1839 upon a railroad corporation to contract with another for the use of their respective roads in such manner as the contract may prescribe involves the power to make a lease for a term of years.

3. A guaranty by one corporation, on a lease of the road of another, of an annual dividend of 10 per cent on the capital stock of the lessor company creates no privity between the lessee company and the stockholders of the other; and a statement printed on the certificates of stock to the effect that such dividend is guaranteed, purporting only to be a statement of a fact having reference to an agreement between the companies, which statement is not signed by the lessee company, does not constitute any contract with the stockholders.

4. An agreement by the directors of a corporation, made in good faith, and with apparent reasons to reduce the amount of moneys payable under a lease of their corporation, is not in excess of their power or voidable at the instance of the stockholders, especially where nearly nine tenths of them have acquiesced, and given practical effect to the agreement.

5. Where a tripartite agreement between three corporations has been held invalid as to one of them, an action to sever the contractual relations is within the honest discretion of the directors of the other companies.

(January 15, 1889.)

APPEAL by plaintiff, from a judgment of the General Term of the Supreme Court, Second Department, affirming a judgment of the Kings Special Term, in favor of defendants in an action to compel the transfer of certain stock and the payment of certain dividends, and to set aside certain instruments. Affirmed.

The material facts are fully set out in the opinion.

Mr. William H. Arnoux, for appellant:

The contract was in effect a disposition of all the property of the New York Company, and was void.

Abbot v. Am. Hard Rubber Co. 83 Barb. 582; Black v. Del. & R. Canal Co. 24 N. J. Eq. 455; Copeland v. Citizens Gas Light Co. 61 Barb. 60.

Such a contract was ultra vires, and needed the ratification of the stockholders to give it any validity.

Omaha Hotel Co. v. Wade, 97 U. S. 13 (24 L. ed. 917); Zabriskie v. Hackensack & N. Y. R. Co. 18 N. J. Eq. 188; Lauman v. Lebanon Valley R. Co. 30 Pa. 46; Ervin v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 23 Blatchf. 517, 525; Hays v. Ottawa, O. & F. R. V. R. Co. 61 Ill. 422; Chicago Gas Light & C. Co. v. People's Gas Light & C. Co. 11 West. Rep. 63, 121 Ill. 580; Clearwater v. Meredith, 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 25 (17 L. ed. 604); Nugent v. Putnam Co. 8 Biss. 105; S. C. 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 241 (22 L. ed. 88); McMahan v. Morrison, 16 Ind. 172; Mowrey v. Indianapolis & C. R. Co. 4 Biss. 78; Green's Brice, Ultra Vires, 2d ed. 632, 633; Beman v. Rufford, 1 Sim. N. S. 550, 20 L. J. Ch. 587; Shrewsbury & B. R. Co. v. London & N. W. R. Co. 4 De G. M. & G. 115, 23 L. J. Ch. 682.

The contract was made by the Metropolitan in the interest and for the benefit of the persons who, upon the faith of it, would be induced to take and pay for its stock and become shareholders. In such cases the contract inures to the benefit of the real parties in interest who are certainly not the directors, not the corporation, as an artificial person, but the holders of the stock who have invested with a view to dividends, and whose rights the directors are supposed to care for.

Metropolitan Elevated R. Co. v. Manhattan R. Co. 14 Abb. N. C. 182; Lawrence v. Fza, 20 N. Y. 268; Hand v. Kennedy, 88 N. Y. 149; Burr v. Beers, 24 N. Y. 178; Thorpe v. Keokuk Coal Co. 48 N. Y. 253; Campbell v. Smith, 71 N. Y. 26; Boardman v. Lake Shore & M. S. R.

2 L. R. A.

Co. 84 N. Y. 157; Prouty v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 85 N. Y. 273; Clark v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 94 N. Y. 217; March v. Eastern R. Co. 43 N. H. 515.

There can be such a condition of things as will justify a court of equity in compelling directors to declare a dividend contrary to their judgment.

Beers v. Bridgeport Spring Co. 42 Conn. 17; Scott v. Eagle Fire Co. 7 Paige, 198; Brown v. Buffalo, N. Y. & E. R. Co. 27 Hun, 342.

Whenever money which ought to have been divided among the stockholders has been withheld, and whenever there is a clear abuse of power on the part of the corporate management, and a refusal to declare a dividend that ought to be declared, a court of equity will, at the instance of any shareholder, compel the proper authorities to declare and pay the dividend.

Stevens v. South Devon R. Co. 9 Hare, 313; Brown v. Buffalo, N. Y. & E. R. Co. 27 Hun, 342; Robinson v. Smith, 3 Paige, 223; Scott v. Eagle Fire Co. 7 Paige, 198; State v. Bank of La. 6 La. 745; Pratt v. Pratt, 83 Conn. 446; Beers v. Bridgeport Spring Co. 42 Conn. 17.

Messrs. Luke A. Lockwood and E. B. & C. P. Cowles, also for appellant:

The Manhattan Company agreed to make the annual payment of $650,000 as a dividend on the capital stock of the New York Company, and for such purpose the New York Company agreed to receive the sum.

Dividends are the property of the stockholders.

Taylor, Private Corporations, § 568; Le Roy v. Globe Ins. Co. 2 Edw. Ch. 657; Kane v. Bloodgood, 7 Johns. Ch. 90; Re Le Blanc, 14 Hun, 8, affirmed in 75 N. Y. 598. See Boardman v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 84 N. Y. 157; Van Dyck v. McQuade, 86 N. Y. 38.

An agreement made by one corporation to pay dividends on the capital stock of another corporation when ratified by the stockholders of that corporation, is a contract made for the benefit of the individual stockholders, the performance of which may be enforced by them.

See Vrooman v. Turner, 69 N. Y. 280; Hand v. Kennedy, 88 N. Y. 149; Little v. Banks, 85 N. Y. 258; Todd v. Weber, 95 N. Y. 181.

Where a statement is made for the purpose of inducing a person to act upon the faith of the representations, and such person does rely upon the representations, the party making the statement is estopped from denying the truth or effect of the same.

See Pickard v. Sears, 6 Ad. & El. 469; Weland Canal Co. v. Hathaway, 8 Wend. 480; Dezell v. Odell, 3 Hill, 215; Plumb v. Cattaraugus Co. Mut. Ins. Co. 13 N. Y. 392; Brown v. Bowen, 80 N. Y. 519; Blair v. Wait, 69 N. Y. 113.

Messrs. Julien T. Davies and Charles A. Gardiner, for respondents:

The contract of guaranty, stamped upon the certificates of stock of the New York Company, was a contract between the Manhattan and the New York Companies solely, to which the stockholders were not parties or privies, and upon which the plaintiff can have no right of action against either the Manhattan Company or the New York Company.

See Harkness v. Manhattan R. Co. 22 Jones & S. 174; People v. Metropolitan Elevated R. Co. 2 L. R. A.

26 Hun, 82; Flagg v. Manhattan R. Co. 10 Fed. Rep. 413.

The plaintiff can maintain no action against the New York Company for dividends on his stock, because he has no contract for dividends with said company.

Williams v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 93 N. Y. 162; Luling v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co. 45 Barb. 510; Karnes v. Rochester & G. V. R. Co. 4 Abb. Pr. N. S. 107; Barry v. Merchants Exchange Co. 1 Sandf. Ch. 280; Ely v. Sprague, 1 Clarke, Ch. 351; 2 Waterman, Corp. 149 and note 1.

As matter of law, the will of a majority of stockholders governs in all acts and proceedings within the limits of the Act of incorporation. Everyone who becomes a stockholder assents beforehand to all measures that shall be sanctioned by a majority; each stockholder tacitly agrees to subject his individual will to the will of the body.

East Tenn. & V. R. Co. v. Gammon, 5 Sneed, 567; Duffee v. Old Colony & F. R. R. Co. 5 Allen, 230; Bill v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 16 Fed. Rep. 19. See also Wallace v. Long Island R. Co. 12 Hun, 468; Faulds v. Yates, 57 Ill. 416; Dudley v. Kentucky High School, 9 Bush, 578; St. Mary's Church Case, 7 Serg. & R. 517; Kean v. Johnson, 9 N. J. Eq. 401; People v. Albany & S. R. Co. 55 Barb. 344.

Chapter 213 of the Laws of 1889 has been repeatedly held to give authority for the leasing of the property of one railroad corporation to another.

Fisher v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 46 N. Y. 644; Woodruff v. Erie R. Co. 93 N. Y. 609; Flagg v. Manhattan R. Co. supra.

Gray, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff's testator, in March, 1882, was the owner and holder of a certificate for 100 shares of the capital stock of the defendant the New York Elevated Railroad Company, on the margin of which were engraved the following words: "The Manhattan Railway Company, for value received, has agreed to pay to the New York Elevated Railway Company an amount equal to 10 per cent per annum on the capital stock of the latter company—that is, on $6,500,000—payable quarterly, commencing January 1, 1880." There was no signature to this marginal writing.

The certificate of stock was issued in the name of S. T. Russell & Co., and the plaintiff's testator acquired its possession under an assignment, in blank as to names, etc., printed in the usual form upon its back, and signed by S. T. Russell & Co. Testator, in July, 1884, commenced this action, and he seeks therein to obtain a judgment—first, that the New York Elevated Railway Company be compelled to transfer the stock on its books, and to issue in its place to him a new certificate, upon which should be the same words as were upon the margin of the old certificate; second, that the Manhattan Railway Company be compelled to pay to the said New York Company an amount equal to 10 per cent per annum on the capital stock of the latter company from July 1, 1881, to July 1, 1884; and third, that out of such payment the New York Company be compelled to pay him $3,250, "being thirteen dividends, of $250 each, for the several quarters commencing July 1, 1881, to and including the quarter ending July 1, 1884, together with the interest on the several quarters."

In order to better understand the nature of this claim, and the grounds upon which are based our conclusions with respect to it, some review of the principal facts and corporate transactions of these two companies, as they appear from the record before us, is necessary.

Though the legal questions presented are grave, and of considerable importance as to the parties defendant, they are within a comparatively narrow compass. In May, 1879, the defendants, the New York and the Manhattan Railway Companies united with the Metropolitan Elevated Railway Company in the execution of a tripartite agreement, by the terms of which the New York and Metropolitan Companies were to lease their railways and appurtenant properties and franchises to the Manhattan Company for a term of 999 years.

There was reserved in that agreement, as to each of the lessor companies, the obligation of discharging certain liabilities incurred by, or possibly accruing to, them, and of meeting all claims, in action or otherwise, existing against them on January 31, 1879. On its part, the lessee company assumed certain liabilities of the lessors, agreed to pay an equal amount of first mortgage bonds of each company, and to do various other things expressed therein, or in the annexed form of lease; but with its other provisions we are not particularly concerned.

In accordance with this agreement the New York Company executed the lease, in a form described in the tripartite agreement, to the Manhattan Company, in May, 1879. By its provisions the Manhattan Company agreed to pay a fixed sum of $10,000 a year, semi-annually, and by the following article "Guaranteed to the New York Company an annual dividend of 10 per cent on the capital stock of the New York Company, to the amount of $6,500,000; that is to say, the Manhattan Company will each and every year during the term hereby granted, beginning with the first day of October, 1879, pay to the New York Company $650,000, free from all taxes, in equal quarter yearly payments of $162,500 each; and the Manhattan Company will, from time to time, execute, in proper form, a guaranty to the above effect, printed or engraved upon the certificates of stock of the New York Company; and, as such stock certificates are surrendered for cancellation and reissue, will, from time to time, upon request of the holder, renew such guaranty upon all reissued certificates." By a subsequent article that company further agreed, "in addition to the rental hereinbefore provided," to pay the taxes, etc., which might be imposed on the lessor company.

A similar lease was executed by the Metropolitan Company of its railroad and appurtenant property to the Manhattan Company.

In July, 1881, the Manhattan Company made default in the payments called for by the leases, and the Attorney-General of the State instituted an action in the name of the People to obtain a decree for the dissolution of the corporation, on the ground of its insolvency, among others; and other actions were brought, prior to that date, by bondholders of the lessor companies for certain equitable relief, which also were based on such insolvency. The net earnings from the operation of the leased roads had not amounted to what had been expected, as the result of their being placed under one management, and, in addition to that fact, the taxes, which were assessed upon the properties appear to have been larger in amount than anticipated; and the result was that the Manhattan Company was unable to fulfill its engagements.

The court, in the People's action, appointed two receivers for the Manhattan Company, who continued in possession for several months. Meanwhile contests were waged for the possession of the leased properties, and for the establishment of claims against them in behalf of the lessee, and negotiations were set on foot for the settlement of these difficulties. In October, 1881, these negotiations resulted in agreements made for the three companies by their boards of directors, by which the leases were modified in certain respects, but the principal features of which were a reduction in the payments required of the lessee company on the capital stock of the lessors from 10 to 6 per cent, and in making the payments to the New York Company preferred over that due to the Metropolitan Company. Thereafter an order of the court was obtained in the People's suit, directing the restoration by the receivers to the Manhattan Company of the properties in their possession.

In November of the same year the boards of directors of the three companies made an agreement for the transfer or merger of the capital stock of the lessor companies into that of their lessee. Under its provisions the stock issued in exchange for the stock of the New York Company was to be called "first preferred stock," and became entitled, from net earnings, to the payment quarterly of dividends at the annual rate of 6 per cent before any other class of stockholders—that is, of the other companies—should receive any dividends. The Metropolitan stockholders were to receive second preferred stock of the Manhattan Company, which should be entitled to similar dividends, but only after the payment of full dividends on the New York Company's stock; and whereas the dividends were cumulative on the first preferred stock, for the second preferred stockholders they were not.

The exchanged shares were to be held by the Manhattan Company uncanceled, as a muniment of title to itself and to the exchanging stockholders. Except as expressed in this merger agreement, the previous agreements and the leases were confirmed. Soon after the capital stock of the Manhattan Company was increased from $13,000,000 to $26,000,000 in due form of law.

At the annual meeting of stockholders of the New York Company in January, 1882, on the question of their approval of these October and November agreements, a vote of 25,904 shares was cast in favor and of 737 shares in opposition. The amount of capital stock of the New York Company was 65,000 shares. In January, 1882, a majority of that stock had been converted into the first preferred stock of the Manhattan Company; and by May 6, 1884, before this plaintiff's testator's demand and the commencement of this action, 58,011 out of the 65,000 shares had been so converted. On January 31, 1882, the Manhattan directors by resolution elected to become ex officio directors of the New York Company.

Holders of the Metropolitan Company's shares whose interests were only in that company, or were greater than in the other companies, were not so well satisfied with the October agreements; and in December, 1882, a month after the election of a board of directors composed of persons other than in the previous board, a suit was instituted in the Common Pleas of New York by the Metropolitan Company as plaintiff against the Manhattan and the New York Companies as defendants, to set aside the agreements. A decision was had in May, 1884, declaring those agreements to be null and void as to all the parties thereto. The opinion upon which this decision was entered was rendered by Judge Van Brunt, and is a most able and exhaustive review of the law relative to the government of corporations, their powers and the duties of directors to stockholders. The effect claimed for his decision by this plaintiff is that as between these companies it is res judicata, and restored the contract in the lease of 1879 with the same obligation as though it had never been modified or changed by subsequent agreements. That cannot be so, and a consideration of the issues presented and tried will dispose of any such claim, and may as well be made at this point.

The Metropolitan Company alleged as grounds for its action the lack of power in its directors to modify the tripartite agreement and lease without the consent of its stockholders; the fact that three of its directors were at the time of making the October agreements also directors of the Manhattan Company; that the personal interests of several of its directors were opposed to the interests of the company; and that its directors were actuated by fraudulent motives. These allegations were met by the denials of the defendants in their answers. As affirmative defenses, they set up the October agreements as having been made in good faith, and the making of the merger agreement of November, 1881.

The issues thus presented for trial and judgment were, as between the Metropolitan Company on the one hand, hostile to the agreements, and the Manhattan and New York Companies on the other hand uniting in asserting the good faith and validity of all that had been agreed to and done between the companies, and insisting upon the indissoluble nature of the corporate relations which resulted from the making of the October and November agreements. What was decided was that the October agreements were voidable at the election of the Metropolitan Company, on the ground that its directors had no power to make them without the consent of the stockholders; and that, even if they had such power, the presence of directors in the Metropolitan board who were also directors in the Manhattan Company at the time of the adoption of the October agreements gave either company the right in equity to repudiate those contracts, although they may have been perfectly valid at law. The judgment in that action was that all the parties thereto were relieved from the October agreements.

I do not deny that the legal effect of the judgment in the action referred to was to destroy the contractual relation which had been formed between the companies. Inasmuch as the agreements were tripartite in their nature, a decree relieving one of the parties from their obligations would of necessity, by destroying their mutuality, annul the whole contract. But that decree was not res judicata upon any question arising between the stockholders of the New York Company and the Manhattan Company, or as to what was the attitude of the New York Company towards its corporators under the agreements of October and of November, nor affected the acts done under them.

The plea of res judicata is not available to parties in an action unless the judgment set up was rendered upon issues between them. There must have been a controversy between the parties the questions in which were or might, within the issues formed, have been competently adjudged. But in the action of the Metropolitan Company, referred to, there was no litigation between the New York and Manhattan Companies, defendants thereto; nor was there any dispute between them, or any variance in matters relied upon as defenses to the maintenance of the action.

The only effect which could be given to the judgment in that action was that, for special reasons applicable to the Metropolitan Company, the October agreements, which its directors had entered into as a corporate act, were avoided as to that company.

After the decision in that action, the directors of the New York Company, who were and had been since January, 1882, the same as those of the Manhattan Company, took action which resulted in a surrender by the Manhattan Company to the New York Company of all the property which had been leased to it in 1879, and a retransfer of the exchanged capital stock. The New York Company thus repossessed itself of and operated its railway and properties. This step was a not unnatural consequence of the judgment in the Metropolitan Company's action annulling the previous agreements between the companies, and seems to have been approved of by the vote of a majority of the New York Company's stockholders at the meeting held on May 6, 1884.

On August 1, 1884, agreements were entered into for a new lease of the New York Company's property to the Manhattan Company, and also for the merger and consolidation of all three companies; but I fail to see how, for the disposition of this case, it is at all necessary for us to consider the detailed steps which led to their making, or the legality or effect of their consummation. The learned trial judge, in refusing to pass upon various requests to find with respect to the evidence as to the negotiations and acts of the directors after the surrender of the leased property in May, 1884, and as to what was done by stockholders and directors on August 1, 1884, towards the new lease and the consolidation of the companies, placed his refusal on the ground of their immateriality, and I think he committed no error in so doing.

This suit was commenced in July, 1884, upon a demand made on May 22, 1884; and the claim of the plaintiff does not seem to involve any other examination of this rather voluminous record than such as to see whether he, as a holder of the New York Company's stock, has been injured in any legal rights and is entitled to equitable relief for their enforcement or protection. His counsel insists, in that behalf, that the agreement in the lease of 1879 with respect to the guaranty by the lessee company to make payments to the lessor company at the rate of 10 per cent annually, and which we have cited in full, inured to the benefit of the stockholders in the lessor company, so as to warrant the interposition of a court of equity in his favor, compelling a performance of the agreement in its fullest import. He says that the consent of the testator's assignor was essential to the validity of the lease of the New York Company in 1879, and by that fact, and by his relation as a stockholder, he thus came into privity with the contract.

As a matter of fact, conceded in the case, the lease of 1879 received the assent of the New York Company's stockholders; but we do not think the concurrence of stockholders to be an essential condition to the validity of a lease by a railroad corporation of its road to another railroad corporation. The Act of 1839 has more than once been construed to authorize such a lease. The power therein conferred upon a railroad corporation to contract with another for the use of their respective roads in such manner as the contract may prescribe, involves the power to make a lease for a term of years. Woodruff v. Erie R. Co. 93 N. Y. 616.

In the case cited, Ruger, Ch. J., delivering the opinion of the court, cites several cases in this court as authorities, and shows, by reference to several subsequent Acts of the Legislature, that no subsequent legislation has impaired the powers conferred by that Act, but that subsequent legislative enactments recognize the validity of leases made under its provisions.

In People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 1 (lately decided by us), it was held that the Act of 1839 continues in force and unaffected with respect to its general grant of power to railroad corporations to make traffic contracts with each other for the use of their respective roads. The power conferred by this law is to be exercised as any other power of a corporation is where the mode of exercise is not prescribed by the charter or general laws applicable thereto.

All powers directly conferred by statute, or impliedly granted, of necessity must be exercised by the directors who are constituted by the law as the agency for the doing of corporate acts. The expression of the corporate will, and the performance of corporate functions, in the management of a corporation, may originate with its directors, where the law or the by-laws have not expressly restricted their authority, and made their action to rest for its validity upon the concurrence of the stockholders by previous action or subsequent ratification. Within the chartered authority they have the fullest power to regulate the concerns of a corporation according to their best judgment, and contracts which the corporation could legitimately make come within the scope of the ordinary powers of corporate management. Leslie v. Lorillard, 110 N. Y. 536 [1 L. R. A. 456].

The duties of directors are of the most real 2 L. R. A.

sponsible kind, and it is in the purview of the law that they should be held to a full accountability for their acts to the stockholders, towards whom they occupy the relation of trustees, with all that that term implies in power and responsibility. In the management of the affairs of the corporation they are dependent solely upon their own knowledge of its business, and their own judgment as to what its interests require. The error in the supposition that, in the case of a railroad corporation, a lease of the railroad property requires for its validity the authorization of stockholders, has its source in the idea that such an act involves an organic change, which either the law inhibits, or, if it permits, vests the power to make only in the corporators, either by express enactment or by necessary or natural implication.

If such a contract as the lease by a railroad corporation to another of its railway was not within the powers expressly conferred by general laws, by which, as by the charter, the corporate powers are measured, it would be ultra vires, and could not be done at all. But as the Act of 1839 authorizes the making of such a contract, and the law does not regulate the manner of making it, or impose restrictions with respect to it, we think it must logically follow that the power to make it is, like all other general powers of management, lodged in the directors. They must exercise all the powers of a corporation, subject to the general law and to the by-laws of the company; and where they act in good faith, and without fraud or collusion, their action is conclusive upon the corporation. As agents of the corporation, we must find the extent of their powers by an examination of the laws under which it was created and exists. Those laws, in defining the powers of the corporation define the scope of the directors' powers to act for it.

Judge Comstock in Hoyt v. Thomson, 19 N. Y. 216, said: "The board of directors of a corporation do not stand in the same relation to the corporate body which a private agent holds towards his principal. In the strict relation of principal and agent, all the authority of the latter is derived by delegation from the former . . . But in corporate bodies the powers of the board of directors are, in a very important sense, original and undelegated. The stockholders do not confer nor can they revoke those powers. They are derivative only in the sense of being received from the State in the Act of incorporation. The directors convened as a board are the primary possessors of all the powers which the charter confers," etc.

It is difficult to find a solid foundation for the argument which denies to the directors the power of making a contract which the law expressly permits the corporation to make without the authorization of the stockholders. If it is deemed to be too extensive a power to be vested in the directors, and dangerous to the rights of stockholders in the possibilities of fraud, it is for the Legislature to interfere and prescribe regulations for its exercise. What we hold here is that a contract for the leasing of one railroad to another is within the original powers of a board of directors to make; because it is a power conferred upon the corporation by the Legislature, which lodges primarily in its directors, to be exercised when, according to their best judgment, the needs or interests of the corporation require it. What business a corporation can do within its chartered limits, and in or about that business, by statutory authority, its directors hold a delegated power from the Legislature to do for it. The fact that in this case the assent of the stockholders was secured to the lease does not affect the question. It is a very proper and reasonable precaution to take, in view of its being an important disposition of property, and one which I should think would naturally be taken.

It follows from what we have said that the plaintiff's theory of the privity and relations of his assignor to the lease of 1879, and of beneficial rights accruing thereby to and enforceable by him, is untenable.

Regarding, then, the lease itself, and the so called guaranty which is contained among its provisions, I find therein no contract made with individual stockholders, but only one made with the New York Company, which stipulates for the payment of a sum of money equal to 10 per cent upon the capital stock of that company. There is no contract to pay 10 per cent dividends to individual stockholders upon their holdings, nor any contract that the New York Company will pay it out in the shape of 10 per cent dividends to its stockholders. Payments under that contract are to and for the lessor corporation, and go into its treasury, as would any other moneys or revenues derived from or produced by corporate property.

The statement upon the certificate of stock, which the plaintiff attaches such importance to, of itself, certainly, is no contract by the Manhattan Company, for it is not even signed. On its face it only purports to be a statement of a fact, having reference to an agreement made with the New York Company. Undoubtedly the effect of this statement may have been to give an enhanced value to the shares of stock of that company in the market, not because the purchaser was buying securities on which were guaranteed to be paid to the holder 10 per cent dividends, but because it conveyed information, to those proposing to invest, that a fund had been provided for, by agreement, out of which dividends might be paid. The knowledge was communicated as to the amount of rental moneys or revenues which the company was in receipt of, and which were available for the declaration and payment of dividends. Such a statement would tend to give confidence to investors and marked value to the securities.

The certificate of stock in Boardman v. Lake Shore & M. S. Railway Company, 84 N. Y. 157, read that the stock was entitled to dividends at the rate of 10 per cent per annum, and at the top of the certificate were the words, "Guaranteed Ten Per Cent Stock." The interpretation given was that the dividends were not only preferred, but, being guaranteed, were to be paid before any dividends were divided upon the common stock. In that case resort to the evidence of the resolutions and proceedings of the company was deemed competent to show the real character of the corporate transactions underlying the issue of the stock, and which the certificate of stock to some degree evidenced. Miller, J., in his opinion in that case, has cited a number of authorities warranting such resort in cases relating to the power to create preferred or guaranteed stock.

In the stock certificate in Barr v. New York Railroad Company, 96 N. Y. 444, the obligation of the Erie Railway Company ran to the "holders" thereof. In the present case nothing in the language of the certificates imports any agreement with its holder for the payment of any dividends whatever; and, if we resort to the evidence of the corporate proceedings, we find none giving him a right to dividends in the future, or creating an obligation enforceable by him for the payment of dividends upon his stock.

Judge Ingraham, in his able opinion in Harkness v. Manhattan R. Company, 64 N. Y. Super. Ct. 174 [22 Jones & S.], a case involving a similar question, analyzes the agreement in the lease in question. He held that it gave no cause of action against the Manhattan Company to recover the amount to be paid to the New York Company, and among other things, said: "The agreement is to pay a certain sum of money to the corporation, the New York Company. The sum is fixed at 10 per cent of the outstanding stock of the New York Company. Nothing was to be paid to the individual stockholders, nor did the Manhattan Company in any way agree that the stockholders of the New York Company should receive the money it agreed to pay to the New York Company, or that such money should be used for the purpose of a dividend on the stock of the New York Company. . . . As soon as the money was paid to the New York Company, it became the property of the corporation, liable for its debts, and the stockholders had no claim to it until by some act of the corporation it had been appropriated to them. There was no agreement of the New York Company that the money to be received should be paid to its stockholders, and there was therefore no obligation on the part of the New York Company to its stockholders which the Manhattan Company undertook to discharge." This sums up the whole matter clearly and well, and amplification seems to be needless.

In Flagg v. Manhattan Railroad Company, 20 Blatchf. 142, 10 Fed. Rep. 413, Justice Blatchford held, similarly, that the guaranty here was not to the stockholders severally, but to the corporation.

Within the principles of adjudged cases in this court, where the plaintiff seeks to base his right to maintain his action against a third party upon a contract made between that party and another, it must be one made or intended for his benefit. Such a beneficial intent must be clearly found in the agreement. Wheat v. Rice, 97 N. Y. 296; Vrooman v. Turner, 69 N. Y. 280; Barlow v. Myers, 64 N. Y. 48; Lawrence v. Fox, 20 N. Y. 268.

The present case does not fall within the principle of the decision of Schemerhorn v. Vanderheyden, 1 Johns. 139, that, "Where one person makes a promise to another for the benefit of a third person, that third person may maintain an action on such promise."

That decision was based on the case in the King's Bench of Dutton v. Poole, 2 Lev. 210, and of subsequent English cases following its authority. But in all of the cases which I have examined, where the action was sustained, the facts showed that the promise clearly was for the third person's benefit, and made with that distinct intention.

If this agreement in the lease for the payment to the New York Company annually of a sum equal to 10 per cent on its capital stock is not one which gave the plaintiff any right of action against the Manhattan Company, he is equally without any right to maintain an action upon it against his own company for the payment of dividends. A shareholder in a corporation has no legal title to the property or profits of the corporation until a division is made or a dividend declared. Jones v. Terre Haute & R. R. Co. 57 N. Y. 196; Boardman v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. supra.

He acquires no right or title to the accumulated gains from the revenues of the corporation which entitles him to sue for his aliquot share of dividends. Until divided by the directors or trustees of the corporation, all of its property is held in joint ownership by the corporators, and no several right is possessed by the individual stockholder until after a dividend is declared.

The declaration of a dividend from a surplus or the division of profits is within the discretionary powers of the directors or trustees, which will not be controlled by the courts. Williams v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 98 N. Y. 162.

Nor does any obligation exist here on the part of the New York Company to pay a dividend which plaintiff can enforce performance of in equity. The moneys which were payable by the Manhattan Company became the property and assets of the New York Company, and were within the control and administration of the directors, for the needs and in the interests of the corporate body.

The next step brings us, then, to the agreements of October, 1881, by which the leases were modified, in the principal feature of the reduction of the payments agreed to be made, from 10 to 6 per cent. About this action of the directors little need be added, in view of the previous discussion of the extent of their powers. We hold that it was quite competent for them to make those agreements without any concurrent action or ratification by the stockholders. No fraud is found or proven against them in taking this action, and it seems not an unreasonable or an improper exercise of business discretion, in view of the embarrassments in which the insolvency of the Manhattan Company had involved itself and its lessors. To have, in good faith and with apparent reasons, agreed to reduce the amount of moneys payable under the lease of their corporation, was not an act in excess of the power of the directors, or one voidable at the instance of the stockholders. It was as much within their province and authority, and as much a part of the ordinary business of the corporation, as would be the reduction of the interest secured in a bond to the corporation, or the rent reserved in a lease of some building, or any other act lying in the exercise of business judgment.

The question of the exercise of such a power of management must be left to the honest and fair business discretion of the board of directors; and the only inquiry by the stockholders could be as to whether there was any fraud by which assets were wrongfully diverted. They must be presumed to act for the best interests of the corporation, and to give to the management and disposition of its property their best judgment. But when subsequently the agreement of November, 1881, for the merger or transfer of the capital stock of the lessor companies into that of the lessee, was, as to the New York Company, given practical effect by the exchange of upwards of 58,000 shares out of a total of 65,000 shares, that fact, under any aspect of the case, expressed the decided acquiescence of nearly nine tenths of the corporators in what had been done. While the action of other shareholders may not, in the merging of their stock, affect any legal rights of the non-merging shareholders, it may not improperly be referred to in the endeavor to discover the sentiments of the general body of corporators as to corporate action taken by their directors. The appeal to equity, when the acts complained of are within the powers of directors, and apparently uninfluenced by corrupt motives or personal interests adverse to those of stockholders, ought at least to be justified by some showing that these acts were improper within the belief of a fair proportion of the body of stockholders.

Coming, then, to the condition of affairs which followed upon the decision of Judge Van Brunt being known, we do not find in it any origin for this action by the plaintiff. In May, 1884, the stockholders of the New York and Manhattan Companies approved agreements for the surrender to the New York Company by the Manhattan Company of the leased property, and for the retransfer of the stock exchanged for the stock of the New York Company. Although Judge Van Brunt's decision was rendered upon the complaint of the Metropolitan Company, and avoided the October agreements as to that company, it so affected the contractual relations of all the companies as to seem to make some action necessary. It had no such effect upon the New York Company's stockholders as to avoid those agreements; but no action had been, nor, in our opinion, could have been, taken by the company, or its stockholders, to annul the October agreements.

The stockholders could not be heard to say that they acquired any rights under that judgment, with respect to the past. It is sufficient that such action was deemed necessary as was had in May, 1884, for the severance of the contractual relations established by the lease, and it was a matter, we think, which was also within the exercise of an honest discretion by the directors. Although not legally requisite, their action was approved by the great majority of the votes cast on May 6, 1884, by the holders of the New York Company's stock. I do not see, however, that much discussion upon the action taken in May, 1884, is called for under the view taken of the plaintiff's rights in this opinion. The gravamen of his complaint is that the contract in the lease of 1879 inured to his benefit, and could not be discharged or modified by agreement between the companies, and is one which became enforceable, and that when he commenced his suit that contract was in full force, and the New York Company is entitled to recover from the Manhattan Company the 10 per cent payable under its provisions since July, 1881. I have undertaken to show how he is in error in the propositions on which he claims to maintain his action. When he commenced his action in July, 1884, his company had competently resumed the possession of its railroad properties. It had then no claims against the Manhattan Company for any differences between the payments guaranteed to it in the lease of 1879 and those provided to be made by the October agreements. As to the New York Company, in our opinion, those agreements were valid and binding when made, and being acted upon and acquiesced in subsequently, the stockholders are without any legal or equitable cause of complaint. The plaintiff has altogether failed to show any ground for the interference of the courts. He bought the stock with full knowledge of what had taken place; and this fact, in connection with an absence of legal grounds for the maintenance of an action, deprives his appeal of all merits.

The judgment appealed from should be affirmed, with costs.

All concur; Ruger, Ch. J., in the result.

INDIANA SUPREME COURT.

Peter KUNTZ, Appt.

v.

Mahlon SUMPTION.

(....Ind....)

1. The denial of due process of law resulting from the provisions of the Indiana Statute *which assumes to confer authority upon the county board of equalization to increase the valuation of property of an individual taxpayer listed by him for taxation, by a decision which is final, without giving him an opportunity to be heard, renders such provisions unconstitutional.
2. Where individual rights are concerned, and the matter is one upon which a party is entitled to be heard, a proceeding conclusively and finally disposing of individual property

*Ind. Rev. Stat. § 6399.

NOTE.—Protection of individual rights; common-law principles incorporated in constitutional law.

No man's property can be taken from him without his consent, express or implied, except by due course of law. Blackman v. Lehman, 68 Ala. 547; 3 Desty, Tarn. 749.

The Bills of Rights in the American Constitutions are conservatory instruments rather than reformatory, and assume that the existing principles of the common law are ample for the protection of individual rights, when once incorporated in the fundamental law, and thus secured against violation. Weimer v. Bunbury, 80 Mich. 201; Cooley Tarn. 49.

The Fourteenth Amendment does not employ the phrase "due process of law" in any new sense but as employed in the State Constitution. Munn v. Ill. 94 U. S. 118 (24 L. ed. 77); 2 Desty, Tarn. 750.

It simply requires that a person should be brought into court and have an opportunity to prove any fact for his protection. People v. Essex Co. 70 N. Y. 229.

The fact that the value of railroad property is to be ascertained by a state board, each being equally charged to ascertain the actual value of the property assessed, does not violate the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution. San Francisco & N. P. R. Co. v. State Board of Equalization, 60 Cal. 12; Cooley, Tarn. 50.

Due process of law, as regulated by state law,

is regulated,

in whole and States, when it enters while which, if necessary v. Har-liberty to cases, and ought be- N. J. L.

rights will be void, unless founded upon a law providing for notice of some kind. It is not enough that some notice or information may be given, but the law must provide for notice.

(January 22, 1889.)

APPEAL from a judgment of the Circuit Court of Randolph County (Monks, J.), sustaining a demurrer to a complaint. Reversed.

The question presented is stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Gray & Gray and David Turpil for appellant.

Messrs. Thompson, Marsh & Thompson and The Attorney-General for appellee.

286; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Pinner, 8 Cent. Rep. 649, 48 N. J. Eq. 52.

The method by which a defendant shall be notified of a suit instituted against him, so that the

Elliott, C. J., delivered the opinion of the court.

The Board of Equalization of Randolph County entered an order reading thus: "On motion, the board increased the assessment of Peter Kuntz on personal property $20,000." Prior to the meeting of the board Kuntz had listed his property for taxation. He was subpoenaed before the board, and testified as a witness, but did so under protest.

We have given to the principal question in this case much and careful study, and we are compelled to hold that the statutory provisions concerning the authority of the county board of equalization to increase the valuation of the property of an individual taxpayer listed by him for taxation are unconstitutional. We limit our decision to this point, and mark the limit as distinctly and definitely as we can. We do not affirm that the provisions of the statute conferring authority upon the county board to change the general levy are invalid, nor do we affirm that they are invalid in so far as they confer authority to make orders affecting the taxpayers generally. We do, however, affirm that they are invalid in so far as they assume to confer authority upon the board to conclusively change the valuation placed upon property by an individual taxpayer, or to add property to his list. We are satisfied that the statute is in conflict with the Constitution, for the reason that it assumes to confer authority upon the board to add to a citizen's taxes without giving him an opportunity to be heard, and thus denies him due process of law.

Our judgment is that after a citizen has listed his property no change in the list can be compulsorily made by an officer or tribunal whose decision is final, until, by due process of law, he has had an opportunity to vindicate the correctness of his list, or resist an attempt to increase the valuation. The presumption is that men obey the law and act in good faith, and under this long settled rule it must be held that, until the contrary is shown, the taxpayer is entitled to have his list accepted as correct and just. The contrary cannot be legally and conclusively shown, unless he has an opportunity to be heard, and this opportunity he cannot have unless notice is given him before a conclusive decision is made. The statute does not provide for notice to taxpayers whose taxes it is proposed to increase; and this infirmity destroys it in so far as it affects such citizens. It is not enough that in fact the taxpayer does have some notice or information, for the law must provide for notice, or else no legal notice can be given. A man may be subpoenaed as a witness in an action pending against him, but unless he is summoned or notified as a party under some law authorizing a summons or a notice the proceedings are utterly void. A man may be served with a written notice that a petition for a ditch is pending, but, if there is no law authorizing notice, it will be unavailing. A notice not authorized by law is in legal contemplation no notice. We do not assert that the proceedings would be void where there is some notice, although not given in strict conformity to law; for we know that a defective notice, assumed to be given under a statute, will be sufficient to uphold jurisdiction as against a private rights. Pannoy v. Neff, 66 U. S. 714 (24 L. ed. 555).

There must be a competent tribunal, and the party affected must be brought within the jurisdiction. Id.

Does not necessarily require judicial proceedings.

The p cases re
Millen v
Pearson
ray v. I
L. ed. 1
416; B
tor, 4 I
State E
Yerg. 3

In all Mo-
See
Mur-73 (15
, ed.
Por-320;
7, 10

Due process of law does not require judicial proceedings in enforcing a tax. McMillen v. Anderson, 96 U. S. 37 (24 L. ed. 285; Cooley, Taxn. 51).

It does not require a plenary suit and trial by jury in all cases where property and personal rights are involved; it is in all cases that kind of procedure which is suitable and proper to the nature of the case, and sanctioned by the established customs and usages of the court. Ex parte Wall, 107 U. S. 265 (27 L. ed. 582).

Although differing from proceedings in courts of justice, the general system of procedure for the levy and collection of taxes is, within the meaning of the Constitution, due process of law. Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 104 U. S. 78 (33 L. ed. 655).

It is not necessarily process according to the course of the common law, but process according to the course of proceedings applicable to the subject matter, and conformable to those general rules that affect all persons alike. Bartlett v. Wilson, 4 New Eng. Rep. 119, 39 Vt. 31; Cooley, Const. Lim. 363.

Any legal process founded on necessity, consecrated by time, and approved and acquiesced in by universal consent, is an exception to the right of trial by jury, and is embraced in the term "law of the land," and summary proceedings in the collection of taxes are so held to be. State v. Allen, 2 McCord, L. 80. See Harris v. Wood, 8 T. R. Mon. 643; New Orleans v. Cannon, 10 La. Ann. 764; 2 L. R. A.

Willard v. Wetherbee, 4 N. H. 110; McCarroll v. Weeks, 5 Hayw. (Tenn.) 348.

So a warrant for the collection of taxes, authorizing the sale of property thereon, is due process of law. Springer v. U. S. 102 U. S. 598 (26 L. ed. 200).

Or a summary seizure of lands for nonpayment may be authorized by state laws, and this is not a violation of the provision as to due process of law. Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 104 U. S. 78 (33 L. ed. 655); Railroad Tax Cases, 12 Fed. Rep. 722.

The statute authorizing a tax collector to sell for the nonpayment of a tax any chattels in possession of the taxpayer in default is not unconstitutional, even where the goods are owned by another person. Hesse v. Porter, 1 Cont. Rep. 788, 100 N. Y. 408.

A party is not deprived of his property without due process of law by the enforced collection of taxes, merely because they, in individual cases, work hardships or impose unequal burdens. Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 104 U. S. 78 (33 L. ed. 655).

Application to tax proceedings.

Where life and liberty or the title and possession of property are involved, due process of law requires that there be a regular course of judicial proceedings, and that the party to be affected shall have notice and an opportunity to be heard, but where the taking of property is in the enforcement of a tax, whether notice to him is necessary depends upon the character of the tax and the manner in which its amount is determinable. Hagar v. Reclamation District, 111 U. S. 701 (36 L. ed. 660).

"Due process of law," as applied to the levy and collection of taxes, does not imply or require the right to such notice and hearing as are considered essential to the validity of the proceedings and judgments of judicial tribunals. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Ky. 115 U. S. 321 (36 L. ed. 414); McMillen v. Anderson, 96 U. S. 37 (24 L. ed. 23); Lant v. Tillson, 72 Cal. 404.

Revenue laws in harmony with Fourteenth Amendment.

The constitutional provision as to due process of law has no application to the levy of taxes by state officers, contrary to an invalid provision of a stat-collateral attack. Montgomery v. Wasson, 18 West. Rep. 300, 15 N. E. Rep. 795; Hume v. Condit, 75 Ind. 598.

But there must be an assumption of the right to give notice, and there must be some law authorizing this assumption. At all events, there must be color of right, and without a law authorizing notice there can be none. We approve, as fully as language can do, the doctrine of former decisions, that the Legislature has ample authority to prescribe what the notice shall be. Johnson v. Lewis, 115 Ind. 490, 15 West. Rep. 455; Garsin v. Dausman, 14 West. Rep. 313, 114 Ind. 429, 16 N. E. Rep. 834; Curr v. State, 1 West. Rep. 592, 108 Ind. 548; Holbe v. Tyson County, 1 West. Rep. 529, 108 Ind. 575.

We affirm, too, that whether the notice is by publication or by personal service, it will sustain jurisdiction, provided there is back of it some law providing for notice. While affirming these various propositions, we also affirm that, where individual property rights are affected, there must be provision for notice made by law before there can be a final and conclusive adjudication. Only the law can prescribe the form of the notice, and the law must provide for it. Where, therefore, individual rights are concerned, and the matter is one upon which a party is entitled to be heard, a proceeding conclusively and finally disposing of individual property rights will be void, unless founded upon a law providing for notice of some kind. Where the matter to be decided is one of pure discretion, and the tribunal decides upon its own judgment, unaided by evidence, then notice is not essential. State v. Johnson, 3 West. Rep. 693, 105 Ind. 463; Fries v. Briar, 9 West. Rep. 260, 111 Ind. 65; Trimble v. McGee, 11 West. Rep. 689, 113 Ind. 307; Wasson v. Templin, 12 West. Rep. 974, 113 Ind. 298, 14 N. E. Rep. 600.

But in adding to property listed by the taxpayer, or in increasing the valuation put upon listed property by him, a board of equalization does not exercise arbitrary power or unrestricted discretion. On the contrary, it must be guided by the law and the facts, and has no right to add to the list of the taxpayer property he does not own, nor has it authority to increase the valuation of property without giving the taxpayer legal notice—thus affording him an opportunity to adduce evidence or furnish information. It is a serious matter to charge a person with fraudulently or falsely listing his property; and to add to his list, or to increase the valuation of property, imposes upon him a burden, for it deprives him of property in the form of money. That notice is required in all cases where individual property rights are involved, and the matter is not one of pure discretion, has been again and again decided by our own and other courts. Stroesser v. Fort Wayne, 100 Ind. 448; Troyer v. Dyer, 103 Ind. 395; Jackson v. State, 1 West. Rep. 269, 108 Ind. 250; Johnson v. Lewis, 15 West. Rep. 455, 115 Ind. 490; Wells County v. Grover, 15 West. Rep. 180, 115 Ind. 225, 17 N. E. Rep. 990, and cases cited.

That the notice must be authorized by law is not attempting to exempt it. Little Rock & F. R. R. Co. v. Worthen, 119 U. S. 97 (30 L. ed. 389).

The revenue laws of a State may be in harmony with the Fourteenth Amendment, though they do not provide for giving a party an opportunity to be present when the tax is assessed against him, and to be then heard, if they give him the right to be heard afterwards in a suit to enjoin the collection, in which both the validity of the tax, and the amount of it, may be contested (McMillen v. Anderson, 36 U. S. 37 (34 L. ed. 335); Hagar v. Rockland District, 111 U. S. 701 (38 L. ed. 539); Pearson v. Yewdall, 34 U. S. 294 (34 L. ed. 439); Cooley, Taxn. 61), even though he be required, as in other injunction cases, to give security in advance. McMillen v. Anderson, 36 U. S. 37 (34 L. ed. 335), 3 Dexty, Taxn. 733.

The proceedings in harmony with constitutional law.

Whenever a tax or burden is imposed upon property, hearing as to apportionment, is not unconstitutional. Spencer v. Merchant, 1 Cent. Rep. 141, 100 N. Y. 305.

Right to notice and a hearing.

It is a fundamental principle that before a person can be deprived of a right, even by judicial suit, he must have notice, and reasonable opportunity to be heard in defense of his rights. Shove v. Manitowoc, 37 Wis. 3.

Notice or means of knowledge is an essential element in every proceeding which affects rights of persons or property. Philadelphia v. Miller, 40 Pa. 448.

The rule is of universal application, and is founded on the plainest principles of justice. Harwood v. North Brimfield, 130 Mass. 361.

This constitutional provision may apply to the assessment of taxes for the support of Government. Lehman v. Robinson, 30 Ala. 244; Darling v. Gunn, 30 Ill. 434.

If a party is illegally deprived of opportunity for a hearing in opposition to the assessment, the defect is jurisdictional, and cannot be cured. Marsh v. Chesnut, 14 Ill. 333; Hillings v. Detten, 15 Ill. 213.

The Legislature cannot confer power on a board to proceed without notice, since this would infringe that provision of the Constitution which declares that no man shall be deprived of his property without due process of law. State v. Lindell Hotel Co. 9 Mo. App. 455; South Platte Land Co. v. Buffalo Co. 7 Neb. 258; 1 Dexty, Taxn. 593.

A law imposing an assessment for a local improvement without notice to, and a hearing, or an opportunity to be heard, on the part of the owner of the property to be assessed, has the effect to deprive him of his property without "due process of law," and is unconstitutional. Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 153; Bennett v. Buffalo, 17 N. Y. 393.

A statute creating a state board of equalization, vesting power in such board to increase the valuation of property of a railroad company beyond the valuation as apportioned by the county auditors of the several counties, is unconstitutional so far as it fails to provide for a hearing of the property owner. Baltimore & O. & C. R. Co. v. Seneca Co. Treasurer (Ohio) 1 West. Rep. 94.

portunity to be present when a tax is assessed against him, or that the tax shall be collected by suit. McMillen v. Anderson, 36 U. S. 37 (34 L. ed. 335), 3 Dexty, Taxn. 733.

Opportunity to be heard, accorded by the statute to persons who feel themselves aggrieved, is sufficient to constitute due process of law. Lent v. Tilson, 72 Cal. 404.

A law imposing tax or assessment for public improvement and leaving the amount to be raised to be determined by commissioners, without a hearing in parties interested to oppose, but giving a affirmed by many cases. The rule is thus stated in one case: "It is not enough that the owners may by chance have notice, or that they may as a matter of favor have a hearing. The law must require notice to them, and give them a right to a hearing, and an opportunity to be heard." Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 188.

Judge Cooley, in speaking of the correction of tax lists, says: "It is a fundamental rule that in judicial or quasi judicial proceedings, affecting the rights of the citizen, he shall have notice, and be given an opportunity to be heard, before any judgment, decree, order or demand shall be given and established against him. Tax proceedings are not in the strict sense judicial, but they are quasi judicial; and, as they have the effect of a judgment, the reasons which require notice of judicial proceedings are always present when the conclusive steps are to be taken." Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. 363.

An author who has recently written on the subject concludes his discussion by saying: "There is really but one logical and consistent position in the matter, and that is that a statute that does not provide for notice is invalid." Lewis, Em. Dom. § 368.

A very thorough discussion of the question will be found in Johnson v. Joliet & C. Railroad Company, 23 Ill. 202.

We need not, however, look beyond our own reports, for our own decisions declare that the statute itself must provide for notice. Campbell v. Duggins, 88 Ind. 473; Jackson v. State, 1 West. Rep. 240, 104 Ind. 516; Fries v. Brier, 9 West. Rep. 260, 111 Ind. 65; Johnson v. Lewis, supra.

We said in Jackson v. State, supra, that "The notice must assume to be such as the law requires, but, in order to repel a collateral attack, it need not be a valid notice;" and in Garrin v. Dausseman, supra, we said:

"It is without doubt essential to the validity of every law under which proceedings may be had for the taking of property, or to impose a burden upon it which may result in taking it, that the law make provision for giving some kind of notice, at some stage in the proceeding."

The ultimate conclusion which we reach is that where a conclusive decision is authorized the statute itself must provide for notice, and secure it to the taxpayer, not as matter of favor, but as a matter of right.

We agree with the appellee's counsel that the board of equalization is not a judicial tribunal, in the strict sense of the term; but, while this is true, it is also true that it possesses functions of a judicial nature. Wilkins v. State, 18 West. Rep. 354, 113 Ind. 514.

Judicial powers are, as we said in the case cited, lodged in the courts; and where the Constitution distributes the judicial power, it can only be exercised by the tribunal named by the Constitution, and constituted as the Constitution provides. Greenough v. Greenough, 11 Pa. 489; Chandler v. Nash, 5 Mich. 409; Alexander v. Bennett, 60 N. Y. 204; Van Slyke v. Trempealeau County F. Mut. F. Ins. Co. 89 Wis. 390, 396, 20 Am. Rep. 50; Gibson v. Emerson, 7 Ark. 172; Gregory v. State, 94 Ind. 884; Shultz v. McPheters, 79 Ind. 873.

But while we hold that the authority of the board of equalization is not judicial, yet we also hold that it is in its nature so far judicial as to require notice to one whose individual rights are directly affected. We are inclined to concur with appellee's counsel that the judgment of the board is conclusive; but to that proposition we add that it is only so where there is jurisdiction, and that notice to one whose list is to be added to or whose valuation is to be increased is essential to give jurisdiction. Olin-ton School-Dist's App. 56 Pa. 315; Osborn v. Danvers, 6 Pick. 98; Hughes v. Klein, 10 Pa. 227; Macklot v. Davenport, 17 Iowa, 379; Deane v. Todd, 22 Mo. 90; McIntyre v. White Creek, 43 Wis. 620.

The fact that the judgment is conclusive supplies a strong reason for holding that the taxpayer should have an opportunity to be heard, and that he should be heard before his list or his valuation is set aside or changed. The power to hear and determine, where there is a question admitting of controversy, and the entire matter is not one of absolute and arbitrary discretion, implies that, in reason and justice, the law should, by making provision for notice, give the parties an opportunity to be heard; for otherwise it cannot be justly said that there is due process of law.

Thus far we have proceeded upon the assumption that the statute does not provide for notice to the individual taxpayer whose list is to receive additions, or whose valuation is to be increased; and if this assumption cannot be made good, our reasoning is invalid. It is, however, not difficult to prove the validity of our assumption. The statute itself supplies the requisite proof. It does provide notice sufficient for two classes of judgments, but for no others. It provides for notice sufficient as to all general changes in the levy, and sufficient as to all who have complaints to make; and over these matters jurisdiction arises when the notice is given as the statute directs. But there is no provision for notice to the individual taxpayer whose list is to be added to or whose valuation is to be increased. Its provisions on the subject of notice are these: "Two weeks' previous notice of the time, place and purpose of such meeting shall be given by the county auditor in some newspaper of general circulation, printed and published in the county; or if no newspaper be published in the county, then by posting up notices in three public places in each township in the county." Sec. 6397, Rev. Stat. 1881.

This notice, it is obvious, cannot require every taxpayer in the county to be in attendance at the meeting of the board to see that no additions are made to his list. As additions to his list affect him as an individual, he is entitled to notice as an individual. He is not within the scope of the statute, since he is not bound to assume that there will be any change in the verified list given by him to the assessor. His rights are distinct from those of the public, and from the rights of those persons who have complaints to make. Those who believe themselves wronged by having property listed to them that they do not own, or who believe that their property has been overvalued, are actors; they move, they take the initiatory step, and they must come before the board under the notice prescribed by the statute. But with the taxpayer whose assessment is to be increased it is otherwise. He is not the actor; he does not take the initiatory step; but, on the contrary, he is passive and inactive until brought before the board by notice. He is not under any legal obligation to move until notice comes to him. Indeed, he cannot move if he is content with his list and assessment, for there is nothing for him to do.

The taxpayer who has a complaint to make occupies a position very similar to that of the plaintiff in an ordinary action, while the person whose taxes are to be increased is in a position very like that of a defendant. We must hold that a taxpayer is entitled to notice, or else we must hold that he is bound, at his peril, to keep vigilant watch of the proceedings, lest property he does not own be assessed to him, or the valuation of his listed property be increased. In the absence of notice to him as an individual, he is not bound to exercise any such vigilance. Claybaugh v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 6 West. Rep. 575, 108 Ind. 262; Munson v. Blake, 101 Ind. 78.

It would be almost as unjust to compel such a taxpayer to be constantly on the watch during the meetings of the board as to compel a defendant who has failed to pay a note, violated a covenant, or committed a trespass to watch the dockets of the court during term time. The notice does no more than inform the public that the board will be in session at a designated time and place, and no one is bound to act upon the notice further than to present complaints or resist general changes in the levy. Certainly no one is bound to know that a complaint will be preferred against him affecting his individual rights. If one taxpayer is bound to keep watch during the session of the board, so are all; and the result would be that the meetings of the board would be thronged with taxpayers, or else their rights be at the mercy of the board.

The organic law to which all statutes must yield does not intend that such a thing shall ever occur, for it requires notice to each person whose individual property rights may become the subject of investigation and final adjudication. This is a fundamental principle, ruling all the departments of government. A decision of a judicial nature, conclusively deciding upon individual property rights of a citizen, and imposing a burden upon him, can only be given in a proceeding of which, before a final and conclusive judgment is reached, the citizen has notice; for without such notice there cannot be due process of law. A decision not final, but subject to review, may not necessarily require notice; but a final decision must be based on a notice provided for by law.

Judgment reversed, with instructions to overrule the demurrer to the complaint.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT, DISTRICT OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

Isabella LEE, by Her Next Friend,
v.

Richard W. SIMPSON.

(....Fed. Rep.....)

*1. Equity jurisdiction. A fund was given to a trustee for the separate use of a married woman for her life, with power of appointment in her by will, in default thereof to her child in fee. It was used by her husband, who was substituted as trustee, in purchasing real estate, he adding his own money, taking title to himself as trustee to these uses. The wife died. Her child died in her lifetime, leaving Isabella, an infant, her heir at law. The trustee afterwards died, leaving the property to A. in trust to convey it to the State of South Carolina. To a bill filed in behalf of Isabella, alleging default in the exercise of the power, and claiming the property from A, with an account of the rents and profits. A demurred, on the ground that she had a plain, adequate and complete remedy at law. Demurrer overruled.

*2. In this case the use was not executed upon the death of the married woman if she failed to exercise the power of appointment; but the legal estate remained in the trustee, and his devisee, a volunteer, took it and the property bound by the trust.

*3. Injunction. The devise to A was upon trust to convey the property to the State of South Carolina upon certain conditions, ignoring the claim of complainant. The devisee, after this bill was filed and subpoena served, addressed a letter to the General Assembly of South Carolina asking its acceptance of the property, and of the conditions annexed to it. The General Assembly at once put an Act on its passage for this purpose. Held, that the right of complainant to assert her claims in this court was imperiled, and an interlocutory injunction was issued.

*4. When a defendant pendente lite in a Circuit Court of the United States seeks to convey the land, the subject of controversy, to a State, he will be restrained by injunction.

(December 18, 1888.)

ON motion in equity for a preliminary injunction restraining defendant from parting with certain property. Heard on bill, answer, affidavits and exhibits. Injunction granted.

The opinion states the facts.

Messrs. Le Roy F. Youmans and James P. Carey, for complainant:

A court of equity has jurisdiction to prevent as well as remove a cloud upon title.

1 High, Inj. §§ 872, 881; Pettit v. Shepherd, 28 Am. Dec. 441.

Thomas G. Clemson was trustee for his wife and complainant under the will of Floride Calhoun, and the legal title to the property in dispute is now in the devisee of his will, the defendant, and no action of ejectment could be brought against him.

Finlay v. King, 28 U. S. 8 Pet. 346 (7 L. ed. 701).

Persons coming into possession of trust property with notice of the trust, are themselves trustees.

Mechanics Bank v. Seton, 26 U. S. 1 Pet. 299 (7 L. ed. 152).

*Head notes by the COURT.

2 L. R. A.

Where the danger threatened is such that it cannot be easily remedied, in case of refusal of relief, injunction will be granted.

1 High, Inj. 11; U. S. v. Duluth, 1 Dill 469.

Messrs. Wells & Orr and Smythe & Lee, for defendant:

This is not a case of equitable jurisdiction, because:

1. Being a bill simply to enforce legal title to land, the action should be at law.

Ellis v. Davis, 109 U. S. 493 (27 L. ed. 1008); Fussell v. Gregg, 113 U. S. 554 (28 L. ed. 994); Front v. Spitley, 121 U. S. 557 (30 L. ed. 1012); Wilson v. Hyatt, 4 S. C. 369.

2. Alleging the defendant to be in possession the law presumes him to be rightfully so, until the contrary is proved.

Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Paine, 119 U. S. 561 (30 L. ed. 518).

3. Proceedings to remove a cloud on title can only be brought by one in possession of the property. Idem.

4. If an injunction is necessary to preserve the status quo then the proceeding in equity for that purpose must be ancillary to a pending legal action.

Erhardt v. Boaro, 113 U. S. 539 (28 L. ed. 1117); Kerr, Inj. 197-201.

5. If plaintiff seeks an account of the acts and doings of a dead man, his executor or administrator must be a party. There is no such representative of T. G. Clemson a party.

Story, Eq. Pl. §§ 170, 171.

Complainant has not sued defendant as executor, and cannot avail herself of his acts as such.

Leggott v. Gr. Nor. R. R. 1 Law Rep. 602; Conklin v. Egerton, 21 Wend. 436; Punt v. McEwen, 4 Conn. 549; Colt v. Colt, 111 U. S. 566 (28 L. ed. 520).

Where a State voluntarily goes into court it is bound by the same rules as between individuals.

State v. Pac. Guano Co. 22 S. C. 50; Clark v. Rarnard, 108 U. S. 436 (27 L. ed. 780).

If the State accepts title to this property, pendente lite, from a party to the case, it voluntarily becomes a party and is bound by all the proceedings.

Tilten v. Cofield, 98 U. S. 168 (23 L. ed. 859); Walden v. Bodley, 50 U. S. 9 How. 34 (13 L. ed. 36); Whitney v. Higgins, 10 Cal. 547, 70 Am. Dec. 748; Story, Eq. Pl. § 194.

Simonton, J., delivered the following opinion:

This is a motion for a preliminary injunction. It comes up on bill, answer, affidavits, with exhibits. From these it appears that Mrs. Floride Calhoun, the grandmother of the mother of the complainant, left in force a last will and testament. That in clauses of this will she gave to Edward Noble, as trustee, a fund then invested in the bond of her son, Andrew P. Calhoun, secured by a mortgage of Fort Hill Plantation, in Oconee County, and certain slaves. The purpose of the trust was that the fund be held for the sole and separate use of Mrs. Anna M. Clemson, for her natural life, with a power of appointment thereof by a last will and testament, as she pleases; and, in default of such appointment, to her daughter, of whom the complainant is the only child. That proceedings were taken in the lifetime of Mrs. Calhoun to foreclose this mortgage. These proceedings were not consummated until after her death. At the sale for foreclosure the plantation of Fort Hill was purchased by Thomas G. Clemson, who had in the mean time been substituted as trustee in lieu of Noble; and a conveyance thereof was made to him as such trustee under the last will and testament of Mrs. Floride Calhoun.

Complainant alleges that the purchase money was paid by a receipt for Mrs. Clemson's share in the bond. Defendant avers that this share was supplemented by moneys of Mr. Clemson to the extent of some $8,000. Mrs. Clemson died in 1875, some years after this conveyance, leaving, it is said, a last will and testament. Complainant charges that she did not execute the power of appointment, by reason whereof the property devolves on her. Thomas G. Clemson, so being in possession as trustee of his wife, remained in possession of Fort Hill after her death, continuously until his own death, in 1888.

In his answer the defendant avers that Clemson left a last will and testament, with a codicil, wherein he was named as executor, and whereby the Fort Hill property was devised to him upon certain trusts. In the exhibit is his letter to the General Assembly, and copy of this document, wherein it appears that he was the devisee in fee of this Fort Hill Plantation, and that the trust was to execute a conveyance thereof to the State of South Carolina, upon the acceptance of the gift thereof on certain conditions by the said State.

On the 4th of December, 1888, the defendant sent in to the General Assembly of South Carolina, then in session, his said letter, accompanied by a copy of the said will, and in it asked the acceptance of this property thus given, on behalf of the State. This bill was filed on November 26, 1888, and subpoena was served on defendant on November 28, 1888. The motion is for a preliminary injunction, based on this letter of the defendant and the action of the General Assembly thereupon. One House has passed the bill accepting the gift, and the bill is now on the calendar of the other House, awaiting early consideration. The General Assembly proposes to adjourn at a not distant day.

As we have seen, the defendant has answered. But in his answer he makes defenses properly made by demurrer, and craves the same benefit thereof as if he had formally demurred. We must therefore consider them with the other grounds of defense in the answer, and not pass on the bill alone. The demurrer is to the jurisdiction—that the complainant has a plain, adequate and complete remedy at law. While it is true that in deciding upon motions for preliminary injunctions the courts must provide for the preservation of property or rights in statu quo without expressing, and, indeed, without having the means of forming, an opinion as to such rights (1 High, Inj. § 5; Great Western R. Co. v. Birmingham & O. Junction R. Co. 22 Eng. Ch. 602), yet, when the jurisdiction of the court is challenged, that question must be met and decided.

The position taken by the defendant is this: complainant alleges that she is the owner in fee of this plantation—Fort Hill—under the will of Mrs. Calhoun. The defendant claims the fee under the will of Clemson. It is simply a question of title, cognizable by a court of law. In such an action a judgment can be had for the rents and profits. There is no occasion and no room for the peculiar jurisdiction of equity. The will of Mrs. Calhoun impressed with a trust the fund afterwards invested in Fort Hill. Of this trust Clemson became the trustee, and so remained, certainly up to the death of his wife. After her death he continued in possession. Did his relation to the property change at the death of his wife?

The complainant charges that he held the property in trust for his wife for life, with a power of appointment in her at her pleasure by will, and, in default thereof, to the limitations of Mrs. Calhoun's will; and that there was a default in the exercise of the power; that thus the legal estate remained in him, subject to these limitations. There is nothing before the court going to show that Clemson ever disavowed this trust, or that he gave any notice of his holding in his own or in any adverse right. If there was, it could not avail as against complainant, then and now an infant. Nor is there any place here for an executed use, devolving the legal title on the complainant. The property, Fort Hill, was purchased by Clemson at the master's sale. In paying the purchase money, as defendant claims, a part of it only was paid by the money provided under Mrs. Calhoun's will. The remainder was supplemented by himself out of his own funds. The conveyance to him was as trustee for Mrs. Calhoun under the last will and testament and codicil of Mrs. Calhoun. This was confirmed by the court. The legal title was thus fixed in him, and could not pass out of him but by his deed or will. He made no such deed in his lifetime. By his will he devised the property to the defendant, a volunteer, and so charged with all the equities with which his testator held it.

The legal title being thus in Clemson, no suit at law could have been maintained against him for possession during his life. Nor can such suit be maintained at law against the defendant, his devisee of the legal estate. Whatever may be the final conclusion of the court on this point, the above reasons are sufficient to prevent the dismissal of this bill, or the refusal of this motion on the ground of a want of jurisdiction.

Do the circumstances of the case warrant a preliminary injunction? The defendant, as we have seen, was served with subpoena in this cause on November 28, 1888. The bill gave him notice of the claim of complainant, and her prayer for an injunction against him. On the 4th of December, 1888, he addressed his letter to the General Assembly of the State of South Carolina. This, with the document accompanying it, informed the General Assembly that he was the devisee in fee for the Fort Hill Plantation, and that he had the right to convey it to the State of South Carolina upon compliance by the State with certain conditions therein stated. Thereupon he requested the General Assembly to accept the property thus "donated for and in behalf of the State." Upon receipt of this letter, both Houses, as has 2 L. R. A.

been stated, took action, and that promptly bills were introduced into both Houses accepting the gift. In each bill in each House is this section as section 1:

"Section 1. That the State of South Carolina hereby expressly declares that it accepts the devise and bequest of Thomas G. Clemson, subject to the terms and conditions set forth in his last will and testament, and that the treasurer of the State be, and is hereby, authorized and empowered to receive and securely hold the said property, both real and personal, and to execute all necessary papers and receipts therefor so soon as the said executor shall convey and transfer the said devise and bequest to the State, as aforesaid."

This bill has passed one House. It is under consideration, with every prospect of its passage, in the other. It may very soon—in a day or two—become a law. If it does become a law, the property will be taken out of the jurisdiction of this court. No process can make the State of South Carolina a party to this suit. It can have no jurisdiction over the State in a civil action, except with her consent. So far as plaintiff's right to recover this plantation is concerned, if she has such a right, it will be irretrievably lost if the legal title be conveyed to the State. It is idle to say that the State will recognize and accede to the decision of this court if it establish any rights in complainant. Courts of justice enforce their decrees by mandates whose sanction is the court. No decree or mandate can be entered or issued, obedience to which depends upon the will or courtesy of the party against whom it may be made.

Without deciding, so as to commit the court, any question of right or property made in the papers submitted, and solely with the purpose of preserving the status quo, this motion will be granted. There is a principle which governs nearly all judges on applications for preliminary injunctions, governing me. When the danger or injury threatened is of a character which cannot be easily remedied if the injunction be refused, and there is no doubt that the act charged is contemplated, the temporary injunction should be granted, unless the case made by the bill is satisfactorily refuted by the defendant. U. S. v. Duluth, 1 Dill. 469 (Mr. Justice Miller).

The complainant has brought her action against the defendant, not as executor, but in his personal character. He is devisee of the Fort Hill Plantation as well as executor. As such devisee he takes the legal estate, charged with the equities, but not with the defaults, of his testator. If there be any account for the rents and profits received by Clemson in his lifetime, for such default R. W. Simpson, executor, qua executor, is liable; not R. W. Simpson, devisee. He takes the property, if he takes it, with notice of the trust, responsible only for his own enjoyment of the rents and profits. For the same reason, the defendant not being a party as executor, these proceedings cannot affect him so far as personally in his hands to be administered as executor is concerned. The injunction, therefore, must be confined to the Fort Hill Plantation.

This cause came to be heard on motion for a preliminary injunction upon the bill, answer, affidavits and exhibits. After hearing the same and argument thereon, and upon due consideration thereof, it is ordered, adjudged and decreed that a writ of injunction do issue to the defendant, Richard W. Simpson, enjoining and restraining him from executing and delivering any deed or deeds of conveyance of, or parting with the possession of, the Fort Hill Plantation, as described in the pleadings of this case, to any person or persons, or to or for any uses, intents, and purposes whatsoever, especially to the State of South Carolina, or to any person or persons whomsoever in behalf of the said State. This order and writ to remain in force until the further order of this court.

MAINE SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT.

Thomas GILPATRICK et al.

v.

Daniel GLIDDEN et al.

(....Maine....)

The parol agreement of a wife, in consideration of her husband's leaving her his property by will absolutely, to transfer the remainder, after she was done with it, to his heirs, may, after her death, leaving it unperformed, be enforced against her representatives notwithstanding the Statute of Frauds.

(December 27, 1883.)

ON defendants' appeal. Decree affirmed.
This was a bill in equity brought in the Supreme Judicial Court of Kennebec County by the heirs of Thomas Gilpatrick against the heirs and personal representative of Sarah Gilpatrick, wife of said Thomas, to carry into effect a parol agreement made by said Sarah before her decease.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion.

Messrs. Spear & Clason and Loring for appellants.

Messrs. Baker, Baker & Cornish for appellees.

Virgin, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiffs are the nephews and niece and next of kin of the late Orrin Gilpatrick, and the defendants are the administrator and next of kin of the widow of Orrin, neither of whom left any children.

The plaintiffs seek to establish their title to the proceeds of certain real and personal estate, on the ground that Orrin, having expressed to his wife his intention of leaving all his property to his heirs (plaintiffs) was induced by her to sell and will it to her, in form absolute, in sole consequence of his reliance upon her assurance that she would use it during her natural life only, and seasonably transfer the remainder to his own heirs; that she did not fulfill her agreement, but died intestate; whereupon the property descended to her heirs, instead of his; and that by reason of the promises it became vested in her in trust, to enforce which trust is the object of this bill.

The presiding Justice, who saw and heard all of the witnesses testify, found the facts in favor of the plaintiffs, which findings we should be slow to reverse, unless clearly satisfied that it was erroneous. Young v. Witham, 75 Maine, 536.

But after a very careful examination of the stenographer's report of the direct and uncontradicted testimony of the Gilpatrick's lifelong trusted friend, and his wife and daughter, in whose family Mrs. G. lived during four years of her widowhood; of their family physician of many years; their business adviser, scrivener, and executor of Mr. G's will, and the writer at her dictation of what Mrs. G. called a "certification;" of the neighbor who purchased the hay during the last ten years of Mr. G's life, and of her thereafter—all disinterested witnesses—whose testimony of Mr. G's frequent expressions to his wife, for months before his decease, of his desire and intention that his property should go to his own heirs; of her final agreement to transfer the remainder thereof "after she was done with it," provided he would give it to her absolutely; of her frequent and freely expressed admissions of such agreement, and of her own construction of it as evidenced by her own acts in executing all the stipulations thereof, except the final transfer of the remainder of the property to his heirs, and putting even that in writing signed by her; and of the peculiar instructions of Mr. G. as to the phraseology of the will—not to use the word "give"—we are fully satisfied that the Justice's finding of facts was correct, and that the following, among other facts, are clearly established:

That Orrin Gilpatrick died in February, 1875, possessed of a farm which came down to him from his paternal grandfather, and of other property, all of the value of more than $9,000, and which he desired to go to his heirs; that his widow died in 1883, leaving property which she had owned in her own right, consisting chiefly of money invested in town securities, amounting to some $5,000; that they left no children, but a widow of a deceased son; that they always kept their individual property separate; that for several months before his decease they had frequently discussed the mode of the disposition of his property, and, as she had so much in her own right, he frequently expressed to her his intention of giving his to his own heirs; that, a short time before his death, she finally induced him to give some of the personal property, and will the remainder of his estate to her in form absolute, upon her assurance that she would only use it, if necessary, during her natural life, pay their daughter-in-law $500, reconvey certain real estate, the legal title of which he held, to one Glidden, erect a monument in and keep in repair their private cemetery, and finally reasonably transfer all that remained to his heirs; that if she had not given her husband such assurance, and if he had not confidently relied upon her performance of it, he would not have executed the will, nor given her the personal property; that she promptly performed all of the terms of her agreement, except the final transfer of the remainder, which she purposely omitted to do, although she had expended but a comparatively small portion of the property during her life.

Nor do we entertain any doubt of the soundness of the law on which the decree appealed from was based, viz.: a constructive trust impressed upon the property, and the donee and devisee converted into a trustee in invitum, although not so denominated in the paper title, and although the statute expressly provides: "There can be no trust concerning lands . . . unless created or declared by some writing signed by the party or his attorney." Rev. Stat. chap. 73, § 11.

Fraud is infinite in its varieties and forms; and while, as Lord Hardwicke said: "The court very wisely hath never laid down any general rule beyond which it will not go, lest other means of avoiding the equity of the court should be found out" (Lawley v. Hooper, 3 Atk. 278), still rules have been established governing certain classes of cases involving the element of fraud—such as that the fraudulent suppression of a cause of action or of a will is a good answer to the Statute of Limitations (Deake's App. 80 Maine, 50, 5 New Eng. Rep. 843); that married women and infants shall not take advantage of rules made for their protection to perpetrate fraud (1 Perry, Trusts, § 170; and that the Statute of Frauds shall not be allowed to bar a decree for the specific performance of an oral agreement for the sale and conveyance of land, when there has been such a part performance by the party seeking as equity recognizes. Pulsifer v. Waterman, 73 Maine, 233; Woodbury v. Gardner, 77 Maine, 68.

And, while the precise question involved in the case at Bar has never before arisen in this State, the cases last cited are analogous thereto in principle; and the universally recognized ground on which the decisions rest is that to permit the Statute of Frauds to be used as a bar to the compulsory performance of such an

to be made directly to himself—through false assurances, or promises that he will apply the devise or bequest to the benefit of the third person who is the real object, and after the testator's death he refuses to comply with his former assurances or promises, equity will enforce the obligation by impressing a trust upon the property in favor of one who has been defrauded of the testator's intended gift. 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1054.

Where the wife died intestate, and the plaintiffs, who were natural children of her deceased husband, filed a bill against the heir and next of kin, and also the heir and administrator of the wife, it was held that if the alleged promise of the wife to her husband to give the whole property at her death to plaintiffs had been proved, a trust would have been created. Towles v. Burton, Rich. Eq. Cas. 146, 24 Am. Dec. 415.

Specific performance of verbal contract may be enforced.

Specific performance of a verbal contract will be enforced where the contract is admitted by the answer of the defendant, and the benefit of the Statute of Frauds is not claimed in words equivalent to the statute. Battell v. Matot, 2 New Eng. Rep. 496, 88 Vt. 271.

A promise by a devisee to pay an annuity, or the promise of the executor to pay a legacy, should be enforced, notwithstanding the Statute of Frauds. Oldham v. Litchfield, 2 Vern. 506; Mestaer v. Gillespie, 11 Ves. Jr. 621; Chamberlain v. Agar, 2 Ves. & 2 L. R. A.

B. 250; Beech v. Kennigate, Amb. 67; Thynn v. Thynn, 1 Vern. 296.

A parol agreement by devisee to convey may be enforced as a trust. Barrell v. Hanriok, 42 Ala. 60.

It may be enforced by compelling him to carry the trust into effect through a conveyance to the one who is beneficially interested. It is not necessary that the assurances or promises should be in writing; they may be entirely verbal. 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1054.

If a testator devises an estate to a son, who promises his father, in consideration of such devise, to pay a certain sum to another son, equity will enforce the promise. Strickland v. Aldridge, 9 Ves. Jr. 516; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 919.

A parol promise by a husband and wife, to whom the testator devised the residue of his estate, to make an allowance to the plaintiff, was enforced as a trust. Norris v. Frazer, L. R. 15 Eq. 318; McCormick v. Grogan, L. R. 4 H. L. 82.

A promise made by a legatee to the testator for the purpose of preventing a change in the will, that he would give a certain bond, bequeathed to him, to another, was enforced. Drakeford v. Wilks, 3 Atk. 539.

A promise by a testator's wife and residuary legatee to surrender a certain note, was enforced as a trust in Richardson v. Adams, 10 Yerg. 273.

A promise made by a devisee to pay certain legacies in order to prevent an alteration of the testator's will, was proved and was enforced as a trust. Chamberlaine v. Chamberlaine, 2 Freem. Ch. 84.

agreement, thus partly performed, would practically authorize a statute, enacted for the purpose of preventing a fraud, to become the veriest instrument for perpetrating or protecting a fraud.

So, for like reason, when one obtains the legal title to real or personal estate, either by will or otherwise, under circumstances which render it unconscientious for him to retain it for his own benefit while in fact another is entitled to it, or to some interest in it, equity secures to the latter his right, not by disregarding the former's legal title, but by imposing on him the duty of holding and using his title for the real beneficiary.

Applying the principle to the facts in the case: Mr. G. was persuaded by his wife to change his intention of leaving his property to his own heirs, and to give it to her, by reason of her express promise to give the remainder to his heirs, which she omitted to do. His will was regularly probated, and the legal title passed thereby to her. His heirs claim that remainder, because her conduct operated as a fraud upon her husband, as well as upon them, and that by reason thereof she held the property impressed with a trust, and was made a trustee. Equity does not interfere with the will. That remains unchallenged. Nor does it assume to set aside the Statute of Frauds, which the defendants invoke. But, on account of her conduct in procuring the legal title to herself, equity does declare that she cannot conscientiously hold it or its proceeds for her own exclusive benefit, and imposes on her conscience the obligation to hold all she did not use during her life for the benefit of her husband's heirs (plaintiffs) as the equitable owners thereof, and the additional obligation of perfecting their ownership by will or otherwise. But, as she has deceased, equity can reach the personal, or the proceeds of both real and personal, estate in the hands of her personal representatives, and any of the real estate in the hands of any subsequent holder who is not a bona fide purchaser thereof without notice, holding it relieved of the trust. Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 481, 1053.

We do not mean, however, that it is essential to the upholding of such a trust that a devisee should have been an active agent in procuring the devise to be made in his favor; for the great current of English authority during the last two centuries, as well as that of this country, holds that, if either before or after the making of the will, the testator makes known to the devisee his desire that the property shall be disposed of in a certain legal manner other than that mentioned in the will, and that he relies upon the devisee to carry it into effect, and the latter, by any words or acts calculated to, and which he knows do in fact, cause the testator to believe that the devisee fully assents thereto, and in consequence thereof the devise is made, but after the decease of the testator the devisee refuses to perform his agreement, equity will decree a trust, and convert the devisee into a trustee, whether, when he gave his assent, he intended a fraud or not—the final refusal having the effect of consummating the fraud.

As this is the first case of this kind that has ever arisen in this State, and we have the English and American cases before us, we mention some of them:

2 J. R. A.

Thus, as early as 1678, where a father, being about to change his will lest there might not be assets enough besides the lands settled on his son to pay certain legacies to his daughter, was assured by the son that he would pay them in case of deficiency of assets if the will were not changed, the son was held to his promise—the chancellor remarking that it was the constant practice of the court to make such decrees on such promises. Chamberlaine v. Chamberlaine, Freem. Ch. 34, 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 48.

So in 1684, where her son promised the executrix that if she would obtain a new will naming him as executor, he would hold it in trust for her, which she did, the Lord Keeper decreed the trust, notwithstanding the Statute of Frauds. Thynn v. Thynn, 1 Vern. 296.

So in 1689, where a copy-holder, intending to leave the greater part of his estate to his godson, was persuaded by his wife, on her promise to carry out his intentions, to give the whole to her, the courts, notwithstanding the statute, enforced the trust. Deenish v. Baines, Prec. in Ch. 8.

In Oldham v. Litchfield, 2 Vern. 506, 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 44 (1705), lands were charged with an annuity, on proof that the testator was prevented from changing them in his will by a promise of payment by the devisee.

Again in 1747 a testatrix, having given a bond for £360 to the plaintiff, afterwards, by a new will, gave it to another on the latter's promise to give it, at her own decease, to the plaintiff, and the performance of the promise was decreed against her representatives, against the interposition of the Statute of Frauds. Lord Chancellor Hardwicke said:

"I know no case where the court has not decreed it, whether such an undertaking was before the will has been made or after . . . This is not setting up anything in opposition to the will, but taking care that what has been undertaken shall have its effect. A will being ambulatory, if the testatrix has a conversation with a legatee, and the legatee promises that, in consideration of the testatrix's disposition in favor of her, she will do an act in favor of a third person, and the testatrix lets the will stand, it is very proper the person who undertook to do the act should perform; because I must take it, if she had not so promised, the testatrix would have altered her will." Drakeford v. Wilks, 3 Atk. 589.

The next year a residuary legatee, who satisfied the testator that he need not change his will in order to give a nephew £100, for he himself would pay it, was held trustee, and a trust imposed on the residue of the assets. Lord Chancellor Hardwicke said:

"The court will not suffer the statute to protect fraud, so as that anyone should run away with a benefit not intended . . . There is a breach of promise, but attended also with fraud upon the testator as well as the plaintiff, by representing as if there was no occasion to alter the will." Reech v. Kennegal, 1 Vea. Sr. 124, 1 Amb. 67, 1 Wils. 237.

So in 1796, instead of changing his will with the avowed intention of increasing the annuity to his wife, the testator told his residuary legatee he would "leave it to his generosity to pay it as he promised," and a trust was imposed on the residue of the assets. The Master of the Rolls said:

"The word generosity can be construed to take away the effect of a solemn desire of the testator, coupled with the promise of the defendant. The defendant had no intention of fraud at that time, for he desired the testator to make a new will. Leaving it to his generosity is leaving it to his honor and conscience. . . . The question is whether, by reposing that trust in the defendant, the testator was not prevented from making a new will. The defendant ought to have told him that, if he did not put it in his will, he would not do it. Instead of that he promised to do it, upon which the testator refuses to make a new will." Barrow v. Greenough, 3 Ves. Jr. 152.

In 1804 Lord Eldon said: "If a father devises to his youngest son, who promises that, if the estate is devised to him, he will pay £10,000 to the eldest son, this court would compel the former to discover whether that passed in parol; and if he acknowledged it, even praying the benefit of the statute, he would be a trustee to the value of £10,000." Strickland v. Aldridge, 9 Ves. Jr. 516.

And the like result is brought about by the silent assent of the devisee to a like proposal of the testator. Byrn v. Godfrey, 4 Ves. Jr. 6, 10; Paine v. Hall, 18 Ves. Jr. 475.

In 1836 natural children of the testator alleged, in substance, in their bill, that the testator's wife promised, in consideration of his giving to her the whole estate, to leave it to them at her decease, upon the faith of which he did it. Shadwell, V. C., said:

"My opinion is that, if it were perfectly clear that that state of circumstances took place which the plaintiffs allege, they would be entitled to the relief they ask." Podmore v. Gunning, 7 Sim. 644, 654.

In 1852 a residuary estate was devised, with an oral intimation by the testator to the devisee that he had confidence that he would carry out the testator's intentions, which the devisee well knew and assented to, and the devisee was held a trustee. Lord Justice Turner, V. C., in discussing the question of the devisee's undertaking, said:

"The true test of the answer to the question is this: Would the testator have left his property to the defendants if the defendants had stated, in answer to that question, that they would not carry out the disposition which the testator intended to effect through the medium of the trust? . . . No one can doubt that if these defendants had stated that they would not carry out the intentions of this testator, this disposition in their favor would not have been found in this will." Russell v. Jackson, 10 Hare, 204, 211.

In the often cited case of Wallgrave v. Tebbs, 2 Kay & J. 321, the joint devisees of real estate denied that they ever knew anything of the testator's intentions till after his decease, but an unsigned letter written by him expressed his confidence in their application of the devised property in accordance with his desires. Wood, V. C. (then Lord Hatherly), upheld the trust, saying:

"Where a person knowing that a testator, in making a disposition in his favor, intends it to be applied for purposes other than his own benefit, either expressly promises, or by silence implies, that he will carry the testator's intention into effect, and the property is left to him upon the faith of that promise or undertaking, it is in effect a case of trust; and in such a case the court will not allow the devisee to set up the Statute of Frauds, or, rather, the Statute of Wills, by which the Statute of Frauds is now in this respect superseded; and for this reason the devisee, by his conduct, has induced the testator to leave him the property, and, as Lord Justice Turner says in Russell v. Jackson, 10 Hare, 204, no one can doubt that, if the devisee had stated that he would not carry into effect the intentions of the testator, the disposition in his favor would not have been found in the will. But in this the court does not violate the spirit of the statute; but for the same end, namely: prevention of fraud, it ingrafts the trust on the devise. . . . in order to prevent a party from applying property to a purpose foreign to that for which he undertook to hold it."

In 1867, in Jones v. Badley, L. R. 8 Eq. 685, 652, Lord Romilly, M. R., quoted the foregoing extract entire, and declared the law to be therein very "accurately and very comprehensively stated." On the appeal, in 1868, Lord Cairns quoted the same extract, and pronounced it "the clear and felicitous exposition of the law." Jones v. Badley, L. R. 8 Ch. 302.

And in 1878, in Roubotham v. Dunnett, L. R. 8 Ch. Div. 430, 436, Malins, V. C., made the same quotation, and pronounced the law "correctly laid down," but dismissed the bill for want of proof.

In 1860, in McCormick v. Grogan, L. R. 4 H. L. 82, where, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, no trust was decreed, some of the language of Lord Westbury in the fore part of his opinion, where he says the court "must see that personal fraud, a malus animus, is proved," etc., has sometimes been urged by defendants as requiring more than the authorities already cited; but when it is considered in connection with the facts before him, and with his own illustrations in the same opinion, that erroneous view vanishes. After discussing the rationale of the principle of dealing with the Statute of Frauds and of Wills, he said:

"If an individual on his death-bed, or at any other time, is persuaded by his heir at law or his next of kin to abstain from making a will; or if the same individual, having made a will, communicates the disposition to the person on the face of the will benefited by that disposition, but at the same time says to that individual that he has a purpose to answer which he has not expressed in the will, but which he depends on the donee to carry into effect; and the donee assents to it, either expressly or by any mode of action which the donee knows must give to the testator the impression and belief that he fully assents to the request—then undoubtedly, the heir at law in the one case, and the donee in the other, will be converted into trustees, simply on the principle that an individual shall not be benefited by his own personal fraud."

Such, in 1873, was the view of Sir James Bacon, V. C., in Norris v. Frazer, L. R. 15 Eq. 318, 320, where a husband and wife were devisees of the bulk of the property of a testator, who expressed a desire that an annuity of £800 should be provided for a third person, which the wife testified she promised, and the husband assented to. The Vice-Chancellor said:

"Mr. Swanston has read particularly from Lord Westbury's judgment in McCormick v. Grogan, the conditions as to what the court has to see proved before it admits any such claim, and he says it must be proved that there was direct personal fraud. . . . If the statement made by Mrs. Frazer (one of the devisees) be true, then a more direct, a more distinct, personal fraud could not be committed than for Mrs. F. to refuse to perform that promise which she made to the testator upon his death-bed."

To the same general purport are Riordan v. Banon, 10 Ir. Eq. Rep. 469, and Re Fleetwood, L. R. 15 Ch. Div. 594, 606 (decided in 1880). In the latter case, Hall, V. C., after reviewing numerous cases, said:

"The testator, at least when his purpose is communicated to, and accepted by, the proposed legatee, makes the disposition to him on the faith of his carrying out his promise, and it would be a fraud in him to refuse to perform that promise."

Once more in the English Courts, in 1884, in Re Boyes, L. R. 26 Ch. Div. 531, 535, in speaking of this class of cases, Kay, J., said:

"In these cases the court has compelled discovery and performance of the promise, treating it as a trust binding the conscience of the donee, on the ground that otherwise a fraud would be committed, because it is to be presumed that, if it had not been for such promise, the testator would not have made or would have revoked the gift," citing cases supra.

This general doctrine, so long and so thoroughly established in England, has been adopted in several of the States, and fully recognized in others.

Thus, in 1808, a father was induced to make no will, and let his Maryland property descend to his eldest son, on the latter's promise to convey the same to his younger brother, provided, as was expected, he himself succeeded to certain property in Scotland, which he did subsequently inherit; and the court enforced the promise. Browne v. Browne, 1 Har. & J. 430.

In Owings' Case, 1 Bland, 370, 17 Am. Dec. 311, 317, 338, after stating the English doctrine of enforcing oral promises of devisees, Bland, Chancellor, said: If in such cases the person beneficially interested "could not have the promise enforced, his loss would be altogether irretrievable. The heir or person making it would be suffered to frustrate the intention of the deceased—to practice a fraud with perfect impunity; and the Statute of Frauds, if it were allowed to apply, would be made to operate for the protection, instead of the prevention, of fraud."

3 L. R. A.

In Pennsylvania, in 1833, the testator's brother was made his residuary devisee on his promise to apply the property for the benefit of the testator's illegitimate son, and a trust was decreed. Gibson, Ch. J., said:

"Equity turns the fraudulent procurer of the legal title into a trustee to get at him. . . . A mere refusal to perform the trust is, undoubtedly, not enough. . . . It seems to be requisite that there should appear to have been an agency, active or passive, on the part of the devisee, in procuring the devise;" and, after citing several of the English cases, said: "If the testator was induced by the promise of his brother, much more if by his suggestion, to believe that a devise to him was the most prudent plan of securing the estate to his illegitimate son, it cannot be said that a breach of confidence thus reposed in him was intended to be protected by the statute." Hoge v. Hoge, 1 Watts, 163, 215, 216. To the same purport are Jones v. McKee, 3 Pa. 496, 6 Pa. 425; and Church v. Ruland, 64 Pa. 432; Schultz's App. 80 Pa. 396.

The English rules have also been adopted and enforced or fully recognized in the following cases: Williams v. Fitch, 18 N. Y. 546; O'Hara v. Dudley, 95 N. Y. 408, a full discussion of the whole subject; Doud v. Tucker, 41 Conn. 197; Vreeland v. Williams, 32 N. J. Eq. 784; Glass v. Hulbert, 102 Mass. 24, 39, 40; Campbell v. Brown, 129 Mass. 28, 26; Olliffe v. Wells, 130 Mass. 221, 224.

The plaintiffs are the nephews and niece of Orrin Gilpatrick—children of his two deceased sisters; Thomas Gilpatrick being the only child of one of the sisters, and the other plaintiffs children of the other. If the property should go to them according to the Law of Descent, Thomas would be entitled to one half "by right of representation," and the other half to the other plaintiffs equally. Rev. Stat. chap. 75, § 1.

Mr. G. invariably spoke of its going to his heirs generally. Mrs. G's certificate expressed her desire that "it should be equally divided between his heirs;" which, having been written soon after her husband's decease, may be considered as probably expressing the real understanding between her and her husband. Such a division would also seem equitable.

We are of opinion, therefore, that the bill be sustained, and that the plaintiffs have judgment against the goods and estate of Sarah Gilpatrick in the hands of the administrator on her estate, for the sum of $9,508.06, less the sums paid to Zubra Gilpatrick, the amount paid for erecting the monument and caring for the cemetery, and the commissions paid to the executor—which amount, if not agreed upon by the parties, is to be ascertained by a master. Decree accordingly.

Peters, Ch. J., and Walton, Danforth, Emery and Haskell, JJ., concurred.

VIRGINIA SUPREME COURT OF APPEALS.

PHENIX INSURANCE CO. of New York
et al., Appts.,
v.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK of Harrisonburg et al.

(... Va. ...)

An insurer, on payment of insurance covering only part of a mortgage debt, cannot take by subrogation from a mortgagee any part of his claim until the mortgage debt is paid, both principal and interest, in full.

(February 14, 1888.)

A PPEAL by plaintiffs, from a decree of the Rockingham County Circuit Court in favor of defendants in an action brought to obtain possession of certain bonds. Affirmed.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Mr. Ed. S. Conrad for appellants.

Mr. George E. Sipe for appellees.

Richardson, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a decree of the Circuit Court of Rockingham County, rendered June 30, 1887, in the chancery cause therein pending in which the Phenix Insurance Company of New York, the Fire Association of Philadelphia, and the Hope Insurance Company of New Orleans were complainants, and the First National Bank of Harrisonburg, Virginia, was defendant.

A corporation, styled the New Rawley Springs Company, issued its bonds to the amount of $30,000, dated July 12, 1879, with coupons for semi-annual interest, and executed a trust deed to secure payment thereof. These bonds, to the amount of $7,187, were, on the 10th of August, 1885, owned by the defendant bank; and that day the bank obtained from the Phenix Insurance Company a policy of insurance against loss by fire to the amount of $1,000 for the term of one year, in part of the buildings and furniture embraced in the trust deed.

The policy was issued in the name of the Springs Company, though the bank paid the premium, the loss, if any, being payable to the bank as its interest might appear. On the 7th of June, 1886, the items of property covered by the policy were destroyed by fire, the loss aggregating $700, which was paid and the policy surrendered. The bank also took out additional policies in the Virginia Fire & Marine Insurance Company for $2,750, in the Hope Insurance Company of New Orleans for $1,500, and in the Fire Association of Philadelphia for $1,750, making a total insurance of $7,000 to protect the bonds.

The losses under the several policies were: Phenix $700, Fire Association $1,375, Hope $1,050, and Va. F. & M. $2,375, aggregating $5,500. When the Phenix Insurance Company paid the bank the amount of the loss under its policy it demanded of the bank $700 of said bonds, claiming that it stood in the relation of surety, and that, having paid $700 of the debt of the Springs Company represented by the bonds, it had become entitled, on the principle of subrogation, to bonds to that amount. This claim being denied by the bank, the Phenix Ins. Company filed its bill for relief. The bank demurred to and answered the bill, denying the complainant's demand. Then the Fire Association and the Hope Ins. Company, by leave of the court, filed their petition to the same effect. These two companies had not paid the losses under their policies, declining to do so until the bonds they claimed were turned over to them.

In vacation, on the 30th of June, 1887, the court decreed that the complainants were not entitled to demand and take of the bank the bonds or any of them, until the bank had received the full amount of the principal and interest of its debt, but that the insurance companies which have or shall have paid the bank the amount of adjusted loss due from them respectively were entitled in equitable proportions to such surplus of the dividends applicable to said bonds owned by the bank as may arise upon the foreclosure of the trust deed and remain after the payment of principal and interest of said bonds to the bank, and that the prayer of the complainants be denied, and that the right of the bank to hold and collect the bonds was firm and stable. From this decree the Phenix Insurance Company and the other complainants appealed to this court.

We have had no hesitancy in coming to the conclusion that the decree complained of is without error, either on principle or authority. The case involves only one single question: Does an insurer, who has paid a loss to a mortgagee that covers only a part of the mortgage debt, acquire, as against the mortgagee, a right to demand and take from the mortgagee the evidences of the debt secured to the amount of the loss paid by the insurer, whether the mortgagee be able or not to obtain satisfaction of his debt from the remaining evidences of the debt? Or, in other words, must not the creditor's debt be paid in full before the insurer can take from him by subrogation any part of that debt?

The doctrine which is applicable to this case, and which squarely meets this question, is clearly laid down by Mr. Justice Strong, in pronouncing the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States in Carpenter v. Providence Washington Insurance Company, 41 U. S. 16 Pet. 501 [10 L. ed. 1044] where the learned judge says:

"No doubt can exist that the mortgagor and the mortgagee may each separately insure his own distinct interest in the property. But there is this important distinction between the cases: that where the mortgagee insures solely on his own account it is but an insurance on his debt, and if his debt is afterwards paid or extinguished the policy ceases from that time to have any operation, and, even if the premises insured are subsequently destroyed by fire, he has no right to recover for the loss, for he sustains no damage thereby; neither can the mortgagor take advantage of the policy, for he has no interest whatever therein. On the other hand, if the premises are destroyed by fire before any payment or extinguishment of the mortgage, the underwriters are bound to pay the amount of the debt to the mortgagee, if it does not exceed the insurance. But then, upon such payment, the underwriters are entitled to an assignment of the debt from the mortgagee, and may recover the same amount from the mortgagor, either at law or in equity, according to circumstances."

And in Royal Insurance Company v. Stinson, 108 U. S. 25 [26 L. ed. 478], Mr. Justice Bradley concludes the opinion with the remark: "After a loss has occurred, and the insurance has been paid sufficient to discharge the debt, the insurer may be subrogated to the rights of the creditor against the debtor."

In a note to King v. State Mut. F. Ins. Co. [7 Oush. 1] 54 Am. Dec. 696, the learned annotator says: "The doctrine of the principle case, that the insurer is not entitled to demand subrogation under a policy which does not expressly provide for it, is the established law in Massachusetts . . . and that doctrine seems to be adopted in May on Insurance, § 456; Wood on Fire Insurance, 782, and in later editions of Mr. Phillips' work. 3 Phill. Ins. § 1712.

But it must be admitted that the decided preponderance of authority is against this doctrine, and in favor of the insurer's right of subrogation and assignment in such cases upon paying the loss, and if necessary the balance due on the mortgage"—citing Flanders, Ins. 400; Carpenter v. Providence Washington Ins. Co. 41 U. S. 16 Pet. 495 [10 L. ed. 1044], and numerous other authorities.

The authorities demonstrate the correctness of the decree appealed from, and we are, therefore, of opinion that the same must be affirmed.

Decree affirmed.

WEST VIRGINIA SUPREME COURT OF APPEALS.

Jennie H. KERR, Appt.,

v.
Ann LUNSFORD et al.

(..... W. Va. ....)

"1. Upon an issue devisavit vel non, the proponents of the will have the affirmative of the issue, and the right to open and conclude the argument.

*Head notes by the COURT.

NOTE.—Trial of issue of devisavit vel non.

2. Trial. Evidence. In the trial of an issue devisavit vel non, it is not improper for the proponents to offer the will, and the evidence of its due execution, and the competency of the testator at the time it was executed, and thus having made a prima facie case, to rest—and after the contestants have offered their evidence against the validity of the will, to permit the proponents to offer other evidence to sustain the will, as well as evidence in rebuttal.

legacy is void. According to the old rule, if the legacy was adeemed, the witness was restored to competency in England, but not in America. Windham v. Chetwynd, 1 Burr. 414; Hawes v. Humphrey, 9 Pick. 660; Cornwall v. Isham, 1 Day, 85, 41.

Expert testimony; opinion on hypothetical case.

In questions of science, skill and trade, or others of the like kind, persons of skill, sometimes called experts, may not only testify to facts but are permitted to give their opinions in evidence. 1 Greenl. Ev. § 440; Yardley v. Cuthbertson, 1 Cent. Rep. 662, 108 Pa. 395.

Their opinions are confined to their judgment on the facts proved. Id.

Where the facts stated are not complicated, and the evidence is not contradictory, and the terms of the question require the witness to assume that the facts stated are true, nothing more is required than a scientific opinion. Id.; Sills v. Brown, 9 Car. & P. 601.

The expert, in giving his opinion on a hypothetical case, must not be called upon to pass upon disputed facts. Page v. State, 61 Ala. 18; Fairchild v. Bagcom, 35 Vt. 320; Lawson, Expert Ev. 151.

A medical man who is present at the trial, and has heard all the testimony, may be properly asked: "Upon the hypothesis that the testimony given by the witnesses in this case is all true, what would be your opinion of the party's sanity?" Negroes v. Townshend, 9 Md. 145.

His opinion is not conclusive, but is to be weighed by the jury like all other evidence. Tatum v. Mohr, 21 Ark. 365; Chandler v. Barrett, 21 La. Ann. 58; State v. Bailey, 4 La. Ann. 376. But see Wood v. Barker, 22 Am. L. Reg. 323; Lawson, Expert Ev. 151.

The jury are not bound by the opinions of medical experts. They are to consider all the evidence, and if they believe T. sane, to find in favor of the will, though four out of the five physicians examined in the case give their opinions that T. was insane. Watson v. Anderson, 12 Ala. 202; Lawson, Expert Ev. 152.

Opinions of witnesses not experts.

As a general rule persons not medical men can-

3. Evidence. Upon the trial of such an issue, a general question, put to a witness, "Was there anyone who influenced the testator?"—is improper.
4. One who would inherit a part of the testator's property but for the will, under chapter 180 of the Code, § 23, is incompetent to speak of the testator's capacity to make the will.
5. When a medical expert is asked to give his professional opinion to a jury, not upon matters within his own knowledge, but upon a hypothetical case founded upon the testimony of witnesses previously examined in the case, the questions to him must be so shaped as to give him no occasion to mentally draw his conclusion from the whole evidence, or a part thereof, and from these conclusions, so drawn, express his opinion, or to decide as to the weight of evidence, or the credibility of witnesses; and his answers must be such as not to involve any such conclusion, so drawn, or any opinion of the expert as to the weight of the evidence, or the credibility of witnesses.
6. The opinion of medical experts, founded on testimony already in the case, can only be given on a hypothetical case; and the hypothesis must be clearly stated, so that the jury may know with certainty upon precisely what state of assumed facts the expert bases his opinion.
7. In putting hypothetical questions to expert witnesses, counsel may assume the facts in accordance with their theory of them; it is not essential that he states the facts as they exist, but the hypothesis should be based on a state of facts which the evidence in the cause tends to prove.
8. Appeal; harmless error. Where, on the trial of an issue devisavit vel non, a medical expert was permitted to answer two improper hypothetical questions, which he did, fully covering the whole case, and the court refused to permit him to answer two proper hypothetical questions which embraced no more than the two he was permitted to answer, the party who was thus deprived of having his proper hypothetical questions answered was not, and could not have been, prejudiced by the error; and for such error the appellate court would not reverse the decree and set aside the verdict.

9. Evidence of capacity. Where, in the trial of an issue devisavit vel non, the contestants, on the question of the testator's capacity, offered a witness who testified that about three months before the execution of the will the testator had sold a property for $10,000, and it was sold very cheaply; the proponents offered the purchaser of the property, who testified he had paid full value for it; the contestants then offered a witness who had occupied the property as lessee, and testified he knew its value, and asked the witness, "What is the property worth?"—the proponents objected, objection was sustained, and contestants excepted, —held, that, if error, it was not a reversible error. Johnson, P., dissenting.
10. The record of an inquisition de lunatico inquirendo is admissible on the trial of an issue devisavit vel non; but where the court refused to permit to be read, on such an issue, such portion of the order of adjudication as instructed the committee appointed as to the scope of his duties, —held, no error.
11. Stenographer's notes. Where, on the trial of such an issue, a witness for contestants had testified that the testator, in giving his evidence in a certain action in ejectment was incoherent, and on cross examination said he had the stenog-not give their opinions as to the existence, nature or extent of disease in anyone. Lush v. McDaniel, 13 Ired. L. 485.

Quite early, however, an exception to this rule was recognized, which permitted the subscribing witnesses to a will to be called upon for their opinions as to the sanity or insanity of the testator in the courts of all the States, except those of Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire and Texas. See Lawson, Expert Ev. 477; Buckminster v. Porry, 4 Mass. 593; Needham v. Ide, 5 Pick. 510; Com. v. Wilson, 1 Gray, 387.

The opinions of witnesses, when they state facts within their personal knowledge as the ground of their opinions, are competent evidence, and are entitled to the consideration of the jury. Dickinson v. Dickinson, 61 Pa. 404; Shaver v. McCarthy, 1 Cent. Rep. 143, 110 Pa. 339; DeWitt v. Baily, 17 N. Y. 340, 9 N. Y. 371.

It is competent to admit in evidence the opinions of witnesses who were not experts, touching the testator's sanity, first stating their observations on which their opinions were based. Roe v. Taylor, 45 Ill. 485; Upstone v. People, 109 Ill. 175; Am. Bible Society v. Price, 3 West. Rep. 74, 115 Ill. 623; Lawson, Expert Ev. 476.

One who was not a physician, but who, as sheriff, had watched C's actions for some length of time, was permitted to give his opinion as to his sanity. Clark v. State, 12 Ohio, 490; Clary v. Clary, 2 Ired. L. 78.

A brother and other witnesses were asked to give their opinion, from their observation of one's appearance and conduct, of his sanity. Hardy v. Merrill, 56 N. H. 227.

On a commission de lunatico inquirendo, acquaintances (not experts) were properly allowed to express their opinion as to the soundness of mind of the alleged lunatic. Re Vanauken, 10 N. J. Eq. 192.

In Pennsylvania it has always been the rule that after a nonprofessional witness has stated the facts upon which his opinion is founded, he is permitted to state his opinion as to the sanity or insanity of the testator. Forbes v. Caruthers, 3 Yeates, 527; Yardley v. Cuthbertson, 1 Cent. Rep. 652, 108 Pa. 385.

In Texas it is held that evidence of this character is inadmissible. Gehrke v. State, 13 Tex. 538; Lawson, Expert Ev. 486.

2 L. R. A.

The jury may act against the greater number of opinions, and in favor of the fewer; for the opinion of one expert may be of greater value to the jury than the opposite opinions of several. Getchell v. Hill, 21 Minn. 464.

Duty of court to determine sufficiency of evidence.

It is the duty of the court to determine the sufficiency of the evidence, and it is error, if the point is made, to submit the question of testamentary capacity to a jury, unless it be sufficient. Cuffman v. Long, 82 Pa. 72; Shaver v. McCarthy, 1 Cent. Rep. 143, 110 Pa. 339.

The rule is, on questions of this kind, that the finding of the jury is conclusive unless clearly against the weight of the evidence (Brownfield v. Brownfield, 43 Ill. 147; Meeker v. Meeker, 75 Ill. 236; Carponter v. Calvert, 83 Ill. 62; and in this respect they are put upon the same footing with cases at law. Long v. Long, 107 Ill. 210; Am. Bible Society v. Price, 3 West. Rep. 74, 115 Ill. 623.

What not evidence of mental incapacity.

Testamentary capacity may exist even where neither the mind nor the memory is as good as at a former period. Bice v. Hall, 9 West. Rep. 759, 120 Ill. 597.

Failure of memory is not sufficient incapacity, unless it goes to the extent of such a loss of memory as to deprive the testator of the ability to call up to the mind the immediate members of his family and property. Lamb v. Lamb, 2 West. Rep. 700, 105 Ind. 456.

An instruction that if the testatrix, at the time of executing the will, had a diseased brain, or her mind was so unsound as not to remember the names of her relations, and to judge soundly of the act she was about to do, or to know or understand the business she had in view, then she did not have capacity to make a will, was held to assert an incorrect rule as to testamentary capacity. Kramer v. Weinert, 51 Ala. 414.

Extreme physical disability is not mental incapacity. Stoutenburgh v. Hopkins, 11 Cent. Rep. 232, 43 N. J. Eq. 677.

Proof of testamentary capacity.

Testamentary capacity is proved by evidence that the testator knew what he was doing, even though rapher's notes of his evidence in the action, but that the stenographer was not sworn, but the witness said the notes were substantially correct, and on motion the proponents, to contradict the witness, were permitted to read the notes to the jury, —held, no error.

12. On the trial of such issue, a will executed in 1879, about two years before the will in issue, at which former date it is shown the testator was competent, is admissible on the question of his capacity at the time the will in issue was executed.
13. Evidence of business transactions by the testator, both before and after the execution of the will, indicating his mental condition, are admissible on the question of his capacity at the time the will was executed.
14. The opinions of witnesses not experts are entitled to little or no regard, unless they are supported by good reasons founded on facts which warrant them; but if the reasons and facts upon which they are founded are frivolous, the opinions of such witnesses are worth little or nothing.
15. The evidence of witnesses who were present at the execution of the will is entitled to peculiar weight, and especially is this the case with attesting witnesses.
16. It requires less capacity to make a will than it does to make a deed.
17. Old age is not of itself sufficient evidence of incapacity to make a will.
18. The time to be looked to by the jury, in determining the capacity of a testator to make a will, is the time when the will was executed.
19. It is not necessary that a person should possess the highest qualities of mind in order to make a will, nor that he should have the same strength of mind he may formerly have had; the mind may be in some degree debilitated, the memory may be enfeebled, the understanding may be weak, the character may be eccentric, and he may even want capacity to transact many of the ordinary business affairs of life; it is sufficient if he have mind enough to understand the nature of the business in which he is engaged, to recollect the property which he means to dispose of, the objects of his bounty, and the manner in which he wishes to distribute it among them.

20. In order to make a valid will it is not necessary that the testator should name all his children in it, or give each of them a portion of his estate. If he was mentally capable of understanding the disposition which he was making of his property, and acted freely, it is immaterial to whom he gives his property—whether all to one, or some, of his children, or to strangers. If he has a disposing mind and memory, he has a right to do as he pleases with his property.
21. Although the testator may, perhaps, have been influenced by feelings of resentment or dislike to one or more of his children, and by feelings of affection and attachment towards others, and though these feelings may have influenced him to give his whole estate to the one part, and little or nothing to the others, this is not sufficient to make the will invalid.
22. If the provisions of the will were induced by the extreme kindness and attention to the testator on the part of the principal devisees, that will not constitute undue influence which will invalidate the will.
23. It is improper to single out one witness, although he was the family physician, and instruct the jury that his evidence is entitled to great weight.
24. Where an instruction has already been substantially given, the court is not bound to repeat it.
25. Assumption of facts. Where an instruction refers to a disease by a technical name, is confused in its parts, and assumes facts as proved, it is properly refused.
26. It is not necessary for proponents to prove that the testator actually recollected all his property, the objects of his bounty, etc.; it is sufficient if he was, at the time, mentally capable of doing so.
27. An instruction was properly refused that assumed that the evidence raised in the minds of the jury a doubt of the testator's capacity.
28. An instruction should not be given un- his general business capacity was impaired. Converse v. Converse, 21 Vt. 188; Kinne v. Kinne, 9 Conn. 102; Stewart v. Lisenard, 26 Wend. 255.

An understanding of the nature of business about which the testator was engaged, of the kind and value of the property devised, and of the persons who were the natural objects of his bounty, and of the manner in which he wished to dispose of his property—all these are evidences of testamentary capacity. Roe v. Taylor, 45 Ill. 490; Am. Bible Society v. Price, 8 West. Rep. 73, 115 Ill. 623.

The statements of one in the last stages of consumption, expressing an expectation of recovery, are not proof of delirium, in connection with question of testamentary capacity. Ayres v. Ayres, 11 Cent. Rep. 280, 43 N. J. Eq. 565.

Incapacity must exist at time of execution of instrument.

If, at the making of the will, testator was sound in mind, it is immaterial that he was unsound before or after. Pennypacker v. Pennypacker (Pa.) 7 Cent. Rep. 532.

One who is aged and infirm and is afflicted with softening of the brain, but has occasional lucid intervals when his mind is clear, may be competent, during one or more of such lucid intervals, to make a will. Will of Silverthorn, 68 Wis. 372.

In an action to set aside a will, evidence that the disease by which the testator was afflicted was so severe at times as to require the frequent use of sedatives and narcotics, yet on the morning of the execution of the will he was free from pain and from the effects of the drug administered during the preceding night, and of sound mind and memory, and apparently understood the nature of the act he was about to perform, it is sufficient to show 2 L. R. A.

testamentary capacity. Epling v. Hutton, 11 West. Rep. 572, 121 Ill. 556.

What derangement of mind incapacitates.

The derangement is that want of capacity which prevents a person from reasoning correctly, and from understanding the relation of cause and effect in ordinary business affairs. Carpenter v. Calvert, 83 Ill. 62; Brown v. Riggins, 94 Ill. 568; Meeker v. Meeker, 75 Ill. 286; Am. Bible Society v. Price, 8 West. Rep. 73, 115 Ill. 623.

If incapable of appreciating the effect of any disposition made by him of it, and of understanding to whom he intends to bequeath it, he is without the requisite testamentary capacity. Leech v. Leech, 21 Pa. 67; Shaver v. McCarthy, 1 Cent. Rep. 142, 110 Pa. 339; Elkinton v. Brick, 1 L. R. A. 161.

Intoxication does not necessarily incapacitate.

Partial intoxication does not work a complete disqualification to will. Lowe v. Williamson, 2 N. J. Eq. 85. See Elkinton v. Brick, 1 L. R. A. 161, note; Wigram, Wills, 15.

If testator understands in detail all that he is about, and chooses with understanding and reason between one disposition and another, it is sufficient for the making of a will. Daniel v. Daniel, 39 Pa. 191; Tawney v. Long, 76 Pa. 106; Shaver v. McCarthy, 1 Cent. Rep. 142, 110 Pa. 339.

Existence of delusions not conclusive of incapacity.

There may be insanity without the general business capacity of the individual being affected thereby. Searle v. Galbraith, 73 Ill. 272; Am. Bible Society v. Price, 8 West. Rep. 73, 115 Ill. 623.

The existence of delusion on one subject is not inconsistent with sufficient soundness of mind on less relevant, and it is not relevant unless there was evidence tending to prove the facts on which the instruction is based.

29. Submitting to the jury, under the statute, "particular questions of fact," is within the discretion of the trial court. This is a revisable discretion.

30. The questions must be of such a character that the answers thereto, if contrary to the general verdict, would control the same and be conclusive of the issue.

31. Under the statute, the court did not err in refusing to submit to the jury the following questions: "(1) Was the late Lewis Lunsford, in August, 1890, suffering from a disease known as senile dementia? (2) If so, is that disease curable? (3) Had that disease so far progressed in August, 1892, as to render him (Lewis Lunsford) imbecile and incapable of transacting business? (4) Does a person suffering from such disease have any lucid intervals?"

32. When a final decree is pronounced in favor of a will on the verdict of a jury rendered on an issue devise vel non, the functions of the suit are exhausted, and the bill should be dismissed. In such suit the construction of the will cannot be involved.

33. Newspaper comment. The court will not set aside a verdict merely because a newspaper, during the trial, made improper reference to the trial and the case.

(December 8, 1893.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Ohio County Circuit Court in favor of defendants in a bill in equity for the construction of a will. Affirmed.

The questions raised fully appear from the opinion.

Messrs Robert White, W. W. Arnett and F. A. Riddle for appellant.

Messrs. W. B. Hubbard and H. M. Russell for appellees.

Johnson, P., delivered the opinion of the court:

another (Bitner v. Bitner, 65 Pa. 347; O'Neil v. Evan, 1 Am. L. J. 522); and mere feebleness of intellect is insufficient to avoid a will. Daniel v. Daniel, 30 Pa. 191.

It does not follow that a man has insane delusions or is void of testamentary capacity because he is prejudiced against some of his children without reason. Schneider v. Manning, 10 West. Rep. 123, 121 Ill. 376.

Unequal distribution of property not conclusive evidence.

The party must be capable of acting rationally in the ordinary affairs of life, so that he may comprehend what disposition he may wish to make of his property and be able to select the subjects of his bounty. Meeker v. Meeker, 75 Ill. 200; Rutherford v. Morris, 77 Ill. 337; Freeman v. Easley, 5 West. Rep. 162, 117 Ill. 317.

Inequality in the distribution of property is not conclusive evidence of unsoundness of mind or of undue influence; it may be considered as a mere circumstance, when in proof, as tending to establish undue influence or unsoundness of mind, but it is not of itself alone conclusive and sufficient for that purpose. Sallsbury v. Aldrich, 5 West. Rep. 606, 118 Ill. 196.

A will will not be set aside for incompetency and undue influence, where the proof shows grounds for unequal distribution of property, and the testatrix, although addicted to the use of morphine, was of good understanding when not under its influence. Frost v. Wheeler, 10 Cent. Rep. 820, 48 N. J. Eq. 573. But gross inequality in the disposition of the instrument, where no reason for it is suggested, may require an explanation on the part of those who

Lewis Lunsford, of Ohio County, on the 27th day of April, 1881, made his last will and testament, in which he gave to his wife, Ann, during her natural life, the house in, and grounds on, which he resided, and directed his executors to set apart from his estates and invest, in such manner as they might deem best, $10,000, and to pay to his wife the dividends, interests and profits accruing therefrom, during her life, and gave her, during life, the household and kitchen furniture, and gave her, absolutely the provisions on hand at the time of his death, and, if enough was on hand for the purpose, grain sufficient for herself and family for one year. These bequests were in lieu of dower.

By the second clause of his will he directs his executors to divide the residue of his estate, including the portions given to his wife, after the life estate had terminated, into six shares—one for the children of his deceased daughter, Elizabeth, and one share each for his five living daughters, Sarah L., widow of R. C. Holliday, Margaret M. Lunsford, Julia A. Lunsford, Amanda V., widow of James R. Foster, deceased, Jennie H., wife of William Kerr—"The six shares to be as nearly as practicable equal to each other, taking into account the respective amounts to be added and charged thereto, as hereinafter specified. I have advanced $4,262 to said Elizabeth in her lifetime, and $800 to her children since her death, on which $800 interest is to be computed from February 25, 1881, to the time of my death, and the said $4,262, $800, and the interest aforesaid, are to be added to this share, to make it equal to each of the other shares with the proper additions thereto. I have also advanced to the said Sarah L. Holliday $2,500; to Margaret M. Lunsford $1,500; to Julia A. Lunsford $1,500; and to Amanda V. Foster $3,500; and their shares, including these advancements as part thereof, are to be made respectively equal. I have also advanced $1,500 to Jennie H. Kerr, and her husband is indebted to me in the sum of $8,900, upon which interest is to be

was self man,

: de-
it v.
N. C.

e intes-
tent.

establish-ed, in 1881-
1882.

rent
is N.

t of it v.

uted will ance
tent.

a his
been
e his ill.

computed to the time of my death, and this $1,500, $3,900, and the interest aforesaid, are to be added to her share to make it equal; but the debt and interest due, as aforesaid, by the said William Kerr, shall be thereby discharged and released.

He empowered his executors, for the purpose of making the division, to sell and convey his property. By the third clause he releases his son, Thomas, from any debts he owed him, but declined to make any bequest to him, stating as his reason that he had given to him and paid on his account more than his share in the estate. The testator was about eighty years of age when the will was made.

In September, 1884, Jennie H. Kerr brought her suit in chancery to set aside said will. The bill alleges that at the date of said will—the 27th day of April, 1881—and long prior thereto, and continuing down to the date of his death, in 1888, the testator was not of sound mind and disposing memory; that “He was wholly incapacitated by reason of his advanced age, the failure, exhaustion and weakness of his mental faculties, and the decrepitude of his physical system, to make, execute and acknowledge any valid instrument of writing whatever.” It charges that said will was procured by Amanda V. Foster and other members of the testator’s family. The bill alleges that if said will be permitted to stand, the plaintiff will suffer great wrong and injustice as one of the heirs of the said Lewis Lunsford, and prays that the said will be set aside, etc. The defendants, in their answer, deny the charge of incompetency and undue influence.

On the 10th day of January, 1885, the court ordered an issue “to be tried at the bar of this court by a jury, to try whether the paper writing dated April 27, 1881—a copy of which is exhibited, ‘A’—is the true last will and testament of Lewis Lunsford.” On the 21st day of May, 1885, the jury was sworn to try the issue, and on the 29th day of the same month rendered their verdict:

“We, the jury, find that the paper writing dated the 27th April, 1881 . . . is the true last will and testament of Lewis Lunsford.”

The proponents were given the affirmative of the issue, and accorded the right to open and conclude. The contestants moved to set aside the verdict and grant them a new trial, on the ground that the verdict was contrary to the law and the evidence, because of wrong instructions to the jury, and the admission of improper evidence, and the rejection of proper evidence, and because of a comment made, during the trial, in the Wheeling Daily Intelligencer, a newspaper published in the City of Wheeling, which last ground was supported by an affidavit. The court overruled the motion and refused to grant a new trial, and decreed “that the paper writing dated the 27th of April, 1881, mentioned in the bill and proceedings in this cause, be and the same is hereby established as, and declared to be, the last will and testament of Lewis Lunsford, deceased.”

The contestants filed a bill of exceptions as to a number of rulings during the trial, and to the refusal of the court to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial.

The first exception was that the affirmative of the issue was given to the proponents, and also the right to open and conclude the argument. Upon an issue devisavit vel non, the proponents of the will have the affirmative of the issue, and the right to open and conclude the argument. Coalter v. Bryan, 1 Gratt. 18; McMeehan v. McMeehan, 17 W. Va. 688; Nicholas v. Kershner, 20 W. Va. 259.

The proponents, to maintain the issue on their part, introduced the will of Lewis Lunsford, deceased, dated the 27th day of April, 1881, also the two subscribing witnesses to the will, B. S. Allison and W. H. Hearne. These two witnesses testified to the execution of the will, and to the mental capacity of the testator, and the proponents then rested. The contestants then offered many witnesses, who gave evidence tending to show that at the date of the execution of the will the testator was wholly incompetent to make a will. This testimony had taken a very wide range—from several years before the execution of the will to several years after, and to his death, in 1888—and showed that more than a year after the will was executed, on motion and petition of one of the contestants, the estate of the testator was put into the hands of a committee.

When the contestants rested, the proponents against the protests of the contestants, on the ground that the proponents had rested their case in chief, were permitted to introduce Daniel Lamb, who wrote the will, and a number of other witnesses, who gave their opinions of the sanity of the testator, both before, at the time, and after the execution of the will, based on the acts, conduct, language and transactions of the testator. It is here insisted that this was error; that after the proponents had rested in chief, they could not introduce any evidence except that which was strictly in rebuttal of the evidence offered by the contestants.

In Bouyer v. Knapp, 15 W. Va. 295, it was said: “It is alleged as error that the court permitted the depositions of Newman, Kincaid, Flanagan, Richards and Conaway to be read in evidence, because, as is claimed, they were not rebutting evidence. This is an objection to the mere order of the testimony. The bill of exceptions shows that, after the introduction of three witnesses, the defendants ‘closed for the present,’ and then, after a number of witnesses had been introduced by the plaintiff, principally on the question of the competency of the plaintiff to transact business, the defendants were permitted to introduce the witness Kincaid and others on the same subject. Whether a plaintiff shall be permitted to introduce further evidence after the defendant’s evidence is introduced is a matter within the discretion of the court trying the cause; and its exercise will rarely, if ever, be controlled by an appellate court”—citing, as the only authority, Brooks v. Wilcox, 11 Gratt. 411. This principle is sustained elsewhere. Hoffman v. Harrington, 44 Mich. 188; Hess v. Wilcox, 58 Iowa, 380; Hagerty v. White, 69 Wis. 317; Campbell v. Moore, 8 Wis. 678; Harden v. Hays, 14 Pa. 91; Smith v. Smith, 8 Ired. L. 29.

The general rule undoubtedly is that, in the trial of law issues, the party on whom rests the burden of proof should introduce in the first instance all his evidence in chief, and then, after the defendant has introduced all his evideuce in chief, he should be confined to rebuttal evidence. Rez v. Smith, 2 Starkle, 208; Rez v. Hilditch, 5 Car. & P. 209; Hathaway v. Hemingway, 20 Conn. 191; Clinton v. McKensie, 5 Strobb. L. 88; Yankee Jim's Union Water Co. v. Orary, 25 Cal. 504; Kohler v. Wells, 26 Cal. 606; Holbrook v. McBride, 4 Gray, 215.

This rule should be followed as far as practicable by the trial court; but the rule is not an inflexible one, the order of the evidence being in the discretion of the court—a discretion with which the appellate court will not interfere unless it clearly appears that injustice was done by the manner in which the trial court exercised its discretion. But inasmuch as in issues devisavit vel non the burden of proving the sanity of the testator is on the proponent of the will; and the issue being “whether the paper writing is the last will and testament of the testator,” and that the will may be assailed on any and all the grounds that would show it invalid, it would not promote justice to apply the rule applicable to ordinary law issues.

How are the proponents to know what kind of testimony, and how much, the contestants have to prove their general charges of want of capacity and undue influence? What particular objections and evidence may be offered to sustain such general charges can only be known as the evidence is developed. As was said by White, J., in delivering the opinion of the court in Runyan v. Price, 15 Ohio St. 6: “To require those affirming the will either to finally rest their case on the order of probate, or otherwise, in anticipation of attacks that may or may not in fact be made; to introduce all the evidence they may have sustaining the will, on every ground on which it may be competent for the adverse parties to attack it—would not, in our opinion, promote either the convenience of those charged with the trial, or the justice of the case, but would tend to contrary results.”

In the Ohio Case, it appeared that the proponents offered in evidence the will and probate, which, under the Statute of Ohio, makes a prima facie case for the proponents, and then rested. After the contestants had introduced their evidence, the proponents offered general evidence to sustain the will. To the introduction of such evidence the contestants objected, but the court overruled the objection, and admitted the evidence. The ruling was affirmed. The same course was approved in Forney v. Ferrell, 4 W. Va. 729.

In the trial of an issue devisavit vel non, it is the proper course to pursue for the proponents to offer the will, and the evidence of its due execution, and the competency of the testator at the time it was executed, and then, having made a prima facie case, to rest; and, after the contestants have offered their evidence against the validity of the will, to permit the proponents to offer other evidence to sustain the will, as well as evidence in rebuttal of the evidence of the contestants. The court did not err in overruling the objection to the evidence offered by the proponents.

Did the court err in admitting or rejecting evidence? The witness McFarland was asked the question: “At the time of your visit at the house, and of Mr. Lunsford and lady's visit to your place of business, was there anyone who influenced him to any extent?” Objection was made by proponents, and sustained by the court. This ruling was clearly right. The witness had no right to tell the jury that influence was exerted on the testator. He could tell what he saw, and the jury would be left to infer whether any influence had been exerted, and whether it were undue influence—one of the questions in issue.

Thomas Lunsford, one of the children and heirs of the testator, was asked his opinion of the mental condition of the testator. The court properly refused to permit the question to be answered, as, under our statute, he was incompetent to speak on the subject. Ander-son v. Cranmer, 11 W. Va. 562.

Did the court err in refusing to allow the medical experts to answer the hypothetical questions propounded? Several were allowed to be answered, against the objection of the proponents, and to the ruling of the court they excepted. The following question was asked Dr. James E. Reeves:

“Doctor, assuming that a person seventy-seven years of age, in the month of August, 1880, was sick for a period of two or three weeks, and that during such sickness it was found that such person believed himself to be in a location different from that in which he was, and whose mind, in the month of August, 1882, was impaired almost to its fullest extent—what would be your diagnosis, as an expert, of such person's malady or condition, and what would be your opinion as an expert of his mental capacity on April 27, 1881?”

The doctor answered: “Evidently the illness or sickness in 1880, at which time there was delusion, as shown by his belief that he was elsewhere than at the place he was then resting, and that in 1882 there was complete destruction of the mind, the clear inference would be that the sickness in 1880 may very reasonably be related as cause to the effects which were so plainly apparent in 1882; and while there is evidently a gap in the question, which would not enable an expert to arrive at an exact conclusion, or aid him in creating the case in his own mind, there is nothing that would substitute the opinion that the patient was the subject of senile dementia. Now, in further answer to the question when the fact of senile dementia is found to exist, that means nothing more or less than mental incapacity, not in the performance of any one, but of all acts. In a word, when that disease is developed—and when I say developed I mean that its progression has gone so far as to be recognized by friends and associates—I might just as reasonably say that a man could run without two legs as to say that a man suffering from senile dementia is capable of the transaction of business.”

Dr. Reeves was also asked: “Suppose a man of the age of seventy-seven, in the month of August, 1880, and who during the month of May, 1880, had lost a favorite son by death, and who, in the years 1875 and 1876, had been a capable and active man, and whose memory in the month of June, 1880, was discovered to be considerably impaired, and who was in the habit of relating past events to the same person day after day, without seeming to know he had related them at all, and who, in the month of August was sick with an illness of two or three weeks' duration, and who, in that month, was found to have believed himself to be in a locality different from that in which he was, and who, in the month of January, 1880, had sold a piece of valuable real estate at a price which Col. Thomas O'Brine considered, to say the least, was very cheap, and who, in August, 1882, was found to have suffered a mental deterioration almost to its fullest extent—what would be your diagnosis of such a case, and what would be your opinion of the mental capacity of such a person on the 27th day of April, 1881?

The doctor answered: "That question fills the gap I mentioned when I was on the floor before. It completes the description which leads me irresistibly to the conclusion that the case was one of senile dementia, and I have only to repeat what I said before—that when the fact is established to me, it would be just as absurd to think of a man running with one leg as to say he was capable of transacting business."

Q. "Well, with reference to the capacity of such a person on the 27th of April, 1881, what would you say, doctor?"

The answer was: "Remembering the rise and termination of the case as presented in the question, there could be no other reasonable conclusion than at that date he was incapable," etc.

The following question was asked of the same witness, against the objection of the proponents, and answered: "Doctor, suppose that an active and capable man in the years 1875 and 1876, who, in the month of May, 1880, was of the age of seventy-seven, or thereabouts, and who in that month sustained the loss of a favorite and dutiful son, and who was found in the month of June, 1880, to have sustained a considerable impairment of memory, and who, in that month, was in the habit of relating events and circumstances connected with the past, and of repeating the same things to the same person, without recollecting that he had before stated them, and who, in the month of August, 1880, had suffered from an illness of two or three weeks' duration, and who, during such illness, had conceived himself to be in a locality different from that in which he was, and who, in the month of January, 1881, had disposed of valuable real estate, at a price which, in the opinion of Col. Thomas O'Brine, was very cheap, to say the least, and who, in the month of August, 1882, was found to have suffered an impairment of mind almost to its fullest extent—what would you say of the capability of such a person, under such circumstances, of comprehending the nature and extent of his estate, whether large or small, the subjects of his bounty, and the manner in which his estate should be divided among them, on the 27th day of April, 1881?"

A. "That question, I take it, is substantially the question I answered before; and I repeat that, the diagnosis having been made, it was a case of senile dementia; that there can be no judgment without memory, and that both these qualities of mind are necessary in order to transact business with a will power. I unhesitatingly say that such a subject would be incapable, at the period named, of transacting business with judgment and justice."

2 L. R. A.

In McMeehan v. McMeehan, 17 W. Va. 662, it was held that, when a medical expert is asked to give his professional opinion to a jury, not upon matters within his own knowledge, but upon a hypothetical case, founded upon the testimony of witnesses previously examined in the case, the questions to him must be so shaped as to give him no occasion to mentally draw his conclusions from the whole evidence or a part thereof, and from these conclusions so drawn express his opinion, or to decide as to the weight of evidence or the credibility of witnesses; and his answers must be such as not to involve any such conclusion so drawn, or any opinion of the expert as to the weight of the evidence or the credibility of the witnesses. The opinion of medical experts, founded on testimony already in the case, can only be given on a hypothetical case, and the hypothesis must be clearly stated, so that the jury may know with certainty upon precisely what state of assumed facts the expert bases his opinion.

In addition to the principles announced in that case, it is now held that, in putting hypothetical questions to expert witnesses, counsel may assume the facts in accordance with his theory of them. It is not essential that he state the facts as they exist, but the hypothesis should be based on a state of facts which the evidence in the cause tends to prove. Cornley v. People, 83 N. Y. 464.

In that case Folger, Ch. J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "The claim is that a hypothetical question may not be put to an expert, unless it states the facts as they exist. It is manifest, if this is the rule, that in a trial where there is a dispute as to the facts, which can be settled only by the jury, there would be no room for a hypothetical question. The very meaning of the word is that it supposes—assumes—something for the time being. Each side, in an issue of fact, has its theory of what is the true state of facts, and assumes that it can prove it to be so to the satisfaction of the jury, and, so assuming, shapes hypothetical questions to experts accordingly; and such is the correct practice. Erickson v. Smith, 2 Abb. App. Dec. 64; People v. Lake, 12 N. Y. 358; Seymour v. Fellows, 77 N. Y. 178; Guterman v. Liverpool, N. Y. & P. Steam-Ship Co. 83 N. Y. 858."

The first of the questions put to Dr. Reeves, which the court permitted to be answered, is unobjectionable under the rules above laid down. But both the others are objectionable and improper, because they leave the witness to weigh the credibility of Col. Thomas O'Brine. The two questions put to Dr. Smith are open to the same objection. The first question put to Dr. Reeves, which the court permitted to be answered, is not as full and complete as some refused. Nearly all the questions put to Dr. Reeves are open to the same objection in one form or the other. The two following hypothetical questions were put to Dr. Reeves:

"Assuming that a man seventy-seven years of age, in the month of August, 1880, who had, in the month of May, 1880, suffered the loss of a faithful and dutiful son, and who was found in the month of August to be suffering from an illness of two or three weeks' duration, and who, during such illness in the month of August, 1880, was found to be under delusion, especially as to locality, and who was found to be afflicted with a mental disorder—although slightly, yet certainly and unmistakably, affecting his mind—and who, in the month of August, 1882, was pronounced to have suffered an almost complete loss of mental power, and who, at that time, was incapable of transacting business affairs—what would be your diagnosis of such a person, as an expert, and what would be your opinion of his mental capacity on the 27th day of April, 1881?”

“Doctor, assuming the case of a man seventy-seven years of age in February, 1880, and who was found in the month of August, 1882, to be sick and under the care of his family physician, and, during the sickness occurring in August of that year, the patient supposed himself to be in a place distant from where he actually was, and who was found, during that sickness, to be afflicted with a mental disorder, although slightly, and who was found in the month of August, 1882, to have sustained an almost total loss of mental power—what would be your diagnosis of such a person's condition, as an expert, and what would be your opinion, as an expert, of his mental capacity on the 27th day of April, 1881?”

These questions are proper under the rules we have laid down, and ought to have been answered; but as questions were permitted to be answered which were, at the least, as favorable to the contestants as these, although they were not proper questions, as we have seen, yet, as they were answered, and the contestants had the benefit of them, they were not prejudiced because the foregoing questions were not permitted to be answered. Dr. Reeves was so positive in his answer to the hypothetical questions put to him, and his answer covering the whole ground, it was impossible that the jury was confused or misled by the refusal to permit the two proper questions to be answered.

It was claimed by contestants that one evidence of the incompetency of the testator was that he sold the Market Street house very cheap—much too cheap for a business man in possession of all his faculties; and the contestants asked Dr. Caddel, who was lessee of the property, and who testified he knew the value of it, “What was the value of that property?” Proponents objected, the objection was sustained, and the contestants excepted. Mr. Rinehart had testified that he had purchased the property from the testator at $10,000, and that the price paid was, he thought, full value for it.

The witness was then asked: “Did you ever offer Mr. Rinehart a sum of money for that property?”—which question was objected to, and objection sustained. Then the witness was asked: “Did you ever offer him $14,000 for it?” Objected to, sustained, and contestants excepted. Then Rinehart was recalled for further cross examination, and said he had an offer for the property from Mr. Zook, a member of Dr. Caddel's firm. The offer was $10,000. It was not $14,000. Did not tell him he would not sell for $14,000, and that it was worth $18,000. The question was then asked Dr. Caddel, what Rinehart stated the property was worth.

3 L. R. A.

I do not think the court erred in refusing to permit the witness to state what Rinehart said the property was worth; but I cannot see upon what principle in the law of evidence Caddel could not, as well as any other witness, state what the property was worth. It was shown that in January, 1881, the testator sold his property some three months before the will was executed. It was contended by the contestants that it was sold very cheaply, and that this was an evidence of the incapacity of the testator at the time to transact business. Rinehart, for proponents, had testified that he thought the price he paid was its full value; if so, then the transaction would afford no evidence of weak intellect on the part of the testator. The evidence of Caddel, offered to prove the value of the said property, was competent and relevant testimony, and the court erred in refusing to admit it. But is this error sufficient to reverse the decree, and to set aside the verdict of the jury?

This court said in State v. Kinney, 26 W. Va. 143, that “To authorize the reversal of a judgment for admitting irrelevant evidence, not only must the evidence be irrelevant, but it must be of such a nature that its admission may have prejudiced the prisoner. If he may have been so prejudiced, even though it be doubtful whether in fact he was so or not, that is sufficient ground for reversing the judgment. Southern Mut. Ins. Co. v. Trear, 29 Gratt. 255; Payne v. Com. 81 Gratt. 855.”

The converse of this proposition is equally true—that, to authorize the reversal of a judgment for refusing to admit relevant testimony, not only must the evidence be relevant, but it must be of such a nature that its rejection may have prejudiced the party offering it. If he may have been so prejudiced, even though it be doubtful whether in fact he was or not, that is sufficient ground for reversing the judgment. We cannot here say that the rejection of this evidence could not have prejudiced the contestants. We do not know how close a case it was in the minds of the jury. It might have been so nicely balanced that it would have taken very little to turn the scale. This looks like a small matter on which to reverse the decree in the cause of the magnitude of this; but to lay down proper, correct and uniform rules for the guidance of the citizen is of much more importance than the speedy termination of the suit, or saving costs to the parties.

It is strange, in such a record, involving such a variety of rulings, that it should have to be reversed on such a ruling; but it cannot be helped, and for this error alone the decree will have to be reversed, the verdict set aside, and a new trial granted. This is my opinion, but my brothers do not think that this error, if one, is sufficient to reverse the decree, because it was on a collateral fact on which there was already sufficient evidence to prevent the jury from being misled because the testimony was refused.

The contestants offered in evidence an order made by the Circuit Court of Ohio County on the 4th day of October, 1882, adjudicating the said Lewis Lunsford to be insane, and appointing a committee for him, and the petition and notice for said appointment; but the court refused to admit any of the papers except the notice, and so much of the order as adjudicated that said Lunsford was insane, and appointing a committee for him. The contestants excepted.

There appears to be no petition for such appointment in the record other than the notice signed by Amanda V. Foster, by her attorney. There is a petition of the "committee" filed, which asked the court to instruct him as to his duties under said appointment. This, of course, was irrelevant, and not proper evidence. The only reason for complaint is that the court refused to permit the whole of the order to go in evidence. The remaining part of said order relates to the duties of the "committee" with reference to the estate of the said Lunsford, called forth by the said petition of the committee, and in answer thereto. At this time the contestants did not ask that the whole record of the inquisition should go to the jury. Some time before that the contestants identified an affidavit made by W. J. Bates, Jr., and also what purported to be a committee bond, reciting that Amanda V. Foster had been appointed committee for Lewis Lunsford, by the Clerk of the County Court of Ohio County—to which objection was made and sustained, and contestants excepted. They offered, then, no order adjudicating the party insane, and of course the court did not err in refusing to permit said papers to go in evidence. What was properly the record of the inquisition de lunatico inquirendo was proper evidence. Rogers v. Walker, 6 Pa. 871; Hutchinson v. Sandt, 4 Rawle, 284; Rippy v. Gant, 4 Ired. Eq. 448; Yauger v. Skinner, 14 N. J. Eq. 389; Redden v. Baker, 86 Ind. 191; Wheeler v. State, 84 Ohio St. 394; Field v. Lucas, 21 Ga. 447; Hart v. Deamer, 6 Wend. 497; Willis v. Willis, 12 Pa. 159.

The last part of the order relating to the duties of the "committee" is properly no part of the inquisition, and the court did not err in refusing to permit it to be read in evidence.

It is insisted that the court erred in permitting stenographer's notes to be read to the jury. Alfred Caldwell was called as a witness for contestants, and said he was counsel in the case of Goshorn v. Carter, tried at the April Term, 1881, of the Circuit Court of Ohio County. He testified that the testator was sworn as a witness in that trial; that, when he was on the stand, on some subjects he was pretty clear, but in some respects was incoherent. "He was an old man, and his testimony did not agree very well with his previous conversation with me; that made me have him summoned as a witness. He would wander off in answering some of the questions."

On cross examination, witness said: "I have the stenographer's report of the testimony in that case and will produce it. In this testimony Mr. Lunsford appears, and it shows he was called for the plaintiff and examined by myself. This is a report of all his testimony given on that trial, and is substantially accurate. Captain Mathews, who made this report, was the official stenographer of the court, but not sworn as such, I learn." Thereupon counsel for proponents offered to read said testimony of Lewis Lunsford to the jury, to which contestants objected, and the objection was overruled, the testimony read, and contestants excepted. This, certainly, would not be proper evidence in chief. Nisner v. Darling, 44 Mich. 438; People v. Sligh, 48 Mich. 54; Lipscomb v. Lyon, 19 Neb. 511.

The notes are not of that character properly authenticated to make them admissible as substantive, independent testimony; but they were offered to contradict the evidence of Caldwell, who had sworn that they were substantially correct. Caldwell had characterized the evidence as wandering and incoherent, and as evidence tending to contradict him they were admissible.

It is also alleged as error that the court admitted to be read in evidence a will that the testator had executed in 1879. It is not questioned in the case that the testator was fully competent to execute a will in 1879. This will was clearly admissible, on the question of capacity to execute the will in question, because it is similar in its provisions, and tends to show a steady and fixed purpose as to the manner in which the testator intended to dispose of his property. The same may be said of another draft of a will not executed, which was proved to have been dictated by the testator. It was also objected that certain questions were asked of the committee as to the dates at which the testator acquired a certificate of deposit and certain stock, which questions were answered by the witness, after looking at the indorsements on the papers themselves. The testimony on the question of capacity was admissible, as tending to show business transactions, at the respective dates, by the testator.

In January, 1882, the testator had bought a suit of clothes of R. L. Prall; the cutter took his measure, and had certain conversation with him; acted as other customers; left strict orders about how he wanted the pockets made. Witness was asked the question: "From what took place at the time the clothes were ordered, the conversation you had with Mr. Lunsford, and what took place at the time—what is your opinion as to his mental condition then?" Objections by contestants; overruled, and exception. The witness answered: "I didn't see anything the matter with the gentleman at all, whatever, in any way."

The rule in our State is: "The opinions of witnesses not experts are entitled to little or no regard, unless they are supported by good reasons, founded on facts which warrant them; but if the reasons and facts upon which they are founded are frivolous, the opinions of such witnesses are worth but little or nothing."

The evidence is admissible, and it is for the court or jury, under the circumstances, to give the opinions such weight as they think they should receive. For the same reason the court did not err in admitting the testimony of Joseph F. Paul. A number of other exceptions were saved as to rulings on the admission or rejection of evidence; but we have noticed all argued by the learned counsel in their elaborate brief, and have examined the record closely, and we think no errors in this regard were committed in said rulings.

It is insisted that the court erroneously instructed the jury for the proponents. The instructions so given, at the instance of proponents, were as follows:

"(1) The evidence of witnesses who were present at the execution of the will is entitled to peculiar weight; and especially is this the case with attesting witnesses.

"(2) It requires less capacity to make a will than it does to make a deed.

"(3) Old age is not of itself sufficient evidence of incapacity to make a will.

"(4) The time to be looked to by the jury, in determining the competency of the testator to make a will, is the time when the will was executed.

"(5) It is not necessary that a person should possess the highest qualities of mind in order to make a will, nor that he should have the same strength of mind which he may formerly have had. The mind may be in some degree debilitated, the memory may be enfeebled, the understanding may be weak, the character may be eccentric, and he may even want capacity to transact many of the ordinary business affairs of life; but it is sufficient if he understand the nature of the business in which he is engaged, has a recollection of the property which he means to dispose of, the objects of his bounty, and the manner in which he wishes to distribute it among them.

"(6) In order to make a valid will, it is not necessary that the testator should name all his children in it, or give all of them a portion of his estate. If he was mentally capable of understanding the disposition which he was making of his property, and acted freely, it was immaterial to whom he gives his property—whether all to one, or some, of his children, or to strangers. If he has a disposing mind and memory, he has a right to do as he pleases with his property.

"(7) Although the testator may, perhaps, have been influenced by feelings of resentment or dislike to one or more of his children, and by feelings of affection and attachment towards others, and though those feelings may have influenced him to give his whole estate to the one part, and little or nothing to the others, this is not sufficient to make the will invalid.

"(8) If the provisions of the will were induced by the extreme kindness and attention to the testator on the part of the principal devisees, that will not constitute undue influence which will invalidate the will."

These instructions propounded the law correctly, and have been expressly approved by this court in Jarrett v. Jarrett, 11 W. Va. 584, and Nicholas v. Kershner, 20 W. Va. 251, except the fifth one, which, to be accurate, instead of using the language, "If he understand the nature of the business in which he is engaged," etc., should read: "It is sufficient if he possess mind enough to understand," etc. It would be hard to prove that a testator, of whose competency there was no question, recollected all his property, etc.—that is, made no mistake.

The court, at the instance of the contestants, gave the following instructions, to which there were no objections by the proponents:

"The opinions of witnesses not experts are entitled to little or no regard, unless they are supported by good reasons, founded on facts which warrant the opinion that the testator was capable of understanding the nature of his business in which he was engaged when he made his will, recollected his property he meant to dispose of thereby, as well as the objects of his bounty, and the manner in which it is to be distributed among them.

"That, before the jury can find a verdict in favor of the proponents, they must believe from the evidence that Lewis Lunsford, on the 27th day of April, 1881, had the active power of mind and memory sufficient to collect and retain the elements of the business in which he was engaged when making his said will, for a sufficient time to perceive their obvious relations to each other.

"That unless the jury believe from the evidence that the testator acted freely and of his own will, and understood the nature of the business in which he was engaged in making his will, and had a recollection of the property thereby disposed of, as well, too, of the objects of his bounty, and understood the manner of the distribution of his property by the will, they must find a verdict in favor of the contestants.

"The court instructs the jury that the evidence of physicians, especially those who attended the testator and were with him during the time it is charged he was of unsound mind, is entitled to great weight.

"The court instructs the jury that the condition of the testator's mind, both before and after the execution of the purported will, is proper to be considered in determining what was his mental condition at the time the purported will was executed."

The following instructions were asked by contestants, objected to, and refused, and contestants excepted. We will dispose of them seriatim:

"The court instructs the jury that, in considering the testimony, the evidence of Dr. W. J. Bates, Jr., the physician who attended the testator and was his family physician, is entitled to great weight. This instruction was properly refused. It was in effect asking the court to tell the jury that Dr. Bates' evidence was entitled to great weight. The court had already, at the instance of the contestants, instructed the jury correctly—and it was as far in that line as it was proper to go—"that the evidence of physicians, especially those who attended the testator and were with him during the time it is charged he was of unsound mind, is entitled to great weight."

The second refused instruction had before been substantially given. The fourth asked the court to instruct the jury "that it is proper to consider the condition of the mind and memory of the testator, both before and after the date of the will in question, in determining the question of the testator's capacity to make said will." This instruction had already been substantially given, and the court is not bound to repeat its instruction.

The next refused instruction was: "The court instructs the jury that the opinion of witnesses not experts are entitled to little or no regard, if the facts on which such opinions are professed to be founded do not warrant the opinion that an old man, in whom the disease of senile dementia was developed, several months before the date of the will, to the degree that his family physician noticed it, was, at the date of said will, not so afflicted by said disease but that he was able to understand the nature of the business in which he was engaged in making his will, to recollect his property, and the subjects of his bounty, and the manner of its distribution by the will among such subjects."

The instruction was properly refused, because of at least three fatal objections: first, it is confused; second, it refers to a disease by a technical name that the jury is not supposed to understand; and third, it assumes a number of facts to have been proved to the jury.

The next instruction is: "The court instructs the jury that the law presumes that the testator, Lewis Lunsford, was not capable of making a will, and the burden is on the proponents to show, by competent testimony, that at the date of his will, the said Lewis Lunsford understood the nature of the business in which he was engaged, recollected his property disposed of thereby, the objects of his bounty, the number of them, the advancements he claims thereby to have made to them, and the manner in which he wished to distribute his property."

This instruction, in the terms in which it was asked, was properly refused, because it would be sufficient "if he possessed mind enough to understand," etc. It is not necessary for the proponents to prove that a testator actually understood and recollected all these things; if he was mentally capable of doing so, it is sufficient.

The next instruction is: "The court instructs the jury that if they believe, from the evidence, that the said Lewis Lunsford was affected with a mental disorder known as 'senile dementia,' during the month of August, 1880, then they should consider the nature, progress, effect and termination of such disorder—as shown by the testimony—as bearing upon the mental capacity of Lewis Lunsford on the 27th of April, 1881, to make, execute and acknowledge the alleged will as his free and voluntary act."

This instruction was properly refused, because it proposes to place the jury in the place of medical experts to trace the progress of a disease of which they are supposed to know nothing, and because the instruction assumes that the testimony "shows the nature, progress, effect and termination of senile dementia."

The court was also asked to instruct the jury "that, whilst it may be true that an enfeebled old man, whose mind has to some degree become debilitated and memory enfeebled and understanding weakened, may sometimes have sufficient capacity to make a will, yet if the jury believes, from the evidence in this case, that the testator was, several months previous to the date of his will, afflicted with a disease which then materially affected his mind and memory, and which progressed in its effects upon the mind to the date of the will, and continued to progress for sixteen months afterwards, when, because thereof, the testator was mentally unable to transact business, then they should weigh the testimony tending to show mental capacity with great care, and be satisfied that it was sufficient to overcome the doubts of the testator's capacity, existing both by reason of said disease, as well as by reason of the presumption of incapacity which the law fixes."

The court properly refused to give this instruction.

2 L. R. A.

It must always be remembered that the time to be looked to for the testator's capacity is the time when the will was executed. The evidence might be so clear to the minds of the jury, that at that time the testator was competent, as to leave no doubt whatever in their minds, even though they might believe from the evidence that previous to the execution of the will the testator was afflicted with a disease which materially affected his mind and memory, and which progressed in its effects upon his mind to the date of the will, and for sixteen months afterwards, when, because of said disease, the testator was mentally incapacitated to transact business; yet the instruction assumes that this evidence raised a doubt in the minds of the jury that he was competent when the will was executed.

The court was also asked to instruct the jury "that they must take into consideration all the evidence tending to show that the said Lewis Lunsford was induced to make the alleged will in controversy by the direction, suggestion or persuasion of any other person or persons; and if the jury believe, from the evidence, that any undue influence was used to induce the said Lewis Lunsford to make the will in question, they will take into consideration the person or persons exercising such undue influence, if they believe, from the evidence, that any such was exercised, together with the relation of the person or persons alleged to have exercised any undue influence."

This instruction was properly refused. To authorize an instruction it must be relevant. There must be some evidence tending to prove the facts upon which the instruction is based. Here is no evidence tending to prove undue or other influence exerted by anyone on the testator to induce him to make the will in question.

The last instruction asked by contestants, and refused, singles out the family physician, and asks that the jury be instructed that his evidence is entitled to great weight. For reasons already stated, the instruction was properly refused. We have thus gone over every instruction asked, given and refused, and it is quite evident some would have been proper with slight modifications; but the court was not bound to modify them.

It was assigned as error that the court declined to submit the following questions to the jury, to be answered by it: "(1) Was the late Lewis Lunsford, in August, 1880, suffering from a disease known as 'senile dementia'? (2) If so, is that disease curable? (3) Had the disease so far progressed in August, 1882, as to render him (Lewis Lunsford) imbecile, and incapable of transacting business? (4) Does a person suffering from such disease have any lucid intervals?"

Section 5 of chapter 181 of the Code provides that, "Upon the trial of any issue or issues to a jury, whether under this section or not, the court may, on motion of any party, direct the jury, in addition to rendering a general verdict, to render separate verdicts upon any one or more of the issues, or to find in writing upon particular questions of fact, to be stated in writing. The action of the court upon such motion shall be subject to review as in other cases. Where any such separate verdict or special finding shall be inconsistent with the general verdict, the former shall control the latter, and the court shall give judgment accordingly."

This is the first time the court has been called upon to construe this statute. A number of western States have similar statutes which have received construction. None of them are precisely like ours. Atchison etc. R. Co. v. Campbell, 16 Kan. 200; Dubois v. Campau, 28 Mich. 304; Toledo & W. R. Co. v. Goddard, 25 Ind. 185; Ranner Tobacco Co. v. Jenison, 48 Mich. 459; Dickerson v. Dickerson, 50 Mich. 37; Eberhardt v. Sanger, 51 Wis. 73.

In Dubois v. Campau, 28 Mich. 304, Campbell, J., speaking for the court, said: "The questions to be separately submitted to the jury are required to be 'particular questions of fact' (2 Comp. Laws, § 6026), and these, as we have held, should be such as to involve legal consequences. Crane v. Reeder, 25 Mich. 308.

"We think such a question as that which was put here could not be fairly called a particular question of fact, and it is difficult to imagine any answer that could have any controlling force in reaching a conclusion."

The action was ejectment, and the question the court declined to put to the jury was: "By what acts did Joseph Campau claim to hold possession adversely to the plaintiffs?"

In Tobacco Company v. Jenison, Cooley, J., for the court, said: "All the questions which remain unanswered might also have been excluded, for none of them were conclusive." We have no doubt the submitting to the jury, under the statute, of "particular questions of fact" is within the discretion of the trial court, which discretion is reviewable.

The questions must be of such a character that the answers thereto, if contrary to the general verdict, would control the same, and be conclusive of the issue. That this is true is apparent from the language of the statute. It declares: "Where any such . . . special finding shall be inconsistent with the general verdict, the former shall control the latter, and the court shall give judgment accordingly."

Now, let us see, according to these principles, what would have been the effect had there been a general verdict in favor of the will, and the jury had, at the same time, answered the first question, "Was the late Lewis Lunsford, in August, 1880, suffering from a disease known as senile dementia?"—"Yes;" and to the second question, "Is that disease curable?"—"No;" and to the third, "Had the disease so far progressed, in August, 1882, as to render him (Lewis Lunsford) imbecile and incapable of transacting business?"—"Yes;" and to the fourth question, "Does a person suffering from such disease have any lucid intervals?"—"No."

If these questions had been submitted, and the answers found as indicated, could such special findings have controlled the general verdict in favor of the will, and have required the court, on the special findings, to enter a decree against the will? It is very clear what was the object of the contestants' counsel in asking these questions to be submitted. Their theory is that if the testator, in August, 1880, had senile dementia, and that disease was incurable, and it had so far progressed that in two years thereafter the testator was imbecile and incapable of transacting any business, and that a person suffering from such disease has no lucid intervals, then it must inevitably follow that on the 27th day of April, 1881—the date of the will—the testator was incompetent to make it. The main issues were: Was Lewis Lunsford, the testator, at the date of the will, mentally competent to make it? and did he act freely?

2 L. R. A.

It will not do to say that because an old man is suffering from senile dementia from August, 1880, until August, 1882, at which time he was incompetent, therefore twenty months before the latter date, on the 27th of April, 1881, he was, as a legal consequence, incompetent to make a will, even though the disease be incurable and there are no lucid intervals. The question still is, What was his mental condition at the time the will was made? At that time did he have mind sufficient to authorize him to execute a valid will?

Dr. Edwards, in his deposition in behalf of the contestants, says: "All old men who begin to go down hill begin to have senile dementia to a limited extent. Of course some retain their intellect longer than others."

It would be sad, indeed, if all old men suffering from the disease of senile dementia were, because of this fact, to have their wills set aside—their wishes disregarded—even though a jury might think them competent testators. It was not proper to submit the questions, or either of them; and the court did not err in refusing to submit them.

The court did not err in refusing to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial, on the ground that the verdict was contrary to the law and the evidence, or because of misdirection by the court. The evidence was conflicting, and on well established principles it could not be set aside as against evidence.

The motion for a new trial was also based upon an affidavit that the Wheeling Intelligencer, a daily newspaper published in the City of Wheeling, had the following paragraph published therein during the trial: "The Lunsford Will Case still drags its slow length along. It will probably occupy the entire remainder of this week. The general public opinion is that the jury will sustain the will, or disagree. Among the witnesses examined yesterday were Rev. Dr. Cunningham, Attorney-General Caldwell, Hon. Daniel Lamb, and John O. Pendleton." "And affiant further says that said daily newspaper has a large circulation in and through said city, and is very generally read by the people of said city, as he believes."

Here is no evidence that any member of the jury read said paragraph; and if they had, that would not be sufficient to set aside the verdict. If the fact was as therein stated as to the "public opinion" on the case, the members of the jury, who are not required to be, and were not, kept together, could have heard the matter talked of without themselves being culpable. If verdicts could be set aside on such grounds, suits would be interminable. The court did not err in refusing to set aside the verdict on this ground.

It is insisted that the court erred in not giving a construction of said will, as such construction was asked in the bill. This matter in the bill may be regarded as mere surplusage, as it could not be joined in a bill for an issue de-savit vel non. When a final decree is pronounced in favor of a will, on the verdict of a jury rendered on an issue devise vel non, the functions of the suit are exhausted, and the bill should be dismissed. In such suit the construction of the will cannot be involved. Coalter v. Bryan, 1 Gratt. 18; Dowser v. Church, 21 W. Va. 23; Couch v. Eastham, 27 W. Va. 796.

The decrees is affirmed.

Green, Snyder and Woods, JJ., concurred.

PITTSBURG, WHEELING & KENTUCKY R. CO., Def. in Err.

BENWOOD IRON WORKS et al., Pf. in Err.

(.....W. Va.....)

1. Public use. Whether the use for which property is sought to be taken under the exercise of eminent domain is public or private is a judicial question, subject to review by the appellate court.

2. Evidence that all who wish to avail themselves of the proposed switch, branch road or lateral work can do so, is not sufficient to show that the use of the work will be for the benefit of the public.

3. The property of railroad corporations, so far as concerns the ownership thereof, and the profit or gain to be made from their use, is to all intents and purposes private property, although applied to a use in which the public have an interest.

4. Property for private purposes. As far as the public is concerned, when what railroad corporations need is for "public use," they have *Head notes by JOHNSON, P.

NOTE.—Eminent domain; power of.

The power to take private property for public use belongs to every independent government as an incident to its sovereignty. U. S. v. Jones, 109 U. S. 513 (27 L. ed. 1016).

Legislation in the exercise of eminent domain is not limited if the purpose be a public one and just compensation be paid or tendered for the property taken. Secombe v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 90 U. S. 23 Wall. 108 (23 L. ed. 67).

The control of the right rests with the Legislature, and the public necessity for its exercise is exclusively for its ascertainment. Rees' App. (Pa.) 11 Cent. Rep. 143; Savannah v. Hancock, 8 West. Rep. 248, 21 Mo. 54; Chicago & E. L. R. Co. v. Wiltz, 4 West. Rep. 121, 116 Ill. 449.

To entitle to the exercise of the right there must be a real public necessity for it. Detroit v. Daly (Mich.) 13 West. Rep. 151.

Exercise of right through agents.

The Sovereign, in exercising the right of eminent domain, must employ agents or servants. Mineral Range R. Co. v. Detroit & L. S. Copper Co. 26 Fed. Rep. 515; Mills, Em. Dom. 173.

By the Act of incorporation the railroad company becomes the agency of the State, under certain restrictions, to take such lands as it may deem necessary for its road. Alexandria & F. R. Co. v. Alexandria & W. R. Co. 75 Va. 780.

The exercise of the power cannot extend beyond such acts as are necessary and usual in its proper exercise, as conferred. Selfert v. Brooklyn, 2 Cent. Rep. 185, 101 N. Y. 126.

Power to exercise right may be delegated.

This power may be delegated to individuals and their associates (Crittenden v. Wilson, 5 Cow. 165; Re Kerr, 42 Barb. 119; Beekman v. Saratoga & S. R. Co. 3 Paige, 45; Tide-Water Canal Co. v. Archer, 9 Gill & J. 479; Smeaton v. Martin, 57 Wis. 894; Philadelphia & G. F. Pass. R. Co's App. 102 Pa. 123; Young v. Buckingham, 5 Ohio, 485; Mills, Em. Dom. 173); to corporations, both municipal and private, 2 L. R. A.

the right to invoke the exercise of eminent domain; but, in so far as that which concerns them as to their private interests, their profits and gains are concerned, they stand as individuals, or merely as private corporations, in which the public has no concern, and for such private purposes cannot call into exercise the power of eminent domain.

5. Switch. Where a railroad corporation sought to condemn land, over which to build a switch, branch road or lateral work, to reach a private manufactory, a steel mill, for the purpose of transporting freight to and from said steel mill over petitioner's road—held: the use to which the land was to be subjected was a private, not a "public, use."

(December 15, 1883.)

ERROR to the Marshall County Circuit Court, to review a judgment for plaintiff in condemnation proceedings. Reversed.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Caldwell & Caldwell, for the Benwood Iron Works, plaintiff in error:

It must appear that the railroad is one which the general public may not only use, but which the general public has use for; which not only the small part of the public which has business with the private corporation has use for, but the general public.

2 Kent, Com. p. 340; Citizens Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Topeka, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 892, 858 (22 L. ed. 461); Cole v. La Grange, 118 U. S. 1 (28 L. ed. 896); Valley City Salt Co. v. Brown, 7 W. Va. 196; Varner v. Martin, 21 W. Va. 535.

If the legislative enactment that property might be condemned for branch railroads and lateral works could be construed to mean that land might be condemned for such switches as

W
V
I
N
W
S 10
C
W
M
N

11
12
13
R
I

14
15
N

The use must be public.

The use to the public must concern the community but not necessarily every person in the community, nor should every individual have an equal interest; that some persons will be benefited above others does not deprive the improvement of its public character. McQuillen v. Hatton, 63 Ohio St. 202.

The Legislature determines the sufficiency of the number of people to be benefited in order to constitute the use a public one. Aldridge v. Tusculum, C. & D. R. Co. 2 Stew. & P. 199.

The agents who accomplish the objects do not determine the public character of the use, but the fact that the public may use and that the improvement may be useful to the public. Willard v. Hamilton, 7 Ohio, pt. II, 111.

Enlargement of grounds for greater facilities in handling traffic is for a public use. Re Staten Island R. T. R. Co. 4 Cent. Rep. 514, 106 N. Y. 251.

Waterworks for a particular town are for the public use. Wayland v. Middlesex Co. 4 Gray, 500.

Drains and ditches for reclamation of overflowed these in the case at Bar, then such legislative enactment is unconstitutional and void.

Bloodgood v. Mohawk & H. R. Co. 18 Wend. 56; Wilkinson v. Leland, 27 U. S. 2 Pet. 627 (7 L. ed. 542); Cole v. La Grange, 118 U. S. 8 (28 L. ed. 898).

Messrs. Ewing, Melvin & Riley for the City of Benwood.

Mr. W. P. Hubbard, for defendant in error:

The law does not contemplate that when the petitioner is brought within the provisions of the statute, the right of condemnation can be defeated by simply showing, in the opinions of witnesses who have no interest in or connection with the objects of the proceeding, that the land sought to be condemned is not necessary for the purpose stated.

Smith v. Chicago & W. I. R. Co. 105 Ill. 512, 519.

It is not necessary to prove in a particular case the necessity of occupying the particular land sought.

Hel River & E. R. Co. v. Field, 67 Cal. 429.

"The company was organized under a valid charter and is shown to have done corporate acts under it. That was sufficient to establish a prima facie right to take the property in question for the purposes set forth in the petition."

Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Chicago & E. R. Co. 112 Ill. 601.

A railroad constructed by a duly authorized corporation is a public road; and a compliance with the statute creating a corporation for the purpose is a legislative declaration of the public necessity for the road.

Powers v. Hazelton & L. R. Co. 83 Ohio St. 486. See also W. Va. Transp. Co. v. Volcanic Oil & Coal Co. 5 W. Va. 382.

The extent of the probable use by the public is not material.

Lewis v. Washington, 5 Gratt. 265. See Vorner v. Martin, 21 W. Va. 564, 565; Re New York, L. & W. R. Co. 99 N. Y. 18, 24; Bonaparte v. Camden & A. R. Co. Baldw. C. C. 205; National Docks R. Co. v. Central R. Co. 82 N. J. Eq. 765; Dietrich v. Murdock, 42 Mo. 284; Clarke v. Blackmar, 47 N. Y. 150; Chicago Dock & Canal Co. v. Garrity, 1 West. Rep. 670, 115 Ill. 166, 167; Truesdale v. Peoria Grape Sugar Co. 101 Ill. 561; Mills v. Parlin, 106 Ill. 60.

Whether the motive of the corporators is private convenience, and whether the actual use is likely to be general, are of no more importance than are the like considerations in the laying out of what are called private roads. It is the right which characterizes the enterprise, and that is public.

National Docks R. Co. v. Central R. Co. 82 N. J. Eq. 765. See also New Central Coal Co. v. George's Creek Coal & Iron Co. 87 Md. 562.

Johnson, P., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a condemnation proceeding. The plaintiff is a domestic corporation, incorporated by chapter 54 of the Acts of the Extra Session of the Legislature of 1868, and its name then was The Pan Handle Railroad Company, and was incorporated "for the purpose of constructing a railroad from Holliday's Cove Railroad, in Brooke County, to the Town of Wellsburg, and thence to the City of Wheeling."

By the second section it was declared that said company should "be subject to all the provisions, and entitled to all the benefits, now conferred by law upon internal improvement companies . . . and especially to the provisions of chapters 56, 57 and 61 of the Code of Virginia."

By chapter 77 of the Acts of 1869 it was authorized "to extend its road from the City of Wheeling in the direction of the Kentucky state line, through such sections of the State contiguous to the Ohio River as said company may deem most desirable." By chapter 52 of the Acts of 1871, the corporation name was changed to the "Pittsburg, Wheeling & Kentucky Railroad Company."

By section 5 of chapter 61 of the Code of 1860 it is provided that "The president and directors of any company incorporated to construct a railroad or other work of internal improvement may cause to be made, in connection therewith, branch railroads, or lateral works, not exceeding two miles in length; and, under a resolution adopted in general meeting by two thirds of all the votes of all the stockholders, may cause to be made branch railroads or lateral works, not exceeding ten miles in length."

Section 69 of chapter 54 of the Code of West Virginia, 1887, provides that "Any railroad company organized under this chapter may build and construct lateral and branch roads or tramways, and of any gauge whatever, not exceeding fifty miles in length."

By section 67 of the same chapter it is provided "That all existing railroad corporations within this State shall respectively have and possess all the powers and privileges, and be subject to all the duties and liabilities and provisions, contained in this chapter."

On the 29th day of October, 1896, the plaintiff tendered its petition to the Circuit Court of Marshall County, alleging that it had constructed its railroad to Benwood, in Marshall County. That "recently, and since the construction of said railroad, a corporation known and called the 'Wheeling Steel Works Company' has erected a steel plant or works in the said City of Benwood, in said county, which plant lies next east of the Benwood Iron Works. Said steel company produces large quantities of steel, and consumes large amounts of material; and your petitioner's said road is now unable to transport any of said steel or material, by reason of its having no track reaching to or into said steel works. In order to reach said steel works, by a track or switch leading from its said main track, your petitioner avers it is necessary to take certain lands hereinafter fully described. Said switch or track is to be constructed for the purpose of transporting freights to and from said steel works over your petitioner's said railroad."

The description of the first lot sought to be taken is as follows: "Beginning at a point in the southern line of a street parallel to, and 276½ feet distant northerly from, the Benwood Nail Factory—said point being 125 feet westwardly from the west line of Second Street, in said City of Benwood; running thence in a southerly direction, on a curved line to the left, having a radius of 850 ⅞ feet, parallel to, and eight feet distant eastwardly from, the center line of the side track leading from the main track of the Pittsburg, Wheeling & Kentucky Railroad into the Wheeling Steel Works, a distance of three feet; thence, on a reversed curved line to the right, having a radius of 366 ⅞ feet, still parallel and eight feet distant eastwardly from said side track, a distance of 288½ feet, to the said west line of Second Street; thence, by said line of said street, south, twenty degrees and forty-two minutes west, twenty-eight feet, to a line parallel to, and sixty feet distant northwesterly from, said Benwood Nail Factory; thence, by said line, north, sixty-nine degrees and eighteen minutes west, thirty-four

& R. L. 451; Swan v. Williams
Elizabethtown, L. & B. S. R.
v. Jacksonville, T. & K. W. I Ways which the public use constitutional. Sherman v
Warren v. Bunnell, 11 Vt. 60
Road, 77 Pa. 38; Sadler v.
Shaver v. Starrett, 4 Ohio St.
28.

The taking of private property to construct a railroad is for a public necessity. Secombe v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 90 U. S. 38 Wall. 106 (38 L. ed. 67).

The circumstance that the railroad company uses its own cars exclusively is not material. Bloodgood v. Mohawk & H. R. Co. 18 Wend. 9; Swan v. Williams, 2 Mich. 427.

It does not signify that profit will accrue to private individuals, or that tolls are charged (Concord R. Co. v. Greely, 17 N. H. 47; Galveston Wharf Co. v. Galveston, 68 Tex. 14); or that the tolls are collected for its own exclusive use. Swan v. Williams, 2 Mich. 427; Bonaparte v. Camden & A. R. Co. Baldw. 205; Mills, Em. Dom. 100.

Use of streets in cities and towns.

Lands devoted to one public use under the power of eminent domain, cannot be taken for another use, without special authority. Baltimore & O. & C. R. Co. v. North, 1 West. Rep. 469, 103 Ind. 486; Indianapolis & C. Gravel Road Co. v. State, 2 West. Rep. 531, 105 Ind. 87; Glasgow v. St. Louis, 4 West. Rep. 575, 87 Mo. 578; in Dia. Op. Julia Bldg. Assn. v. Bell Teleph. Co. 5 West. Rep. 365, 88 Mo. 258.

A city cannot confer a right to the use of its streets upon a railroad company without compensating the owners of the fee for the additional burden imposed on the land (Olney v. Wharf, 2 West. Rep. 841, 115 Ill. 519); otherwise if the fee of the street is in the city. Id.

A municipal corporation takes the title to streets 2 L. R. A. dedicated to it by the owner, in trust. It cannot, nor can the State, appropriate the street to the laying of a railroad track. St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Schurmeier, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 272 (19 L. ed. 74).

A city cannot, by virtue merely of the right to lay out, open and alter streets and amend streets

to

in

Title to property taken for public use.

The owner vested in a ground the exercise of such a right. Martin, 31 S. 19 Wall. & St. P. R. Co. v. Weir, 81 Concord 1 Beatty, 84 Stewart v. A. R. Co. v. A. R. Co.

When the title acquired may be freed from the use, it cannot be obtained by the exercise of the right of eminent domain. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Oregon Real Estate Co. 10 Oreg. 444.

feet; thence, on a curved line to the left, having a radius of  $826 \frac{1}{2}$  feet, parallel to, and thirty-two feet distant westwardly from, the said side track, a distance of  $224 \frac{1}{2}$  feet; thence, on a reversed curved line to the right, having a radius of  $890 \frac{1}{2}$  feet, a distance of fifty-two and two-tenths feet to the southern line of the first-mentioned street; thence, by said line of said street, south, sixty-nine degrees and eighteen minutes east, sixty-two and one half feet, to the place of beginning—containing an area of twenty-four one hundredths of an acre, more or less." The second parcel is also described in like manner, and contains an area of  $\frac{1}{100}$  of an acre. A plat is exhibited with the petition, which shows the exact location of the land sought to be taken, and is made a part of the petition.

The petition shows that the whole of the first parcel of land is owned by the Benwood Iron Works, a corporation under the laws of West Virginia, and engaged in the manufacture of iron and nails; that there are no liens on said parcels of real estate, and no buildings or other improvements thereon, and lying open and unused; that it is unable to agree with said Benwood Iron Works in relation to the price of said parcel of land, the said company refusing to sell it for any price; and that said parcel of land is necessary for the construction of petitioner's said track.

The petitioner avers that the second parcel of land is partially claimed by different persons. The north sixty feet is claimed by Mrs. Hannah McMechen, H. B. McMechen, and Eliza McMechen Mayes, as the devisees in fee of the late Hiram McMechen, while at the same time the Benwood Iron Works claims to be the owner thereof in fee, and the City of Benwood claims that it constitutes a part of one of the public streets of the city; that the remainder of said parcel of land is claimed in fee by the Benwood Iron Works. Notice was served on the parties, and the petitioner prayed the court to appoint commissioners to ascertain what will be a just compensation to the parties owning said parcels of land sought to be taken, etc.

The plat shows that to go to said steel works two streets of the City of Benwood would have to be crossed, and that it would diagonally cut the vacant lot, and passing along Second Street, and partly on the land of the Benwood Iron Works, and between the iron works, terminate at the steel works. When the petition was presented the City of Benwood appeared and objected to the filing of the petition; but the court overruled the objection, and permitted the same to be filed. On the 7th of April, 1887, on demurrer to said petition, the court held "that the use set forth in the petition to which the track of the railroad is to be put, for which the lands are sought to be condemned, are not public uses, and the prayer of the petitioner should be denied." Whereupon the petitioner asked leave to amend its petition, to which the Benwood Iron Works and the City of Benwood objected, but the objections were overruled, and the leave was granted. On the 29th day of June, 1887, the petitioner tendered its amended petition in pursuance of the leave granted by the court.

The City of Benwood and the Benwood Iron
2 L. R. A.

Works filed their objections in writing to the filing of said amended petition, and the City of Benwood filed its demurrer in writing to said petition, and said objections and demurrer were argued, and taken under consideration by the court, and the court overruled the objections and the demurrer, and permitted the petition to be filed, and notice was ordered to be given the defendants who had not appeared. The description of the property in the amended petition, and the lines of the side track, are substantially the same as set out in the original petition, and is accompanied with the same plat. The only material difference in the two petitions is the declaration of the purpose for which said side track, called in the amended petition a "branch railroad and lateral work," is to be used.

In the amended petition it is alleged "that the railroad so constructed is now owned by your petitioner, and is used and operated for the transportation of passengers and freight, under and in accordance with the laws of the State of West Virginia, and for all the public uses imposed upon railroads by such laws. Your petitioner now desires and intends, in accordance with law, and in the exercise of the further authority conferred upon it by its charter and the laws of this State, to build and construct a branch railroad and lateral work, not exceeding two miles in length, from a point on its main line, in the City of Benwood, and some distance north of the nail factory of the Benwood Iron Works, to a point opposite and west of the southern end of the steel mill of the Wheeling Steel Works, also in the City of Benwood. The branch railroad and lateral work so to be constructed by your petitioner is to be a public highway, and free to all persons for the transportation of their persons and property thereon, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law, and is to be for public use."

The City of Benwood answered, to which answer the petitioner objected, and denied the right of the petitioner to condemn its street, or a part thereof, to build a switch to the works of a private corporation. It then sets out the streets that would be invaded, and shows what inconvenience would result to the city; that Second Street is now partially obstructed by a railroad track constructed to the Wheeling Steel Works from the track of the Ohio River Railroad, over which road the petitioner has the right to pass, and does pass to and take and unload freight at the Wheeling Steel Works; that the further obstruction of the street, as proposed, would render it valueless and impassable as a public highway for the city, which is necessary and indispensable.

The objections of the Benwood Iron Works to the filing of the amended petitions are, in substance, that it is insufficient in law, and does not show that the lands sought to be taken are to be condemned for a public use, within the meaning of the Constitution of this State; because the uses for which the said lands are sought to be taken, as stated in the original petition, did not constitute a public use, and the amended petition only sets forth in more general language the uses for which the lands are sought to be taken, and does not use any language which is inconsistent with the proposed railroad being used solely for the uses set out in the original petition; the amended petition, including its exhibits, is inconsistent with itself, etc.

The Benwood Iron Works filed its answer, to which the petitioner objected. The answer alleges that it was applied to a short time before July, 1886, by C. D. Hubbard, president of the petitioner, to ascertain on what terms it would sell to the railroad company the right of way through its grounds; that the matter was laid before the board of directors of the Benwood Iron Works, and the board refused to sell at any price, because it had been for a long time, and was, reserving said ground, for the purpose of erecting thereon a blast furnace. It avers that the Wheeling Steel Works induced the petitioner to ask to have the lands condemned; that since the filing of the original petition the Wheeling Steel Works has bought from the Benwood Iron Works the ground south of the main works, on which to stand and shift cars laden with freight consigned to or by that corporation; that the petition, though nominally that of the railroad company, is really that of the steel works; that the purpose is revealed in the original petition as follows: "Said switch or track is to be constructed for the purpose of transporting freights to and from the said steel works;" that this is not a purpose useful to the public, but to the steel works; that it is still true, as stated in the original petition, that the Wheeling Steel Works has erected a steel plant or works in the City of Benwood, which lies next east of the Benwood Iron Works, while petitioner's main track lies west of the said Benwood Iron Works; said steel company produces large quantities of steel, and consumes large amounts of material; and said switch or track is to be constructed for the purpose of transporting freights to and from said steel works over petitioner's road. It denies that the switch, track, railroad and lateral work mentioned in the amended petition is to be a public highway, and free to all persons for the transportation of their persons and property thereon, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law, and that it is for public use, etc.

On the 18th day of November, 1887, the parties came, etc.; "And the court, having maturely considered the answers heretofore tendered by the Benwood Iron Works and the City of Benwood to the amended petition herein, and having also considered the objections heretofore made by said answers, and argued by counsel; and the court, being of opinion that nothing alleged in said answers constitutes a bar to the appointment of commissioners, to ascertain a proper compensation for the land sought to be taken, except so much of the answer of the Benwood Iron Works as denies that the branch or lateral work mentioned in the amended petition is to be a public highway, and free to all persons for the transportation of their persons and property thereon, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law, and that it is to be for public use, and also so much as avers that the said amended petition, though nominally that of the railroad company, is really that of the Wheeling Steel Works Company—doth overrule the objection to these parts of the answer of the Benwood Iron Works, and doth sustain all the other objections of the petitioner; and the petitioner now replying generally to the averments of the answer of the Benwood Iron Works as to which the petitioner's objections were overruled, and issue being joined upon the matters alleged in the petition and so much of the answer as remains, it is ordered that testimony on that issue be taken by deposition," etc.

On the 11th day of February, 1888, the matter came on to be further heard "upon the issue joined on so much of the answer of the Benwood Iron Works as denies," etc., stating it; upon the depositions of the witnesses C. D. Hubbard, J. M. Bellville, Alonzo Loring and A. N. Wilson, with the exhibits therewith, and upon the original entries in the minute book of the board of directors of the Benwood Iron Works, copies whereof were filed with the depositions, etc.; and upon the Acts of the Legislature, to wit: the Act of incorporation, passed July 15, 1868, the Act of March 1, 1869, permitting the extension of the road, and the Act of February 16, 1871, changing the name of the corporation to what it now is; upon consideration of which the court found for the petitioner on the issues joined; and thereupon it was considered by the court that proper notice had been given, and that the said petitioner has lawful right in this proceeding to take, for the purposes stated in the amended petition, the several parcels of land in its said amended petition mentioned and described, and for such purposes to acquire title to said parcels upon just compensation; to which ruling and judgment of the court the defendant the Benwood Iron Works excepted, and tenders its bill of exceptions thereto, and asked that the same might be signed and sealed by the court, and made a part of the record therein, which was accordingly done. The court then proceeded to appoint the commissioners. To this order the Benwood Iron Works obtained a writ of error and superadeas.

The main question to be decided is, Was the use for which the lands sought to be condemned were to be put, a public use? If not, then, of course, the lands could not be legally condemned, under the law of eminent domain. If the use were public, then it matters not if the Benwood Iron Works had for twenty years reserved its lot for the purpose of building a blast furnace thereon. It could be taken for public use, and the loss to it could be compensated in damages.

The question here is not one of compensation, but it is whether the petitioner had a right to take the property. It, of course, has no right to take private property for private use, but it has the right to take private property for public use on paying a just compensation therefor. The right to take, which depends upon whether it is to be taken for public or private use, is a judicial question, and the decision of the circuit court on that question is subject to review. Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Pittsburg, W. & K. R. Co. 17 W. Va. 812.

There were issues made in the case, and evidence taken thereon. One of these issues—whether the Wheeling Steel Works was not in fact the real party asking for the condemnation—was properly decided in the negative. I am unable to perceive the necessity of the issue as to whether the use to which the property was to be devoted was public, as it seems to me that question might have been decided from the face of the petition, and the exhibits filed therewith.

Another issue was whether the road or switch was to be a public highway, and free to all persons for the transportation of their persons and property thereon. The evidence on this subject is short, and I will give the substance of it: The Wheeling Steel Works is a corporation whose stock is owned, and which was built, by three other corporations, to wit: the defendant the Benwood Iron Works, the Wheeling Iron & Nail Company, and the Belmont Nail Company. These three companies each furnished three directors to control the Wheeling Steel Works, as its board of directors. The steel works had had some trouble in making its shipments, but it is not shown that it induced the petitioner to institute condemnation proceedings.

C. D. Hubbard, who is the president of the petitioner, and interested in the Wheeling Iron & Nail Company, in his deposition was asked, after reading to him the purpose for which the condemnation was sought, as it appears in the original petition, "Are not these averments of the original petitioner true, and is not the purpose for which the switch or track is proposed to be constructed correctly set forth in the original petition?" He answered: "I think they are substantially true; we have no track of our own, and are subject to the courtesy of two different railroads to get there, and to pass over part of the Ohio River Railroad and part of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and are liable at any time to be shut out by either railroad—that is, the Ohio River or the B. & O."

Q. How much of the Ohio River Road did you have to run over after leaving the southern end of the Pittsburg, Wheeling & Kentucky Railroad before your cars would strike the Wheeling Steel Works' track after it crossed the B. & O. Road?

A. I cannot say how much of the main line of the Ohio River R. R. we have to pass over, but sufficient to enable us to get on to the switch by which the Ohio River Road connects with the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad in order to make connection with the track of the Wheeling Steel Works.

Q. When you were asked whether the averments in the original petitions were true, and whether the purposes for which the switch or track proposed to be constructed over the ground the P. W. & Ky. R. R. seeks to condemn in these proceedings were correctly set forth, you said: "I think they are substantially true." I ask you to read question 29, now handed you, and state in what respect those averments are not literally true, as applied to the amended petition in these proceedings.

A. I would like to see the original petition.

It was handed to him, and he answered: "My answer referred mainly to the location of the track; and the closing part of the question, which sets forth the purposes of the track, escaped my attention. The purposes are largely to secure the business of the steel works. They would be open for the use of any other parties having anything to ship over it, and in that respect my answer was not entirely correct."

Q. What other parties can you suggest would have use for shipping anything over the track laid on the ground now sought to be condemned, except those desiring to transport freight to and from the Wheeling Steel Works?

A. It could be used by any of the citizens of Benwood—the Benwood Iron Works, as the track would run between their two nail factories, and we have on the P., W. & Ky. Railroad no other track or siding at Benwood, on which to deliver or receive freight from the citizens of Benwood or others wanting to ship.

Q. Would your company have sought to condemn this ground, except for the purpose of transporting freights to and from the steel works?

A. I think not; it is just in this way: If the steel works hadn't been there, we should not have thought of building this road to it; just as the main line of the road would not have been built to Wheeling if there had been no Wheeling—the road being built in both cases to secure business.

Q. When you said that your road "is liable at any time to be shut out from either railroad," didn't you mean to be shut out from access to the Wheeling Steel Works?

A. Yes sir.

On cross examination this question was asked the witness: "Is this averment in the amended petition true: 'The branch railroad and lateral work to be constructed by your petitioner is to be a public highway, and free to all persons for the transportation of their persons and property thereon, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law, and is to be for public use?'"

A. That is my understanding.

Being asked on the redirect, "Are the switches you have spoken of as fully a mile above Benwood, and close to Boggs' Run, within the corporation limits of the Town of Benwood?"

A. I think not.

Q. What complaints, if any, have you ever known of from the citizens of Benwood, about there being no convenient place to deliver freight on your road consigned to that town?

A. No special complaints have come to my knowledge.

J. M. Belleville, the agent of the Pittsburg, Wheeling & Kentucky Railroad at Wheeling, after testifying, on cross examination, as to the difficulty of his road getting freights to and from the Wheeling Steel Works, in answer to the question, "Of what use would your company's proposed lateral road be to the general business of the Town of Benwood?"—said: "It would enable the citizens there to load and unload cars of freight consigned to or coming from them."

Q. What reason is there to suppose it would be of use in that way?

A. We have several times had carload shipments to and from parties in Benwood other than the Wheeling Steel Works, and the Benwood Iron Works, and they could use such a track for that purpose. Our business in Benwood outside of the iron business has increased very much, and the citizens there are demanding better facilities.

Q. What facilities have you now for handling carload shipments in the general commercial business of Benwood?

A. We have none, except a siding on ground belonging to the Benwood Iron Works, and cars for other parties can only be handled on that track, through courtesy.

Q. What effect has the want of such facilities had upon the business of your company in Benwood?

A. I think it has directed business to the B. & O. Road which we would otherwise have secured.

On the redirect:

Q. On Exhibit A, now shown you, is not the Benwood Iron Works' track you have spoken of indicated by the words, "Siding used by Benwood Iron Works" and by red lines?

A. Yes sir.

Q. Could not a track which would accommodate the carload trade with Benwood be put on the northerly side of that used by the Benwood Iron Works?

A. We could not put in any such siding, for the reason that we have no property at that point available.

Q. Suppose you had the property condemned, how would it be then?

A. I suppose it would be practicable. I am not enough of an engineer to say positively.

Q. Isn't it level ground there?

A. The ground is level from a point about sixty feet east of our present main track, and running eastwardly from that.

Alonzo Loring has been secretary of the Benwood Iron Works for over twenty-three years, and in his deposition says the Pittsburgh, Wheeling & Kentucky Railroad Company have not to his knowledge had a freight agent at Benwood. The business of the Benwood Iron Works with that company is done in the Wheeling office.

Now, what does this evidence amount to? I think, after all has been said, it amounts to this, and nothing more: that the lands sought to be condemned, and the purpose for which they are to be used, if condemned, is to run a track or tracks over to connect with the steel works; said switch, branch road, or lateral work is to be constructed for the purpose of transporting freights to and from said steel works over petitioner's road. If this is a public use, then the lands should be taken; but, if not, they should not be taken for such purpose. It is insisted by counsel for defendants in error that such use is public, and he cites, to sustain the position, Clarke v. Blackmar, 47 N. Y. 160; Dietrich v. Murdock, 42 Mo. 284; Lower v. Chicago, B & Q. R. Co. 59 Iowa, 563; Chicago Dock & Canal Co. v. Garrity, 115 Ill. 166, 1 West. Rep. 670; Trustale v. Peoria Grape Sugar Co. 101 Ill. 561; Mills v. Farlin, 106 Ill. 60; Hays v. Risher, 32 Pa. 169; National Docks R. Co. v. Central R. Co. 32 N. J. Eq. 765; New Central Coal Co. v. George's Creek Coal & Iron Co. 37 Md. 562.

In Clarke v. Blackmar the court said: "The counsel for the appellant insists that the common council had no power to authorize the streets of the city to be crossed by a railroad track for the benefit of private property or its owners. Be that as it may, it is not this case. The case shows that a very considerable business as common carriers, for a great number of persons, is carried on over this road, both by the Grand Trunk and New York Central. . . . The track is not private, but must be regarded as a branch track of the New York Central and Grand Trunk; and the fact that the elevator, in the transaction of its extensive business, is greatly benefited, or that its owners contributed largely to the expense of laying the tracks, does not show it to be private." There is nothing in this case to show that the use was a merely private one.

In Dietrich v. Murdock, 42 Mo. 284, it was held that "Where the Legislature in the exercise of its discretion delegated to a railroad company the right of eminent domain, the courts ought not to interfere, except in those cases where it is manifest that private interests alone are to be promoted, and private rights violated, to the extent of taking the property of one individual, and transferring it to another. If by the terms of its charter it was made a public corporation for the use and benefit of that particular section of the State where it was located, and was obliged to furnish the means of transportation, both for passengers and freight commensurate with its wants, it must be assumed that the grant of authority to the company to condemn the land necessary for its roadbed was a rightful exercise of legislative discretion."

In Lower v. Chicago Railroad Company it appeared that the company proposed to build a lateral line fifteen miles long. There seemed to be no doubt in this case, and no question, that the use for which the land was sought to be condemned was a public use.

In Chicago Dock & Canal Company v. Garrity, 115 Ill. 166, 1 West. Rep. 670, bills were filed to enjoin the laying of railway tracks in Illinois Street, in the City of Chicago. Answers were filed, and the cause was referred to a master to take and report the evidence. The master reported the evidence, and the court enjoined the defendants as prayed. Appeals were prosecuted from these decrees to the Appellate Court for the First District, where they were affirmed. On appeal to the supreme court the decree was reversed. The court held that railroad tracks laid on the streets of a city, connected with existing railroads and extending to public ware houses, malt houses or manufacturing establishments, or to public wharves and landings, are in their nature public, and for the public good; and all railroad companies are required by law to permit such connections to be made with their tracks. Mr. Justice Scholfeld, in delivering the opinion of the court, said:

"It is not claimed that the use of the streets can be permanently granted for private purposes; and we recognize as unquestionable law that the use of the streets, whether for vehicles drawn by animals, for those riding upon animals, for footmen, or for the passage of railway cars, must be for the public; and that no corporation or individual can acquire an exclusive right to their use, or the use of any part of them, for private purposes. But we have held that there may be a grant to private individuals of the right to lay tracks in the streets connecting with public railway tracks previously laid, and extending to the manufacturing establishments of those laying the tracks; but in such cases the tracks so laid become in legal contemplation, to all intents and effects, tracks of the railway with which they are connected, and open to the public use, and subject to the public control, in all respects as other railway tracks open to public use. We have not regarded the circumstances that they were laid with private funds, and that they terminated opposite to, or within convenient contiguity of, a private manufacturing establishment, as materially affecting them, and giving a private character to their use. All termini of tracks and switches are more or less beneficial to private parties, but the public character of the use of the tracks is never affected by this. If they are open to the public use indiscriminately, and under the public control to the extent that railroad tracks generally are, they are tracks for public use. It may be in such cases that it is expected, or even that it is intended, that such tracks will be used almost entirely by the manufacturing establishment; yet if there is no exclusion of an equal right of use by others, and this singleness of use is simply the result of location and convenience of access, it cannot affect the question. Truesdale v. Peoria Graps Sugar Co. 101 Ill. 561; Mills v. Parlin, 106 Ill. 60."

It is true, as stated in the brief of counsel for defendant in error, that "In Pennsylvania the Acts known as 'Lateral Railroad Acts,' which authorize the owners of mills and coal mines to condemn land necessary for the construction of lateral railroads from their mills or mines to a railroad or other line of public transportation, have always been held constitutional in Pennsylvania. This ruling was originally put by Chief Justice Gibson on the ground that the Constitution of Pennsylvania did not expressly forbid the taking of private property for private use."

Gibson, Ch. J., in the first case that arose on the subject (Harvey v. Thomas, 10 Watts, 68), said:

"The most material point in the cause is that which involves the constitutionality of the statute on which the defendant's right is founded, but it is one about which little need be said. If there is an appearance of solidity in any part of the argument, it is that the Legislature have not power to authorize an application of another's property to a private purpose, even on compensation made, because there is no express constitutional affirmance of such a power. But who can point out an express constitutional disaffirmance of it? The clause by which it is declared that no man's property shall be taken or applied to public use without the consent of his representatives, and without just compensation made, is a disabling, not an enabling, one; and the right would have existed in full force with out it. Whether the power was only partially restrained for a reason similar to that which induced an ancient lawgiver to annex no penalty to parricide, or whether it was thought there would be no temptation to the act of taking the property of an individual for another's use, it seems clear that there is nothing in the Constitution to prevent it, and the practice of the Legislature has been in accordance with the principle of which the application of another's ground to the purpose of a private way is a pregnant proof. It is true that the title of the owner is not devested by it, but, in the language of the Constitution, the ground is nevertheless 'applied' to private use. It is also true that it has usually, perhaps always, been so applied on compensation made; but this has been done from a sense of justice, and not of constitutional obligation. But, as in the case of the statute for compromising the dispute with the Connecticut claimants, under which the property of one man was taken from him and given to another for the sake of peace, the end to be attained by this lateral railroad law, is the public prosperity. Pennsylvania has an incalculable interest in her coal mines, nor will it be alleged that the incorporation of railroad companies for the development of her resources in this or any other particular would not be a measure of public utility, and it surely will not be imagined that a privilege constitutionally given to an artificial person would be less constitutionally given to a natural one."

In that case it appears that on the 5th day of May, 1832, an Act of Assembly was passed authorizing the location and construction of lateral railroads connecting with the public improvements, and prescribing the mode of obtaining the same. In pursuance thereof the defendant, Freeman Thomas, petitioned the court of common pleas for the appointment of viewers to ascertain the amount of damage Jameson Harvey would sustain by reason of the railroad which he proposed to make through his land. He made the road, and the supreme court said he had a right to do so, although he thereby took private property for private use.

In Hays v. Risher, 32 Pa. 169, it was held that the Lateral Railroad Acts are constitutional. In that case Risher located a railroad, twenty feet wide from his "lands, mill, coal mines," etc., "lying within three miles of the Monongahela River, over the intervening lands of James H. Hays, to the Monongahela slack-water navigation." On writ of error, Woodward, J., for the court, said:

"The truth is, when a lateral railroad is laid upon intervening lands, private property is not taken for private use, and there was no occasion for Judge Gibson's remark in Harvey v. Thomas, 10 Watts, 68, that the Constitution does not forbid such taking. The private property is taken for public use—for clear and definite objects of a public nature, which are of sufficient importance to attract the sanction of the sovereign. That an individual expects to gain thereby and has private motives for risking the whole of the necessary investment, and acquires peculiar rights in the work, detracts not a whit from the public aspects of it . . . It was found, as her public improvements penetrated the interior, that many productive mines and manufactories situated near them were still separated by the land of an un-neighborly owner, which must be crossed or tonnage be lost to the public improvements. To compel such owners to admit a right of passage was not to take away from them a fair participation in the public improvements, and to compensate them for the land occupied was to do all they had a right to claim. They hold their land, as every man does, subject to the call of the government." Harvey v. Lloyd, 8 Pa. 331; Shoenberger v. Mulhollan, 8 Pa. 134.

In the case cited from 32 N. J. Eq. 765, Dixon, J., said: "But it is insisted by the complainants that the road which the National Docks Railway Company intends to construct will be a private and not a public one; and to establish this they adduce the purposes of the corporators. But I think these purposes are foreign to the inquiry. The character of the road in this respect is dependent, not on the designs of its projectors, but on the terms of the law which governs it. Said Judge Baldwin, in Bonaparte v. Camden Railroad Company, Baldwin, 205: "A road or canal constructed by the public or a corporation is a public highway for the public benefit, if the public have a right of passage thereon by paying a reasonable, stipulated, uniform toll." Tested by this criterion, and it is the true one, there can be no doubt that every railroad built by a corporation organized under our general law becomes ipso facto a public road."

In New Central Coal Company v. George's Creek Coal & Iron Company, 87 Md. 562, it appeared that, by the Act governing the case, it was declared that the three persons named therein, and such other persons as might be associated with them in the manner therein provided, should be and were thereby incorporated and made a body politic by the name and style, etc.; "And the said company shall have all the privileges and rights necessary for carrying on the mining of coal and ores, and the manufacture of iron and fire brick, and for transporting to market the produce of their mines, land and manufactories, and shall have power to lease or purchase lands, mines and furnaces with their appurtenances, and to hold all such property, personal, real and mixed, as they may require for the purposes aforesaid," etc.; and it was by statute also invested "with all and singular the rights, profits, powers, authorities, immunities and advantages for the surveying, locating and constructing a railroad with the necessary appurtenances, from their mines or works, to connect with any convenient point or points, with other existing railroads in Allegany County, or with the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal at Cumberland," in the same manner as has been given and delegated to the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company, which includes the full and ample power of condemnation for right of way. By the same section it is made the duty of the company to "carry all persons and property at the same rates of tolls and prices of transportation as the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company are or shall be by law allowed to charge and receive." On appeal, Alvey, J., for the court, said:

"Without the facility of transportation from the mines by railroads, there would be little or no inducement to the investment of capital, and but small progress could be made in developing the vast mineral wealth of the State, in which the public at large are interested. To furnish the requisite facilities for the construction of railroads for the successful operation of the mines is therefore in some sense a public necessity, and, that being so, the use of the ways for such roads may well be said to be public, and therefore the right of condemnation exists; that the right should be placed in the hands and under the control of a private corporation, detracts nothing from the public nature of the use."

In Gatz's Appeal (Supreme Court of Pennsylvania), 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 186, it was held that the grant to construct a railroad carries with it, by necessary implication, the right to construct all works and appendages usual in the convenient operation of a railroad; that sidings are among such works. It was further held that the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, by virtue of the General Railroad Law, is authorized to construct sidings leading to manufacturing or mining establishments held by private owners, and for this purpose may take, by virtue of the delegated power of eminent domain in it reposed, the interjacent lands belonging to other parties; that the right of running sidings to such private establishments, and of taking the necessary lands for the purpose, is clearly within the constitutional power of the Legislature to confer, because the public interest is thereby subserved by reason of the increased facilities afforded for developing the resources of the State, and promoting the general wealth and prosperity of the community. Trunkay, J., dissented.

In Reeves v. Wood County Treasurer, 8 Ohio St. 883, it was held that "The Act of May 1, 1854, 'authorizing the trustees of townships to establish watercourses,' etc., and the Amendment Act of April 14, 1857, are in contravention of the nineteenth section of the Bill of Rights, inasmuch as they authorize an appropriation of private property without reference to the public welfare."

It has been held in New York that the use of lands for rural cemetery associations is private, not public; and that the provision of the New York Statute authorizing the taking of lands for purposes of such associations, by proceedings in invitum, is unconstitutional, and void, reversing the same case in 5 Hun, 482; Re Deansville Cemetery Assn. 66 N. Y. 569.

In Gilmer v. Lime Point, 18 Cal. 229, "public use" is defined to be "a use which concerns the whole community, as distinguished from a particular individual." But it is not necessary that each and every individual member of society should have the same degree of interest in this use, or be personally or directly affected by it, in order to make it public. If the use for which the property is taken be to satisfy a great public want, or public exigency, it is a public use in the meaning of the Constitution.

This court has said that to authorize the exercise of the right of eminent domain, the use which the public is to have of such property must be fixed and definite. The general public must have a right to a certain definite use of the private property on terms and for charges fixed by law, and the owner of the property must be compelled by law to permit the general public to enjoy it. It will not suffice that the general prosperity of the community is promoted by the taking of private property from the owner, and transferring its title and control to another or to a corporation, to be used by such other or by such corporation as its private property, uncontrolled by law as to its use. Such supposed indirect advantage to the community is not, in contemplation of law, a public use. This use of the property, which in such case the public must have, must be a substantially beneficial use, which is obviously needful for the public to have, and which it could not do without, except by suffering great loss or inconvenience. Vanner v. Martin, 21 W. Va. 584.

Section 44, chap. 63, Code 1868, authorized anyone owning timber or mineral land, and who deserves a subterranean or surface right of way by railroad or otherwise, under or through or over the land of another, for the purpose of mining for minerals, or conveying such timber or minerals to market, etc., to apply to the circuit court for condemnation proceedings. By the forty-fifth section, the report of the commissioner should not be confirmed, "unless from such report, and the evidence in the case, the court was of the opinion that the purpose for which the property was to be taken was of public utility," etc. Under this chapter the Valley Salt Company filed its application to have condemned a subterranean right of way for a railroad under the lands of Major Brown and others. The circuit court condemned the way, and the defendants obtained a writ of error. The judgment was reversed and the proceedings dismissed. Judge Paull, for the court, after reviewing the evidence, said:

"No sufficient public use is therefore made to appear to justify an interference with the rights of private property. To secure the possession and enjoyment of private property is one of the chief ends of all free governments, and hence the limitation found in our National and State Constitutions to secure this object; and the safeguard thus provided in the supreme law, may not be lightly or recklessly invaded." Valley City Salt Co. v. Brown, 7 W. Va. 191.

In the case Re Niagara Falls Railroad Company, 108 N. Y. 875, 11 Cent. Rep. 273, the Court of Appeals of New York held that a railroad which does not connect with a highway, which can only be reached by passing over state or private lands, which can have no habitations along, or any freight traffic over, the road, whose sole business is to convey sightseers along the Niagara River, and the season of whose operations is confined to four months in the year, is not such a railroad corporation as is contemplated by the General Railroad Act of 1860, and there is no such public use as to justify the exercise of eminent domain in its behalf. In its opinion the court quotes with approbation Cooley on Constitutional Limitations, 606:

"That can only be considered such (public use) when the Government is supplying its own needs, or is furnishing facilities for its citizens in regard to these matters of public necessity which, on account of their peculiar character, and the difficulty—perhaps impossibility—of making provision for them otherwise, it is alike proper, useful and needful for the public to provide."

The court further says: "The fact that the road of the petitioner may enable the portion of the public who visit Niagara Falls more easily or more fully to gratify their curiosity, or that the road will be public in the sense that all who desire will be entitled to be carried upon it, is not sufficient, we think, in view of the other necessary limitations, to make the enterprise a public one, so as to justify condemnation proceedings."

In Denver Coal Company v. Union Pacific Railroad Company, 34 Fed. Rep. 886, 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 104, note (decided March 26, 1888), it was held that "The Constitution of Colorado, art. 15, § 4, declaring all railroads to be public highways, does not prevent the raising of the question as to the character of a railroad in a proceeding by it to condemn land, article 2, § 15, providing that, 'Whenever an attempt is made to take private property for a use alleged to be public, the question whether the contemplated use be really public shall be a judicial question, and determined as such, without regard to any legislative assertion that the use is public.' The inquiry is not as to what the company was organized for, or whether it will be a private or public corporation, but what the road will be, the structure itself, if any such thing will be made.

The court further said: "It may be that this provision of the Constitution was inserted with a view to remove the presumption which is here referred to, or perhaps to allay all doubts which might arise at any time in respect to the question; but it is certainly true that this provision of the Constitution is only a declaration of the law as it stood at the time the Constitution was made." Hallett, J., refers in his opinion to a case I have not seen decided in his court (McPhee v. Union Pac. R. Co. not reported), in which it was held that a tract which the company proposed to lay down in a town was only a private road for serving certain warehouses, not of a public character, which would enable them to proceed in opposition to the demands of certain property holders in the neighborhood.

In Chicago Railroad Company v. Wills, 4 West. Rep. 121, 116 Ill. 449 (decided by the Supreme Court of Illinois in 1886), it was held that where the track for which the appellant sought to condemn appellee's land was a branch road, intended for the private use of handling the freight of certain brick works, the condemnation of the property for such a use is unauthorized by law, and the proceedings should have been dismissed as soon as such purpose became apparent. Shope, J., for the court said:

"It is evident from the evidence in this case that the sole use and purpose of the proposed track was to reach the brick works, situated between a half and three quarters of a mile from appellant's railroad, and thereby create a feeder to its main line, and add to the volume of its freights. There is no pretense that there was any necessity for any increased facilities in the locality of the proposed track, except for the purpose of saving the hauling of brick from these brick works, and the increased traffic brought to appellant's main line by the building of this spur. True, the superintendent says this track could be used to store cars upon; but it is in the country, and there is no pretense that there is or will be any necessity for this, or that it will be convenient to store cars at this point, or that the track was intended for such use. Besides, the track is shown to be designed for use by running cars over it each day. Indeed, so patent is it from the record that the proposed track was a spur road, intended for the use indicated, that the only statement by appellant's counsel, in his brief, of the use for which appellee's land was to be appropriated, is as follows: 'The appellee being the owner of some land located between the railroad and the brick works, appellant filed his petition to condemn a strip thirty feet in width, across his land, in order to build a railroad track from its main track to the brick works, as described' . . . If this was a side track, and was in some way necessary to, or aided in the convenient and successful operation of, appellant's railroad, the fact that it serves the private use mentioned would not, as said by the court in South Chicago Railroad Company v. Dix, 109 Ill. 237, make it any the less necessary as a side track; but there is no such pretense here, and the right to condemn appellee's land depends upon the right of appellant to build an independent branch road from its main line to the brick works, for the purpose of creating a feeder to its main line of road, or, as put by counsel, to move this vast volume of freight. In no just sense can this proposed line be said to be connected with or necessary to the building, operating, or running of appellant's railroad."

In Getz's Appeal, supra, Trunkey, J., in a vigorous dissenting opinion, said (8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 195): "No one denies that a railroad company may lay as many sidings and turnouts as are fairly requisite to accommodate its business, nor that the company is intrusted with the location of its road and branches, keeping within the limits of its charter. Locating its road between certain points, or locating a branch to a certain point for accommodation of the public, is altogether different from locating a branch or siding merely to accommodate a private person, natural or artificial, for private gain. Here is a naked fact of running a siding, as it is called, across the plaintiffs' lot, against their will, for private gain, to a rolling mill. This siding is not for public use. Its terminus is on private property. If the defendant may lawfully construct it, it may arbitrarily run its sidings to every private place it chooses, doing irreparable mischief to owners of property who are in the way. In Reading, the plaintiff's dwelling and business are destroyed today in laying a siding to an iron mill; to-morrow another citizen may be ruined by a siding to an ice house; another, by one to a tannery; and so on indefinitely. Other companies have like powers as this defendant. In Philadelphia, dwellings may be demolished in running sidings to sugar refineries, shoe factories, shops and sales rooms, and other private places, at the arbitrary discretion of the several boards of directors. Outside of the cities, no man's farm will be secure from a siding to any stone quarry or other private place whose owner may be favored by the judgment of a board of directors. I am not convinced that it was the Legislature's intent to grant such rights, and do not believe they have been granted. But if within the words of the statutes or charters, it seems to me a gross violation of the citizen's right that his property should be violently taken for private use."

Thus we see the progress that has been made in Pennsylvania in favor of the extraordinary rights claimed by corporations and persons against the private right of the citizen. First the legislative grant was justified in Harvey v. Thomas, supra, on the ground that the Constitution did not forbid it; and since, on the ground that the use was public, although it is difficult to see where the general public could be interested. It would seem that the public would be quite as much interested in the issue of bonds to aid manufacturing companies; yet it is unnecessary held that a statute which authorizes a town to issue its bonds in aid of the manufacturing enterprises of individuals is void because the taxes necessary to pay the bonds would, if collected, be a transfer of the property of individuals to aid in the projects of gain and profits of others, and not for a public use, in the proper sense of that term. Citizens Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Topeka, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 656 [23 L. ed. 455]; Cole v. La Grange, 118 U. S. 1 [28 L. ed. 886]; Ohio Valley Iron-Works v. Moundville, 11 Va. 1.

The property of railroad corporations, in so far as concerns the ownership thereof, and the profit or gain to be made from their use, is to all intents and purposes private property, although applied to a use in which the public have an interest. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Chicago & W. I. R. Co. 97 Ill. 506.

As far as the public is concerned, when what they need is for "public use," they have a right to invoke the exercise of eminent domain; but in so far as that which concerns them as to their private interests, their profits and gains, is concerned, they stand as individuals, or as merely private corporations, in which the public has no concern, and for such private purposes cannot call into exercise the power of eminent domain.

Stripped of all the disguises thrown around the case of the petitioner, it is shown that its object is to condemn the land of the defendants for the purpose of enabling it to lay a siding, switch, branch road or lateral work from the main track to the Wheeling Steel Works, a few hundred feet distant, for the purpose, as stated in the original petition, "of transporting freights to and from said steel works over the petitioner's said railroad." This clearly was for the private accommodation of both the railroad and steel works, and to make the private business of both more profitable. This was not for a public, but was for a private, use; and the taking of the property, under these circumstances, would be the taking of private property for private use, which is clearly prohibited.

The learned counsel for defendant in error in his brief says: "No deadlier blow could be aimed at the industries of the State than that which this defendant asks the court to deal."

It seems to us, if railroad corporations were permitted, ad libitum, to do what this defendant in error asks to be done, "no deadlier blow could be dealt the private rights of the citizen." If the doctrine claimed by defendant in error should prevail, then corporations might go to any private place they chose, to rolling mills, ice houses, tanneries, sugar refineries, brick yards, grocery stores, etc., and in the country, to stone quarries, coal mines, stock farms, etc., and, if any private citizen dared to stand in the way, violently wrest his property from him for their mere private gain. In such a state of affairs the so called protection by the Constitution to the rights of private property, by the arbitrary ruling of the courts, would be rendered nugatory and void. The mere declaration in a petition that the property is to be appropriated to public use does not make it so; and evidence that the public will have a right to use it amounts to nothing in the face of the fact that the only incentive to ask for the condemnation was private gain, and it was apparent that the general public had no interest in it. We would do nothing to hinder the development of the State, nor to cripple railroad companies in assisting such development, but at the same time we must protect the property rights of the citizens. All that to which the corporations are entitled under a proper construction of the law they will receive; but they must not, for their own gain and profit, be permitted to take private property for private use.

The judgment of the Circuit Court is reversed, and the petition dismissed.

Green, Snyder and Woods, JJ., concurred.

VIRGINIA SUPREME COURT OF APPEALS.

C. L. McCOULL, Jr., Plff. in Err.,

v.

City of MANCHESTER.

(....Va.....)

1. A municipal corporation cannot abrogate or dispense with the duties and liabilities imposed upon it by its charter for the safety of the public in respect to the care of streets, by means of an ordinance.
2. A city ordinance permitting a person engaged in building, etc., to deposit materials upon the street for one half of its width is no defense to an action against the city for negligence in permitting obstructions to remain in the street without any light at night or other signal to give warning of them, in consequence of which a traveler sustained injuries.

(December 12, 1886.)

ERROR, brought by the plaintiff below, to review a judgment of the Corporation Court of the City of Manchester in favor of defendant below in an action for damages for injuries sustained by reason of an obstructed highway. Reversed.

The facts and questions raised are fully stated in the opinion.

Mr. W. R. Meredith, with Messrs. Meredith & Cooke, for plaintiff in error.

Mr. W. L. Clopton for defendant in error.

Fauntleroy, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The petition of C. L. McCoull, Jr., complains of a final judgment of the Corporation Court of the City of Manchester rendered in the case of C. L. McCoull, Jr., plaintiff, against the City of Manchester, defendant, on the 7th day of May, 1886.

It appears from the record that about 1 o'clock A. M. on the night of November 2, 1885, the plaintiff (said McCoull) was prudently riding his horse, in company with others, along the principal street of the City of Manchester, when his horse struck a large pile of sand in the roadway, fell, broke its neck, and badly bruised the said McCoull. It was so dark at the time that his friends and companions—who, hearing his exclamation when the disaster occurred, came to his assistance—were in danger of riding over him, and had to strike several matches before they could discover him.

NOTE.—Permitting use of streets for building purposes.

A municipal corporation may lawfully permit its streets to be temporarily used for building purposes. Such a corporation is not an insurer of the safety of its streets. Warsaw v. Dunlap, 9 West. Rep. 361, 113 Ind. 576.

2 L. R. A.

Neither the street lamp was lighted, nor was there any light or barrier or other danger signal before the pile of sand, which was thirty feet long, from thirteen to nineteen feet from the right-hand curbstone, and from three to four feet deep.

The plaintiff instituted this action of trespass on the case in the said Corporation Court of the City of Manchester, and filed his declaration, setting forth the aforementioned facts, reciting and charging the duty and legal obligation of the City of Manchester, under its charter, to keep in good and proper condition its public highways and streets, for the use and travel of persons driving and riding along and upon the same; and "Whereas, On a certain night, to wit: the night of the second day of November, 1885, there was, and had been for a long time previous thereto, in and partly across a certain street of said city called 'Hull Street,' at or near the south corner of Fourth Street, a pile of sand of a certain size, to wit: running from the sidewalk towards the middle of Hull Street nineteen feet, running north and south thirty-two feet, with a depth in the middle of about four feet, and which was a partial obstruction to driving or riding in or along the roadway of said street; and whereas, it was, and had been for a long time previous to the happening of the injuries hereinafter mentioned, the duty of the defendant [city] to have removed the said pile of sand, yet the said defendant, well knowing the premises, although in duty bound as aforesaid to keep said highway in safe condition and repair for the use of persons driving or riding upon and using the same, on a certain night, to wit: the night of the day and year aforesaid, did not remove the said pile of sand, but negligently and wrongfully allowed the same to remain in said Hull Street as aforesaid, whereby the plaintiff, then and there carefully riding a horse, unintentionally and unknowingly rode a certain horse, to wit: a bay mare, into and upon the said pile of sand, thereby causing the said mare to break or dislocate her neck, and thereby killing the said mare, and thereby injuring and straining the shoulder of said plaintiff, which so remained a long time, and thereby rendering the said plaintiff partially insensible—to wit: on the night of the second day of November, 1885—to the damage of the said plaintiff of $500," etc.

To this declaration there was no demurrer or objection of any kind. The defendant pleaded "Not guilty," joined issue upon it, and put itself upon the country; whereupon a special jury was obtained to try the case, which, after hearing the evidence and instruction given by the court, rendered a verdict for the defendant; upon which verdict the court rendered its judgment.

ment, after overruling the motion of the plaintiff to set the verdict aside, and grant to him a new trial, on the ground that the verdict was contrary to the law and the evidence—to which action of the court the plaintiff excepted, as well as to the refusal of the court to give the instructions asked for by the plaintiff, and to the giving by the court of the instruction asked for by the defendant. The court certified the facts proved, as already set forth.

A witness (Cox) who was one of the company riding with the plaintiff at the time of the accident, testified on the trial that but for the exclamation of the plaintiff when his horse fell, and he, fearing that he would be trampled under the horse's feet in the darkness, called out, he, too (Cox), would have ridden into the sand pile, as his horse's hoofs were on the edge when he was warned.

Another witness, J. D. Mathews, who lived in Manchester, testified that on the night next after the accident, when there was the same absence of light, two wheels of his buggy struck the said sand pile, overturning the buggy, and throwing himself and his sister out.

Captain Lipscomb, a witness for the defense, testified that he was Chief of Police of the City of Manchester, and ex officio city engineer; that he knew of the pile of sand being in Hull Street a week or ten days before the killing of the plaintiff's horse, but did not think it necessary to report it, or take any extra precautions with regard to it; that the street lamp diagonally opposite the pile of sand had been lighted before the second of November until 12 o'clock at night, the city's regulations only requiring them to burn until that hour, but after the accident of plaintiff, and that of Mr. Mathews, he, of his own volition, had kept the lamp burning all night, until the completion of the work on Mr. Jones' house.

The plaintiff introduced on his part the Charter and Ordinances of the City of Manchester, particularly the seventh section of the Act of March 20, 1874, in reference to streets and alleys, which gives the City of Manchester power "to close or extend, widen or narrow, lay out, graduate, curb and pave, and otherwise improve, streets, sidewalks and public alleys in the city, and have them kept in good order, and properly lighted," etc.

The defendant introduced on its part the following ordinance of the City of Manchester, chap. 28, § 7: "A person engaged, or about to be engaged, in building, repairing, excavating or making any improvements on a house or lot on which materials are to be used, or from which they are to be removed, may deposit such materials in that part of the street or public alley opposite his premises, or so much of the carriage way as does not exceed one half of the width thereof, so that the use of the gutter be not thereby obstructed. The council may, on being satisfied of the necessity therefor, grant a special permit in writing, authorizing more of the street to be used than hereinbefore mentioned, or authorizing the deposit to commence earlier or continue longer than is hereinafter provided. But, except by such permission, the deposit shall not be made, in case of small repairs, more than one day, nor, in other cases, more than three days, before the work is commenced; and the remains shall be cleanly removed, in a case of small repairs, by the end of the first day, and, in other cases, by the end of the third day, next after that on which the work is finished," etc.

It was further proven that the pile of sand was a part of the building material used in the construction of Mr. Jones' house, either by himself or his contractors, and that Mr. Jones owned the lot opposite the pile of sand, and abutting on the said Hull Street, at the point where said pile of sand was placed, and that the said Jones was at the time engaged in building a brick house on said lot, and that said sand was necessary for and used for the construction of said house, and that said pile of sand did not occupy more than half the width of the carriage way of the said street, and did not obstruct the use of the gutter of said street. It was further proven that the width of the carriage way of said street was forty feet, and of each sidewalk sixteen feet.

Upon this state of facts, as proven by the evidence adduced to the jury, the plaintiff asked the court to instruct the jury as follows: "That it is the duty of a municipal corporation to keep its streets free from obstructions, and that the passage of an ordinance does not relieve the city of liability for injuries resulting from the negligence of the city in failing to light said street so as to warn travelers of existing danger in the use of said way. A traveler is not required to walk his horse, but has a right to travel at such a rate as a man of ordinary prudence usually travels. In order to hold the city liable, it must have had notice, which is either express or implied. If the obstruction is on a frequented street of a town, and has been there ten days or two weeks, the jury may imply that the city had notice of the obstruction. If the jury believe from the evidence that one of the city officers, who is chief of police, had notice before the accident of the obstruction, that is express notice to the corporation. Even if there is an ordinance of the city allowing a builder to put sand in the street, yet if the jury believe from the evidence that it was necessary in such case to safe traveling that there should have been a city lamp lit at the corner of Fourth and Hull Streets to warn travelers of this existing danger, they are instructed that the failure of the city to have such light at the time plaintiff passed by is negligence. The court further charges the jury that the city was responsible and liable in damages to any individual who suffers any special damage, caused by the streets being left in an impassable condition, where, by ordinary prudence and caution, he could not foresee and avoid the injury occasioning him damage. When public streets in this city are left in an impassable or dangerous condition to the traveling public, and no means or precautions are taken to warn the public of the danger, or to prevent them from running upon it, unless the person sustaining the injury has notice of the danger and suffers in consequence of his own negligence, and from the want of ordinary caution and prudence, the city is liable for the damage sustained."

But the court refused to grant the aforesaid instructions, or any one of them; and, upon the motion of the defendant, in lieu thereof, instructed the jury "that if they believe from the evidence that, in accordance with the following ordinance of the City of Manchester—seventh section of chapter 28, Revised Ordinances of the City: 'A person engaged, or about to be engaged, in building, repairing, excavating, or making any improvements on a house or lot on which materials are to be used, or from which they are to be removed, may deposit such materials in that part of the street or public alley opposite his premises, or so much of the carriage way as does not exceed one half of the width thereof, so that the use of the gutter be not thereby obstructed. The council may, on being satisfied of the necessity therefor, grant a special permit, in writing, authorizing more of the street to be used,' etc.—that the pile of sand in the declaration complained of, as the obstruction which caused the injury to the plaintiff in the declaration claimed, was placed in Hull Street by one A. C. Jones, or his contractors, and that he, the said Jones, was then and there engaged in building a house on his lot which abutted on the street at the point at which the injury occurred, and that the said sand was necessary and used for said building as building material, and that the said pile of sand did not occupy more than one half of the roadway, nor obstruct its street so that travelers could not pass, then the City of Manchester is not responsible for the injury, and the jury must find for the defendant."

There is no demurrer to the declaration in the record, and it states a case clearly within the rule laid down by this court in Jones v. Old Dominion Cotton Mills, 82 Va. 148, 10 Va. L. J. 474, in which Richardson, J., delivering the opinion of the court, says the declaration states "a cause of action so that it could be understood by the party who is to answer it, by the jury who are to ascertain the truth of the allegations, and by the court who are to give judgment."

"It certainly does state and distinctly set forth when, where, in what manner, and under what circumstances—giving ample details—the plaintiff was injured by the default, negligence and improper conduct of the defendant's servant. This is all that seems necessary to fulfill the office of a declaration." Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Whittington, 80 Gratt. 810.

The declaration in the case under review states the time when the accident occurred, and the manner and circumstances of its occurrence, and alleges that the defendant city negligently and wrongfully allowed the pile of sand to remain in the street. It says nothing about how, or by whom, or under what authority, it was put there; but charges that it was negligently and wrongfully permitted by the city to remain there. The proof was that it was allowed by the city, with the full knowledge of its chief of police, without lights in the street lamps, and without barriers, or any kind of danger signals; and that by this default and negligence of the defendant city the plaintiff was injured, without fault or negligence on his part, by the falling and killing of his horse under him, and his own serious hurt, caused by a pile of sand thirty feet long, fifteen or more feet wide, and four feet deep, occupying one half of the main street, without lights, barriers, danger signals or anything to warn the traveling public, in a dark night, of the obstruction in the highway.

Upon the facts charged in the declaration, and certified by the court to have been proved in the cause, the instructions which were asked for by the plaintiff, and refused by the court, correctly expounded the law as to the legal duty of municipal corporations to keep their streets in a safe condition for the use of the public, and their liability in damages at the suit of an individual who sustains injury by reason of their neglect so to do, and the Corporation Court of the City of Manchester erred in refusing to give them to the jury. See Noble v. Richmond, 81 Gratt. 271; Sawyer v. Corse, 17 Gratt. 280; Richmond v. Courtney, 82 Gratt. 798; Orme v. Richmond, 79 Va. 86; Gordon v. Richmond, 2 S. E. Rep. 727.

The instruction which was asked for by the defendant city, and given by the court, is wholly erroneous. The defendant city pleaded its own ordinance, allowing building materials to be put in the streets, and setting forth that the pile of sand which had caused the injury was being used at the time by the contractor for building purposes; and the court instructed the jury that the existence of the ordinance was a complete and absolute defense to the city itself, and relieved it from all amenability to the law, which requires it to be its duty to keep its streets and highways in safe condition for the use of the public, and, where necessary (as in this case) to have a light or barrier, or other signal, to warn travelers of the temporary and necessary danger in the street.

The duties and liabilities imposed by its charter for the safety of the public cannot be abrogated or dispensed with by an ordinance of the city council; and reason and public policy supplement the law in holding the city responsible for the neglect or omission of due diligence in the discharge of their charter duties. The corporation court erred in overruling the motion to set the verdict of the jury aside, and to grant a new trial; and the judgment complained of is wholly erroneous, and must be reversed and annulled, the said verdict be set aside, and the case will be remanded to the Corporation Court of the City of Manchester for a new trial, with direction to give the instructions in the record asked for by the plaintiff, if the evidence shall be the same.

Reversed.

KENTUCKY COURT OF APPEALS.

LOUISVILLE &amp; NASHVILLE R. CO.,

Appt.,

v.

Lou E. BALLARD.

[(.... Ky. ....)]

1. A woman carried by a railroad train beyond her station at which the railroad employes refused to put her off, and to whom they "were insulting either in words, tone or manner," may be allowed to recover punitive damages.

2. A judgment for $3,005 damages in favor of a woman who was carried past her station on a railroad train, in consequence of which she was obliged to walk between one and two miles, carrying a large bundle and valise, and by the exertion and excitement thereby caused, was made sick for several days, and who was treated in an insulting manner by the railroad employes, will not be set aside as excessive, where substantially the same amount has been given on a former trial.

(January 22, 1889.)

A PPEAL by defendant, from a judgment of the Marion County Circuit Court (W. E. Russell, J.), in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for injuries resulting to her by being carried beyond a station to which she had purchased a ticket and being compelled to walk back. Affirmed.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Messrs. H. W. Bruce, William Lindsay and W. J. Lilse for appellant.

Messrs. Rives & Spalding for appellee.

Bennett, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellee, a young lady, was in February, 1882, teaching school at Loretto, Marion County, Ky. Her father lived between half a mile and a mile from a flag station on the appellant's road known as "Harper's Ferry." The appellee on Saturday evenings usually went to her father's home, and returned again on Monday morning to her school. She made her trips to and from Harper's Ferry station on the appellant's passenger train. Her father was in the habit of meeting her at Harper's Ferry, and taking her from that place to his home on horseback. She, Saturday evening, February 18, 1882, purchased a passenger ticket, which entitled her to travel on the appellant's train from Loretto to Harper's Ferry. She boarded the train at Loretto to make her trip to the latter place. She carried with her a bundle of considerable size, and a valise. The conductor, Sweeney, was in the habit of running said train on Saturday evenings, and had said train in charge that evening, and took up the appellee's ticket before the train reached Harper's Ferry.

The appellee swears that the train did not blow its whistle for Harper's Ferry, nor did it stop at that place. In this she is corroborated by several persons who were passengers on the train. Also her father says that he was on his way to Harper's Ferry for the purpose of taking the appellee home, but, as the train passed the station without stopping, he concluded that the appellee was not on it, and he returned to his home without going to the station. The appellee says that she discovered that the train had passed the station; that she then called to the conductor, who was at the far end of the car, engaged in conversation with some one, several times before she got his attention; that he then came to her, and asked her at what place she wished to get off. She said at Harper's Ferry, to which point she had purchased her ticket. He said that the train had passed Harper's Ferry, and that he could not go back to it; but he would take her on to the next station. She declined to be taken on to the next station; but claimed that she should be put off at Harper's Ferry. He said if she would not go on she would have to get off the train and walk back. She said she could do so, but she would make him pay for it. He waived his hand towards the door as if to say go, and she went, carrying her bundle and valise, and he following to the door, and standing on the platform without offering to assist her; that she had to get off the train without any assistance whatever, that a brakeman was at hand, but offered her no assistance, but seemed to be enjoying the situation; that as she got on the ground from the coach steps, the lowest step being some three or four feet from the ground, the brakeman being right by her, grinned at her with a broad grin; that the conductor's tone of voice and manner towards her were insulting; that she got off the train about a mile from Harper's Ferry, and she had to walk back to it, and from thence home, carrying her bundle and valise; that from the place that she got off of the train to Harper's Ferry there was no pathway. The route was rough, muddy and uninhabited; that from the walk and excitement she was made sick—not, however, in bed all the time—for four days.

On the other hand the conductor swears that, owing to some casualty over which he had no control, the train was not stopped at the platform, but it was stopped within sixty or seventy yards after passing it; that he waited to see if anyone would get up as if to get off, but no one did. Then he called out, "All out for Harper's Ferry," and no one getting up as if to get off, he went on. He denied in toto the conduct attributed to him by the appellee. He says that she was put off not exceeding four or five hundred yards from Harper's Ferry. The brakeman sustains the conductor. He also says that he was not rude to the appellee but helped her off the train. The testimony of others is to the same purport. The father of the appellee swears that on the next morning the appellee showed him the place that she got off the train, and he stepped the distance to Harper's Ferry, and it was 1,975 yards.

It is manifest that the jury believed the appellee's entire story; therefore they awarded to her $3,005 in damages. Theretofore there had been a trial of the case upon substantially the same evidence as was introduced on the trial of this case, which resulted in a verdict of $3,000 for the appellee, which this court set aside on account of an error in one instruction, which was as follows:

"If the jury believe from the evidence that the defendant's agents or employes, or any of them in charge of the defendant's train, carried the plaintiff beyond the station for which she had purchased a ticket, and refused to put her off at her station, and were indecorous or insulting, either in words, tone or manner, they should find for the plaintiff, and award her damages in their discretion, not exceeding $5,000."

This court disapproved said instruction, upon the ground that it was improper to authorize the jury to find for the appellee on account of the indecorous conduct of the appellant's employes alone; but the remaining portion of the instruction was approved.

Instruction No. 1 in this case uses the language, "were insulting, either in words, tone or manner." The appellant objects to this instruction on account of the use of the word "tone." We cannot see the force of the objection as applied to a female passenger. The jury were told that if the appellant's employes "were insulting in tone" they should award damages; that is, if their voices were so accented, inflected or modulated as to express intentional insult, then the jury should find for the appellee. It was in the foregoing sense that the word "tone" was used, in which sense the word would be commonly understood by men of ordinary intelligence.

The appellant also objects to the latter part of the instruction, which reads: "They should find for the plaintiff, and award damages in their discretion, not exceeding in all $5,000," etc. This part of the instruction is objected to because it authorizes punitive damages. It does authorize punitive damages, and the trial judge doubtless intended that it should authorize punitive damages. We think that, as an instruction on punitive damages, it was properly drawn. The remaining instructions given by the court draw a correct distinction between compensatory and punitive damages. Also the composition of compensatory damages was correctly defined in one of said instructions. Indeed, instruction No. 1 having correctly submitted the question of punitive damages to the jury, and one of the other instructions having correctly submitted the question of compensatory damages to the jury, it was unnecessary to give the remaining instructions.

The refusal to give instructions B, C and D, at the instance of the appellant, was not an error, because the jury were already fully and correctly instructed. This court held, when the case was here before, that the evidence in reference to the conduct of the brakeman was competent. See 8 S. W. 530. The jury having returned two verdicts for substantially the same amount, we will not reverse on account of its excessiveness.

The judgment is affirmed.

MASSACHUSETTS SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT.

SMETHURST

v.

PROPRIETORS OF INDEPENDENT CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

(...Mass....)

1. Where the wall of a building is on the line of the highway, and a portion of the roof projects over the highway, an injury resulting therefrom by the fall of snow is incidental to its construction and use; and an allegation that such injury is caused by negligence in the construction or management of the building is none the less true because the encroachment on the highway is wrongful.

2. The fall of ice and snow from a building upon a horse, causing him to start, whereby the driver, who was engaged in unloading, was thrown from the wagon and injured, is the direct, proximate cause of the injury, although the ice and snow did not hit the driver.

3. One who violates a duty owed to others, or commits a tortious or wrongfully negligent act, concur and it cannot be determined which contributed most largely, or whether without their concurrence the accident would have happened, a recovery cannot be had. Marble v. Worcester, 4 Gray, 306.

NOTE.—Negligence defined.

Negligence is the failure to do what a reasonable and prudent person would ordinarily have done under the circumstances of the situation, or doing what such a person, under the existing circumstances, would not have done. The duty is dictated and measured by the exigencies of the occasion. Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Jones, 95 U. S. 439 (24 L. ed. 506).

It is the duty of the owner of a building under his own control and in his own occupation, as between himself and the public, to keep it in such safe condition that travelers on the highway shall not suffer injury. Gray v. Boston Gas Light Co. 114 Mass. 149; Khron v. Brook, 4 New Eng. Rep. 423, 144 Mass. 516; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Rose, 8 Cent. Rep. 724, 65 Md. 485.

When there is no intermediate efficient cause, the original wrong must be considered as reaching to the effect and as proximate to it. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469 (24 L. ed. 256).

An intervening cause cannot affect the liability of a negligent party. Harriman v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. 9 West. Rep. 446, 447, 45 Ohio St. 11; Gilliland v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 2 West. Rep. 139, 19 Mo. App. 411.

Concurrent causes of injury.

The general rule is that where two or more causes concur and it cannot be determined which contributed most largely, or whether without their concurrence the accident would have happened, a recovery cannot be had. Marble v. Worcester, 4 Gray, 306.

The original or wrongful or negligent act will not be regarded as the proximate cause where any new agency, not within the reasonable contemplation of the original wrongdoer, has intervened to bring about the injury. Seale v. Gulf etc. R. Co. 65 Tex. 274.

The negligence must be the proximate cause of the injury.

Negligence is not actionable unless it is the proximate cause of the injury complained of. Mathiason v. Mayer, 7 West. Rep. 740, 90 Mo. 585; Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Conn. 1 West. Rep. 904, 104 Ind. 64.

Whether as a cause of action or as a defense, it must be the proximate cause of the injury complained of; and when contributory negligence is set up as a defense, it is an admission of negligence on the part of the defendant himself. Carter v. Chambers, 79 Ala. 223.

The immediate and not the remote cause is to be considered. W. Mahanoy Twp. v. Watson, 8 Cent. Rep. 545, 116 Pa. 344, 19 W. N. C. 441.

Where a horse was frightened by a moving street is liable not only for those injuries which are the direct and immediate consequences of his act, but for such consequential injuries as, according to common experience, are likely to and in fact do result from his act.

4. The rights of a traveler are not lost by one who stops his wagon in a reasonable manner in the highway, for the purpose of unloading goods.

5. The exclusion of a question to a witness cannot be considered on appeal, unless the bill of exceptions shows what the answer would have been, or what it was offered to prove by him if he were allowed to answer.

(January 2, 1888.)

ON defendants' exceptions. Overruled.

Action for tort, for injuries received by plaintiff through his horse starting on being struck by snow falling from defendants' building while plaintiff was unloading his wagon in the street.

The case was tried in the Superior Court for Essex County, before Thompson, J., and a jury, and resulted in a verdict and judgment for plaintiff.

The questions presented and the facts connected therewith are stated in the opinion.

Mr. W. H. Gove for defendants.

Mr. S. A. Fuller for plaintiff.

Devens, J. delivered the opinion of the court:

It is the contention of the defendants that, as the declaration alleges negligence on the part of the defendants the plaintiff can maintain it only by showing a want of ordinary care in the construction or management of the building.

Where parties in the management of their own estate so use it that injury in the ordinary course of things may fairly be expected to result to others in the enjoyment of their own estates, or in the exercise of their own lawful rights, as such use is wrongful, if injury does thus result, it may properly be said to have occurred by their negligence. The instructions as given on this point were in the language used by this court in Shipley v. Fifty Associates, 106 Mass. 194.

They deny to defendants the right to erect and maintain a building, even if of no unusual construction, so near the street that ice or snow will so fall from it in the ordinary course of things as to endanger travelers who are passing in the highway, or using the same rightfully for the purposes of travel.

Shipley v. Fifty Associates, like the case at Bar, was an action brought for negligence on the part of the defendants, in the use of their property. It is there said that the defendant "had no right so to construct his building that it would inevitably, at certain seasons of the year, and with more or less frequency, subject his neighbor to that kind of inconvenience; and no other proof of negligence on his part is needed."

The defendants urge that as in that case the building of the defendant did not encroach upon the highway, while in the case at Bar it is shown to have done so (the eaves projecting about two feet beyond the wall of the building and into the street), the injury to plaintiff did not result from their carelessness or negligence, but from the encroachment over the highway; and thus, even if defendants would be liable for a nuisance or in trespass, they are not in this action.

The wall of defendants' building was on the line of the highway, but the portion of the roof projecting over the highway was a part of the roof, as the building was constructed and maintained; and if injury resulted therefrom, it was incidental to the construction and use by defendants of their property. Nor was such use the less properly described as careless and negligent because it was also distinctly wrongful.

The second instruction requested by the defendants was a general statement taken from McDonald v. Snelling, 14 Allen, 200, the accuracy of which we have no occasion to question. If that given by the presiding judge instead of it was correct, adapted to the case, and all that the case required, the defendants can have no ground of objection because the words asked by them were not used.

The instruction as given was: "The striking of the horse by the snow, if it caused him to

W. N. C. 441; Southside Pass. R. Co. v. Trich, 10 Cent. Rep. 887, 117 Pa. 890, 20 W. N. C. 894.

It must be shown that such a direct relation between the act and the injury exists as it might have been anticipated would probably ensue, and such nearness in connection as to be the primary cause. Gilliland v. Chicago & A. R. Co., 2 West. Rep. 129, 19 Mo. App. 411.

If negligence be the proximate cause of the injury, it is of no consequence whether it be omission or commission. Harriman v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., 9 West. Rep. 444, 45 Ohio St. 11.

Proximity of cause of injury a question for the

and causes an upset, the horse should be regarded as the proximate cause. Perkins v. Fayette, 68 Maine 182; Page v. Bucksport, 64 Maine, 58; Moulton v. Sanford, 51 Maine, 127; Titus v. Northbridge, 57 Mass. 268; Wright v. Templeton, 122 Mass. 42; Nichols v. Brunswick, 3 Cliff. 51; Kennedy v. N. Y., 73 N. Y. 306; Hey v. Phila., 51 Pa. 50.

Proximate cause; how determined.

In determining what is proximity of cause, the true rule is that the injury must be the natural and probable consequence of the negligence. W. Mahanoy Twp. v. Watson, 6 Cent. Rep. 542, 136 Pa. 544, 19 2 L. R. A.

W
N
C
4
4
1
S
o u t h
s
i d e
P a s
s.
R.
C
o.
v.
T
r
i
c
h
1
0
C
e
n
t.
R
e
p.
8
8
7
1
1
7
P
a.
8
9
0
2
0
W.
N.
C.
8
9
4.
I
t
m u
s
t
b e
s
h
o
w
n
t
h
a t
s u
c
h
a d
i
r
e
c t
r
e l
a t
i
o
n
b
e
t
w
e
e n
t
h
e
a
c t
a n
d
t
h
e
i n j
u
r y
e x
i
s t
s
a s
i t
m
i g
h
t
h
a
v
e
b e
e
n
a n
t
i
c
i
p
a t
e
d
w
o
u l
d
p
r
o
b
a
b
l y
e n
s u
e
a n
d
s u
c
h
n
e
a
r
n
e
s
s
i n
c o
n
n
e
c t
i
o
n
a s t o
b e t
h
e
p
r
i
m
a
r y
c
a u
s
e.
G
i l
l
i
a n
d
v.
C
h
i
c
a g
o
&
A.
R.
C
o.
2
W
e
s
t.
R
e
p.
1
2
9
1
9
M
o.
A
p
p.
4
1
1.
I f
n
e g
l
i
g
e
n
c
e
b e t
h
e
p
r
o
x
i
m
a t
e
c
a u
s
e
o f t
h
e
i n j
u
r y
i t
i
s o f
n
o
c o
n
s
e q
u
e
n
c
e
w
h
e t
h
e
r
i t
b e
o
m
i
s
s
i
o
n
o
r
c o
m
m
i
s
i
o
n.
H
a
r
r
i
m
a n
v.
P i
t
t
s
b
u
r
g
h
e
t
c.
R.
C
o.
9
W
e
s
t.
R
e
p.
4
4
4
4
5
O
h
i
o
S
t.
1
1.
P
r
o
x
i
m
i t y
o f
c
a u
s
e
o f
i n j
u
r y
a q
u
e
s t
i
o
n
f
o
r t
h
e

start, would be a direct proximate cause of the injury, although the ice and snow may not have hit the plaintiff." This instruction assumes that the fall of ice or snow upon the horse was found to have been due to the negligence of the defendants, as upon all parts of the case not especially made the subject of exception full and appropriate instructions were given.

It is well settled in this Commonwealth that one who violates a duty owed to others, or who commits a tortious or wrongfully negligent act, is liable, not only for those injuries which are the direct and immediate consequences of his act, but for such consequential injuries as, according to common experience, are likely to, and in fact do, result from his act. McDonald v. Snelling, supra; Metallic Compression Casting Co. v. Fishburg R. Co. 109 Mass. 277; Derry v. Flitner, 118 Mass. 181; Wellington v. Downer Kerosene Oil Co. 104 Mass. 64.

That a horse struck by falling ice or snow would start, and would thus be liable to injure a person standing near or upon the wagon, and who was engaged in loading or unloading, is so entirely according to the natural and usual sequence of events that it cannot have been necessary to submit the question whether one occurrence might probably be expected to follow the other.

The defendants further contend that the plaintiff was not using the street as a traveler, and therefore had not the rights which a traveler or an adjoining proprietor might have to be protected from the effects of a fall of snow. The plaintiff at the time of the accident was engaged in unloading, from his team, goods which were to be deposited in the basement of defendants' building. The exact position of plaintiff's team was in dispute.

The presiding judge declined to instruct the jury that plaintiff was not a traveler, and instructed the jury that the plaintiff had the right to use the way for the transportation of goods in a proper manner, not unreasonably obstructing or interfering with others, adding:

"He has a right to stop in the road for the purpose of getting out or getting in, or of unloading a team in a reasonable manner; and what is a reasonable manner is a question for the jury to pass upon, under all the circumstances of the case."

Under this instruction the jury must have found that he was unloading his team in a reasonable and proper manner when the accident occurred. A traveler lawfully using the way has the same rights to enjoy such use undisturbed as if he were the owner in fee simple. Shipley v. Fifty Associates, 101 Mass. 251.

In order to be a traveler, it is not necessary that one should be constantly moving; if he is a pedestrian, or that the vehicle he drives, or that in which he is conveying goods, if he is using one, shall be continuously in motion. It would certainly be impossible to use the highways conveniently for the ordinary purposes of business or social life, with teams or lighter carriages, if occasional stops were not permitted to enable those using them to load and unload teams, to receive and deliver goods, to enter shops and stores, and to make brief calls of business, or even of a social character. During these stops, if reasonable in duration, one should not lose his rights as a traveler, and the protection thus afforded to his person or property. O' Linda v. Lothrop, 21 Pick. 292; Judd v. Fargo, 107 Mass. 264.

In regard to the exclusion of the question to the witness Pinnock, it is sufficient to say that it does not appear by the bill of exceptions what his answer would have been, or what the defendant offered to prove by him if he were allowed to answer. It has been often decided in such cases that the bill of exceptions must contain enough to show that the excepting party has been actually injured. Warren v. Spencer Water Co. 8 New Eng. Rep. 502, 148 Mass. 155-164.

Exceptions overruled.

D. W. STARRATT et al.

v.

James F. MULLEN.

(....Mass....)

1. If one furnishes goods upon an executed consideration he cannot maintain an action to recover for their price although the original agreement was void under the Statute of Frauds.
2. The defenses of payment in advance need not be pleaded and proved as payment, but may be raised by the general issue.
3. Although proof of delivery of goods to a person in compliance with his request makes out a prima facie case of liability to pay for them, yet this is only a probability; and if it is shaken, the seller must show that language or circumstances import an assumption of liability by him to pay money.

(February 23, 1889.)

ON plaintiffs' exceptions. Overruled.

This was an action of contract, on an account annexed, for clothes made, sold and delivered, work done and money lent. The defendant admitted that all of the items sued for, except two items, were furnished and delivered by the plaintiffs to him, but contended, and offered evidence tending to show, that he lent to the plaintiffs $4,000, for which the plaintiffs gave him their promissory notes, nothing being said in said notes about interest, running on an average of four months, and that when he lent the money to the plaintiffs the plaintiffs orally agreed that for the use of said money they would pay the defendant the sum of $20 per week and furnish him with his clothes.

The plaintiffs asked the court (Lathrop, J.) to rule that the agreement would be void, not being in writing, and also that the defendant having relied upon this agreement the burden of proof was upon him to prove it; which rulings the court refused to give, and ruled that the burden of proof was upon the plaintiffs to show that the money sued for was lent, and the goods sued for were sold by the plaintiffs to the defendant; to which refusals to rule and ruling the plaintiffs excepted. The jury found for the defendant, and plaintiffs alleged exceptions.

Messrs. John M. Way and E. M. Bigelow for plaintiffs.

Messrs. Thomas J. Gargan and Charles H. Sprague for defendant.

Holmes, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Whether the agreement set up by the defendant could have been enforced or not, the plaintiffs were at liberty to perform it if they saw fit; and if they furnished the clothes in pursuance of it, they could not recover in this action. Martin v. Mandell, 125 Mass. 563.

The contract is not relied on as an executory or binding undertaking, but simply to show that the plaintiffs delivered the clothes upon an executed consideration; in which case, as in that of a gift, they did not deliver them for pay to be received thereafter.

The ruling as to the burden of proof was correct. Phipps v. Mahon, 141 Mass. 471, 2 New Eng. Rep. 81.

We shall not repeat the reasoning of that decision, with which we remain satisfied. But as it was questioned at the Bar, we shall add a few words to what was said then. Undoubtedly many matters which, if true, would show that the plaintiff never had a cause of action, or even that he never had a valid contract, must be pleaded and proved by the defendant; for instance, infancy, coverture or, probably, illegality; where the line should be drawn, might differ, conceivably, in different jurisdictions. But in the narrowest view of what constitutes the plaintiff's case, if he declares on a special contract, he must prove its terms as alleged; and on the same principle, if he declares on the common counts, he must prove that the goods or services were furnished for a reward to be paid thereafter in money. "The plaintiff is bound to prove such a sale and delivery as will raise a debt payable on request." Parke, B., in Cousins v. Paddon, 2 Crompt. M. & R. 547; S. C. 5 Tyrwh. 535, 548.

Hence it was settled in England that even under the Hilary Rules, if the defense was that the goods, although delivered to the defendant at his request, were delivered as a gift, or under a contract to pay in beer, or upon a consideration previously executed by the defendant, the proper course was to plead the general issue; and that a special plea would be bad upon special demurrer. Jones v. Manney, 1 Mees. & W. 338; Grounsell v. Lamb, 1 Mees. & W. 352; Morgan v. Pabrer, 3 Bing. N. C. 457, 466, 467; Wilson v. Story, 4 Jur. 468; Collingbourne v. Mantell, 5 Mees. & W. 289; Gardner v. Alexander, 8 Dowl. 146. See Martin v. Mandell, supra. So as to special contracts. Brind v. Dale, 2 Mees. & W. 775; Kemble v. Mills, 1 Man & Gr. 757, 770; Nash v. Breece, 12 L. J. N. E. Exch. 805.

The cases cited answer the argument that payment in advance would have to be pleaded and proved as payment. Payment in advance would mean that the goods were furnished upon an executed consideration in pursuance of an antecedent duty, and that there never was a debt due for them for a single instant. It has been held in England that even where the transaction was a cash sale, and the payment was made at the same moment that the goods were furnished, the proper plea in debt after the Hilary Rules was nunquam indebitatus. Dunsey v. Barnett, 9 Mees. & W. 812; Wood v. Blatcher, 4 Week. Rep. 536; S. C. 27 L. T. 126; Dicken v. Neale, 1 Mees. & W. 556, 559. See 2 L. R. A.

Com. v. Devlin, 141 Mass. 423, 431, 2 New Eng. Rep. 101.

We do not refer to the foregoing cases as deciding the question of burden of proof; but the reasoning on which they proceed, coupled with the rule that the burden of proof never shifts, leads inevitably to the result reached in Phipps v. Mahon.

Proof of delivery of clothes by a tailor to the defendant at his request makes out a prima facie case, no doubt, because in the ordinary course of events a suit of clothes is followed by a bill. But this is only a probability, and if the probability is shaken, it is for the plaintiff to show that the language or the circumstances imported an assumption of liability by the defendant to pay money.

Exceptions overruled.

William O. DELANO, Admr.,

v.

Emma O. BRUERTON et al.

(.....Mass.....)

A grandchild whose father is dead and who has been adopted by his paternal grandfather under Public Statutes, chap. 149, cannot, if his grandfather dies intestate, inherit shares of his personalty in a double capacity, as adopted son and as representative of his deceased father, but will take only one portion and that as adopted son.

(March 1, 1890.)

ON report. Decree below reversed.

This was an appeal from a decree of the probate court upon a petition by the administrator of the estate of the late Ivory G. Curtis for an order of distribution, by which decree a double share of an intestate estate was ordered to be distributed to a grandchild of the deceased, he being the only child of a deceased son and having also been adopted by the intestate and his wife after the decease of said son. Heard in the supreme judicial court before Field, J., and reserved for the full court.

The provisions of the statutes under which the claim was made, and necessary facts, appear in the opinion.

Messrs. Augustus Russ and D. A. Derr for appellants.

Messrs. G. L. Huntress and Homer Albers for the administrator.

Morton, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Ivory G. Curtis died intestate leaving as his heirs at law and distributees five daughters, and a grandson, Henry Curtis, the only child of a deceased son, Henry G. Curtis. In 1879, after the death of his son, Henry G. Curtis, the intestate, adopted his grandson, Henry Curtis, under the Statutes of 1876, chap. 213, re-enacted in Public Statutes, chap. 149.

The question in this case is as to the distribution of his personal estate. One third goes to his widow. Of the remaining two thirds it is claimed, on behalf of Henry Curtis, that he is entitled to one seventh part as an adopted son and also one seventh part by right of representation of his father.

The statute provides that after the decree of adoption all the rights, duties, responsibilities and other legal consequences of the natural relation of child and parent, except as regards succession to property, shall exist between the child and the adopting parent, and shall, except as regards marriage, incest or cohabitation, terminate between the adopted person and his natural parents and kindred.

By the seventh section it is provided that "As to the succession to property a person adopted in accordance with the provisions of this chapter shall take the same share of property which the adopting parent could have devised by will that he would have taken if born to such parent in lawful wedlock; and he shall stand, in regard to the legal descendants, but to no other of the kindred of such parent, in the same position as if so born to him." Pub. Stat. chap. 148, §§ 6, 7.

The intent of the statute was to put an adopted child, for all legal purposes, with certain carefully defined exceptions, in the place of a natural child, and to give him the same rights. If the statute had stopped here it would seem clear that Henry Curtis would, in regard to the succession to the property of his adopted parent, stand as a son; and that his rights of succession as a grandson would be merged in his greater rights as a son.

But the statute contains a further provision at the close of the seventh section, that "No person shall, by being adopted, lose his right to inherit from his natural parents or kindred." Probably the Legislature contemplated, what is in fact true, that most of the children adopted would be infants incapable of protecting their rights and of appreciating the effect of the transaction; and it was just to provide that they should not, without their intelligent consent, be deprived of the right to inherit the property of their natural parents or kindred. As applied to most cases the provision is plain and in harmony with the other parts of the statute, and there is no difficulty in carrying into effect every part of it.

But when applied to the case before us, if it is to receive the construction claimed by the guardian of Henry Curtis, it becomes inconsistent with the main provisions of the statute. The same person cannot, as to the legal descendants of his adopting parent, stand in the same position as his son, and at the same time claim to inherit a portion of his property as his grandson.

It is to be continually borne in mind that we are not dealing with the question whether Henry Curtis can inherit as a son from his adopted parent, and at the same time inherit directly from his father. If his father left property he would have the right to inherit it. But the sole question is as to the right to inherit the property of his grandfather and adopting father in a double capacity—as his son and as his grandson. He claims the right to inherit under the first part of the section as his son, and under the last clause because he is included among "his kindred."

When the Legislature provided that no person should by being adopted lose his right to inherit from his natural parents or kindred, we do not think it understood or intended that "kindred" should include the adopting parent. It intended to save the right of inheritance from other parties, having already provided as to the right of inheritance from the adopting parent.

To bring this provision, when applied to a case like this, into harmony with the other parts of the statute and within its general spirit and scope, we are of opinion that it should be held to apply to the inheritance of the property of some third person, and not of property of the adopting parent.

There is no need of a saving provision to prevent injury to the adopted child in any case which is likely to happen of the adoption of a descendant, because the adopted child would almost invariably take more as an adopted son than he could by right of representation, or inheritance through his parents. We think the only exception is the one supposed by the counsel for the guardian, which is that a man who has had four children adopts his great grandson who by the intermarriage of cousins is the only issue of two of the children of the adopting parent. In that case he would take more as a great grandson by right of representation of his parents than he would as an adopted child of the intestate. But the case is so extremely unlikely to occur that it cannot have much weight in the interpretation of the statute.

We are therefore of opinion that Henry Curtis is entitled to take as an adopted son one sixth of the two thirds part of the estate which is to be distributed, and no more.

Decree reversed.

MANUFACTURERS NATIONAL BANK of Boston

v.
CONTINENTAL BANK of St. Louis, and Trustees.

(....Mass....)

Where a national bank contracts to collect drafts and checks for another bank, under

NOTE.—Bank collections; usages and customs.

The deposit in one bank, of a bill to be collected in another, is a common usage; and the duty of the bank receiving such bill is precisely the same whoever may be the owner; and if unwilling to undertake the collection, the duty ought to be declined. Bank of Washington v. Triplett, 26 U. S. 1 Pet. 25 (7 L. ed. 37).

Proof of custom of banks to transmit checks drawn on other banks to those banks for collection will not justify a bank in sending a certified check for collection to the bank bound to pay such check. Drovers Nat. Bank v. Anglo-American Packing & P. Co. 4 West. Rep. 148, 117 Ill. 100.

Collecting bank as agent of payee or holder.

When an obligation is lodged with a bank for collection, the bank becomes the agent of the payee or obligee to receive payment. Ward v. Smith, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 447 (19 L. ed. 207); Phila. Nat. Bank v. Dowd, ante, 480 and note.

The bank is agent of the holder, and not of the drawer; and, consequently, it may so act as to discharge the drawer, without becoming liable to its principal. Bank of Washington v. Triplett, 26 U. S. 1 Pet. 25 (7 L. ed. 37).

But a bank is not the agent of the payee for the collection of bonds not deposited with it, although payable there. Ward v. Smith, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 447 (19 L. ed. 207).

A collecting bank is the agent of the holder of which contract it has the right to mingle the proceeds of collections with its own funds and make itself debtor for the amount, its insolvency will terminate such right and the proceeds of a check properly indorsed as for collection and sent by it to a third bank to be collected, which is not accomplished until after such insolvency, are the property of the principal bank and may be recovered by it in a suit against such third bank.

(February 22, 1882.)

ON plaintiff's exceptions. Sustained.

This was an action of contract to recover of the principal defendant, the Continental Bank of St. Louis, the amount collected by it on a check drawn by J. G. Brandt for $1,900.00 on the German American Bank of St. Louis, Mo., payable to the order of Hathaway, Soule & Harrington and by them indorsed to plaintiff. The check had been sent by plaintiff to the Fidelity National Bank of Cincinnati, Ohio, for collection, and by it forwarded to defendant and collected by it. Defendant made no claim on its own behalf, to the funds, but the note, and in no sense the agent of the maker. Dodge v. Freedmans Sav. & Trust Co. 100 U. S. 379 (23 L. ed. 380).

Liable for its negligence in collecting.

held
in favor of the bank.

collect
ed and sent by the bank
to the agent
of the maker.

W. N. C. 381.

A bank holding a check for collection has no right, unless specially authorized to do so, to accept anything in lieu of money. Pittsburgh Fifth Nat. Bank v. Ashworth, 22 W. N. C. 38.

Rights and liabilities as collecting agent.

A collecting bank ordinarily becomes the owner of money collected by it for its correspondent, and consequently a debtor for the amount collected, under obligation to pay on demand, not the identical money received, but a sum equal in legal value. Planters Bank v. Union Bank, 22 U. S. 16 Wall. 486 (21 L. ed. 473).

Where the drawer of a check upon one bank in favor of another delivers the check to a person with oral instructions to deposit it to the drawer's credit in the bank in favor of which it is drawn, and that person deposits it there to its own credit, as trustee for the drawer, and afterwards draws the money, the bank is liable to the drawer of the check for the money so paid. Sims v. U. S. Trust Co. 5 Cent. Rep. 386, 108 N. Y. 473.

Deposits are the sums of money received by the banks from depositors; they are not capital stock. Society for Savings v. Cuts, 78 U. S. 8 Wall. 686 (23 L. ed. 397).

Liable for collections made by its agents.

Where a bank, as a collection agent, receives a note for the purpose of collection, its position is that of an independent contractor, and the instruments employed by such bank in the business contemplated are its agents, and not the subagents of the owner of the note. Hoover v. Wise, 31 U. S. 306 (25 L. ed. 389).

Where a bank accepts a draft for collection, without any special contract as to its liability, and transmits it for collection to an agent, who collects and fails to account for the proceeds, the bank is liable for the amount collected. Pewer v. First Nat. Bank, 6 Mont. 331.

3 L. R. A.

claimed that they belonged to the receiver of the Fidelity National Bank.

At the trial in the Suffolk County Superior Court (James M. Barker, J.), judgment was ordered for defendants, and plaintiff alleged exceptions.

Further facts appear in the opinion.

Mr. Joshua D. Ball for plaintiff.

Mr. J. R. Ballard for defendants.

Knowlton, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

In the transaction upon which the plaintiff's claim is founded, the plaintiff and the Fidelity National Bank stood in the relation to each other of principal and agent. The business in which they were engaged was the collection of checks and drafts which belonged to the plaintiff or to the plaintiff's customers. Their contract contained in their letters shows: first, an offer to the plaintiff by the Fidelity National Bank of its "services for making collections in the West," and then a proposition to credit eight items at par, subject to payment, and to make collections, remitting weekly in New York ex-

Collection through clearing house.

Where a draft sent to a bank for collection was paid by the drawee by check, which the bank collected through the clearing house, and a memorandum was placed with the bank's cash to indicate that the proceeds of the draft was the property of the sender, and the next morning the bank was closed and the receiver credited such proceeds to the sender of the draft on the books of the bank, the sender can recover the same, as the fund was not so mingled that it could not be traced and identified. First Nat. Bank v. Armstrong, 22 Fed. Rep. 38.

Collection impressed with a trust.

A bank which receives for collection a draft or promissory note, and collects the money thereon, holds the same as trustee of the owner; and, in the event of insolvency, the trust character still adheres to the fund in the hands of the receiver, irrespective of other creditors, even though the owner had credit therefor in the bank books, and the money cannot be traced into any specific property. Thompson v. Gloucester City Sav. Inst. (N. J.) 8 Cent. Rep. 383. See Phila. Nat. Bank v. Dowd, ante, 693.

Collecting bank cannot apply collection upon debts due from other banks.

A bank receiving a note indorsed to it "for collection" cannot retain the proceeds to apply to a balance due from the bank sending it unless authorized by some course of dealing, or by some other matter outside of the indorsement. Sweeney v. Baster, 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 186 (17 L. ed. 631).

Where a bank indorses a draft for collection to another bank, which bank, in turn, indorses it also for collection to a third bank, and that bank collects it, it cannot apply the proceeds to a debt due it by the second or intermediate bank, that bank being insolvent, but the proceeds belong to the bank first making the indorsement, the restrictive indorsements giving notice of such ownership. City Bank v. Weism, 67 Tex. 331.

Cannot set off collection against amount due to it.

Where plaintiff bank sent to another bank a draft indorsed "for collection," with instructions to "collect and credit proceeds," which bank sent the draft to defendant bank, and the latter collected it and credited the amount to the bank from which it received it; and such last named bank suspended business after receiving notice of the credit, the bank making the collection, not having remitted the proceeds to the suspending bank, and said draft being sent only for collection and the title thereto being in the suspending bank, was liable to the bank owing it for its amount; and said collecting bank could not set it off against the amount due it from such suspending bank. Croleville First Nat. Bank v. Bank of Monroe, 22 Fed. Rep. 401.

change, without charge. This proposition was accepted by the plaintiff, and the Fidelity National Bank thereby became the plaintiff's agent to collect for it commercial paper. Under this arrangement the credit given for a check was merely provisional until the check was paid. It did not create a debt from the Fidelity National Bank to the plaintiff, and it did not change the ownership of the check. Levi v. Mo. Nat. Bank, 5 Dill. 104; Balbach v. Frelinghuysen, 15 Fed. Rep. 675.

In that respect their relations to each other were very different from those between a banker and a depositor, when checks are received on deposit as cash, and an absolute right to draw against them is given. White v. Miners Nat. Bank, 102 U. S. 658 [28 L. ed. 250]; Scott v. Ocean Bank, 28 N. Y. 289; Dickerson v. Wason, 47 N. Y. 439; Metropolitan Bank v. Loyd, 90 N. Y. 530; Ayres v. Farmers & M. Bank, 79 Mo. 431.

Their dealings under the contract were in conformity to this construction of it. It was a custom of the Fidelity National Bank to charge back to the plaintiff, and to return to it by mail, checks and drafts which were not paid. The indorsement of the check which the defendant collected was "for collection for Manufacturers National Bank of Boston, Mass." This indorsement would give notice of the plaintiff's title, to all parties into whose hands the check might come. Sweeney v. Easter, 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 173 [17 L. ed. 688]; Blaine v. Bourne, 11 R. I. 119; Ocell Bank v. Farmers Bank, 22 Md. 148; Merchants Nat. Bank v. Hanson, 33 Minn. 40.

In one particular the contract in question differed from an ordinary contract for the collection of a principal's money by an agent. Upon the collection of a draft or check the Fidelity National Bank was not required to keep the proceeds by itself, as the plaintiff's property, but might mingle it with its own money and make itself the plaintiff's debtor for the amount received. As soon as the proceeds became a part of the funds of the Fidelity National Bank under this arrangement, the plaintiff's right to control it as specific property was gone, and the plaintiff had instead a right to recover a corresponding sum of money.

The Fidelity National Bank ceased to do business on June 20, 1887, and on the following day a national bank examiner was put in charge of its assets by the comptroller of the currency, and he continued in charge until a receiver was appointed under the laws of the United States.

The check was not collected by the defendant until June 22, 1887. At that time the right of the Fidelity National Bank to mingle with its own funds the proceeds of a check collected for the plaintiff had terminated.

It was implied in the contract under which the collection was made that the Fidelity National Bank should continue in business as a national banking association. When it ceased to do banking business it lost the right to appropriate to itself the proceeds of the plaintiff's property, and to substitute for the money its own liability as for a debt. It had lost the power to perform its undertaking, and to make weekly remittances of the amounts collected; for its doors had been closed, and it was in the custody of the law. Since it could not make the remittances, it could not lawfully, under its contract, collect the plaintiff's check and take the proceeds as its own. Cragie v. Hadley, 99 N. Y. 188.

If a payment to the defendant as its agent and an entry of a credit by the defendant for the money would have passed the property to the Fidelity National Bank if it had then been regularly doing business, such a payment, made after it was insolvent and in charge of the comptroller, had no such effect. The implied condition in reference to which both parties contracted had ceased to exist. The continuance of the right of the bank to do business under the laws of the United States was of the very essence of the agreement which permitted it to receive the plaintiff's money as a credit to be accounted for. Audenried v. Bettley, 8 Allen, 302; Story, Agency, 486.

This has been expressly decided in the case of First National Bank v. First National Bank, 76 Ind. 561, which is very similar to the case at bar.

We are of opinion that the check in the hands of the defendant was the plaintiff's property until it was paid, and that the proceeds of it did not pass to the Fidelity National Bank, and that the plaintiff is entitled to recover.

Exceptions sustained.

MINNESOTA SUPREME COURT.

STATE, ex rel. E. E. DAVIDSON, Rept.,
v.

E. S. GORMAN, Judge of Probate, Appt.
(....Minn.....)

*The statute requiring, as a condition precedent to probate proceedings for the settlement of estates, the payment to the county treasurer of specified sums arbitrarily prescribed with reference to the value of the estate in question—held, unconstitutional, being contrary to those clauses requiring equality of taxation, and the dispensation of justice freely and without purchase.

(March 7, 1889.)

*Head note by DICKINSON, J.

3 L. R. A.

APPEAL by defendant, from an order of the Ramsey County District Court granting a mandamus requiring the Judge of Probate to proceed to the settlement of a certain estate. Affirmed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion. Messrs. Moses E. Clapp, Atty-Gen., J. J. Egan and M. E. Tyler, for appellant.

Messrs. Williams & Goodenow for respondent.

Dickinson, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The proceeding in which this appeal is taken was mandamus requiring the probate court to proceed to the settlement of the estate of Will-law F. Davidson, deceased, that court having refused so to do until payment should be made to the county treasurer, as prescribed by statute, of the sum of $5,000—the estate having been inventoried at more than $500,000. The district court held this requirement of the statute to be unconstitutional.

The statute (chap. 7, Gen. Stat. 1878, §§ 5, 7, 8 and 9, as amended by chapter 103, Gen. Laws 1885) prescribes annual salaries as compensation for the services of judges of probate "in lieu of the fees, costs and perquisites" theretofore allowed by law. Section 8 as amended in 1885 declares that "For the purpose of reimbursing the county treasury for the salaries provided to be paid in this Act to the judge of probate, it shall be the duty of each executor, administrator or guardian to pay or cause to be paid to the county treasurer for the use and benefit of the county in whose probate court proceedings are to be instituted, to settle the estate of any deceased person, minor, spendthrift or insane person, the following sums according to the value of the estate and property of such deceased person, minor, spendthrift or insane person, shown by the inventory and appraised: that is to say"—then follows a statement of the amounts to be thus paid, which are:

|          |                             |            |                     |            |
|----------|-----------------------------|------------|---------------------|------------|
| $ 10    | where the inventory exceeds | $ 2,000   | and does not exceed | $ 5,000   |
| $ 25    | where it exceeds            | $ 5,000   | " " " "             | $ 10,000  |
| $ 35    | " " "                       | $ 10,000  | " " " "             | $ 15,000  |
| $ 50    | " " "                       | $ 15,000  | " " " "             | $ 20,000  |
| $ 75    | " " "                       | $ 20,000  | " " " "             | $ 35,000  |
| $ 100   | " " "                       | $ 35,000  | " " " "             | $ 50,000  |
| $ 200   | " " "                       | $ 50,000  | " " " "             | $ 75,000  |
| $ 300   | " " "                       | $ 75,000  | " " " "             | $ 100,000 |
| $ 500   | " " "                       | $ 100,000 | " " " "             | $ 150,000 |
| $ 800   | " " "                       | $ 150,000 | " " " "             | $ 200,000 |
| $ 1,000 | " " "                       | $ 200,000 | " " " "             | $ 500,000 |
| $ 5,000 | " " "                       | $ 500,000 | " " " "             |            |

And in addition such executor, administrator or guardian shall pay all sums necessarily expended in serving or publishing notices required by law."

In section 9 it is declared that "No proceedings of any kind shall be had in any cause pending in such probate court for the settlement of any estate, subsequent to the return of the inventory showing the value of such estate, until" such payment shall have been made.

The two constitutional provisions claimed to stand in the way of such legislation are section 8 of article 1, which declares that every person "ought to obtain justice freely and without purchase; completely and without denial; promptly and without delay, conformably to the laws," and section 1 of article 9, providing that "All taxes to be raised in this State shall be as nearly equal as may be; and all property on which taxes are to be levied shall have a cash valuation and be equalized and uniform throughout the States."

We have no doubt that it is in the power of the Legislature to require suitors and litigants to pay reasonable, legally prescribed fees or costs. The constitutional right to obtain justice freely and without purchase, which is as ancient as Magna Charta, has not been understood to be a right to have judicial proceedings carried on without expense to the parties.

Adams v. Corrison, 7 Minn. 456; Willard v.

Redwood County, 22 Minn. 61; Perce v. Hallett, 13 R. I. 363; Hewlett v. Nutt, 79 N. C. 263; Harrison v. Willis, 7 Heisk. 85.

But the sums required by the Act to be paid into the county treasury must be required as taxes in the ordinary sense of that word and as it is used in the Constitution. They are not in any proper sense fees or costs assessed impartially or with regard to the expense occasioned or services performed. The amounts are regulated wholly, but arbitrarily, with regard to the value of the estate. They have no proximate relation to the amount of the compensation to be paid to the probate judge, nor to the other expenses of the court, nor to the nature or extent of the services which may become necessary in the proceedings. There is no necessary, natural or even probable correspondence between the sums to be paid (widely different in amounts with respect to estates of different values), and the nature of the proceedings, or the character or extent of the services, which may be required in the probate court.

It cannot be assumed upon any ground of probability that these proceedings or services will be different or greater in the case of an estate of the value of more than $500,000 than in one of the value of from $35,000 to $50,000; yet in the former case $5,000 must be paid; in the latter, $100.

The formerly existing law for the payment of fees for the services of the probate judge is superseded. The only compensation which the probate judge may now receive for the performance of his judicial duties is a salary, fixed in amount, and payable from the county treasury. That salary is in no manner dependent upon, or affected by, the amounts which may be paid into the county treasury under this law; and if such payments shall exceed the amount of the judge's salary, no reimbursement to the estate or persons making such payments is contemplated.

The money remains in the treasury, a part of the general county funds. The declared purpose of the statutory requirement here under consideration is "reimbursing the county treasury for the salaries provided to be paid in this Act to the judge of probate." The purpose for which such payments are required is strictly public in its nature, being directly "for the use and benefits of the county," as the law declares, and indirectly for the support of a court established by the Constitution, with exclusive original jurisdiction in certain matters of great and general public concern. Nor is it practically optional with executors or administrators, or those interested in the settlement of the estate of deceased persons, as to whether they will pay these exactions or not. If the law is valid, payment is practically necessary in the great majority of cases; and the mode adopted by the statute of securing payment by making that a condition precedent to the exercise of the functions of the probate court is as really compulsory, and perhaps as effectual in general, as the means generally employed to enforce the payment of taxes.

It is thus apparent that these exactions are taxes in the general and in the precise meaning of that word; and if the constitutional rule of approximate equality has been disregarded the law cannot stand.

It seems hardly necessary to refer particularly to the schedule of values and of amounts required to be paid, to show that the law wholly fails, in apportioning the burden imposed, to regard the constitutional rule of equality measured with reference to the value of the property taxed. In the first place estates not exceeding $2,000 in value are wholly exempt from any contribution. If estates are taxable in this manner at all such an exemption is contrary to the requirement of the Constitution. LeDuc v. Hastings (Minn.) 88 N. W. Rep. 808.

Again; while the schedule of sums to be paid is arranged somewhat with regard to values, yet this is done arbitrarily and not upon any rule of percentage; and the burden is very unequally distributed, as measured by the standard of values. To illustrate: an estate of a little less than $50,000 pays a tax of $100 or about one fifth of one per cent of the value. An estate ten times larger pays a tax fifty times larger ($5,000) or about 1 per cent of the valuation. An estate of $500,000 pays a tax of $1,000, while an estate inventoried at $500,001—$1 in excess of the former—pays a tax of $5,000.

While a large discretion must be allowed to the Legislature in devising schemes for taxation so as to secure equality as nearly as may be, it can hardly be doubted that in this case the constitutional requirement was not observed—very likely for the reason that it was not considered that these exactions were taxes within the meaning of the Constitution. We feel certain that they must be so regarded.

The same reason, for the conclusion that these exactions constitute an unconstitutional mode of taxation, lead also to the conclusion that the law is opposed to section 8, art. 1, of the Constitution. Suitors in this (probate) court of exclusive jurisdiction should not be required to pay, as a condition to their suits being entertained, a tax measured by the value of their property, and without regard to the nature or extent of the judicial proceedings which may be invoked or become necessary. That would be contrary to that clause of the Constitution which guarantees justice "freely and without purchase; completely and without denial."

Order affirmed.

TENNESSEE SUPREME COURT.

William PENNEGAR et al., Plffs. in Err.,
v.
STATE OF TENNESSEE.

(....Los....)

Citizens of Tennessee prohibited by its laws from marrying because of their adultery while one of them was married to another person, are not protected from a prosecution in that State, for lewdness in living together as man and wife, by leaving the State temporarily for the manifest purpose of evading its laws and contracting a marriage in Alabama, where such marriages are not prohibited.

(January 28, 1889.)

ERROR to the De Kalb County Circuit Court (Smallman, J.), to review a judgment convicting defendants of lewdness. Affirmed.

The facts appear in the opinion.

Messrs. Webb, Corley & Moore, for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. G.W. Pickle, Atty-Gen., for the State.

Folkes, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendants were indicted for lewdness, tried and convicted, and have appealed in error to this court.

The record discloses the following facts: E. N. Haney was divorced from her husband, John Haney, by a decree of the Circuit Court of De Kalb County, upon the petition of the husband, charging her with adultery with William Penegar. The decree adjudges the charge fully proven, and the divorce was granted the husband solely upon such charge.

The divorced wife and the partner in her guilt, shortly after the divorce went to Jackson County, State of Alabama, where they were married to each other, and on the next day after their marriage returned to De Kalb County, in this State, the place of their former and present residence, where they have been living and cohabiting openly and publicly, as man and wife, all within twelve months before the indictment found in this case: the divorced husband, John Haney, still living.

Section 8832, Mill. & V. Code, enacts: "When a marriage is absolutely annulled, the parties shall, severally, be at liberty to marry again; but a defendant who has been guilty of adultery shall not marry the person with whom the crime was committed, during the life of the former husband or wife."

The marriage, being prohibited by statute, is void, if solemnized in this State. 1 Bishop, Mar. & Div. §§ 46, 228; Carter v. Montgomery, 2 Tenn. Ch. 225; Owen v. Brackett, 1 Lea, 448.

In the last case cited this court held the woman not entitled to homestead where the marriage was had in this State in violation of the statute quoted above.

It is admitted that there is nothing in the laws of Alabama prohibiting the guilty divorced party from marrying the paramour.

The question, therefore, presented in this record is whether citizens of this State, prohibited by the statute referred to from marrying, can, by crossing over into a sister State, where such marriages are not inhibited, claim the benefit of the marriage there contracted, when they return at once to this State, having left it for the manifest purpose of evading our statute.

The question is of first impression in this State, and one not free from difficulty, by reason of certain well established principles, universally recognized in the law of marriage, which apparently would sustain such marriage, chief of which is that which says: "A marriage, valid where solemnized, is valid everywhere."

Adjudged cases are to be found which, under the supposed application of this rule, have sustained marriages identical with the one at bar in all of its essential facts, while others of equal respectability have reached a different result—to some or both of which we will refer later on. Before doing so, let us see what are the general principles controlling in cases of this character.

Marriage is an institution recognized and governed to a large degree by international law, prevailing in all countries, and constituting an essential element in all earthly society. The well being of society, as it concerns the relation of the sexes, the legitimacy of offspring, and the disposition of property alike demand that one State or Nation shall recognize the validity of marriage had in other States or Nations, according to the laws of the latter, unless some positive statute or pronounced public policy of the particular State demands otherwise.

It may be said, therefore, to be a rule of universal recognition in all civilized countries that in general a marriage valid where celebrated is valid everywhere. We say "in general," because there are exceptions to the rule as well established as the rule itself.

These exceptions or modifications of the general rule may be classified as follows: first, marriages which are deemed contrary to the law of nature, as generally recognized in Christian countries; second, marriages which the local law making power has declared shall not be allowed any validity, either in express terms or by necessary implication.

To the first class belong those which involve polygamy and incest; and in the sense in which the term incest is used, are embraced only such marriages as are incestuous according to the generally accepted opinion of Christendom, which plaintiff, a son born of the second marriage, to inherit, as the lawful heir of M., it was held that at the time of the second marriage the latter had no former wife living, within the meaning of said statute; that the Laws of New York State and the provision of the judgment prohibiting marriage had no effect, and M had a right to marry in another State whose laws did not prohibit a second marriage by one divorced; and that plaintiff was legitimate and so entitled to inherit. Moore v. Hegeman, 92 N. Y. 521.

As to whether after a judgment of divorce on the ground of the adultery of one of the parties, and the consequent prohibition against another marriage by the guilty party, a second marriage of the parties in this State will be valid, quære. Moore v. Hegeman, 92 N. Y. 521.

A divorce has been granted to the wife on the ground of the husband's adultery, and it was decreed that it should not be lawful for him to marry again until after her death.

He afterward and during her life married again in the State of Connecticut. Van Voorhis v. Brintnall, 86 N. Y. 18, 40 Am. Rep. 505.

The marriage being valid by the Laws of Connecticut, a child born from such a marriage is legitimate and entitled to inherit. Followed by the case of Thorp v. Thorp, 90 N. Y. 602, where the same rule is upheld. See also Cropey v. Ogden, 11 N. Y. 232; Moore v. Hegeman, 92 N. Y. 521.

How regarded in other States.

In Maryland and North Carolina it is held not to be a penalty, but a denial of relief and continuance of the incapacity to marry which arises from an existing marriage. Elliott v. Elliott, 38 Md. 355, 358; Williams v. Oates, 5 Ired. L. 535, 536; Calloway v. Bryan, 6 Jones, L. 570.

In these last States, therefore, the capacity to marry depending on domicile, the prohibition would have equal effect no matter where the party tried to marry, as long as such party retained his or her domicile. Williams v. Oates, 5 Ired. L. 535, 536.

Cohabitation under invalid second marriage is criminal.

Parties who cohabit under color of an invalid marriage are guilty of fornication, if such cohabitation is open and notorious. Searis v. People, 13 Ill. 508; Hood v. State, 55 Ind. 271; Com. v. Catlin, 1 Mass. 10; Milford v. Worcester, 7 Mass. 57; State v. Miller, 23 Minn. 353; State v. Smith, 33 Tex. 167; Kinney v. Com. 30 Gratt. 868.

This, however, is not a general rule but depends more or less on statutory provisions.

relates only to persons in direct line of consanguinity, and brothers and sisters.

The second class, i. e., those prohibited in terms by the statute, presents difficulties that are not always easy of solution, and have led to conflicting decisions. This class may be subdivided into two classes: first, where the statutory prohibition relates to form, ceremony and qualification, it is held that compliance with the law of the place of marriage is sufficient; and its validity will be recognized, not only in other States generally, but in the State of the domicile of the parties, even where they have left their own State to marry elsewhere, for the purpose of avoiding the laws of their domicile. Instead of being called a subdivision of the second class of exceptions, it would be more accurate to say that it is an exception to the exception, and falls within the operation of the general rule first announced, of "valid where performed, valid everywhere."

To the second subdivision of the second class of exceptions belong cases which, prohibited by statute, may or may not embody distinctive state policy, as affecting the morals or good order of society.

It is not always easy to determine what is a positive state policy. It will not do to say that every provision of a statute prohibiting marriage, under certain circumstances or between certain parties, is indicative of a state policy in the sense in which it is used in this connection. To so hold would be to overturn this most solemn relation, involving legitimacy of offspring, homestead dower, and the rights of property, in the face of the conclusions of approved text writers, and the concurrence of the adjudications in numerous cases, relating not only to forms or ceremonies and qualifications of the parties, but also to prohibited degrees of relationship, not incestuous in the common opinion of Christian countries, and relating to marriages between persons of different race and color. Each State or Nation has ultimately to determine for itself what statutory prohibitions are by it intended to be imperative, as indicative of the decided policy of the State concerning the morals and good order of society, to that degree which will render it proper to disregard the jus gentium of "valid where solemnized, valid everywhere."

The Legislature has, beyond all possible question, the power to enact what marriages shall be void in its own State, notwithstanding their validity in the State where celebrated, whether contracted between parties who were in good faith domiciled in the State where the ceremony was performed, or between parties who left the State of domicile for the purpose of avoiding its statutes, when they come or return to the State; and some of the States have in terms legislated on the subject. Where, however, the Legislature, as in our own State, has not deemed it proper or necessary to provide in terms what shall be the fate of a marriage valid where performed, but has in the particular case contented itself with merely prohibiting such marriage, the duty is devolved upon the courts of determining, from such legislation as is before it, whether the marriage in the other State is valid or void when the parties come into this State.

If, as we have seen, the statutory inhibition relates to matters of form or ceremony, and in some respects to qualification of the parties, the courts would hold such marriage valid here; but if the statutory prohibition is expressive of a decided state policy as a matter of morals, the courts must adjudge the marriage void here, as contra bonos mores.

Thus, in State v. Bell, 7 Baxt. 9, this court held that a marriage between a white person and a negro, valid in Mississippi, where celebrated, was void here, in a case where the parties were domiciled in Mississippi at the time of the marriage. This case is distinguishable from the case at Bar, not only by reason of the domicile in Mississippi, but also in that we have a highly penal statute on the subject of marriages between whites and blacks, passed in 1870, in amendment of the Act which prohibited such marriage theretofore, and by the very pronounced convictions of the people of this State as to the demoralization and debauchery involved in such alliances.

The decision in the above case is so manifestly in keeping with sound principles now well established that it need not be here fortified by citation of authority; but we pause to call attention to a case relied on by counsel for defendants, holding not only that such a marriage, solemnized in Rhode Island (where it was legal), between persons domiciled there, would be valid in Massachusetts, but that it was valid in the latter State where the parties had left Massachusetts and gone into Rhode Island for the express purpose of evading the Massachusetts law prohibiting such marriages, and returned to Massachusetts. Medway v. Needham, 18 Mass. 157.

This was certainly carrying the doctrine of "valid where performed, valid everywhere," to an extreme limit. The case has been much criticised—more so, indeed, than it deserves, as it seems to us; for while, to our mind, the result is startling, it is not out of harmony, in its argument, with the principles we have stated. The learned Judge delivering the opinion, in speaking of the exception to the general rule, says:

"Motives of policy may likewise be admitted into consideration of the extent to which this exception is to be allowed to operate. If without any restriction, then it might be that incestuous marriages might be contracted between citizens of a State where they were held unlawful and void, in countries where they were not prohibited, and the parties return to live in defiance of the religion and laws of their own country. But it is not to be inferred from a toleration of marriages which are prohibited merely on account of political expediency, that others, which would tend to outrage the principles and feelings of all civilized Nations, would be countenanced."

So that the difference between this case and State v. Bell, 7 Baxt. 9, is a difference in the "motives of policy" and ideas of "political expediency." We do not think, therefore, that the case is open to the criticism passed upon it by the Lord Chancellor in Brook v. Brook, 9 H. L. Cas. 193, which case is itself, with equal propriety, criticised by Gray, Ch. J., in Com. v. Lane, 118 Mass. 454, which contains a very able and elaborate review of the subject under consideration. Though unable to concur in some of the argument, and especially with the dictum that "A marriage which is prohibited here by statute, because contrary to the policy of our laws, is yet valid if celebrated elsewhere, according to the law of the place, even if the parties are citizens and residents of this Commonwealth, and have gone abroad for the purpose of evading our laws, unless the Legislature has clearly enacted that such marriages out of the State shall have no validity here."

Of course we refer to so much of the above as we have italicised, for it is the purest dictum; it being a case where there was no proof of an intent to evade the laws of Massachusetts, as shown by the judge himself, who concludes his opinion as follows: "Upon the principles and authorities stated in the earlier part of this opinion, it certainly cannot invalidate a subsequent marriage in another State, according to its laws, at least without proof that the parties went into that State, and were married there, with the intent to evade the provisions of the statutes of this Commonwealth. No such intent being shown in this case, we need not consider its effect, if proved, nor whether the indictment was in due form."

This case being an indictment for polygamy, where a wife, having obtained a divorce on account of the husband's adultery (in which case he was prohibited from marrying again without leave of the court), the husband married another woman in another State, without proof that the second wife ever resided in Massachusetts prior to her marriage, and without proof of a purposed evasion of Massachusetts law.

Recurring for a moment to Medway v. Needham, it may well be that, recognizing and applying the same general principles, the courts in different States may reach different results in the same class of cases, according as the general and fixed sentiment of the public in the respective States may differ in matters of public policy, and, if not, of "political expediency."

What might be deemed a mere regulation in one State might be regarded as a matter vitally affecting the morals and good order of society in another; so that what is pointed out as a reproach to the law by reason of the conflict in the reported cases from different States and Nations is in fact evidence of the universality of the general principles recognized as fundamental by all enlightened courts; the different results reached being due to the statutory enactments of the different States as construed by the courts thereof, which interpret the meaning, intent and scope of each particular statute on the subject of marriage in the light of the known policy of the State, deviating from the general principles of the international law of marriage only so far as they are constrained to do so by the terms of legislative enactment or by the manifest and distinctive policy of the State, as understood by the courts.

Now, believing, as we do, that the statute in question, which we are called upon to construe in the case at Bar, is expressive of a decided state policy not to permit the sensibilities of the innocent and injured husband or wife, who has been driven by the adultery of his or her consort to the necessity of obtaining a divorce, to be wounded, nor the public decency to be affronted, by being forced to witness the continued cohabitation of the adulterous pair, even under the guise of a subsequent marriage performed in another State for the purpose of avoiding our statute, and believing that the moral sense of the community is shocked and outraged by such an exhibition, we will not allow such parties to shield themselves behind a general rule of the law of marriage, the wisdom and perpetuity of which depends as much upon the judicious exceptions thereto, as upon the inherent right of the rule itself.

After what has been already said in the earlier part of this opinion, it is doubtless unnecessary to say that in reaching the conclusion just announced we do not intend in the slightest degree to encroach upon the principle which recognizes as valid marriages had in other States, where the parties have gone to such other States for the purpose of avoiding our own laws in matters of form, ceremony or qualification merely; but, confining ourselves to the facts of this case, we hold that where citizens of this State withdraw temporarily to another State, and there marry, for the purpose and with the intent of avoiding the salutary statute in question, passed in pursuance of a determined policy of the State, in the interest of public morals, peace and good order of society, such parties, upon their return to this State, and cohabiting as man and wife, are liable to indictment in the courts of this State for lewdness.

The case of Dickson v. Dickson, 1 Yerg. 110, has no concern with the point adjudged in the case at Bar. That case merely decides that a person divorced in Kentucky for adultery, and not by the laws of that State permitted to marry again, might contract a valid marriage in this State prior to the Act of 1835, which for the first time prohibited such marriages; and, having come to this State in good faith, married, and continued to reside here up to the time of her husband's death, she was held entitled to dower. The only instruction to be drawn from this case is that, notwithstanding our statute, these parties might have contracted a marriage in Alabama, where there is no similar statute, had they removed there in good faith, which would be valid in that State.

Putnam v. Putnam, 8 Pick. 433, is a case deciding directly contrary to the conclusion we have reached, and the facts in that case were identical with this. It is extremely brief, is unsatisfactory to us from every point of view, and is predicated entirely upon the case of Medway v. Needham, 16 Mass. 157, decided ten years before, which the court said was "binding upon it and the community until the Legislature shall see fit to alter it." While speaking of Medway v. Needham, the opinion continues:

"The court were aware of all the objections to the doctrine in that case, and knew it to be verata questio among civilians; but they adopted the rule of the law of England on this subject, on the same ground it was adopted there, namely: the extreme danger and difficulty of vacating a marriage which, by the laws of the country where it was entered into, was valid."

It is manifest that the effort to fortify Medway v. Needham by assuming that it is based on the law of England must fail if the House of Lords are competent to testify as to the state of the law in England on the subject; for we find that in Brook v. Brook, 9 H. L. Cas. 219, the Lord Chancellor, in speaking of the case of Medway v. Needham, as we have already seen, says: "It is entitled to but little weight, and is based upon decisions which relate to form and ceremony of marriage;" and adds: "If a marriage is absolutely prohibited in any country as being contrary to public policy, and leading to social evils, I think that the domiciled inhabitants of that country cannot be permitted, by passing the frontier, and entering another State in which the marriage is not prohibited, to celebrate a marriage forbidden by their own State, and, immediately returning to their own State, to insist on their marriage being recognized as lawful."

This is, in our opinion, the true doctrine, and we have quoted so much to show that the highest English Court does not hold to the principle upon which it is claimed by the Massachusetts Court the Medway Case is based. But with due deference we must be permitted to say that the decision in the case of Brook v. Brook goes further than we think the principle announced requires—further at least than we would be inclined to go—when, as was done in that case, it was held that, while both were resident in England, the man marrying his deceased wife's sister in Denmark, where such marriage was legal, and returning to England, the marriage was void there, because a marriage between parties so related was contrary to the laws of England.

Such a marriage would, we think, not fall within any of the exceptions to the general rule. It certainly cannot be said to be incestuous in the estimation of Christendom; and it would seem that under the policy of many of the States of this Union such a marriage is not immoral, nor tending to any social evil affecting the welfare of society. But, after all, it must be admitted that it was for that court to determine whether or not the law infringed was indicative of a decided and essential public policy in England; and the courts of that country would doubtless be as slow to approve our estimate of the public policy which condemns the marriage of the divorced adulterer, since the clause prohibiting such marriages was, upon the argument of Lord Palmerston, that the guilty party was preserved from ruin by such a marriage, stricken from the divorce bill in the House of Commons, as we are to accept their opinion that a marriage between a man and his deceased wife's sister is contrary to good morals.

We return for a moment to Putnam v. Putnam, supra, to note that the court in this case closes its opinion with this language: that "If it shall be found inconvenient or repugnant to sound principles [the italics are ours] it may be expected that the Legislature will explicitly enact that marriages contracted within another State, which, if entered into here, would be 2 L. R. A.

void, shall have no force within this Commonwealth." The Legislature did shortly thereafter so enact; whether because the doctrine laid down in the case was inconvenient, or because repugnant to sound principle, does not appear. In our view of the law, both considerations might well have moved the Legislature.

Stevenson v. Gray, 17 B. Mon. 198, is a case holding the doctrine of Putnam v. Putnam, and, after what we have said about the latter case, need not be further noticed here.

Van Storch v. Griffin, 71 Pa. 240, does not sustain the contention of counsel on the point decided, as there is nothing in the case to show that the parties went from one State to the other for the purpose of evading the laws of the one. It merely holds that the decree of divorce in New York, which forbade the respondent from marrying again during the life of the libellant, had no extra-territorial effect; so that what is said in the opinion about going from one State to the other for the purpose of evading the law of the State granting the divorce is dictum, pure and simple.

In full accord with the conclusion we have reached in the case at bar is Kinney v. Com. 80 Gratt. 858, where it was held that a marriage between a negro and a white person, had in the District of Columbia, for the purpose of evading the law of Virginia, was void upon the return.

To the same effect, see State v. Kennedy, 76 N. C. 251; Scott v. State, 89 Ga. 321; Dupre v. Boulard, 10 La. Ann. 411.

The intention to evade the law by going into another State was made the test of its validity in North Carolina, as will be seen by reference to the two cases of State v. Kennedy, 76 N. C. 251, above cited, and State v. Ross, Id. 242—both marriages between a white person and a negro. In Kennedy's Case, such intention being shown, the marriage was held void; while in Ross' Case, it being shown that there was no intent to return to North Carolina, though the parties afterwards did so, the defendant was held not guilty of fornication. This was, however, by a divided court, and is contrary to our own case of State v. Bell, 7 Baxt. 9.

We conclude this opinion, already too long, by a reference to Williams v. Oates, 5 Ired. L. 585, where Chief Justice Ruffin, in delivering the opinion of the court in a case very similar to our own, says: "Now, if the law of South Carolina allow of such a marriage, and although it be true that generally marriages are to be judged by the lex loci contractus, yet every country must so far respect its own laws and their operation on its own citizens as not to allow them to be evaded by acts in another country, purposely to defraud them." See also Whart. Conf. Laws, §§ 135, 181, 182.

Let the judgment of the Circuit Court be affirmed.

KENTUCKY COURT OF APPEALS.

J. Edwin ROWE, Exr., etc., Appt.,

v.

Jesse E. FOGLE et al.

(.....Ky.....)

Plaintiff's attorney has no lien on the land in controversy nor any claim against defendants personally for his fees under Kentucky General Statutes, chap. 5, § 15, giving an attorney a lien on a demand arising out of contract placed in his hands for collection, and on a judgment whether in contract or for a tort, and on property recovered, upon the dismissal in good faith of an action to enforce a contract for land, without any recovery or consideration except that each party shall pay his own costs although it is against the consent of such attorney.

(January 10, 1889.)

APPEAL by defendant, from a judgment of the Ohio County Circuit Court (L. P. Little, J.), in favor of plaintiffs in an action to enforce an alleged attorneys' lien. Reversed.

Mary A. Neittman and Charles W. Neittman, her husband, brought a suit by their attorneys J. E. Fogle and H. B. Kinsolving against H. D. Hinton, for the specific performance of a contract for the sale of land, and in case this could not be done, the first named plaintiff sought to recover the money she had paid upon the land. After issue was joined the parties compromised and settled the case; it being agreed that the suit should be dismissed, each party paying his or her own costs, and plaintiffs receiving no consideration for the agreement to dismiss. Notwithstanding the above agreement plaintiffs' attorneys submitted the case, after which defendant's attorney moved to set aside the submission, filing in support of the motion an affidavit showing the agreement. Pending this motion Fogle and Kinsolving, plaintiffs' attorneys, caused a rule to issue against Rowe, as executor of Hinton, who had died in the mean time, and against whom the suit had been revived, to show cause why he should not pay them a fee of $100 and why they should not be adjudged to have a lien on the land in controversy to secure the payment of their fees. The trial court sustained the claim and adjudged that the attorneys had a lien on the land for their fees, and also gave them a personal judgment against Rowe, as executor; and he appealed to the superior court, where the judgment below was reversed, and the case was then brought to this court.

Messrs. Edward W. Hines and J. Edwin Rowe, for appellant:

The Legislature never intended to prevent a plaintiff from dismissing his action without the consent of his attorney. This court expressly refused to sanction such a doctrine prior to the statute (Evans v. Bell, 6 Dana, 480); and in the absence of anything in the statute showing unmistakably that such was the legislative intention the court will not give the statute such a construction.

The court has held that in so far as the statute gives a lien upon the demand in suit it does 2 L. R. A.

not apply to unliquidated demands (Wood v. Anders, 5 Bush, 602); and the reasoning of the court in that case will prevent the application of the statute to any disputed claim, especially where the plaintiff agrees to dismiss for no other consideration than the agreement of the defendant to pay his own costs.

The courts all agree that the parties should as far as possible be allowed to settle their disputes in their own way, the courts going no farther than to prevent collusive settlements for the purpose of defeating attorneys.

Weeks, Attorneys at Law, § 879; Overton, Law of Liens, § 59; Elwood v. Wilson, 21 Iowa, 527.

The rule permitting an attorney to prosecute a suit after it has been settled by his client, if it be established, ought not to be extended beyond an undisputed debt.

Hutchinson v. Pettes, 18 Vt. 614. See Platt v. Jerome, 60 U. S. 19 How. 384 (15 L. ed. 623); Brown v. Comstock, 10 Barb. 68; Young v. Dearborn, 27 N. H. 324, 331; Simmons v. Almy, 108 Mass. 33; Henckey v. Chicago, 41 Ill. 186.

Mr. J. E. Fogle for appellees.

Pryor, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The lien asserted or allowed an attorney for his services in this State is purely statutory. Where the demand arises out of contract, and is placed in the hands of an attorney, to be collected by suit or otherwise, the attorney has a lien; or where the claim is reduced to judgment, whether in contract or for a tort, or the property is recovered, the attorney has his lien. Gen. Stat. § 15, chap. 5.

The payment by the debtor to the creditor of a claim arising out of contract, with notice that it is in the hands of an attorney for collection, will not deprive the attorney of his lien, and an action brought by the attorney would be deemed sufficient notice.

Suppose, however, that no action is brought, and the plaintiff regards his claim as worthless, and proposes to withdraw it from the attorney or to dismiss it after suit has been instituted, is the statute giving the lien to be so construed as to prevent an abandonment of the claim, if done in good faith, and not with a view of defeating the lien? Such a construction would result in useless litigation, and compel the payment by the defendant to the attorney of the plaintiff of his fee, or to submit to a litigation upon an alleged cause of action, when both parties plaintiff and defendant agree that no recovery can be had.

Where the defendant has paid, or agrees to pay, the plaintiff for withdrawing the suit, or the claimant receives a consideration for forbearing to sue when the claim is in the hands of the attorney, and is known to the defendant, the rule would be different. In cases of tort before judgment, this court has held, and still holds, that the statute under which such liens are asserted does not prevent the parties from settling the litigation; and in such a case the attorney must look alone to his client for compensation.

In this case both the parties plaintiff and defendant agreed that the action in which the lien is asserted should be dismissed, each party paying its own costs. Nothing was recovered by the defendant from the plaintiff, and no recovery had by the latter, and there is nothing in the record showing that the object to be accomplished was to defeat the claim of the attorneys for their services. The plaintiff in good faith dismissed the action, and there was no reason for compelling the defendant to pay the attorneys of the plaintiff $100, or any other sum, for their services. They must prosecute their claim against the plaintiff, and not the defendant.

The judgment below is reversed, with directions to discharge the rule.

IOWA SUPREME COURT.

Hervey LINDLEY, Appt.,

v.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK of Waterloo.

(.....Iowa.....)

1. A telegram by a bank offering to pay a draft by a certain person for $2,000 means to pay it at the bank's place of business, and imposes no obligation to accept a draft for $2,000 "with exchange" on another place.

2. A custom which is not pleaded cannot be considered as modifying an unambiguous written promise on which an action is based.

(January 23, 1899.)

APPEAL by plaintiff, from a judgment of the Blackhawk County District Court (Couch, J.), sustaining a demurrer to the petition in an action to recover upon an alleged acceptance of a draft. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. F. C. Platt, for appellant:

A letter or telegram written within a reasonable time before or after the date of a bill of exchange, describing it in terms not to be mistaken, and promising to accept it, is, if shown to the person who afterwards takes the bill on the credit of the letter or telegram, a virtual acceptance, binding the person who makes the promise.

Edwards, Bills & Notes, § 407; Miltonberger v. Cooke, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 421 (21 L. ed. 864); Coolidge v. Payson, 15 U. S. 2 Wheat. 66 (4 L. ed. 185); Schimmelpennich v. Bayard, 26 U. S. 1 Pet. 264 (7 L. ed. 188); Whilden v. Merchants & P. Bk., 64 Ala. 1; Lovry v. Adams, 23 Vt. 180; Boyce v. Edwards, 29 U. S. 4 Pet. 111 (7 L. ed. 799).

An acceptance may be either qualified or general. If qualified, "It is an engagement to pay a bill according to the tenor of the acceptance," if general, it is "a promise to pay according to the tenor of the bill."

Edwards, Bills & Notes, § 405; Bayley, Bills, chap. 6, § 1.

Acceptances have been held to be general or absolute wherein the amount of the draft is named; and none can be found where a statement of the denomination or amount of a draft

NOTE.—Promises to accept equivalent to acceptances.

er
nt
b.
ir-
p-
5; 10
to
to
v.
ir,
il-ry
y.
in st.
o.
in.

30 Ohio St. 137.

To constitute a breach of an agreement to accept a bill, the bill must be tendered to the drawee for acceptance. Universal Permanent Building Society v. Kilpatrick, 7 V. R. L. 58 (1881), cited in 2 Rand. Com. Paper, 244.

Agreement by telegram.

An agreement by telegram to accept a bill has been held to be a sufficient acceptance, in Alabama (1876, Code, § 2102, Act 1841); Arkansas (1874, Rev. Stat. § 551); Idaho (1874, 1875, Rev. Laws, 653, § 8); Dakota (1877, Rev. Code, § 1899); California (1880, Hittell's Code & Stats. § 8197); so by the proposed Civil Code in New York (§ 1701).

And this is further provided by statute in many States, if the promise is an unconditional one: Arizona (1877, C. L. § 8471); District of Columbia (1867, Rev. Code, 134, §§ 6, 7, 8); Kansas (1879, C. L. chap. 14, § 10); Nevada (1878, 1 C. L. chap. 5, § 8); New York (1889, 1 Rev. Stat. 768, § 8, 2 Rev. Stat. 1882, p. 2228);

§ L. R. A.

Mississippi (1880, Rev. Code, § 1128); Utah (1882, Laws, 60, § 76); Washington Territory (1881, Code, § 2202); 2 Rand. Com. Paper, 242.

Acceptance payable at banking house.

An acceptance may be made payable at a banking house, which amounts to an authority to the bankers to pay it out of the acceptor's funds in their hands. Byles, Bills, 198; Kymer v. Laurie, 18 L. J. Q. B. 218; 2 Rand. Com. Paper, 270.

He is not, however, liable to the holder of the acceptance, unless he has assented to its being made payable at his banking house (Byles, Bills, 198; Williams v. Everett, 14 East, 562; Yates v. Bell, 3 Barn. & Ald. 643; Wedlake v. Hurley, 1 Crompt. & J. 53); and he may show in defense that he was ready to pay at that place. Green v. Goings, 7 Barb. 652; 2 Rand. Com. Paper, 270.

Local usages and customs must be specially pleaded.

A general usage or custom need not be pleaded but may be given in evidence at the trial, or be judicially noticed by the court for the first time on appeal. Coyle v. Gozler, 2 Cranch, C. Ct. 625; Goldsmith v. Sawyer, 46 Cal. 209; Templeman v. Biddle, 1 Harr. (Del.) 522; Stultz v. Dickey, 5 Binu. 286; Carson v. Blazer, 2 Binu. 475.

As to pleading customs in England, see Hawkins v. Wallis, 2 Wils. 173; Tewkesbury v. Bricknell, 1 Taunt. 141; Morewood v. Wood, 4 T. R. 157; Griffin v. Blandford, Cowp. 62; Peter v. Kendal, 6 Barn. & C. 708; Paddock v. Forrester, 3 Man. & G. 908; 8 Scott. N. R. 715; Lawson, Usages & Customs, § 64, p. 112.

But the custom of a particular place and local commercial usages must be pleaded; and all requisite to its validity should be averred. Wallace v. Morgan, 23 Ind. 399; Governor v. Withers, 5 Gratt. 24; Jackson v. Henderson, 3 Leigh, 196; Dutch Flat Water Co. v. Mooney, 12 Cal. 534.

It is not sufficiently pleaded by a single averment that it has been constantly and uniformly recognized and abided by in a certain city in similar cases. Antomarchi v. Russell, 63 Ala. 356.

or note to be drawn is held to change the character of the contract from a general to a qualified or conditional acceptance or guaranty.

U. S. v. Bank of Metropolis, 40 U. S. 15 Pet. 377 (10 L. ed. 774); Coffman v. Campbell, 87 Ill. 98; Edwards, Bills & Notes, § 424; Townsend v. Sumrall, 27 U. S. 2 Pet. 170 (7 L. ed. 386).

Appellee seeks to avoid liability because Baro drew his draft with exchange on New York; but the addition of one or two words to the telegram of acceptance would have expressed the condition it seeks to avail itself of, and under the rules it cannot now complain.

A contract susceptible of two constructions will not by preference be given the construction which will make it invalid.

Standard Oil Co. v. Schofield, 16 Abb. N. Cas. 372; Lowry v. Adams, 22 Vt. 160; Topliff v. Topliff, 122 U. S. 121 (30 L. ed. 1110).

"A custom known to the parties, whereby the meaning of the certain terms used in an instrument is fixed, may be shown by oral evidence;" and in such case the custom need not be averred in the pleading.

Haddock v. Woods, 46 Iowa, 433; Haddock v. Citizens Nat. Bank, 53 Iowa, 542; Woods v. Miller, 55 Iowa, 163; Huse v. Hamblin, 29 Iowa, 501; Pilmer v. Branch of State Bank at Des Moines, 19 Iowa, 112; Smith v. Clark, 12 Iowa, 32; Adams v. Otterback, 56 U. S. 15 How. 539 (14 L. ed. 805).

Messrs. Boies, Husted & Boies, for appellee:

No contract exists between the drawee and the payee of a bill of exchange until the drawee has accepted it.

Albina Nat. Bank v. Fourth Nat. Bank of N. Y. 46 N. Y. 82; First Nat. Bank of Canton v. Dubuque Southwestern R. Co. 52 Iowa, 378.

The acceptor of a bill is not liable for exchange when not required to pay same upon its face. His agreement is to pay at the place on which the bill is drawn.

3 Rand. Com. Paper, § 1714; 1 Parsons, Notes & Bills, p. 650; 2 Daniel, Neg. Inst. 456.

The draft sued on did, by its terms, require appellee to pay a certain sum, in excess of the amount mentioned in its telegram, and in excess of the amount which it was legally obligated to pay by its promise therein contained.

When a party promises to pay a bill of exchange, thereafter to be drawn for a specified amount, before such promise will be regarded an acceptance of the bill, it must appear that the amount thereof is within the limit, and that the undertaking of the drawee, as contained in his promise, is in no manner enlarged by the terms of such bill.

Parsons, Cont. 7th ed. foot p. 308; Merchants Bank of Canada v. Griswold, 73 N. Y. 472-479; First Nat. Bank of Lacon v. Bensley, 2 Fed. Rep. 609; Brinkman v. Hunter, 39 Am. Rep. 492, 73 Mo. 172.

Before appellant can maintain an action upon the special contract of appellee, he must bring himself strictly and literally within its terms.

Uster Co. Bank v. McFarlan, 5 Hill, 432; Gates v. Parker, 48 Maine, 544; Nevada Bank v. Lucas, 139 Mass. 438; Murdock v. Mills, 11 Met. 5-10.

That the agreement of appellee, in the case 2 L. R. A.

at bar, is not an agreement to accept bills generally, is clear.

Brinkman v. Hunter, 39 Am. Rep. 492, 73 Mo. 172; Daniel, Neg. Inst. § 561; Bisell v. Lewis, 4 Mich. 450; Nelson v. First National Bank of Chicago, 48 Ill. 39.

Reed, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

On the 17th of November, 1887, George Baro sent a despatch from Los Angeles, Cal., to defendant, directing it to transmit $2,000 by telegraph to plaintiff at Los Angeles, and charge the amount to his account, he having at the time a deposit of a larger amount with defendant. On the next day defendant's cashier telegraphed to plaintiff that the bank would pay Baro's draft on it for $2,000. On the receipt of that despatch at Los Angeles, Baro drew his draft, and delivered it to plaintiff in payment of an indebtedness he was owing him. The following is a copy of the draft:

$2,000. Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 18, 1887.

At sight pay to order of Hervey Lindley, of Los Angeles, California, two thousand dollars, with exchange on New York, for value received, and charge to account of George Baro.

To First National Bank, Waterloc, Iowa.

The draft was subsequently presented, but defendant refused to accept or pay it. On the same day on which he sent the despatch, the cashier also wrote to plaintiff that the bank would pay Baro's draft for $2,000, but the letter was not received by plaintiff until after he had taken the draft. On the 28th of November, which was after the draft had been presented and refused, he also wrote to plaintiff that the bank had been enjoined from paying, and that but for such injunction it would have paid it when presented. The foregoing facts are alleged in the petition, and further it is alleged that the exchange provided for in the draft would have amounted to $2. The petition is in three counts. The first and second counts are drawn on the theory that the telegram and letter of the 18th of November amounted to an acceptance. The third count states a cause of action on the breach of the contract to accept.

The ground of the demurrer is that the draft drawn is materially different from that which defendant agreed to pay, requiring the payment of a greater sum of money. Counsel for appellee concede that, if the draft had called for the payment of but $2,000, the telegram, which was received by plaintiff before he took the draft, would have amounted to an acceptance; but their position is that, as the draft drawn required the payment of a greater sum, the promise of the bank to pay cannot be regarded as an acceptance of it, and its refusal to pay the amount demanded was not a breach of its contract.

The contention of counsel for appellant was that the promise to pay was in effect a general acceptance, and defendant was therefore bound to pay according to the tenor of the draft, and that the request to pay exchange related merely to its tenor. That the acceptor is by a general acceptance bound to pay the bill according to its terms, is certainly true. Edwards, Bills & Notes, chap. 9, § 1. But the term "tenor of the bill," as used in the books and cases relates merely to the time and manner of payment.

Under a general acceptance the acceptor is bound to pay at the maturity of the bill as fixed by its terms, and in the manner designated. He is also bound to pay the amount named in the bill; and if it demands the payment of exchange, he is liable for the amount thereof. In such case, the acceptance being general, the terms of the contract are to be gathered from the language of the bill. But when he offers, in advance of the drawing of a bill, to accept or pay it, his undertaking is to be determined from the language of its offer. If a bill is drawn corresponding in terms with his offer, and is received by another in reliance on the offer, he will be liable from that time as an acceptor. But the bill drawn must correspond in terms with his offer, or no such result will follow. His liability, if any, is created by his contract, and it is impossible that he should be bound by conditions or stipulations to which he never gave his consent.

Judged by this rule, it is manifest that defendant is not liable. Its offer was to pay a specified sum on the draft of Baro. The offer implied, of course, that the payment was to be made at Waterloo, that being its place of business. But the draft required either that the money should be paid in New York, or that an additional amount should be paid to cover the exchange. In effect it was a draft for $2,002, while defendant's promise was to pay one for $2,000. If the draft had been for $2,500, or any larger sum, it would hardly be contended that defendant was bound to pay it; yet the principle would not be different.

Our attention has not been called to any case involving the same state of facts; but the principle that one who promises in advance to accept or pay a bill of exchange is bound upon such promise only when the bill in its terms conforms to the terms of his offer, is well settled, and is founded in sound reason. Brinkman v. Hunter, 78 Mo. 172; Uster Co. Bank v. McFarlan, 5 Hill, 432; Gates v. Parker, 43 Maine, 544; Murdock v. Mills, 11 Met. 5.

The letter of the 28th of November was not an acceptance or promise to pay the draft, but was explanatory merely of the refusal.

It was urged in argument that it is a custom of bankers, in paying drafts drawn under like circumstances, to pay exchange in addition to the face of the paper, and hence that defendant's promise was impliedly a promise to pay with exchange. It is sufficient to say, with reference to that claim, that the custom is not pleaded. The action is upon the promise as written, and its language is unambiguous. The words made use of import a promise to pay $2,000. Without some averment that the words made use of have a meaning different from their ordinary signification, it cannot be assumed that the undertaking was broader than it expressed.

We have no occasion to inquire whether the custom, if pleaded, could be shown for the purpose of modifying or explaining the undertaking. As we reach the conclusion that upon the facts alleged defendant is not liable, it is not necessary to consider the question as to the ruling of the district court in striking out portions of the petition. The error, if one was committed, in no manner affects the result.

Affirmed.

MARYLAND COURT OF APPEALS.

David STEWART, Appt.

v.

Albert L. GORTER.

(....Md....)

1. A lease for fourteen years, with a covenant to renew for another fourteen years, especially when the covenant is that the second shall contain the same covenants as the first, is a lease for a longer period than fifteen years, within the meaning of the Maryland Act of 1888 making leases for more than fifteen years redeemable at the lessee's option, after the expiration of ten years.

2. The lessee cannot waive his option of redemption by any agreement in the lease, which option is given by the Maryland Act of 1888, providing that rents on leases for more than fifteen years shall be redeemable at any time after the expiration of ten years, the Act not being intended for the exclusive benefit of the lessee, but being based on grounds of public policy.

(February 8, 1889.)

A PPEAL by defendant, from a pro forma decree of the Circuit Court of Baltimore City in favor of plaintiff in an action for the specific performance of a contract. Reversed.
2 L. R. A.

Argued before Miller, Stone, Robinson, Irving, Bryan and McSherry, JJ.

Gorter, on April 10, 1888, leased a lot of land in Baltimore City, belonging to himself, to one Mincher for the term of fourteen years from that date for the annual ground rent of $120.

This rent was, by the terms of the lease, redeemable after ten years at 5 per cent.

Stewart, on April 12, 1888, agreed to convey in fee a lot owned by him, to Gorter. Stewart's lot was valued in the agreement at $2,400, and he agreed to convey the same to Gorter as soon as Gorter gave him his reversionary interest in the annual ground rent of $120 on the lot leased to Mincher, which rent Gorter stated to Stewart to be redeemable at 5 per cent, making it worth $2,400 to Stewart. When Gorter tendered to Stewart the $120 ground rent, Stewart refused to convey to Gorter his lot in fee, on the ground that the lease to Mincher creating Gorter's ground rent was made subsequent to the passage of the Act of 1844, chap. 485, as amended by chap. 395 of the Acts of 1888, and that consequently said ground rent could be redeemed at 6 per cent, making Gorter's rent worth only $2,000 instead of $2,400.

Further facts appear in the opinion.

Messrs. John Stewart, Robert Riddell Brown, and David Stewart for appellant.

Messrs. James P. Gorter and H. Arthur Stump for appellee.

[Stone, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The question presented in this case is the true construction of the Acts of 1884, chap. 485, and 1888, chap. 395, relating to leases. It appears that on the 10th of April, 1888, Gorter leased a lot of ground in Baltimore City to Mincher for a term of fourteen years, and the rent reserved was $120.

In this lease there is a covenant on the part of the lessor for the renewal of the lease for the further term of fourteen years, with the same covenants that are in the original lease. There is a further covenant on the part of the lessor that at any time after the expiration of ten years from the date of lease, upon payment to him of a sum of money equal to the capitalization of the rent at 5 per cent—that is to say of the sum of $2,400, the property should be released.

There is also in the lease an agreement made by the lessee that he would not avail himself of any right that he might have by virtue of any Maryland statute to redeem the rent at a less sum than that fixed in the lease.

The Act of 1888, as applicable to this case, is in these words: "All rents reserved by leases or sub-leases of lands made in this State after April 5, 1888, for a longer period than fifteen years, shall be redeemable at any time after the expiration of ten years from the date of such lease or sub-lease at the option of the tenant, after a notice of six months to the landlord, for a sum of money equal to the capitalization of the rent reserved, at a rate not to exceed 6 per cent."

The two questions presented for our consideration are: first, whether the Law of 1888, above referred to, is applicable to this lease; and secondly, if said Act is applicable to this case, whether the lessee has waived or can waive his option of redemption at 6 per cent.

The first of these questions is easily answered. The Act of 1888 is applicable to the case before us. A lease for fourteen years, with a covenant to renew for another fourteen years, is, in effect, a lease for a longer period than fifteen years; more especially when the covenant is that the second lease shall contain the same covenants that the first did; that is, that the lease should be renewed for another fourteen years, thus making the lease of indefinite duration, and placing it upon the same footing as an ordinary long lease. The leases for less than the fifteen years mentioned in the Act mean leases without the covenant for renewal, and which were intended by the parties to end at the expiration of the fifteen years or a less period of time.

The second question is equally easy of solution. It resolves itself into the question whether a party by his deed can be estopped from claiming the benefit of the Act of 1888, a general law of the State.

If the Act of 1884, as amended by the Act of 1888, had been passed for the exclusive benefit of lessees, there might be some color at least, to the claim set up that Mincher could waive the benefit of the capitalization clause of the Act of 1888. But such is not the fact. The Act of 1888 was the result of a well grounded belief that these long leases, with their covenants of renewal, were injurious to the prosperity of the City of Baltimore, and that sound public policy demanded that all leases hereafter made, if for more than fifteen years, might be ended at the option of the tenant or lessee upon paying the capitalization of his ground rent at 6 per centum. It was the system of these long leases, irredeemable until the end of the term, that the Legislature wished to break up, rather than for any special consideration for the lessees, that caused the act.

The lessee, therefore, cannot be estopped by any covenant, however strongly worded, from claiming the right guaranteed him by this Act. It would be a virtual repeal of the Act if covenants and agreements were allowed to supersede its express provisions.

The pro forma decree of the court below must therefore be reversed, with costs.

Decree reversed, with costs.

INDIANA SUPREME COURT.

CITY OF ANDERSON et al., Appts.,

v.

James H. EAST.

(.....Ind.....)

1. A city is not liable for damages caused by the falling of a wall left standing after a building which belonged to a private owner was burned, although it had been notified of the fact that the wall was dangerous.

2. A recovery can be had against a municipal corporation only where it negligently performs or negligently fails to perform a duty in its nature ministerial, and then only in cases where the ministerial duty is imposed by law.

NOTE.—Municipal liability governed by statute.

A public corporation is not liable to an action by individuals, unless it be given by statute. White v. Charleston, 2 Hill (S. C.) 571.

A corporation cannot be impliedly liable to a greater extent than it could make itself by express corporate vote or action. 2 Dillon, Mun. Corp. 878.

It is not liable in case, or other form of civil action, for neglect of public duty, unless such liability be expressly declared by statute. State v. Hancock Co. Comrs. 11 Ohio St. 190; Hedges v. Madison Co. 1 Gilm (Ill.) 567; Freeholders of Sussex Co. v. Strader, 3 Harr. (N. J.) 108; Van Epps v. Mobile Co. Comrs. 25 Ala. 460; Larkin v. Saginaw Co. 11 Mich. 2 L. R.A.

88; Bray v. Wallingford, 20 Conn. 416, 419; 2 Dillon, Mun. Corp. 872.

In New England there may be instances in which corporations are civilly liable for neglect of duty without an express statute to that effect. Oliver v. Worcester, 102 Mass. 489, 496; Blodgett v. Boston, 8 Allen, 237; Stickney v. Salem, 3 Allen, 874; Childsey v. Canton, 17 Conn. 475, 478; approving Mower v. Leicester, 9 Mass. 247; Reed v. Belfast, 20 Maine, 246; 2 Dillon, Mun. Corp. 873.

City not liable for damage from falling wall.

In Georgia a city corporation, with the usual power to keep streets in repair and to remove build-

1. The owner of a building which is burned is liable for damages caused by the falling of one of its walls which he had negligently left standing, knowing it to be dangerous.
2. The promise of a city officer to take charge of and, if necessary, take down a wall of a burned building, does not relieve the owner of the promise from liability for damages caused by the fall when he has negligently left it standing.
3. General averments of negligence are sufficient as against a demurrer.

(January 23, 1884.)

APPEAL by defendants, from a judgment of the Madison County Circuit Court (Moss, J.), in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover damages for injuries done to plaintiff's building by the falling of a wall left standing after a fire. Reversed in part and affirmed in part.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Eli B. Goodykoontz, Frank P. Foster, Charles L. Henry, H. C. Ryan and H. P. Schlater for appellants.

Messrs. Pierce & Gerard for appellee.

ELLIOTT, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendants covered in their defenses in the trial court, and here separately assign errors. Consequently there are two branches of the case, involving essentially different questions—one in which the rights of the City of Anderson are involved, and another which involves the rights of the appellant, Dozey. It is proper, as well as convenient, to first consider and dispose of that branch of the case in which the rights of the municipal corporation are involved.

In ing and obstructions thereon, was held to be liable to a person injured by the fall of the high brick wall of a burned house, on private property, at the line of the sidewalk. It was negligent in the discharge of its duty to have the wall abated or made secure. The court admitted that if the wall was firm and had been thrown down by a tempest, there would be no liability. Parker v. Macon, 20 Ga. 523.

But in Louisiana a precisely opposite conclusion, as to the liability of a corporation for the falling of an unsafe wall, was reached in Hove v. New Orleans, 12 La. Ann. 481, 3 Dillon, Mun. Corp. 481.

A building so negligently constructed or so greatly decayed that it is likely to fall upon an adjoining tenement, or upon persons lawfully making use of easements near it, is a nuisance. Mullen v. McJohn, 87 N. Y. 247, 15 Am. Rep. 485—case of a suit for an actual injury. Reg. v. Watts, 1 Fulk. 357; Kappes v. Appel, 14 Bl. App. 170; Gorham v. Orem, 15 Mass. 224; Grove v. Port Wayne, 43 Ind. 400; Conley, Tort, 184.

Mun. Corp. 378.

What necessary to create liability.

To create a liability to a civil action for damages it is fundamentally necessary that the act done which is injurious to others must be within the scope of the corporate powers as prescribed by charter or positive enactment; it must not be ultra vires in the sense that it is not within the power or authority of the corporation to act in reference to 2 L. R. A.

The judgment against the City of Anderson rests entirely upon the second paragraph of the complaint, and, if that is bad, the judgment is entirely destitute of foundation. Our first step, therefore, is to ascertain and determine whether the second paragraph of the appellee's complaint states a cause of action against the City of Anderson. That paragraph of the complaint contains three material facts:

On the 18th day of November, 1884, the plaintiff was the owner of a building in the City of Anderson. Ten feet distant from the plaintiff's building was a large brick structure, with walls thirty feet in height. That building was owned by the appellant, Charles T. Dozey. On the night of November 18, 1884, Dozey's building was burned, but the brick walls remained standing. Dozey's building stood on the line of a public alley sixteen feet in width. The cornice of the Dozey building projected over this alley. The cornice and wall of the burned building fell upon the plaintiff's building, and destroyed it. The city knew that the wall was dangerous, and likely to fall, and was notified of that fact, as was Dozey. Notwithstanding the notice and knowledge, the defendants negligently permitted the walls, weakened and made dangerous by the fire, to remain unsupported for nine days, when they fell, crushing the plaintiff's building.

Our judgment is that no cause of action is stated against the city. A municipal corporation is an instrumentality of government, and is not liable for a failure to exercise legislative or judicial powers, nor for an improper or negligent exercise of such powers. Wheeler v. Plymouth (Ind.) 10 N. E. Rep. 533; Dozey v. Sullivan, 119 Ind. 451, 11 West. Rep. 310; it under any circumstances. Broom, Com. Law Commentaries, 222; 2 Dillon, Mun. Corp. 377.

But if the wrongful act be not in this sense ultra vires, it may be the foundation of an action of tort against the corporation, either when it was done by its officers under its previous direct authority, or has been ratified or adopted, expressly or impliedly, by it, or when it was done by the officers, agents or servants of the corporation, in the execution of corporate powers or the performance of corporate duties of a ministerial nature. Thayer v. Boston, 19 Pick. 511; Anthony v. Adams, 1 Met. 284; Baker v. Boston, 12 Pick. 184; Perley v. Georgetown, 7 Gray, 464; Howell v. Buffalo, 15 N. Y. 612; Baltimore v. Eschbach, 18 Md. 270; State v. Kirkley, 20 Md. 68, 110; Harvey v. Rochester, 85 Barb. 177; Leman v. Mayor etc. of N. Y. 3 Bow. 414; Phila. etc. M. Co. v. Quigley, 62 U. S. 21 How. 303 (10 L. ed. 73); 3 Dillon, Mun. Corp. 378.

Not liable for misfeasance or neglect of officers.

If the duty, though devolved by law upon an officer elected or appointed by the corporation, is not a corporate duty, in performing it the officers of the corporation do not act for the corporation, and the corporation is not responsible unless expressly declared to be by statute for the omission to perform it or for the manner in which it is performed. 2 Dillon, Mun. Corp. 373; Hines v. City of Charlotte, 1 L. R. A. 344 note.

When impliedly liable.

Municipal or chartered corporations are considered to be impliedly liable for acts done in what is termed their private or corporate character, and from which they derive some special or immediate advantage or emolument, not as to those done in their public capacity, as governing agencies, in the discharge of duties imposed for the public or general (not corporate) benefit. Oliver v. Worcester, 107 Mass. 490, 499; Richmond v. Long, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 273; Western Savings Fund Society v. Phila. M. Co. 178, 180. See also Crowell v. Jansenville, 28 Wm. 450; 2 Dillon, Mun. Corp. 370.

Terre Haute v. Hudnat, 112 Ind. 542, 11 West. Rep. 833; Faulkner v. Aurora, 85 Ind. 180; Lafayette v. Timberlake, 88 Ind. 330; McDade v. Chester City, 117 Pa. 414, 10 Cent. Rep. 779; McArthur v. Saginaw, 58 Mich. 387; Agnew v. Corunna, 55 Mich. 423; Hines v. Charlotte, 40 N. W. Rep. 838, 1 L. R. A. 844; Kiley v. City of Kansas, 2 West. Rep. 201, 87 Mo. 108; Hubbell v. Viroqua, 87 Wis. 843; Robinson v. Greenville, 42 Ohio St. 625, 51 Am. Rep. 857 and note.

The authorities we have collected, and to which many more might easily be added, illustrate all phases and postures of the general subject; but in one thing all unite: and that is in affirming that no recovery can in any event be had where the negligence of the municipal corporation consists in failing to perform a legislative, judicial or discretionary duty, or in simply performing such a duty in an improper method. The decision in Kiley v. City of Kansas, supra, is directly in point, and applies the rule we have stated to a case in principle precisely like the one before us.

A recovery can be had against a municipal corporation only where it negligently performs, or negligently fails to perform, a duty in its nature ministerial, and then only in cases where the ministerial duty is imposed by law. There must, in every case, be a duty, since where there is no duty there can be no negligence. It is, indeed, impossible to conceive a case where negligence can exist independent of a duty. It was therefore incumbent upon the appellee to show a ministerial duty, and its wrongful breach. This he has not done.

A municipal corporation owes a duty to those who use its streets, to exercise ordinary care to make them safe for passage. It is not without hesitation that some of the courts have assented to this rule, and there once was reason for doubt; for, as a municipal corporation is an instrumentality of government, it is difficult to perceive upon what principle it can be sued while the sovereignty of which it forms a part enjoys complete immunity. But the question is now closed. Municipal corporations are liable for a negligent breach of a ministerial duty. They are, however, liable only to one to whom they owe that duty, and to him only when the duty concerns something over which that duty extends. In many of the cases we have cited it is held that municipal corporations owe a duty only to persons using their streets, and to them only owe a duty to keep the streets safe for ordinary travel. In order to create a liability, the breach of duty must be such, many of the cases say, as to make the streets insufficient or unsafe for ordinary travel.

We can conceive of no principle, and we know of no authority, upon which it can be held that a municipal corporation is under a duty to protect the property of a citizen from injury from the walls of an adjacent building belonging to a citizen, which the owner's negligence has permitted to become dangerous. Municipal corporations are not charged with the duty of protecting private property. There is certainly nothing in the statute which imposes such a duty upon them, and if not in the statute it does not exist. The entire current of authority concentrates upon the proposition that unless the law expressly or by clear implication imposes a duty upon a municipal corporation, none can be imposed by construction. Wharton says: "A duty, however, not imposed specifically on a corporation, cannot be constructively attached so as to make its neglect the subject of a suit." Whart. Neg. § 257.

Three cases are cited by the appellee:

The first, that of Anderson v. O'Connor, 98 Ind. 168, is not even remotely relevant. This is apparent, without more being said, when it is affirmed that the complaint in that case was to recover damages for a breach of contract.

The second case cited (Grove v. Fort Wayne, 45 Ind. 429), while it carries the principle on which it proceeds to the utmost verge, decides only that a person traveling on a public street may recover for an injury caused by the falling of an overhanging cornice. Conceding that the decision in that case is correct, it by no means justifies the conclusion that a municipal corporation is liable for the destruction of property by the fall of an adjoining building. The decision, as the opinion shows, is based solely on the proposition that municipal corporations "are bound to keep the streets, including the sidewalks, in a reasonably safe condition for ordinary travel."

The third case cited (Lowrey v. City of Delphi, 55 Ind. 250), in so far as it has the remotest resemblance to this case, simply announces and enforces the same general proposition. If the plaintiff were here seeking to recover for injuries received while using a street, these decisions would be relevant; but, as he seeks to recover for the destruction of a building standing on his own ground, they are totally irrelevant.

We proceed now to the branch of the case involving the rights of the appellant, Doxey. His counsel assert that the first paragraph of the complaint is bad, because it does not charge him with negligence. We cannot concur with them. The facts stated very clearly show that he was guilty of culpable negligence, and that his negligence was the proximate cause of the appellee's injury. It is charged, much as in the second, that the wall was unsafe and dangerous; that Doxey knew this; and that it constituted a public nuisance. In addition to these allegations, it is also averred that the wall was unsafe and dangerous from the 14th until the 22d of November, 1884, and that the defendant Doxey refused to make it safe, or to permit the plaintiff to do so. To the second paragraph it is objected by Doxey's counsel that the general averments of negligence are insufficient. This position rests on an undue assumption, for there are specific averments. But, if there were not, the objection is not well taken, for it is settled that general averments of negligence are sufficient as against a demurrer. Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Walker, 12 West. Rep. 781, 118 Ind. 196.

The second instruction asked by Doxey was properly refused, for the reason that there was no evidence to which it was applicable. Mr. Doxey testified that "Mr. Coburn, the marshal of the city, came to me the next morning after the fire, and said they would take charge of or appoint policemen to look after the walls, and have them torn down, if necessary. He says: 'You need not bother anything about them; you have lost enough.' I think those were the exact words." This evidence, and it is the strongest adduced by Doxey, did not warrant an instruction that "Doxey is not liable if the Marshal of the City of Anderson and his deputies took charge and control of the premises, preventing any persons from going near the ruins until after the walls fell."

Waiving all question as to the authority of the marshal to exclude the owner of the building, and waiving also all question as to the fault of the instruction in not asserting that control was actually taken without the owner's consent, it was properly refused, because the owner could not shift his responsibility on to the municipal corporation. If there had been any testimony showing that the owner was compulsorily excluded by legal authority, a very different question would have been presented; but all that here appears is that the marshal informed Mr. Doxey that he would take charge of the walls, and that Mr. Doxey consented that he might do so. The most that can be said of the testimony of Mr. Doxey is that it proves he turned the matter over to the control of the marshal, for there was no legal process employed to secure control. At all events, it is quite clear that Doxey did not escape responsibility by acceding to the request of the marshal, for third persons injured by his negligence cannot be denied compensation because he delegated or conceded his duties and rights to a city officer.

The judgment against the City of Anderson is reversed, and that against the appellant Doxey is affirmed.

TEXAS SUPREME COURT.

H. H. DOOLEY, Appt.,

v.

Catherine MONTGOMERY et al.

(....Tex....)

1. A conveyance of community property in Texas, by the husband—who, under Texas Revised Statutes, art. 2852, has full power to sell it—passes the whole of the common title, although he signs only as agent of his wife under a power of attorney, which gave him no power to sell the property.

2. Proof of an estoppel is admissible in an action of trespass to try title under the plea of not guilty.

(January 15, 1880.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Harris County District Court in favor of plaintiffs in an action of trespass to try title to certain land. Reversed.

The facts appear in the opinion.

Messrs. W. N. Shaw and S. R. Perryman, for appellant:

Property purchased during marriage, whether by the husband or wife, is community property.

Revised Statutes, art. 2852; Oss v. Miller, 54 Tex. 16.

The husband alone, during coverture, has the right to dispose of the community property.

The sale of the property by Josiah T. Harrell to John H. Walton was valid and conveyed all the right, title and interest that he and his wife had in the same, as fully and effectually as it would had the deed been made by himself and in his own name and not under power of attorney from his wife.

Heard v. Hall, 16 Pick. 457; Poor v. Robinson, 10 Mass. 181.

Mr. F. G. Morris, for appellees.

Henry, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action of trespass to try title. The defendant pleaded not guilty. The case was tried by the court without a jury, and judgment was rendered in favor of the plaintiffs for the land. The defendant appealed.

2 J. R. A.

The record shows a regular chain of title down to Amelia Harrell, she being at the time of the conveyance to her the wife of Josiah T. Harrell. The deed to her was made in 1845, and recited the receipt of a consideration of $500. There was no recital in the deed or fact in evidence giving to the deed to the wife other than its operation of conveying the title to the community. The wife made to her husband a power of attorney in terms, authorizing him to sell the land.

Afterwards, and during the life of the wife, the husband, in pursuance of the terms of this power of attorney, deeded the land to John H. Walton. This deed contains the following clause: "I, the said attorney, declare that I am duly authorized to sell and convey said property, and that I will warrant and defend the same against any and all claims whatever." The record shows a regular chain of title from Walton to appellant. Amelia Harrell died intestate, and appellees are her only heirs.

Appellant assigns as error that "The court erred in giving judgment for plaintiffs, because the proof shows that the property in question was the community property of J. T. and Amelia Harrell, and the deed executed by him, and signed by him as attorney in fact for said Amelia Harrell, is in law a legal and valid conveyance of said community property."

We agree in every particular with this assignment. The wife's power of attorney gave the husband no power to sell the land; but because it was community property he had full power under the law to sell it. Rev. Stat. art. 2852.

The conveying clause of the deed to Walton sufficiently shows that the land was conveyed as the property of the wife, and the husband's name is signed to the deed only as the agent of his wife.

In the case of Heard v. Hall, 16 Pick. 460, it is said to be the well established rule of equity that "Where one having title acquiesces in the disposition of his property, for a valuable consideration, by a person pretending to title, and having color of title, he shall be bound by such disposition, and shall not afterwards be allowed to set up his own title against the purchaser. And so it has been held that if one having title stands by while another purchases from a third person claiming title, and does not forbid the purchase or disclose his own title, he shall be bound. A fortiori, if he encourages the purchase, or, as in the present case, a person sells his own property as the property of another, to a bona fide purchaser, for a valuable consideration. In this case the petitioner expressly covenants that he is lawfully authorized and empowered to make sale of the granted premises. Most certainly he was not so authorized; and this covenant operates to avoid circuitry of action, by way of rebuttal, and estops the petitioner from setting up his title."

We think the deed of the husband conveyed to Watson the common title of the husband and wife, and left no estate for the heirs of the husband or wife to take at their deaths.

It was objected in the court below and is insisted here, that the defense by estoppel must be specially pleaded. We think that in the action of trespass to try title the proof is admissible under the plea of not guilty. Rev. Stat. art. 4798; Mayer v. Ramsey, 48 Tex. 871.

The judgment of the District Court will be reversed, and such judgment here rendered as ought to have been rendered by the court below, which will be that the appellees take nothing by their suit, and that appellant recover of them all costs of the court below, and of this court; and it is accordingly so ordered.

ALABAMA SUPREME COURT.

James C. RICHARDSON, Appt.,

LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE R. CO.

(....Ala.....)

1. In an action by a man for the loss of a trunk containing the clothing of his wife and child, the presumption is that the child's clothing was furnished by the father, in the absence of evidence to the contrary.
2. Merely providing ordinary and necessary clothing for the wife by the husband in discharge of his duty growing out of the marital relation does not make it her property within the meaning of the Alabama Statute providing that all property acquired by a wife after marriage in any manner, including that acquired by gift from a contract with the husband, shall become her separate estate.

(January 14, 1899.)

APPEAL by plaintiff, from a judgment of the Escambia County Circuit Court (Hubbard, J.), in favor of defendant in an action to recover for the loss of a trunk and its contents. Reversed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion. Mr. James M. Davison for appellant. Messrs. Jones & Falkner for appellee.

Clopton, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The action is brought by appellant to recover for the loss of a trunk and its contents, which his wife delivered to defendant for transportation, incidental to her carriage as a passenger from Milton, Fla., to Kirkland, Escambia County, Ala.

There is no controversy as to the delivery of the trunk to defendant, its loss, and the value of the trunk and its contents. The court gave the affirmative charge in favor of the defendant. The instruction is evidently rested on the theory that, under the proof, the trunk and its contents were the statutory separate estate of the wife, for the loss of which she must sue alone, as provided by the statute. The contents of the trunk consisted of wearing apparel of the wife and of an infant child. A part of the wife's apparel, as testified by the plaintiff, was purchased with money furnished by him, and a part with the proceeds of her own labor. There being an absence of evidence as to who furnished the child's clothes, the presumption is that they were furnished by the father. For the loss of these the plaintiff was entitled to recover; and for this reason, if for no other, the affirmative charge was improperly given.

By the Act of February 28, 1887, the earnings of the wife are her separate property. Code 1886, § 2342.

Prior to this enactment they belonged to the husband. Whether the plaintiff is entitled to recover for the loss of the articles purchased with the proceeds of the wife's labor depends on the fact whether the earnings accrued before or after the passage of the statute, as to which the evidence is silent.

At common law, certain incidents attach to the contract of marriage, among which is the duty of the husband to maintain his wife, and to supply her with wearing apparel suitable to their social condition, and commensurate with his pecuniary circumstances. The wearing apparel of the wife, furnished by the husband, though intended for her personal and exclusive use, is none the less his property. On this principle is based the necessity of the statutory exemptions from levy and sale under execution or other process for the collection of debt, of the proper wearing apparel of the husband and family, and of the widow and minor children from administration. Code 1886, §§ 2511, 2545.

The question then is, Has this rule of the common law been changed or abrogated by the Act of February 28, 1887, creating and regulating the separate estates of married women?

Section 2341 of the Code of 1886 declares: "All the property of the wife, held by her pre-

NOTE.—Gift of money or property by husband to wife invalid.

Under the General Statutes of Massachusetts, chap. 108, § 10, there can be no valid gift of money or property by the husband to the wife, so as to constitute it the separate property of the wife. It still remains the property of the husband, and her possession is in legal contemplation his possession. Thomson v. O'Sullivan, 6 Allen, 304; Baxter v. Kuowies, 12 Allen, 114.

2 L. R. A.

vicious to the marriage, or to which she may become entitled after the marriage, in any manner, is the separate property of the wife."

The property which becomes her separate estate is more particularly defined by section 2351, as all property of the wife, whether acquired by descent or inheritance or gift, devise or bequest, or by contract or conveyance, or by gift from a contract with the husband, excepting such property as may be conveyed to an active trustee for her benefit—property the ownership of which is acquired by the wife by some legal mode of transmission, or by operation of law.

The statutes make no reference, in terms, or by fair implication, to the wearing apparel of the wife, purchased during coverture on the credit of the husband, or with money furnished by him. The husband provides clothing for his wife in the discharge and performance of a marital duty, without any intention to make a gift, as ordinarily or legally understood. If he purchases jewels or other personal ornaments, or even wearing apparel, and makes an express gift thereof to his wife, independent of and without reference to his marital duty, they undoubtedly would be her separate estate under the statute; also, if her wearing apparel is purchased with money which is her separate estate. But merely providing ordinary and necessary clothing for the wife, in discharge of his duty growing out of the marital relation, does not constitute a gift from a contract with the husband in the meaning of the statute. His right of ownership of the clothing so provided remains as at common law. Hawkins v. Providence & W. R. Co. 119 Mass. 596.

Reversed and remanded.

ILLINOIS SUPREME COURT.

Charles S. FRENCH, Appt.,

v.
Julius WILLER.

(.....III.....)

1. A judgment by confession in an action of forcible detainer in Illinois, upon a warrant of attorney contained in a lease, is coram non jure and void. The proceeding provided by statute in such cases is exclusive.
2. Parties cannot by contract ingraft upon the procedure prescribed for a summary proceeding a remedy or practice not warranted by statute. (Orwig, Ch. J., Willin and Magruder, JJ., dissent.)

(November 15, 1888.)

APPEAL by plaintiff, from a judgment of the Appellate Court, First District, reversing a judgment of the Superior Court of Cook County, in an action of forcible detainer. Affirmed.

Statement per Curiam:

In this case the appellant, Charles S. French, filed, in the Superior Court of Cook County, his complaint in an action of forcible detainer, verified by affidavit, alleging that he was entitled to the possession of certain premises in Cook County, and that the appellee, Julius Willer, unlawfully withheld the possession thereof from him. Accompanying the complaint was an affidavit of the appellant stating, in substance, that the appellee was unlawfully holding said premises after the expiration of a certain lease of the same to him from the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company, and after demand of possession, and that the appellant was the assignee of the reversion.

There was also filed with the complaint a certain lease from said insurance company to the appellee, demising to him said premises for a term which had then expired, the execution of said lease by the appellee being duly proved by affidavit; said lease containing, among other things, a covenant on the part of the lessee to surrender possession of the demised premises to the lessor or its assigns at the expiration of the term; and also a warrant of attorney authorizing an attorney of any court of record, for the lessee, and in his name and stead, to appear in any court of record, at any time after default or failure by the appellee in the performance of any of the covenants of the lease, to waive the issuing and service of process, and to file a cognovit and confession of judgment for the possession of the whole of the demised premises, and for costs of suit in an action of forcible entry and detainer or forcible detainer in favor of the lessor, its successors and assigns, and against the lessee, and a waiver and release in writing of all errors in entering such action and judgment, and a consent in writing that a writ of restitution might be issued and executed immediately; the lessee expressly agreeing to release all errors and defects whatever in entering such action or judgment, or any proceeding therein enforcing or concerning the same.

There was also filed a cognovit, in accordance with the terms of the warrant of attorney, confessing judgment in favor of the appellant and against the appellee, for the possession of said premises, in an action of forcible detainer, and consenting to the immediate issuing and execution of a writ of restitution, and waiving and releasing all errors that might intervene in the entry of the judgment or the issuing or execution of said writ. Upon the filing of said papers in the superior court, judgment was entered in favor of the appellant and against the appellee, for the possession of said premises, and for costs, and the writ of restitution was immediately issued. The appellee thereupon entered his motion to quash said writ, and to vacate said judgment, and introduced and offered certain evidence in support of said motion, but said motion was overruled by the court. The appellate court, on appeal, reversed said judgment, without remanding the cause for further proceedings, and awarded to the appellant a certificate that the case involved questions of law of such importance, on account of principal and collateral interests, that it should be passed upon by this court, and the appellant brings the record here by appeal. The appellate court, in deciding the case, filed the following opinion:

MORAN, P. J.: "The complaint filed in the court below contains allegations sufficient to entitle appellee to the remedy sought under the Forcible Entry and Detainer Act. In this respect this case differs from the case of Burns v. Nash, 28 Bradw. 552, decided by this court. The sole question for us to determine on the record is whether the superior court obtained jurisdiction of the person of the appellant, by means of the filing of the cognovit in pursuance of the warrant of attorney contained in the lease."

It is contended by counsel for appellee that a warrant of attorney to confess judgment is a familiar common-law security, and cases are cited which, it is asserted, show that it was the practice at common law to enter judgments in ejectment upon confession under a warrant of attorney, and that the practice has also obtained in Pennsylvania, and been sustained by the supreme court of that State.

There is some misapprehension as to the practice at common law. There were at common law, besides the judgment by default, two methods of obtaining judgment without trial—one, by a confession of judgment under a warrant of attorney; and the other, upon a cognovit actionem, signed by the defendant in the action. The warrant of attorney authorized the attorney named therein to appear for the defendant and receive a declaration in an action for debt, and to confess the action, or suffer judgment, by nil dicit or otherwise, to pass.

"A warrant of attorney," says Chitty, "is more frequently given independently of any action, and very generally is prospective security, and although at the time it is executed nothing is due from the party. It is in that respect a convenient collateral security to bankers and others, in consideration of their agreeing to make pecuniary advances, or to suffer a customer to overdraw his account." 8 Chitty, Pr. 669.

The cognovit actionem, was not an authority given before the action commenced, but was a confession signed by the defendant after the process was issued. "When a writ has already been issued against a defendant, a cognovit actionem, or, in other words, a written confession of the action, subscribed by the defendant, but not sealed, and authorizing the plaintiff to sign judgment and issue execution for a named sum, is a very usual mode of saving the expenses of further proceedings in the action." Id. 664.

Now, two at least of the cases cited by counsel to show that confession of judgment was permitted in ejectment, are cases in which the judgments were entered on a cognovit actionem. In Doe v. Franklin, 7 Taunt. 9, the plaintiff obtained from the defendants in possession a cognovit of the action and a retract of the plea, so that not only was there no warrant of attorney to appear and confess, but the defendants who did confess the action were already in court by service of process, and also by plea filed. Doe v. Howell, 12 Ad. & El. 696, was also a case where the defendant signed a cognovit confessing the action. These cases give no support to the contention that a warrant of attorney to appear and confess judgment was a recognized mode of procedure in ejectment at common law.

Kingston v. Kingston, 1 Dowl. N. S. 268, approved 2 L. R. A.

pears to have been a rule not to set aside a judgment entered upon a warrant of attorney in an action of ejectment, for the reason that there was no attestation clause to the warrant of attorney, in conformity with the statute then recently enacted. Patteson, J., held that the statute had no application to actions in ejectment, and in that was clearly wrong, as the same statute was held applicable to actions of ejectment in Doe v. Howell, supra, where the question was decided by four of the Judges of the Court of King's Bench.

The point, as to the right to enter the judgment under a warrant of attorney, was not raised in the case, but the implication that it was a recognized practice, which might be drawn from the fact that the point was not made is negatived in the subsequent case of Beaumont v. Beaumont, 2 Dowl. N. S. 972, where, in moving for leave to enter a judgment on a warrant of attorney authorizing the landlord to sign a judgment in ejectment upon the determination of the tenancy by notice to quit, counsel admitted that no case of a similar description was to be found in the books, but contended that there could be no objection to such a warrant of attorney. Coleridge, J., said: "If a party enters into such an agreement, I see no reason why it should not be enforced," but for lack of a sufficient affidavit no judgment was entered in the case, and therefore it is no precedent, but it shows that as late as 1843 no such practice had obtained in England. The fact that no reference to such a method of proceeding in ejectment is found in works on common-law practice (so far as we have been able to examine) goes to show pretty conclusively that such a practice was unknown to the courts and to the profession.

It appears from the cases in Pennsylvania that there is known in that State a practice of entering what are termed "amicable actions," and that such actions, and judgments by confession in them, may be entered by the court on agreement by the parties. McCalmont v. Peters, 13 Serg. & R. 196; Cook v. Gilbert, 8 Serg. & R. 567.

In Flanigan v. Philadelphia, 51 Pa. 491, the lease provided that it might be terminated on the violation of any covenant, by a notice of five days, and that on such termination any attorney might sign an agreement for entering an amicable action in ejectment against the lessee. Such an action was entered, and judgment confessed, and on motion to set it aside on the ground that it was not entered in compliance with a rule of court governing the entry of judgments on warrants of attorney, the court said: "It nowhere appears in this record that the confession by the attorney of the defendant was in pursuance of a warrant of attorney. The amicable action and confession of judgment is according to ancient and established practice existing before the Act of 1806, as well as since."

The practice seems to be peculiar to the State of Pennsylvania; at least our attention has not been called to a similar practice elsewhere. We do not think it can be regarded as establishing the proposition that the practice of confessing judgment upon warrant of attorney, and without process having been issued, obtained at common law in actions of ejectment.

In Secrist v. Zimmerman, 55 Pa. 446, cited by counsel, there was no warrant of attorney, and no question of a confession on a warrant of attorney made or decided in the case. The action of ejectment was brought against the defendant for the land, and a year after its commencement the defendant confessed judgment to the plaintiff for the land in dispute and costs. The court held the judgment conclusive as to the parties and their privies, on the ground that the most important interests, not only of property and liberty, but of life itself, are habitually concluded, judicially, by solemn confession made by the party in interest in the face of a court of justice. The confession of which the court is speaking in that case was made in open court, in the face of the court, after service of process; and it has never been doubted that such a confession would authorize the judgment, and probably no one would say that such a confession would not be good in a forcible detainer case.

An examination of all the cases counsel have been able to find, seems to us to confirm what was said by this court in Burns v. Nash, supra, that "The practice of entering judgment by confession upon warrant of attorney, without process, in actions of tort, did not obtain, and there is no precedent for it at common law."

The practice of entering judgments in debt on warrants of attorney is very old, so old that the date of its origin is unknown. Chitty says: "How or when this peculiar security for a debt, authorizing a creditor, as it were per saltum, to sign a judgment and issue execution without even issuing a writ, was first invented, does not appear, but it has now become one of the most usual collateral securities on loans of money or contracts to pay an annuity and for debts, but usually accompanied with some other deed or security." 2 Chitty, Pr. 884.

It was early found that unconscionable advantage was taken of debtors by creditors by means of such warrants of attorney, obtained when the debt was incurred, and when the debtor was hopeful, and executed with harshness against him in the hour of his distress; and the courts were compelled to prescribe rules, and Parliament to enact statutes, to limit the operation of such warrants, and restrain the injustice to which the use of them frequently gave rise.

But if it were established that confessions of judgments upon warrants of attorney obtained as a practice at common law in an action of ejectment, or in other actions in form of tort, it would not authorize the practice, in an action of forcible entry and detainer, under the law of this State. This action is a special statutory proceeding, summary in its nature, and in derogation of the common law; and it is a rule of universal application in such actions that the statute conferring jurisdiction must be strictly pursued in the method of procedure prescribed by it, or the jurisdiction will fail to attach, and the proceeding be coram non judice, and void. Davis v. Davis, 6 Cent. Rep. 276, 115 Pa. 261; Burns v. Nash, supra, and cases there cited.

While forcible entry and detainer is a civil proceeding for restitution, it is based upon, and has by modern legislation been evolved from, the English forcible entry and detainer, which was a criminal proceeding merely. Ejectment, 2 L. R. A.

from its slow progress, was an inadequate remedy to a landlord, and the Legislature provided the summary remedy by which a speedy recovery of possession may be secured; but to prevent hasty action, and to secure tenants and their families from the danger and inconvenience of being forcibly ejected without notice and reasonable time for preparation, certain safeguards were provided by the statute. A demand for possession is required to be made upon the tenant before the commencement of the action. A complaint in writing must be filed before summons issues. Service of the summons is to be made in a manner different from the service in other actions at law; and, if judgment is rendered against the tenant, the statute provides that "No writ of restitution shall be issued in any case until the expiration of five days."

There is in the statute a policy discoverable, as was said by Mr. Justice McAllister in Burns v. Nash, "based upon humane considerations of oppression and hardships which might ensue if families, in any kind of weather, and at any time of day or night might be thus forcibly ejected from their homes with all their effects, without notice or warning," which forbids the conclusion that a landlord, by exacting from his tenant a power of attorney in his lease, can obtain the right to an immediate judgment, without having demanded possession, or having process issued or served, and to an immediate writ of restitution, and to avail himself of the remedy against his tenant furnished by a statute, every provision of which, with reference to procedure, he has set aside by contract, and thus to proceed to the ejection of the occupants and the recovery of possession, "by leaps," as the creditor was enabled by a similar warrant to sign judgment and issue execution against his debtor at common law, without affording an opportunity to the tenant of raising any objection, or making any defense.

What wrong might be perpetrated, were such a practice to be established, is illustrated by the operation of the "amicable ejectment" proceeding in Pennsylvania, as shown in Grossman's Appeal, 102 Pa. 187, where, after the death of the lessee, and the acceptance of a month's rent in advance from the widow, and before the expiration of the month, the landlord, on an unfounded rumor that the widow had assigned the lease, and thus broken the covenant against assignment, confessed a judgment against the dead man, under the terms of the lease, and, without previous notice of the judgment or execution, the widow and heirs were dispossessed "at the early hour of 8 o'clock in the morning, in February."

Whatever may be thought of the public policy of such a practice, it cannot be ingrafted upon our forcible detainer proceeding, without the consent of the Legislature. The Act provides a new remedy, and the course of procedure to obtain it; and no remedy or mode of procedure can be pursued, except that directed by the Act. "If the Act has prescribed the remedy for the party aggrieved, and the mode of prosecution, all other remedies and modes are excluded." Millar v. Taylor, 4 Burr. 2324; Smith v. Lockwood, 18 Barb. 217.

Parties cannot, by their contracts, vary the procedure in courts of justice prescribed by the statute. This was expressly decided by the Supreme Court of Iowa in a case which we consider in point, and decisive of the question under consideration. A judgment was entered up in the district court, under a warrant of attorney in a judgment note made in Pennsylvania, which authorized any attorney in any court of record within the United States to confess judgment against the maker of the note. A petition was filed by the maker of the note to have the judgment declared void, and the court so ordered. On appeal the supreme court said:

"It is claimed by appellant that the principles of the common law authorizing a warrant of attorney to confess judgment are in force in this State, and that the provisions of our Code respecting the recovery of judgment by action are merely cumulative. We do not think this position is correct. The whole subject of recovery and rendition of judgment is fully reviewed in the Code, and the course to be pursued in obtaining judgment is specifically pointed out . . . A confession of judgment pertains to the remedy. A party seeking to enforce here a contract made in another State, must do so in accordance with the laws of the State. Parties cannot, by contract made in another State, ingraft upon our procedure here, remedies which our laws do not contemplate nor authorize." Hamilton v. Schoenberger, 47 Iowa, 885.

A fortiori, parties within the State cannot by contract ingraft upon the procedure prescribed for a summary proceeding, a remedy or practice not warranted by the statute. While parties by consent may waive rights, they cannot thus amend the law. A fundamental requisite to the validity of a judgment is that the court should have jurisdiction of the subject matter and of the parties. A judgment against a defendant, who has not been served at all with process, and who has not appeared, is a nullity. The record shows no process to the defendant, and no appearance by him, but shows a departure from the course specifically pointed out by the statute, and an attempt to give jurisdiction of the defendant, and enter judgment against him in a manner which the statute does not contemplate nor authorize.

A confession of judgment upon a warrant of attorney in an action of forcible detainer in a court of record is as irregular and unauthorized as it would be in a justice's court. Such court of record does not proceed in forcible detainer by virtue of its power as a court of general jurisdiction, but derives its authority wholly from the statute, and in such proceeding is, therefore, to be treated as a court of special and limited jurisdiction. 2 Phil. Ev. 946, Cow. & H. notes; Burns v. Nash, supra.

A court of special and limited jurisdiction, like a justice's court, has no authority to enter a judgment by confession on a warrant of attorney, even in a case where such judgment would be authorized in a court of record by the common law. Alberty v. Dawson, 1 Binn. 105.

From no point of view are we able to sustain the authority of the court to enter the judgment appealed from. We have carefully examined the question, and re-examined the views expressed in the opinion of Mr. Justice 2 L. R. A.

McAllister in Burns v. Nash, supra, and such re-examination has tended to confirm us in the position there announced. The court has no power to enter the judgment in this form of proceeding on the warrant of attorney contained in the lease, and the judgment is therefore coram non judice, and void, and must be reversed.

Messrs. Williams & Thompson for appellant.

Messrs. Moses & Newman for appellee.

Per Curiam:

We are satisfied with and adopt the foregoing opinion of the appellate court. Counsel for the appellant have furnished us with a brief, criticising both the conclusions and reasoning of the opinion with great apparent earnestness; and we have carefully examined the various propositions discussed and authorities cited. In the light of the suggestions thus made by counsel, and after having fully considered the case, we are disposed to concur with the appellate court, both in its conclusions, and in the process of reasoning by which those conclusions are reached.

The judgment of the Appellate Court will therefore be affirmed.

Craig, Ch. J., dissenting:

I do not concur in this decision. Forcible detainer is a mere civil proceeding authorized by the statute, under which the owner of lands may recover possession where the possession is unlawfully withheld. Forcible detainer is not an action of tort. At an early day this doctrine was announced in Robinson v. Drummer, 10 Ill. 222. It is there said:

"At common law, the party was liable to indictment, and might be convicted of either a forcible entry or a forcible detainer, each being considered a distinct offense. Not so under our statute. The proceeding is purely a civil remedy, the sole object of which is to regain the possession that has been invaded."

If it be true that a judgment could not be confessed under a cognovit in forcible detainer at common law upon the ground that the action was a tort, that fact does not, in my judgment, establish the doctrine that a judgment could not be entered under a cognovit in forcible detainer, as that action is known and recognized under our statute. A cognovit to confess a judgment on a note, bond or contract for a debt may be given, and a judgment rendered under such a cognovit has always been regarded as valid and binding. If binding and obligatory on a contract to pay money, why not on a contract to surrender possession of a lot or tract of land? A judgment rendered on a note or bond grows out of a breach of contract. So, too, a judgment for forcible detainer grows out of a breach of contract; and, if a cognovit to render judgment in the one case may be sustained upon principle, I see no reason why it may not in the other.

Again, in Fabri v. Bryan, 80 Ill. 182, this court held that, where a lease contains a license to the landlord to enter into possession of the leased premises without process of law, and expel and remove the tenant, and use such force as may be necessary in doing so, the landlord may enter and remove the tenant after the expiration of the term, and the tenant cannot maintain an action of trespass against the landlord. If, as held, the tenant may make a lawful contract with the landlord, under which the latter may enter and remove the tenant, what principle of law forbids the tenant from incorporating in a lease a provision under which, upon default of surrendering possession at the end of the term, a judgment for possession may be confessed in a court of competent jurisdiction?

Wilkin, J.:

I concur in the views expressed by Chief Justice Craig.

Magruder, J.:

I concur in the dissenting opinion of Chief Justice Craig.

Petition for rehearing was denied March 22, 1889.

MICHIGAN SUPREME COURT.

PEOPLE of the State OF MICHIGAN

v.

John ARMSTRONG, Appt.

(....Mich....)

1. The power given to a municipal corporation by its charter to control and regulate the manner in which streets shall be used, does not, expressly or by implication, give power to pass an ordinance prohibiting the circulation or giving away of any circulars, hand-bills or advertising cards in or upon any of the public streets and alleys of the city.

2. A municipal ordinance making it unlawful to "circulate, distribute or give away circulars, hand-bills or advertising cards of any description in or upon any of the public streets and alleys" of a city, even if it can be held to be within the general power granted by the city charter to control and regulate the use of streets, is unreasonable and unwarranted, so far as it applies to giving to those who express or appear to express a desire therefor, small cards of invitation to attend meetings of the Young Men's Christian Association.

(January 18, 1889.)

CERTIORARI to the Recorder's Court of Detroit (George S. Swift, Recorder), to review a judgment convicting defendant of distributing cards on the streets of Detroit inviting persons to visit the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Corliss, Andrus & Leete for defendant, appellant.

Messrs. John W. McGrath and Fred. H. Warren, for the People, appellees.

Long, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This case comes from the Recorder's Court of the City of Detroit by writ of certiorari.

The complaint is made under section 12, chap. 55, Rev. Ordinances City of Detroit, as amended August 22, 1885, and charges that at the City of Detroit on the 18th day of June, 1888, within the corporate limits of said city, on Woodward Avenue, at the corner of Grand River Avenue, the defendant, John Armstrong, then and there unlawfully and willfully did circulate and distribute and give away circulars, hand-bills, and advertising cards, to the evil example of all others in like cases offending, and contrary to the ordinance of said city, etc.

The conceded facts proved on the trial are that defendant was distributing cards on the corners of Woodward and Grand River Avenues, in the City of Detroit, on the evening of June 18, 1888; that defendant is one of the invitation committee referred to in the cards; that no cards were to be seen upon the ground or sidewalk at or near the place of distributing the same; that cards were given to those only who expressed or appeared to desire the same, and took the same willingly; that the use of the Y. M. C. A. privileges offered by the cards was entirely gratuitous; that cards were offered persons unknown to defendant. The cards were in the following form and size:

|                              |           |
|------------------------------|-----------|
| THE                          | INVITES   | | INVITATION                   | CORDIALLY |
| COMMITTEE                    | YOU       |
| TO SPEND                     |           |
| THIS OR ANY MONDAY NIGHT,    |           |
| From 7:45 to 9 o'clock,      |           |
| AT THE Y. M. C. A. BUILDING. |           |
| ICE-WATER AND FANS.          |           |

The provisions of the Charter of the City of Detroit, under which it is claimed the city had power to pass the ordinance under which the complaint is made, reads: "That the council shall have power to provide for cleaning of highways, streets, avenues, drains, alleys," etc., "of dirt, filth and other substances," etc., also "to prohibit and prevent the incumbering or obstructing of streets, drains, alleys, crosswalks, sidewalks and all public grounds and places, with vehicles, animals, boxes, signs, barrels, posts, buildings, dirt, stone, brick and all other material and things whatsoever, of every kind and nature," etc., also "to control, prescribe and regulate the manner in which highways, streets, avenues, lanes, alleys, public grounds and spaces in said city shall be used and enjoyed," etc., also "to prohibit and prevent the flying of kites, and all practices, amusements and doings therein having a tendency to frighten teams and horses."

The ordinance under which the complaint is made reads:

"Sec. 12. Hereafter no person shall, himself or by another party, attach, place, print, paint or stamp any placard, circular, showbill, or advertisements, of any description whatever, except such as may be expressly provided by law, on any street or sidewalk, or upon any public place or object in the city, or upon any fence, building or property belonging to the city, or upon any telegraph pole, telephone pole, electric-light pole or tower, or upon any hitching-post, horse block, or curb-stone in any public street or alley in the City of Detroit; and no person shall, himself or by another, circulate, distribute or give away circulars, hand-bills or advertising cards of any description in or upon any of the public streets and alleys of said city."

On the trial of the case, defendant's attorney asked for the discharge of the defendant, which the court overruled, and found the defendant guilty, and imposed a fine of $3, in default of payment of which fine, defendant was ordered to be imprisoned in the Detroit House of Correction for a period not exceeding twenty days. The said fine was imposed under authority of section 19, chap. 55, of the ordinance, which reads:

"Sec. 19. Any violation of the provisions of this ordinance shall be punished by a fine not to exceed $100, and costs of prosecution; and in the imposition of any fine and costs the court may make a further sentence that the offender may be imprisoned in the Wayne County jail or the Detroit House of Correction until the payment thereof; Provided, however, That the period of such imprisonment shall not exceed six months."

The allegations of error contained in the affidavit for the writ of certiorari are: that the ordinance upon which this complaint is based is invalid, in that the common council had no authority under the charter of the city to adopt the same; that the ordinance is invalid because unreasonable, oppressive and in contravention of constitutional rights; that the court had no authority to impose any fine or penalty, because this power is limited not only by the terms, but the spirit and design, of the charter, and the general principles and policy of the common law. Taylor v. Griswold, 14 N. J. L. 222; Mt. Pleasant v. Breeze, 11 Iowa, 399.

Implied powers to make by-laws.
The power to make by-laws when not expressly given, is implied as an incident to the very existence of a corporation; but in the case of an express grant of the power, to enact by-laws limited to certain specified cases and for certain purposes, the corporate power of legislation is confined to the objects specified, all others being excluded by implication. State v. Ferguson, 38 N. H. 424, 430; citing 2 Kyd, Corp. 102; Angell & A. Corp. 177; Child v. Hudson's Bay Co. 2 P. Wms. 207; 1 Dillon, Mun. Corp. 366.

Ordinance must be authorized by law.
An ordinance must be shown to be authorized by the express provision of the charter, or be derived as an incidental power resulting from its incorporation as a city, or be found in some general or special statute. Com. v. Stodder, 2 Cush. 562, 568; Herzog v. San Francisco, 38 Cal. 134, 145; 1 Dillon, Mun. Corp. 372.

Power to pass necessary by-laws is incidental; but 2 L. R. A.

Powers to be exercised with reason.
In this country ordinances passed in virtue of the implied power must be reasonable, consonant with the general powers and purposes of the corporation, and not inconsistent with the laws or policy of the State. Klip v. Paterson, 26 N. J. L. 298; cause the ordinance under which the penalty is claimed to be imposed is unconstitutional, in that it permits and authorizes the imposition of fines and penalties excessive and unreasonable and entirely disproportionate to offenses created and specified; that the court had no authority to impose a penalty, and the judgment is void because the ordinance under which the penalty imposed is claimed to be authorized is illegal, in that it provides for variable and uncertain penalties for offenses charged; that the defendant should have been discharged.

Corporations derive all their powers from legislative Acts, and they can pass no ordinance which conflicts with the charter. Where the Legislature, in terms, confers upon a municipal corporation the power to pass ordinances of a specified and defined character, if the power thus delegated be not in conflict with the Constitution, an ordinance passed pursuant thereto cannot be impeached as invalid because it would have been regarded as unreasonable if it had been passed under the incidental power of the corporation, or under a grant of power general in its nature. In other words, what the Legislature distinctly says may be done will not be set aside by the courts, unless in conflict with the Constitution, because they may deem it unreasonable. But where the power to legislate on a given subject is conferred, but the mode of its exercise is not prescribed, then the ordinance passed in pursuance thereof must be a reasonable exercise of the power, or it will be pronounced invalid. 1 Dillon, Mun. Corp. § 262.

The fact, however, that an ordinance covers matters which the city has no power to control is no reason why it should not be enforced as to those which it may control. The unauthorized provisions do not invalidate the whole ordinance, if they can be separated from the rest of the ordinance without so mutilating it as to render it inoperative. Kettering v. Jacksonville, 50 Ill. 89.

It is insisted upon the part of the prosecution that the power contained in the charter is sufficient to warrant the passage of the ordinance. There is an express power in the charter to provide for cleaning the highways, streets, avenues, lanes, alleys, public grounds and squares, crosswalks, and sidewalks in said city, of dirt, mud, filth and other substances; also to prevent the incumbering or obstructing of streets, lanes, alleys, etc., and to control, prescribe and regulate the manner in which the highways, streets, etc., shall be used and enjoyed, as well as to prohibit and prevent the flying of kites, and all practices, amusements and doings therein, having a tendency to frighten teams and horses, or dangerous to life or property. This is not an express grant of power to the City of Detroit to pass a by-law or ordinance to prohibit a person from circulating, distributing or giving away circulars, hand-bills or advertising cards of any description, in or upon any of the public streets and alleys of said city, and to punish by fine and imprisonment in the county jail or the Detroit House of Correction for violation; and there is no such power implied in these provisions of the charter.

Even if it could be held that the charter authorized it, this part of the ordinance is not a reasonable exercise of the power granted. It is true that the miscellaneous throwing to the winds of hand-bills, circulars or advertising cards may be an act that would be very desirable to prohibit. Such a distribution of cards or paper of any kind would not only litter up the street and become a nuisance upon and along the streets, sidewalks and crosswalks, but naturally would tend to frighten teams and horses hitched upon or being driven along the streets, and great danger might be apprehended to life and limb; yet the reasonableness or unreasonableness of an ordinance is not determined by the enormity of some offense it seeks to prevent and punish, but by its actual operation in all cases that may be brought thereunder.

It is conceded in the present case that these cards were given to those only who expressed, or appeared to express, a desire for the same, and that no cards were to be seen upon the ground or sidewalk at or near the place where the defendant was distributing them; and it is not pretended that the rights of any person were interfered with by defendant, or that any teams or horses were frightened. There was no indiscriminate scattering of the papers to the winds, and the cards of the size of one and one half inches by two inches contained nothing but what was legitimate and proper for publication and distribution. The card itself was not only harmless, but the words printed thereon were an invitation to a moral and Christian assembly of people, gathered together for the public good. If this act can be classed as an

Northern Liberties Comrs. v. Gas Co., 12 Pa. 318; Fisher v. Harrisburg, 2 Grant, 291; Com. v. Robertson, 5 Cush. 488; Waters v. Leach, 3 Ark. 110; Memphis v. Winfield, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 707; Com. v. Steffee, 7 Bush (Ky.) 161; People, Muir, v. Throop, 12 Wend. 183, 186; Columbia v. Beasley, 1 Humph. 232; State v. Freeman, 88 N. H. 426; Whyte v. Nashville, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 364; Pedrick v. Bailey, 12 Gray (Mass.) 161; Dunham v. Rochester, 5 Cow. 463; Clason v. Milwaukee, 30 Wis. 316; Meth. P. Church v. Baltimore, 6 Gill, 301; 1 Dillon, Mun. Corp. 369.

Ordinances passed under the general authority to enact all such as will be necessary, must be reasonable or they may be void. Northern Liberties Comrs. v. Gas Co., 12 Pa. 318.

Where the power to legislate on a given subject is conferred, but the mode of its exercise is not prescribed, then the ordinance passed in pursuance thereof must be a reasonable exercise of the power, or it will be pronounced invalid. Peoria v. Calhoun, 22 Ill. 317; St. Paul v. Coulter, 12 Minn. 41.

Reasonableness a subject of judicial inquiry.

The reasonableness of their exercise is a fit subject for inquiry. St. Louis v. Weber, 44 2 L. R. A.

Mo. 547; Kelly v. Meeks (Mo.) 2 West. Rep. 512. The power of the court to declare an ordinance unreasonable is restricted to cases in which the ordinance was passed under the supposed incidental powers of the corporation. Coal Float v. Jacksonville, 10 West. Rep. 383, 112 Ind. 15.

Courts will declare void ordinances that are oppressive in their character. Memphis v. Winfield, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 707.

The oppressiveness and inequality, alleged to invalidate a by-law, must be made apparent to the court. Columbia v. Beasley, 1 Humph. (Tenn.) 232; St. Louis v. Weber, 44 Mo. 547.

The judicial tribunals will not interfere with municipal corporations in their internal police and administrative government, unless some clear right has been withheld or wrong perpetrated. State, Hardwick v. Swearingen, 12 Ga. 28; 1 Dillon, Mun. Corp. 180.

Whatever establishes a distinction between classes or sects is to the extent of that distinction a persecution. The extent of the discrimination is not material; it is enough that it creates an inequality of right or privilege. Cooley, Const. Lim. 467. See Anderson v. City of Wellington, 2 L. R. A. 110.

offense punishable by fine and imprisonment, then selling or distributing newspapers upon the streets of the city would be punishable in the same way.

To render ordinances reasonable, they should tend in some degree to the accomplishment of the object for which the corporation was created and its powers conferred. The unreasonableness of this ordinance is made apparent when we consider the penalty which may be imposed for its violation—a fine of $100, and costs of prosecution, and, in default of payment, imprisonment in the county jail or Detroit House of Correction for a period of six months. If the conviction could be sustained, then any person upon any public street or alley, anywhere within the corporate limits of the City of Detroit, giving away advertising cards, however remote the street or alley from the business centers, could be convicted and punished in like manner. Laws which attempt to regulate and restrain our conduct in matters of mere indifference, without any good end in view, are regulations destructive of liberty.

Under our Constitution and system of government the object and aim is to leave the subject entire master of his own conduct, except in the points wherein the public good requires some direction or restraint. What direction or restraint is required for the public good in the mere act of giving away an advertising card or hand-bill? This part of the ordinance is not aimed at the littering up of the streets, or to the frightening of horses; but the offense is made complete in itself by the mere act of distributing or giving away of these enumerated articles.

In Frazee's Case, 6 West. Rep. 143. 63 Mich. 396, it was held by this court that a city ordinance providing that "No person or persons, associations or organizations, shall march, parade, ride or drive in or upon or through the public streets of the City of Grand Rapids, with musical instruments, banners, flags, torches, flambeaux, or while singing or shouting, without having first obtained the consent of the mayor of said city," is unreasonable and invalid, because it suppresses what is, in general, perfectly lawful, and leaves the power of permitting or restraining processions to an unregulated official discretion. In that case Chief Justice Campbell, speaking for the court said: "No one in his senses could regard a penalty of $500 for such trivial offenses as most of those covered by this by-law as within any bound of reason."

Many decisions of the courts of other States are to be found holding by-laws much less stringent and arbitrary in their terms unreasonable and invalid. 1 Dillon, Mun. Corp. § 253; Clinton v. Phillips, 58 Ill. 102; Kip v. Paterson, 26 N. J. L. 298; Northern Liberties Comrs. v. Gas Co. 12 Pa. 318; Com. v. Robertson, 5 Cush. 438.

This ordinance not only does not come within the powers granted by the charter, but it is also unreasonable and unwarranted.

It follows that the conviction must be set aside, the proceedings quashed, and defendant discharged.

The other Justices concurred.

DELAWARE COURT OF ERRORS AND APPEALS.

DOE, d. Spencer HITCH et al., Plffs. in Err.,
v.

Wellington PATTEN.

(....Houst....)

A devise of "all the tracts or parcels of land belonging to" the testator, to his son, is sufficient, without any words of inheritance, to pass a fee, where preceding clauses of the will have expressly stated that each of testator's other children and his wife should receive a certain specific portion of property, "and no more," thus expressly disinheriting the other heirs; and where the introductory clause of the will indicates a purpose to dispose of testator's entire estate.

(January 16, 1889.)

ERROR to the Superior Court of Sussex County, to review a judgment for defendant in an action of ejectment. Affirmed.

Plaintiffs claimed title to the property in controversy as heirs at law of Spencer Hitch, Sr., deceased, whose will was admitted to probate February 21, 1797.

Defendant claimed title through Spencer Hitch, Jr., who died in 1873 and who was a devisee under the will of Spencer Hitch, Sr. The contention of plaintiffs was that Spencer Hitch, Jr., took but a life estate under said will, while defendant claimed that he took a fee simple.

2 L. R. A.

The court below (Comegys, Ch. J.), directed a verdict for defendant, and plaintiffs took this writ.

Further facts appear in the opinion.

Mr. N. B. Smithers, for plaintiffs in error:

In order to pass a fee by a devise of lands there must be words of limitation or tantamount expressions having the same operative meaning. No words will be sufficient unless they import the gift of an inheritable interest.

It is not enough that there shall be probable intention to disinherit the heir, or that a layman would say that such intention was unequivocally manifested. It must be apparent to the legal eye.

Although a testator may have commenced his will with the declaration of his purpose to dispose of his whole estate, or may have given a nominal legacy to his heir, or may have declared his intention wholly to disinherit him, or may have given to the heir a prior estate for life in the subject matter, or there may be a general devise to one after an antecedent devise for life to another, none of these circumstances nor all concurring in the same instrument will give more than an estate for the life of the devisee in lands devised to him without words of limitation.

Denn v. Gaskin, Cowp. 657; Right v. Sidebotham, Doug. 759; Doe v. Clarke, 2 Bos. & P. N. R. 848; Doe v. Wright, 8 T. R. 64; Doe v. Allen, 8 T. R. 497; Goodright v. Barron, 11 East, 220; Pocock v. Bishop of Lincoln, 3 Brod. & B. 27, 7 Eng. C. L. 385; Doe v. Tucker, 8 Barn. & Ad. 473, 23 Eng. C. L. 128; Doe v. Parratt, 8 Barn. & Ad. 469, 23 Eng. C. L. 121; Lloyd v. Jackson, L. R. 2 Q. B. 269; 2 Jarman, 5th Am. ed. 267; Wright v. Denn, 28 U. S. 10 Wheat. 204 (6 L. ed. 308).

Cordry v. Adams, 1 Harr. (Del.) 439, is clearly distinguishable from this case, and besides has repeatedly received judicial condemnation.

See Dodd v. Doe, 2 Houst. 76; Doe v. Alexander, 2 Houst. 234; Doe v. Biddle, 2 Houst. 408; Doe v. Lampleugh, 3 Houst. 462. See also Van Dersee v. Van Dersee, 30 Barb. 831, 36 N. Y. 231; Steele v. Thompson, 14 Serg. & R. 84; Beall v. Holmes, 6 Harr. & J. 205.

Messrs. Alfred P. Robinson and Charles M. Cullen, for defendant in error:

Technical words are not required to pass a fee; nor is it necessary that the operative words be used in the devise itself; but such an intention, when clearly gathered from the whole will, will enlarge a general devise to a fee.

Doe v. Dill, 1 Houst. 410; Cook v. Holmes, 11 Mass. 530, 531.

In this will this intention is not left to mere conjecture as a case of voluit, sed non dixit, but is to be clearly gathered from the words of the will itself. The introductory clause shows an evident intention of devising the whole estate.

While it is true that this is not of itself sufficient to enlarge a subsequent general devise to a fee, as was ruled by this very court in the case of Dodd v. Dodd, 2 Houst. 76, it is also true that it is always adverted to by the court in ascertaining the intention of the testator in subsequent devises.

Beachcroft v. Beachcroft, 2 Vern. 690; Tanner v. Wise, 3 P. Wms. 295; Grayson v. Atkinson, 1 Wils. 333; Hogan v. Jackson, Cowp. 299; Locacres v. Blight, Id. 352; Smith v. Coffin, 2 H. Bl. 444; Wiles v. Wiles, 7 Bing. 664, 20 Eng. C. L. 280; Doe v. Gilbert, 3 Brod. & B. 85, 7 Eng. C. L. 359; Knight v. Selby, 3 Man. & Gr. 91, 42 Eng. C. L. 57; Butler v. Little, 3 Maine, 239; Kennon v. McRoberts, 1 Wash. (Va.) 99; Davies v. Miller, 1 Call, 127; Wyatt v. Sadler, 1 Munf. 537; Goodrich v. Harding, 3 Rand. 230; Winchester v. Tilghman, 1 Harr. & McH. 452; Clark v. Mikell, 8 Dessaus. 168; Doe v. Harter, 7 Blackf. 489; Chartir v. Otis, 41 Barb. 525; Jackson v. Merrill, 6 Johns. 186; Fox v. Phelps, 17 Wend. 399; Van Dersee v. Van Dersee, 36 N. Y. 231; Shriver v. Meyer, 19 Pa. 87; Wood v. Hills, Id. 513; Shinn v. Holmes, 25 Pa. 142; Walker v. Walker, 28 Pa. 46.

In addition to the general expressions of the introductory clause, the fact that the testator mentions and includes each one of his children and heirs in his will and that he is careful to add to the bequest to each of the others the words, "no more" shows conclusively that he intended to, and thought he had, disposed of his whole estate and had devised a fee to Spencer, Jr.

Cordry v. Adams, 1 Harr. (Del.) 439.

The following cases directly support the case of Cordry v. Adams:

2 L. R. A.

Doe v. Clayton, 8 East, 141; Butler v. Little, 3 Maine, 239; Winchester v. Tilghman, 1 Harr. & McH. 452; Clark v. Mikell, 8 Dessaus. 168; Doe v. Harter, 7 Blackf. 488; Cook v. Holmes, 11 Mass. 523; Baker v. Bridge, 12 Pick. 27.

The words "belonging to or that I am possessed with," in the devise to Spencer, Jr., were used by the testator as expressive not only of the corpus, or subject of the devise, but also of his interest in the lands, and especially when taken in connection with the intention shown in the whole will, are operative to carry the fee.

Smith v. Berry, 8 Ohio, 366; Pitman v. Stevens, 15 East, 505; 4 Kent, Com. *536; Fogg v. Clark, 1 N. H. 163; Wile v. Wilce, 7 Bing. 664, 20 Eng. C. L. 280; Shelton v. Alcor, 11 Conn. 248; Spear v. Hooper, 22 Pick. 144; 3 Jarman, Wills, *276.

Houston, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

As the ruling in this case in the court below was made directly on the authority of the case of Cordry v. Adams, 1 Harr. (Del.) 439, and the soundness of that decision, under the facts and circumstances of the case, as reported by Judge Harrington, is questioned and denied by the learned counsel for the plaintiff in error in this case, I will, in the first place, remark that no one, I think, who has traced the current of decisions in England on the question of the construction of devises of this kind, from the times of Talbot and Hardwicke, Lord Chancellors, and Lord Mansfield and Lord Kenyon, Chief Justices, down to the commencement of the present century, at least, if not to the time of that first reported case of the kind in the courts of this State, in the year 1834, will either be surprised at that decision, or be prepared beyond a reasonable doubt to dissent from it.

And the less will he be so, I think, after reading, in connection with the multitude of decisions to which I have before adverted, what Lord Kenyon said on the subject, first, in the case of Moor v. Mellor, 5 T. R. 558, that: "Had there not been such a current of authorities as we find in the books, since the passing of the Statute of Wills, on the construction of wills, to 'further' (as it has been called) the intention of devisors, perhaps it would have been better that the same strict words had been required in testamentary dispositions of land as in those by deed; because then the language of passing estates would have been so familiar that few questions would have arisen on wills. For it has been often observed that few questions arise on the construction of deeds, when compared to those which daily arise on wills. But we are bound to consider the series of authorities on this subject as the law of the land; and it would be extremely dangerous now to remove those landmarks of real property, on which mankind has acted for such a length of time. In many of the cases that have been litigated, and in which it has been decided that the first devisee was only entitled to a life estate, one cannot but suspect, privately speaking, that it was the intention of the devisor to give the absolute property to the first taker; and Lord Mansfield used to observe that the common class of men imagined that they could devise a fee simple by the same words that are sufficient to give a piece of plate. But the contrary of such a supposition has now been decided by so many authorities that it would be dangerous to shake them; and in deciding on the construction of wills we must not indulge in conjectures or wishes, but determine on the words used according to those authorities. Where the word 'estate' has occurred, that word has been held ex vi termini to pass a fee. The courts, indeed, have gone as far as they could to give the absolute interest to the first devisee; but there are certain limits which they have put on their construction of wills, and we must take care not to transgress them."

And in the same case Grose, J., said: "In the construction of wills we must be guided by those rules which we find established in former cases. And one rule is clear: that the heir at law is not to be disinherited, unless the devisors intention to disinherit him can be collected from the words of the will. What is a sufficient proof of that intention is not, indeed, accurately defined, as applicable to every case that may arise."

And again, in the case of Doe v. Allen, 8 T. R. 497, recurring to the same subject, Lord Kenyon remarked: "It has been frequently lamented that at first, after the passing of the Statute of Wills, the courts did not require the same technical expressions in a will to pass a real estate as are necessary in conveying the estate by deed, for then we should not have had more cases on the construction of wills than of deeds; and it very rarely happens now that a question arises on the construction of a limitation in a deed. There are certain received words that are well known, and have from time to time been used by conveyancers in drawing deeds, and these exclude all doubt as to their legal meaning. But in expounding wills a greater latitude of construction has been allowed. After an anxious endeavor to discover the intention of a testator, it frequently happens that we can only conjecture what his intention was, and sometimes there is scarcely enough to form even a conjecture. Formerly Sir J. Bland made his own will, and at the close of it he said that he had disposed of his estate in so clear a manner that he thought it impossible for any lawyer to doubt about it. This will was afterwards contested, and it came before Lord Hardwicke, who said that he was utterly at a loss to conceive what was the real intention of the testator that he wished he could find some ground on which to form a conjecture. So in the case of Right v. Sidebotham, Doug. 759, Lord Mansfield, whose mind was as equal to the explanation of difficult points as that of any lawyer who ever sat in Westminster Hall, admitted the difficulty of deciding questions of this kind, saying: 'I verily believe that in almost every case where by law a general devise of lands is reduced to an estate for life the intent of the testator is thwarted; for ordinary people do not distinguish between real and personal property. The rule of law, however, is established and certain that express words of limitation, or words tantamount, are necessary to pass an estate of inheritance. All my estate, or all my interest, will do; but all my lands lying in such a place is not sufficient. Such words are considered merely as descriptive of the local situation, and only carry an estate for life. Nor are words tending to disinherit the heir at law sufficient to prevent his taking, unless the estate is given to somebody else. I have no doubt but the testator's intention here was to disinherit his heir at law, as in the case of Denn v. Gaskin, Cowp. 657.' And yet in that case he was not bold enough to decide that the devisee took more than an estate for life."

But Lord Kenyon further observes: "The plaintiff's counsel, in arguing this case, anticipates the three grounds on which it might be contended on the part of the defendant that a fee passed by this will. The first is the introductory clause, on which the case of Ibbetson v. Beckwith, Cas. t. Talb. 157, is decisive.

That case was decided by a great lawyer, Lord Talbot, who thought that such a clause, accompanied by other words, in a will, would pass a fee, but that that alone was not sufficient for that purpose; and this case has been followed by a variety of others to the same effect;" and in which he might have added to the illustrious name of Lord Talbot the no less illustrious names of Lord Hardwicke and Lord Mansfield as having afterwards expressly decided the same to be a sound rule in the construction of wills and devises of real estates without such words of limitation as are usual and necessary in deeds to convey an estate of inheritance in land.

And thus stood the adjudged cases on this question in England, with the emphatic indorsement by Lord Kenyon; also that the case of Ibbetson v. Beckwith is decisive upon that question, when the decision was made to the same effect in the case of Cordry v. Adams, 1 Harr. (Del.) 441, in the Superior Court of this State in 1834.

But notwithstanding the number and variety of the cases on the construction of wills referred to by Lord Kenyon, there are two well settled rules of general application on the subject clearly deducible from them, the first of which is that the heir at law is not to be disinherited except by express words in the will, or by necessary implication arising from them; and the second is that, in the construction of a will, the intention of the testator, as expressed in it, and collected from the whole of it, must prevail, provided it can be carried into effect consistently with the rules of law on the subject; and that, although a general devise of land, or a devise of land without words of limitation, gives to the devisee an estate in it for his life only, if no intention on the part of the testator to the contrary is sufficiently expressed or indicated in the devise itself, or in some other part or parts of the will, yet, if in such a devise, or in any other part or parts of the whole will, the intention of the testator to give him a larger estate, as an estate of inheritance or a fee simple estate in the land, is sufficiently expressed or indicated, the devisee will take by virtue of it such enlarged estate in it. And in ascertaining in such cases if any such further intention on the part of the testator had been sufficiently expressed or disclosed in any part of the will by a careful view and consideration of the whole of it, it was early decided in the courts of England that among other parts of a will the introductory clause might be considered, though not sufficient of itself to enlarge such a general devise; but it might be taken, with the other parts of it, to show the meaning which the testator attached to such devise, and to what extent he intended the devisee to be benefited by it.

And after this had been once adopted, it soon became a settled rule of construction that, if the introductory clause of the will contained such words as the following: "And touching all such worldly or temporal estate as it has pleased God to bless or endue me with in this life, I give and dispose of in the following manner," etc.—which were quite common in the form of wills at that period—as the word "estate" prima facie imported and included in its legal sense and meaning all the legal right and title which the testator then had in law in and to the land devised, it ex vi termini imported an evident intention on the part of the testator to devise all his right and title in it to the devisee named, and not as by any means descriptive of the corpus and locality of the land merely, but including with that the legal idea and conception of all the right and title to and ownership of the testator in the premises; and if, in addition to this, there was to be found anywhere else in the will the intention of the testator sufficiently expressed or necessarily implied to disinherit his heir at law, the court considered it conclusive evidence that he intended to give to the devisee his estate in the land absolutely, and not for life merely, although there were no words of limitation whatever expressed in the devise.

And in one case, which had been several times argued before the Court of King's Bench in Ireland, and afterwards was brought before the King's Bench in England, Lord Mansfield and the whole court, after a careful consideration of it, and against the argument of Buller, who was then one of the counsel in the case, concluded to apply the same ruling to a will in which the words employed in the introductory clause of it were, "And as to my worldly substance, I give and bequeath," etc., by interpreting the words "worldly substance" to mean the same in that case as the words "worldly estate." Hogan v. Jackson. Cowp. 299.

But Lord Kenyon, as we have already seen, had also held it to be an established and certain rule that express words of limitation or words tantamount are necessary, even in a will, to pass an estate of inheritance. He says: "'All my estate,' or 'all my interest,' will do; but 'all my lands lying in such a place' is not sufficient. Such words are considered merely as descriptive of the local situation, and only carry an estate for life. Nor are words tending to disinherit the heir at law sufficient to prevent his taking, unless the estate is given to somebody else."

And, such having become the settled rule of testamentary construction in regard to disinheriting the heir at law in devises of real estate to a stranger, it was probably suggested to someone familiar with it, and with what is said to have been the legal rule in ancient Rome, that a father could not disinherit his son without leaving him at least something in his will, who first prepared a last will and testament in the form of John Cordry's and Spencer Hitch's, which were evidently drawn from one and the same original model, although by different rural scribes, presumably well on to a hundred years ago, when school teachers were few and far between in their respective neighborhoods; for in what better or more emphatic and unequivocal terms could a testator express his intention to disinherit his heir at law in his will than to begin with the grave and solemn declaration of his intention to give and dispose of such worldly estate which it has pleased God to bless him with in this life in the following manner: "I give and bequeath to my well beloved wife, Sophia Hitch, the third part of my estate, after all my just debts are paid, or the third of my estate, and no more;" and then to follow it thus:

"Item. I give and bequeath to Sarah Snellen one hundred feet square of ground at the north-west side of my house, where the garden now is, and the back small room in my house, and one bed and bedding, and no more. Item. I give and bequeath unto Anna Hitch, my daughter, one cow and calf, one bed and bedding, and no more. Item. I give and bequeath unto Lilly Hitch, my daughter, one cow and calf, one bed and bedding, and no more. Item. I give and bequeath unto Sovereign Hitch, my son, one horse and saddle, and no more. Item. I give and bequeath unto Nelly Hitch, my daughter, one cow and calf, one bed and bedding, and no more. Item. I give and bequeath unto William Hitch, my son, one horse, one bed and bedding, and no more. Item. I give and bequeath unto Clement Hitch, my son, one horse, one bed and bedding, and no more. Item. I give and bequeath unto Elget Hitch, my son, one cow and calf, one bed and bedding, and no more. Item. I give and bequeath unto Polly Hitch, my daughter, one young horse or mare, one bed and bedding, and no more. Item. I give and bequeath unto Spencer Hitch, my son, all the tracts or parcels of land belonging to me or that I am possessed of. And further, I do hereby appoint and ordain Sophia Hitch, my dear wife, my whole and sole executor of this my last will and testament, and hereby revoking all former wills," etc.

I was about to inquire, when I commenced reading this will, item by item, and at full length, by what clearer, stronger, and more expressive words could the testator have declared his intention to disinherit or cut off every one of the devisees or legatees named in it, from his widow down to his son Spencer, from taking any more of his worldly estate than he has expressly given to each one of them in the will, excepting only the last one named in it, his son Spencer, and who evidently was the favorite child and prospective heir at law in coparcenary of the testator, and the preferred and special object of his bounty, so far as his numerous children, ten in all, then living, were concerned in the disposition of his estate under the will, and to each of whom, in marked contrast with the liberal devise to his son Spencer, he is careful to give and bequeath a specific legacy of "one cow and calf, one bed and bedding," at least, "and no more," of this estate, obviously and necessarily implied, and so to be read and understood, when taken in connection with the first in the remarkable series of brief and concise items, in which he gives to his wife "the third part of his estate, after all his just debts were paid, or the third part of his estate, and no more," and which here clearly mean, and cannot possibly have any other meaning, than "no more," or "no other part" of my estate.

And the same uniform words following in quick succession at the close of each succeeding item until we come to the last, to his son Spencer, they must be understood, of course, to have the same meaning in all the succeeding items which they have in the first; for if this be not the correct interpretation of their meaning, ridiculous and absurd as it would seem, we would have to hold that they literally mean, say, for instance, in the item just before specially adverted to, no more "one cow and calf, one bed and bedding," and nothing else; and equally unreasonable and absurd would be the meaning of them in every other item in the will, when so interpreted and read by me.

The case of Cordry v. Adams was decided about the time I commenced reading law, and was published in the first volume of Judge Harrington's Reports in the same year in which I was admitted to the Bar. The judicial history of the case and circumstances attending the hearing and determination of it in the superior court, as well as the novelty and importance of it at that time in this State, attracted a good deal of attention to it from the Bar throughout the State; but as the decision was known to have had, after deliberate and mature consideration, the sanction of as great a lawyer and as great a judge as ever adorned either the Bar or the Bench in this State (I mean Thomas Clayton, then Chief Justice of the Court and of the State), I never heard the validity or soundness of the decision called in question during the eighteen years I was in practice at the Bar, nor until after the case of Dodd v. Doe, 2 Houst. 76, had been decided in this court, at the June Term, 1859, four years after I came on the Bench.

Now, the devise in the will of John Cordry, of lands, without words of limitation, to his son William, was considered and construed by the court to constitute a devise in fee, to effect the intention of the testator as manifested in the devise, and other parts of the will taken in connection with it; and these consisted of the introductory clause of the will, which was as follows:

"As it respects what God has been pleased to bless me with in this life, I give, devise and dispose of in the following manner and form, viz.: Item. I give and bequeath to my daughter Milly Adams one shilling, and no more. Item. I give and bequeath to my son Spencer Cordry one shilling, and to have no more of my estate. Item. I give and bequeath to my daughter Unice Adams one shilling, and no more. Item. I give and bequeath to my son Isaac Cordry one shilling, and to have no more of my estate."

There was also an item in it giving and bequeathing twenty-five acres of land therein described to his son John Cordry, to him and his heirs forever. And also an item giving and bequeathing to his son William Cordry (which was the devise immediately and directly in question before the court in the case) "one feather bed, one cow and calf, and one half part of the residue of my lands which I have not devised or deeded away."

Then follows this: "Item. I give and bequeath to my son Elijah Cordry ten acres of land adjoining a tract which I have deeded to him, to be laid off, etc.; also one feather bed, and one cow and calf."

And then this: "Item. I give and bequeath to my son James Cordry one half part of the residue of all my lands which I have not already disposed of by will or deed; but if James should die without issue it is my will and desire that my son William should have his part, to him and his heirs forever."

Then finally this: "Item. I give to my four youngest children, Sally, Betsy, Nelly and James Cordry, all the residue of my personal property which is not before named or given in this my last will, to them and their heirs forever."

And under this will the court held the devise to William Cordry, being general and without any words of limitation, carried but a life estate, unless a manifest intent was apparent, from the other parts of the will, to give him a larger estate; that the introductory clause, though important in a consideration of the whole will, is not of itself sufficient to enlarge the general devise, but may be taken in connection with the other parts to show the meaning which the testator attached to his devise to William, and the extent to which he designed him to be benefited by that devise; but, independently of the introductory clause, that it appeared from the will that the testator designed to dispose of his whole estate in it, and not to die intestate as to any part thereof; and, referring to the various items of the will, which they considered clearly manifested such an intention on his part, the court specially refers to the bequest to his daughter Unice Adams, who was the petitioner in the case, of "one shilling; and no more," as a conclusive indication that the testator intended that she should in no event have anything more than the shilling he bequeathed to her. And I must say that I do not think that the soundness of this particular conclusion and ruling in the case has ever been, or ever can be, reasonably questioned.

In one respect, however, the Cordry will falls short of the will of Spencer Hitch in this case, and that is in respect to the introductory clauses of them, perhaps—although in that particular the two wills are as much alike as in other respects; for the introductory clause in the former will is in these words: "As it respects what God has been pleased to bless me with in this life, I give, devise and dispose of in the following manner and form," etc.; while in the latter it is in these words: "And as touching such worldly estate wherewith it has pleased God to bless me in this life, I give and dispose of in the following manner," etc.

Lord Mansfield and his judicial associates in his day would doubtless have held the former to be tantamount to the latter, as each testator alike evidently meant to say, in the slightly different form of words used for one and the same purpose, that he intended to dispose of all his estate in the manner and form adopted by him in his will, although the brief and simple words, "all my worldly estate," or "all my estate," would be more exact and appropriate in legal contemplation to express such an intention by a testator in the introductory clause of his will.

And thus stood this State upon the question on the authority of the decision in the reported case of Cordry v. Adams, when the case in regard to Aaron Dodd's will arose in the same county, some twenty-five years afterwards. It was in an action of ejectment, and on the trial of the case in the superior court a special verdict was taken after the will in question had been produced and put in evidence before the jury, subject to the opinion of the court on questions of law reserved to be heard before all the judges in the court of errors and appeals; and the question of law reserved upon the will was whether general words in the introductory clause of a will, such as, "Touching all my worldly things, I give and dispose of as follows," etc., which occurred in the will in question, will have the effect to enlarge a subsequent devise of lands in it, without words of limitation, to an estate in fee simple. It was heard before all the judges—Harrington, Ch.; Gilpin, Ch. J.; Milligan, Wooten and Houston, JJ.

Wooten, J., announced the opinion of the court, and said: "The devise was of real estate, without words of limitation, to be equally divided between Absalom and Azael Dodd, sons of the testator; and the general words in the introductory clause of the will—'Touching the worldly things which it had pleased God to bless him with,' etc.—had been relied upon to enlarge the devise to a fee; and the case of Cordry v. Adams, 1 Harr. (Del.) 439, had been cited in support of such a construction. But the present was distinguishable from that case, inasmuch as the will of Cordry in the case referred to contained bequests on devises to the other heirs, with the express direction that they were to have no more of his estate, and on which the court rested their decision mainly, if not entirely; for they expressly recognized and affirmed the general principle contended for in this case by the counsel for the plaintiff below, that the introductory clause in a will, such as we have in the present instance, though important in the consideration of the whole will, is not of itself sufficient to enlarge a general devise—that is, a devise of land without words of limitation—to a fee; although they add, in that particular case, that it might be taken, in connection with the other parts of the will, to show the meaning which the testator attached to his devise to William, and the extent to which he designed him to be benefited by it, accompanied as it was with a preceding bequest to his daughter Unice, the wife of Adams, who were the plaintiffs in the action, with the express provision that she was to have 'no more' of his estate. But Cordry v. Adams has never been considered an authority beyond the special circumstances and ruling of the court in that case." Dodd v. Doe.

This decision was made, without a dissenting opinion, by all the judges of the State, constituting a tribunal under a clause in the Constitution of the State specially provided for the purpose of giving to any question of law decided by its unanimous sanction the weight of the highest authority that can be given to a judicial decision in any of its courts, and also of higher authority within its own limits than any decision delivered elsewhere upon a question of this kind.

And rigidly restricting and confining it to the special circumstances and ruling of the court, what does it clearly and conclusively decide as abstract rule or principle of law applicable in such a case? It affirmed in express terms the decision of the court below, and the right of the plaintiff below to recover in the devise in question, and that the devisee, by virtue of it and the other parts of the will specially mentioned in the opinion, took an estate in fee in the lands devised; and expressly distinguished the case, then directly before it, of Dodd v. Doe from the case of Cordry v. Adams, and particularly affirmed the ruling of the court below that it was so distinguishable, inasmuch as the will of Cordry contained bequests or devises, which the Dodd will does not, to the other heirs, with express direction that they were to have no more of his estate, and on which the court rested their decision mainly, if not entirely; and upon which distinction, I may here add, the court in bank solely rested its decision in the case of Dodd v. Doe, on the Dodd will, as constituting such a wide and substantial difference between them.

And the reason for that ruling was that such bequests or devises to other heirs at law of the testator, with an express direction that they were to have no more of his estate, clearly showed that the testator must have intended by the general devise to give the devisee all his estate in the land, and not an estate for his life merely; as in that case, upon his death, every heir at law would take by descent his respective share in it, contrary to that intention so declared by him. But there was no such direction contained in any item or in any part whatever of the will of Aaron Dodd, the testator in the case then before the court, while the will now before us, of Spencer Hitch, is not only much stronger in this and other respects than the will of Aaron Dodd, but the will of John Cordry also; for, in the first place, the words employed in the introductory clause of his will are "worldly estate," which, according to the well established legal import of the word estate included not only his real and personal property, but also whatever estate in law he then owned in the former; and, in the next place, every item in the will, including even the first—the devise to his wife, after the payment of all his just debts, of the third part of his estate—down to the last—the devise to Spencer Hitch, his son—terminates with the express direction and no more, as in the Cordry will. But the fact that they are omitted from the last item, containing the devise to him of all the tracts or parcels of land belonging to him (the testator), is so peculiar as not only to attract our attention, but to justly entitle it to particular weight, when taken into consideration with all the other items in the will, consisting of ten in number, and in which a devise or bequest, made to every other son and daughter, together with the wife even of the testator, is terminated with the same uniform and express direction, in determining what the testator meant by this marked discrimination in the dispositions of his will between his son Spencer and every other one of his children and heirs at law. In my judgment it is susceptible of but one interpretation, and that is that he evidently intended thereby to disinherit every one of them but Spencer as to the lands so devised to him.

and by so doing to devise them to him in fee, and not for his life only. And upon the authority of the similarity in the circumstances, and the ruling and the principle or rule of construction recognized in the case of Dodd v. Doe, I think Spencer Hitch took under the will of his father an estate in fee in the lands devised to him. And accordingly I have come to the conclusion that this case comes within the rule of construction stated by me in the commencement of this opinion: that, although a devise of real estate without words of limitation will give a life estate merely, yet, if the testator, in the devise itself, or in any part or parts of the will, expressly disinherits the heir at law, it will have the legal effect, by judicial construction, to enlarge it to a devise in fee.

As to the other cases cited from our state reports by the counsel for the plaintiffs, I must say with reference to the cases of Doe v. Alexander, 2 Houst. 284, and of Doe v. Biddle, Id. 402, that whatever conflict, discrepancy or inconsistency may appear or exist between them or either of them and the rulings of the court in the case of Cordry v. Adams, and expressly recognized and affirmed by the court in bank in the case of Dodd v. Doe, 2 Houst. 76, I have never considered those cases of equal weight and authority in our courts with the latter case, because they were decisions by three judges only, in an inferior court, and of course could not invalidate or overrule the decision in the last mentioned case as one of the very highest authority before this tribunal and throughout this State.

And although the case of Doe v. Lamplugh, 8 Houst. 461, was also a decision by all the judges in bank, the court, in its opinion, casts some rather indefinite taint of suspicion upon the decision in the case of Dodd v. Doe, as an instance in which the court had overstepped the limit of its judicial power in the construction of such devises; and yet that case varies so much in the questionable words used in the introductory clause of the will, and in the special circumstances of it, from the Cordry will, and is withal marked with such an unlimited resort to the context, scope and apparent objects of the will in question, in order to discover from it that by a devise of real estate to one of his relations, "to him and his heirs, if any he should have; but if he should die without any heir, then in that case the land and premises so devised to him shall be the right and property of my grandson, George May," that the testator's intention was to give the first devisee an estate tail in the premises, and if he died without issue or heirs of his body—which he did—that the right and property in them should go to his grandson, George May, in fee; and although that case expressly intimates, as I have before observed, that the court had overstepped the limit in the case of Cordry v. Adams, it certainly goes quite as far if not further, in the same direction, in ruling in the case of George Black's will that, "Whether or not the words 'right and property,' when applied to a devised estate, are sufficient proprio vigore, unexplained by the context or scope of the will, to pass a fee, yet if it is clear to the court from the context and general scope of the will that they were used by the testator with an intent to pass the fee simple, the court must so construe them;" for I must say that I know of no case that goes any further in that direction; and therefore, instead of impugning or weakening, I have always considered it as sustaining and affirming, the rule of construction laid down in Cordry v. Adams, and expressly recognized by all the Judges in Dodd v. Doe; and, having been thus twice rated by the highest court of last resort in this State, I have ever since considered the weight and authority of them paramount in the courts of this State to any decision elsewhere to the contrary, not even excepting a decision of the House of Lords in England.

Paynter, J., concurring:

The Statute of this State (Rev. Code, chap. 84, § 24) provides that "A devise of real estate in a will, without words of limitation, shall be construed to pass the fee simple, or other the whole estate or interest which the testator could lawfully devise in such real estate, unless a contrary intention appear by the will." This statute was first enacted February 20, 1849, and afterwards re-enacted in the Code of 1852.

The will of Spencer Hitch, Sr., now under consideration in this case, was made and admitted to probate in 1797, long before this said statute was enacted, which changed the rule of English Law in that regard. The late Act, therefore, has no application to this case, and the will of the said testator must be construed according to the law in force prior to the enactment of said statute. There being no Act of Assembly on the statute books of this State, prior to the passage of said Act, in conflict with the common law concerning the construction of devises of real estate without words of limitation, the rules of construction at common law must govern us in ascertaining the intention of Spencer Hitch, Sr., as expressed in his last will and testament.

The rule at common law, as laid down by Kent and other text book writers upon this subject, is that "The intention of the testator is the first and great object of inquiry; and to this object technical rules are, to a certain extent, made subservient. The intention of the testator, to be collected from the whole will, is to govern, provided it be not unlawful, or inconsistent with the rules of law. The control which is given to the intention by the rules of law is to be understood to apply, not to the construction of words, but to the nature of the estate—to such general regulations in respect to the estate as the law will permit. To allow the testator to interfere with the established rules of law would be to permit every man to make a law for himself, and disturb the metes and bounds of property. It does not require the word heirs to convey a fee, but other words denoting an intention to pass the whole interest of the testator, as a devise of 'all my estate,' 'all my interest,' 'all I am worth or own,' 'all my right,' 'all my title,' or 'all I shall die possessed of,' and many other expressions of the like import, will carry an estate of inheritance, if there be nothing in other parts of the will to limit or control the operation of the words."

The learned author says, further, that in the construction of devises the intention of the testator is admitted to be the pole star by which the courts must steer; yet that intention is liable to be very much controlled by the application of technical rules, and the superior force of technical expressions. The question still occurs whether the settled rules of construction are not the best means employed to discover the intention. It is certain that the law will not suffer the intention to be defeated, merely because the testator has not clothed his ideas in technical language. But no enlightened judge will disregard a series of adjudged cases bearing on the point, even as to the construction of wills. Established rules, and a habitual reverence for judicial decisions, tend to avoid the mischiefs of uncertainty in the disposition of property, and the much greater mischief of leaving to the courts the exercise of a fluctuating and arbitrary discretion. The soundest sages of the law, and the solid dictates of wisdom, have recommended and enforced the authority of settled rules in all the dispositions of property, in order to avoid the ebb and flow of the reason and fancy, the passions and prejudices, of tribunals. When a particular expression in a will has received a definite meaning by express adjudications, that meaning ought to be adhered to, for the sake of uniformity and of security in the disposition of landed property. The generally accepted doctrine is that an expression used by the deviser denoting only a description of the estate, without the use of words of limitation, passes only a life estate to the devisee; but if the words used by the testator denote the quantity of interest which he possesses, then a fee passes.

In this case, Spencer Hitch, Sr., after mentioning in the introductory clause that, "As touching such worldly estate warwith it hath pleased God to bless me with in this life, I dispose of in the following manner," gives and bequeaths in ten items to each of his children and heirs at law, not including Spencer Hitch, Jr., certain legacies and properties therein mentioned, and saying at the end of each item, "and no more." He then, in the eleventh and last item of his said will, uses the following language: "I give and bequeath unto Spencer Hitch, my son, all the tracts or parcels of land belonging to or that I am posed with. And further, I do hereby appoint and ordain Sophia Hitch, my daier Wife, my hole and Sole Executor, of this my last will and testament, and hereby revoking all former wills."

The question before us is whether Spencer Hitch, Jr., mentioned in the said eleventh and last item of said will, took a life estate or an estate in fee simple under and by virtue of the said last will and testament of Spencer Hitch, Sr., deceased. That the great object of inquiry in the construction of a will is to ascertain the intention of the testator, that such intention must be ascertained from the language of the whole will, and, when so ascertained, that the intention of the testator, if legal, must prevail—are general principles of law so clearly established that it seems almost unnecessary to cite authorities in their support.

The principles are laid down by Kent, Barr, Jarman, Roberts, Hawkins, and other elementary writers upon this subject, while the same principles are applied in numerous adjudicated 2 L. R. A.

cases, both in the American and English reports. But such intention must be ascertained from the language of the testator. To jump to the conclusion that a testator meant to devise a fee when he did not express such an intention would not be justified by any established rule of law as to the construction of wills. The intention of a testator must not be left to mere conjecture, nor ought a devise without words of limitation to be construed a fee on the ground of voluit, sed non dixit. Such intention must be gathered from the language of the whole will. The testator must express by some means his intention: not necessarily in technical words, not necessarily by saying "his heirs," not necessarily in the perspicuous language of the legal expert, or with the polished expression of literary cultivation; but he must nevertheless so express himself that his intentions may be ascertained from the language used in the will. In some forms he must say as well as wish.

It has been decided in this State, in the case of Dodd v. Doe, 2 Houst. 76, that "A general devise in the introductory clause of a will, indicating a purpose on the part of the testator to dispose of all his estate by the will, cannot enlarge a subsequent and particular devise of land without words of limitation to a fee." But the court in this case, while deciding that such words in the introductory clause were not sufficient of themselves and alone to enlarge the estate into a fee, did not deny the principle as laid down in Cordry v. Adams, 1 Harr. (Del.) 441, that the introductory clause was important in a consideration of the whole will, and may be taken, in connection with the other parts, to show the meaning which the testator attached to his devise to the devisee, and the extent to which he designed him to be benefited by that devise. The same principle is recognized in the cases of Wilce v. Wilce, 7 Bing. 664, 20 Eng. C. L. 280; Knight v. Selby, 8 Man. & G. 92, 42 Eng. C. L. 57; Jackson v. Merrill, 6 Johns. 185; and in many other cases decided both in this country and in England.

The words used by the testator in this case in the introductory clause are: "And as touching such worldly estate warwith it hath pleased God to bless me with in this life, I give and dispose of in the following manner." His use of the words "such worldly estate," etc., if they had been used in the item of devise itself, would go far towards indicating his intention to pass his whole interest in the property, which was a fee. But in the introductory clause alone, without anything expressed in the will showing such intention, those words are not sufficient for that purpose. It becomes necessary, therefore, to examine the words of the will in connection with the language of the introductory clause. As we have seen, he mentions and includes each one of his children and heirs in his will, and adds to the bequest of each one the words "no more," until he mentions Spencer Hitch, Jr., to whom he devises the lands in question, without words of limitation.

The will of John Cordry, in the case of Cordry v. Adams, was very similar in many respects to the will now under consideration. The introductory clause said: "As it respects what God has been pleased to bless me with in this life, I give, devise and dispose of in the following manner and form." He then bequeaths legacies, etc., adding to each sometimes the words, "no more," and again the words, "no more of my estate." He devised the lands in question in that case to the devisee, without words of limitation. Judge Harrington, in announcing the opinion of the court, after speaking of the introductory clause, to which we have already referred, said: "Independently of the introductory clause, it does appear from the will that the testator designed to part with his whole estate, and not to die intestate as to any part thereof; for he notices all of his children, even those to whom, having probably been advanced by him to the extent of their equal share, he bequeathed a shilling, and 'no more;' recognizes certain conveyances by deed which he had already made part of his property; and, after some devises of land, he gives to William one half part of the residue of all his lands which he had not already disposed of by will or deed. His personal property he in like manner parcels out, and in a very comprehensive residuary bequest disposes of all 'the residue of his property which is not before named or given in that, his last will,' to his four youngest children. It is impossible to suppose, from this view of the will, that the testator did not design to dispose of all his property, and he expressly declares his intention to do so in the introductory clause, 'As it respects what God has been pleased to bless me with in this life, I give, devise and dispose of,' etc."

The will in the case of Conoway v. Piper, 8 Harr. (Del.) 488, contained a devise to Isaac and John Short, without words of limitation, and afterwards a residuary clause, "that after all the legacies are paid, that the remainder of my estate should be equally divided between Isaac and Leonard and John and Nancy, to them and their heirs." The failure to use words of limitation in the devise to Isaac and John Short, and the use of such words in the residuary clause, showed that the testator omitted them intentionally, while the making of the residuary clause was of itself proof that he desired the reversion to go to his residuary devisees. This case is therefore not necessarily in conflict with Cordry v. Adams. The same questions did not arise.

In the case of Dodd v. Dos, 2 Houst. 76, the introductory clause had been relied upon to enlarge the fee. The court decided that the words, "touching the worldly things which it had pleased God to bless him with," in the introductory clause, would not of itself enlarge the devise to a fee. But though the Judge in announcing the opinion of the court said that the case of "Cordry v. Adams has never been considered an authority beyond the special circumstances and ruling of the court in that case," he thereby recognized the case as authority, as far as such circumstances and rulings were concerned, while he throughout the opinion distinguished the one from the other, "inasmuch as the will of Cordry contained bequests on devises to the other heirs, with the express direction that they were to have no more of his estate, and on which the court rested their decision mainly, if not entirely; for they expressly recognized and affirmed the general principle contended for in this case . . . that the introductory clause in a will such as we have in the present instance, though important in the consideration of the whole will, is not of itself sufficient to enlarge a general devise—that is, a devise of land without words of limitation—to a fee; although they add, in that particular case, that it might be taken, in connection with the other parts of the will, to show the meaning which the testator attached to his devise to William, and the extent to which he designed him to be benefited by it, accompanied as it was with a preceding bequest to his daughter Unice, the wife of Adams, who were the plaintiffs in the action, with the express provision that she was to have 'no more' of his estate."

The case of Doe v. Alexander, 2 Houst. 234, as reported, is seemingly in conflict with Cordry v. Adams. But, upon examining the probated will of Hezekiah Morris, which was the will under consideration in that case, the testator did not use words of the same signification in the introductory clause as did the testator in the will considered in the case of Cordry v. Adams, or as did Spencer Hitch in the will now under consideration. Hezekiah Morris, in the introductory clause of his will, says: "As touching such worldly goods as it hath pleased God to bless me with, I give and dispose of in the following manner, viz." This language does not show the same intent upon the part of the testator as the words, "what God has been pleased to bless me with in this life," used by the testator in the case of Cordry v. Adams, or the words, "as touching such worldly estate war-with it hath pleased God to bless me with in this life," used by Spencer Hitch, Sr., in the will now under consideration. The word "goods," used by Morris, would only imply personality; or at any rate it does not carry with it as strong a signification of the entire estate as do the words in the introductory clause of the will of John Cordry, or Spencer Hitch, Sr. This language in the introductory clause of the will of Morris does not appear with the charge of the court; but the will, with the introductory clause, was before the court, when Chief Justice Gilpin charged the jury "that the court could not discover any such intention sufficiently apparent and certain in the whole body of it, when taken together, to control the legal signification and construction of the immediate item in question, and which must prevail in the absence of any words of inheritance, or limitation, or other technical and legal expressions necessary to create and confer a title by devise in fee simple." In the construction of the will of Morris, with the said introductory clause, the court had nothing to enable it to construe the devise to Constantine T. Morris a fee simple except the preceding items in the will, in which Morris had bequeathed a pecuniary legacy to each of his heirs at law except Constantine, concluding and terminating the item or clause of bequest to each, respectively, with the following words: "To have the aforesaid legacy, and no more of my estate." This the court decided to be insufficient, of itself, to express the intention of the testator in favor of a fee in the subsequent devise of real estate without words of limitation.

The case of Doe v. Alexander does not overrule the case of Cordry v. Adams in express terms, and is not really in conflict with it when the two cases are analyzed, because the deciaion in Cordry v. Adams was based upon the words "no more" and "no more of my estate," at the end of the bequests preceding the devise of real estate, in connection with the words, "as it respects what God has been pleased to bless me with in this life," in the introductory clause of the will, while in the case of Doe v. Alexander the introductory clause was not in the same words or of the same signification.

In examining and analyzing the different Delaware decisions we therefore find one case—Dodd v. Doe, 2 Houst. 76—deciding that a general devise in the introductory clause of a will indicating a purpose on the part of the testator to dispose of all his estate by the will cannot of itself enlarge a general devise—that is, a devise of lands without words of limitation—to a fee. We find another case—Doe v. Alexander, Id. 234—which virtually decides that when a testator bequeaths several legacies to his children, accompanying the bequest to each with the concluding words, "and to have no more of my estate," such words are not sufficient, of themselves, to construe a subsequent item of a will devising real estate without words of limitation as intending a fee simple.

Still another case—Cordry v. Adams—decides that when the introductory clause says, "As it respects what God has been pleased to bless me with in this life, I give and devise and dispose of as follows," and the body of the will contains bequests and devises to his other children, accompanied with the words at the end of each bequest of "and no more," or "no more of my estate," then upon a construction of the whole will, including the introductory clause, a devise in a subsequent item to another devise without words of limitation shall be considered a fee to effect the interest of the testator.

The case of Doe v. Biddle, 2 Houst. 403, and the case of Doe v. Lamplough, 8 Houst. 461, cited by the plaintiffs, do not decide the question as to the construction of language similar to the language employed by the testator in this case in connection with the introductory clause in the will before us.

In Doe v. Lamplough, speaking of a hypothetical case, the court incidentally mentioned Cordry v. Adams as overstepping the limit; but such was a mere ipse dixit, and not really a decision of the question then before the court.

I can therefore find no case in the Delaware Reports where the language was similar to the will in the case of Cordry v. Adams, and where the courts have absolutely overruled said decision in express language, or have decided a case similar to it in all respects in conflict with said decision. The principles then decided seem to be supported by both English and American authorities, notable among which are the cases of Doe v. Clayton, 8 East, 141; Cook v. Holmes, 11 Mass. 528; Baker v. Bridge, 13 Pick. 27.

In view, therefore, of the case of Cordry v. Adams having stood so long in our reports as an authority upon the questions then decided without being overruled in express terms, and supported, as it is, by both English and American authorities, I do not deem it proper to question it as an authoritative decision in this State at this time. The will of Spencer Hitch is very similar to that of Cordry. He bequeaths legacies to all of his children, not including Spencer Hitch, accompanying each item with the words, "and no more," and says in the introductory clause: "Touching such worldly estate wherewith it has pleased God to bless me with in this life, I give and dispose of in the following manner."

Upon a consideration of all the language in the whole will, and regarding the word "estate," used in the introductory clause, in connection with the entire will, as even stronger than the term used in the will of John Cordry, I am of the opinion that, according to the authorities we have had before us, we are perfectly justified in construing the intentions of Spencer Hitch, Sr., to devise an estate in fee to his son, Spencer Hitch, Jr., in the item where he devises all the tracts and parcels of land belonging to or that he is possessed with. The last mentioned item might not be sufficient, alone, to justify such a construction; but according to the authorities cited, upon a consideration of the whole will, and upon referring to the introductory clause, in connection with his other expressions, I am of opinion that it does not strain either the English or American rules to give the devise such a construction.

Under these circumstances, therefore, the judgment below ought to be affirmed.

Saulsbury, Ch., dissenting:

I dissent from the opinions of the majority of the court just read. I have been familiar with the provisions of the will of Spencer Hitch for more than thirty years. I have never had a doubt in respect to the proper interpretation of that will. The sole question for our decision in this case is, What estate did Spencer Hitch take under the will of his father, dated the 5th day of February, 1787—whether an estate for life, or in fee? If the former, then the judgment of the court below is to be reversed; if the latter, it is to be affirmed. The last item of the will of Spencer Hitch, the father, and under which Spencer Hitch, the son, took whatever estate he did take—the spelling being corrected—is as follows: "I give and bequeath unto Spencer Hitch, my son, all the tracts or parcels of land belonging to or that I am possessed with." This is the whole of this item of the will which has relation to the devise to the son.

Where there are no words of limitation to a devise, the general rule of law as it existed in this State at the date of the will of Spencer Hitch was that the devisee takes an estate for life only, unless from the language there used, or from other parts of the will, there is a plain intention to give a larger estate. It matters not, in determining the meaning of the will of Spencer Hitch, that more than fifty years after his death, and after the rights and interests of his devisees were fixed, and the quantity and quality of their estates determined by the provisions of his will, that the general rule in respect to the interpretation of wills was modified or changed by an Act of Assembly of this State, so as to give to a devisee of lands a fee therein, unless it should appear by the will that a less estate was intended to be given. This modification or change can have relation only to wills made subsequently to the date of the Act of Assembly making them, and not to wills made prior thereto. There are no words of the devise of the father to the son—that is, from Spencer Hitch, Sr., to Spencer Hitch, Jr.—which admit of passing a greater interest than an estate for life. And if a greater interest than for life did pass by the will of the father to the son, it was because by considering the whole will, or specially some particular part thereof, the intention of the testator that such larger estate should pass to the son can be sufficiently gathered or ascertained. Now, there are eleven items in the will of Spencer Hitch, the testator, the eleventh of which is the item containing the devise to Spencer Hitch, the son. It was not contended in the argument, and cannot be successfully contended, that the first ten items of the will, or either of them, considered separately, can have the effect of enlarging the devise contained in the eleventh item to the son from a devise for life to a devise in fee. It was contended, however, by the counsel for the defendants below and defendants in error, that the intention of the testator to pass such larger estate to the son might be ascertained and should be determined by considering the will of the testator as an entirety, and give an effect to each of its provisions relatively, each to the other; and much stress was laid upon that part of the introductory clause of the will which recited that, "As touching such worldly estate wherewith it has pleased God to bless me with in this life, I give and dispose of in the following manner."

"The most that can be said," says Judge Story, delivering the opinion of the court in the case of Wright v. Denn, 23 U. S. 10 Wheat. 228 [6 L. ed. 808], and so say the authorities generally, "is that, where the words of the devise admit of passing a greater interest than for life, courts will lay hold of the introductory clause to assist them in ascertaining the intention."

Does the devise by the father to the son, contained in the eleventh item of his will, admit of passing a greater interest than for life? If it does, I will gladly lay "hold of the introductory clause to assist us in ascertaining the intention;" otherwise I am precluded from so doing. I cannot find a sufficient warrant in the words of this will of Spencer Hitch, the testator, to pass the fee to Spencer Hitch, his son. The testator may have intended it, and probably did, as said by Judge Story in the case of Dwight v. Denn; but intention cannot be extracted from his words with reasonable certainty; and I have no right to indulge myself in mere private conjectures, for the law does not decide upon conjectures, but upon plain, reasonable and certain expressions of intention found on the face of the will. The judgment below should be reversed.

NEW YORK COURT OF APPEALS.

Mary T. CONSTANT et al., as Executors, etc., Respts.,

UNIVERSITY OF ROCHESTER, Impleaded, etc., Appt.

(.....N. Y.....)

1. A mortgagee occupies the position of mortgagee for a valuable considera-

NOTE.—Notice to agent is notice to principal.

Notice to the agent notice to the trustee
Brannon v. May, 42
§ 408; Myers v. Roe, 1 son, 8 Story, 659; Br
102; Astor v. Wells, 1
616; Hovey v. Blundell
Sharp, 9 Johns. 163; (Honkins v. Leek, 19 W Sandf. (2d. 98; Hair v. v. Davis, 2 Hill, 451;
Henry v. Morgan, 2 E
Miss. 591.

Notice of facts to an agent is constructive notice thereof to the principal when it is connected with the subject matter of the agency. Howell v. Mills, 63 N. Y. 828; Rowland v. Rowe, 48 Conn. 422; Faco Nat. Bank v. Sanborn, 63 Maine, 840; Bank of Utica v. Phillips, 8 Wend. 408; Importers & T. Bank v. Shaw, 144 Mass. 421, 4 New Eng. Rep. 347.

The rule that notice to an agent is notice to the principal alike includes and applies to the positive information or knowledge obtained or possessed by an agent in the transaction, and to actual or constructive notice communicated to him therein.

As a general rule, notice to an agent who has conducted or who has been active as a party to a transaction is sufficient constructive notice to his principal in reference to such matter. Fisher v. Crescent Ins. Co., 23 Fed. Rep. 514.

So notice to the agent of a company, whose duty it was to fix a door, that the opening of the door tion where the mortgage is taken for the surrender of a prior mortgage and accrued interest thereon.

2. An attorney who has done a large amount of business for a client in investing money upon mortgages, which aggregate $3,000,000 or more, and who has in his office, in a pigeon-hole appropriated to satisfied mortgages, an unrecorded mortgage in favor of such client, taken eleven months before, will not be held, in the absence of any evidence upon that point, to have was difficult, is notice to the company. Sangamon Coal Min. Co. v. Wiggerhaus, 11 West. Rep. 575, 129 Ill. 279.

Notice to an agent of fraud in the release of a prior mortgage is notice to the principal. Connecticut Gen. L. Ins. Co. v. Burnside, 24 L. ed. 708.

Notice, of a prior incumbrance, to an agent is notice to the principal. Astor v. Wells, 17 U. S. 4 Wheat. 408 (4 L. ed. 618).

Duty of agent to impart knowledge to principal.

The principle of law is that it is the agent's duty to communicate to his principal the knowledge which he has respecting the subject matter of negotiation, and the presumption is that he will perform that duty. The Distilled Spirits, 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 367 (20 L. ed. 171); Mathews v. Riggs (Maine) 5 New Eng. Rep. 805.

When it is not the agent's duty to communicate his knowledge to his principal—as when it has been acquired confidentially as attorney—the principal is not bound by it. The Distilled Spirits, 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 368 (20 L. ed. 167).

Where an officer or agent of a private corporation or joint-stock company sells and conveys land to it, his knowledge of an outstanding equity does not charge the company with notice. Frankel v. Hudson, 52 Ala. 155.

Notice to solicitor or attorney.

Notice to the solicitor of a subsequent mortgagee who prepares the securities in his behalf, is notice to the client. Westervelt v. Hall, 2 Sandf. Ch. 105.

remembered the facts as to such mortgage at the time of taking a mortgage on the same property for another client so as to charge the latter with notice of the prior mortgage.

3. To hold a principal chargeable with knowledge which his agent has obtained on a prior occasion in an independent transaction it must be shown that the knowledge was present to the mind of the agent at the very time of the transaction in question.
4. If an agent recollected that there had been a prior mortgage, but honestly believed that it had been satisfied, although mistaken upon that point, the principal for whom he takes a subsequent mortgage will not be chargeable with knowledge of the former one by reason of the agent's knowledge.
5. The burden of proof to show that an agent, in a transaction for his principal, had in mind knowledge gained by him on a former occasion and in a different transaction, is upon the party who seeks to charge the principal with notice by reason of such knowledge.
6. Whether a mortgagee can be held chargeable with notice of a prior unrecorded mortgage in the possession of his attorney in the transaction, who is also the attorney of the prior mortgagee, and whose duties to his clients are therefore conflicting, quære.

(Gray and Andrews, JJ., dissent.)

(January 15, 1889.)

APPEAL by defendant corporation, from a judgment of the General Term of the Superior Court of the City of New York affirming a judgment of the Special Term in favor of plaintiffs in an action brought to foreclose a mortgage. Reversed.

This suit was brought to foreclose a mortgage for $9,000, made by Elizabeth Meehen and her husband, to plaintiffs' testator on February 17, 1888, covering premises on Lexington Avenue in the City of New York joining the University of Rochester as a subsequent incumbrancer.

The University answered that on January 10,

1884, the Meehens mortgaged the premises to it for $9,000; that on January 11 its mortgage was recorded; that plaintiffs' testator had notice of it; that it had foreclosed its mortgage and become the purchaser of the property, and alleged that until the commencement of this action it had no notice of plaintiffs' mortgage, and that it was not recorded.

It appeared at the trial that John H. Dean acted as attorney for both Constant and the University at the times when their respective mortgages were executed, and that the Constant mortgage was left in his possession instead of being recorded, and found among his papers by his assignee for benefit of creditors.

It also appeared that the University held mortgages against property of the Meehens which were discharged about the time of the execution of the mortgage of January, 1884, which discharge was alleged to constitute the consideration for that mortgage.

Further facts appear in the opinion of the court:

Mr. Martin W. Cooke, for appellant:

The University for the mortgage in question relinquished the security which it held by its $9,000 mortgage first lien, on 107th Street. Such relinquishing of previous security has always been held a valuable consideration.

Wood v. Chapin, 18 N. Y. 509; Cary v. White, 52 N. Y. 188; Pickett v. Barron, 29 Barb. 505; Webster v. Van Steenberg, 46 Barb. 211.

Knowledge in Dean, occupying the relation to all parties interested, which he must have occupied, could not bind either party in favor of the other. Mr. Constant and the University of Rochester stand here, from a legal point of view, in the same relation to each other as if Dean had been a stranger to both parties. If Dean were really the borrower from both mortgagees, the lien of the University would be the prior one.

Hops F. Ins. Co. v. Cambreleng, 8 Thomp. & C. 496, 1 Hun, 498. See also Volts v. Blackmar, 64 N. Y. 646.

When two principals have opposing interests, but have a common agent, there is in reality a conflict of duty on the part of the agent. There can therefore be no presumption either way, and the question of notice depends upon whether he did, in fact, communicate the information.

Bank of Pittsburgh v. Whitehead, 10 Watts, 397, 36 Am. Dec. 186.

Agents cannot act so as to bind their principals where they have, or represent, interests adverse to the principals.

Wassell v. Reardon, 11 Ark. 705, 54 Am. Dec. 245. See Herman v. Martineau, 1 Wis. 151, 60 Am. Dec. 388; Loeb v. Herman, 13 Jones & S. 336; Morris v. Garrison, 13 Abb. N. C. 210; Bruce v. Davenport, 36 Barb. 349; Morrison v. Ogdensburg & L. C. R. Co. 52 Barb. 173; National L. Ins. Co. v. Minch, 53 N. Y. 144; N. Y. Cent. Ins. Co. v. Nat. Protection Ins. Co. 14 N. Y. 85, 91; Claffin v. Farmers & C. Bank, 25 N. Y. 293; Howard Ins. Co. v. Halsey, 8 N. Y. 271.

Mr. John E. Parsons, for respondents:

The omission by Dean to record Mr. Constant's mortgage gave no priority to the mortgage of the University.

The existence of Mr. Constant's unrecorded mortgage bore materially upon the title of the property mortgaged to the University. Knowledge or notice to Dean, which appertained to his employment was notice to the University.

Story, Agency, § 140; The Distilled Spirits, 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 356 (20 L. ed. 167).

Peckham, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

In taking the mortgage of January, 1894, we think the University occupied the position of mortgagee for a valuable consideration. It surrendered a prior mortgage, with the accrued interest thereon, and took the mortgage in question.

If the University be not chargeable with notice of the prior mortgage to Constant, which was unrecorded, then its own mortgage is the prior lien as between the two.

The first important question arising is, Did Dean, who acted in the transaction as the attorney and agent for the University at the time of the execution of the mortgage to the University, have knowledge of the existence of the prior mortgage to Constant, executed in February, 1883, and which he then took as agent for Constant? In other words, is there any proof that he, in January, 1884, had that fact present in his mind and recollection, so that it can be said from the evidence that he then had knowledge of its existence as an unpaid, outstanding obligation?

The transaction, out of which the mortgage to the University arose, occurred eleven months subsequent to the transaction out of which the mortgage in suit arose; and the former mortgage was neither a part of the same transaction as the latter, nor had it the least connection therewith.

Under the law, as decided by the older cases in England, such fact would have been an absolute defense to the claim that there was any constructive notice to the defendant arising out of notice to its agent, because such notice was in another and entirely separate transaction.

In Warrick v. Warrick, decided by Lord Chancellor Hardwicke in 1745 (3 Ark. 291, 294), that able Judge assumed it as unquestioned law that notice to the agent, in order to bind his principal by constructive notice, should be in the same transaction. He said "This rule ought to be adhered to, otherwise it would make purchaser's and mortgagee's titles depend altogether on the memory of their counsellors and agents, and oblige them to apply to persons of less eminence as counsel, as not being so likely to have notice of former transactions."

Cases were continually arising subsequent to that case wherein the principle was assumed as the law of England, although the cases did not, in their facts, absolutely call for a decision on that point.

See also Graham v. Stark, 8 Ben. 530; Sartwell v. North, 4 New Eng. Rep. 54, 144 Mass. 183.

Constructive notice.

No particular form of notice of sale of real property under deed of trust is prescribed by law; it is sufficient if the description of the land is reasonably certain, so as to inform the public of the property to be sold. Newman v. Jackson, 25 U. S. 12 Wheat. 970 (6 L. ed. 732).

Where, upon the face of the title papers, the purchaser has full means of acquiring complete knowledge of the title, he will be deemed to have constructive notice thereof. Oliver v. Platt, 44 U. S. 3 How. 333 (11 L. ed. 622).

Purchasers are not protected, but are considered purchasers with notice, if they close their eyes to facts which are open to investigation by the exercise of that reasonable diligence which the law imposes. Brush v. Ware, 40 U. S. 15 Pet. 93 (10 L. ed. 672).

When it is sought to affect a purchaser with constructive notice, the question is not whether he had the means of obtaining, and might by prudent caution have obtained, the knowledge in question, but whether not obtaining it was an act of gross or culpable negligence. Wilson v. Wall, 73 U. S. 6 Wall. 38 (18 L. ed. 727).

Possession of land as notice.

Possession and cultivation of land is constructive notice of rights in land. Hornbach v. Potter (18 L. ed. 30); Bowman v. Wathen, 42 U. S. 1 How. 189 (11 2 L. R. A.

L. ed. 97); Landes v. Brant, 51 U. S. 10 How. 343 (13 L. ed. 449); Lea v. Polk Co. Copper Co. 63 U. S. 21 How. 498 (16 L. ed. 206); Hughes v. U. S. 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 232 (18 L. ed. 306); Graham v. Nesmith, 24 S. C. 285; Mayo v. Leggett, 96 N. C. 237.

The doctrine of constructive notice from possession is applied as a shield to protect equitable rights, and not for the benefit of one who is without equity. Gill v. Hardin, 43 Ark. 409.

Where possession is relied on as giving constructive notice, it must be open, and sufficiently distinct and unequivocal to put the purchaser on his guard. Townsend v. Little, 109 U. S. 604 (27 L. ed. 1013).

Where the facts are sufficient to put a purchaser on inquiry, he can be charged only with knowledge of the facts which he might have learned by inquiry. Indiana & I. C. R. Co. v. Sprague, 108 U. S. 756 (25 L. ed. 554).

Notice to mortgagees.

A mortgagee with notice of the fraudulent discharge of a prior mortgage is not a bona fide purchaser. Connecticut Gen. L. Ins. Co. v. Burnside, 24 L. ed. 707.

As to the mere holder of a subsequent mortgage the record of a prior mortgage is sufficient notice of its existence, and of the rights of the assignee thereof, although the assignment of the prior mortgage be not recorded. Campbell v. Vedder, 3 Keyes, 173.

If a purchaser has constructive notice of the assignment, he could not be a "bona fide purchaser" of the mortgage assigned. Campbell v. Vedder, 1 Abb. App. Dec. 301.

But in Mountford v. Scott, 1 Turn. & R. 374, upon an appeal from a decision of the vice chancellor, Lord Chancellor Eldon said that the vice chancellor proceeded upon the notion that notice to a man in one transaction is not to be taken as notice to him in another transaction. The Lord Chancellor continued: "In that view of the case it might fail to be considered whether one transaction might not follow so close upon the other as to render it impossible to give a man credit for having forgotten it."

He further said that he would be unwilling to go so far as to say that if an attorney has notice of a transaction in the morning he shall be held in a court of equity to have forgotten it in the evening; that it must, in all cases, depend upon the circumstances.

In Hargreaves v. Rothwell, 1 Keen, 154, Lord Langdale, Master of the Rolls, held that where one transaction is closely followed by and connected with another, or where it is clear that a previous transaction was present to the mind of the solicitor when engaged in another transaction, there is no ground for a distinction by which the rule that notice to the solicitor is notice to the client should be restricted to the same transaction.

In Nixon v. Hamilton, 2 Dru. & W. 864, decided in 1838, Lord Chancellor Plunkett adverted to the rule as to the necessity of notice in the same transaction, and stated if it were notice acquired in the same transaction, necessarily the principal was to be charged with the knowledge of the agent; but if it were notice received by him in another transaction then such notice was not to affect the principal, unless he actually had the knowledge at the time of the second transaction. See also the case of Dresser v. Norwood, decided in the Court of Exchequer Chamber and reported in 17 C. B. N. S. 466.

This modification of the old English rule is recognized in the comparatively late case of The Distilled Spirits, 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 356 [20 L. ed. 167]. Mr. Justice Bradley in delivering the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States stated that the doctrine in England seems to be established that if the agent at the time of effecting a purchase has knowledge of any prior lien, trust or fraud affecting the property, no matter when he acquired such knowledge, his principal is affected thereby. If he acquire the knowledge when he effects the purchase no question can arise as to his having it at that time. If he acquired it previous to the purchase, the presumption that he still retains it and has it present to his mind will depend upon facts and other circumstances. Clear and satisfactory proof that it was so present seems to be the only restriction required by the English Rule as now understood. And the learned Justice states that the rule as finally settled by the English Courts is, in his judgment, the true one, and is deduced from the best consideration of the reasons on which it is founded. In this opinion the whole court concurred.

Story in his work on Agency (§ 140), says: "But unless notice of the facts come to the agent, while he is concerned for the principal, and in the course of the very transaction, or so near before it that the agent must be presumed to recollect it, it is not notice thereof to the principal. For otherwise the agent might have forgotten it, and then the principal would be affected by his want of memory at the time of undertaking the agency. Notice, therefore, to the agent before the agency is begun, or after it has terminated, will not ordinarily affect the principal."

In Bank of the United States v. Davis, 2 Hill, 451, it was held that the principal is deemed to have notice of whatever is communicated to his agent while acting as such in a transaction to which the communication relates. And it was held in that case that notice to a bank director, or knowledge obtained by him while not engaged officially in the business of the bank, would be inoperative as notice to the bank.

In Holden v. New York & Erie Bank, 72 N. Y. 286, the rule was explained, and it was therein held that where an agency was, in its nature, continuous, and made up of a long series of transactions of the same general character, the knowledge acquired by the agent in one or more of the transactions is to be charged as the knowledge of the principal, and will affect the principal in any other transaction in which the agent as such is engaged, and in which the knowledge is material. In that case it will be seen, upon reading the very able opinion of Folger, Ch. J., that there was no question as to the knowledge of the agent of the various facts, and the only question raised was whether it should be imputed to his various principals in the transactions.

In Crags v. Hadley, 99 N. Y. 131, the doctrine that the knowledge of the agent should come to him in the identical transaction was alluded to, and it was held that it was not necessary in all cases that the notice should be thus given, and that notice to an agent of a bank intrusted with the management of its business was notice to the corporation in transactions conducted by such agent acting for the corporation in the scope of his authority, whether the knowledge of the agent was acquired in the course of a particular dealing or on some prior occasion. See also Welsh v. German American Bank, 73 N. Y. 424; Atlantic State Bank v. Savery, 82 N. Y. 291.

From all these various cases it will be seen that the farthest that has been gone in the way of holding a principal chargeable with knowledge of facts communicated to his agent, where the notice was not received or the knowledge obtained in the very transaction in question, has been to hold the principal chargeable upon clear proof that the knowledge which the agent once had, and which he had obtained in another transaction at another time and for another principal, was present to his mind at the very time of the transaction in question. Upon a careful review of the testimony in this case we have been unable to find any such proof. It is true the learned trial judge finds that contemporaneously with the execution of the mortgage to the University, Dean caused to be made a statement, upon the basis that the amount was to be loaned to the mortgagors, and that out of the money coming to them as a consideration for the mortgage to the University, the amount of the bond and mortgage to the plaintiff's decedent, with interest, was to be paid and that mortgage was to be satisfied.

And he further found that the University, through Dean, had notice of the mortgage of the plaintiff's decedent in connection with, and as part of, any proposed transaction, by which there was to be loaned to the mortgagor the amount of the bond and mortgage to the University. What is meant by the word "contemporaneously," as used in this finding, is perhaps not absolutely clear. If it meant that the statement mentioned was procured to be made by Dean as a part of, and coincident with, the execution of the mortgage to the University, it is not, as we think, based upon any evidence. There is no proof whatever in this case that Dean procured this statement to be made by anybody; and Dean himself says that a statement of this nature would, by the course of practice in his office, have come to him (made by some one in his office) the day after the loan was closed. He does not pretend to recollect this particular statement, nor is there any evidence that he procured it to be made. His testimony shows that he had no special recollection of the things which took place upon the occasion of the execution of the bond and mortgage to the University, further than appeared by his books and other memoranda, then made by others; and he does not pretend to say that this particular statement was presented to him, or that he had the least knowledge of its existence, or of the facts therein stated, until the day after the closing of the transaction and the execution of the mortgage to the University.

This is every particle of evidence that there is upon which a finding could be based, such as the learned judge made, of knowledge or notice, on the part of Dean, of the existence of the Constant mortgage, at the time of the transaction with the University, and the execution of the mortgage to it.

The other facts in the case, uncontradicted, are that for some years prior to January, 1884, Dean and the plaintiff's decedent were acting together, and that the plaintiff's decedent was weekly and even almost daily in the habit of investing large amounts of money upon mortgages of this nature, and that the dealings of plaintiff's decedent in these various building mortgages, through Dean's office, had amounted at the time of the mortgage to the University, in the aggregate to $5,000,000, if not more; that the mortgages were of all sizes, from $6,000 up to $40,000. It also appears that this very mortgage in suit, was found, after the execution of the University mortgage, in a pigeon-hole, in which satisfied mortgages were kept, and was found by the assignee of Dean after the assignment was made.

There is no proof in the case showing that Dean made any pretense of remembering at the time of the execution of the mortgage to the University that, eleven months before, he had taken a mortgage on the same property for the plaintiff's decedent, which was not recorded. Taking into consideration the enormous amount of business done by Dean for Constant, of this same general nature, and the length of time that elapsed since the taking of the Constant mortgage by him, and the fact that it was never taken from the office by the mortgagee, and that it remained there and was found in a pigeon-hole appropriated to satisfied mortgages, and that on the very statement in question, upon which the learned judge evidently based his finding, it is alluded to as satisfied—all these facts would tend to show very strongly that Dean had no recollection whatever of the existence of the Constant mortgage, as an existing lien at the time he took the mortgage to the University.

But the burden is upon the plaintiff to prove, clearly and beyond question, that he did, and it is not upon the defendant to show that he did not, have such recollection. And we think that there is a total lack of evidence in the case which would sustain the finding that Dean had the least recollection on the subject at the time of the execution of the University mortgage.

Under such circumstances we think it impossible to impute notice to the University, or knowledge in regard to a fact which is not proved to have been possessed by its agent. If such knowledge did not exist in Dean at the time of his taking the mortgage to the University, then the latter is a bona fide mortgagee for value, and its mortgage should be regarded as a prior lien to that of the unrecorded mortgage of Constant, which is prior in point of date.

The plaintiff is bound to show by clear and satisfactory evidence that when this mortgage to the University was taken by Dean, he then had knowledge, and the fact was then present to his mind, not only that he had taken a mortgage to Constant eleven months prior thereto on the same premises, which had not been recorded, but that such mortgage was an existing and valid lien upon the premises, which had not been in any manner satisfied. If he recollected that there had been such a mortgage but honestly believed that it was or had been satisfied, then, although mistaken upon that point, the University could not be charged with knowledge of the existence of such mortgage.

Quite a strong reason for not imputing knowledge to the agent in this case, unless upon evidence clear and satisfactory, is that if he had such knowledge and thus knowingly took an utterly worthless security for his principal, he acted in the most improper and dishonest manner, and willfully caused a loss to his principal, of substantially the whole amount of the money represented by the mortgage which he took as a second lien. While this consideration is not controlling if the evidence justified the assumption, it is yet of considerable weight, and adds to the propriety of the rule requiring clear proof of such knowledge at the very time of taking the mortgage to the University.

One other question has been argued before us which has been the subject of a good deal of thought. It is this: assuming that Dean had knowledge of the existence of the Constant mortgage at the time of the execution of the mortgage to the University, is his knowledge to be imputed to the University, considering the position Dean occupied to both mortgagees?

While acting as the agent of Constant in taking the mortgage in question as security for the funds which he was investing for him, it was the duty of Dean to see that the moneys were safely and securely invested. The value of the property in question was between $11,000 and $12,000; it was obviously the duty of Dean to see to it that the mortgage which he took upon such property as a security for a loan of $6,000 for Constant should be a first lien thereon. See Whitney v. Martine, 88 N. Y. 535.

In order to become such first lien, it was the duty of Dean to see to it that the Constant mortgage was first recorded. In January, 1884, when acting as agent for the University to invest its moneys, he owed the same duty to the University that he did to Constant; and it was his business to see to it that the security which he took was a safe and secure one. Neither mortgage was safe or secure if it were a lien subsequent to the other upon this property. This duty he continued to owe to Constant at the time he took the mortgage to the University.

At the time of the execution of the latter mortgage, therefore, he owed conflicting duties to Constant and to the University, the duty in each case being to make the mortgage to each principal a first lien on the property. Owing these conflicting duties to two different principals, in two separate transactions, can it be properly said that any knowledge coming to him in the course of either transaction should be imputed to his principal? Can any agent occupying such a position bind either principal by constructive notice, where confessedly that is all the notice that each principal had? It has been stated that in such a case where an agent thus owes conflicting duties, the security which is taken or the act which is performed by the agent may be repudiated by his principal, when he becomes aware of the position occupied by such agent. Story, Agency, § 210.

The reason for this rule is that the principal has the right to the best efforts of his agent in the transaction of the business connected with his agency, and where the agent owes conflicting duties he cannot give that which the principal has the right to demand, and which he has impliedly contracted to give.

Ought the University to be charged with notice of the existence of this prior mortgage when it was the duty of its agent to procure for it a first lien, while at the same time in his capacity as agent for Constant it was equally his duty to give to him the prior lien? Which principal should he serve? There have been cases where in the sale and purchase of the same real estate both parties have employed the same agent, and it has been held under such circumstances that the knowledge of the agent was to be imputed to both of his principals. If with a full knowledge of the facts that the agent was the common agent of both, each principal employed him, we can see that there would be propriety in so holding; for each then notes the position which the agent has with regard to the other, and each takes the risks of having imputed to him whatever knowledge the agent may have on the subject. See LeNève v. LeNève, Amb. 498, Hardwicke, Chancellor, decided in 1747; Toulmin v. Steere, 8 Meriv. 209, decided in 1817 by Sir Walter Grant, Master of the Rolls.

The case of Nixon v. Humilton, already referred to, decided by Lord Plunkett, Lord Chancellor in the Irish Court of Chancery in 1888 (2 Dru. & W. 864), is a case in many respects somewhat like the one at bar, so far as the principal is concerned, if it be assumed that Dean really had the knowledge of the prior mortgage as an existing lien. It will be observed, however, upon examination of it, that the question of whether the knowledge of the common agent in two different transactions with two different principals was notice to the second principal was not raised with reference to this particular ground. The whole discussion was upon the subject of imputing the knowledge of the agent to the second mortgagee of the existence of the prior mortgage not derived in the latter transaction. Whether such knowledge should or should not be imputed to the second mortgagee because of the conflicting duties owed by the common agent was not raised. The defense was that the information did not come to the agent of the second mortgagee in the course of transacting the business of the second mortgagee; and the question was simply whether such knowledge could be imputed to the second mortgagee because of the knowledge acquired by his agent at another time, in another transaction, with another principal.

The court held that where it appeared, as in this case it did appear, fully and plainly, that the matter was fresh in the recollection and fully within the knowledge of the agent and under such circumstances that it was a gross fraud on the part of the agent, in the first place in keeping a prior mortgage off the record, and in the second place in not communicating the knowledge which he had to his principal, the second mortgagee—that in such case the second mortgagee was charged with the knowledge of his agent.

The distinct ground taken was that, although the agent's knowledge was acquired in another and a prior transaction, and with another principal, still, as he had the knowledge, he was bound to impart it to his principal, and he was guilty of a fraud in concealing it, for which his principal must suffer.

Whether the same result would have been reached if the other ground had been argued, we cannot of course assume to decide.

I have found no case precisely in point where the subject has been discussed and decided either way. I have very grave doubts as to the propriety of holding in this case of an agent situated as I have stated, that his principal in the second mortgage should be charged with knowledge which he acquired in another transaction, at a different time, while in the employment of a different principal, and where his duties to such principal still existed and conflicted with his duty to his second principal. We do not deem it, however, necessary to decide the question in this case.

For the reasons already given, the judgment should be reversed and a new trial ordered, with costs to abide the event.

All concur except Gray, J., who reads for affirmance; and Andrews, J., concurs.

Gray, J., dissenting:

The question presented by this appeal seems to possess sufficient interest to call for a brief statement of the grounds upon which I place my dissent from the views entertained by a majority of my associates.

With respect to the transaction of the loan to the University, Dean was, of course, not acting in any sense as the agent of Constant. In that transaction Constant had no interest. But as Constant's agent with respect to his mortgage, Dean owed him a duty. He should have advised him of the contemplated mortgage to the University, so that his own mortgage might be recorded and made the prior lien. In failing to do so he violated his duty. In the transaction of the loan to the University, he was its agent; but was chargeable with the knowledge of the prior unsatisfied and unrecorded mortgage to Constant. That knowledge was imputable to his principal, the University, and affected it with such notice as to deprive it of the protection which, otherwise, it would have been entitled to under the Recording Act. Its rights were made, thereby, subject to those of Constant. The transaction in which the University was engaged was an independent one; but in it the knowledge of the agent who conducted it was visitable upon his principal.

The trial Judge found that Dean had knowledge of the Constant mortgage at the time of the transaction of the University loan; and I think the evidence supports such a finding in the proof of the circumstances attending it.

The general rule is not open to dispute that notice to the agent is notice to the principal. If the agent has knowledge of a fact, while he is acting for the principal, in the course of the very transaction which becomes the subject of the suit, this operates as constructive notice to the principal himself. For, upon general principles of policy, it must be taken for granted that the principal knows what the agent knows.

"To constitute constructive notice, it is not indispensable that it should be brought home to the party himself. It is sufficient if it is brought home to the agent, attorney or counsel of the party; for in such cases the law presumes notice in the principal, since it would be a breach of trust in the former not to communicate the knowledge to the latter." Story, Eq. Jur. § 408.

These rules are well recognized as underlying the law of principal and agent. In their application to the agents of a corporation, they were asserted recently by Andrews, J., in Orange v. Hadley, 99 N. Y. 181.

In Brotherton v. Hatt, 2 Vern. 574, A made three several mortgages to B, C and D, and in the last mortgage B is a party, and agrees that after he is paid, he will stand trustee for D. It was decreed by the Master of the Rolls and affirmed by the Lord Keeper, that the second mortgagee, C, should be paid before D; for the same scrivener being employed in all transactions, notice to them of C's mortgage was notice to D.

In Norris v. Le Neve, 8 Atk. 26, 35, a bill of review (which is granted upon discovery of new matter not known before the decree) was refused by Lord Hardwicke, where it appeared that the parties' attorney, solicitor or agent, in an ejectment upon the same title tried prior to the decree, had in his possession, at the time of that trial, the documents from which the new matter was collected.

In Nixon v. Hamilton, 2 Dru. & W. 364, W. B., a land and law agent of F. H., negotiated a deed of separation and maintenance between F. H. and his wife, and by fraud prevented its registry. Four years afterwards he was employed in the negotiation of a loan of money, which was advanced on a registered mortgage of the estates comprised in the deed of maintenance as solicitor both for F. H. and the lender. In a contest for priority between the unregistered deed of maintenance and the registered mortgage, it was held that inasmuch as the knowledge acquired in the transaction of the deed of maintenance was brought home to W. B., and its continuance so clearly proved as to make it fraudulent on his part to conceal it, when acting in the mortgage transaction, such fraud on the part of W. B., the agent, was visitable on his principal, the lender, and that the latter should be treated as one who, through his agent, had actual notice of the deed of maintenance, and that consequently his deed should be postponed to the wife's unregistered deed.

Lord Plunkett, in Nixon v. Hamilton, said: "If from the circumstances of the case, it satisfactorily appeared that the attorney at the time of the second transaction, had full knowledge and recollection of the first transaction, it was fraudulent in him to conceal it from his principal; and if so, the principal should not be at liberty to derive a benefit from the fraud of his attorney. . . . However acquired, if it (knowledge) existed at the time of the second transaction, it was a fraud to conceal it, and this fraud of the attorney should be visited on the principal." It has been held that where in the purchase of real estates the same agent is employed for both parties, each side is affected with notice as much as if different agents had been employed. Le Neve v. Le Neve, Amb. 489.

In Toumin v. Steere, 8 Meriv. 210, where the purchaser of an estate employed the vendor's agent, who had notice of an existing incumbrance which affected it, the Master of the Rolls held that such notice to the agent operated constructively as a notice to his employer, notwithstanding an infant was interested in the purchase.

In Champlin v. Laytin, 6 Paige, 208, Chancellor Walworth said: "For certain purposes and where the equitable rights of third persons are concerned, it has been found necessary by this court to hold a purchaser to be chargeable with constructive notice of all the facts communicated to his attorney or agent for the purchase, or in the examination of the title, and that notice of the existence of a deed was good constructive notice of the contents of the deed itself, especially if it was one of the deeds under which the purchaser derived his title to the premises;" and see Griffith v. Griffith, 9 Paige, 317.

The conclusion at which I have arrived, after the examination of this record, is that the University was chargeable with notice of the existing unrecorded mortgage, through the knowledge coming to its agent and attorney, Dean; and it cannot therefore be regarded as a subsequent purchaser in good faith.

In Page v. Waring, 76 N. Y. 468, 469, 470, there is nothing conflicting with my views. Judge Earl recognizes the well settled rule that the valuable consideration required by the statute to support a subsequent conveyance must be accompanied by the element of good faith; that is to say, an absence of notice of the previous unrecorded conveyance.

There can be no reasonable doubt as to his complete representation of the University as its agent, attorney, and indeed managing trustee, in the transaction forming the subject of this investigation; while, in refusing to find any facts showing Dean to have been at the time, in the transaction, empowered to represent or bind Constant, the learned trial judge was sustained by the absence of proofs to establish them. This is not a question of morals; but one simply as to what is the legal conclusion from the facts disclosed by the proofs.

I think the judgment at special term was right, and that the judgment of the general term affirming the same should be affirmed by this court.

ARKANSAS SUPREME COURT.

J. T. STULL, Appt.,

v.

Mary A. HARRIS.

(....Ark....)

1. The grantee in a deed, executed by a husband and wife, of the land of the wife, who is also an infant and who was married before any of the Married Women's Enabling Acts were passed, except the one empowering her to sell her land by joining her husband in the conveyance, takes the husband's right to the possession and enjoyment of the rents during his lifetime, and also the wife's interest in the land subject to her right of disaffirmance.
2. When an infant married woman, who was married before any of the Married Women's Enabling Acts were passed, except the one empowering her to sell her land by joining her husband in the conveyance, joins with her husband in a conveyance of her land, the grantee has a rightful possession as against her during the lifetime of her husband; and the Statute of Limitations does not run against her right of disaffirmance until coverture is ended.
3. An infant married woman, who has joined with her husband in a conveyance of her land, may file her bill to disaffirm the conveyance during her husband's lifetime.
4. A married woman who, during minority, joins with her husband in a conveyance of her land in which he has a life interest, is under no obligation, before rescinding, to refund purchase money paid to the husband and which did not come to her hands, but which may be presumed to have been paid for his interest; she must, however, pay her individual indebtedness to the grantee which he canceled at the time of the conveyance as part of the consideration thereof.

(March 16, 1889.)

APPEAL by defendant, J. T. Stull, from a decree in chancery of the Circuit Court of Crittenden County in favor of plaintiff in a suit for the cancellation of a deed. Modified.

Statement by Cockrill, Ch. J.:

This was a bill filed by Mrs. Harris, a feme covert, against her brother-in-law and former administrator of her father's estate, and her agent and adviser Dr. Stull, and her husband J. W. II. Harris, to cancel a deed made by her and her husband to said Stull for certain lands in 1867, she then being a minor and covert. The consideration was $500 cash paid her husband, and a credit of $400 on her indebtedness to Stull for necessities furnished her during her minority.

Stull denied that she was a minor; denied her right to rescind, especially after so long a time and after he had made valuable improvements without objection by her; alleged that the suit was premature, being brought during coverture and during the lifetime of her husband, who had an estate for life in the land; and contended that in case of rescission she must refund the consideration and pay for taxes and improvements, etc.

The proof tended to show that Mrs. Harris was a minor when she executed the deed; that Stull was her confidential agent and adviser and stood in loco parentis to her; that he was the administrator of her father's estate; that she was indebted to him for necessities furnished her during minority; that the consideration of the deed was $900, of which $500 was paid to her husband in cash, and $400 credited on her indebtedness to Stull for necessities furnished her during minority; that Stull owned two thirds of the land, and purchased her one third for the consideration aforesaid; that Stull had improved the lands as his own; that Mrs. Harris was still covert, and that no act of affirmance or disaffirmance had been done or made by her until she filed this bill.

The court canceled the deed so far as Mrs. Harris was concerned, but held that Stull was entitled to keep possession during the life of the husband, without account of rents, taxes or improvements.

Mr. O. P. Lyles, for appellant:

This action is premature, because the rights of the husband at least passed to Dr. Stull.

Jones v. Freed, 42 Ark. 357.

Mrs. Harris has fully ratified the sale by delay. She waited seventeen or eighteen years after obtaining her majority before she brought suit. She sees Dr. Stull spending thousands of dollars in making improvements on the land, yet she remains silent.

Vaughan v. Parr, 20 Ark. 608; 1 Parsons, Cont. 295; Petrow v. Wiseman, 40 Ind. 148; Stokes v. Brown, 4 Chand. (Wis.) 89; Robinson v. Weeks, 56 Maine, 102; 5 Wait, Act. & Def. 61, and the authorities there cited; Lawson v. Lovejoy, 8 Maine, 405; Kline v. Beebe, 6 Conn. 494; Doe v. Abernathy, 7 Blackf. 442; Clawson v. Doe, 5 Blackf. 800; Wallace v. Lewis, 4 Harr. (Del.) 75; 2 Kent, Com. 286; 7 Wait, Act. & Def. 144, 188, 189, 141, 142; 6 Wait, Act. & Def. 687.

If, in fact, she was a minor at the date of the deed to Dr. Stull, she practiced the greatest fraud on him by representing herself as of lawful age, and for this fraud she ought to be held to strict proof of infancy; and if she was not of lawful age and represented herself as of age, and by that fraud and misrepresentation induced Dr. Stull to buy the land, she is in equity bound by her deed.

3 L. R. A.

Clarke v. Copley, 2 Cox, Ch. 173; Arnot v. Biscoe, 1 Ves. Sr. 95; Beckett v. Cordley, 1 Bro. Ch. 353; Ex parte Taylor, 8 DeG. M. & G. 254; Hannah v. Hodgson, 30 Beav. 23; Wright v. Snow, 2 De G. & Sm. 321; Bartlett v. Wells, 1 Best & S. 836; Burley v. Russell, 10 N. H. 184; Storlfoos v. Jenkins, 12 Serg. & R. 399; Brown v. McCune, 5 Sandf. 224.

Equity would not allow her to appropriate to herself without compensation, satisfaction or indemnification, the improvements of the defendant, which by her silence she permitted to be made, and have enhanced the value of the property.

Grider v. Driver, 46 Ark. 118; Summers v. Howard, 83 Ark. 490; Davidson v. Barclay, 63 Pa. 406; Morris v. Terrell, 2 Rand. 6.

Messrs. W. G. Weatherford and J. C. Boole, for appellee:

Plaintiff may, of right, at any time during coverture, elect to disaffirm her minority conveyance; and this is a proper proceeding for that purpose.

Harrod v. Myers, 21 Ark. 592; Bagley v. Fletcher, 44 Ark. 156.

Cockrill, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Where there has been no act on the part of the quondam infant from which a ratification of the contract after his majority may be inferred, his right to avoid a conveyance of his lands on account of his minority is not lost until his right of entry is barred by the Statute of Limitations. Bozeman v. Browning, 81 Ark. 364; Kountz v. Davis, 34 Ark. 590. See Chandler v. Neighbors, 44 Ark. 479.

In the case of a minor who is also a married woman at the time the conveyance was executed, the right of disaffirmance will exist as long as she remains covert, unless legislation has swept away the disabilities of coverture; or, as Mr. Bishop expresses it, "If the infant is also a married woman, the disability of coverture enables her to postpone the act of avoidance to a reasonable time after the coverture is ended." 2 Bishop, Married Women, § 516.

Such a party labors under a double disability—infancy and coverture; and it is the statutory rule in this State that when there are two co-existing disabilities when the action accrues, the party is not bound to act until the last is removed. Mansf. Dig. § 4503.

In this case the right of entry has never accrued to Mrs. Harris. She was married before any of the Married Women's Enabling Acts were passed, except that which empowered the wife to sell her land by joining her husband in the conveyance. By the marriage the husband acquired a freehold interest in the land and became entitled to the rents and profits. It was an interest capable of sale. When therefore he and his wife joined in the execution of a deed to Stull in 1867, Stull took the husband's right to the possession and enjoyment of the rents and also the wife's interest in the land subject to her right of disaffirmance. That she can file her bill to disaffirm during her husband's life was determined in Harrod v. Myers, 21 Ark. 592.

She cannot, however, disturb the possession of her husband's vendee. The most that she could do during coverture was to give notice to her vendee of her intention to disaffirm or sue for that purpose, as she has done. Was it necessary that she should have done so earlier? Acquiescence in the possession where the right of entry exists does not bar the suit of a married woman under our statute. Hershey v. Latham, 42 Ark. 305.

Where the right of entry does not exist, but the possession is rightful against her by reason of the husband's conveyance of his estate, the statute does not run against her until coverture is ended. The Statute of Limitations has never been set in motion, therefore, in this case. The wife had done nothing to ratify the deed. Indeed, it was intimated in Bagley v. Fletcher, 44 Ark. 158, that a deed executed by a married woman who was under age at the time could not be confirmed during coverture except by deed. It is not necessary to determine the point in this case.

The only argument for a ratification is based upon the assumption that Mrs. Harris stood by and permitted Stull to improve the land upon the faith of her conveyance. But that is not true. She has always resided in Tennessee, and it is not shown that she had notice that the defendant was making improvements upon the land. Moreover, the defendant was the absolute owner of two undivided thirds of the land, as well as the husband's life interest in the other third; and even if it was her duty to have inquired and learned what Stull was doing with the land, she might well have referred his improvements to his absolute estate in the land. The proof shows nothing more than a passive acquiescence on the part of Mrs. Harris; and we have found no decision denying her right to disaffirm under such circumstances, at any time during coverture.

In Sims v. Everhardt, 103 U. S. 800 [26 L. ed. 87], the privilege was exercised by the wife twenty-three years after her deed was executed and twenty-one years after she came of age; and in Sims v. Bardoner, 96 Ind. 87, where the bill was filed during coverture as in this case, the disaffirmance was allowed twenty-seven years after the execution of the deed. S. C. 44 Am. Rep. 263. See, too, Harrod v. Myers, supra; Watson v. Billings, 88 Ark. 278; Vaughan v. Parr, 20 Ark. 600; McMorris v. Webb, 17 S. C. 558; Wilson v. Branch, 77 Va. 65; Williams v. Baker, 71 Pa. 476; Youse v. Norcoms, 12 Mo. 549; Dodd v. Benthal, 4 Heisk. 601; Schouler, Dom. Rel. § 96.

It is argued that the plaintiff should be required to refund the consideration paid by the vendee before rescinding.

While it is a somewhat controverted point, it is settled here that an infant may disaffirm his contract without restoring the consideration. Railway Company v. Higgins, 44 Ark. 293.

The rule is subject to the qualification that if the consideration received by the infant remains in his hands after he becomes of age, he at least becomes liable for its value on disaffirming the contract. Id.; Price v. Furman, 27 Vt. 263, and note; Ewell's Leading Cases, 119, and cases collected in Field's Law of Infants, § 15.

If he appeals to equity to avoid his contract, that court may impose upon him the duty of returning the consideration he has in hand as a condition upon which relief shall be granted. Hillyer v. Bennett, 3 Edw. Ch. 222; Eureka Co. v. Edwards, 71 Ala. 248.

Now, the consideration which was paid to the husband in this case, not only did not come to the hands of the wife, but we may presume was paid to him for his interest in the land. There is therefore no obligation to refund it. But Mrs. Harris was legally bound to Stull for necessities furnished her during her minority. Upon her marriage her husband also became liable therefor, and executed a note to Stull for the amount thus due; but that did not extinguish the wife's liability; for it is the rule that the execution of a note by one of several joint obligors is not payment of the prior indebtedness unless it is agreed that it shall be taken as such. Henry v. Conley, 43 Ark 267.

There was no agreement of that kind in this case; but Stull released $400 of the wife's indebtedness to him, as a part consideration of her conveyance; and he has been prevented thereby from collecting that amount of her as he has done the residue of that indebtedness. Now, to the extent that this indebtedness was discharged by the conveyance, to that extent does Mrs. Harris still hold the consideration. It is a benefit in esse and still enjoyed by her. It is inequitable to permit her to retain it and retake the land. She must pay this debt to Stull with legal interest from the date of her conveyance, as a condition of recovery.

The cause will be remanded, with directions to modify the decree in accordance with this opinion.

MASSACHUSETTS SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT.

Vesta A. DEMING

v.

David H. DARLING.

(.....Mass.....)

1. In an action against an individual for fraudulent representations made for the purpose of inducing the purchase of property, if the evidence shows the sale to have been made by a firm, an amendment will be allowed at any time.

2. False representations by one selling railroad bonds, that the "bond was an A. No. 1 bond," and that "the railroad was good security" therefor, made to the purchaser for the purpose of inducing the sale, will not render him liable to damages even though he made the statements in bad faith.

(February 23, 1889.)

ON defendant's exceptions. Sustained.

This was an action of tort in the nature of deceit to recover damages alleged to have been sustained by the plaintiff on account of false and fraudulent representations made by defendant to her through her agent, Dr. Charles Jordan, in the sale of a certain railroad bond.

At the trial in the superior court before Brigham, Ch. J., the jury found for plaintiff, and defendant alleged exceptions.

Further facts appear in the opinion.

Mr. S. K. Hamilton for defendant.

Messrs. Lund & Welch and W. C. Jordan for plaintiff.

Holmes, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action for fraudulent representations alleged to have been made to the plaintiff's agent for the purpose of inducing the plaintiff to purchase a railroad bond from the defendant.

It appears that the bond was purchased from the defendant's firm, and not from the defendant alone; but we shall not consider very care-

NOTE.—False representations; requisites to action for.

To make a false representation the subject of an indictment or of an action, two things are necessary, viz.: that it should be a statement likely to impose upon one exercising common prudence and caution, and that it should be the statement of an existing fact. Sawyer v. Prickett, 36 U. S. 19 Wall. 146 (23 L. ed. 105).

In an action of fraud by false representations, a representation, to be material, should be in respect of an existing and ascertainable fact, as distinguished from a mere matter of opinion or advice, and must be false and one that the party at the time knew to be false. Cooper v. Schlesinger, 111 U. S. 148 (28 L. ed. 332). See Davis v. Nuzum, 1 L. R. A. 774.

The requisites to sustain an action for deceit, says Baron Parke in Watson v. Poulson, 15 Jur. 111, are the telling of an untruth, knowing it to be an untruth, with intent to induce a man to alter his condition, and his altering his condition in consequence, whereby he sustains damage. Pasley v. Freeman, 8 T. R. 51; Polhill v. Walter, 3 Barn. & Ad. 114; Levy v. Langridge, 4 Mees. & W. 337; Brown v. Castles, 11 Cush. 343; Tryon v. Whitmarsh, 1 Met. 1; Ming v. Woolfolk, 116 U. S. 599 (29 L. ed. 740).

It is not every untruthful statement or false representation that will amount to fraud. If the false statement is made in respect to a matter concerning which the person making it is under no legal duty to the other party for the correctness of the declaration, and upon which the latter would be incautious to rely, it is regarded as gratuitum dictum and cannot form the basis of an action. Schoelkopf v. Leonard, 8 Colo. 162.

2 L. R. A.

Party deceived must have acted with care and prudence.

One who has been misled, to his damage, by the false misrepresentations of another, cannot recover therefor unless he himself acted with that degree of care and prudence which characterizes the conduct of ordinarily careful men in the management of their affairs; and whether or not the degree of intimacy existing between the parties justified the plaintiff in accepting defendant's statements as true, was a question for the jury, and not for the court. Gee v. Moss, 68 Iowa, 513.

Equity will not relieve a party from the consequences of his own inattention and carelessness in relying upon the representations of another, instead of his own judgment, when the means of information are open to both parties alike. Gammill v. Johnson, 47 Ark. 335.

A purchaser of land who fails to avail himself of the sources of information within his reach, but who chooses to rely on representations which, though false, were not made with fraudulent intent, is subject to the maxim Caveat emptor, which applies as it does to personal property; and courts will not aid him. Walsh v. Hall, 66 N. C. 233; Anderson v. Rainey, 100 N. C. 333.

More expressions of opinion not actionable.

Expressions of opinion which are not statements of facts do not constitute fraud. Southern Development Co. v. Silva, 125 U. S. 248 (31 L. ed. 679).

No action will lie for the expression of opinions, however fallacious they may prove, or whatever the injury reliance upon them may produce, when they are given concerning the value of property which depends upon contingencies which may nev-fully whether this constituted a variance, since, if it did, an amendment would be allowed at any time. If the contract had been sued upon instead of being a collateral matter, nonjoinder would have had to be pleaded in abatement; and there seems to be no obvious reason for greater strictness in this case. Wilson v. Newsers, 30 Pick. 20, 23; Tuttle v. Cooper, 10 Pick. 281, 283.

Among the representations relied on, one was that the railroad mortgaged was good security for the bonds, and another was that the bond was of the very best and safest and was an A No. 1 bond. With regard to these and the like, the defendant asked the court to instruct the jury "that no representations which the defendant might have made or did make to Dr. Jordan in relation to the value of the bond in question or of the railroad, its terminals or other property which were mortgaged to secure it, with other bonds, even though false, were representations upon which Dr. Jordan ought to have relied, and are not sufficient to furnish any grounds for this action;" and also "that each of the expressions 'and that the same' (meaning said rail and all the property covered by the mortgage) 'was good security for said bonds,' 'that said bond was of the very best and safest, and was an 'A No. 1 bond'—are expressions of opinion of value, and, even though false, are not such representations as Dr. Jordan had a right to rely upon, and are not enough to furnish any grounds for this action.

The court declined to give these instructions, and, instead, instructed the jury that "An expression of opinion, judgment or estimate, or a statement of a promissory nature relating to what would be in the future, so far as they were expressions of opinion, if made in good faith, however strong as expressions of belief, would not support an action of deceit."

It will be seen that the fundamental difference between the instructions given and those asked is that the former require good faith.

The language of some cases certainly seems to suggest that bad faith might make a seller liable for what are known as seller's statements, apart from any other conduct by which the buyer is fraudulently induced to forbear inquiries. Pills v. Foy, 101 Mass. 184.

But this is a mistake. It is settled that the law does not exact good faith from a seller in those vague commendations of his wares which manifestly are open to difference of opinion, which do not imply untrue assertions concerning matters of direct observation (Tague v. Irwin, 127 Mass. 217); and as to which "It always has been understood, the world over, that such statements are to be distrusted." Brown v. Castle, 11 Cush. 245, 250; Gordon v. Farnham, 3 Allen, 212; Parker v. Moulton, 114 Mass. 99; Poland v. Brownell, 181 Mass. 123, 142; Burns v. Lane, 183 Mass. 250, 255.

Parker v. Moulton also shows that the rule is not changed by the mere fact that the property is at a distance and is not seen by the buyer. Moreover, in this case market prices, at least, were easily accessible to the plaintiff.

The defendant was known by the plaintiff's agent to stand in the position of a seller. If he went no further than to say that the bond was an A No. 1 bond, which we understand to mean simply that it was a first rate bond, or that the railroad was good security for the bonds, we are constrained to hold that he is not liable under the circumstances of this case, even if he made the statement in bad faith. See, further, Vassay v. Dotson, 3 Allen, 230; Belcher v. Costello, 123 Mass. 189.

The rule of law is hardly to be regretted when it is considered how easily and incessantly words of hope or expectation are converted by an interested memory into statements of quality and value, when the expectation has been disappointed.

To show the knowledge of the plaintiff's agent concerning the bond, the defendant was allowed to put in evidence of the agent's purchase, two years before, of bonds and stock of a connecting road of a different name, to the system of which the road in question was said to belong. The price paid was excluded. The circumstances are not brought out very plainly by the bill of exceptions. There is nothing to or occur, or developments which may never be made, and as to which opinions must be more or less of a speculative character. Gordon v. Butler, 105 U. S. 222, 230 L. ed. 1122.

An executed contract will not be rescinded in equity for representations which are more expression, by which the buyer is induced to take it at a price in excess of its value, of which the seller is aware at the time of making the representation and sale, furnishes no cause of action for fraud. Ellis v. Andrews, 34 N. Y. 38; Chrysler v. Canaday, 30 N. Y. 372.

The reason of the rule is that the representation imports only an opinion. But this does not give immunity to the seller to take advantage of the fact that the purchaser has no opportunity of ascertaining the value.

The misrepresentation of value may by the aid of circumstances charge the seller with liability for fraud. Simar v. Canaday, 33 N. Y. 226; Weldner v. Phillips, 33 Hun, 1.

Statements of value are insufficient to sustain an action where such statements were mere matters of opinion. Hickey v. Morrell, 3 Cant. Rep. 555, 105 N. Y. 444; Simar v. Canaday, supra; Hoffman v. Wilhelm, 33 Iowa, 510.

They are no defense to the obligations given for the claim. Bliese v. Cartington, 33 U. S. 1 (33 L. ed. 32).

Whether the representations were false affirmations of a fact, or were mere opinions, where there is evidence from which either might be inferred, is a question for the jury to determine. Moss v. Katzenberger, 34 Ala. 26; Bradford v. Bush, 10 Ala. 225; Ricks v. Dillabuntz, 3 Port. 14; Rodgers v. Good, 33 Ala. 228; Brown v. Freeman, 19 Ala. 404.

Representations as to value, not to be relied on.

A naked representation of the value of property

3 L. R. A.

show the bearing of the price or any of the alleged representations; and we see no reason why it should have been admitted.

Exceptions sustained.

Robert B. CAVERLY

v.

Mary C. ROBBINS.

(.....Mass.....)

No person is entitled to demand or receive greater compensation for services rendered as agent or attorney to another in procuring for him a pension from the United States than that provided by the Statutes of the United States, although such person is not recognized by the commissioner of pensions as a pension agent or attorney.

(March 2, 1889.)

ON plaintiff's exceptions. Overruled.

The action was in contract to recover as upon a quantum meruit, and as upon an account annexed for services rendered by plaintiff as an attorney to defendant in procuring a pension from the United States.

At the trial in the supreme court before Marcus P. Knowlton, J., neither appeared, nor was it pretended that the plaintiff was known or recognized at the department in Washington as a pension agent in this case, or that he had in any way connected himself with the pension department in this matter, the business there having been done solely by written communications by the defendant and in her name, his not appearing on any of the papers there, and that before this suit defendant had recovered a pension of $2,729, and a life pension of $17 per month; that in the obtaining it, she had induced plaintiff to do her clerical work, such as the drafting of depositions, etc., which she had sent to the pension department under her own name; that the plaintiff had appeared and represented her before a commissioner appointed by the pension department in the taking of testimony, and had received, through his box at the postoffice, for her, communications from the department relating to the pension, and had written for her a large number of letters pertaining thereto, the defendant having at the time of the plaintiff's service no agent or attorney known as such at said department at Washington, and had advised her as to the different things to be done in the proper presentation of her claim; and also included in plaintiff's first item of charge were a retainer and advice in reference to a suit at law in which she was interested with her father, in her father's lawsuit.

Under the pleadings defendant contended that a Law of Congress of June 20, 1878, and other pension statutes, prescribed the measure of plaintiff's damages in this case; but defendant did not otherwise controvert the items of plaintiff's account, which he had sustained by evidence tending to prove the same fairly due as alleged, under the laws of Massachusetts, if not barred by the United States Statutes aforesaid, except that she claimed that she did not employ him in said lawsuit.

Plaintiff requested the court to charge, in 3 L. R. A.

effect, that the action was brought to recover for the professional services of a lawyer under the laws of Massachusetts and not under any law of the United States; that the rules as found in the Pension Statutes were not to be regarded by the jury as having anything to do with the case; and that plaintiff was entitled to recover to the amount of all the items of the account.

But the court refused to so charge, and did charge that if the jury found that the services rendered by plaintiff were within the descriptive language of the United States Statutes relating to services, plaintiff could not recover more than $10 and interest for such portion of his claim.

The jury returned a verdict for plaintiff for $10.25, and he alleged exceptions.

Mr. J. L. Hunt for plaintiff.

Messrs. G. A. A. Pevey, Charles S. Lilley and George W. Poore, for defendant:

The laws of the United States relating to pensions must govern this case, and not the laws of Massachusetts'.

Wolcott v. Frissell, 184 Mass. 1; Kellogg v. Waite, 12 Allen, 529.

The plaintiff could not recover more, even upon a quantum meruit.

Morgan v. Davis, 47 Vt. 610; U. S. Dig. 1875 (6 N. S.) Pension Pl. 3.

Even if the pensioner pays the attorney a larger fee than allowed by the statutes the excess may be recovered back from the attorney, whether the pensioner knew of the statutory protection or not.

Smart v. White, 73 Maine, 332, 40 Am. Rep. 356; Powell v. Jennings, 3 Jones, L. (N. C.) 547.

The policy indicated in all the enactments of Congress relating to pensions is plainly to secure to pensioners the full benefit of the sums granted; and no attempt to evade these laws by any scheme or contrivance will be tolerated. The pensioner himself is not permitted to pay the attorney a larger fee than prescribed, no matter how willing.

U. S. v. Moyers, 15 Fed. Rep. 411; U. S. Dig. 1838 (14 N. S.) Pension Pl. 2. See U. S. v. Hall, 98 U. S. 343 (25 L. ed. 180).

Field, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The question of law raised by these exceptions seems to be whether, if the plaintiff as an attorney at law rendered services to the defendant in Massachusetts in procuring a pension for her from the United States, and if he was not known or recognized by the commissioner of pensions as a pension agent, and had in no way connected himself with the pension office, the amount of his fees for such services is to be determined by the Statutes of the United States, or by what a jury may think they were reasonably worth.

The Statute of the United States in force when the services were rendered was either Statute 1878, chap. 367, 20 Stat. at Large, 243, or Statute 1884, chap. 181, 28 Stat. at Large, 98.

The latter statute makes it an offense punishable by fine or imprisonment, or both, for "any agent, or attorney, or other person instrumental in prosecuting any claim for pension," etc., to directly or indirectly demand or receive "any greater compensation for his services or instrumentality in prosecuting a claim for pension . . . than is therein provided;" and the provision of the statute for compensation is "In all cases where application is made for pension . . . and no agreement is filed with the commissioner as herein provided, the fee shall be $10 and no more." Sec. 4, Ibid.

Section 1, chap. 867 Statute of 1878, is: "It shall be unlawful for any attorney, agent, or other person to demand or receive for his services in a pension case a greater sum than $10."

It is plain that these statutes are not limited to persons who are recognized or known to the commissioner of pensions as attorneys or agents of applicants for pensions. If the defendants' services were such as these statutes were intended to provide for, they determine the amount of the compensation he is entitled to receive. Wolcott v. Frisell, 184 Mass. 1.

Exceptions overruled.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT, NORTHERN DISTRICT OF GEORGIA.

REPUBLIC IRON MINING CO.

C. M. JONES.

(....Fed. Rep. ....)

1. Jurisdiction; suit by assignee of contract; pleading. In an action founded upon contract brought by an assignee of the contract the declaration should show that the suit could have been maintained by the assignor, if no assignment had been made.

2. An action for damages for the breach of a written contract of lease is an action "founded upon contract" in the sense of that language as used in the restriction contained in the first section of the Act of March 3, 1875; and a Circuit Court of the United States cannot take cognizance of such a suit in favor of an assignee unless the same might have been prosecuted by the assignor if no assignment had been made.

*Head notes by NEWMAN, J.

NOTE.—Jurisdiction of United States Circuit Court.

The circuit court has jurisdiction in a real action for the possession of land brought by an assignee of the note and mortgage. Whiting v. Wellington, 10 Fed. Rep. 810; Desty, Removal of Causes, 70.

If a note and mortgage are assigned by delivery, the assignee cannot maintain the action if the assignor and mortgagor are citizens of the same State (Mersman v. Werges, 8 Fed. Rep. 378; Desty, Removal of Causes, 72); or of the assignee of a bond and mortgage. Sheldon v. Bill, 49 U. S. 8 How. 441 (13 L. ed. 1147); Hill v. Winne, 1 Biss. 275; contra, Dundas v. Dowler, 3 McLean, 204.

If both maker and payee are citizens of the same State, an indorsee cannot sue in the federal courts. Keary v. Farmers & M. Bank, 41 U. S. 16 Pet. 89 (10 L. ed. 897); Gibson v. Chew, 41 U. S. 16 Pet. 315 (10 L. ed. 977); Dromgoole v. Farmers & M. Bank, 43 U. S. 8 How. 241 (11 L. ed. 252); Coffee v. Planters Bank, 54 U. S. 18 How. 183 (14 L. ed. 106); Welles v. Newberry, 4 McLean, 228; Shuford v. Cain, 1 Abb. U. S. 802; Small v. King, 5 McLean, 147.

Nor can he sue a remote indorser if the intermediate indorser could not. Mollan v. Torrance, 23 U. S. 9 Wheat. 587 (5 L. ed. 154).

But if the indorsee and the immediate indorser are citizens of different States, the remote indorser may sue in the circuit court although the intermediate indorser could not. Young v. Bryan, 19 U. S. 8 Wheat. 148 (5 L. ed. 228); Evans v. Gee, 36 U. S. 11 Pet. 80 (9 L. ed. 639); Coffee v. Planters Bank, 54 U. S. 18 How. 183 (14 L. ed. 106); Wilson v. Fisher, 131 U. S. 188; Milledollar v. Bell, 2 Wall, Jr. 384; Campbell v. Jordan, 534; Dennison v. Larned, 5 McLean, 496.

The circuit court has no jurisdiction of an action founded on a judgment brought by the assignee thereof, unless the assignor might have sued (Walker v. Powers, 104 U. S. 245, 26 L. ed. 729; but otherwise with the assignee of a promissory note who obtained judgment thereon in a state court. Ober v. Gallagher, 98 U. S. 190 (23 L. ed. 839).

Assignment, to enable court to entertain jurisdiction.

The circuit court has jurisdiction of a controversy between citizens of different States, although prop-

(March 1, 1889.)

ON demurrer to the complaint, in an action brought to recover damages for breach of contract. Sustained.

The facts fully appear in the opinion.

Messrs. Broyles & Johnston, Graham & Graham and J. D. Conyers for plaintiff.

Messrs. Hopkins & Glenn, J. M. & J. W. Neel, B. H. Hill and William Phillips for defendant.

Newman, J., delivered the following opinion:

This case has been heard on a demurrer to the declaration, the ground of demurrer being that it is a suit brought by the assignee of a contract, when suit could not have been prosecuted by the assignor, and that therefore the court has no jurisdiction of the case.

to enable assignment
in U. S. 1 48 U. S. 7
lyn City Hatchel,
8; Briggs
Fed. Rep. and not
v. Levy, sague, 66
ultimore, sharson
Fed. Rep.
v. Hill,
p. 104 U.

a United ned in a assignee the asawk Co.

thine, 75

ment, he ght have Bank of 8; Brad-n at the see may But see moval of chose in lokaleu or of an scuted if the very Cranch,

1, 24.
requires jection of

The following is a synopsis of the plaintiff's declaration:

Plaintiff is a corporation created by the laws of Missouri, and a citizen of that State. Defendant is a citizen of Georgia. On the 18th day of August, 1881, A. R. Silva, plaintiff's assignor, obtained a lease from defendant to certain land in Bartow County, Georgia, which lease was for a term of five years, in writing and under seal. The purpose of the lease was that Silva should mine for iron ores, have all necessary rights for railroads, houses, dams, sluiceways, etc. Silva was to pay defendant a royalty of seventeen cents per ton.

On the 6th day of January, 1882, Silva assigned in writing his interest in this lease to plaintiff. On said 6th day of January, 1882, plaintiff entered and took possession of said premises and after that time performed all the covenants to be performed by Silva; but notwithstanding this, on or about the first of September, 1882, the defendant with force entered the premises and dispossessed plaintiff. Plaintiff while in possession had cleared the ground, opened mines, tested ores, erected houses, machinery, etc., and was, by its dispossession by the defendant, deprived of the use, issues, rents and profits, etc. Defendant, after dispossessing plaintiff, commenced and is still mining upon said land and retaining to himself the profits. An amendment to the declaration sets forth that on the third day of August, 1881, Silva made a contract with a furnace company in Tennessee, whereby he agreed to furnish 30,000 tons of iron ore within a year at $1.50 per ton, which contract was assigned to plaintiff, and the profits of the contract were lost by the breach of the lease by defendant.

It is said in one of the contracts attached that Silva is a citizen of Missouri, and in another that he is a citizen of Georgia; but it is not alleged anywhere that he could have maintained this suit. This is held to be necessary. Corbin v. Back Hawk Co. 103 U. S. 689, and cases cited at the conclusion of the opinion, page 687 [26 L. ed. 1186, 1189].

There is no contention, however, that Silva could have prosecuted this suit. It has been assumed all through that he could not, and that is taken as conceded. This suit was commenced in 1885, and the sole question discussed by counsel has been the application to the case of the language of the Act of March 3, 1875, as follows: "Nor shall any circuit or district court have cognizance of any suit founded on a contract in favor of an assignee unless a suit might have been prosecuted in such court to recover thereon, if no assignment had been made, except in cases of promissory notes negotiable by the law merchant and bills of exchange."

It is urged by counsel for plaintiff that this is not a suit "founded on contract," within the meaning of the extract from the Act of 1875 just quoted. It is contended that this expression, "founded on contract," is limited in its meaning, and should be construed to cover only suits brought on the contract to recover the amount called for by the contract, or to have a specific performance of its terms; and that it should not be extended to embrace a suit for damages for a breach of a contract. This view of the law would give it a much narrower construction than its language and evident purpose justify.

A suit for damages for breach of a contract a suit by the assignee, unless it would have had jurisdiction if the assignor had sued. Newgas v. New Orleans, 38 Fed. Rep. 198; Simons v. Ypsilanti Paper Co. 33 Fed. Rep. 198.

Under United States Revised Statutes, § 689, the circuit court has not jurisdiction of a suit to enforce performance of a contract in favor of an assignee where the assignor could not have sued, such suit being one to recover the contents of a chose in action. Shoecraft v. Bloxham, 124 U. S. 730 (31 L. ed. 674).

An equitable assignee of a claim to an account cannot sue if his assignor could not. Wilkinson v. Wilkinson, 2 Curt. 582; Sere v. Pitot, supra.

Choses in action; what include.

Choses in action include all debts and all claims for damages for breach of contract (Bushnell v. Kennedy, 78 U. S. 9 Wall. 387 19 L. ed. 720; Desty, Removal of Causes, 71); open accounts or unliquidated accounts, as well as promissory notes. Sere v. Pitot, supra; Wilkinson v. Wilkinson, 2 Curt. 582.

The assignee of a mortgage given to secure a note cannot sue unless his assignor could. Sheldon v. Sullivan, 49 U. S. 8 How. 441 (13 L. ed. 1147).

All contracts, promises, and covenants for the delivery of the chattels or money are within the Act (id.); and all torts when connected with contracts (Bushnell v. Kennedy, supra; Desty, Removal of Causes); an assignee of a right of action for damages for failure to protect a note from protest (Barney v. Globe Bank, 5 Blatchf. 107; Desty, Removal of Causes, 73); but not torts arising from the breach of some duty to which the law attaches damages. Barney v. Globe Bank, 5 Blatchf. 107.

Nor does the term apply to an action by an assignee to recover the possession of the chose in action or damages for its wrongful detention. Deahler v. Dodge, 37 U. S. 18 How. 623 (14 L. ed. 1034).

Who not within terms of the Act.

Receivers are also not within the terms of the Act. Davis v. Lathrop, 12 Fed. Rep. 353; Bradford v. Jenks, 2 McLean, 130; Foster, Fed. Jur. Acta, 34.

The representatives of a deceased person are not usually designated by the term "assignees," and are therefore not within the terms of the Act. Chappedaine v. Dechenaux, 4 U. S. 4 Cranch. 309 (3 L. ed. 689); Childress v. Emory, 21 U. S. 6 Wheat. 643 (5 L. ed. 705); Mayer v. Foulkrod, 4 Wash. C. Ct. 343.

Nor are assignees by operation of law included in the Act. Sere v. Pitot, 10 U. S. 6 Cranch. 309 (3 L. ed. 340).

Distinction of suit; when justified.

to
of
of

w of
p of el
p
N
T
F
L
F

el re
v

of ir tl
er
ri

u
w el er
R er
H

would seem to be, for present purposes at least, as much a suit "founded on contract" as a suit to recover a specific amount called for by a contract. Both are based on a contract and require its support to sustain them.

This suit is brought by the plaintiff on account of the deprivation of specified rights which it says it acquired by the terms of the contract in writing, which it sets out in full in the declaration.

The gravamen of its action is the violation by the defendant of his agreement contained in the contract. It is the foundation of plaintiff's rights; and if the suit proceeded to trial, the first evidence offered by it in the case would necessarily and properly be the contract.

But it is further urged that this expression, "founded on contract," as used in the Act of 1875, should be construed in connection with the language of the Judiciary Act of 1789, "the contents of any promissory note or other chose in action," and also the language of the Act of March 8, 1837.

Why a change was made in the language, restrictive of the jurisdiction of the court as to suits by assignees, in the Act of 1875, and why the language of the original Act of 1789 was readopted (so far as applicable here) in the Act of 1837, is not apparent—especially as to the last enactment. It would seem probable, however, that the purpose in using the language adopted in 1875 was to simplify the matter, and to avoid the difficult questions and nice distinctions, which had arisen in interpreting the expression, "the contents of any promissory note or other chose in action," as used in the original Act. However this may be, it is difficult to see how the plaintiff is benefited by viewing the Act of 1875 in connection with the other legislation on the subject.

It would seem that the construction which has been given to the Act of 1789 by the supreme court would be fatal to the jurisdiction in this case, even if the suit had been brought while it was in force.

Without discussing any of the former cases, the case of Corbin v. Black Hawk County, supra, is decisive of the question made in the case at Bar. In the opinion, page 665 [1188], the term "the contents" is thus defined: "The contents of a chose in action, in the sense of section 629, are the rights created by it in favor of a party in whose behalf stipulations are made in it, which he has a right to enforce in a suit founded on the contract; and a suit to enforce such stipulations is a suit to recover such contents."

This construction clearly covers the case now under consideration. In it the plaintiff seeks to enforce a stipulation, and the most important stipulation, of the contract set out in its declaration, and made the foundation of its claim.

In the latter case of Shoecraft v. Bozham, 124 U. S. 780 [31 L. ed. 574], in the opinion of the court this language is used: "Section 629 of the Revised Statutes, which was in force when the suit was commenced, declares that no circuit court shall have any cognizance of any suit to recover the contents of any promissory note or other chose in action in favor of an assignee, unless a suit might have been prosecuted in such court to recover the said contents if no assignment had been made, except in cases of foreign bills of exchange." The terms used "the contents of any promissory note or other chose in action," were designed to embrace the rights the instrument conferred which were capable of enforcement by suit. They were not happily chosen to convey this meaning, but they have received a construction substantially to that purport in repeated decisions of this court. They were so construed in the recent case of Corbin v. Black Hawk County, 105 U. S. 659 [26 L. ed. 1186], where the subject is fully considered and the decisions cited.

"There, a suit brought to enforce the specific performance of a contract was held to be a suit to recover the contents of a chose in action, and therefore not maintainable under the statute in question, in the Circuit Court of the United States, by an assignee, if it could not have been prosecuted there by the assignors had no assignment been made."

The case of Simons v. Ypsilanti Paper Co. 33 Fed. Rep. 193, in the Circuit Court of the Eastern District of Michigan, was brought after the passage of the Act of March 8, 1837; and in that case it was held that "an action to recover damages for the refusal to accept and pay for merchandises purchased under an oral contract is a suit to recover the contents of a chose in action, within the meaning of the Act of March 8, 1837; and a circuit court has no jurisdiction of such suit in favor of an assignee unless it might have been prosecuted in such court if no assignment had been made." In the opinion the court reviews the decisions of the supreme court on the Act of 1789, and derives therefrom authority for deciding as above. So that if, as has been urged by plaintiff here, a suit to come within the restriction of the Act of 1875, must be to recover "the contents" of the contract, it would seem that following the interpretation repeatedly given the term "contents" this suit could not be maintained.

The decision in the case of Blacklock v. Small, 127 U. S. 96 [32 L. ed. 70], so far as it touches upon the question here presented, would seem to be adverse to plaintiff's rights to maintain this suit. That case was brought under the Act of 1875, and while the direction of the supreme court to dismiss the bill for want of jurisdiction seems to have been mainly upon another ground, yet, so far as it affects this case at all, it is not favorable to the plaintiff's rights. Other reasons have been urged for giving this restriction the limited meaning contended for by plaintiff; some of which would be important if doubt was entertained as to its construction in this connection; but none of the reasons suggested can have force in view of what appears to be the plain meaning and intent of the language used. It seems clear, therefore, that this demurrer must be sustained, and it will be so ordered.

The Circuit Judge concurs in the conclusions reached.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT, SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK.

Frederick FRADLEY

v.

Josiah A. HYLAND, Impleaded, etc., App't.

(....Fed. Rep. ....)

- *1. Where an agent, authorized by a principal to purchase supplies for the use of the principal, and instructed to purchase only for cash, purchases in his own name, upon credit, of a seller who supposes the agent to be buying for himself only, and the principal pays or settles with the agent for the supplies in good faith, supposing that the agent had purchased them for cash or upon his personal credit, he is not liable over again to the seller for the price of the supplies.
- *2. The rule that a seller who deals with the agent of an undisclosed principal can, upon discovering the principal, resort to the latter for payment, unless by his conduct he has led the principal in the mean while to pay or settle with the agent, does not apply to a case in which the agent bought contrary to his instructions, and the seller gave credit to the agent supposing him to be the only principal, and the principal has in the mean time paid the agent.

(December 1, 1888.)

APPEAL by respondent, in admiralty, from a decree for libelant upon a libel for supplies furnished respondent's agent in charge of a canal-boat. Libel dismissed.

The facts appear in the opinion.

Mr. Josiah A. Hyland for appellant.Mr. Peter S. Carter for appellee.

Wallace, J., delivered the following opinion:

The libel sets forth two causes of action for supplies purchased by one Gibson. The district court decreed in favor of the libelant upon the first cause of action, and dismissed the libel as to the other. The respondent in the court below is the appellant here; but the libelant, although he has not appealed from the part of the decree by which the libel as to the second cause of action was dismissed, cites the case of Irvine v. The Hesper, 122 U. S. 256 [30 L. ed. 1175], and insists that he is entitled to urge that this court should decree in his favor as to that cause of action.

The facts which appear in evidence are these: During the period in which the supplies were purchased, one Gibson, who was the owner, and was managing certain canal-boats of his own, was employed by the appellant to manage certain canal-boats for the latter. Gibson was to obtain employment for the boats, and return the net earnings monthly to appellant, after paying for all repairs and supplies, and deducting his own commissions. His instructions were not to obtain supplies upon credit, *Head notes by WALLACE, J.

NOTE.—Principal not liable when credit given exclusively to agent.

Where a third party, knowing that the agent acts for his principal, elects at the time of the making of the contract to give exclusive credit to the agent, he cannot afterwards sue the principal. Ford v. Williams, 62 U. S. 21 How. 287 (16 L. ed. 86); Jones v. Extra Ins. Co. 14 Conn. 501; Johnson v. Cleaves, 15 N. H. 332; Stackpole v. Arnold, 11 Mass. 27; Cole 2 L. R. A.

but, if not in funds from the earnings, to call upon the appellant. Monthly settlements of account took place between Gibson and the appellant, in which Gibson was allowed all items for supplies paid or contracted for by him against the earnings of the boats, and a considerable fund was always left in his hands by the appellant. Gibson ceased to act as appellant's agent September 1, 1886. The supplies were sold to him prior to that time. The libelant supposed that Gibson was the owner of all the boats he was managing, and dealt with him as such, selling him supplies for all indiscriminately, charging the price to him, and taking his notes from time to time, or those of one Isham, his clerk. The claim to recover the part of these supplies used on appellant's boats is the first cause of action set forth in the libel.

One Kelly had also sold supplies to Gibson for the same boats, supposing that Gibson was the owner, and had received Gibson's notes, or notes of Gibson's clerk, for the amount. After these notes had matured, Gibson asked the libelant to pay them for him to Kelly, and the libelant did so, receiving new notes from Gibson for the amount. There was no assignment to libelant of Kelly's original demand against Gibson. The claim for the supplies thus sold by Kelly to Gibson is the second cause of action set forth in the libel. After Gibson ceased to act as agent for appellant, the libelant discovered that some of the supplies had been purchased for the appellant's boats, and, being unable to collect his demands of Gibson, made claim against the appellant therefor. Until then the appellant did not know of the transactions between Gibson and the libelant, or between Gibson and Kelly. The moneys left by appellant in Gibson's hands were at all times more than the amount of the libelant's demands, and Gibson was indebted to the appellant in more than that amount when he left the appellant's employ, and when this libel was filed.

As to the first cause of action no question is made by the appellant that it is not of admiralty cognizance, but he insists that he is not liable as a principal for the supplies sold to his agent by the libelant, under the circumstances of the case. The general rule is familiar that, when goods are bought by an agent, who does not at the time disclose that he is acting as agent, the seller, although he has relied solely upon the agent's credit, may, upon discovering the principal, resort to the latter for payment. But the rule which allows the seller to have recourse against an undisclosed principal is subject to the qualification stated by Lord Mansfield in Railton v. Hodgson, 4 Taunt. 576, and by Ten-terden, Ch. J., and Bayley, J., in Thomson v. Davenport, 9 Barn. & C. 78.

As stated by Mr. Justice Bayley, it is "that man v. First Nat. Bank, 63 N. Y. 388; Cunningham v. Soules, 7 Wend. 106; Cheever v. Smith, 15 Johns. 276; Silver v. Jordan, 136 Mass. 319; Raymond v. Crown & B. Mills, 2 Met. 319; James v. Bixby, 11 Mass. 34; Winchester v. Howard, 37 Mass. 303; Palme v. Stone, 10 Met. 160; French v. Price, 24 Pick. 13; Priestley v. Fernie, 8 Hurkt. & C. 977; Kymer v. Suvercrop, 1 Camp. 112; Wheeler v. McGuire, post, —; Hubbard v. Tenbrook, post, —.

the principal shall not be prejudiced by being made personally liable if the justice of the case is that he should not be personally liable. If the principal has paid the agent, or if the state of accounts between the agent here and the principal would make it unjust that the seller should call on the principal, the fact of payment or such a state of accounts would be an answer to the action brought by the seller, where he has looked to the responsibility of the agent."

The principal must respond to and may avail himself of a contract made with another by an undisclosed agent. When he seeks to enforce a bargain or purchase made by his agent the rule of law is that, if the agent contracted as for himself, the principal can only claim subject to all equities of the seller against the agent. In the language of Parke, B.: "He must take the contract subject to all equities, in the same way as if the agent were the sole principal" (Beckham v. Drake, 9 Mees. & W. 98), and accordingly subject to any right of set-off on the part of the seller (Borries v. Imperial Ottoman Bank, 29 L. T. N. S. 683).

Thus the rights of the principal to enforce, and his liability upon, a contract of sale or purchase made by his agent, without disclosing the fact of the agency, are precisely co-extensive, as regards the other contracting party, if the limitation of his liability is accurately stated in the earlier cases.

The qualification of the principal's liability to respond to his agent's contract, as stated in the earlier authorities mentioned, was narrowed by the interpretation adopted in Heald v. Kenworthy, 10 Exch. 789, to the effect that the principal is not discharged from full responsibility unless he has been led by the conduct of the seller to make payment to or settle with the agent; and the doctrine of this case has been reiterated in many subsequent cases, both in England and in this country, where the agent did not contract as for himself, but as a broker, or otherwise as representing an undisclosed principal. One of the more recent English cases of this class is Davison v. Donaldson, L. R. 9 Q. B. Div. 628.

But, as is shown in Armstrong v. Stokes, L. R. 7 Q. B. 599, the version of Heald v. Kenworthy, while a correct interpretation of the rule of the principal's liability, when applied to cases in which the seller deals with the agent relying upon the existence of an undisclosed principal, is not to be applied in those in which the seller has given credit solely to the agent, supposing him to be the principal. This case decides that the principal is not liable when the seller has dealt with the agent supposing him to be the principal, if he has in good faith paid the agent at a time when the seller still gave credit to the agent, and knew of no one else. See also Irvine v. Watson, L. R. 5 Q. B. Div. 102.

Under such circumstances it is immaterial that the principal has not been misled by the seller's conduct or laches into paying or settling with his agent. It is enough to absolve him from liability that he has in good faith paid or settled with his agent. In that case the court was dealing with a contract made by an agent which was within the scope of the authority conferred on him, but which was nevertheless made by the agent as though he were acting for himself as principal. In the present case Gibson had no authority at all to make a purchase upon the credit of the appellant. But as it appears that appellant, in the monthly settlements of account with Gibson, allowed him out of the earnings charges for supplies for which the latter had not actually paid, he must be deemed to have authorized Gibson to purchase supplies for him upon Gibson's own credit. Under the circumstances, if Gibson had purchased supplies, purporting to act as an agent of appellant in doing so, appellant, by consenting to their being used for his benefit, and by allowing the price in his settlements with Gibson, would have been liable to those who sold to him upon the theory of ratification. But, as Gibson did not assume to act as agent in making the purchases, there is no basis for applying the doctrine of ratification.

Very different considerations govern the case in which an agent who assumes to represent an undisclosed principal buys of a seller upon credit, and one in which the agent assumes to be acting for himself, and the seller deals with him, and gives him exclusive credit, supposing him to be the only principal. In the first, if the agent has authority, express or implied, to buy upon credit for the principal, or ostensible authority to do so, upon which the seller relies, then, by the familiar rules of law, the contract is the contract of the principal, and is none the less so because the name of the principal does not happen to have been disclosed. The principal is bound by the acts of his agent within the scope of his real or apparent authority; and the seller understands that, even though he may hold the agent personally responsible, he may also resort to the undisclosed principal. But in the other, as the seller does not rely upon any ostensible authority of the one with whom he contracts to represent a third person, he can only resort to the third person as principal, and charge him as such, when the purchase is made by one having lawful authority to bind the third person. It is immaterial, in such a case, whether the contract is made by an agent who is employed, in a continuous employment or in a single transaction, by a principal, or whether he is one who may be deemed a general, instead of a special, agent.

"When the agency is not held out by the principal by any acts or declarations or implications to be general in regard to the particular act or business, it must from necessity be construed according to its real nature and extent; and the other party must act at his own peril, and is bound to inquire into the nature and extent of the authority actually conferred. In such a case there is no ground to contend that the principal ought to be bound by the acts of the agent beyond what he has apparently authorized, because he has not misled the confidence of the other party who has dealt with the agent." Story, Ag. § 188.

It is therefore difficult to understand how, as an original proposition, it could be reasonably maintained that there is any liability on the part of one who has employed another to manage his interests in a business, or series of transactions, in which, as an incident, purchases of goods are to be made, has given him instructions not to purchase on credit, and has supplied him with funds to purchase for cash, to a seller who has sold to the person employed upon credit, and dealt with him as the only principal. Taft v. Baker, 100 Mass. 68.

Of course he would be liable, and the instructions not to buy on credit would go for nothing, if he did not supply the agent with funds to pay for the necessary goods, because in that case the agent would have implied authority to buy them on credit.

So, also, in a case which may be supposed, where a principal knows, or ought to know, that the agent is buying on credit in his own name, yet the principal takes all the income of the business without making any provision for payment to those who have trusted the agent, the principal would be liable, because in such a case his conduct would be inconsistent with good faith, and he ought not to be permitted to avail himself of the benefits without incurring full responsibility for the agent's acts. But it is probably too late to consider the questions thus suggested upon principle; and it may be accepted as law that the seller, under the circumstances of a case like the present, upon discovery of the principal, can resort to and recover of him, if he has not bona fide paid the agent in the mean time, or has not made such a change in the state of the account between the agent and himself that he would suffer loss if he should be compelled to pay the seller. Story, Ag. § 291; 1 Pars. Cont. 68; Fish v. Wood, 4 E. D. Smith, 827; Thomas v. Atkinson, 88 Ind. 248; Cleland v. Walker, 11 Ala. 1058; McOullough v. Thompson, 45 N. Y. Super. Ct. [13 Jones & S.] 449; Laing v. Butler, 87 Hun, 144.

In the case last cited the court used this language:

"Where the purchase has been made by the agent upon credit authorized by the principal, but without disclosing his name, and payment is subsequently made by the principal to the agent in good faith before the agency is disclosed to the seller, then the principal would not be liable."

According to these authorities, if it should be conceded that the facts in the present case warrant the inference that the appellant gave Gibson authority to buy either upon his own credit or upon the credit of the appellant, the libelant cannot recover. It certainly is not material that the appellant did not pay Gibson, or make any settlement with him, on account of the libelant's demands specifically. It is enough that he did settle with Gibson for, and allowed him to retain in his hands sufficient moneys to pay, all outstanding liabilities contracted by him for the appellant's benefit, including the demands of the libelant. At the time of the last settlement the appellant had paid the libelant's demands and all outstanding liabilities contracted by Gibson as between Gibson and himself; and this was before the libelant knew any principal in the purchases, other than Gibson himself.

As respects the second cause of action, the case may be briefly disposed of without considering the question whether the libelant can be heard to urge that the decree from which he has not appealed ought to be reversed. The transaction was merely a loan from libelant to Gibson. Whether the appellant is liable as upon a loan made by his agent or not, his obligation is in no sense a maritime one, and cannot be enforced in a court of admiralty. The libelant did not, by paying the notes to Kelly, and receiving Gibson's notes for the amount, succeed to any rights which Kelly may have had to enforce a claim for the supplies.

The libel is dismissed, with the costs of this Court and of the District Court

NEW YORK COURT OF APPEALS.

James BRADY, Appt.,
v.
MAYOR, etc., OF the City of NEW YORK,
Repts.

(....N. Y....)

1. The certificate of the proper officer that certain work is necessary to complete or perfect a particular job which is being performed for the City of New York or that any supply is needful for any particular purpose, is conclusive as between the one contracting to furnish such work or supply and the city, where there is no allegation of fraud, and where the facts indicate that the necessity certified is a possible incident of such work or supply.

2. The court of appeals will not review the conclusion of the officer specially charged with the determination of the question of the necessity of certain work to complete a job or of certain supplies for the City of New York, where it appears that the facts called for the exercise of his judgment, and that a reasonable necessity might by possibility have existed.

3. A contract with the City of New York, for the consideration of $375, to substitute cherry for pine in finishing the interior of a public building in process of construction under a valid contract, need not be founded upon a sealed bid or proposal under the Consolidation Act, § 64, requiring contracts for extra work to be so founded "where the several parts of the said work or supply shall together involve the expenditure of more than $1,000.

2 L. R. A.

(March 5, 1880.)

APPEAL by plaintiff, from an order of the General Term of the Superior Court of the City of New York, reversing a judgment of the Special Term in favor of plaintiff and ordering a new trial in an action to recover the amount alleged to be due upon a contract for labor and materials. Reversed.

The facts sufficiently appear from the opinion.

Messrs. Theodore DeWitt, and George G. DeWitt, Jr., for appellant.

Messrs. David J. Dean, John J. Townsend, Jr., and Henry R. Beekman, for respondents.

To permit a change to be made subsequent to the award of the contract and during the progress of the work, in specifications originally complete of their kind, would open the door to the very evil the prevention of which was the object of the statute.

Brady v. N. Y. 20 N. Y. 312; Re Merriam, 84 N. Y. 596.

The clause of the Act relating to the extra work was doubtless intended for cases of work omitted in a contract from inadvertence, or the necessity of which, to complete a job, was unforeseen when the contract was made.

People v. N. Y. 32 Barb. 35; Uagus v. Phila. 48 Pa. 527; McBrien v. Grand Rapids, 56 Mich. 95; Bonesteel v. N. Y. 22 N. Y. 163.

Finch, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The reversal by the general term is sought to be sustained by two propositions argued on behalf of the city; first, that no necessity existed for the change authorized by the new or supplemental contract; and second, that it involved an expenditure of more than $1,000 and so was invalid unless submitted to public competition. Our judgment is adverse to both propositions.

The law, requiring contracts on behalf of the city to be founded on sealed bids or proposals, describes its own application thus: "Whenever any work is necessary to be done to complete or perfect a particular job, or any supply is needful for any particular purpose, which work and job is to be undertaken or supply furnished for the corporation, and the several parts of the said work or supply shall together involve the expenditure of more than $1,000."

The new contract here was to substitute cherry for pine in the hall, vestibule, café and wine room, and for newels, balusters and rails of the principal staircase in the Mount St. Vincent Restaurant, which was being constructed in the Central Park. The first inquiry is, Who is to judge of the necessity, and what is the effect of that judgment? The same section which prescribes the necessity (Con. Act, § 64) also requires that it shall be certified to by the head of the appropriate department. That certificate was made in this case, but is now asserted to be in no respect conclusive and to leave open the question whether the particular necessity existed. As between the contractor and the city, the certificate of the proper officer is certainly conclusive where there is no allegation of fraud or collusion, and where the facts indicate that the necessity certified was a possible incident of the work to be done or the supply to be furnished.

We ought not to review or reverse the conclusion of the officer specially charged with the determination of the question where we can see that the facts called for the exercise of his judgment, and that a reasonable necessity might by possibility have existed. We think that was the situation in the present case. A restaurant for the use and convenience of the public was being erected in the Central Park. Upon that park large sums have been expended to enhance its attractions, and make it not only useful but beautiful. Much of that expenditure has been necessary, not in the hard and narrow sense of the word, but relatively to the standard of taste and beauty adopted as the controlling guide. Much was reasonably to be deemed necessary there, which elsewhere could not be, and would verge upon pure extravagance. A restaurant in that park should not disgrace the standard of its surroundings. It was better not to build it at all, than with a cheap parsimony and bad taste. These considerations might rightfully influence the constructing board and take their place among the reasonable necessities of the work. In their plans the main vestibule and café, and even the principal staircase, were to be finished in pine. Undoubtedly when so finished the job would be "complete," but would it also be "perfect?" Great changes have come about in the construction of interiors. The use of hard woods has become the rule where any degree of elegance is sought, and a café in the Central Park finished in pine, even to the staircase rails and balusters, might well be deemed unfit and inappropriate, not only as it respected its appearance, but also its durability. During the pleasant months it would probably be thronged, and the evidence shows that the pine would yield and wear while the cherry would remain permanent and durable. Looking at the situation with its surroundings, I think such reasonable necessity for the change existed as to call into play the judgment of the board. The wisdom or prudence of its exercise we are not called upon to discuss.

The remaining question is whether the change ordered and made involved an expenditure of over $1,000. The general term has so held upon the ground that to the $975, which was the contract price of the change, must be added the cost of the pine fitting under the original contract. We think that is a mistaken view.

The original contract was to be performed for about $29,000. That was founded upon sealed bids, and included the fitting of the rooms and construction of the staircase. The contractor was not released from that work and did perform it, and so was entitled to his full pay under the old or original contract. If he had used cherry without any arrangement for an extra compensation he would simply have completed the original contract for their original price. The supplemental contract was for extra work and material beyond the original contract price, and the price of that was simply the $975. I think we may see it in another way by the inquiry how much of additional expenditure was incurred by the change. The $29,000 was payable for the work of the original contract. That required doors, architraves, bases and staircase. All these were built and furnished and the contract price thus earned, but an additional expenditure of $975 was involved in the change ordered from pine to cherry.

The total expenditure was increased only by the value of the extra material and labor beyond that already covered by a valid contract; and the two contracts together, when both were fulfilled, did not add to the original and authorized expenditure, more than $1,000. The order made related to and covered only the excess of value due to the extra work and material. The price of the pine and its fittings went as far as it could in paying for the cherry and its fittings, and the new contract began and its expenditure commenced at the point where the old one was exhausted. Viewing the matter thus, we think the contractor should have his pay, which he has fairly earned.

The order of the General Term should be reversed and that of the Special Term of the Superior Court be affirmed, with costs.

All concur.

OHIO SUPREME COURT.

John B. MANNIX, Assignee,

v.

John B. PURCELL et al.

(46 Ohio St.....)

1. It is competent to prove by parol evidence that land conveyed to a grantee by a deed absolute on its face is in fact held by him in trust for charitable uses; but such evidence should be clear, convincing and conclusive.
2. Where such grantee is in fact Archbishop of the Roman Catholic Church for his diocese, its canons and decrees, regulating the mode of acquiring and holding church property, are competent evidence to show that the property so held by him is held in trust for purposes of public religious worship and other charitable uses.
3. Such a trust is one of which the courts will take cognizance and assume control for the purpose of preventing its abuse, perversion or destruction.
4. Where such property is held by the archbishop in trust to be devoted to the uses of public religious worship, cemeteries, orphan asylums and schools, each church, cemetery, asylum and school is held upon a separate trust and for its own separate uses; and one piece of property so held is not chargeable with any part of the expense of improving another, nor of improving church property generally in the diocese.
5. Property held upon such trusts by the archbishop does not pass to his assignee in insolvency by a deed of assignment made in his individual capacity for the payment of his individual debts. Such an assignment passes to the assignee no better or different title to the assigned property than the assignor held; and cestui que trustent may assert as against the assignee and the creditors of the assignor the same rights that they could against the latter if no assignment had been made.
6. Though the several congregations of the churches so held in trust, and the persons respectively possessing and having charge of such schools, cemeteries and asylums, are severally unincorporated and otherwise incapable of holding the legal title to the property so used, they nevertheless have such an interest in the trust property as permits them to be represented in court by a number less than the whole, having a common interest with them, for the purpose of protecting the property from seizure and sale for the satisfaction of the private debts of the trustee.
7. Changes in the membership of such congregations and bodies do not affect their legal identity; and for the purposes of continuing and enjoying the uses to which the properties respectively possessed by them are devoted they respectively remain, in legal contemplation, the same congregations and bodies.
8. It is not essential to the existence or enjoyment of a trust for charitable uses that the individual beneficiaries are able to show that they contributed to, or have a personal, pecuniary interest in, the trust property; their interest is measured by, and limited to, the uses for which the property is held.
9. Where such trustee has made advances

*Head notes by the COURT.

NOTE.—Charitable uses.

See Fire Ins. Patrol v. Boyd, 1 L. R. A. 417, and note.

2 L. R. A.

from his own private means, otherwise than as donations, to assist in buying or improving the trust property, he has a claim upon the particular property so purchased or improved, which passes to his assignee in insolvency as individual assets; and in a proceeding by the assignee to subject the assets of his assignor to the payment of his debts, it is competent for the court to order an accounting of the advances so made with a view to subjecting such property to the satisfaction of such claim.

10. Such a trustee has power, by contract, to charge the trust property with the reasonable expense of its necessary preservation, improvement and repair, in favor of one who expends money, labor or materials for that purpose.
11. Cross petition in error. A defendant in error against whom, as cross petitioner in the trial court, a judgment had been rendered which is in favor of all the other parties to the suit, and to which no error is assigned by another party, is required to file his cross petition in error within two years after the rendition of such judgment, in order to obtain its reversal.

(December 21, 1882.)

ERROR to the District Court of Hamilton County. Affirmed, with modifications.

Statement by Owen, Ch. J.:

This cause comes to this court by a proceeding in error to reverse the judgment of the district court upon the following finding of facts and conclusions of law:

"1. That in the year 1833 the defendant, John B. Purcell, was appointed Bishop of the Roman Catholic Diocese which includes the City of Cincinnati, in this State; that afterwards, in the year 1855, he was appointed the archbishop of said diocese, and continued as such bishop or archbishop from the time of his first appointment as aforesaid until after his assignment, made in March, 1879; that his brother, Edward Purcell, came to Cincinnati in the year 1837, to be one of the Roman Catholic priests of this diocese, and was appointed as one of the priests for the congregation worshipping at the Cathedral, and was also appointed by the said archbishop as vicar general of the diocese, and has had the general management and control of the financial matters of the said archbishop; that, with the knowledge and acquiescence of the said archbishop, the said Edward Purcell, as soon as he came into the diocese, began to receive money on deposit, paying interest thereon, and loaning it out upon interest, and continued to receive money in said business until his indebtedness, arising out of said business, became too great to pay, and he made the assignment to the plaintiff; that he assumed to have authority to do this from the said John B. Purcell, who recognized such authority, and has assumed this entire indebtedness thus created by the said Edward Purcell as his own, and for which he has acknowledged that he is liable.

"2. That at the time the said John B. Purcell was appointed bishop as aforesaid, and from that time, and for all the time till he made the assignment hereinbefore named, the canons, rules and regulations governing the Roman Catholic Church of this diocese, and all its members, required that all property, land and buildings, acquired and used for ecclesiastical purposes and parochial residences, including schoolhouses and seminaries of learning, asylums and cemeteries, should be conveyed to the bishop or archbishop of the said diocese by name, and his heirs and assigns forever, to be held by him in trust for the uses and purposes for which it was acquired; and, since he has been such bishop and archbishop as aforesaid, numerous churches and other institutions have been acquired in this diocese for ecclesiastical purposes, according to the form and discipline of the Roman Catholic Church, including the churches, schoolhouses, parochial residences, asylums, seminary and cemeteries named in the petition in this case, and the same when acquired were conveyed by deed to the said John B. Purcell, his heirs and assigns, by reason of the said rules of the said church requiring it.

"3. That the said John B. Purcell, being unable to pay his debts, on the 4th of March, 1879, conveyed certain specific real estate, including some of the lots named in the petition in this case, to his brother, Edward Purcell, to enable him to pay the debts incurred by him on account of the said John B. Purcell; and on the same day the said Edward Purcell did convey the same, and all his own property, to the plaintiff, in trust for the payment of said debts, and on the 11th of March, 1879, the said John B. Purcell also made an assignment to the plaintiff, in trust for the payment of his debts, of all his property which could by law or in equity be subjected to the payment of his debts; but said assignment did not include, nor was it intended to include, any property held by the said John B. Purcell in trust for others; and said instrument of assignment also recited that all the debts contracted by his brother were contracted on his account, for which he was morally and legally bound, and that all the debts were intended to be covered by this assignment, without discrimination; that said last named deed of assignment did not enumerate any specific property, but at the time it was made the said John B. Purcell held the legal title by conveyances to him, his heirs and assigns, of the lots of land, with the churches and other institutions thereon, which are named in the petition, and at the same time was the owner of other property which had been devised or deeded to him unaffected by any trust, and which could be in law and equity subjected to the payment of his debts.

"4. That all the churches, institutions and other property named in the petition are situated in the Roman Catholic Diocese of Cincinnati.

"5. That the canons, rules and regulations existing for the government of the Roman Catholic Church, and all its members, in said diocese, and in force therein during the time when the said churches, institutions and other property were acquired, required that all churches acquired by the gifts, donations and contributions of the members of the several congregations worshipping therein, and others, and all asylums, seminaries, cemeteries and other property acquired and used for ecclesiastical and charitable purposes, acquired by the gifts, devises and contributions of the friends of said institutions and others charitably disposed, to be deeded to the said John B. Purcell, the bishop of the diocese, his heirs and assigns; and that the said churches and other institutions above named were thus deeded to the said John B. Purcell, his heirs and assigns, by reason of said rules and regulations, and for no other reason; and that the said John B. Purcell held the same in trust for the uses and purposes for which they were acquired.

"6. That the several churches known as the 'Holy Trinity Church,' 'St. Mary's Church,' 'St. Anthony's Church,' 'St. John's Church,' 'St. Philomena's Church,' the 'Church of the Atonement,' 'St. Michael's Church,' and the land on which they are situated, named in the petition, were severally bought, built and paid for by the gifts and contributions of the members of the several congregations worshipping therein, respectively, and others, for the purpose of a church where public worship might be held according to the forms, doctrine and discipline of the Roman Catholic Church; that they were severally conveyed to the said John B. Purcell, his heirs and assigns, because the rules and regulations of the said church required them to be so conveyed; that neither the said John B. Purcell, nor his brother, Edward Purcell, contributed any money or other pecuniary aid towards them which has not been repaid; that, as to the said churches known as the 'St. Mary's' and the 'St. John's,' the said John B. Purcell, as archbishop, before the assignment to the plaintiff, by instruments in writing duly executed, executed declarations of trust, reciting that he held said churches in trust for the several congregations who occupied them.

"7. That the said church known as the 'St. Patrick's Church,' on the corner of Third and Mill Streets, in Cincinnati, and the 'St. Patrick's Church in Cumminsville,' were bought, built and paid for, except as hereinafter named, by the gifts of the members of said congregations worshipping therein, and others, for the purpose of a church where public worship might be held according to the forms, doctrine and discipline of the Roman Catholic Church; but the same were conveyed to the said John B. Purcell, his heirs and assigns, because the rules and regulations of the said church required them to be so conveyed; that either the said John B. Purcell, or his brother, Edward Purcell, advanced, by way of loan, money to aid in the purchase or building of each of said churches; and the court finds that the money advanced to aid the building of St. Patrick's Church in Cumminsville has not been repaid, but is unable to state the amount due; and as to the money advanced in the purchase of St. Patrick's Church in Cincinnati the court is unable to state whether it has all been repaid or not.

"8. That the Cathedral and parsonage attached were bought and built by the said John B. Purcell, bishop of said diocese, for the purpose of a cathedral for said diocese, and for the use of a congregation worshipping therein, but he took the title to said property in his own name, because the rules and regulations of the Roman Catholic Church for said diocese so required; that at the time of said purchase he intended, and so declared his intent, that it was for a cathedral for the whole diocese; that at the time he bought he solicited and received large sums of money, given him for the purpose of building said cathedral; that he caused it to be consecrated as such in 1845, and to be used as a place for public worship for a congregation worshipping therein according to the forms, doctrine and discipline of the Roman Catholic Church; and the court finds that he held the same in trust for the uses and purposes for which it was acquired, but that in purchasing and building the said cathedral the said John B. Purcell, or his brother, advanced largesums of money, which have not been entirely repaid, but the court is unable to state the amount now due on account of such advances. The several congregations occupying said churches were composed of men, women and children of the Roman Catholic faith, worshipping therein, and there receiving the sacraments. They were not incorporated nor organized under any statute of the State, nor were they unincorporated associations where the members incurred any personal liability. They were not separated by territorial limits, though Catholics were usually expected to attend the church nearest their residence, but could change from one church to another by a change of residence, and for other reasons, or even caprice. Taking a pew and paying the pew rates by a Roman Catholic would constitute such person a member of the congregation. Leaving the church and going elsewhere, he would cease to be a member. The churches were open to all for public worship, the poor as well as the rich having the right to attend free of cost. There were trustees chosen annually for some of said churches; and men over twenty-one years of age, and renting pews, could vote in the choice of trustees. The pastor of the congregation was appointed by the bishop, and removable at his pleasure, but his salary was paid by the congregation; and the pastor for the time being, with his congregation, had the actual possession of the church.

"9. That the said Cathedral School, on the corner of Elizabeth and Mound Streets, in Cincinnati, and included in the petition, was bought and built by the said Edward Purcell for the purposes of a public school, to be kept in connection with the Cathedral; that the title was taken in the name of the said John B. Purcell, archbishop as aforesaid, his heirs and assigns, because the rules and regulations of the Roman Catholic Church in his diocese so required; that said purchase was intended for a schoolhouse, and a large proportion of the money for buying and building the same was given by the members of the Cathedral congregation and others for the purpose of a cathedral school, to be open to the public; that the said John B. Purcell received the conveyance of the said land knowing that it was intended that he should hold it in trust for said school, and did, in fact, hold it in trust for said school; that the said Edward Purcell made advances towards said schoolhouse which have not been repaid, but the amount which is now due thereon the court is unable to state.

"10. The court does further find that one Jacob Hoffner, in the year 1852, being the owner thereof, conveyed to the said John B. Purcell, his heirs and assigns, eleven and sixty-seven one hundredths acres of land in Cummins ville, for the purpose of an orphan asylum; that the consideration named in the deed was $8,220, but the estimated value of said land was much greater; but it was sold at the reduced price because it was understood to be used, and was expressly conveyed, for an orphan asylum. The said Hoffner also, in consideration of the objects for which it was conveyed, remitted one half of the $8,220 named in the deed as the consideration of the said conveyance. The court does also find that under the direction of Edward Purcell, and with gifts, legacies and contributions furnished him for that purpose by the friends of the asylum, it was built and improvements made under the care and management and at the expense of the sisters in charge, and a large number of orphans received, taken out and supported therein, under the care of a sisterhood of the Roman Catholic Church, who have constantly occupied it, and had the management and control of said asylum and said orphans, for an orphan asylum; that the said John B. Purcell received the said deed from the said Hoffner with the distinct understanding that the said land therein conveyed would be held by him for an orphan asylum, and did in fact hold it in trust for an orphan asylum; that the said Edward Purcell was treasurer of said asylum, and received and held the moneys, and also made advances towards it, from time to time; but whether he has been repaid all he advanced the court is unable to say.

"11. We find, as to the claim of the cross petitioner Benedetto Gatto, and Louis Nardini, his trustee, that they hold a mortgage, dated December 24, 1878, given by John B. Purcell to his brother, Edward Purcell, on the orphan asylum property heretofore mentioned; that the same was given to secure the note of John B. Purcell for $17,005, dated December 14, 1878, payable to the order of Edward Purcell three years after date, and indorsed by Edward Purcell to Benedetto Gatto. The consideration of said note consisted in part of money deposited with Edward Purcell in 1875, and the remainder of loans made in June, 1878, evidenced by notes, which were surrendered, and the note given for the full amount. At the time the said mortgage was given, and for all the intervening time since 1854, the said orphan asylum had been in the actual and notorious possession and occupancy of the sisters of charity, who there maintained several hundred children, and administered said charity, which was well known to said Gatto and Nardini; also that the said Gatto and Nardini were members of the Roman Catholic Church.

"12. The court finds, as to St. Mary's Seminary, that one Patrick Considine, in the year 1848, then being the owner, gave a tract of land in the western part of Cincinnati for the purpose of a seminary to educate young men for the priesthood, and conveyed it by deed to the said John B. Purcell, his heirs and assigns; that J. and J. Slevin, at their own expense, erected the main building for said seminary, and presented it to the said archbishop and his successors in said office; that the said John B. Purcell received the said conveyances of said land and building, and held them in trust for the purposes and uses for which they were given; that subsequently large additions were made to said seminary, at great expense, part of which were paid from the current receipts; that it received many gifts, donations and legacles towards such improvements; that Edward Purcell controlled the erection of said building and received the gifts contributed for that purpose; that he also made advances, the amount of which, and whether he has been repaid what he advanced, the court is unable to state.

"18. As to St. Joseph's Cemetery, the court finds that in 1843 one Wm. Terry and wife conveyed nineteen and twenty-two one hundredths acres of land to Edward Purcell, who deeded one half thereof for a German Catholic cemetery; and the other half, nine and sixty-one one hundredths acres, he retained for a cemetery for the Roman Catholics of this diocese, called the 'Old St. Joseph's'; that it was consecrated for a Roman Catholic cemetery, used as a burial place by Roman Catholics in this diocese, and is now nearly filled up with graves; that in 1853 the said John B. Purcell purchased a tract of sixty-one and thirty-one one hundredths acres, about two miles distant, known as the 'New St. Joseph's,' taking the deed to himself, his heirs and assigns; that he caused a part of the same to be platted, laid out into burial lots, announced in the cathedral that he had purchased this as a cemetery for the use of Catholics of this diocese, and invited them to purchase burial lots therein, and in 1854 caused a greater part thereof to be consecrated as a cemetery, and from that time persons of that faith began to purchase lots and burial permits therein; that a road ran through the tract, cutting off eight or ten acres from the residue, which had never been consecrated; that Edward Purcell, from the time of the purchase, in 1853, till the assignment, had the general superintendence, employed the engineer to lay it out in lots of various sizes, appointed the sexton, fixed the price of lots, and sold the same to purchasers, sometimes at so much per lot, or so much per half lot, sometimes at so much per square foot, and sometimes in single graves—the quantity taken as a burial lot, when sold by the square foot, being at the option of the purchaser. He also issued certificates of ownership to the several purchasers of lots. The first kind was for a single grave, and signed by the sexton; the next kind was a certificate for a lot, or half lot, in a certain range, containing so many square feet, and signed by the superintendent; a third was in this form, viz.:

Certificate of Ownership. The Most Rev. J. B. Purcell, Archbishop of Cincinnati, hereby certifies that N. B., in consideration of— dollars, is the owner of a lot in St. Joseph's New Cemetery.

[Signed]

Edward Purcell.

—and countersigned by the sexton as secretary; and the last form adopted was issued in the name of the 'directors of the cemetery,' and certified that the 'purchaser, his heirs and assigns, are entitled to the use of said lot, in fee simple, for the purpose of sepulture alone, subject, however, to the rules and regulations of the Roman Catholic Church regarding interments in consecrated ground.' That there were no directors, and the money received from the sale of lots and burial permits ever since 1842, as to the Old St. Joseph's, and 1854 as to the New St. Joseph's, was paid to him, except what was reserved to defray the expenses about the ground, and has been used by him as his own, for any purpose he saw fit. Of the portion of the New St. Joseph's that was consecrated a narrow strip was designedly left unconsecrated, and reserved for those who were not entitled to a Catholic burial. A permit from some priest in the diocese was required in all cases for burial, and for those who could not afford to pay for the right of burial no charge was made. In June, 1874, Archbishop Purcell, in the petition signed and sworn to by him in an action brought in the Hamilton County Common Pleas Court, to enjoin the township trustees from laying out a road through the tract, alleged that he is the Archbishop of the Roman Catholic Church in and for the Diocese of Cincinnati, Ohio; that as the archbishop of said diocese, under the laws governing the said Roman Catholic Church, all the property of the said church within said diocese, except such as vests in certain incorporated societies, is held by him in his own name, in trust for the sole use and benefit of the said church; that as such archbishop he holds the legal title of the following described real estate. Here follows a description, by metes and bounds, of the New St. Joseph's Cemetery; and the deed of John Terry and wife to John B. Purcell, dated November 22, 1853, is referred to for a more particular description. Then follows the further declaration that said premises were purchased and have been used solely for the purposes of a cemetery.

"14. The property known as the 'Catherine Street Cemetery' was purchased by Edward Dominick Fenwick, the Roman Catholic Bishop of the Diocese of Cincinnati, and the immediate predecessor in the said office of bishop of John B. Purcell, for a cemetery. The said Fenwick died in the year 1832, leaving a will, duly executed and dated July 3, 1830, which was duly probated. By said will said Fenwick devised and bequeathed said Catherine Street Cemetery, together with other property, to trustees, in trust that the trustees aforesaid shall, as soon as a Roman Catholic Bishop for the Diocese of Cincinnati shall have been canonically appointed and consecrated, convey to him said Catherine Street Cemetery property. John B. Purcell was the next Roman Catholic Bishop canonically appointed and consecrated. Immediately thereafter said trustees did grant, give, sell, convey, release and confirm to the Right Rev. John B. Purcell, Roman Catholic Bishop of the Diocese of Cincinnati, canonically appointed and consecrated, and the immediate successor in the said office of bishop of the said Edward D. Fenwick, the said Catherine Street Cemetery tract. Habendum: 'To have and to hold the same, and every part and parcel thereof, to him, the said John B. Purcell, bishop as aforesaid, and his heirs, forever, for the uses and purposes of the said church.'

"15. The Old St. Joseph's Cemetery, on the tax duplicate of Hamilton County, has been exempted from taxation since 1844, as being a graveyard.

"16. The whole sixty acre tract known as the 'New St. Joseph's Cemetery' was exempted from taxation, as being a burial place, since 1854.

"17. In 1850 the larger part, about fifty acres east of the road, was on the tax duplicate for taxation, but has been exempted from taxation since 1862, as being a graveyard.

"18. The court also finds that said John B. Purcell assigned the revenues of the Old and New St. Joseph's Cemeteries to certain trustees, in a deed of trust made for the payment of his debts before this assignment, and afterwards canceled.

"19. After the assignment of John B. Purcell and Edward Purcell, and prior to September 1, 1880, the income and revenues of the Old and New St. Joseph's Cemeteries were paid to John B. Mannix, assignee, and he still holds the same. The amount paid Mr. Mannix by Eugene Sullivan, sexton, during said time, was $9,631.89. The amount collected by said Mannix himself during that time was —dollars—at least $2,000.

"20. The said St. Joseph's Cemetery Association was not organized or incorporated until August, 1880, after the assignment.

"21. And, in addition, the court further finds the following facts, which were agreed to be true by the assignee and his counsel on one side, and the St. Joseph's Cemetery and its counsel on the other side: that there was sufficient money realized from the sales of burial lots and graves in the Catherine Street burying-ground, prior to the purchase of the Old St. Joseph's Cemetery, to pay the original price of both the said Catherine Street burying-ground and the Old St. Joseph's Cemetery, over and above all other outlays made on account of said Catherine Street burying-ground.

"22. That subsequent to the purchase of the Old St. Joseph's Cemetery, and prior to the purchase of the New (present) St. Joseph's Cemetery, a sufficient sum has been realized from the sale of lots and graves in the Old St. Joseph's Cemetery to pay the original cost of the Old St. Joseph's Cemetery, and all improvements thereon, and left a surplus much more than sufficient to pay for the New St. Joseph's Cemetery, which surplus sums were paid to Edward Purcell, as representative of John B. Purcell.

"23. That in the year 1885, and prior thereto, it was common for farmers and others throughout the State to have private or family burying-grounds on their premises, many of which did not exceed $50 in value.

"24. The title to the property described in the answer and cross petition of the St. Joseph's Cemetery Association known as the 'New St. Joseph's Cemetery' was conveyed to John B. Purcell, Archbishop of Cincinnati, and the part known as the 'Old St. Joseph's Cemetery' to Edward Purcell, in fee simple, many years before the deeds of assignment executed by them to John B. Mannix, respectively, and so remained until at the time of said assignments, subject to conveyances of lots for interment purposes, as hereinafter stated.

"25. At the date of said assignment said John B. Purcell was, and ever since has remained, justly indebted to divers persons in divers sums, amounting in all to more than three and one-half million dollars, of which there have been presented, and proper proof has been made to the assignee, to the extent of more than two and one half million dollars.

"26. By the rules of the Roman Catholic Church only Catholics dying in the communion of the church are permitted to be buried in consecrated ground.

"27. The petition in case No. 48,887, Hamilton County Common Pleas Court, shall be taken to be the same in all respects as the copy here produced, and was sworn to by said John B. Purcell, as appears in said copy.

"28. The portion of the New St. Joseph's Cemetery west of the road mentioned in the petition of John B. Purcell, in 48,877, and sought to be by said petition enjoined from being made a public road, has never been consecrated as a cemetery, and no interments have been made therein; but it has been used and cultivated by the sexton as part of his compensation as sexton.

"29. At the date of assignment not over one third of the New St. Joseph's Cemetery, but nearly all of the Old St. Joseph's Cemetery, had been actually used or occupied for burial purposes, and burial rights in writing had been granted by deed and otherwise to divers lot holders, to the extent aforesaid.

"30. The mortgage dated January 20, 1879, from John B. Purcell to P. A. Quinn and others, in trust, recorded same day in Book 420, p. 228, Hamilton County Records, was executed as appears on its face, and may be offered in evidence, subject to proper exceptions.

"31. Previous to the purchase of the Old St. Joseph's Cemetery, John B. Purcell announced that he would have to purchase other grounds for a cemetery, on account of being obliged to give up the Catherine Street Cemetery. Soon after the purchase of the old St. Joseph's Cemetery, in 1842, he announced that he had purchased the same, and set it apart as a cemetery of the Roman Catholics of his diocese. Thereupon members of the Roman Catholic Church commenced the purchase of lots and graves therein, the whole of which had been previously consecrated.

"32. The court find that on the 26th day of November, 1878, Edward Purcell, as the agent of said John B. Purcell, made, executed, and delivered to Henry Bokop, for $5,965 loaned, the note as follows, to wit:

No. 1. Cincinnati, November 26, 1878.

The Archbishop of Cincinnati promises to pay, one year after date, to the order of Henry Bokop, five thousand nine hundred and sixty-five dollars, for value received, with six per cent interest for one year only.

[Signed]

$5,965.00

John B. Purcell,
Edward Purcell.

—that there was paid on said note $50 on February 6, 1879, and there have been no other or further payments thereon. That there is due thereon the sum of $5,915 with interest. That at the date of said note, and for a long period prior thereto, John B. Purcell was Archbishop of the Diocese of Cincinnati, and the said Edward Purcell was his agent, with full power to do and transact the financial business of John B. Purcell as the archbishop of said diocese.

"33. That Patrick Brannan, a creditor of the said John B. Purcell, before the commencement of this proceeding, filed in the Court of Common Pleas of Hamilton County a bill in behalf of himself, and such creditors as might join, under section 6845 of the Revised Statutes, to set aside the deed hereinbefore referred to, made March 4, 1879, by John B. Purcell to the said Edward Purcell, on the ground that it was fraudulent as to creditors. That the said Jefferson National Bank of Steubenville, and the First National Bank of Covington, which had severally discounted the notes of the said John B. Purcell, indorced by the said Edward Purcell, and were creditors of the said John B. Purcell, and had severally recovered judgments against him on said notes, have become parties to the said proceedings of the said Patrick Brannan, praying for the same relief; and such proceeding is now pending in the Supreme Court of Ohio.

"34. That the defendant John G. Hendricks, another creditor of the said John B. Purcell, has recovered judgment by default against him in the sum of $39,327, composed of sundry items for paving around the Cathedral and putting on a new tin roof, and the greater part for the proceeds of certain United States government bonds deposited with Edward Purcell, and by him sold, and the proceeds credited on a pass-book to said Hendricks as so much money on deposit.

"And as conclusions of law the court finds that at the time of the assignment to the plaintiff the said John B. Purcell, holding the said property named in the foregoing articles of this finding, except the St. Joseph's cemeteries, in trust for religious and charitable uses, the same did not pass to the plaintiff by the said instrument of assignment, nor can the said assignee subject it to the payment of the debts referred to and included in the said assignment; but as to the said churches and other properties known as the 'Church of St. Patrick's,' on the corner of Third and Mill Streets, the 'Church of St. Patrick's in Cumminsville,' the 'Cathedral,' the 'Cathedral School,' the 'Orphan Asylum,' and the 'Mt. St. Mary's Seminary,' the said assignee is entitled to recover whatever sums of money, if any, have been advanced by the said John B. Purcell, or Edward Purcell, for buying or building, or to aid in buying or building, any of said churches or other properties, or improving, repairing, insuring, or for taxes or other purposes, and has not been repaid; and, unless said parties can agree as to said amounts, if any, due from the said several churches and other institutions last above named, the said matter be referred to a master to ascertain the amount due the said John B. Purcell or Edward Purcell on account of advances to any of said churches or other property; but as to the other churches—the Holy Trinity, St. Anthony's, St. Michael's, St. Mary's, St. John's, Church of the Atonement, and St. Philomena's—the petition should be dismissed, with costs.

And, as a further conclusion of law, the court finds that as to the several claims of Henry Bokop, Patrick Brannan, the Jefferson National Bank of Steubenville, the First National Bank of Covington, John G. Hendricks, and Louisa Sturhoff, the equity of the case is against them, and with the defendants, and as to each of them their answer and cross petition be dismissed. And that the said mortgage made by the said John B. Purcell to Edward Purcell, and by him assigned to the said Louis Nardini in trust, is not a lien upon said orphan asylum. The court also finds, as a conclusion of law, that so much of the New St. Joseph's Cemetery as has not been sold into burial lots, or otherwise appropriated to the burial of the dead, as is reasonably practicable to be separated from the residue and sold, is subject to sale by the assignee for the payment of debts under the assignment; and, unless the parties can agree upon the quantity of ground that may be thus sold, the said master above named shall ascertain the quantity, and report to the court; and that the fund on hand received for the sale of said lots of ground in the cemetery for burial purposes since the assignment, and which has not been expended for improvements, belongs to the plaintiff as assignee; and that the claim and rights of the said assignee are not affected by the organization of the St. Joseph's Cemetery Association since the assignment. And the court having found that, as to the claim of Henry Bokop, Patrick Brannan, the Jefferson National Bank of Steubenville, the First National Bank of Covington, John G. Hendricks, Louisa Sturhoff, the equity of the case is with the defendants—the said parties representing the said congregations and other charitable and educational institutions; and as to the defendants herein last named, and each of them, their answers and cross petitions be dismissed, at the cost of each defendant made by him. That as to the mortgage of Benedetto Gatto, set up in his cross petition, and in the cross petition of Louis Nardini, his trustee, the equity of the case is with the defendant the St. Peter's and St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum, and that he is not entitled to recover his said claim, or any part thereof, in this suit, and that their cross petitions be dismissed, with costs; the costs for which each defendant shall be liable being only the costs incurred by each in maintaining the issue upon his part. The court does further order, adjudge and decree that if the parties shall not be able to agree upon the amounts, if any, due from the congregation of the St. Patrick's of Mill Street, St. Patrick's of Cumminsville, the Cathedral Congregation for the Cathedral and the Cathedral School, the St. Peter's and the St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum, and the Seminary of Mt. St. Mary of the West, and the amount of ground unsold in the Cemetery of St. Joseph, the said master proceed to find what, if anything, was due John B. Purcell from each of the congregations and institutions at the time of the assignment to the plaintiff, and the amount of ground still unsold; that in so doing all the evidence before the court at the hearing, and such other competent evidence as any of the congregations or other institutions, or any party, may offer, be received by him; and that such parts thereof be examined as he is referred to; and that he make his report at as early a time as may be.

And the court appoints Alexander B. Huston as master to hear and determine the several matters above set forth; and that he find what other indebtedness for borrowed money there was due to other parties from such last named churches and institutions, and any other fact claimed to have a legal bearing upon such indebtedness. And to each of the conclusions of law above stated, and to the decree, the following parties thereupon severally excepted, namely: John B. Mannix, the plaintiff, the defendant John G. Hendricks, Louisa Sturroff, and the First National Bank of Covington, Ky., the Jefferson National Bank of Steubenville, the defendant the St. Joseph's Cemetery Association, and the defendant Henry Bokop, and likewise the said Benedetto Gatto and Louis Nardini, trustee, except to each of the conclusions of law above stated, and to the decree. That as to so much of the decree as finds there may be anything due from the Cathedral, the Cathedral School, the St. Peter's and St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum, the Seminary of Mount St. Mary of the West, the Congregation of St. Patrick's of Mill Street, and refers the same to a master to ascertain the same, in each case the several parties representing said institutions except; and the several parties, having filed motions for a new trial, presented a bill of exceptions, which is signed, sealed and allowed by the court, and ordered to be recorded."

Messrs. Hoadley, Johnson & Colston, Mannix & Cosgrove and Samuel A. Miller for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. T. D. Lincoln, Lincoln, Stephens & Slattery for defendants in error.
Mr. Alfred B. Benedict for St. Joseph's Cemetery Association.

Messrs. Yapple, Moss & McCabe for St. Mary's Congregation.

Mr. J. W. Goss for St. Michael's Congregation.

Mr. E. W. Kittredge for John G. Hendricks and others.

Messrs. Thomas A. Logan and Logan & Slattery, for Louis Nardini, trustee.

Owen, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

1. The case has been considered by us upon the facts found by the district court. While we have examined the evidence sufficiently to see that it tends to support these findings, we have not undertaken to determine its weight.

These facts, so far as they have engaged the consideration of this court and are involved in this opinion, may be more briefly summarized as follows:

John B. Purcell was bishop of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Cincinnati from 1833 to 1855, and archbishop from that time to and after his assignment in March, 1879. From 1837 to the time of such assignment, his brother, Edward Purcell, was priest, serving at the Cathedral, and also, by appointment of the archbishop, vicar-general of the diocese, to whom was confided the general management and control of the financial affairs of the archbishop. During all the time above mentioned the canons, decrees and rules of the Roman Catholic Church for the diocese required all property held and used for ecclesiastical purposes to be conveyed to the bishop or archbishop of the diocese by name, his heirs and assigns forever, to be held by him in trust for the uses for which it was acquired.

In the manner and for the uses above stated the churches, schoolhouses, parochial residences, asylums, seminary and cemeteries involved in this controversy were acquired and conveyed to "John B. Purcell, his heirs and assigns forever," because the rules and canons of the church required the legal title to be so vested, and for no other reasons. As soon as Edward Purcell came into the diocese, and in his capacity of vicar-general, he began to receive money on deposit—(paying interest thereon), and loaning it out upon interest, all with the acquiescence of the archbishop, and so continued to receive money until the indebtedness so incurred amounted to more than $3,500,000, which has been assumed by John B. Purcell as his own.
2 L. R. A.

Finding themselves without available means to pay his indebtedness they made an assignment in insolvency to the plaintiff, before whom about $2,500,000 of indebtedness have been duly proved. It is only necessary to deal with the assignment of John B. Purcell. On March 11, 1879, the latter, in his individual capacity, made his assignment to Mannix in trust for the payment of his debts, of all his property which could at law or in equity be subjected to such payment, expressly excepting all property held by him in trust for others. No specific property was named or described in the deed; but in addition to the church property held in his own name, the assignor owned a large amount of property which had been deeded or devised to him unaffected by any trust, and which was legally subject to the payment of his debts, and about which there is no controversy.

All the church edifices involved in this controversy, except three (which include the Cathedral), were severally bought, built and paid for wholly by the gifts of the members of the several congregations worshipping therein, respectively, and others, for the sole purpose of public religious worship therein. To the purchase and building of the three excepted as above, John B. and Edward Purcell advanced money by way of loan (and otherwise than as gifts), which, as to the Cathedral and St. Patrick's Church in Cumminsville, has not been repaid. Except the money so advanced, these church buildings were paid for by contributions from members of the respective congregations, and others; and the legal title vested in the archbishop to be by him held in trust for the use of the congregations, respectively, using them as places of public worship. The congregations of the several churches were composed of men, women and children of the Roman Catholic faith, worshipping and receiving the sacraments of the church therein.

These congregations were not incorporated nor organized under any law of the State, nor were they unincorporated associations whose members incurred any personal liability; although some of them had trustees appointed for purposes other than for control over the title to church property. Members could change from one church to another by change of residence or from mere caprice. Taking a pew and paying the pew rates by a Roman Catholic constituted such person a member of the congregation. Upon leaving the church and going elsewhere, the membership ceased. The churches were open and free to all for purposes of public worship. The pastor of each congregation was appointed by the bishop and removed at his pleasure, but his salary was paid by the congregation; and the pastor for the time being, with his congregation, had actual possession of the church. None of the congregations nor any bodies of individuals representing them were so organized as to be capable of holding the legal title to the church property. The other properties held and used for ecclesiastical purposes— Asylums, schools, cemeteries (with the qualifying facts found by the court below concerning the property represented by the St. Joseph's Cemetery Association a part of which was subjected to the payment of creditors), were, like the churches, openly, notoriously, continuously and exclusively possessed and used for the purposes for which they were acquired and deeded to the archbishop. But they were so possessed, used and managed by persons with whom it was impracticable to invest the legal title, by reason of the want of permanency in the personnel of their possession and management.

2. The original action was brought by the assignee for the purpose of procuring a sale of all this property free of all clouds and incumbrances by reason of the assertion of the trusts and uses for which it is claimed the archbishop held it—the contention of the assignee being that (1) the debts before mentioned were not the individual debts of the archbishop, but contracted for diocesan purposes, and that the church property is justly chargeable with their payment, and this prior to all other charges upon the property; and (2) that the archbishop was so far the absolute owner of the property—such was his dominion over it—that it is subject to the payment of even his general indebtedness and passed by the deed of assignment to the assignee; that there was no trust of which the civil courts can take cognizance or assume control, or which can stand in the way of the ordinary course of administration of the assignment.

Except as to the claim of John G. Hendricks for improvements put upon the Cathedral property (which will be considered in another connection), the central and controlling question in the case is whether the church property, including all the property above mentioned, is liable for the debts of the archbishop, contracted as above, and passed to the assignee, by the deed of assignment, and is now held by him to be applied to the extinguishment of the indebtedness proved before him. There are in all over two hundred pieces of church property in the diocese described in the petition of the assignee; but it was agreed by counsel upon the trial that fourteen different churches, institutions and properties, selected by them as representing the various questions of law and fact in the case, may be considered as representing all the property involved in the controversy.

The case is one of unusual magnitude and interest, as well in the questions as in the amount involved. It has received that consideration at our hands which its importance seemed to demand. We desire to acknowledge our obligation to the eminent counsel whose great learning, tireless research, and strong presentation of the case, in all its varied aspects and complications, have so greatly assisted us in its consideration.

8. It will facilitate the consideration and disposition of this question to keep in mind a few 2 L. R. A.

fundamental facts and propositions which assume prominence at the threshold of the investigation:

The archbishop, in his official capacity, has made no assignment. The diocese of Cincinnati has not gone into insolvency, nor have any of the churches or other institutions involved in this controversy. We are not dealing with church debts, nor with the assets of the church. John B. Purcell, the individual, made an assignment in insolvency of all his individual property to an assignee to be by the latter applied to the payment of his individual debts. No property held by him in trust for others could, or was intended to, pass by the deed of assignment. 1 Perry, Trusts, §§ 334, 335, 336.

This word trust is here employed in its legal sense, and is not intended to comprehend mere confidential relations or duties of which the civil courts may not take cognizance or assume control. All property subject, at law or in equity, to the payment of John B. Purcell's debts, whether held nominally in trust or not, passed, by the assignment, to the plaintiff below. No higher or better right or title to any of this property passed to the assignee than the assignor held. His creditors acquired no new rights or remedies in or against it by force of the assignment. The assignee simply represents them and their rights which he has undertaken to enforce by the plain processes appointed by statute. They do not, in any sense, stand to the assigned property in the relation of purchasers. The beneficiaries of the property which the assignee is now seeking to subject to the payment of the assignor's debts, are free to assert against the latter every right and claim which, before the assignment, they could have asserted against the assignor. Morgan v. Kinney, 88 Ohio St. 610; Burrill, Assignments, § 891.

The questions before us are very similar to those which would have arisen if John B. Purcell, claiming to be in possession of this property, had brought suit to quiet his alleged title against those who now assert the trust, or as if, claiming to be the unqualified owner in fee simple, he had brought his actions against them to recover possession of the several properties held by them. The practical and substantial subject of the present inquiry is, Have these supposed beneficiaries an interest in this property which they can assert as superior to the right of John B. Purcell or his creditors to subject it to the payment of his debts?

Another important consideration, which should be kept in view, is that none of the defendants are asking to have any trust performed or executed. They are simply standing upon the defensive—asking that the properties which they respectively speak for and represent be left free from assault; asking that the relations which have obtained between them and their archbishop concerning these properties since they were first respectively possessed and used by them, be permitted to continue uninterrupted and unaffected. Instead of asking that the execution of the trusts be decreed, they simply pray that their destruction be averted. They are content that the legal title to this property should remain where, by all the canons of their church, it has for so many years been reposed; but they ask that the uses to which, during all these years, it has been devoted be not abused, perverted or destroyed.

4. The parties have gone back fifteen centuries into the laws and canons of the church for proof of the nature of the tenure by which the archbishop held the legal title to ecclesiastical property; and the proof is overwhelming that he was not invested with an absolute title to it as his own. It is practically conceded that he held it in trust; but the parties are very far from a concurrence of views concerning the terms of the trust. The right to go to the rules and canons of the Catholic Church for the purpose of establishing, defining and limiting the trust is denied. That parol evidence may be resorted to, to engraft a trust upon a title held by deed absolute upon its face, is a question which in this State has passed beyond the range of serious discussion; though the proof in such cases should be clear, strong and convincing. Mathews v. Leaman, 24 Ohio St. 615; Broadrup v. Woodman, 37 Ohio St. 559.

The contention is that to resort to the law of the church as proof upon which to qualify the absolute terms of the grant is to permit the law of the church to supersede or dominate the civil law; and much sensitiveness is shown by eminent counsel upon this subject.

There is here no ground for alarm. It is no innovation upon the law of evidence, in determining questions like the one at bar, to call, in aid of the civil tribunal, upon the law of the particular church involved for the purpose of determining the title to church property. It surely is not unreasonable in a case like the present, to hold one of the great prelates of the Church of Rome to the terms upon which, by the very law to which he has vowed his fealty, he has consented to accept the legal title to property which is appointed to the uses of the church to whose service he has with most solemn unction dedicated his life. It is but a form of establishing, by convenient and very convincing proof, what entered into the contemplation of the parties to the grant at the time the title vested. It has been held that where a religious body becomes divided, and the right to the property is in conflict, the civil courts will consider and determine which of the divisions submits to the church, local and general. This division is entitled to the property. In determining which of the divisions has maintained the correct doctrine, the findings of the supreme ecclesiastical tribunal of the denomination in question is binding upon the civil courts. McGinnis v. Watson, 41 Pa. 9; Ramey's App. 88 Pa. 60; First Presb. Society v. First Presb. Society, 25 Ohio St. 128; Ferraria v. Vasconcellos, 81 Ill. 25; 3 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. of Law, 185.

So where a bequest is made for a church, to take effect whenever a congregation should be formed, the proper ecclesiastical authorities are the judges of the formation of such congregation. Fidelity Ins. T. & S. D. Co's App. 99 Pa. 443.

If by the laws of a masonic lodge the master, or of an odd fellows' lodge, the noble grand, was to be the repository of the legal title to all the real property of the lodge, to be held in trust for its uses, would there be anything startling in the proposal to prove the law of the lodge in a controversy between the latter and its chief officer, involving the title to such property? Yet in such a case it could as well be contended that the courts were permitting the law of freemasonry or odd fellowship to supersede the law of the State, as it can now be asserted that we are enforcing the canons and decrees of Rome. It is no more than establishing by a form of proof which the courts have held to be competent, the terms upon which by the convention of the parties, the title to church property was granted and accepted.

5. It is to be observed, however, that the court below was not limited to such evidence in determining whether any and what trust was raised upon the title which the archbishop held. Formal written declarations of trust, sworn pleadings in other cases, and other written concessions of the archbishop made before any controversies like the present arose, were before the court to aid in the determination of this question. It is true that from time to time during the archbishop's service he exercised acts of apparent private ownership over property held for ecclesiastical uses. He sold property, received the proceeds, reinvested it in other property for church uses, executed mortgages upon property purchased and received mortgages upon property sold; but so far as appears in the case all this was done with the free acquiescence of the respective congregations and others interested in the property affected.

There was evidence tending to show that the archbishop and his vicar-general represented to depositors that the entire church property was bound for repayment of deposits as well as payment of interest. Counsel maintain that these representations charged such property with a liability to answer to such creditors. The court below very properly omitted to make a finding upon this evidence. The fact if so found would have been immaterial. The law will not permit a trustee thus to talk away the trust estate. The infirmity of the argument lies in its assumption of the very proposition in controversy. If the archbishop's control over church property was such that he could incumber it by his mere declarations, it was liable for his debts. He could not estop the cestui que trustent by his words. The latter were found by the court below to have been continuously in possession of the property.

It also appears that the congregations through representative members have, without objection from the archbishop, bonded and mortgaged church property in large sums. But prior to the transactions which led to the assignment, no occasion is shown where any collision or difference has arisen between the archbishop and any of the beneficiaries of the church property respecting its management or control. It has been reserved for the case at bar to present for the first time in the administration of the archbishop, a condition of things which called upon the various beneficiaries to question his right or power or that of his successor in title, the assignee, to interrupt or interfere without their consent with their enjoyment of the uses to which the property has heretofore been devoted. This question is now fairly presented; and the nature of the trust upon which it is conceded the assignor held the property is, for the purpose of determining whether any and what control a court of chancery may assume or exercise over it, squarely presented for adjudication.

6. The contention of the creditors is that though the archbishop may not have held this property by an absolute, unqualified ownership, yet the vagueness of the alleged trust, the uncertainty and indefiniteness of the cestuis que trustent, together with the absence of all other persons capable of dealing with, acquiring or incumbering, the legal title to this property, necessarily left the holder to the legal title supreme in his power of disposition and control.

Let us once assume that John B. Purcell was a trustee of this property and a solution of the question at bar is relieved of much of the difficulty which would otherwise involve it. Wherever there is a trustee there is necessarily a subject of the trust—the estate, an object of the trust—the use, and a cestui que trust—the beneficiary of the trust. A trust is where property is conferred upon and accepted by one person on the terms of holding, using or disposing of it for the benefit of another. Wherever such a trust is shown it is cognizable by a court of equity. The law knows no trust which simply binds the conscience. An alleged trust which is cognizable only in the court of morals or the forum of conscience is no trust at all; it is an absurdity. The law does not acknowledge a trust over the exercise of which it will not, through its tribunals, assume control to avert its destruction, perversion or abuse. Morice v. Bishop of Durham, 9 Ves. Jr. 400.

It is true that in some cases alleged trusts may, as they do, fail by reason of some hard rule of evidence which prevents their proof; but let them once be established, and the power of a court of equity to control their exercise is almost universally conceded. This was among the earliest subjects of chancery jurisdiction. While it was for a time supposed that the Statute of Uses—48 Elizabeth—was the origin of this jurisdiction, it is now conceded that it antedated that statute and is now freely exercised in States which do not regard that statute as in force within their jurisdiction. Urney v. Wooden, 1 Ohio St. 160.

7. Indefiniteness in the number and identity of the alleged cestuis que trustent is urged as conclusive against the assumption that this property is held upon any trust of which the court will take cognizance.

The cathedral and other church buildings have been, since their completion, actually and openly possessed and used by their respective priests and congregations; the schools by their pupils and teachers; the orphan asylum by the sisters of charity in charge and about four hundred orphans; and the grave yards (except the part devoted by the court below to the payment of debts), by those in charge who have daily devoted them to the burial of the dead. It is true that none of these have been incorporated or otherwise organized under any law of the State. Indeed, their immediate management and control have been in such hands as to illustrate that very principle or element of indefiniteness which has, for many centuries, been one of the controlling characteristics of a trust for charitable and pious uses. It is said that vagueness is, in some respects, essential to a good gift for a public charity, and that a public charity begins where uncertainty in the recipient begins. Fontain v. Ravenel, 58 U. S. 17 How. 884 [15 L. ed. 83]; Saltonstall v. Sanders, 11 Allen, 456; Russell v. Allen, 107 U. S. 163 [27 L. ed. 897]; 3 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. of Law, 127; 2 Perry, Trusts, § 687.

The individual recipients of the charity are constantly changing. For illustration, take the case of a congregation of one of the churches in question. It may be that among those who comprise it there is not one member who worshipped there ten years ago. Yet it is in legal contemplation the same congregation. It is the congregation for whose uses, as a place of religious worship, the church has been from the first devoted. Its name and the location of its place of worship renders its identification easy.

8. Is it such an entity as that it may constitute a beneficiary to support a trust for a charitable use? If these congregations, and other beneficiaries are sufficiently tangible and substantial to have a standing in court the question ought, it would seem, to be resolved in their favor. This seems to us a fair test of the question. Are they in court? They are represented each by prominent members who answered below for themselves and the other members; the orphan asylum by prominent contributors to its establishment and support, with whom were associated several members of the Catholic sisterhood in charge; the schools are similarly represented, and the cemeteries by the St. Joseph Cemetery Association, incorporated since the assignment, to which the legal title has been conveyed by John B. Purcell, or whatever interest then remained in him. It is a well recognized practice for certain persons, belonging to a voluntary, unincorporated society, and having a common interest, to sue in behalf of themselves and others having a like interest, as part of the same society, for purposes common to all and beneficial to all.

In Beatty v. Kurtz, 27 U. S. 2 Pet. 566 [7 L. ed. 521], several members of an unincorporated Lutheran congregation, having no trustees capable of holding the legal title to church property, were permitted to appear in court in behalf of themselves and others having like interests, for the purpose of preserving a trust in a lot set apart upon a town plat, "for the Lutheran Church," upon which they had established a place of burial and erected a school-house, but the legal title to which was still in the heirs of the original proprietor. See also Philadelphia Bapt. Assn. v. Smith, 28 U. S. 3 Pet. 500 [7 L. ed. 755]; African M. E. Church v. Conover, 27 N. J. Eq. 159; Hullman v. Homcamp, 5 Ohio St. 242; Brown v. Manning, 6 Ohio, 298; Le Clercq v. Gallipolis, 7 Ohio, 218.

It does not follow, however, that, in the light of the facts established in the court below, it would not have protected the uses for which the property was held, even if these beneficiaries had not been formally in court. But they are in court.

9. It is scarcely necessary to cite authority to show that the uses for which this property is held are such as the courts will uphold. The education of the youth; the care, education and nurture of orphans; the religious instruction of the living and the decent repose of the dead, are among the most prominent and common objects of charitable trusts. 2 Perry, Trusts, §§ 669-701, 706; 8 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. of Law, 122; Gerke v. Purcell, 25 Ohio St. 229 (where some of the property now in controversy is declared to be held in trust); McIntire v. Zanesville, 17 Ohio St. 852; McIntire Poor School v. Zanesville Canal Mfg. Co. 9 Ohio, 287.

Surely this court ought not to be expected to declare that the trusts in the case at bar are too vague or indefinite to be recognized by it after its decision in the two cases last cited. It there upheld and enforced a charitable bequest to an unincorporated association "for the use and support of a poor school which they are to establish for the use of the poor children of the Town of Zanesville"—the donee afterwards becoming incorporated. Compared with such a use, the objects of the trusts in the case at bar are simple and definite.

Lane, J., in the case last cited, says, concerning the extent of chancery jurisdiction over charities: "One of the earliest elements of every social community, upon its lawgivers, at the dawn of its civilization, is adequate protection to its property and institutions which subserve public uses, or are devoted to its elevation, or consecrated to its religious culture, and sepulchers," etc.

In Miller v. Teachout, 24 Ohio St. 525, this court sustained a bequest to an executor "for the advancement and benefit of the Christian religion, to be applied in such manner as in his judgment will best promote the object named."

In Urmy v. Wooden, 1 Ohio St. 160, the court sustained a bequest to "the poor and needy, fatherless, etc., of Jefferson and Madison Township, of the county aforesaid, to such poor as are not able to support themselves, to be divided as my executors may deem proper without any partiality."

In Sowers v. Cyrenius, 39 Ohio St. 29, it sustained a testamentary disposition "for the preaching of the gospel of the blessed Son of God, as taught by the people now known as the Disciples of Christ, the preaching to be well and faithfully done in Loraine County in Birmingham, and at Berlin in Erie County, Ohio."

In Williams v. First Presbyterian Society, 1 Ohio St. 478, the court held that a deed to certain persons as "trustees for the Presbyterian Congregation of Cincinnati, and their successors forever, for the use, benefit and behoof of the congregation forever," there being then but one such congregation, is not void for uncertainty as to the beneficiaries of the trust, although they were not then incorporated. This bears with much weight upon the questions at bar. In none of these cases could the beneficiaries assert any special pecuniary interest in the trust estate; but the uses upon which the legal title was conferred were recognized and enforced.

10. Much of the complication and difficulty in which the discussion of the present case has involved it arises from an attempt to solve it by the tests which are usually applied to cases of alleged resulting trusts, and from a failure to mark the distinction between active trusts, where the nature of the trust is such as to render it necessary, for the purposes of the trust, that the legal title should remain in the trustee (who cannot be compelled to convey), and a passive trust, where the cestui que trust has the right to be put in actual possession of the property, or the right to call upon the trustee to convey the legal estate, as the former may direct. Bispham, Eq. § 50.

The distinction between resulting trusts and trusts for charitable or pious uses is almost as clear and as broad as that between legal and equitable estates. The foundation of a resulting trust is the payment, or the securing to be paid, by the cestui que trust, out of his own means, the consideration of the conveyance, or some part thereof, at its completion. McGovern v. Knox, 21 Ohio St. 552.

A resulting trust is to be performed or executed by the trustee by transferring the title to the cestui que trust at his request. Millard v. Hathaway, 27 Cal. 119; 1 Perry, Trusts, § 165 a.

No one seriously claims that the donors of the various charities now in question—those whose donations and contributions so largely comprise the funds to which they owe their existence—have a definable, pecuniary interest in, or claim upon, them which is enforceable in any court. Indeed, no such claim is made in their behalf. Nor is any personal or pecuniary interest asserted by or on behalf of those to whose uses they are being devoted. Their interest in them is limited to the enjoyment of these uses. As already observed, they are not seeking or asking the enforcement or execution of any trusts in their behalf. The trusts which attach to these various properties have been and are still being performed and executed. Each day that public religious worship is held by, or the sacraments of the church administered to, members of the congregations of any of these churches therein; each day that pupils are instructed in the schools; that the orphans are sheltered and cared for in the asylum; that the cemeteries are opened to receive the dead—witnesses the performance of the trusts upon which they are held by the archbishop of the diocese. The prayer is identical with that of the bill in Beatty v. Kurtz, 27 U. S. 2 Pet. 566 [7 L. ed. 521] supra, that they be left undisturbed in the enjoyment of the uses to which the property actually possessed by them has been so long devoted. In this view, the assumed difficulty or impracticability of enforcing these trusts disappears entirely as an element in the case.

Upon this feature of the case the eminent counsel for the assignee, among other things, says:

"Can the beneficiaries be the individuals who attend the church, or who constitute the so called congregation? Certainly not; as no private advantage can be claimed for them, nothing can pass to them, nor can they as individuals act in any capacity in relation to the property. They are not only not an incorporated body or association, but they never can be incorporated as a body and continue to be part of the Roman Catholic Church. Take away the bishop and there can be no priest to manage the affairs of the church, and there can be no Catholic Church without a priest. Take away the bishop and the church is gone forever. The congregation no longer has an existence, and the property must descend to the heirs of the grantee in the deed, unless it is disposed of by the deed of the grantee himself."

It is sufficient answer to this to say that it will be time to deal with such an aspect of the case when such a calamity overtakes the church as the one suggested by counsel.

We are not called upon to prophesy what this court would or ought to do with this property when, if ever, bishop, priests, churches and congregations are "gone forever." We are dealing with a present, acting bishop (the successor of Archbishop Purcell, deceased), with officiating priests, with living churches and with worshipping congregations. It is against a disaster quite as fatal as that supposed by counsel that the court is asked to interpose its res tant.

Instead of asking that the head of the church of the diocese convey, or be divested of, the legal title, the beneficiaries asked that it remain in him upon the same trusts and for the same uses to which, from the first, it has been devoted. Indeed, it is quite indispensable to the existence of the trust that the legal title be held by some one other than the cestui que trustent, who are incapable, by reason of the indefiniteness which characterizes their personality, of holding it.

11. Was the dominion of the archbishop over this property such as to render it subject at law or in equity to the payment of his debts? The debts are almost, if not quite, exclusively such as were contracted in the business of receiving money on deposit upon the terms of paying interest upon it while on deposit and finally restoring the principal. It surely cannot be seriously claimed that this important branch of the banking business was within the terms or powers of the trust upon which the property was held. It originated with, and was prosecuted exclusively by, the vicar-general, Edward Purcell. The archbishop stated, among other things, upon this subject, that this business had its origin in the failure of the banks and the desire of the depositors that Father Edward should take their money and keep it for them, they refusing any security, but trusting to his integrity and good faith; and that he labored for them without compensation, to earn for them interest on their money. While the findings of the court below do not in form embrace one upon this subject, they are entirely inconsistent with any such power, as are also the conclusions of law.

The member of the court below who prepared the opinion for the court (Smith, J.) in a very able and exhaustive presentation of the reasons which prompted the judgment says that: "Most of the present indebtedness grew out of his brother's banking business; receiving money on deposit, paying interest and lending it out on interest. The canon law strictly forbade this to be done by ecclesiastics. All the canonists concur in this testimony. It could hardly be a debt of the trust when the authority creating and regulating the trust strictly forbade it."

There is no serious attempt by any creditor to trace moneys deposited by him into any specified property. There was but one fund,

The bookkeeping was crude and primitive. While some money deposited must have gone into church property, donations must have gone to pay interest upon, and repay the principal of, deposits; but the controversy is chiefly between depositors who expected interest and finally their principal, and those who gave with out hope of either interest or principal, except as it came in the enjoyment of the uses to which the property was devoted.

12. The theory that these are diocesan debts to be satisfied out of diocesan or general church property is untenable. It is not made to appear in this case that a diocese is a body or an organization capable of owning property or of contracting debts. A diocese is the circuit or extent of a bishop's jurisdiction—the district in which a bishop exercises his ecclesiastical authority; but it has not been made to appear that it is constituted to hold either the legal or equitable estate in any property which is devoted to church purposes. Certainly no such party was summoned or has made its appearance in this cause, and we have not heard of any complaint of a defect of parties in the courts below. The legal title to all this property is in the bishop; while the equitable or beneficial interest is in the several congregations and others for whose several uses they are respectively held. There seems to be no room for another owner. There is no such triangular title as this theory assumes.

Each of these congregations and other beneficiaries is here defending for itself and in its own right. Each piece of property is held upon a separate trust and for a distinct use. No warrant is shown for charging upon one the expense incurred on account of another.

In the case of Tuigg v. Treacy, 104 Pa. 493, the right to charge upon one congregation of a Catholic Church expenses incurred for the benefit of another, was under consideration in the light of the rules of the Church. They were under the same general canonical laws which prevailed in the diocese of Cincinnati. The court says: "Whether or not, therefore, Father Treacy (who was pastor of St. Bridget's congregation) paid and expended the money of St. Bridget's as his own, in the St. Joseph's Mission, at the instance and request of the bishop, is not important, as the bishop had no more right to pledge the credit of the congregation in an enterprise it had not undertaken or assumed, and in which it had no particular concern, or to divert the funds of the congregation from their use, than the pastor himself; and neither, it would seem, had any power."

While this is not an adjudication of the power of the archbishop which controls us in the case at bar, it affords strong support to the finding of the court below, especially as the sources of information were practically the same in both cases.

Our conclusion is that the property sought to be subjected to the payment of the individual debts of John B. Purcell (except so much of the cemeteries as was devoted to such purposes) was "held in trust for others," and did not pass to the assignee by the deed of assignment.

13. Some of the defendants and cross petitioners acquired judgments upon their claims against John B. Purcell after the assignment, but we are not able to discover how their situations are improved by that fact.

14. The claim of John G. Hendricks, another cross petitioner below and cross petitioner in error in this court, stands upon ground distinct from all the others. He obtained a judgment against John B. Purcell, also after the assignment, upon a claim composed in part of an indebtedness for money deposited to bear interest, and in part for improvements and repairs placed upon the Cathedral, and for its preservation, at the request of the archbishop. We are all in accord upon the proposition that the latter claim possesses peculiar merit, upon the principle that trust property should answer for the reasonable expense incurred in its preservation and necessary repair and improvement. We are not in accord, however, as to the means of effectuating this right. A majority of the court is of opinion that the remedy may be granted in this case; and for this purpose the judgment as to this claim is reversed and the cause remanded for further proceedings upon this branch of the controversy.

The eminent counsel who represents Hendricks predicates his claim to be reimbursed out of the general church property chiefly (to the extent of his entire claim) upon the authority which he maintains is conferred upon the archbishop by an Act of the General Assembly passed January 3, 1825, which it is claimed was in force at the time of the assignment. 2 Chase, Stat. 1460.

It is entitled: "An Act Securing to Religious Societies a Perpetuity of Title to Lands and Tenements Conveyed in Trust for Meeting-houses, Burying-Grounds, or Residences for Preachers."

It is as follows:

"Sec. 1. Be it enacted, etc., That all lands and tenements, not exceeding twenty acres, that have been or hereafter may be conveyed by devise, purchase or otherwise, to any person or persons as trustee, trustees, in trust for the use of any religious society within this state, either for a meeting-house, burying-ground, or residence of their preacher, shall descend with the improvements and appurtenances in perpetual succession in trust to such trustee or trustees as shall from time to time be elected or appointed by any such religious society, according to the rules and regulations of such society respectively.

"Sec. 2. That the trustee or trustees, for the time being, of any religious society aforesaid, shall have the same power to defend and prosecute suits at law or in equity, and do all other acts for the protection, improvement and preservation of said property, as individuals may do in relation to their individual property."

Upon this proposition the counsel stands alone, and his contention has provoked a vigorous cross fire from the assignee and his codefendants. It is by them contended that the Act, if in force, does not and never was intended to apply to the Catholic Church and its bishops. We have not found it necessary to attempt a solution of this controversy. Conceding, for the purposes of the discussion, that it is broad enough to comprehend Catholic bishops and church property, it still falls far short of supporting the claim of Hendricks, that his claim for money deposited is a charge upon church property. It is maintained that the effect of this statute is to give to the official holding the trust, power to sue and be sued in his own name—to defend and to prosecute suits at law or in equity—and to do all other acts, such as to make contracts, which individuals may do in relation to their individual property, for its protection, improvement and preservation. It is maintained that this Act invested the archbishop with all the characteristics of a corporation sole; though it is said that this position is not solid to the argument.

The antecedent of "said property" in the second section of the Act, is "all lands not exceeding twenty acres conveyed, etc., to any person as trustee, either for a meeting-house, burying ground, or residence of their preacher." The power given is to do acts "for the protection, improvement and preservation of 'said property.'"

As we have indicated, it required no legislation to authorize a charge upon this property for money expended "for its protection, improvement and preservation." The Act in question contemplates the protection, etc., of specific property—"a meeting-house, burying ground, or residence for the preacher." There is no pretense that the money deposited by Hendricks was applied to the improvement, etc., of any particular church property. There is evidence that some of it was expended in the education of some young men for the priesthood. But the claim is supported upon the theory that the debt is diocesan, and that diocesan (meaning general church) property should satisfy it. This view of the case has already been sufficiently considered, and an adverse conclusion reached.

15. No cross petitions in error are filed by the various congregations, etc., to the order of the court below, for an account of the assets of John B. Purcell, in the form of claims for money advanced by him for the construction of various churches, etc.; nor is the claim made that such order is not a final one. We are all impressed with the general equity and fairness of this feature of the judgment below, and it is, for the reason stated, left undisturbed.

16. Louis Nardini, trustee for Benedetto Gatto, one of the defendants below, filed his cross petition setting up a mortgage upon the orphan asylum executed by John B. Purcell, with which issue was joined, trial had, and judgment rendered against him, to which he excepted. He filed his separate motion for a new trial, which was overruled; he excepted and took his separate bill of exceptions. His claim was adverse to all the other parties in the case. He failed to file a cross petition in error in this court within two years after the judgment against him. Has he a standing in this court?

A cross petition in error is not expressly authorized by our Code.

It was claimed in Seitz v. Union Pacific Railway Company, 16 Kan. 183, that the proceeding was unauthorized; and the court so held, and that a separate proceeding in error was necessary.

The same question was first presented in this court in Shinkle v. First National Bank, 23

Ohio St. 516. It was contended that such a pleading was unauthorized. The court, by Welch J., said:

"There is no good reason why cross petitions in error should not be allowed equally as in original actions. They were allowed at common law, and there is nothing in the Code which forbids their use. On the contrary, they are calculated to subserve a leading object of the Code, namely: to avoid multiplicity of suits, and to render litigation simple, cheap and speedy. . . . To summon the opposite party, who is already in court, and to bring in a copy of the record, a copy of which is already in court, would be a useless labor, and involve an unnecessary expense and delay, etc."

The Supreme Court of Kansas was again called upon to consider this question in Stettauer v. Carney, 20 Kan. 496, when it overruled its former decision upon the authority of Shinkle v. First National Bank, supra, saying:

"We are constrained to believe that in this respect the decisions of the Supreme Court of Ohio are the better exposition of the law."

Again, in Bundy v. Ophir Iron Company, 35 Ohio St. 80, a motion was made in this court for leave to file a cross petition in error. At that time no leave was required to file "petitions in error." It was said by the court:

"As held in Shinkle v. First National Bank, 22 Ohio St. 516, it is competent for a defendant in error to file a cross petition asking the reversal of the judgment for errors prejudicial to him, and not assigned in the plaintiff's petition. And as a petition in error may, under the present legislation, be filed without leave of court, the same rule will be applied to the cross petition."

The just inference is that if the law had required leave to file a petition in error, the same rule would necessarily have applied to a cross petition in error. In the case before us the errors which Nardini relied upon were not assigned by the plaintiff in error; he stood upon his own right. The judgment against him stood unchallenged upon the record. There can be little doubt that if the proceeding in error by the plaintiff had been dismissed at any time before Nardini's cross petition in error was filed, his branch of the case would also have gone out of court. The logic of the foregoing cases and considerations is that such a proceeding is the prosecution of a proceeding in error; but to avoid a multiplicity of suits he may in the same case and upon the same record predicate that prosecution. If a law requiring leave to file a petition in error would apply as well to a cross petition in error, they are so far upon the same footing as that if the two years' limitation applies to one, it applies with the same force to the other. All parties in whose favor the judgment of which he complains was rendered (and it was in favor of all but himself) had a right to suppose, after the expiration of two years from its rendition, that it stood unquestioned and was forever at rest. The cross petition in error was filed too late. This conclusion relieves us of a further consideration of the question arising upon this mortgage, and the judgment thereon is affirmed.

17. The writer of this opinion does not concur in so much of the judgment as remands the case to the court below for further proceedings upon the claim of Hendricks; nor does he concur in the affirmance of so much of the judgment below as devotes a part of the St. Joseph Cemeteries to the payment of creditors, believing that these are quite clearly shown to be trust property, and that they did not pass to the assignee by the assignment.

With the modification above indicated, of the judgment against Hendricks, the judgment below is affirmed.

TEXAS SUPREME COURT.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH CO.,

Appt.,

J. M. BROWN.

(....Tex....)

Delay in delivering a telegram stating the death and time of burial of a person referred to merely as "Willie," without notice of his relation to the person addressed, will not subject the company to an action for damages based on injury to fraternal feelings from inability to attend the funeral. Only such damages as might naturally result from a failure to receive the message will be considered as being within the contemplation of the parties to the contract.

(November 12, 1898.)

NOTE.—Rate of damages in breach of contract.

Hadley v. Baxendale, 9 Exch. (W. R. & G.) 341. 354, the leading English case upon this subject, is the one invariably cited with approval in America, as follows: Where two parties have made a contract which one of them has broken, the damages which the other party ought to receive in respect of such breach of contract should be such as may fairly and reasonably be considered either arising naturally, i. e. according to the usual course of things, from such breach of contract itself, or such as may reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of both parties at the time they made the contract, as the probable result of the breach of it. The rule in England at the present day is narrower than this rule. Horne v. Midland R. Co., L. R. 7 C. P. 583, L. R. 8 C. P. 182; Wood's Mayne, Damages, 14 88-12; Gray, Teleg. Companies, 147.

In Griffin v. Colver, 16 N. Y. 489, 498, a leading American case upon this subject, Mr. Justice Sel-

2 L. R. A.

de
ri
ti pi is be in
in
in th su
Ti
Co
Co
U
It
W
v.
W
Ti

APPEAL by defendant, from a judgment of the Hopkins County District Court (Foster, Special Judge), in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover damages for the nondelivery of a telegraph message. Reversed.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Stemmonds & Field for appellant.

Messrs. Leach & Templeton for appellee.

Walker, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a judgment for $275 in favor of the appellees against appellant. The suit was brought the 15th day of March, 1887, by Brown, to recover of the appellant, the Western Union Telegraph Company, $10,000 damages for delay in transmitting and delivering to him a telegram sent to him from Hallville, Tex., on the 11th day of December, 1886, by one Wilson Livingston, in the following language:

Hallville, Texas, Dec. 11, 1886.

J. M. Brown, Sulphur Springs: Willie died yesterday evening at six o'clock; will be buried at Marshall Sunday evening.

[Signed] Wilson Livingston.

Plaintiff alleged that Livingston acted as his agent in sending the message, and that by "Willie," named in said message was meant Willie Brown, a brother of appellee, and that the price paid for sending said message was paid by appellee in the following manner: that the sum of forty-five cents paid to the defendant for transmitting and delivering the said telegram was money belonging to the estate of said Willie Brown, one third of which plaintiff owned as an heir, and the other two thirds by payment to the other two heirs, there being no administration, nor need of any.

The plaintiff alleged that the dispatch was not delivered until noon of the 12th of December, 1886, and by reason of said delay, caused by the willful neglect or failure of defendant to transmit and deliver said message, he was prevented from being present at the burial of his brother, whom he had raised and cared for from childhood, and from receiving the consolation and condolence of his sister in his grief; whereby he suffered great disappointment, grief and mental anguish, etc.

Defendant answered by general demurrer, special demurrer and general denial. The demurrers were overruled, to which defendant excepted.

The exceptions were: (1) Because the petition on its face failed to state any cause of action, in this, that plaintiff sues for an injury to his feelings in tort, he being an addressee of the message, and no party to the contract under which said message was accepted and transmitted, and fails to state facts necessary to recover in tort. (2) There is nothing in the alleged message to put the defendant upon notice that there was any relationship between the addressee and the said Willie Brown, or that anything except the mere announcement of the death of said Willie Brown was contemplated by the defendant and the sender of said message, at the time the message was delivered to and accepted by this defendant for transmission and delivery."

There is no allegation in the petition that the nature and importance of the telegram were made known to the telegraph operator to whom the message was delivered, otherwise than as conveyed by the terms of the message. The words of the dispatch were sufficient to notify the operator, as agent of the defendant, that a human being had died at Hallville, Tex., at 6 o'clock of the evening of the 10th of December, 1886; that the funeral of the deceased was to

v.
D.
R.
H. rn
v.
v.
v.
es
v.
v.
he
th
st nd
de be fe sh
st
in
P.
v.
U.
U. h.
d.

Damages for mental anguish alone not recoverable.

Neither in an action of tort nor in one of contract can a party recover damages for mental anguish alone. Wood's Mayne, Damages, 1st Am. ed. 84, note; Gray, Teleg. Companies, 147.

The law implies injury to the feelings only where there is serious personal injury or insult. Phillips v. Hoyle, 4 Gray, 568; 1 Sutherland, Damages, 768.

The injury to feelings is only allowed to be considered in those torts which consist of some volun-

and practically on y all the circum- left to the jury to wn surroundings. ages in matters of rdinary apprehen- seem proportion- measured by the ty. Detroit Daily facts no damages itated specifically, recover whatever the breach of con- disappointment of f contract. Ham- rist. & N. 408. See 5 Bl. & Bl. (85 Eng. , 101.

st. mental distress and sense of wrong are too remote, and could not have been in contemplation of the parties when the contract was made. Hobbs v. London & S. W. R. Co. L. R. 10 Q. B. 111; Walsh v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 42 Wls. 23; Brown v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 54 Wls. 842.

Damages, etc.

Damages for injury to feelings, caused by neglect of duty to deliver message.

Injury to feelings, caused by a failure to deliver a message relating to domestic affairs, where the failure is the result of negligence of the company or its servants, is an element of actual damages. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Cooper, 1 L. R. A. 728, following Stuart v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 66 Tex. 580; No Kelle v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 56 Tex. 310; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Levy, 50 Tex. 543, 563; Hays v. Houston & G. N. R. Co. 46 Tex. 272; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Wilson, 60 Tex. 730.

2 L. R. A.

take place at Marshall on the evening of Sunday, December 12; that the deceased was known to the person sending and the person to whom the dispatch was sent; that intimate and familiar relations existed between them and the deceased, from the use of the name "Willie;" and even, perhaps, it may be understood that the message was an invitation to the funeral.

These suggestions intimated from the face of the message were sufficient notice of its importance to require corresponding care and diligence in transmitting it to its destination. Whatever damages might naturally result under such conditions from a failure to receive the message will be considered as being in contemplation of the parties to the contract; that is, between the plaintiff, having the right to the message, and the telegraph company. Daniel v. Western U. Tel. Co. 61 Tex. 456.

But the message gave nothing to indicate that "Willie" was the brother of the plaintiff. The damages alleged are from the fraternal feelings outraged by the failure to hear of his brother's death in time to attend the funeral, and condole with his sister. Giving the most liberal meaning to the words of the message, they cannot be construed into a notice of the special matter of complaint in the petition.

The special exceptions should have been sustained, for which error the judgment is reversed.

Reversed and remanded.

MASSACHUSETTS SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT.

Re George A. CHAPIN et al., Petitioners.

(....Mass....)

Where a will gives property to trustees upon certain trusts, and directs that "if at the expiration of ten years a majority of his children then living shall desire it, the trustees shall sell the real estate and shall divide the net proceeds," if necessity compels the sale of part of the real estate before the ten years expires the proceeds of the sale will be held upon the same trusts as was the real estate, and will not be distributed upon petition of the children before the expiration of such time.

(February 28, 1899.)

ON appeal. Decree affirmed.

This was a bill in equity for instructions by the trustees under the will of David Chapin, deceased.

At the trial in the Supreme Judicial Court of Suffolk County, the court entered a decree that the proceeds of the real estate, known as the Liverpool North Wharf property, mentioned in the bill, is held in trust, the income thereof to be paid to the persons entitled to the income of the real estate held in trust by the terms of the will. From this decree Melissa A. Todd, Martha J. Pendleton and Harriet M. Chapin, defendants, appealed.

The point in controversy appears from the opinion.

Messrs. E. W. Hutchins and W. S. Frost for defendants, appellants.

Mr. H. S. Dewey for petitioners.

Morton, C. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The testator, who died in 1880, by his will devised all his real estate to trustees upon trust to pay the net income to his children and the issue of any deceased child by right of representation. The will further provides that if at the expiration of ten years a majority of his children then living shall desire it, the trustees shall sell the real estate and shall divide the net proceeds equally among all his children then living and the issue of any deceased child by right of representation; and until such sale is made the trustees shall hold the estate and divide the net proceeds in manner aforesaid; and if no sale is made during the lives of his children, then, at the death of the surviving child, the estate shall be sold and the net proceeds divided among his grandchildren per stirpes.

It is perfectly clear that the testator intended that the trust should continue for at least ten years after his death. There is nothing in the will which suggests that he contemplated an earlier termination of the trust in any contingency.

It is also clear that the children now living have a contingent interest only in the trust fund, and that those who will ultimately take cannot be determined until the period of distribution arrives.

The trust cannot be terminated, in whole or in part, without defeating the intentions of the testator.

The testator owned at his death an undivided half of a wharf estate in Boston. Upon the petition of his cotenants, partition of this estate was made under our statutes, and, under the order of the Judge of Probate, the commissioners appointed to make partition sold the whole of the estate, being of opinion that the estate could not be advantageously divided, and paid to the trustees the proceeds of one undivided half. The rule is well settled that in such a case the proceeds of the real estate are to be held upon the same trusts as those upon which the real estate was held. The money takes the place of the real estate, and is affected by the same trusts as if it had remained specifically real estate. Holland v. Crust, 3 Gray, 162; Simonds v. Simonds, 112 Mass. 157.

In the case at Bar, therefore, the claim of some of the children that the proceeds of the wharf property should now be divided cannot be sustained. The period of distribution fixed by the testator has not arrived, and there is no certainty that the children now living will be living and entitled to a share of the trust fund when that period does arrive.

Decree affirmed.

3 L. R. A.

INDIANA SUPREME COURT.

Kate C. COOK, Appt.,

Mary C. WALLING.

(Ind.)

1. A mortgage by a married woman, on her separate property, in which her lawful husband does not join, is void under 1 Revised Statutes of Indiana, 1876, p. 550 (Rev. Stat. 1881, § 5117), although he has been absent fifteen years and she, believing him to be dead, is living with another man whom she believes to be her lawful husband and who joins with her in executing the instrument. Quers as to the effect of the Indiana Statute of 1881, touching estoppels in pats affecting married women, on such an instrument if made after the passage of that Act.
2. The doctrine of estoppel cannot be invoked in order to remove the incapacity of a married woman, where her contract relates to a matter concerning which all the common-law disabilities continue, so that the contract is utterly void for want of power or capacity to make it.

(January 22, 1899.)

APPEAL from a judgment of the Floyd County Circuit Court (Ferguson, J.), in favor of defendant in an action brought to foreclose a mortgage. Affirmed.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Mr. J. V. Kalso for appellant.

Mr. A. Dowling for appellee.

Mitchell, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The question for decision arises upon the following facts, which are admitted by the pleadings:

In December, 1855, the appellee, Mary C. Walling, became the lawful wife of Creed A. Walling, who, after living with her until some time in the year 1860, went to parts unknown, and was not again heard of until the year 1876, a period of some sixteen years. After Walling had been thus absent for more than seven years, acting under the supposition that he was dead, the appellee married Alexander E. Hughes, and removed from a foreign State with him, where they had theretofore resided, to Floyd County, Ind. She purchased a tract of land in the above named county, which was conveyed to her by the name of Mary C. Hughes. In 1876 the appellee, by the name of Mary C. Hughes, joined with her supposed husband, Alexander E. Hughes, in mortgaging the real estate so purchased and owned by her, to secure a debt due from Hughes to the appellant, to Kate C. Cook. The appellee lived and cohabited with Hughes, and claimed him as her husband, and claimed and was reputed to be his lawful wife, during all the time they lived in Indiana, until the year 1876, when Walling returned, and made the fact known that he was still in life; whereupon, the appellee obtained a divorce from Hughes, and resumed, and has ever since continued, marital relations with Walling.

The question is whether or not, in a suit to foreclose the mortgage given as above, the facts hereinbefore recited are sufficient to avoid a special plea by Mary C. Walling, in which she alleged that the lands described in the mortgage were her separate estate, and that at the time of the execution of the mortgage she was, and ever since had been, the wife of Creed A. Walling, and that he did not join in the execution of the mortgage.

A statute touching the marriage relation, in force at the time the mortgage was executed, as well as that now in force, declares that a married woman shall have no power to incumber or convey her real estate, except by deed in which her husband shall join. 1 Rev. Stat. 1876, p. 550 (§ 5117, Rev. Stat. 1881).

It being conceded by the record that the appellee was at the time she executed the mortgage the lawful wife of Creed A. Walling, and that he did not join therein, it follows inevitably that the mortgage was a nullity.

The power of a married woman to convey or incumber her separate real estate is wholly statutory; and any deed or other instrument purporting to convey or incumber her land, in

NOTE.—Executory contracts of married women.

A married woman has the same power to make executory contracts, and is as much bound thereby, as if she was unmarried, except that she cannot, without her husband joining her, convey or mortgage her real estate, or enter into any executory contract to sell, convey or mortgage the same. Rev. Stat. 1881, § 5117, 5119; McLeod v. Atina L. Ins. Co. 5 West. Rep. 303, 107 Ind. 306.

Where it is sought to enforce a contract against the property of a married woman, plaintiff must aver and prove that the contract was one which she had power to make. Vogel v. Lechner, 108 Ind. 54; Cupp v. Campbell, 1 West. Rep. 255, 108 Ind. 217.

Estoppel: doctrine applied to married women.

While a married woman is now subject to an estoppel in pats, she is not to be estopped in any manner different from any other person. In the absence of fraud, misrepresentation or concealment she is not estopped by the mere form of a contract which she had no power to make. Cupp v. Campbell, 1 West. Rep. 255, 108 Ind. 220.

Such an estoppel can only be predicated on a wrong. It cannot exist if the person dealing with her knew the fact or was ignorant from a failure to inquire, unless he was misled by the representations of the woman. Orr v. White, 4 West. Rep. 409, 108 Ind. 241.

Prior to September, 1881, a married woman could which her husband has not joined, is absolutely void because of the want of power or capacity on her part to execute such an instrument without being joined therein by her husband. As has been said: "The instrument has the form and semblance of a deed, and nothing more." Lowell v. Daniels, 2 Gray, 161.

It is without legal force, and of itself creates no equity which the courts can recognize or protect. Otis v. Gregory, 111 Ind. 504, 10 West. Rep. 791, and cases cited.

Tacitly conceding the invalidity of the instrument, it is nevertheless contended with much plausibility that because the appellee was living and cohabiting with Hughes, and because the latter, assuming to be her husband, joined in the execution of the mortgage, she ought now to be estopped from asserting that her husband did not join therein. An estoppel in pais has for its foundation the proposition that a person vis juris has, by misrepresenting the truth, purposely induced another to believe in and act upon the existence of certain facts which, if they were now made to appear different from what they were represented to be, would cause substantial injury to the person who acted on the faith of the representation.

When, therefore, a married woman deals or assumes to deal, in respect to a matter concerning which her common-law disabilities have been removed, she will be bound by an estoppel in pais, as any other person; and in case she makes affirmative representations concerning the character in which she proposes to contract, whether for the benefit of herself or some third person, and thereby induces another who acts in good faith to contract with her, supposing the contract to be of the character represented, she will be estopped to deny the representations in case she would have been sui juris in respect to the contract, had the facts been as represented. Orr v. White, 106 Ind. 841, 4 West. Rep. 432; Pogers v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. 111 Ind. 848, 9 West. Rep. 828; Lane v. Schlemmer, 114 Ind. 290, 12 West. Rep. 922; Bodine v. Killeen, 53 N. Y. 93.

Where, however, the contract relates to a matter concerning which all the common-law disabilities continue, so that the contract is utterly void for want of power or capacity to make it, the doctrine of estoppel cannot be invoked in order to remove the incapacity. In other words, while a married woman may be estopped by affirmative representations concerning the character of a contract which, if her representations be true, she is, notwithstanding her coverture, under no legal disability to make, she cannot by her own act or representation remove her legal incapacity to make a contract which coverture alone, under any and all circumstances, disqualifies her from making, except in a prescribed way. Carpenter v. Carpenter, 45 Ind. 142; Levering v. Shockey, 100 Ind. 558; Bank of America v. Banks, 101 U. S. 240 [25 L. ed. 850]; Sims v. Everhardt, 102 U. S. 300 [26 L. ed. 87]; Keen v. Coleman, 89 Pa. 299; Klein v. Caldwell, 91 Pa. 140; Morrison v. Wilson, 18 Cal. 495; Todd v. Pittsburgh, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. 19 Ohio St. 514.

The statute as well as the common law, deprives a married woman of all power to convey or incumber her separate real estate, except by deed in which her husband shall join. Without the joinder of the person who occupies towards her the legal relation of husband, the impediment in the way of a deed by a married woman is an absolute incapacity to contract; and this legal incapacity is not cured nor removed because some person other than her husband has joined in the deed, even though she may be at the time cohabiting with such person in the honest belief that he is her husband. It would present a contradiction in terms to hold that an abortive attempt by a married woman to make a deed which she had no legal capacity to make should remove her incapacity by the application of the doctrine of estoppel. Behler v. Weyburn, 59 Ind. 143.

Desertion or continued and unheard of absence may constitute a ground of divorce; and in case a husband shall have absented himself from his usual place of residence, and gone to parts unknown, for a given period, the court having probate jurisdiction may appoint an administrator, after which appointment the wife of the departed person shall have all the rights and independent powers of a feme sole, and may contract and execute deeds for herself. Sections 2281-2284, Rev. Stat. 1881.

But a married woman who has been deserted cannot lawfully contract a second marriage during the lifetime of her husband without obtaining a divorce; nor can she alienate or incumber her real estate in his absence, except by pursuing the course indicated by the statute. Rhea v. Rhenner, 26 U. S. 1 Pet. 105 [7 L. ed. 72]; Beckman v. Stanley, 8 Nev. 257; Harrison v. Brown, 16 Cal. 287.

The appellee's second marriage was a nullity, because her husband was alive at the time; and for the same reason her deed was void, although joined in by a person supposed to be her husband, but who in fact was not. Whether or not the conclusions above stated would be in any way modified, had the mortgage in suit been executed since the Statute of 1881, touching estoppels in pais affecting married women, came in force, we need not now inquire. It is enough to say the statute referred to has no application to the contract in question.

The judgment is affirmed, with costs.

CALIFORNIA SUPREME COURT.

PEOPLE, ex rel. George A. JOHNSON, Atty-Gen., Appla.,

v.

W. E. EICHELROTH, County Physician,
Resp.

(....Cal....)

The words "suitable graduate in medicine," in the California Act providing for the appointment of a county physician, include one legally licensed to practice medicine and surgery under the laws of the State, although he was never graduated at any college, school or university which confers the degree of doctor of medicine.

(January 19, 1899.)

APPEAL by plaintiffs, from a judgment of the Tuolumne County Superior Court (C. V. Gottschalk, J.), in favor of defendant in proceedings in the nature of quo warranto to oust him from the office of county physician. Affirmed.

The facts which led to the institution of the proceedings sufficiently appear in the opinion.

Messrs. George A. Johnson, Atty-Gen., and F. P. Otis for appellants.

Messrs. P. Reddy, W. H. Metson, F. W. Street and F. D. & G. W. Nicol, for respondent:

A diploma is "an instrument given by colleges and societies on commencement of any degree. A license for a clergyman to exercise the ministerial function, or a physician, etc., to practice his art."

1 Burrill, Law Dictionary, p. 493, Lawrence & Rapalje, Law Dictionary, p. 889; Webster's Unabridged Dictionary.

The state medical society was a duly incorporated medical society of the State of California. They appointed a board of examiners as provided by an Act, entitled "An Act to Regulate the Practice of Medicine in the State of California," approved April 8, 1876. Statutes 1875-6, p. 792.

Defendant was duly examined before said board of examiners, and after such examination said board issued to the defendant, on the 18th day of December, 1876, a certificate which is evidence of the fact that defendant is a graduate of the Medical Society of the State of California, and by complying with the other requirements of the Act constituted his license to practice medicine and surgery in this State. It is his diploma.

Finch v. Gridley's Executors, 25 Wend. 468.

If the Statute of 1876 is doubtful or ambiguous, such construction will be given to it as not to deprive a person of a substantial right.

People v. Hodgdon, 55 Cal. 73.

In the construction of a statute the intention of the Legislature is to be ascertained; and to ascertain that intent regard is to be had, not so much to the phraseology in which that intent has been expressed as to the general tenor and scope of the whole legislative scheme embodied in the statute.

Palache v. Pacific Ins. Co. 43 Cal. 418; People v. Utica Ins. Co. 15 Johns. 353.

If the words "suitable graduate in medicine," as used by the Legislature in subdivision 5, § 25, of the County Government Act, are susceptible of two constructions, all of the Acts bearing upon the subject should be read together.

Merrill v. Gorham, 6 Cal. 41; People v. Wells, 11 Cal. 321; McMinn v. Bliss, 81 Cal. 122.

The purpose of legislation on this subject was to prevent persons not properly qualified from practicing medicine in this State.

The tests of qualification to practice medicine in this State were of two kinds, viz.: first, the diploma; second, a satisfactory examination before the board. But the diploma and certificate in one case and the certificate in the other conferred precisely the same right and evidenced the same qualification. After the issuance of the certificate to the two classes the law does not indicate nor require any distinction to be marked or made between them.

2 L. R. A.

See Ex parte Spinney, 10 Nev. 323; Leighton v. Sargent, 81 N. H. 119.

Patterson, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action to oust the defendant from the office of County Physician of Tuolumne County, on the ground that he was not at the time of his appointment, and is not now, "a suitable graduate in medicine."

On March 8, 1887, the Board of Supervisors of Tuolumne County appointed the defendant physician for the county hospital and jail and indigent sick of said county for the term of one year. The Act under which the appointment was made provides that "The board shall also appoint (not let to the lowest bidder) some suitable graduate in medicine to attend such indigent sick or otherwise dependent poor." County Government Act, § 25, subd. 5.

The case was submitted upon an agreed statement of facts, and the court below rendered judgment for the defendant.

The defendant has been in the continuous practice of medicine and surgery for about forty-three years, in this State, since 1852. During the fourteen years last past he has been the county physician of Tuolumne County, and while engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery has attended to the indigent sick of said county. He studied medicine for one year in the University of Yena, Germany, and has been superintendent of hospitals in different parts of this country; but has never received a diploma from any medical college, and never was graduated at any college, school or university which confers the degree of doctor of medicine.

Under the Act of April 8, 1876, the state medical society of this State appointed a board of examiners. The defendant went before said board of examiners, and, after being duly examined, received from said board, on the 18th day of December, 1876, a certificate and license in due form, signed by the members of the board, authorizing him to practice medicine and surgery in this State.

The case turns on the meaning of the words "some suitable graduate in medicine." Technically the word "graduate" implies a degree and regular curriculum. Webster defines the verb "graduate," "to pass to, or to receive, a degree in a college or university." But we do not think it necessary to give to the word, as used in this statute, a strict and technical definition. In the construction of a statute, the intention of the Legislature is to be ascertained, not so much from the phraseology in which the intent has been expressed, as the general tenor and scope of legislation on the subject. Palache v. Pacific Ins. Co. 43 Cal. 419; Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 76.

The purpose of legislation on the subject before us was to prevent persons not properly qualified from practicing medicine in this State, and to prevent injury to helpless people under the protection of the county, through the incompetency of the physician in charge of the hospitals and jails. For that purpose the board of examiners, composed of competent physicians, was provided for; and said board was required to make such an examination of applicants as would show their qualification to practice medicine and surgery.

The tests of qualification to practice medicine in this State are of two kinds: first, the diploma from a medical college or incorporated society; and second, a satisfactory examination before the board. The evidence required in the first class of cases to entitle the applicant to practice is a diploma and certificate of the board; and in the second class a certificate showing that the holder thereof has been duly examined and is entitled to practice. We do not think it was the intention of the Legislature to provide that while those confined in the jails or hospitals might be treated by a physician holding a diploma from some medical institute, authorized by law to confer the degree of doctor of medicine, a physician who had passed a satisfactory examination before the board of examiners of the state medical society of this State should not be qualified or allowed by law to treat such patients. The words "suitable graduate in medicine," we think, as used in the Act before us, mean one legally licensed to practice medicine and surgery under the laws of this State. It cannot be said that the meaning of the words is clear; and in such cases the statute should be given such construction as will not deprive the person interested in its construction of a substantial right. People v. Hodgdon, 55 Cal. 72. Judgment affirmed.

We concur: Beatty, Ch. J., Thornton, J., Works, J., McFarland, J., Sharpstein, J.

NEW YORK COURT OF APPEALS.

PEOPLE, ex rel., COMMONWEALTH INS. CO. of New York, Expts.,

v.

Michael COLEMAN et al., Comrs. of Taxes, etc., Appts.

(....N. Y.....)

An assessment on the property of an insurance company which is attacked by certiorari, on the ground that the net surplus of the company is assessed unlawfully, because it is less than 10 per cent of the capital, cannot be sustained by the commissioners of taxes by showing that the net surplus as fixed by them is too small, and that unearned premiums deducted therefrom by them should not have been deducted. Having made the deduction, they are bound by it, and the regularity of the assessment must be determined on the basis of the valuation which they fixed, and which they cannot, at that stage, either increase or diminish.

(March 5, 1899.)

APPEAL by defendants, from an order of the General Term of the Supreme Court, First Department, reversing an order of the Special Term in favor of defendants in proceedings taken by certiorari to review the action of the commissioners of taxes in assessing the capital stock of relator, and vacating the assessment. Affirmed.

The point in controversy sufficiently appears from the opinion.

Messrs. David J. Dean and George S. Coleman, with Mr. Henry R. Beekman, for appellants:

The relator was not entitled to a deduction of its unearned premiums.

See People v. Ferguson, 88 N. Y. 89; People v. Tax Comrs. 76 N. Y. 64; People v. Davenport, 91 N. Y. 574.

In all of the above cases the court has assumed that some amount may properly be allowed for unearned premiums in assessing the capital of an insurance company. But there is no express provision of statute requiring any allowance for liability in estimating the taxable value of property. Contingent liabilities are not allowed as deductions to other corporations or to individuals; and the record in the present case does not afford sufficient evidence of the amount of the liability for which allowance should be made

2 L. R. A.

See State v. Parker, 84 N. J. L. 479, 85 N. J. L. 575; Kenton Ins. Co. v. Covington (Ky.) 5 S. W. Rep. 461.

Mr. Joseph Larocque, for respondent:

The deductions made by the appellants in arriving at their valuation of the capital stock and surplus of the relator were properly made. It was the duty of the commissioners, in estimating the value of the capital stock for the purpose of assessment, to make a proper deduction from the value of the assets to cover existing liabilities; and in adopting the basis of 50 per cent of the premiums collected on unexpired risks as a proper measure of liability on outstanding policies, they but acted in accordance with the teachings of experience and a rule often approved by this court.

People v. Ferguson, 88 N. Y. 89; People v. Tax Comrs. 76 N. Y. 64.

Andrews, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

We think the question which the appellants seek to have determined, viz.: whether in estimating the property of an insurance company for the purpose of taxation, any deduction is to be made on account of unearned premiums, and whether they are to be considered to any extent as debts or liabilities of the company, does not arise and cannot be decided on this record.

It appears from the return of the commissioners of taxes that they fixed the valuation of the capital stock and net surplus of the relator at $321,219, according to the report of the insurance department of the State to which they refer.

Reference to the report shows that this sum was arrived at by valuing the capital stock of the relator at $800,000, its par value, and its net surplus at $21,219. The net surplus was ascertained by deducting from the sum of $45,885.21, the gross surplus, the liabilities for unearned premiums, amounting to $24,666.16. This left the net value of its assets, as estimated, the sum before mentioned, viz.: $321,219.

From this aggregate the commissioners deducted United States bonds held by the company, to the amount of $304,577, leaving a balance of $16,642, which latter sum was fixed by the commissioners as that for which the relator was liable to taxation. This sum represented part of the surplus of $21,219, as ascertained by the commissioners; and as by chapter 456 of the Laws of 1857, only that part of the surplus of the relator exceeding 10 per cent of its capital was liable to taxation, the assessment of any part of it was plainly erroneous.

The commissioners cannot now be heard to say that the deduction made in arriving at the net surplus of the unearned premiums was erroneous and should not have been made. They did make the deduction, and are bound by it. They can neither increase nor diminish, at this stage, the valuation upon which the assessment proceeded. Nor can their error be obviated by proof that the surplus was in fact much larger than was fixed by them. The regularity of the assessment is to be determined on the basis that the full net surplus was $21,219.

We think the order appealed from is right and should therefore be affirmed.

All concur.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT, DISTRICT OF OREGON.

Edward TRACY

v.

Mary A. REED.

(...Sawyer... Fed. Rep....)

1. Assessment of real property; to whom made. By the Act of 1858 (Comp. 1857, § 2785), real property must be assessed to the owner thereof, unless it is unoccupied and the owner unknown; and an assessment made to a person not the owner of the property is invalid.

2. The owner of property for the purpose of taxation is the person having the legal title or estate thereto or therein, and not one who by contract or otherwise has a mere equity therein or a right to compel a conveyance of such legal title or estate to himself.

Head notes by DEADY, J.

NOTE.—Taxes; resident or occupied land must be assessed to the owner.

The statutes generally require that real property shall be listed and assessed to the actual owner, or to the owner or occupant, and this requirement is imperative. State v. Vanderbilt, 33 N. J. L. 98; Johnson v. McIntire, 1 Bibb, 285; Whitney v. Thomas, 23 N. Y. 281; Thibodeaux v. Keller, 29 La. Ann. 508; Workingmen's Bank v. Lannes, 30 La. Ann. 671; Lague v. Boagni, 22 La. Ann. 512; Le Blanc v. Blodgett, 24 La. Ann. 107; Desmond v. Babbitt, 117 Mass. 232; Bell v. Fry, 5 Dana, 241; Martin v. Mansfield, 3 Mass. 412.

But a mere mistake in the name of the owner, not calculated to mislead, will not vitiate the assessment. People v. Whipple, 47 Cal. 551; Smith v. Reed, 51 Conn. 10; Pierce v. Richardson, 27 N. H. 292; Van Voorhis v. Budd, 29 Barb. 479.

Where the statute requires land to be assessed to the true owner, if known, a tax sale based upon an assessment to a person who was not the true owner is absolutely void. Himmelmunn v. Steiner, 26 Cal. 175; People v. Castro, 29 Cal. 65; Milner v. Clarke, 61 Ala. 552; Guldry v. Broumard, 29 La. Ann. 224; Lague v. Boagni, 22 La. Ann. 512; Fliz v. Dierker's Succession, 30 La. Ann. 175; Baskins v. Doe, 24 Miss. 481; Dunn v. Winston, 31 Miss. 125; Yenda v. Wheeler, 9 Tex. 408; Gardner v. Brown, 1 Humph. 334; Abbott v. Lindenbower, 48 Mo. 122; Hume v. Wainwright, 48 Mo. 145; Hecht v. Boughton, 2 Wyo. 385.

Where land is returned delinquent for the nonpayment of taxes in the name of the former owner, and sold in his name for such taxes, and the purchaser at the sale procures a deed, such deed will be null and void. Bradley v. Ewart, 18 W. Va. 598.

A deed of land for nonpayment of a tax assessed upon it in the name of a former deceased owner, when the land was in the actual occupancy of a nonresident owner known to the assessors, conveys no title to the purchaser. Burpee v. Rumacil, 12 N. H. 2 N. W. Eng. Rep. 288; Thompson v. Gerrish, 27 N. H. 83; Thompson v. Elm, 60 N. H. 562.

The statute, however, may provide that no deed shall be invalid on account of the assessment being in any other name than that of the real owner if such land be otherwise sufficiently described in the tax book (Merrick v. Hutt, 15 Ark. 321; Kinsworthy v. Mitchell, 21 Ark. 146; Guribaldi v. Jenkins, 27

3. Tax deed, effect of. An Act of the Legislature (Comp. 1874, p. 787, § 80), made a tax deed conclusive evidence of the regularity of the assessment, except for fraud; and on the trial of an action brought by the grantee in such a deed, to recover possession of the premises mentioned therein, the parties stipulated the existence of certain facts, from which it appeared in the judgment of the court that the assessment in question was made to a person not then the owner of the property. Held, that the effect of such stipulation was a waiver by the plaintiff of the conclusive character of the deed in this respect, and an admission that if in the judgment of the court the person to whom the property was assessed was not the true owner thereof, then the assessment was invalid and the tax deed void.

4. A tax deed made in pursuance of a sale of property for a delinquent tax, under an Act which provided that such deed shall be conclusive evi-

Ark. 458; Schrodt v. Deputy, 26 Ind. 90; or if such precautions were taken as to give the true owner reasonable constructive notice of the liability of his land to sale. Strauch v. Shoemaker, 1 Watts & S. 108; Giam v. Gilbert, 55 Pa. 202.

Contesting tax title.

clency of some particular act, or of the nonperformance of some necessary duty. Lacey v. Davis, 4 Mich. 140; Black, Tax Titles, § 254.

It is not enough to prove facts from which irregularity may be inferred. Same v. King, 12 Pa. 557; Black, Tax Titles, § 254.

Tax deed, as prima facie evidence of prerequisites complied with.

The Legislature has the constitutional power to provide that a tax deed shall be received as prima facie evidence that certain or all the prerequisites of the law have been complied with, and thus shift the burden of proof. Ogden v. Saunders, 25 U. S. 12 Wheat. 213 (6 L. ed. 606); Webb v. Den, 58 U. S. 17 How. 578 (15 L. ed. 25); Williams v. Kirtland, 60 U. S. 18 Wall. 810 (20 L. ed. 684); Freeman v. Thayer, 28 Maine, 78; Orono v. Vezie, 57 Maine, 517; Dequasse v. Harris, 18 W. Va. 334; Pillow v. Roberts, 54 U. S. 18 How. 472 (14 L. ed. 228); Steadman v. Planters Bank, 7 Ark. 422; Morton v. Reeds, 6 Mo. 74; Flanagan v. Grimmer, 10 Gratt. 421; Cairo & F. R. Co. v. Parks, 32 Ark. 147; Donahue v. O'Connor, 13 Jones & S. 297; Hand v. Ballou, 12 N. Y. 543; Burbank v. People, 30 Ill. 555; Graves v. Bruen, 11 Ill. 431; Sullivan v. Onelda, 61 Ill. 247; Townsend v. Radcliffe, 69 Ill. 11; Ill. Cent. R. Co. v. Phillips, 55 Ill. 194; Roby v. Chicago, 64 Ill. 447; Falce v. Wadsworth, 23 Maine, 552; Kendall v. Kingston, 5 Mass. 524; Holmes v. Hunt, 122 Mass. 503; Com. v. Thurlow, 24 Pick. 374; Com. v. Kelly, 10 Cush. 69; Forbes v. Halsey, 24 N.

dence of the regularity of the assessment, except for fraud, is a contract with the State that the deed shall so far remain conclusive evidence of title in the grantee therein, and a subsequent Act of the Legislature, making such deed only prima facie evidence of such regularity, is void, because it impairs the obligation of the contract. The ruling in Marz v. Hanthorn, 13 Sawy. 377, on this point, affirmed.

(March 4, 1888.)

ACTION to recover possession of real property. Judgment for defendant.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Mrs. W. Scott Beebe and John M. Gearin for plaintiff.

Mrs. Alfred F. Sears and Paul R. Dady for defendant.

Dady, J., delivered the following opinion:

This action is brought by the plaintiff, a citizen of California, against the defendant, a citizen of Oregon, to recover the possession of lot 8, in block 206, of the Couch Addition to Portland.

The pleadings consist of the complaint, answer and reply, from which it appears that the plaintiff claims title to the lot under a sale thereof for a delinquent tax thereon, on June 18, 1884, to which claim two defenses are pleaded: (1) the assessment on which said tax was levied is void, because not made to the owner of the property; and (2) the tax was paid before the sale took place. The defendant also brings into court, and deposits with the clerk, under section 2823 (Comp. 1887), the sum of $15.65 the same being the amount of the tax of 1888 and the accruing cost and interest thereon.

The case was submitted to the court for trial without the intervention of a jury, and upon a stipulation concerning certain facts, with the right to either party to introduce further evidence on the trial.

From this stipulation it appears that the property in question exceeds in value the sum of $2,000, and that on July 10, 1880, R. Glisan, being the owner thereof, bargained and sold the same to the defendant by an agreement of that date, signed by himself and wife, and by the defendant.

By the terms of this agreement, erroneously called "a bond for a deed," the defendant was to pay $800 for the property—the one half down, and remainder in quarterly payments of $18.75 each, with interest; whereupon the vendors were to convey the premises to her in fee simple. It was also agreed that the defendant might take possession of the premises at once, and that she would pay all taxes that might be levied on the property; and that if the purchase money due under the agreement was not all paid by July 10, 1882, the agreement should become null and void at the option of Glisan, and all money then paid thereon become forfeited to the vendors.

On September 14, 1881, the defendant paid the remainder of the purchase money, and on June 7, 1887, the vendors duly conveyed the premises to her.

Prior to July 10, 1880, the property was assessed to R. Glisan as the owner thereof, but after the making of said agreement and for

Y. 38; Groesbeck v. Beeley, 12 Mich. 338; Hart v. Smith, 44 Wm. 223; 2 Dexty, Taxn. 949.

But such legislation has been strictly construed by the courts, and the onus probandi is regarded as shifted only to the extent that the words of the statute require. Dequade v. Harris, 18 W. Va. 354; Moulton v. Blaisdell, 24 Maine, 283; Gavin v. Shuman, 23 Ind. 32; Stierlin v. Daley, 37 Mo. 483; Garrett v. Wiggins, 2 Ill. 385; Shoalwater v. Armstrong, 9 Humph. 217; Parker v. Smith, 4 Blackf. 70; Curtis v. Longworth, 5 Ohio, 308; 2 Dexty, Taxn. 949.

Such a statute did not dispense with the performance of all the requirements prescribed by law for the sale of the lands. It only shifted the burden of the proof of such performance from the party claiming under the deed to the party attacking it. Williams v. Kirtland, supra; Parker v. Overman, 89 U. S. 18 How. 137 (15 L. ed. 318); Thomas v. Lawson, 88 U. S. 21 How. 331 (18 L. ed. 32).

As prima facie evidence of truth of its recitals.

Where the statute makes tax deeds prima facie evidence of the truth of their recitals, if the deed fails to recite any of the facts material to the sale, the party relying on the deed must aid the omission by evidence aliunde, for the conveyance proves nothing but what it recites. Milliken v. Patterson, 91 Ind. 515; Bonnell v. Roane, 20 Ark. 114; Steeple v. Downing, 40 Ind. 478. See Steadman v. Planters Bank, 7 Ark. 424; Black, Tax Titles, § 258.

As evidence of sale.

It has generally been held that a statute making a tax deed evidence of a regular sale applies only to the sale, and does not dispense with the necessity of proof of the levy and assessment, and other preliminary steps; nor does it make the recitals in the deed evidence of such preliminary matters. Bridge v. Bracken, 3 Chand. 75; Parker v. Smith, 4 Blackf. 70; Wilson v. Lemon, 23 Ind. 483; Ward v. Montgomery, 37 Ind. 276; Hill v. Leonard, 5 Ill. 140; Scott v. Detroit Y. M. Society, 1 Doug. (Mich.) 121; Latimer v. Lovett, 2 Doug. (Mich.) 204; Striker v. Kelley, 2 Denio, 323; Tallman v. White, 2 N. Y. 35; Beckman v. Bigham, 5 N. Y. 326; Shackleford v. Harper, 65 Ga. 306; Ives v. Kimball, 1 Mich. 308; Doughty v. Hope, 3 Denio, 594; Westbrook v. Willev, 47 N. Y. 457; Bowland v. Doty, Har. Ch. (Mich.) 9 L. R. A.

S. Yenda v. Wheeler, 9 Tex. 408; Black, Tax Titles, § 258.

As conclusive evidence of title.

A statute, therefore, which should make a tax deed or

of it
in ui ti
35
C 44
b
3
E
T
v.
v.
250.

That statutes undertaking to prescribe conclusive rules are not to be extended by construction, see Upton v. Kennedy, 25 Mich. 315; Cooley, Taxn. 522.

As presumptive evidence of title.

In some jurisdictions the tax deed is made presumptive evidence of title in the grantee. Where this is the case, the deed not only proves, prima facie, the regularity of the sale, but is also evidence of the existence and legality of all the antecedent steps required by law and of the authority of the several officers who acted in the matter, and is sufficient, unless rebutted by evidence, to enable the grantee to recover possession of the land. Huntington v. Central Pac. R. Co. 2 Sawy. 508; Ourth v. Follett, 15 Barb. 537; Lee v. Jeddo Coal Co. 84 Pa. 74; Blanco v. Coulter, 18 Ark. 422; Bonnell v. Roane, 20 Ark. 114; Lusk v. Harber, 8 Ill. 156; Graves v. Bruen, 11 Ill. 431; Spellman v. Curtin, 12 Ill. 439; Ballance v. Curtin, Id. 416; Manly v. Gibson, 14 Ill. 136; Jeffrey v. Brokaw, 35 Iowa, 505; Stewart v. McSweeney, 14 Wis. 448; Nelson v. Rountree, 25 Wis. 367; Black, Tax Titles, 257.

Alabama.

In Alabama the tax deed is prima facie evidence that the land was subject to taxation for the years and during the years 1880 to 1887, both inclusive, the same was assessed to the defendant without complaint or objection from anyone. It is admitted that during the same period except for the year 1883, the defendant paid the taxes levied on the property in pursuance of said assessments—and she claims to have paid it for that year also.

On May 17, 1884, the Sheriff of Multnomah County, in pursuance of a warrant from the county court thereof, levied on the premises, as the property of the defendant, for the purpose of collecting the tax levied thereon in 1883, alleged to be then delinquent, and amounting to $3.90, notice of which levy and the sale thereon was duly published in The Daily Oregonian on May 19, 1884; and on June 18, 1884, the property was offered for sale and bid in by the plaintiff for the sum of $6.47, and no redemption being made thereof, on June 6, 1887, he received a deed from the sheriff therefor.

In December, 1884, the defendant took possession of the premises and moved into a house thereon, which she commenced to build on the 4th of July previous, in which she has ever since resided.

The defendant testifies that she can neither read nor write; that in the spring of 1884 her daughter, Mrs. Belle Reed, came to her house with a newspaper in her hand and called her attention to the fact that her lot was advertised for sale for a delinquent tax, and that she and her daughter went the same day to the sheriff's office and paid the tax to the deputy, A. W. Witherell, then in attendance there; but whether she got a receipt or not she is not certain, and if she did she says it is lost or mislaid. In this statement she is corroborated throughout by her daughter. James Sheridan, who was boarding with the defendant in the spring of 1884, testifies that he heard the conversation between the daughter and the mother concerning the property being advertised for sale and saw them go out of the house later in the same day, saying they were going to the sheriff's office to pay the tax.

The deputy testified that he has no remembrance of the tax being paid, that there is no stub in the receipt book showing the payment of the tax, as there should be if it was paid, and he is therefore quite confident it never was paid.

The defendant and her daughter both state that a Mrs. Ann Keating, with whom the latter was living at the time, accompanied her to the house of the defendant, to inform her that the tax was delinquent, and then went with them to the sheriff's office and saw the same paid. The deposition of Keating was read by the plaintiff, in which she denies this story, so far as she is concerned, in toto. But Sheridan testified that a woman, not known to him, came to the house on this occasion with the daughter, and afterwards left the house with her and the defendant, when the latter said she was going to pay the tax.

The testimony of the deputy Witherell, that the tax was not paid, because he does not remember it, and because there is no stub to that effect in the receipt book, amounts to but little more in effect than the legal presumption that he did his stated, that the taxes were not paid, and that the land was not redeemed. Lassiter v. Lee, 63 Ala. 287; Stoudenmire v. Brown, 57 Ala. 481; 2 Desty, Taxn. 950.

Saves as to these things, the recitals in the deed are not evidence, and the onus is on the purchaser to prove their truth. Stoudenmire v. Brown, 57 Ala. 481; Cooley, Taxn. 521.

The deed of the judge of probate to the purchaser of lands sold for delinquent taxes is prima facie evidence of the facts therein recited (Code, § 490) only when executed in substantial compliance with the requirements of the statute, and properly recorded. Bolling v. Smith, 79 Ala. 535.

Arkansas.

By a law of Arkansas, sales and conveyances made by the sheriff and collector for the nonpayment of taxes shall vest in the grantee a valid title and shall be prima facie evidence of the regularity and legality of the sale. Thomas v. Lawson, 62 U. S. 21 How. 331 (16 L. ed. 82); Pillow v. Roberts, 54 U. S. 13 How. 472 (14 L. ed. 228).

In proceedings for the confirmation of the tax title, when the tax deed is "in the usual form," it is to be taken as prima facie evidence, not merely of the qualification of the officer, but that the prerequisite steps have been regularly taken, including the description of the land sold and the price at which it was sold, and irregularities must be proved by the party impeaching the deed. Bonnell v. Boone, 20 Ark. 114; 2 Desty, Taxn. 950.

California.

In California tax deeds are prima facie evidence of title. Norris v. Russell, 5 Cal. 249; 2 Desty, Taxn. 840.

The recital, in a tax deed, as to whom the property was assessed, is conclusive. Brady v. Dowden, 50 Cal. 51; Grotefend v. Ulitz, 83 Cal. 666; Grimm v. O'Donnell, 54 Cal. 632. See Mayo v. Haynie, 50 Cal. 70; 2 Desty, Taxn. 954.

District of Columbia.

As a general rule a tax deed is not even prima facie evidence of title. It is incumbent on the holder who asserts title under it to prove affirmatively L. R. A.

tively that all the preliminaries to the sale which the law prescribes were complied with. Brewer v. D. C. (D. C.) 4 Cent. Rep. 622, 5 Mackey, 274.

Illinois.

A tax deed, in due and regular form, made upon the record of judgment and sale for taxes, and affidavit made for the purpose of obtaining the deed, is prima facie evidence of seven distinct specified facts, among which are: that the real estate was sold for taxes or special assessments, and that the sale was conducted in the manner required by law—thus obviating the necessity of introducing the precept in evidence, in the first instance. Ransom v. Henderson, 1 West. Rep. 638, 114 Ill. 528.

The Legislature has the constitutional power to change the common-law rules of evidence, and provide that a tax deed shall be received as prima facie evidence that certain or all prerequisites of law have been complied with, and thus shift the burden of proof. See Burbank v. People, 60 Ill. 555; Sullivan v. Oneida, 61 Ill. 247; Townsend v. Radcliffe, 68 Ill. 11; Cent. R. Co. v. Phillips, 55 Ill. 194; Roby v. Chicago, 64 Ill. 447; Ransom v. Henderson, 1 West. Rep. 638, 114 Ill. 528.

In Illinois, in order to make a tax deed prima facie evidence, it is first necessary to show a judgment against the parcel of land in default for nonpayment of the tax, an order for the sale, and a precept thereon; these facts are not proved by the recitals of the deed. The same rule probably obtains in some other States. Little v. Herndon, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 28 (19 L. ed. 878); Spellman v. Curtin, 12 Ill. 409; Marsh v. Chestnut, 14 Ill. 224; Charles v. Waugh, 35 Ill. 817; Dukes v. Rowley, 24 Ill. 210; Baily v. Doolittle, 24 Ill. 577; Elston v. Kennicott, 46 Ill. 187; Wilding v. Horner, 50 Ill. 50; Cottingham v. Springer, 88 Ill. 90; Gage v. Lightburn, 93 Ill. 248; People v. Doe, 81 Cal. 230; Bolan v. Bolan, 4 Nev. 150; Black, Tax Titles, 250.

The Illinois Act of February 21, 1861, does not dispense with the necessity of producing the judgment and precept as the foundation of a sale for taxes, and of the validity of the deed. Little v. Herndon, supra.

Iowa.

In Iowa a tax deed is conclusive evidence of the July in the premises; that is, if the tax was paid, he gave the party a receipt therefor, and made a corresponding entry on the stub thereof. Comp. 1887, § 700, subd. 15; 2 Whart. Ev. §§ 1818, 1819.

The statute (Comp. 1887, § 2801) makes it the duty of the sheriff on "the receipt of money for taxes" to give a receipt therefor, and contains a form of the stub thereof, which he keeps in his office, and the particulars to be entered thereon.

The direct, affirmative testimony of one altogether credible witness to the fact of payment of taxes ought to be sufficient to overcome this presumption. But the defendant is peculiarly interested in the result, and the daughter is as likely to be influenced by that fact as her mother.

I fear it would be some, if not many, instances, make tax titles a delusion and a snare if they could be avoided by the mere oath of the delinquent or his immediate relatives or prospective heirs, that the taxes had been paid without taking a receipt therefor.

And the fact that no receipt was taken by the defendant for the payment of this tax is a circumstance of some weight against the statement that the same was paid. The officer would naturally give the defendant a receipt; and she would most naturally, if necessary, demand one.

The testimony of Mrs. Keating does not contradict the testimony of the defendant and her daughter as to the payment of the tax, but only a collateral circumstance of the transaction, as related by them, namely: her presence at such payment.

fact of a lawful sale. Gould v. Thompson, 45 Iowa, 481; McCready v. Barton, 20 Iowa, 386. See Chandler v. Keller, 44 Iowa, 371. Desty, Taxn. 356.

Statutes are sustained which make tax deeds conclusive evidence of regularity in the listing and property was regularly v. Armstrong, 18 Iowa, 20 Iowa, 356; Rima v. v. Thompson, 27 Iowa, 68; Smith v. Baston, id. 691; Bullis v. Marsh, 28 2d Nat. Bank, 45 Iowa, 684; McDowell, 47 14.

ad sold for taxes, in the State of Iowa, if substantially regular in form, is, under the statute of that State, prima facie evidence of sale; and if there was a bona fide sale in substance or in fact, the deed is conclusive evidence that it was made at the proper time and in the proper manner—these being merely directory, and not fundamental. Callahan v. Hurley, 20 U. S. 287 69 L. ed. 331; Phelps v. Meade, 41 Iowa, 470; Blacum v. Blacum, 70 Iowa, 393; Shawyer v. Johnson, 81 Iowa, 476; Clark v. Thompson, 87 Iowa, 595; 2 Desty, Taxn. 354; Rima v. Cowan, 21 Iowa, 136; Black, Tax Titles, § 322.

But it is not constitutional to make the tax deed conclusive evidence of an assignment of the property, this being a jurisdictional prerequisite. Immergart v. Gorgas, 41 Iowa, 439; Phelps v. Meade, 41 Iowa, 470; Nichols v. McGlashery, 43 Iowa, 149; Barton v. Savery, 44 Iowa, 634; Black, Tax Titles, § 322; Cooley, Taxn. 323.

It is not conclusive evidence that notice was given of the expiration of time in which to redeem (Wilson v. Craft, 46 Iowa, 450; Road v. Thompson, id. 451), nor that the description of the land is correct (Immergart v. Gorgas, 41 Iowa, 439; Black, Tax Titles, § 323; Cooley, Taxn. 322) nor that a sale which was in fact private, fraudulent and illegal was public and legal. Butler v. Delano, 42 Iowa, 390; Thompson v. Ware, 43 Iowa, 445; Cooley, Taxn. 322.

Kansas.

In Kansas a deed issued upon a certificate is prima § L. R. A.

But, notwithstanding Keating's testimony, the defendant may have paid the tax, and what is more, her testimony may not be true. It is not apparent what object the defendant could have in falsely connecting her with the transaction. Her memory may be at fault with reference to the person who came to the house with her daughter and went with them to the sheriff's office, for Sheridan, who seems to be a disinterested and fair witness, says that some woman came to the house with the daughter on the occasion in question, and went with the parties when they left the house.

I was certainly impressed on the trial with the apparent fairness and candor of the defendant and her daughter as witnesses; and it does not seem probable that the former would, even if she had allowed this property to go to sale for the paltry sum of this tax, have taken no steps to redeem the same, within the two years allowed by law—or would have continued to pay the taxes on the property in the mean time. I can but think she was at least laboring under the impression that the tax of 1888 was paid. The property was her home, and probably all she had of any value in the world; and it seems improbable that she would consciously sacrifice it for the paltry sum of $1.90.

And yet I do not feel satisfied, under the circumstances, to find as a matter of fact that this tax was paid by the defendant. This leads to the consideration of the question, Was there any valid assessment of this property preparatory to the levy of this tax?

Section 2785 of the Compilation of 1887 (§ 2 of Act Oct. 30, 1889), provides: "All lands shall be assessed and taxed in the county where the fact evidence of title, and regularity of all prior tax proceedings. Lee v. Finmore, 20 Kan. 386; Gardenshire v. Mitchell, 21 Kan. 87; McQuinn v. McGuire, 14 Kan. 334; Hobson v. Dutton, 8 Kan. 671; 2 Desty, Taxn. 359.

Kentucky.

In Kentucky it is prima facie evidence of the facts recited. Allen v. Robinson, 2 Bibb, 260; Hard v. Bodley, 1 J. J. Marsh, 78; 2 Desty, Taxn. 359.

Louisiana.

A tax deed in Louisiana is prima facie evidence of a valid sale, but in the absence of recitals in the deed and of proof affidavits of the appointment of a curator, and the service of notice on him, the sale of the land of a nonresident owner is void. Happ v. Lowry, 20 La. Ann. 123; Cooley, Taxn. 519.

A sale is defeated in Louisiana by showing that the land stood of record in the name of the owner and was assessed to another. Lague v. Dougal, 20 La. Ann. 512; Guttry v. Broadward, 25 La. Ann. 526; Cooley, Taxn. 521.

It seems that in Louisiana a tax deed cannot be collaterally attacked. (See Lannan v. Workingmen's Bank, 20 La. Ann. 112; Juroy v. Allison, 30 La. Ann. 1304; Cooley, Taxn. 519.)

Louisiana Act of 1851, § 42, providing for appointing an auditor's deed of sale, does not impair the effectiveness of the tax collector's deed as a title. Harrow v. Wilson, 20 La. Ann. 691.

Maine.

In Maine if the deed does not show on its face that the tax had remained unpaid for the statutory time before notice of sale; that the notices were legally posted and personal notice given, or if it does show that sale was made on mass and no offer made to sell a fractional part, it is void. Wiggin v. Temple, 73 Maine, 280; Cooley, Taxn. 518.

In Maine parol testimony is inadmissible to prove that the grantee named in the deed is not the one intended by the grantor. Whitmore v. Learned, 70 Maine, 285; Crawford v. Spencer, 8 Oush. 416; 2 Desty, Taxn. 354.

Minnesota.

In Minnesota a tax deed is not prima facie evisame shall lie; and every person shall be assessed in the county where he resides when the assessment is made, for all real and personal property then owned by him within such county; and unoccupied land, if the owner is unknown, may be assessed as such, without inserting the name of any owner."

By this Act, the rule prescribed in § 6 of the Act of 1854 (Comp. 1874, p. 750, § 7), which allowed "land owned by one person and occupied by another" to be assessed in the name of either, was changed. In the Act of 1882, sometimes called "The Mortgage Tax Law," the provision allowing an assessment to be made in the name of a mere occupant was omitted for some reason; and now and since then land is required to be assessed to the owner, unless it is unoccupied, in which case it may be assessed, as such, without naming the owner.

When a person is assessed "for" real property, as being "owned" by him, he must be designated on the assessment roll as the owner of the same. It is not sufficient to assess or value the land for taxation generally. It must be assessed or valued as the land of the owner thereof and not another. Cooley, Taxn. 278.

In Marr v. Hanthorn, 18 Sawy. 378, this court held that where the statute requires property to be assessed in the name of or to the owner, the name is a part of the description of the premises, and, I may add, is a material part of the transaction.

It may be that the action of the assessor in assessing unoccupied land to an unknown owner cannot be attacked in a proceeding like this, except by fraud. But the ownership of this land was known. It had been assessed to R. Glisan, prior to 1880, as the owner thereof, and so far as appeared of record, he was still such owner. Nor is it claimed that the owner was unknown.

Was that ownership changed prior to 1880 when this assessment of the property was made to the defendant? The legal title and estate was still in Glisan. By virtue of the agreement of sale and the payment of the purchase price, the defendant had an equity, as against Glisan or anyone who might take the legal title from him, with a knowledge of the facts, to have a conveyance of the property made to her—to have a specific performance of the contract of sale. But the property was not "owned" by her in the legal acceptance of the phrase, until the conveyance was made to her in 1887.

Nor is the fact that she agreed in the mean time to pay the taxes material. This was a mere private arrangement between the vendors and vendee, of which the law took no cognizance. A lessee of property might agree to pay the taxes thereon, but that would not make him the owner of the property for the purpose of taxation or otherwise.

Nor is it material that the defendant paid the taxes on the property after the sale to her. She did so, not because the State had any legal claim upon her for such taxes, but in pursuance of her contract with her vendors to that effect. And in so doing, so far as the State was concerned, she was acting as the agent of such vendors. Nor was she bound to object to the dence of title unless it be first shown that the county auditor had authority to make the deed; and a mere recital in the deed that the state auditor directed the sale is not sufficient. Shearer v. Corbin, 1 McCrary, 306; 8 Fed. Rep. 705; 2 Desty, Taxn. 951; Black, Tax Titles, § 259; Cooley, Taxn. 518.

Mississippi.

ler a tax title deonly produce his ow how the State
ysis, 56 Miss. 704;

make the deed
a, and to provide cept by proof of nt or sale, or that Jogan, 48 Miss. 11;

Virden v. Bowers, 55 Miss. 1; Bell v. Conner, 54 Miss. 523; Cooley, Taxn. 523.

The tax title may be defeated by showing that the land was not legally assessed. Davis v. Vanardale, 59 Miss. 307.

Or that the assessment roll in the hands of the collector was not properly certified by the clerk. Gibbs v. Dortch, 58 Miss. 371; Black, Tax Titles, § 260.

The statute which makes deeds conclusive evidence of title five years after sale, cures the failure of a collector to give the bond required by statute. Powers v. Penny, 59 Miss. 5; 2 Desty, Taxn. 954.

Missouri.

The Revenue Act makes tax deeds in Missouri conclusive evidence that everything has been done, the omission of which would have been only an irregularity in procedure, and prima facie evidence of everything else. Raley v. Guinn, 78 Mo. 270; Abbott v. Lindenbower, 42 Mo. 162, 46 Mo. 291. Compare Ewart v. Davis, 76 Mo. 184; 2 Desty, Taxn. 953; Cooley, Taxn. 523.

Nebraska.

By the law of Nebraska, a deed executed by the treasurer of the county to the purchaser at a tax sale vests in him a complete legal title to the premises, unless some defect affecting the assessment and sale exists, or fraud has been committed in the sale. Holland v. Challen, 110 U. S. 15 (28 L. ed. 52).

2 L.R. A.

New Jersey.

In New Jersey in any action in which title to land is involved, if the deed, declaration of sale, or conveyance are in proper form, it is conclusive evidence of title. Woodbridge v. State, 48 N. J. L. 202.

New York.

O
P
W
T
V
B
W
L
I
S
D
S

d
f
o
in is o
to
B
S

Notwithstanding the fact that there may be a statute making a tax deed prima facie or conclusive evidence of the regularity of the proceedings, if the holder of such a deed goes into proof of the steps necessary to make the sale valid, he will be deemed to have waived the benefit of the presumption in favor of the deed. Curtiss v. Follett, 15 Barb. 337; Black, Tax Titles, § 254.

Ohio.

It is competent for the Legislature to make a tax deed evidence of the legality of all prior proceedings so far as respects the essential prerequisites for the exercise of the taxing power. Magruder v. Eemay, 35 Ohio St. 221. See also McCreedy v. Rev-ton, 29 Iowa, 357; Abbott v. Lindenbower, 42 Mo. 162; White v. Flynn, 23 Ind. 46; 2 Desty, Taxn. 953.

But to be prima facie evidence, the deed must assessment of the property in her name, if she was ever aware of it. It was not her duty to instruct the assessor to whom to assess the property; and it is not claimed that she ever returned it for assessment as her own. And finally, no one was prejudiced by her silence or acquiescence. Cooley, Taxn. 578.

It is true that the term "owner" is sometimes used in a large and comprehensive sense, or at least is so construed. For instance, where it is used to designate the person who may redeem property sold for taxes or upon execution, it may be and is construed in the interest of justice and convenience to include the holder of an equity or what is sometimes called the owner of the "equitable estate."

In Dubois v. Hepburn, 35 U. S. 10 Pet. 23 [9 L. ed. 325], the supreme court held that a statute of Pennsylvania, which gave the "owner" or "owners" of land sold for taxes the right to redeem the same, included an owner of an undivided part of the property—so that he might redeem the whole tract. In the course of his opinion, Mr. Justice Baldwin said such a law ought "to receive a liberal and benign construction;" nor should the right to redeem be "narrowed down by a strict construction." And continuing he said: "Any right, which in law or equity amounts to an ownership in the land; any right of entry upon it, to its possession or enjoyment, or any part of it which can be deemed an estate in it, makes the person the owner, so far as it is necessary to give him the right to redeem."

But the owner spoken of in the statute relating to assessment of land for taxation is the legal owner—the one having the jus disponendi or the right of disposal. The statute declares that a sheriff's deed to a purchaser at a tax sale shall pass the "legal title" to the premises, thereby necessarily implying that if the land is not assessed to owners unknown, it must be assessed in the name of the person in whom such title is vested at the time. The record of deeds is prima facie the proper evidence of ownership for the purpose of taxation; and the statute should have limited the word "owner" to the last vendee of record.

In Washington v. Pratt, 21 U. S. 8 Wheat. 631 [5 L. ed. 714], it was held that a statute authorizing a sale of lots in Washington City for delinquent taxes, on a notice varying in length according to the residence of the parties, whether within the District of Columbia or without the United States, to whom "the property belongs," which notice, among other things, was required to contain "the name of the person or persons to whom the same may have been assessed," did not authorize the sale of a lot to anyone but the "actual" owner.

In Davis v. Cincinnati, 38 Ohio St. 27, it was held that where a statute made an assessment on a lot for street improvements, a debt or demand that could be enforced against the "owner" thereof in a personal action, that such action could not be maintained against a lessee of the property; and that no one was the "owner" of the same, within the meaning of the statute, who had less than a freehold interest therein.

In reply to the suggestion of counsel, that the assessment of this property is a proceeding in rem, and that the name in or to which it is entered on the assessment roll is a matter nonessential, attention is called to the cases of Dowell v. Portland, 18 Ore. 248, and Hawthorne v.

recite enough of the proceedings to show authority to sell, and to authorize the officer to make the deed. Woodward v. Sloan, 27 Ohio St. 592; Turney v. Yeoman, 14 Ohio, 208.

It is not, without other evidence, prima facie evidence of the validity of the sale; nor will the destruction of the records warrant the presumption of its validity. Rhodes v. Gunn, 35 Ohio St. 387; Jones v. Devore, 8 Ohio St. 480.

Oregon.

Under the Oregon Statute making a tax deed conclusive evidence of regularity save as to certain specified matters, it may be shown that the sale was made after the warrant had expired. Kelly v. Herrall, 30 Fed. Rep. 364; Cooley, Taxn. 523.

Pennsylvania.

The deed from the commissioners is not the title; it is merely evidence of title. Kunes v. McCloskey, 7 Cent. Rep. 401, 115 Pa. 461, 19 W. N. C. 266.

In Pennsylvania it is held that a copy of a treasurer's deed, from the registry in the treasurer's office, is not evidence, and cannot be made to take the place of the original. Townsen v. Wilson, 9 Pa. 271; Black, Tax Titles, 259.

South Carolina.

In South Carolina the auditor's deed for delinquent land is prima facie evidence of good title under the statute, but there is no such provision relating to forfeited lands; in such case the State must prove its title. State v. Thompson, 18 S. C. 528; Cooke v. Fennington, 15 S. C. 185; 2 Desty, Taxn. 952.

Tennessee.

In Tennessee inquiry into irregularities occurring before judgment of condemnation and order of sale is precluded, unless shown to have been previously paid; otherwise as to subsequent irregularities. Douglass v. Mumford, 7 Baxt. 415; Sampson v. Marr, 7 Baxt. 486; Tharp v. Hart, 2 Sneed, 570; Henderson v. Startitt, 4 Sneed, 472; 2 Desty, Taxn. 955. 2 J. R. A.

Texas.

A tax deed is of no force unless accompanied by proof of a valid sale by virtue of which the deed was executed. Caldier v. Hamsey, 65 Tex. 218.

Independent of constitutional and statutory law, a tax deed does not affect the title, unless the authority of the maker of the deed is shown by proof of performance of all precedent requisites. Meredith v. Coker, 65 Tex. 29.

West Virginia.

The material fact stated in the deed that the land was taxed in the name of a certain named party, while prima facie true, may be contradicted by the sheriff's report of sales. Dequasie v. Harris, 16 W. Va. 345.

Wisconsin.

A tax deed issued by the county clerk to the county, duly witnessed and acknowledged, is presumptive evidence of the regularity of all the proceedings, from the valuation of the land by the assessor up to and including the execution of the deed, and may be recorded with like effect as other conveyances of land. Bemis v. Weege, 67 Wis. 437.

It is prima facie evidence of title although it fails to show the year the taxes were delinquent. Marshall v. Benson, 48 Wis. 553; 2 Desty, Taxn. 952.

It is conclusive of the existence of the contingency which authorizes a deputy to perform the duties of the clerk. Huey v. Van Wie, 23 Wis. 612; 2 Desty, Taxn. 955.

A tax deed after the expiration of the statutory period of limitation is conclusive of the regularity of the proceedings upon which it is based only in cases where the lands were taxable by the town or other taxing district whose authorities assumed to levy the tax. Smith v. Sherry, 54 Wis. 114; Black, Tax Titles, 257.

Under the General Laws of Wisconsin of 1861, a tax deed given on a sale for taxes, but which included an illegal charge of five cents for a stamp, becomes conclusive evidence of title after three years from recording the deed. Geekle v. Kirby Carpenter Co. 106 U. S. 379 (27 L. ed. 137).

E. Portland, 18 Oreg. 271. Both cases were assessments for improving streets, and the statutes under which they were made required that they should be entered in a record, called the "Docket of City Liens," in the name of the owner of the property. In the first case the name of the father of the owner was used, and in the second one the property was assessed to the estate of a deceased person. The court held the assessment void, because they were not entered in the docket in the name of the true owner.

The warrant for the collection of a delinquent tax requires the sheriff to make the tax out of the personal property of the delinquent. Comp. 1887, § 2814.

But how can this command be obeyed unless the assessment is made to the owner of the property? So far, the tax is a personal charge, to be enforced by the sale of the owner's goods and chattels, if any be found. If the real property of A may be assessed to B, then the personal property of B may be taken and sold to pay the tax on the real property of A; which could never have been the intention of the Legislature.

Something remains to be said concerning the legal effect of the sheriff's deed to the plaintiff.

By the law in force when this sale was made such deed was prima facie evidence of the regularity of the prior proceedings, which presumption could not, as to the assessment, be overcome except by proof that the same was fraudulent. Comp. 1874, p. 767, § 90.

An assessment cannot be considered fraudulent simply because, so far as appears, the assessor has ignorantly or carelessly assessed the property to the wrong person as owner. Marz v. Hanthorn, 12 Sawy. 374.

The Legislature may make a tax deed conclusive evidence of the regularity of all such prior proceedings as are mere matters of expediency—acts which might have been dispensed with in the first place. And in my judgment the entry of property on the assessment roll in or to the name of the owner is one of them. Marz v. Hanthorn, 12 Sawy. 374, 375.

It follows from these premises, that when the State sold this lot to the plaintiff it contracted with him that the legal effect of his deed should not be changed or overcome by proof that the property was assessed, without fraud, to the wrong person as owner.

The Act of February 21, 1887 (Comp. 1887, § 2823), makes the sheriff's deed prima facie evidence only of the regularity of the prior proceedings, and therefore it may be overcome by proof to the contrary in any respect—as that the property was assessed, without fraud, in the name of a person who was not the true owner. In this respect the Act of 1887, if held applicable to the plaintiff's deed, would change its legal effect as a muniment of title, and so far impair the obligation of the contract with him, contrary to the Constitution of the United States. Marz v. Hanthorn, 12 Sawy. 376.

Nor is it material that the deed was not executed until after the passage of the Act of 1887. The contract of the State with the plaintiff arose out of the circumstances of the sale and the law then in force and applicable to the transaction.

I am aware that the majority of the supreme court of the State, in Stroble v. Washer, 16 Pac. Rep. 928, since the decision of this court in Marz v. Hanthorn, supra, but apparently without being aware of it, have decided this question otherwise. But the question is a federal one, and the national instead of the local courts give the law on the subject. I admit that there is no question but that the Legislature may shift the burden of proof between the purchaser and the delinquent taxpayer. But this is not that case. The section 90, supra, closed the door against all further proof and said in effect that no evidence should ever be received to impair the legal effect or operation of the deed in this respect.

A deed given by the State on such a legislative assurance is a contract, a warranty against the existence of any such defect in the prior proceedings, which the State cannot vary or impair.

But by the voluntary stipulation of the parties it is admitted that certain facts exist which, in the judgment of the court, show that the property was not assessed to the true owner, and that therefore the assessment is invalid. The plaintiff thereby waived the conclusive effect of his deed in this respect and practically admitted that if, upon the facts stated, the defendant was not, in the judgment of the court, the owner of the property within the purview of the tax law, the assessment was invalid and his deed void.

A finding of fact will be filed, to the effect that the tax was not paid by the defendant and that the assessment was made to the defendant as owner, when R. Glisan was the true owner, and of law that the defendant is entitled to the possession of the premises, and a judgment in bar of the action, and for costs.

MARYLAND COURT OF APPEALS.

Elizabeth ATTRILL, Appt.,

v.

Collis P. HUNTINGTON.

(....Md....)

1. The liability imposed on the officers of

NOTE.—Penal laws of foreign State not enforceable.

The courts of no country execute the penal laws of another. The Antelope, 23 U. S. 10 Wheat. 60, 123; 6 L. ed. 268, 232.

The only cases in which the Courts of the United States have entertained suits by a foreign State have been to enforce demands of a strictly civil nature. The Sapphire, 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 164; 20 L. ed. 127; King of Spain v. Oliver, 2 Wash. C. C. 429.

The rule that the courts of no country execute

The rule that the courts of no country execute

2. A judgment rendered in one State for the debt of a corporation against one of its directors, under a statute making them individually liable for such debts by reason of making a false certificate, cannot be enforced in another State; the nature of the original claim, being for a penalty, is not changed by its reduction to a judgment.

3. A judgment against a director of a corporation for a corporate debt, based on his liability as director under the New York Act of 1875, by reason of having made a false certificate, merges a claim for the same debt against him as a stockholder.

4. A defense of the Statute of Limitations properly arises under a demurrer when the facts creating the bar are shown by the complaint.

(Stone and McSherry, JJ., dissent.)

(February 8, 1892.)

APPEAL by defendant, from an order of the Baltimore City Circuit Court overruling a demurrer to a bill filed to set aside certain transfers of stock. Reversed.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Argued before Alvey, Ch. J., Miller, Irving, Stone, Yellott, Bryan and McSherry, JJ.

Messrs. S. Teachle Wallis and William A. Fisher, for appellant:

The cause of action was for a penalty.

Merchants Bank v. Bliss, 85 N. Y. 412; Wiles v. Suydam, 64 N. Y. 176, 177; Voeder v. Baker, 88 N. Y. 159; Stokes v. Stickney, 96 N. Y. 328.

The New York Court held the statute to be penal, and regarded the judgment in controversy to be the enforcement of a penalty. It is so regarded by the Maryland Court.

First Nat. Bank v. Price, 28 Md. 492, 493, 494, 499.

The 21st section of the New York Act being of a penal nature, it had no operation in Maryland, and "could not be taken notice of" by her courts. Ibid.

It was simply nonexistent here, and could present no obstacle to any assignment which Mr. Attrill might think proper to make.

Story, Conf. L. §§ 7, 92, note a; Whart. Conf. L. §§ 4, 888; Cook, Stock & Stockh. § 218, notes 1, 2, 3; Fitch v. Conn., 100 U. S. 576 (27 L. ed. 969, 969); Scoville v. Canfield, 14 Johns. 340; Folliott v. Ogden, 1 H. Bl. 185; Ogden v. Folliott, 3 T. R. 788; King of Two Sicilies v. Wilcox, 1 Sim. N. S. 830, 831; Brigham v. Claffin, 31 Wis. 607.

The acts denounced by the 21st section are criminal and the penalty is a punishment.

Shaler & H. Quarry Co. v. Bliss, 84 Barb. 809; Mitchell v. Hotchkiss, 48 Conn. 18, 19, 20; Thomp. Liability of Officers, pp. 417, 427, 431-433; U. S. v. Lathrop, 17 Johns. 8, 9; Story, Conf. L. §§ 620, 621, 625 a.

Whenever justice requires it, a judgment will be treated as only the former cause of action in a new form.

Freem. Judgm. § 244; Owens v. Bowie, 2 Md. 457.

Courts will not enforce foreign judgments rendered upon a cause of action of a penal nature.

Story, Conf. L. p. 620; Piggott, Foreign Judgm. p. 209; Bar, Internat. L. 574, 575; Westlake, Internat. L. § 468; 2 Kamea, Eq. 826, 856; Wisconsin v. Pelican Ins. Co. 127 U. S. 289-291 (33 L. ed. 289).

Messrs. John E. Cowen and E. J. D. Cross for appellee.

Bryan, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Collis P. Huntington filed a bill in equity to set aside certain transfers of stock made by Henry Y. Attrill. They were made to himself as trustee for his wife and daughters. The present appeal involves the stock transferred for the benefit of Elizabeth Attrill, the appellant, who is one of his daughters.

It is alleged in the bill of complaint that Attrill made these transfers of stock without valuable consideration, and with intent to delay, hinder and defraud his creditors, and especially the complainant, who is alleged to be a creditor. The bill is filed by the complainant in his own behalf to procure the payment of his own debt. No other creditor has been made a party to the suit, and no claims against this stock are presented for adjudication except those asserted by the complainant in his own interest.

The bill shows that the complainant in June, 1886, recovered against Attrill and one Souther a judgment for nearly $100,000 in the Supreme the penal laws of another applies, not only to prosecutions and sentences for crimes and misdemeanors, but to all suits in favor of the State for the recovery of pecuniary penalties for any violation of statutes for the protection of its revenue, or other municipal laws, and to all judgments for such penalties. Whart. Conf. L. § 888; Westlake, Internat. L. 1st ed. § 888; Piggott, Foreign Judgm. 209, 220.

The application of the rule to the courts of the several States and of the United States is not affected by the provisions of the Constitution and of the Act of Congress, by which the judgments of the courts of any State are to have such faith and credit given to them in every court within the United States as they have by law or usage in the State in which they were rendered. Const. art. 4, § 1; Act May 26, 1790, chap. 11, § 1 Stat. at L. 128; Rev. Stat. § 806.

Foreign judgments; force and effect of.

Judgments recovered in one State of the Union, when proved in the courts of another government, whether state or national, within the United States, differ from judgments recovered in a foreign country in no other respect than in not being re-examinable on their merits, or impeachable for fraud in obtaining them, if rendered by a court having ju-

2 L. R. A.

ri
D

pe
of se
in oi la
Q
W ol as di pi

w tt
O
M
v.
tc

Si
oi
m

(10 L. ed. 177, 189.)

Court of New York for the County of Kings. And it is alleged that the cause of action on which the judgment was rendered arose in June, 1880, and was in this wise: that a certain corporation had been formed under the laws of New York, entitled "The Rockaway Beach Improvement Company, Limited," of which the said Attrill was an incorporator and director; that the complainant loaned the said corporation $100,000 to be repaid on demand; that only $982 of this sum has been repaid; that the amount of the capital stock of the corporation was $700,000; that Attrill, as director of the corporation, signed and verified by his oath a certain certificate under the Statutes of New York, stating that the full amount of the capital stock of the corporation, to wit: the sum of $700,000, had been paid in; that said Attrill when he signed and swore to said certificate knew that it was false; and that the law of New York made Attrill liable to pay the debts of the corporation by reason of his making under oath said false certificate.

An exemplification of the judgment was filed with the bill of complaint. It showed that judgment was demanded and obtained against Attrill and Soutter on the ground that they had made the false certificate under oath. We were informed at the argument that, by agreement of counsel, the New York Statute was to be considered as set forth in the bill. A demurrer was filed by the defendant, which was overruled by the court below.

The 21st section of the statute is in these words: "If any certificate or report made, or public notice given, by the officers of any such corporation, shall be false in any material representation, all the officers who shall have signed the same shall be jointly and severally liable for all the debts of the corporation contracted while they are officers thereof." Act 1875, chap. 611, N. Y.

For doing any of these forbidden acts the officers of a corporation are made liable for its debts. No inquiry is to be made whether the creditor has been deceived, and induced by deception to lend his money or to give credit, or whether he has incurred loss to any extent by the inability of the corporation to pay; nor is the recovery limited to the amount of the loss sustained. All that is necessary to show is that the act has been committed, and thereupon any creditor is entitled to recover the full amount of his debt.

In an action for an injury to the person or property of an individual, it must be first shown that his rights have been invaded, and then the extent of the damage must be shown. It is true that in some cases the law allows a recovery far beyond the amount of actual damage, as where the injury was inflicted from fraudulent or malicious motives; but in these cases the recovery is founded on the injury to rights of person or property, and the circumstances which justify an exceptional measure of damages must be proved in evidence. There is a very marked and obvious difference between these cases and a case where a statute enacts that because of the commission of a certain act, without reference to any other circumstance, a party shall incur a liability. Because thou hast done this thing, thou shalt pay the debts of another.

It is extremely difficult to conceive that the statute was not intended to provide a punishment for the obnoxious acts. The payment of a sum of money which a party would not otherwise be obliged to pay is no less a punishment because it is inflicted through the medium of a civil suit instead of criminal prosecution. And such has been the uniform opinion of the courts of the State where this statute was enacted.
3 L. R. A.

In Merchants Bank v. Bliss, 85 N. Y. 412, an action was brought against the defendants, as trustees of a corporation created under the General Act of 1848, to recover a debt due to the plaintiffs from the corporation; and the question was whether the action was barred by limitations. The Code prescribed six years as the period of limitations where the action was upon a liability created by statute other than a penalty or forfeiture, and three years for "an action upon a statute for a penalty or forfeiture where action is given to the party aggrieved."

The defendants were alleged to be liable under the 12th and 18th sections of the Act. The 12th section required every corporation organized under the Act to make a report annually within twenty days from the first of January, stating the amount of capital and the proportion actually paid in, and the amount of existing debts; and provided that "If any of said companies shall fail so to do, all the trustees of the company shall be jointly and severally liable for all the debts of the company then existing, and for all that shall be contracted before such report shall be made." The 18th section enacted that "If the trustees of any such company shall declare and pay any dividend, the payment of which would render it insolvent, or which would diminish the amount of its capital stock, they shall be jointly and severally liable for all the debts of the company then existing, and for all that shall thereafter be contracted while they shall respectively continue in office." We will quote somewhat freely from the opinion of the court:

"Under these sections the trustees are declared to be jointly and severally liable for all the debts of the company in case of a violation of their provisions. The liability, it must be observed, is not limited to the injury or damage sustained by the creditors in consequence of the violation; but upon failure to file the report, or upon making a prohibited dividend, however small or trifling the amount, the trustees are subjected to the payment of the whole amount of the debts of the company then existing, and for all that shall be contracted, in the one case before the report shall be made, and in the other while they shall respectively continue in office. These provisions appear to be severely punitive, inflicted on grounds of public policy, for the protection of creditors and the prevention of frauds upon the public in respect to the financial condition of such corporations. It is clear that the liability of the trustees is not imposed as an indemnity, because it has no relation to the actual loss or injury sustained by the party in whose favor the action is given. The action depends wholly upon the statute. There never was any such remedy, or cause of action, in whole or in part, at common law. If any action could have been maintained at common law for either of the causes mentioned in sections 12 and 18 of the General Act in relation to manufacturing corporations, it could extend only to the actual damages or injury sustained. But those elements have nothing to do with the actions given by these sections. Nor, indeed, is it necessary that the creditor should have sustained any injury or damage by reason of a violation of these sections. It is sufficient that the party prosecuting the action should be a creditor when the violation of the law takes place. The right of action is given to the creditors, and they must be held to be the parties aggrieved.

"For these reasons I am satisfied that the sections 12 and 13 impose a penalty, or a disability in that nature, to which the shorter limitation of three years applies."

In Stokes v. Stickney, 96 N. Y. 823, this decision was fully approved. Referring to what was said in reference to the 12th section, the court said: "Since that decision, the subject of actions under that section of the statute has frequently been under the consideration of this court, with the uniform conclusion that the actions therein provided for are penal in their character, and are not in any respect based upon the theory of affording compensation to the injured party for damages sustained by reason of the omission complained of." And they quote a number of decisions of their own court.

In this State, in construing a similar provision in a statute, it was held "that the liability of the director was not one arising upon contract, but one imposed upon him by the statute as a wrong doer, and therefore in the nature of a penalty." First Nat. Bank v. Price, 33 Md. 496.

Section 10 of the New York Act of 1848 makes the stockholders of every company incorporated under its provisions individually liable to the creditors of the company in a sum equal to the amount of their stock, until the whole of the capital stock is paid in and a certificate thereof is made and recorded. A distinction is well established by the decisions between this liability and that imposed by the 12th section of the Act. In the former case the statute withdraws from the stockholders the protection of the corporate character, and leaves them liable as copartners to the amount of their stock. In the latter case the liability is created by statute, and is in the nature of a penalty imposed for neglect of duty. Wiles v. Suydam, 64 N. Y. 176.

The distinction is mentioned in the Plymouth Bank Case, 33 Md. 493, and many cases are there cited which maintain it. It is also approved by the Supreme Court of the United States in Flash v. Conn, 109 U. S. 876 [27 L. ed. 968], and Chase v. Curtis, 118 U. S. 452 [28 L. ed. 1038], and in Norris v. Wrenschall, 84 Md. 492, but in the last case all the reasoning and illustrations of the New York Cases are not adopted.

We think that we must hold that the liability imposed by the 21st section of the New York Act of 1875 is a penalty. If this be so, it cannot be enforced in this State. Upon this point the authorities agree with great harmony. In the case of the Plymouth Bank this court said: "It is well settled that no State will enforce penalties imposed by the laws of other States; such laws are universally considered as having no extraterritorial operation."

2 L. R. A

The same doctrine has recently been declared by the Supreme Court of the United States. Flash v. Conn, 109 U. S. 876 [27 L. ed. 968]; Wisconsin v. Pelican Ins. Co. 127 U. S. 290 [32 L. ed. 239].

We must, however, notice the fact that a judgment has been obtained for this penalty. A judgment merges the original cause of action, so that a suit cannot be again maintained upon it; it is also conclusive evidence of its existence in the form, and under the circumstances stated in the pleadings. In the classification of legal subjects it is called a debt of record, because of the obligation to pay it, which is imposed on the party against whom it is rendered. But the nature of a transaction is not changed by the reduction of it to a judgment. If we could suppose that a judgment was obtained on a contract to commit murder, would anyone maintain that the judgment had removed the turpitude of the contract? Or that the law would mitigate its condemnation of a grievous crime because of a change in the form with which it was clothed? It is unnecessary to pursue this subject, because the Supreme Court of the United States has recently decided the question here presented.

In Wisconsin v. Pelican Insurance Company, 127 U. S. 292, 298 [32 L. ed. 239], a suit was brought on a judgment for a penalty, and it was decided that the judgment, in its essential nature and real foundation, was the same as the original cause of action, and that a suit could not be maintained upon it beyond the limits of the State in which it was rendered.

It is alleged in the bill of complaint that the above mentioned corporation was dissolved in March, 1883, by a judgment of a court in New York; that at the time of its dissolution it "was indebted to the plaintiff and to other creditors to an amount far in excess of its assets; that by the law of the State of New York, all the stockholders of the company were liable to pay all the debts, each to the amount of the stock held by him; and the defendant Henry Y. Attrill was liable at said date, and on the 14th day of April, 1883, as such stockholder and to the amount of $340,000, the amount of stock held by him, and was on both said dates also severally and directly liable as a director, having signed the false report above mentioned, for all the debts of said company, contracted between the 26th day of February, 1880, and the 29th day of January, 1881, which debts aggregate to more than the whole value of the property owned by Attrill."

This liability is asserted to exist independently of the judgment. It cannot be maintained on the New York Statute already mentioned, because by the 25th section, a stockholder is not personally liable for a debt of the corporation, except in cases where an action to recover it has been brought against the corporation within two years after it became due; and here no such action has been brought. The judgment against Attrill for having made the false report certainly merges all right of action against him on this account. But let us assume that Attrill was liable at the times mentioned in this clause of the bill of complaint and on the grounds therein stated. This liability is barred by the Maryland Statute of Limitations; and this defense properly arises under the demurrer filed in this case. Belt v. Bowie, 65 Md. 355, 3 Cent. Rep. 727.

Upon the whole, it appears to us that the complainant has no cause of action which he can maintain in this State.

Order reversed and bill dismissed.

Stone, J. (with whom concurs McSherry, J.), dissenting:

It is with some diffidence that I venture to differ in this case from the majority of the court. I look upon the principal point as a federal question, and am governed in my views more by my understanding of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States than by the decisions of the state courts.

The Act of Congress made in pursuance of the Constitution provides that the judgments rendered by the state courts "shall have such faith and credit given to them in every court within the United States as they have by law or usage in the courts of the State from whence said records are or shall be taken."

Notwithstanding the comprehensive language here used, several limitations have been made by the decisions of the supreme court to the effect of such judgments.

The only one necessary to mention, and which affects this case, is that stated by Judge Marshall in the case of The Antelope, that "The courts of no country execute the penal laws of another."

I concede to the fullest extent that rule; but the question remains, What are the penal laws of a State, and does this case come properly within that rule?

In the case of Wisconsin v. Pelican Insurance Company, 127 U. S. 265 [83 L. ed. 239], the State of Wisconsin instituted a suit in the Supreme Court of the United States upon a judgment recovered in one of her own courts against the Pelican Insurance Company, a Louisiana corporation, for penalties imposed by a Wisconsin Statute for not making the returns to the insurance commissioner as required by law. By the Wisconsin Statute every foreign insurance company doing business in that State was required to deposit in January of each year in the office of the insurance commissioner a statement of the business of the corporation, and in default thereof it should forfeit $500 a month, for every month it should continue to do business after such default; and it was made the duty of the insurance commissioner to institute suit for such forfeiture in the name of the State, and one half of the sum recovered by such suit was to be paid into the state treasury, and the other half to the insurance commissioner to pay the costs.

Under this Act a judgment was recovered by the State of Wisconsin against the Pelican Insurance Company, which the State attempted to enforce in the supreme court by action brought there.

This the supreme court decided could not be done, and says, in the decision:

"The Statute of Wisconsin under which the State recovered in one of her own courts the judgment now here sued on was in the strictest sense a penal statute imposing a penalty upon any insurance company of another State, doing business in the State of Wisconsin, without having deposited with the proper officer of the 3 L. R. A.

State a full statement of its property and business during the previous year."

"The cause of action was not any private injury, but solely the offense committed against the State by violating her law. The prosecution was in the name of the State, and the whole penalty when recovered would accrue to the State, and to be paid, one half into her treasury, and the other half to her insurance commissioner, who pays all expenses of prosecuting for and collecting such forfeiture." "It is immaterial whether by the law of Wisconsin the prosecution must be by indictment or by action." "In whatever form the State pursues her right to punish the offense against her sovereignty, every step of the proceeding tends to one end: the compelling the offender to pay a pecuniary fine by way of punishment for the offense."

The court in the same case also says: "The rule that the courts of no country execute the penal laws of another applies, not only to prosecutions and sentences for crimes and misdemeanors, but to all suits in favor of the State for the recovery of pecuniary penalties for any violation of statutes for the protection of its revenue or other municipal laws, and to all judgments for such penalties."

It will be readily seen from these extracts that the supreme court in this opinion, so much relied on, does not extend the rule (that no country will execute the penal laws of another) beyond suits brought in the name of the State for the recovery of penalties for an infraction of its revenue or municipal laws, and was careful to state in the paragraph just quoted that the cause of action was not any private injury but solely the offense committed against the State.

I think the cause of this careful definition of what actions come within the rule can easily be found in the previous decisions of the same court.

By a statute of Connecticut it was provided that the president and secretary of each corporation organized under their law should annually, in January and July, make a statement of its affairs and deposit it with the town clerk; and if that duty was intentionally neglected, or refused to be performed, the officer so neglecting should be liable for all debts of the corporation contracted during the period of such neglect. A creditor of the corporation sued the president under this Act for a debt due to him by the corporation, in the Circuit Court of the United States, and the case, Providence Steam Engine Company v. Hubbard, 101 U. S. 188 [25 L. ed. 786], went eventually to the Supreme Court of the United States. In deciding the case the supreme court said that the statute was penal and must be strictly construed, but affirmed the judgment of the circuit court upon the ground of insufficient proof against the president.

So in Chase v. Curtis, 118 U. S. 452 [29 L. ed. 1038], the action was brought in the Circuit Court of the United States upon a judgment recovered by the creditor of a corporation against the trustees of a corporation, and the facts are somewhat similar to those in the Connecticut Case. By a statute of New York the trustees of certain corporations were required to file reports of the condition of such corporations, and upon failure to do so the trustees were made liable for the debts of the corporation. Suit was brought against trustees and judgment was recovered. Action was brought on that judgment and the case went to the supreme court.

That court decided that the action was penal and must be construed strictly, and decided that the judgment itself was not in that case sufficient evidence of the debt; and the judgment was given for defendants.

One purpose for which I have cited these cases is to show the different meaning that the supreme court has given to the word penal. In the two last cited cases the supreme court declared in unmistakable terms that the statutes under which the cases were brought were penal statutes, and must be construed strictly, and yet they entertained jurisdiction and decided the cases upon their merits.

In the case just cited (127 U. S.) the court said that the statute was penal and refused to entertain jurisdiction. That court evidently used the term penal in two different senses. The term penal seems to be applied rather indiscriminately to both criminal and civil laws; but I think that the court has given us a rule by which we can determine what cases come within the rule that no country will execute the penal laws of another. It says in the quotation from 127 U. S., heretofore given, that the rule covers crimes and misdemeanors and actions brought by the State for an infraction of its laws. But where the state law gives an individual the right to recover damages or claims for the nonobservance by other individuals or corporations of its laws, such infractions do not come within the rule.

But it is argued that the case of First Nat. Bank v. Price, 38 Md. 487, is decisive of this; and although this suit is upon a judgment and Price's Case was not, the essential nature of a case is not changed by a judgment. I think the determination in Price's Case was correct, although I think the reasons assigned are not in accord with the decisions of the supreme court. I think the decision in Price's Case was correct, because no State is bound by the rules of comity or convenience to try cases ex delicto arising under purely local statutes of another State, and unknown to the common law; and that was Price's Case.

I think the Supreme Court, in 127 U. S., meant to confine the operation of the rule that no country will execute the penal laws of another, to such laws as are properly classed as criminal. It is not very easy to give any brief definition of a criminal law; it may perhaps be enough to say that in general all breaches of duty that confer no rights upon an individual or person and which the State alone can take cognizance of, are in their nature criminal, and that all such come within the rule. But laws which, while imposing a duty, at the same time confer a right upon the citizens, to claim damages for its nonperformance, are not criminal. If all the laws of the latter description are held penal, in the sense of criminal, that clause in the Constitution which relates to records and judgments is of comparatively little value.

There is a large and constantly increasing number of cases that may in one sense be termed penal, but can in no sense be classed as criminal. Examples of these may be found in suits for damages for negligence in causing death, for double damages for the injury to stock, where railroads have neglected the state laws for fencing in their tracts, and the liability of officers of corporations for the debts of the company by reason of their neglect of a plain duty imposed by statute.

I cannot think that judgments on such claims are not within the protection given by the Constitution of the United States.

I therefore think the order in this case should be affirmed. I have merely ventured to state my conclusions without any attempt even at an elaborate argument or citation of authorities. These views have been, I think, sustained by several of the state courts, but I have only thought it necessary to refer to the decisions of the supreme court, as I think the question a federal one.

MINNESOTA SUPREME COURT.

Mary BENTZ, Resp't.,

v.

NORTH WESTERN AID ASSOCIATION,
Appt.

(....Minn.....)

*1. When a mutual benefit life insurance association incorporated under the laws of this State, and dependent upon securing such amounts as may be required to meet and liquidate death claims through assessments upon its members, refuses to make an assessment in a proper case, the remedy is by an action for a breach of contract.

2. Measure of damages. Unless the defendant association alleges in its answer and, on trial, *Head notes by COLLINS, J.

NOTE.—See Jackson v N. W. Mut. Relief Assn., post, 786; Burdon v. Mass. Safety Fund Assn. (Mass.) 1 L. R. A. 146 and note.

2 L. R. A.

establishes that the amount should be less, because all members do not respond to assessments, the measure of damages in such cases is the amount assessable upon all insured.

3. In an action to recover the amount claimed to be due upon a policy or certificate issued by such an association, it answered, by way of defense, that the assured had used alcoholic liquor to such an extent, subsequent to the issuance of the certificate, as to induce delirium tremens, and that such disease was the cause of death. On the trial it offered little or no evidence to sustain the allegations, but relied upon two affidavits made by physicians as to the cause of the death, in one of which the cause was stated as delirium tremens, in the other as hemorrhages induced by an excessive use of intoxicants. These affidavits were made by the physicians on blanks furnished by the association, and were forwarded to it by plaintiff with other proofs of the death of the assured. Held, that the plaintiff beneficiary was neither concluded nor estopped upon the trial by the statements of the physicians and that the issue made by the pleadings as to the real cause of the death was triable as any other issue of fact.

(March 6, 1889.)

APPEAL by defendant, from an order of the Special Term of the Hennepin County District Court (Rea, J.), refusing to grant a new trial in an action brought to recover the amount alleged to be due upon a certificate of membership in a mutual aid association in which judgment had been rendered for plaintiff. Affirmed.

The facts are sufficiently stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Keith, Evans, Thompson & Fairchild, for appellant:

On appellant's wrongful failure or refusal to levy an assessment, the proper remedy was an action for specific performance, to compel that to be done which the appellant had agreed to do. Such an action is not one at law in those States where the distinction between law and equity cases is recognized, and is not an action for the recovery of money only.

Smith v. Covenant Mut. Ben. Asso. 24 Fed. Rep. 685; Bailey v. Mut. Ben. Asso. 71 Iowa, 689; Ball v. Granite State Mut. Aid Asso. (N. H.) 4 New Eng. Rep. 289; Re Appeal of La Solidaire, 15 Ins. L. J. 399; Newman v. Covenant Mut. Ben. Asso. 72 Iowa, 242; Tobin v. Western Mut. Aid Asso. 72 Iowa, 261; Rainsbarger v. Union Mut. Aid Asso. 72 Iowa, 191; Garretson v. Equitable Mut. L. & E. Asso. (Iowa), 88 N. W. Rep. 127.

Mr. Charles A. Ebert for respondent.

Collins, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

October 2, 1886, one William Bentz became a member of the defendant association and so continued until his death, June 21, 1887.

The plaintiff, his widow, is named as the beneficiary in the certificate or policy of insurance issued to the deceased when he joined the association.

1. If plaintiff has chosen the proper remedy, an issue of fact is presented by the pleadings in an action for the recovery of money only, and the defendant is in error when insisting that upon its failure or refusal to levy an assessment with the proceeds of which it could meet and liquidate plaintiff's claim, she could only resort to equity and compel an assessment. This position is based upon the provision in the certificate that "upon receipt at the principal office of this association of satisfactory proofs on blanks furnished from said office, of the death . . . of said William Bentz this association will pay the said Mary Bentz or to the legal heirs of said William Bentz, 75 per cent of the net proceeds of one full assessment at schedule rates upon all the certificate holders in good standing in this association at the date of said death . . . not, however, to exceed $2,000, to be paid within ten (10) days after the closing of the assessment for the same."

In holding that appellant's contention is not well grounded and must be rejected, that an action at law may be maintained in case of the refusal of an association to make an assessment for reasons of the character alleged in the answer herein, we are conscious of the diversity of opinion upon the question and that a number of very respectable courts have held to the contrary—many in which it is determined that when the officers of an association of this nature refuse to make an assessment to meet a death claim, appropriate proceedings must first be taken to compel a performance of this duty; and that a judgment for money without regard to an assessment, or to the amount which might be collected on an assessment, cannot be sustained.

But, upon the other hand, the authorities are numerous, and of high character, that such an association is liable to suit for a breach of contract when it refuses to make the required assessment, the measure of damages being the amount assessable upon all insured, unless the defendant alleges in its answer and by proof establishes the fact that it should be less (Freeman v. Nat. Ben. Society, 42 Hun, 253; Lueders v. Hartford L. & A. Ins. Co. 4 McCrary, 149; Elkhart Mut. Aid Ben. & Relief Asso. v. Houghton, 108 Ind. 286, 1 West. Rep. 284; Taylor v. Nat. Temperance Relief Union, 94 Mo. 85, 12 West. Rep. 92; Burland v. Northwestern Mut. Ben. Asso. 47 Mich. 424); and we think this view very clearly foreshadowed in Kerr v. Minnesota Mutual Benefit Association, 89 N. W. Rep. 812.

In this State these associations are incorporated. We see no reason why a corporation of this character should be exempt from a common-law liability for a breach of its contract—as would a natural person and other kinds of corporation—when it refuses to assess its members to meet a proper claim. In many of the adjudicated cases in which it has been held that the remedy for such refusal is in equity, the insuperable objection to an action at law seems to have been in the difficulty of establishing a proper measure of damages when the contract is not absolute to pay a certain sum, but only the amount realized by an assessment of the living members, none of whom may answer to the call. There is force in the objection; but to give it much weight it must first be assumed that some members will not respond to assessments as they have customarily done, and will ignore the demand in particular instances. Such delinquencies should not be presumed, and if they really exist—if any number of members are habitually in default—the percentage can easily be shown by the defendant association upon the trial.

The adoption of this rule will do no injustice, and the amounts recovered in this class of actions come quite as near just compensation—approach as closely to what a beneficiary should recover and an association pay—as the sums ordinarily recovered as damages for failure to observe the terms of contract.

2. To defend plaintiff's claim, the defendant set up in its answer that, when making application for a certificate of membership, the deceased falsely answered certain questions propounded to him as to the state of his health and as to his habit regarding the use of intoxicants, which were material, and which, had they been truthfully answered, would have prevented his becoming a member of the association; and that subsequently to the issuance of his certificate, he used alcoholic liquors to such an extent as to induce delirium tremens, from which disease, it is averred, he died.

Issue was taken upon this defensive matter found in the answer; and it might reasonably be expected that defendant would be prepared with testimony to sustain the charges, if available. But it offered very little testimony relating to such a defense, resting and relying upon statements as to the cause of death found in the proofs made out by attending physicians, duly verified by their oaths, and forwarded by the plaintiff soon after her husband's decease.

These proofs were made out upon blanks furnished by defendant in accordance with a clause found in the certificate, which provides for an assessment to meet a claim on being furnished "satisfactory proofs, on blanks, furnished from the principal office of the association, of the death" of the assured. In one of these, the cause of death was stated as delirium tremens, in another that when the affiant was called professionally the deceased "was on the verge of delirium tremens," while from the third it appeared that death was attributable to hemorrhage from the lungs.

These affidavits of the physicians were put in evidence by the plaintiff to substantiate an allegation of the complaint denied in the answer—that satisfactory proofs of death had been made to the association. Defendant now insists that by them, or rather by those which stated directly and by inference that death was caused by delirium tremens, the plaintiff is concluded; that not only had she no right to demand an assessment upon the members, but that she cannot maintain this action without first procuring the amendment of the proofs as to the cause of death. If this be so, the beneficiary's right to prosecute in any case wholly depends upon the ability to first obtain proofs which will bear the inspection of the officers of the association, or, failing in this, to secure a change or amendment when objection is made, without regard to the facts. The impracticability of this claim is evident from the condition of the proofs in the case at bar. There is a pronounced disagreement between the physicians, one stating the cause of death to be hemorrhage from the lungs, another as delirium tremens, while the third asserts it to have been a hemorrhage indirectly caused by intemperance. Such dissent between medical men is not unusual, and by what rule for weighing testimony should the real cause of death be determined when "doctors disagree"?

This certificate or policy simply provided for and required satisfactory proofs of death; it did not prescribe the particular kind of proof. The fact of death should be established upon blanks to be furnished by the association and to its satisfaction. It could not arbitrarily determine what would or would not be satisfactory proofs; that is for the court in case of disagreement. Taylor v. Aetna L. Ins. Co. 18 Gray, 484.

When a policy provides that satisfactory proofs of death shall be furnished, it is not essential that the facts and circumstances of the death be set forth in said proofs. Cluff v. Mut. Ben. L. Ins. Co. 99 Mass. 317.

A company cannot arbitrarily object to the sufficiency of proofs. If, however, they disclose a cause of death which excepts the company from liability, it does not derogate from their sufficiency as proofs of death. And while such a disclosure might suggest to the company the propriety of refusing payment, it could be no bar to the bringing of a suit. Charter Oak L. Ins. Co. v. Rodel, 95 U. S. 282 [24 L. ed. 433].

The cause of death of the assured is for the jury, to be determined as any other question of fact, by the evidence produced upon the trial.

8. The plaintiff was not estopped by the mere fact that she had forwarded these affidavits. The physicians were not her agents, nor had she referred the company to them for information. In reply to a question propounded to her, she had given their names as those in attendance during the last sickness of her husband. The affidavits were made ex parte, by persons over whom plaintiff had no control, at defendant's request. They were forwarded upon the advice of its agent, and if plaintiff is to be believed, on his assurance that they were "all right." In this case the plaintiff could show that death was from another cause than that stated in the proofs. The statements therein did not work an estoppel. Keels v. Mutual Reserve Fund L. Assn. 29 Fed. Rep. 198; Sargent v. Home Benefit Assn. 35 Fed. Rep. 711; Parmelee v. Hoffman F. Ins. Co. 54 N. Y. 193.

The court did not err in its refusal to charge, as requested by the defendant, upon the weight the proofs were entitled to in the deliberations of the jurors, and also that they must be considered as admissions of the cause of death. Had occasion required, and for impeaching purposes, they could have been used as the admissions of those who made them.

The order refusing a new trial is affirmed.

WISCONSIN SUPREME COURT.

William T. JACKSON, Appt.,
v.
NORTHWESTERN MUTUAL RELIEF ASSOCIATION.

(.... Wis....)

1. The question whether or not the beneficiary in a policy issued by a mutual benefit

NOTE.—Mutual benefit associations; remedy for refusal to levy assessment to meet death claims.

An action at law can be maintained against the society for a refusal or neglect to make the assessment. And the declaration, among other averments, must association has mistaken his remedy in bringing an action at law to compel an assessment to pay his claim may be raised by demurror.

2. For a substantial breach of the contract contained in a policy issued by a mutual benefit association to pay to a certain person a percentage of an assessment upon its members upon the happening of a certain event, the beneficiary may recover substantial damages in an action at law.

charge a failure or refusal to make the assessment, that if such assessment had been duly made it would have resulted in the collection of the full amount called for by the certificate, and claim that sum for damages for such failure or refusal. If

2. Upon demurrer to a complaint alleging the refusal of a mutual benefit association to make an assessment in accordance with the terms of its contract, and also that plaintiff's share of the assessment would be at least a certain amount in case the assessment was made, the court cannot say, as matter of law, that plaintiff has only sustained nominal damages by reason of such refusal, merely because it may be difficult, in advance of a levy and attempted collection of the assessment, to ascertain the precise damages to which plaintiff is entitled.

(February 19, 1890.)

A PPEAL by plaintiff, from an order of the Iowa County Circuit Court, sustaining a demurrer to the complaint in an action to recover the amount alleged to be due upon a policy issued by a mutual benefit association. Reversed.

Defendant issued to Cordelia Jackson a certificate of membership with her husband, William T. Jackson, the present plaintiff, as beneficiary, which contained the following provision:

"In consideration of the payment of an assessment not to exceed ninety cents on the maturity of the certificate of any other member at the office of the association, within thirty days after due notice thereof, the association upon maturity of this certificate, and within sixty days after the proof and allowance of such claim, upon presentation hereof, will pay the above named member, or in case of death, the beneficiary if living, otherwise the heirs of such member, a benefit in case of . . . maturity by death or by limitation on the 28d day of September A. D. 1926, 80 per cent of an assessment levied and collected therefor, not exceeding $4,000, less any payment before made on account of disability, or any indebtedness due or accrued to the association from such member."

The complaint alleged that Cordelia Jackson died February 13, 1888, having so kept, performed and complied with all the terms and conditions, and paid the assessments made and demanded of her as to keep the certificate of membership in effect up to the time of her death; that defendant was notified of such death; that defendant denied liability and refused to levy an assessment for the benefit of plaintiff as provided for in the policy, and also refused to pay plaintiff any sum whatever on account of the same; that 80 per cent of an assessment upon the members would have amounted to at least $4,000, for which sum defendant became indebted to plaintiff, and it demanded judgment for that amount.

Defendant demurred to this complaint, and the court below sustained the demurrer; whereupon plaintiff appealed.

Further facts appear in the opinion.

Messrs. Spensley & McIlhenn and H. W. Chynoweth, for appellant;

The policy amounts to a contract to pay a certain sum of money.

Neukern v. Northwestern Endowment & L. Assn. 80 Minn. 406; Burland v. Northwestern Mut. Ben. Assn. 47 Mich. 424; Curtis v. Mutual Ben. Life Co. 48 Conn. 98; Kansas Protective Union v. Whitt, 36 Kan. 760.

An action at law can be maintained upon it where defendant denies its liability in  toto  and refuses to make an assessment.

Lueders v. Hartford L. & A. Ins. Co. 12 Fed. Rep. 465; Suppiger v. Covenant Mut. Ben. Assn. 20 Ill. App. 595; Ab Lincoln Mut. L. Assn. v. Miller, 28 Ill. App. 841; Earnshaw v. Sun Mut. Aid Society, 11 Cent. Rep. 508, 68 Md. 465; Taylor v. National Temperance Relief

v. Pine, 85 N. J. Eq. 128; Tobin v. Western Mut. Aid Society, 72 Iowa, 261; Bacon, Benefit Societies, § 453.

The beneficiary cannot, in an action at law against the association on the certificate, recover 2 L. R. A.

collected thereon. Kan. Protective Union v. Whitt, 36 Kan. 760.

An order restricting a general judgment for insurance money against a life insurance company operating on the assessment plan, to assessments

Union, 12 West. Rep. 92, 94 Mo. 35; Freeman v. National Ben. Society, 43 Hun, 252; Hankinson v. Page, 81 Fed. Rep. 189; Elkhart v. Mut. Aid Ben. & R. Assn. v. Houghton, 1 West. Rep. 234, 103 Ind. 286; Supreme Council A. L. of H. v. Anderson, 61 Tex. 300; Niblack, Mutual Benefit Societies, § 892.

Messrs. Burr W. Jones and F. E. Parkinson, for appellee:

The parties to these contracts are bound by the terms of the contract.

Bauer v. Samson Lodge, 103 Ind. 262; Coles v. Iowa State Mut. Ins. Co. 18 Iowa, 425.

By the terms of this contract the plaintiff is bound to look to the mode of payment provided for therein.

The legal effect of these is that no action except in equity to compel an assessment shall be brought.

Bailey v. Mut. Ben. Assn. 71 Iowa, 639; Newman v. Covenant Mut. Ben. Assn. 72 Iowa, 242, 1 L. R. A. 659; Rainsbarger v. Union Mut. Aid Assn. 73 Iowa, 191.

Cassoday, A. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action at law to recover damages for an alleged breach of contract of insurance. There is no claim that the facts alleged do not constitute a binding contract of insurance; nor that they do not show a breach of such contract. The theory of the defendant is that, conceding the validity of the contract and the breach of it, yet that the plaintiff has mistaken his remedy by bringing his action at law instead of proceeding in equity to enforce the assessment mentioned in the contract. If such is the fact, then under the earlier decisions of this court, and since adhered to, the question may be properly raised by demurrer.

The only question presented is, therefore, to be levied, is erroneous. Seltzinger v. New Era L. Assn. 2 Cent. Rep. 307, 111 Pa. 567.

An action brought for the benefit of the beneficiary, not permitted to take under the statute, will not defeat an action by the administrator of the member. Rice v. New England Mut. Aid Society, 5 New Eng. Rep. 616, 146 Mass. 248. See Burdon v. Mass. Safety Fund Assn. (Mass.) 1 L. R. A. 140 note; Bentz v. Northwestern Aid Assn. (Minn.) ante, 784.

Separate actions.

If the interest and cause of action of each of the covenantees appears on the face of the deed to be several, the words will be taken disjunctively, and the covenant will be construed to be a several covenant with each, and each covenantee may bring an action for his particular damage. Lane v. Drinkwater, 1 Crompt. M. & R. 612; James v. Emery, 8 Taunt. 245; Bacon, Benefit Societies, § 452.

But if the amount of the insurance be payable to certain persons equally, there may be a different rule. Covenant Mut. Ben. Assn. v. Hoffman, 110 Ill. 408; Bacon, Benefit Societies, § 452.

If a policy provide for the payment of different sums to different parties, it is improper for the beneficiaries to join in one action to recover the several sums due, but each must bring a separate action his share. Campbell v. National Life Assur. Co. 34 U. C. Q. B. 35; Fraser v. Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. 36 U. C. Q. B. 422; Keary v. Mutual Reserve Fund L. Assn. 30 Fed. Rep. 360; Bacon, Benefit Societies, § 452.

Parties to action.

Where the policy is payable to the assured, "his executors, administrators or assigns," for the express benefit of the wife of the assured and their children, the executrix is the proper person to sue. Mass. Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Robinson, 38 Ill. 924; Grattan v. National L. Ins. Co. 15 Hun, 74; Fairchild v. Northeastern Mut. L. Assn. 51 Vt. 618; Stowe v. ? L. R. A.

whether upon the showing made, an action at law for damages by reason of the breach of contract alleged, can be maintained. The question, it will be observed, is not as to the true amount, or the true measure of damages, but only whether the plaintiff is entitled to substantial damages for such breach. There are certainly authorities to the effect that a bill in equity may be maintained to enforce payment of such certificates by compelling a specific performance of similar contracts through assessments, as stipulated. Covenant Mut. Ben. Assn. v. Sears, 114 Ill. 108; Smith v. Covenant Mut. Ben. Assn. 24 Fed. Rep. 689; Rainsbarger v. Union Mut. Aid Assn. 73 Iowa, 191, 38 N. W. Rep. 626; Tobin v. Western Mut. Aid Society, 72 Iowa, 261.

It has also been held that mandamus is not an appropriate remedy to compel such assessment. Burland v. Northwestern Mut. Ben. Assn. 47 Mich. 424; Excelsior Mut. Aid Assn. v. Riddle, 91 Ind. 84.

The decided weight of authority, however, seems to be to the effect that an action at law to recover damages may be maintained upon such contract for a refusal or neglect to make such assessment. Earnshaw v. Sun Mut. Aid Society, 11 Cent. Rep. 508, 68 Md. 465; Suppiger v. Covenant Mut. Ben. Assn. 20 Bradw. 595; Meakern v. Northwestern Endowment & L. Assn. 30 Minn. 406; Lueders v. Hartford L. & A. Ins. Co. 12 Fed. Rep. 465; Kansas Protective Union v. Whitt, 36 Kan. 760; Kaw Valley Life Assn. v. Lemke, 19 Pac. Rep. 337; Freeman v. National Ben. Society, 43 Hun, 252; Reynolds v. Equitable Accident Assn. 49 Hun, 605, 17 N. Y. S. R. 337, 1 N. Y. Suppl't 788; Elkhart Mut. Aid, Ben. & Relief Assn. v. Houghton, 103 Ind. 286, 1 West. Rep. 234; Burland v. Northwestern Mut. Ben. Assn. supra; Bacon, Benefit Societies, § 453.

Phinney, 2 New Eng. Rep. 74, 78 Maine, 244; Catland v. Hoyt, 2 New Eng. Rep. 596, 78 Maine, 355; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Lucho, 108 U. S. 496 (27 L. ed. 800); Bacon, Benefit Societies, § 452.

In an action by a beneficiary on a life insurance policy, whose claim is to hold the policy as an equitable security, the executor or administrator of the estate, as well as the legatee of the policy, is a necessary party. Shove v. Shove, 69 Wis. 424.

(One for whose benefit a promise is made may sue upon it, though he is not privy to it. Barbaro v. Occidental Grove, No. 16, 4 Mo. App. 422; Beardale v. Morgner, Id. 136; Bacon, Benefit Societies, § 452.)

If a certificate of membership issued by a mutual association expressly covenants to pay to a person named in it, the beneficiary may be considered the covenantee, and is entitled to sue the company in covenant for the amount specified in the certificate. York County, etc. Assn. v. Myers, 11 W. N. C. 541; Bacon, Benefit Societies, § 452.

Rules of pleading.

Where the certificate is issued by the supreme authority, it is in legal effect a policy of life insurance, governed by the rules of pleading applicable to ordinary actions on policies. Elkhart Mut. Aid, Ben. & Relief Assn. v. Houghton, 38 Ind. 149; Bacon, Benefit Societies, § 453.

In an action on a certificate which entitles the beneficiary to the proceeds of an assessment on its members, where it appears that special assessment must be made to obtain funds to pay a loss, plaintiff must aver and prove that such assessment has been made and the amount thereof. Bailey v. Mutual Ben. Assn. 71 Iowa, 639.

In an action by the wife upon a contract of insurance made by her husband, plaintiff need not allege that insured had not directed the money to be paid to any other person, as that is a matter of defense. Laudenschlager v. Northwestern Endowment & L. Assn. 36 Minn. 131.

But to maintain such action at law, such breach must be alleged and proved. Curtis v. Mutual Ben. Life Co. 48 Conn. 98; Taylor v. National Temperance Relief Union, 12 West. Rep. 92, 94 Mo. 85, 6 S. W. Rep. 71.

The principal difference in these two classes of adjudications turns upon the question whether such recovery for such breach of contract is limited to mere nominal damages, or extends to substantial damages. In some of these cases which allow substantial damages, the courts have gone so far as to hold that the beneficiaries may recover the maximum amount named in the contract, unless the defendant shows by pleadings and proof that such sum should be reduced. But, as indicated in some of the other cases cited, the recovery cannot exceed the amount stipulated in the contract.

We make no attempt to analyze the cases, nor to point out any supposed fallacies. We agree with that class of cases which holds, in effect, that for a substantial breach of such contract the beneficiary may recover substantial damages in an action at law.

As indicated in Earnshaw v. Sun Mut. Aid Society, supra, there may be some difficulty as to the true measure of damages and the enforcement of the judgment in case of recovery. So there may be difficulty in obtaining the requisite proof to establish the plaintiff's claim. But these considerations are not before us on this demurrer which concedes the truthfulness of all the allegations of the complaint. The question is one of pleading upon contract.

Under the contract in question the plaintiff was entitled, upon the death of his wife, to 80 per cent of an assessment to be thereupon levied and collected therefor, not exceeding $4,000 less any payment, etc. Upon such death it became the duty of the defendant under the contract to make such levy and collection. According to the allegations of the complaint, it not only neglected and refused to do so, but denied all liability.

It is also alleged, in effect, and of course admitted by the demurrer, that 80 per cent of such assessment "would have amounted to at least $4,000." With this confession before us we cannot hold, as a matter of law, that the plaintiff has only sustained nominal damages by reason of such breach, merely because there may be a total or partial failure of proof, or that it may be difficult, in advance of such levy and attempted collection of such assessment, to ascertain the precise amount of damages which the plaintiff may be entitled to recover. Several of the authorities cited sustain these views. The breach of an agreement to make such levy and collection of such assessment seems to be somewhat similar to the breach of an agreement to insure, upon which actions at law have frequently been sustained.

The order of the Circuit Court is reversed, and the cause is remanded for further proceedings according to law.

NEW YORK COURT OF APPEALS

John Jacob ASTOR et al., Respts.,

v.

NEW YORK ARCADE R. CO., Appt.

(.....N. Y. ....)

1. Under the New York Constitution, art. 3, § 16, providing that no private or local bill shall embrace more than one subject, which shall be expressed in the title, the New York Act of 1878, chap. 108, the title to which indicates but one subject, and that the amendment of prior statutes relating to the transportation of passengers and property through pneumatic tubes by atmospheric pressure, but the provisions of which enlarge the powers of a corporation formed for such purposes by giving authority to operate a grand underground railway not less than fifteen miles long with two or more tracks through passageways eighteen feet in height and thirty-one feet in width, which could not be operated by atmospheric pressure, and with authority, by the con-

NOTE.—Title of statute must fairly suggest subjects dealt with in the Act.

The constitutional provision as to the title of a statute does not require that provisions of the Act which are all germane to the subject expressed in the title should be specified or detailed in the title. Minn. Loan & T. Co. v. Beebe (Minn.) ante, 418.

The title of an Act to amend an Act dividing the State into judicial districts need not show the particulars of the amendment. State v. Algood (Tenn.) 10 S. W. Rep. 310.

The title of an Act, as "An Act to Amend Certain Statutes Mentioned Relating to the Practice of Pharmacy," sufficiently states the substance of the Act, which provides that liquors shall be sold by pharmacists only. State v. Aulman (Iowa) 41 N. W. Rep. 873.

Under Michigan Constitution, art. 4, § 20, providing that no law shall embrace more than one object, which shall be expressed in its title, a new section making it an offense to have burglar's tools in possession, etc., is properly enacted by an Act entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 164 of the Revised Statutes of 1846," being chapter 180 of the Compiled Laws, entitled "Of Offenses Against the Lives and Property of Individuals." People v. Howard (Mich.) 40 N. W. Rep. 780.

The titles of statutes, as "An Act to Charter" a railroad company, and "An Act to Amend an Act

Be
st st be th
to cc sh
th pi
St
St st lo
cc
R so ol bl
el of ti
pi
Pl pr or
Ti

A. see and note.

§ L. R. A.

sent of a board of engineer commissioners, to use horses, steam or any other motive power, is unconstitutional and void.

2. The title to a statute must be such at least as fairly to suggest or give a clue to the subject dealt with in the Act, in order to comply with the constitutional provision that it shall embrace no more than one subject, which shall be expressed in the title.

3. Under the New York Constitutional Amendment which went into effect January 1, 1875, prohibiting the passage of a private or local bill giving to any corporation any exclusive privilege or franchise, the New York Act of 1868, which gives to a corporation the right to a complete occupation of a street for railway purposes, providing a roof over the excavation is left to take the place of the street surface, and to use any motive power which would not permit of the emission of smoke, gas or cinders, is unconstitutional and cannot be supported as an amendment of the Act of 1873 giving the corporation the right to construct a railway in tubes not more than thirty-one feet in width, by eighteen feet in height, exterior measurement, and which should not approach within two feet of the curb line or eighteen feet of the building line of the street. (Per Gray, J.)

4. When the enlargement of corporate powers becomes indistinguishable from a granting of new, substantive rights, a statute attempting to give such powers is within the purview of the New York Constitutional Amendment taking effect January 1, 1875, prohibiting any private or local statute granting any exclusive privileges or franchises to a corporation. (Per Gray, J.)

(March —, 1889.)

A PPEAL by defendant, from a judgment of the General Term of the Supreme Court, First Department, reversing a judgment of the Special Term sustaining a demurrer to the complaint in an action to restrain defendant from creating a public nuisance by the construction and operation of an underground railway in the streets of New York City without authority of law. Affirmed.

The question at issue fully appears in the opinion.

Messrs. Edward B. Thomas, Charles P. Daly, James C. Carter and Delos McCurdy, for appellant:

The title of the Act of 1873 expressed the subject of that Act.

All matters fairly and reasonably connected with the Act, and all measures which will or may facilitate its accomplishment, are proper to be incorporated in the Act, and are germane to the title.

Re Knaust, 2 Cent. Rep. 97, 101 N. Y. 188.

The object of the constitutional provision is to give a clue to the contents of a statute.

Walker v. Caldwell, 4 La. Ann. 297.

Provisions relating directly or indirectly to the subject expressed in the title are proper.

Johnson v. Higgins, 8 Met. (Ky.) 566.

The title should be suggestive of the subject.

Tuttle v. Strout, 7 Minn. 465.

The object of the constitutional provision is to exclude foreign and disconnected matters, so that unsuspecting members will not be imposed upon.

Simpson v. Bailey, 3 Oreg. 515.

It is sufficient if the title indicate powers given by reasonable implication so that the public will not be misled.
2 L. R. A.

Pelham v. The B. F. Woolsey, 16 Fed. Rep. 418.

It is not necessary that the most perfect expression should be adopted. The object of the requirement of the Constitution is that the legislators and the public may be informed by the title of the general nature of provisions proposed to be enacted and to prevent deception.

Re New York & B. Bridge, 73 N. Y. 533.

The object of that provision is fairly answered by a title giving notice to whomsoever reads, that legislation is in pending, which, by amending the Act referred to, might touch upon the subject matter of any of its provisions.

People v. Whitlock, 92 N. Y. 197.

The means necessary or proper to accomplish the general design indicated in the title of the bill may be adopted.

People v. Briggs, 50 N. Y. 562.

The Constitution only requires that the title convey to the mind an indication of the subject to which it relates.

Re Department of Public Parks, 86 N. Y. 440.

It was competent to provide any mode of effecting the end in view that fairly pertains to the subject.

Snipe v. Shriner, 44 N. J. L. 208.

The title should fairly indicate the general subject of the statute, but need not give an abstract of its contents; nor need it mention the means, methods or instruments by which this general purpose is to be accomplished.

Sedgwick, Stat. & Const. L. Pomeroy's Note, 2d ed. 520.

Tested by any view the title was sufficient.

It may be suggested that the provision allowing the engineer commissioners to authorize the use of some other means of propulsion than pneumatic power is not stated in the title.

The title purported to add something to the Act of 1868, and adding the provision named would not be inappropriate. "The machinery it should use, the power it should adopt, were but incidents of the right."

People v. Brooklyn, F. & C. I. R. Co. 89 N. Y. 92.

Therefore there was no necessity that it be expressed in the title. The whole subject of motive power was lawfully reconsidered and arranged by the Legislature of 1868.

Re N. Y. Elevated R. Co. 70 N. Y. 338.

Messrs. John F. Dillon, Noah Davis, A. P. & W. Man and Joseph S. Auerbach for respondents.

Earl, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The sole question for our determination is whether the defendant has legal authority to construct and operate a railway under Broadway and Madison Avenue, in the City of New York.

The defendant traces its corporate existence to the Act, chapter 842 of the Laws of 1863, entitled "An Act to Provide for the Transmission of Letters, Packages and Merchandise in the Cities of New York and Brooklyn and across the North and East Rivers by Means of Pneumatic Tubes, to be Constructed Beneath the Surface of the Streets and Public Places in Said Cities and Under the Waters of Said Rivers."

The first section of the Act authorized and empowered Alfred E. Beach and other persons named, and their assigns, "to lay down, construct and maintain one or more pneumatic tubes in the soil beneath the surface, squares, avenues and public places in the Cities of New York and Brooklyn, and under the bed of the waters of the East River between said cities, and also under the bed of the waters of the North River from the City of New York to the shore of New Jersey, but at such depth as not to interfere with navigation; and to convey letters, parcels, packages, mails, merchandise and property in and through said tubes for compensation by means of vehicles to be run and operated therein by the pneumatic system of propulsion; and to the end that the public convenience may be promoted in the operation of the said vehicles, the said persons and their assigns are also hereby authorized and required to erect upon the sidewalks of the said streets, squares, avenues and public places suitable ornamental lamp-posts, boxes, pillars or receptacles, not exceeding thirty inches in diameter, connected with said pneumatic tubes, for the deposit of letters, packages and property to be transmitted therein;" and it provided that the tubes should not extend through any vault nor under any sidewalk fronting on private property without the consent of the owners of such private property and compensation to them, which should be ascertained and determined in case the parties could not agree in the manner provided by the General Railroad Act of 1850.

Section 2 provided that the pneumatic tubes should be so constructed as to have a mean interior diameter of not exceeding fifty-four inches.

Section 5 authorized the persons named in the Act to hold a meeting and determine the terms and conditions upon which the powers, privileges and franchises conferred by the Act might be transferred to a corporation to be organized as provided in the next section; and section 6 provided that in case the persons attending the meeting named in the prior section should so determine, they might organize themselves into a corporation in the manner specified in the General Manufacturing Act of 1848 and the Acts amendatory thereof "for the purpose of constructing and maintaining the pneumatic tubes aforesaid and using and operating the same as hereinbefore authorized;" and that the corporation so organized shall "possess all the powers and privileges conferred by said Acts, and be subject to all the duties and obligations imposed therein, not inconsistent with the provisions of this Act."

In August, 1868, in pursuance of the powers conferred by the Act, the persons therein named organized themselves into a corporation by the name of "The Beach Pneumatic Transit Company;" and in the certificate executed and filed by them they declare that the object of the corporation was "to construct and operate pneumatic railroads in the Cities of New York and Brooklyn, and under the waters of the North and East Rivers, and to exercise all the powers, privileges and franchises conferred upon said corporation by the Act" of 1868; that the capital stock should be $5,000,000, and that the corporation should continue in existence for the term of fifty years.

The certificate could give the corporation no greater powers than was conferred by the Act of 1868, and to that Act we must look for the scope and measure of its powers.

The Act did not confer railroad powers upon the corporation, and did not subject it to any of the Railroad Acts, except for the purpose of ascertaining the compensation to be paid to the owners of property interests in the streets. It authorized the formation of a manufacturing corporation, with the incidents, powers and duties of such a corporation, so far as they were consistent with the purposes of the Act. The corporation formed was in fact a manufacturing corporation, not, however, with the general power to engage in any manufacturing business, but for the sole purpose of constructing, maintaining, using and operating the pneumatic tubes.

The formation of such a corporation was a matter fairly embraced within the title of the Act. It was an appropriate instrumentality to accomplish the purposes of the Act, and in no sense a new and independent subject. The Legislature having authorized the construction and operation of the pneumatic tubes could in the Act itself have created the corporation or could have authorized its organization under any of the general laws of the State adapted to the formation of any business corporation; and the formation of such a corporation would be germane to the main purpose of the Act as indicated by its title.

While the general manufacturing laws regulated the corporation as to its mode of existence, its manner of action and its corporate life and being generally, yet all its powers and duties related and were confined to the construction, maintenance, use and operation of the pneumatic tubes; and, therefore, section 16 of article 8 of the Constitution, which provides that "No private or local bill which may be passed by the Legislature shall embrace more than one subject, and that shall be expressed in the title," was not, as contended on behalf of the plaintiffs, violated.

What do the words pneumatic tubes mean? They convey to our minds no other meaning than that of tubes for the transmission of parcels operated by atmospheric pressure applied within the tubes. The parcels may be transmitted outside the tubes upon vehicles attached to a piston operated within the tubes by atmospheric pressure, or they may be transmitted within the tubes by atmospheric pressure applied behind them. But they are in no sense railways. Such a tube may contain vehicles placed upon wheels, and the wheels may run upon rails or in grooves, and yet the structure could not, according to the popular sense, or any legal sense, be what is generally known as a railway. The tubes may be so constructed that in a technical or scientific sense the structure might be called a railway; and so, too, any structure upon which vehicles may be moved upon rails, however peculiar or small, may in some limited sense be called a railway, and yet it may not be a railway within the meaning of the Constitution and the general laws of the State. When they speak of railways they always mean railways either for the general carriage of property or of passengers, or of both, and a railway which may be operated in small pneumatic tubes by atmospheric pressure for the transmission of small packages is not within such meaning.

Such was the character and status of the corporation organized under the Act of 1868. That Act was amended by the Act, chapter 512 of the Laws of 1869, entitled "An Act Supplementary to Chapter 842 of the Laws of 1868, in Relation to Carrying Letters, Packages and Merchandise by Means of Pneumatic Tubes in New York and Brooklyn;" but there is nothing in that Act pertinent to the present discussion.

From 1868 to the commencement of this action in 1888, so far as this record disclosed, nothing whatever was done by the corporation except to change its name several times and to procure Acts of the Legislature purporting to enlarge its powers and extend its corporate life. No pneumatic tubes have been constructed; and it is a fair inference, from the admitted facts, that the system for the pneumatic transmission of property was before the year 1873 found to be impracticable. It had been tried in various parts of Europe, but had proved a failure; and for the general transmission of property or passengers was, in the year 1873, nowhere in use. Chambers' Encyclopedia, title, "Atmospheric Railway" and "Pneumatic Dispatch;" Encyclopedia Britannica, title, "Atmospheric Railway;" Appleton's Cyclopaedia, title, "Atmospheric Railway;" Johnson's Cyclopaedia, title, "Pneumatic Transmissions."

In 1873 the persons interested in the corporation, as we may infer, being aware of its insufficiency for any practical purpose, concluded to procure an enlargement of its powers and a radical change in its character and purposes, and, therefore, they obtained the passage of the Act, chapter 105, entitled "An Act Supplementary to and Amending Chapter 842 of the Laws of 1868; an Act entitled 'An Act to Provide for the Transmission of Letters, Packages and Merchandise in the Cities of New York and Brooklyn, and across the North and East Rivers, by Means of Pneumatic Tubes, to be Constructed beneath the Surface of the Streets, Squares, Avenues and Public Places in Said Cities, and under the Waters of Said Rivers,' passed June 1, 1868; and of chapter 512 of the Laws of 1869, entitled 'An Act Supplementary to Chapter 842 of the Laws of 1868, in Relation to Carrying Letters, Packages and Merchandise by Means of Pneumatic Tubes, in New York and Brooklyn, and to Provide for the Transportation of Passengers in Said Tube.'" The last phrase of this title, "and to Provide for the Transportation of Passengers in Said Tubes," did not appear in the title of the Act of 1869, and yet in the Act, in all its stages through the Legislature, as approved by the Governor, filed in the office of the Secretary of State, and printed in the Session Laws, the quotation marks are so placed as to make the phrase appear to be part of that title.

The title of the Act, therefore, was well calculated to deceive any persons to whose attention it came while the Act was under consideration in the Legislature. But we will assume that this title is to have the same force and effect as if that of the Act of 1869 had been properly quoted, and then the only addition to the titles of the prior Acts is the final phrase above quoted, and the only subject expressed in the title is the transportation of property and passengers in pneumatic tubes. This title is assailed by the plaintiffs as not in compliance with section 16 of article 8 of the Constitution above quoted. A particular examination of the provisions of the Act is therefore necessary.

The first section provides that it shall be lawful for the Beach Pneumatic Transit Company "to construct, maintain and operate an underground railway for the transportation of passengers and property" under Broadway and Madison Avenue, by means of tubes of enlarged interior diameter sufficient for the construction of a railway or railways therein, and for the running of cars and the carrying of passengers therein; and also to construct, in connection with said tubes, two or more tracks of railway, with the necessary turnouts and stations for the ingress and egress and accommodation of passengers, and for the receipt and discharge of packages and freight; and said company shall have the right and privilege, subject to the approval of the board of engineer commissioners, hereinafter provided for, to make connection with the Harlem and connecting railroads at any point deemed best at or above Forty Second Street, and also to make connection with the Hudson River Railroad at any point north-erly of Fifty-Ninth Street.

Section 2 provides that the passenger tubes shall, as far as practicable, follow the center line of the streets, and shall not occupy in the aggregate a greater space than thirty one feet in width by eighteen feet in height, exterior measurement; and that they shall be laid and constructed under the supervision of a board of three engineer commissioners, whose duty it is to see that the "passenger tubes and railways" are constructed in a thorough and workmanlike manner, and that they shall constitute a board of commissioners, a majority of whom "shall determine whether the pneumatic system or other motive power shall be adopted by said corporation for the propulsion of the cars running within said passenger tubes."

Section 4 authorizes the corporation to acquire the title to such real estate or interest therein as may be necessary to enable it to construct, operate and maintain "said tubes and railways," and to construct and maintain the proper platforms, stations and buildings at such points along the route of its tubes as may be convenient and suitable for the ingress and egress of its passengers, and for the receipt and discharge of freight and packages and necessary for the successful operation of "said tubes and railway and for the proper connections between said tubes and railway, platform, stations and buildings;" and in case the corporation is unable to agree with the owners of real estate for the purchase and use thereof, it is authorized to acquire the title to the same in the manner provided in the General Railroad Act of 1850; and in all cases the use of the streets, avenues, squares, grounds and public places, and the right of way under the same for the purpose of "said tubes and railway or railways therein," shall be considered and is declared to be a public use.

Section 5 provides that "It shall be lawful for said corporation to convey passengers on said railway or railways through said tubes for hire," and regulates the rate of fare that may be charged.

Section 6 provides that the corporation shall commence active operations in the construction of its works within six months after the passage of the Act, and shall complete the section of passenger tubes with two railway tracks from Bowling Green to Fourteenth Street within three years, and shall complete the remainder of the passenger tubes as authorized within five years thereafter.

Section 7 provides that the corporation shall not construct any station, depot or other building or work above the surface of any land belonging to the City of New York, either in its own right or as trustee, without the consent of the mayor and aldermen; but that nothing in the Act shall be construed to authorize the mayor and aldermen to donate, lease or sell any portion of any of the ground surface of any public park in the city beyond what may be absolutely necessary for the exit from and entrance to the railroad.

Section 9 provides that the corporation shall possess "all the powers and be subject to all the duties and liabilities imposed on railroad corporations by the laws of this State, not inconsistent with the charter of this company or the purposes of its incorporation."

Here we read nothing of pneumatic tubes or of propulsion by atmospheric pressure, nor even of pneumatic railways. We read of passenger tubes, but we must not be deceived by the juggle of words. We find authorized a grand underground railway, not less than fifteen miles long, with two or more tracks, turnouts, platforms, stations, buildings and other appurtenances, with power to connect with surface steam railroads, to be operated through passages called tubes, eighteen feet in height and thirty-one feet in width, exterior measurements; in fact, tunnels which could not be operated by atmospheric pressure. What was before a manufacturing corporation was converted into a railroad corporation, or at least had superadded the powers, privileges, duties and liabilities of railroad corporations under the general laws of the State with authority, by the consent of the engineer commissioners, to use, for the movement of its cars, horses, steam or any other motive power.

The construction of such a railway by such a corporation is certainly a subject not expressed in the title of the Act. The only subject there indicated is the transportation of passengers and property through pneumatic tubes by atmospheric pressure. A title, purporting that an Act provides for pneumatic transportation, would not be sufficient for an Act authorizing the construction and operation of a horse railway or a steam railway, as a title purporting that an Act authorizes a line of omnibuses for the transportation of passengers would not be sufficient for an Act authorizing the construction of a railway for the same purpose.

The constitutional provision referred to has been deemed by statesmen and jurists—conditores legum—of so much importance that it is found in the fundamental law of most of the States. Its purpose is to prevent fraud and deception by concealment in the body of Acts of subjects not by their titles disclosed to the general public, and to legislators who may rely upon them for information as to pending legislation. When the subject is expressed, all matters fairly and reasonably connected with it, and all measures which will or may facilitate its accomplishment, are proper to be incorporated in the Act and are germane to the title. The title must be such at least as fairly to suggest or give a clew to the subject dealt with in the Act; and unless it comes up to this standard it falls below the constitutional requirement. N. Y. v. Colegate, 12 N. Y. 146; People v. Hills, 85 N. Y. 449, 452; Re N. Y. & B. Bridge, 73 N. Y. 527; Re Department of Public Parks, 86 N. Y. 489; People v. Whitlock, 92 N. Y. 191; Re Knaust, 101 N. Y. 188, 2 Cent. Rep. 97; Cooley, Const. Lim. 141.

Here the only subject suggested by the title is the transportation of passengers and property through pneumatic tubes by atmospheric pressure, and everything appropriate and germane to that subject could be provided for in the Act. But a person reading the title alone would have no clew whatever to the great railway scheme actually authorized by the Act; and so the corporations themselves evidently regarded the Act, for finding that the corporation had outgrown its name, "The Beach Pneumatic Transit Company," they by the Act 508 of the Laws of 1874, had it changed to the "Broadway Underground Railway Company;" and in the Act ahead these before called "tubes" are called "tunnels;" and ten years later, by an order of the proper court, the name was again changed to the "New York Arcade Railway Company," while by the Acts of 1874, chapter 454 of 1881 and chapter 312 of 1886, the charter of the corporation was amended and its powers greatly enlarged, pneumatic tubes, propulsion by atmospheric pressure and pneumatic railways are nowhere mentioned; and all that is left as a result of all the legislation is a grand scheme for underground railways operated by any motive power except such as shall emit "smoke, gas or cinders," which, if carried into effect, would doubtless be one of the marvels of the world. But if it is as desirable and safe as it is marvelous it should be placed upon a constitutional basis, and make an undisguised appeal upon its merits for the public sanction.

Our conclusion, therefore, is that the Act of 1873 for the insufficiency of its title is unconstitutional and void, and hence all subsequent legislation based upon that Act must fall with it.

When the Act of 1886 was passed, under which the defendant proposes to lay down its tracks and to construct its underground railways, it had no power to construct an underground railway for the transportation of passengers and general freight through tunnels; and, therefore, that Act is in conflict with section 17 of article 3 of the Constitution, which forbids the Legislature to pass a private or local bill granting to any corporation the right to lay down railroad tracks or to construct a street railroad except upon conditions mentioned in that section. Re N. Y. District R. Co. 107 N. Y. 43, 9 Cent. Rep. 824.

We need go no further. The conclusion already reached renders it unnecessary to solve the various other questions argued with much ability and learning by the able counsel who appeared before us.

The judgment should be affirmed, with costs. All concur.

Gray, J., concurring:

I concur with Earl, J., in his opinion that the Act of 1878 was unconstitutional and void, in that it failed to comply with section 16 of article 3 of the Constitution. But I am further of the opinion, assuming that the Act of 1878 was valid, and that there was an acceptance of and a valid compliance with the conditions of the Act of 1878, and that there was a waiver of causes of forfeiture by the passage of the Act of 1886, that the latter Act was in violation of the provisions of the Constitutional Amendment, which went into effect on January 1, 1875. By that Amendment the Legislature was inhibited from passing a private or local bill granting to any corporation the right to lay down railroad tracks or any exclusive privilege, immunity or franchise whatever.

The Act of 1886, under which the appellant claims to have acquired its present rights, cannot, in my view of what it grants, be upheld as legislation which merely regulates the exercise of powers formerly granted to and possessed by an existing corporation. It went far beyond that. It was in fact a new grant of substantive rights in addition to and differing from what might have been claimed under the Act of 1878.

By the Act of 1878 the company would have had the right to construct a railway in tubes, which should not occupy a greater space than thirty-one feet in width by eighteen feet in height, exterior measurement. The company could not have approached within two feet of the curb line, nor within eighteen feet of the building line. These restrictions must be deemed to be important limitations and wholesome provisions, designed for the protection of the rights of the abutting property owners, and to secure to the public the rightful enjoyment of the streets as such.

By the Act of 1886 they would possess the right to excavate for their railways a space of forty-four feet, inside measurements, in width, and without any limitation as to depth. They might construct railways without the use of tubes or tunnels, and use any motive power which would not permit of the emission of smoke, gas or cinders.

I think that we have here a pretty wide departure from the rights and powers to be enjoyed under the Act of 1878. The pneumatic tube, of a diameter of fifty-four inches, for the transportation of packages and merchandise, authorized under the original charter of 1868, and which was transmuted by the Act of 1878 into a tubular passenger and freight railway, has now wholly disappeared, and in its place appears a scheme for what amounts to a complete occupation of the street for railway purposes, except so far as it leaves a roof over the excavation to take the place of the street surface.

This grant of a right to excavate the street to an extent practically unlimited, and the permission to abandon tubes, and to construct railways in the excavation, are matters of grant too serious in their nature and consequences, under the circumstances of the case, to be passed over as in mere regulation of an existing franchise. To allow such legislation is, in my opinion, to nullify the beneficial and protective objects aimed at by the Constitutional Amendment of 1875.

2 L. R. A.

Under the guise of an amendment, there was a legislative grant to this company of franchises and privileges beyond any naturally following upon or flowing from those granted under the Act of 1878, not in harmony with the spirit of that grant, and of necessity, exclusive in their nature. It therefore fell within the prohibition of the Constitutional Amendment.

When the people have by amending the Constitution, restricted the powers of their representatives in the Legislature to pass private or local bills which grant the right to lay down railroad tracks, or any exclusive privileges or franchises to a corporation, the courts should see to it that the Constitutional Amendment is not evaded under the pretense of an amendment of the charter. They should scrutinize the legislative Act complained of; not with the idea of seeking a way to a construction adverse to its constitutionality; but rather to uphold it, if possible. But if the scrutiny reveals a real and serious violation of the constitutional provisions, they must condemn the Act as invalid.

It is said, however, that a scope of action is offered for the Legislature with respect to corporations already in the possession of corporate rights acquired under statutes passed before the adoption of the Constitutional Amendment.

As a general proposition this is true.

Conceding to the Legislature its full measure of authority to legislate, under the general grant of power by the Constitution of the State, we hold that such authority, when now exercised by a private bill in behalf of a corporation, cannot under the guise of measures for the regulation of the exercise of the corporate powers and franchises, be upheld by the court, when, by a practical construction, the Act permits what the amendment of the Constitution prohibits. The regulation of these powers and franchises, when the Act touches them so as to alter them, means their restriction rather than their enlargement.

If enlargement of powers may be sometimes consistent with the constitutional limitations, it may not go to the extent of trenching on the territory of private and public rights over which the Constitution was plainly intended to operate in its limitations. When enlargement of corporate powers becomes indistinguishable from a grant of new substantive rights within the purview of the section in question, then the mischief is accomplished to prevent which the Constitutional Amendment was designed.

In Re Gilbert Elevated Railway Company, 70 N. Y. 361, Cherch, J., in discussing the changes of structure, etc., made by the commissioners under the provisions of the Rapid Transit Act, said the changes were restrictive in their character. "By the charter the whole street was to be covered by the structure; by the conditions imposed, only a portion of some streets could be occupied." And he says, in that connection: "I cannot accede to the proposition that any change in the structure and in the manner of occupying the streets, however restrictive upon the company or beneficial to the public in the use of the streets, constitutes a fresh grant of the right to lay down railroad tracks. It is a misnomer to call such restrictions grants of any right whatever. As well might the cutting down of a fee to a life estate be termed a grant of land." Again he says: "No exclusive right or franchise was granted to the respondent corporation upon any construction of the clause. Every substantial right existed before the passage of the Act, and the conditions imposed, embracing changes of structure and manner of occupying streets, should be regarded as restrictive of existing rights, and not grants of rights or franchises within the constitutional sense. . . . This series of amendments designed to restrict the powers of the Legislature in matters of detail, under general phrases and undefined words, is experimental in this State. They must be sustained and applied by a rational and practical construction, so as to subserve the purposes intended, and prevent the evils designed to be remedied; but not by an artificial and technical construction to extend their application to cases never contemplated."

I think the meaning of the decision is clear. If the legislative Act operates upon a charter in the direction of a regulation, an adjustment or a restriction of powers possessed, it could not be objectionable.

Within its reserved powers the Legislature may at all times amend or alter the charter; but the Constitutional Amendment will not permit it by a private bill to make any new grant of rights comprehended within those specified by the amendment. I do not think that it can be said in the present case that every substantial right given by the Act of 1886 existed previously.

For the reasons I have briefly given I think the Act of 1886 practically gave to this corporation a right to lay down railroad tracks, which it could not have exercised under the Act of 1873, and also gave what are practically exclusive privileges. I think it contravened the Constitution, in the letter and in the spirit, and is therefore void.

Ruger, Oh. J.; Danforth and Peckham, JJ., concur.

John LIBBEY, Appt.,

v.

Emma J. MASON, Respnt.

(....N. Y.....)

1. An appeal from an order of the general term is not premature although no judgment

NOTE.—Probate; grant of letters; citation; effect of renunciation.

The provisions of section 27 of the Revised Statutes apply to every application for letters of administration, and leave it discretionary with the surrogate whether persons out of the jurisdiction of the court shall receive notice of the application, or not. Re Williams, 51 Hun. 69.

Where there are two sisters, one unmarried and one married, letters issued to the unmarried one without notice to the other are valid. Re Curser, 89 N. Y. 401; 2 Civ. Proc. Rep. 411, reversing 25 Hun. 573.

The provision of the Code of Civil Procedure, § 2682, requiring notice to every person having a prior or equal right, did not apply, and the appointment was valid, overruling West v. Mapee, 4 Redf. 498. Re Curser, 89 N. Y. 401.

Under the law it was not incumbent upon the has been entered thereon, where the order is in a special proceeding appealed from the surrogate which could only terminate in an order.

2. Upon a petition for letters of administration, although it is not necessary to cite a citizen of the United States having a right to letters prior or equal to that of the petitioner, but residing in another State, yet if such person appears before the surrogate, and presents his claim before the issue of letters, his claim cannot be disregarded.

(March 5, 1889.)

APPEAL from an order of the General Term of the Supreme Court, Second Department, affirming an order of the surrogate granting letters of administration. Reversed.

The facts and questions presented fully appear in the opinion.

Mr. Chauncey B. Ripley for appellant.
Mr. Nathaniel B. Cooke for respondent.

Finch, J., delivered the opinion of the court.

On the 14th day of February, 1886, Lydia C. Libbey, a resident of Brooklyn, in this State, died leaving her surviving her husband, John Libbey, who resided in the State of Maine, and her daughter by a former husband who is the respondent, Emma J. Mason. On the 11th of March following she presented to the Surrogate of Kings County, a petition asking to be appointed administratrix of her mother's estate.

No citation to the nonresident husband was directed to be issued, but on the 15th of March, 1886, and while the prior proceeding was pending and undetermined, he appeared before the surrogate and presented his petition to be appointed administrator, and claiming priority of right. The two proceedings were then practically consolidated and heard together, and resulted in an order or decree granting letters to the daughter and denying them to the husband. From that order he appealed to the general term, where it was affirmed, with costs against the husband. That affirmance occurred in December of 1886, and the order was entered by the successful party, and notice of that entry served upon the husband's attorney.

Notice of taxation of costs was given for January 6, and adjourned from time to time until January 27, on which day the attorney for Mrs. Mason failed to appear before the clerk, and notice of appeal from the order and decree of the surrogate was served by Libbey. Thereafter the costs were taxed, but under an order made by the special term requiring it to be done nunc pro tunc, and as of January 27, the date surrogate to issue a citation to the husband; it was entirely within his competence and discretion to issue letters to the daughter immediately upon the presentation of her petition. The failure to issue letters to the daughter previous to the presentation of the petition of the husband did not deplete the surrogate of his discretion, and he could exercise the same thereafter as well as theretofore. Libbey v. Mason, 42 Hun. 472.

An administrator who has been removed for failure to give sureties is entitled to citation on an application of one having inferior right. Barber v. Converse, 1 Redf. 380.

A failure to cite the widow of the deceased is an irregularity, for which the letters might be revoked, but does not render them absolutely void. Kelly v. West, 80 N. Y. 139. See Peters v. Public Admr. 1 Bradf. 200; Cobb v. Beardsley, 37 Barb. 132.

of the appeal, and without prejudice to that appeal.

The appellant is now met by a motion to dismiss his appeal, on the ground that it was prematurely taken. It is said that upon the decision of the general term, a judgment must be entered, and since this appeal was from its order it was premature; and section 2662 of the Code is relied upon. The contest before the surrogate was in a special proceeding which was brought to the general term by an appeal, and could only terminate in an order. The section referred to speaks of the judgment or order, and, perhaps, is somewhat confused, but does not alter the explicit definitions of the Code. There was no room for mistake as to the decision appealed from, and the appeal was not premature.

The court below has sustained the appointment of Mrs. Mason in reliance upon section 2662 of the Code. We have already twice decided that no repeal of the priority of right dictated by the Revised Statutes was intended or effected by that section, and that such priority of right was not lost by the fact of residence in another State if the petitioner was a citizen of the United States. Re Page, 107 N. Y. 266, 9 Cent. Rep. 728; Re Williams, 111 N. Y. 680.

A very excellent statement of the reasons for denying such repeal was given in the general term opinion in the latter case. Section 27 of the Revised Statutes, which designates the order of administration and fixes the priority of right, imposes no condition of residence within the State.

So much is conceded; but an effort has been made to argue out such a condition as inferentially imposed by other terms and provisions of the statute, and especially by those which relate to ancillary letters. That inference, however, is effectually rebutted by the terms of section 32, which dictates the persons to whom letters shall be refused whatever may be their relation to the deceased. Among these is enumerated "a person not a citizen of the United States unless such person reside within this State." The plain inference and obvious meaning is that nonresidence excludes only when the claimant is not a citizen of the United States, but where that citizenship exists the nonresidence is immaterial, and has no effect upon the priority of right. The rule is not changed by section 2662 of the Code, which does not repeal by implication the right of priority given by the Revised Statutes. We so held in Re Page, supra.

That section gives to the surrogate a discretion to omit a citation to nonresidents, although having a prior right. The only reason assigned is that "in general the delay which a citation in such a case would produce is unnecessary." Nevertheless, a judicious surrogate, armed with this destructive discretion, will rarely shut out the prior right of an American citizen living in a sister State because some time is essential to give it recognition and protection.

But it is upon the final clause of the section that the argument for repeal is mainly founded. That reads: "Where it is not necessary to cite any person, a decree granting to the petitioner letters may be made upon presentation of the petition." Doubtless this clause was only intended to mean that where the applicant had the first and paramount right, and none existed prior or equal to his, the surrogate might act at once, because citation to anyone would be needless. But this innocent meaning is carried beyond its purpose by the phraseology employed, and has led to the logic that since it is not necessary to cite a nonresident, whatever his priority of right, the surrogate may disregard that right, and it is thereby lost. That he may disregard it seems to be true; that it is thereby lost or ceases to exist or has suffered a repeal does not at all follow. It remains unchanged. The remedy for its enforcement has been modified, but the right itself has not been destroyed.

The surrogate may act without a citation to the nonresident citizen, and disregard his right because he is not present to assert it. Whether the letters so issued, although regular under the Code, would stand against an application for their revocation by the nonresident citizen having the prior right, it is not necessary now to determine. But where, although not cited, the nonresident appears, before the issue of letters, and presents his claim and stands upon his right, the surrogate may not deny it.

In this case the omission to cite Libbey was immaterial, for he appeared and was heard in opposition to the claim of Mrs. Mason before any appointment whatever was made, and the question of priority of right was directly involved. The order appealed from both grants the application of the daughter and denies that of the husband. The surrogate was required to decide between the two. No statutory reasons for rejecting the husband's administration were given, and letters should have been awarded to him.

The order of the General Term and of the Surrogate should be reversed, and the case remitted to the surrogate, that letters may be issued to the husband, John Libbey, with costs personally against the petitioner, Mrs. Mason.

All concur.

PENNSYLVANIA SUPREME COURT.

J. Henry TILGE et al., Trading as Henry Tilge & Co., Plffs. in Err.,
v.

Matthew BROOKS, Copartner of W. Howard Brooks and A. May Stevenson, Trading as W. Howard Brooks & Stevenson.

(....Pa....)

Notice of dissolution, as in the case of a general partnership, is not necessary where a person 2 L. R. A.

attempting to become a special partner has, by virtue of the Pennsylvania Act of March 21, 1836 (Pub. Laws, 143), become liable as a general partner by reason of noncompliance with the provisions of that statute.

(February 11, 1889.)

ERROR to the Common Pleas No. 4 of Philadelphia County, to review a judgment of nonsuit in an action against an alleged member of a partnership concern to recover debts due by the firm. Affirmed.

The action was assumpsit to recover from an alleged individual partner the amount due upon firm notes and book accounts. At the trial in the court below Thayer, P. J., entered a nonsuit which the court in bank refused to take off; and plaintiffs took this writ assigning for error the refusal to take off the nonsuit entered by the trial judge.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Joseph Mellors and R. P. White, for plaintiffs in error:

The provisions of the laws which authorize the creation of special partnerships, must be strictly complied with. If they are not, the partnerships thus sought to be created simply fail to become special and remain general.

Conrow v. Graenestein, 17 W. N. C. 204; Vandike v. Roskam, 67 Pa. 380-393; Haddock v. Grinnell Mfg. Co. 1 Cent. Rep. 360, 109 Pa. 372.

In such case the liability of all for the acts of each continues until proper notice to dealers and to the public.

Hartland v. Chace, 39 Barb. 283. See Andrews v. Schott, 10 Pa. 50; Smith v. Argall, 6 Hill, 479, 3 Denio, 435; Bowen v. Argall, 24 Wend. 504; Madison Co. Bank v. Gould, 5 Hill, 311; Sharp v. Hutchinson, 1 Cent. Rep. 717, 100 N. Y. 533; Re Merrill, 12 Blatchf. 224; Van Ingen v. Whitman, 62 N. Y. 513, 523; Buckley v. Bramhall, 24 How. Pr. 455; Patterson v. Holland, 7 Grant, Ch. U. C. 1.

All idea of a special partnership should be eliminated and the defendant treated as a general partner from the beginning; and having retired without giving notice, he is liable for after contracted debts, under the following authorities:

Watkinson v. Bank of Pa. 4 Whart. 482; Brown v. Clark, 14 Pa. 476; Deford v. Reynolds, 36 Pa. 325; Shamburg v. Ruggles, 38 Pa. 148; Clark v. Fletcher, 96 Pa. 416; Elkinton v. Booth, 3 New Eng. Rep. 699, 143 Mass. 479.

Messrs. N. H. Sharpless and R. C. McMurtrie, for defendant in error:

The Legislature never intended to make men partners where they themselves did not so agree, or, indeed, to vary the contract inter se for any cause.

Badeley v. Consolidated Bank, L. R. 84 Ch. Div. 552; Molhuo v. Court of Wards, L. R. 4 Priv. C. 419.

One who was not known to be a partner need not give notice upon dissolution of the firm.

Lindley, Partn. 418, 420, 429.

There must be actual belief in the existence of the agency. It is not sufficient that there is an apparent agency if the fact be known that there is none.

Scarff v. Jardine, L. R. 7 App. Cas. 357.

The holding ones sell out as a partner is unimportant, except as to creditors who dealt with the firm on the faith of such holding out.

Thompson v. First Nat. Bank of Toledo, 111 U. S. 536 (23 L. ed. 509); Deford v. Reynolds, 36 Pa. 332.

Paxson, CA. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendant below, Matthew Brooks, was 2 L. R. A.

sued as a copartner with W. Howard Brooks and A. May Stevenson, for a debt admittedly due by the firm of W. Howard Brooks & Stevenson. The grounds upon which this claim rested are these: Matthew Brooks had intended and attempted to form a partnership with William H. Brooks and A. May Stevenson in 1871 as a special partner. This special partnership was in fact a renewal of one made in 1866. The renewed partnership expired in 1876, when Matthew Brooks retired from the firm. The sales, for which it is sought to make him liable, were made in 1881, or about five years after dissolution of the firm of which he had been a member. When he retired no notice was given of the dissolution.

It was claimed, and I do not understand it to be disputed, that there were such irregularities in the formation of the special partnership, as to make the special partner liable to the penalties provided by the Act of Assembly in such cases. The eighth section of the Act of the 21st of March, 1836 (Pub. Laws, 143), in regard to limited partnerships, provides that "If any false statement be made in such certificate or affidavit, all the persons interested in such partnership shall be liable for all the engagements thereof, as general partners."

There can be no doubt that during the time the defendant Brooks was a member of this firm he was liable for its engagements, by reason of his noncompliance with the statute. The plaintiffs below claim that he was in point of fact a general partner, and was liable after he left the firm to creditors by reason of his failure to give notice of his withdrawal; and a number of authorities are cited in support of this proposition, amongst others Andrews v. Schott, 10 Pa. 47, where it was said by this court:

"For unless the conditions of the Act are substantially observed, all the defendants are general partners."

The language quoted from Andrews v. Schott would seem to be justified by the phraseology of the Act of 1836, as, for instance, if the special partner transact any business on account of the partnership, or be employed for that purpose as agent, attorney or otherwise, he shall be deemed a general partner. Like instances might be given from other sections of the Act. But when the Act declares that under certain circumstances a special partner shall be deemed a general partner, it certainly does not mean that he is in fact a general partner; indeed, there is in the language an implication that he is not, nor do I see how the Legislature can make a man a member of the firm without his consent and the consent of the firm. It may, indeed, make him liable for the debts of a firm as though he were a general partner, and this is all the legislators probably intended to do.

The confusion upon this subject may be occasioned by the inaccurate language sometimes employed in referring to it. A man who is not a member of a firm may yet make himself liable to its creditors by holding himself out to such creditors as a partner. Yet in fact he does not become a partner; he is merely liable as a partner.

There being no general partnership so far as Brooks was concerned, only a liability on his part for the debts of the limited partnership because of its irregularities, we see no reason why he should have given notice of the dissolution of a partnership which never existed.

Haviland v. Chace, 89 Barb. 283, was decided upon the New York Statute and is not consistent with our own Act of 1886. Nor are authorities elsewhere of much service to us in construing it. Under our statute no general partnership was formed. It does not say that an omission to comply with its requirements shall have the effect of creating a partnership not intended by the parties.

Judgment affirmed.

COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA, Pff. in Err.,

DELAWARE DIVISION CANAL CO.

STATE TAX ON CORPORATE LOANS.

(...Pa....)

1. A corporation may be compelled by statute to act as collector of a tax on its securities, by deducting it from the interest which has become due thereon and returning it into the state treasury, instead of paying it to the holders of the securities.
2. The constitutional provision requiring taxation to be uniform upon the same class of subjects is not violated by a statute, one section of which makes any scrip, bond or certificate of indebtedness, issued by a private corporation to the residents of the State in which interest is paid, taxable upon its nominal value; while a prior section provides that "All mortgages, money paid by solvent debtors, etc.," shall be taxable at a certain rate on their value. All interest bearing indebtedness of private corporations is thus made a separate class for the purpose of taxation; and such classification is justified by the peculiar nature of corporate securities, the great fluctuations in their value, and the difficulty of reaching them by the general system of taxation.

3. The use of the word "of" in a statute, which is a manifest blunder, being intended for "off," will not be permitted to affect the plain meaning of the Legislature.

4. A corporation has a legal standing in court to contest the constitutionality of a law requiring it to deduct from the interest due on its obligations the amount of the tax on them, and pay it into the state treasury instead of to the holders of the securities.

(February 4, 1889.)

ERROR to the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County (Simonton, P. J.), to review a judgment in favor of defendant in an action to compel defendant to deduct the taxes upon its bonded indebtedness from the interest, under the provisions of the Act of June 30, 1885. Reversed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. William S. Kirkpatrick, Atty-Gen., and John F. Sanderson, Deputy Atty-Gen., for plaintiff in error:

NOTE.—Taxes; corporations may be compelled to act as collectors.

In collecting taxes from corporations, the corporations themselves may be made collectors by being required to deduct the tax from the interests of the several shareholders and pay it over to the government. Haught v. Pittsburgh, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. 73 U. S. 6 Wall. 15 (18 L. ed. 818); First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 353 (19 L. ed. 701); U. S. v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 322 (21 L. ed. 597); Minot v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 230 (21 L. ed. 896); Maltby v. Reading & C. R. Co. 52 Pa. 140; Desty, Taxn. 768.

The tax may be then enforced through the corporation by requiring it to withhold the amount from the dividends payable thereon. Delaware Railroad Tax (ase), 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 230 (21 L. ed. 896); First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 353 (19 L. ed. 701); Van Allen v. Assessors, 70 U. S. 3 Wall. 583 (18 L. ed. 254); Union Bank v. State, 9 Yerg. 501; Richmond v. Daniel, 14 Gratt. 365; Nashua Sav. Bank v. Nashua, 46 N. H. 395; Dwight v. Boston, 12 Allen, 822; Desty, Taxn. 365.

Corporation to pay tax out of corporate funds.

The corporation may be required to pay the tax out of its corporate fund or be authorized to deduct the amount paid for each stockholder out of his dividends (Ang. & A. Corp. $4556, 557; Bradley v. Illinois, 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 459 (18 L. ed. 433); Reg. v. Arnaud, 9 Ad. & E. N. S. 806; First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 353 (19 L. ed. 701); State v. Branin, 25 N. J. L. 494; McCulloch v. Maryland, 17 U. S. 4 Wheat. 316 (4 L. ed. 579); Haught v. Pittsburgh, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. 73 U. S. 6 Wall. 15 (18 L. ed. 818); Cummings v. Merchants Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 156 (25 L. ed. 904); Maltby v. Reading & C. R. Co. 52 Pa. 140; Ottawa Glass Co. v. McClellan, 81 Ill. 556; N. O. v. La. Sav. Bank & S. D. Co. 31 La. Ann. 823; Baltimore v. Baltimore City Pass. R. Co. 57 Md. 31; St. Albans v. Nat. Car Co. 57 Vt. 68; and they may, it seems, be compelled to do so by mandamus. State v. Mayhew, 2 Gill, 487; Barney v. State, 42 Md. 480; McVeagh v. Chicago, 49 Ill. 318; Desty, Taxn. 768; Cooley, Taxn. 433.

But it cannot be enforced against its assets after it becomes insolvent. Lionberger v. Rowse, 43 Mo.

2 L. R. A.

67; Relfe v. Columbia L. Ins. Co. 11 Mo. App. 374; Cooley, Taxn. 433.

So, it is not payable by the receiver of an insolvent company. Relfe v. Columbia L. Ins. Co. 11 Mo. App. 374.

Mode of collection.

The mode of collecting the tax on the shares of a corporation, by requiring its officers to pay the tax directly into the treasury of the State, is a valid mode, even in the case of the national banks. First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 353 (19 L. ed. 701); McVeagh v. Chicago, 49 Ill. 318; State v. Mayhew, 2 Gill, 487; New Orleans v. La. Sav. Bank & S. D. Co. 31 La. Ann. 823; Lionberger v. Rowse, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 468 (19 L. ed. 721).

In Maryland an action lies directly against the corporation to collect the tax. American Coal Co. v. Allegany Co. 59 Md. 135.

When the shares of a corporation are sold for nonpayment of taxes, new certificates may be issued to purchasers at the tax sale. Smith v. Northampton Bank, 4 Cush. 1; Desty, Taxn. 768.

Collection of tax on dividends.

Where a tax is imposed on the dividends or other receipts of shareholders from the profits of corporations, or upon their shares, corporations, in some States, are required to make the payment, which they then deduct from the payments to be made to shareholders. Maltby v. Reading & C. R. Co. 52 Pa. 140; Haught v. Pittsburgh, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. 73 U. S. 6 Wall. 15 (18 L. ed. 818); First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 353 (19 L. ed. 701); U. S. v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 322 (21 L. ed. 597); Minot v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 205 (21 L. ed. 898); Ottawa Glass Co. v. McClellan, 81 Ill. 556; New Orleans v. La. Sav. Bank & S. D. Co. 31 La. Ann. 823; Baltimore v. Baltimore City Pass. R. Co. 57 Md. 31; St. Albans v. Nat. Car Co. 57 Vt. 68; Cooley, Taxn. 433.

Capital stock and shares distinguished.

The capital stock of a corporation, and the shares of the capital stock, are distinct things. So a tax on the shares of stockholders in a corporation is a different thing from a tax on the corporation itself or its stock, and may be laid irrespective of any

1. The tax in question was properly settled against the corporation defendant.

Maltby v. Reading & O. R. Co. 53 Pa. 140; Com. v. Reading & W. R. Co. 2 Pearson, 894; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Com. 66 Pa. 64.

The tax is settled against the corporation as tax collector, and not as a person liable as a taxable subject.

Com. v. Reading & W. R. Co. 2 Pearson, 895; Com. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 104 Pa. 89.

If the corporation may be lawfully required to collect the tax, and if the legislative rule of assessment at par is sufficient to enable the corporation to ascertain the tax, it must act under the law; and having refused to act no defense based upon alleged constitutional or other rights of the taxable person can be set up to justify it, or excuse it from liability on such refusal.

Moore v. Allegheny City, 18 Pa. 55; Com. v. Philadelphia, 37 Pa. 487; State v. McNally, 34 Maine, 210; Sandford v. Nichols, 18 Mass. 286; Wellington v. Petitioners, 16 Pick. 87; State v. Carroll, 38 Conn. 449; Baker v. Braman, 6 Hill, 47; Com. v. McCombs, 56 Pa. 486; Clark v. Com. 29 Pa. 129; Cocks v. Halsey, 41 U. S. 16 Pet. 71 (10 L. ed. 891); People v. White, 24 Wend. 520; Henks v. McCord, 55 Iowa, 378; Taylor v. Skrine, 8 Brev. 516; Lee v. Tillotson, 24 Wend. 837; People v. Rensselaer & S. R. Co. 15 Wend. 113; People v. Lawrence, 41 N. Y. 189; People v. Salomon, 54 Ill. 89; Sessums v. Rotts, 84 Tex. 335; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Langlade Co. 56 Wis. 614.

If the corporation may deny the validity of the statute in question and avail itself of such defenses as are peculiar and appropriate to the taxable himself, such defenses can only be upon the ground that the statute is obnoxious to some clear prohibition in the Constitution.

Kirby v. Shaw, 19 Pa. 260; People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 549; People v. Flagg, 46 N. Y. 401; Monongahela Nav. Co. v. Coons, 6 Watts & S. 117; Com. v. Hartman, 17 Pa. 119; Sharpless v. Phila. 31 Pa. 160, 164; Weister v. Hado, 53 Pa. 474; Com. v. Butler, 99 Pa. 540.

The requirement of uniformity is limited in its application. It does not simply say "All taxes shall be uniform," but confines the rule of uniformity to a class of subjects only. The inherent power to tax or not to tax all subjects still remains. The principle of classification is recognized and the rule of uniformity is made applicable and confined to the classes which the Legislature may select.

Banger's App. 109 Pa. 79; Kittanning Coal Co. v. Com. 79 Pa. 104; Kirby v. Shaw, 19 Pa. 258; Durach's App. 63 Pa. 491; Hammett v. Phila. 65 Pa. 146; Re Washington Ave. 69 Pa. 352; Weber v. Reinhard, 78 Pa. 370; Butler's App. Id. 448; Northampton County v. Lehigh Coal & Nav. Co. 75 Pa. 461; Lehigh Iron Co. v. Lower Macungie Twp. 81 Pa. 482; Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 85 Pa. 170; Germania L. Ins. Co. v. Com. 85 Pa. 515.

As long as there is substantial uniformity the same kind of property may be taxed in the hands of different kinds of persons by different methods.

Fox's App. 3 Cent. Rep. 561, 113 Pa. 337. See Hunter's App. 42 Legal Int. 394, and Laughlin's App. 19 W. N. C. 517.

The uniformity required is not absolute in favor of taxation.

State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 612 (23 L. ed. 673); Stanley v. Albany, 121 U. S. 548 (30 L. ed. 1008); Com. v. Martin, 107 Pa. 194.

Wherever taxes are assessed upon valuation, to be made by the assessor or other agency, there, as a part of the process of assessment, such valuation should be made. No assessment is required when the statute itself prescribes the amount to be paid, and this can be recovered by suit.

U. S. v. Halloran, 14 Blatchf. 1; U. S. v. Pa. Co. 27 Fed. Rep. 589; Weber v. Reinhard, 78 Pa. 370; Dollar Sav. Bank v. U. S. 88 U. S. 19 Wall. 237 (23 L. ed. 807); King v. U. S. 99 U. S. 233 (25 L. ed. 374); Com. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 104 Pa. 108.

It is no objection to the tax in question that no notice to the taxpayer is provided for. This is for the reason that the amount of the tax, as well as the amount of valuation, which elements constitute the entire case upon which the tax is claimed, are both fixed by the statute, and no hearing could change these elements or affect their application.

Hagar v. Reclamation District, 111 U. S. 701 (28 L. ed. 569); Santa Clara Co. v. Southern Pac. R. Co. 18 Fed. Rep. 426; McMillen v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 87 (24 L. ed. 225); Arrowsmith v. Harmoning, 118 U. S. 194 (30 L. ed. 248); Ranger's App. 109 Pa. 79; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97 (34 L. ed. 616).

Mr. M. E. Olmsted, for defendant in error:

Uniformity of taxation means more than uniformity in the rate.

Exchange Bank of Columbus v. Hines, 8 Ohio St. 1; Cameron v. Capper, 41 Ohio St. 533; Re Washington Ass. 69 Pa. 302; Atlantic & N. O. R. Co. v. Carter 75 N. C. 475; Woodbridge v. Detroit, 8 Mich. 301; Dundas Mortgage & Trust Investment Co. v. Charlton, 23 Fed. Rep. 192.

Uniformity of taxation means equality of taxation.

Fox's App. 3 Cent. Rep. 561, 112 Pa. 237.

Taxation in this case is neither like nor equal. Even the rate is not uniform in a legal sense.

quent Act as to the rate, and the latter is not a repeal of the former. Com. v. Erie R. Co. 96 Pa. 127; Desty, Taxn. 401.

For the purposes of assessment by state officers, the "actual value in cash" of the stock is to be ascertained by the prices at which it is sold between the first and 15th of November, and not by the average sales during the year. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Com. 94 Pa. 224.

Taxation of credits.

The Legislature has the right, under the Constitution, to impose a tax upon all credits, whether for land sold, not paid for, or otherwise. People v. Worthington, 21 Ill. 171.

All credits in excess of the debts of the person taxed are taxable. First Nat. Bank v. St. Joseph, 45 Mich. 583; Desty, Taxn. 323.

Debts due are "credits," within the meaning of the Revenue Law, and are to be assessed as property. Jones v. Seward Co. 10 Neb. 184; N. O. Can. & Bkg. Co. v. N. O. 99 U. S. 97 (25 L. ed. 409).

The taxing property of the State may be made to embrace all equitable credits, of whatever description they may be. Puget Sound Agricultural Co. v. Pierce County, 1 Wash. T. 75, 129; Carroll v. Perry, 4 McLean, 25.

Funds invested in private debts or securities are liable to taxation. Buchanan v. Talbot Co. 47 Md. 222.

All moneys loaned and solvent credits, or credits of value, comprise subjects under the head of "moneyed capital." Pollard v. State, 45 Ala. 624; Heppburn v. Carlisle School Directors, 80 U. S. 26 Wall. 480 (23 L. ed. 112); McIver v. Robinson, 55 Ala. 453; Bumter Co. v. Gainesville Nat. Bank, 68 Ala. 484.

A tax on the interest paid by a corporation on its indebtedness, though collected from the corporation, is still a tax on the creditor; the corporation being only made use of as a convenient means of collecting the tax. Haight v. Pittsburgh, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. 78 U. S. 8 Wall. 15 (15 L. ed. 325); Northern S. L. R. A.

People v. Wasser, 100 U. S. 539, 544 (25 L. ed. 705).

Section 4 of the Act of 1895 fails to provide for a valid assessment of corporate loans, and is substantially the same as the Acts of 1879 and 1881, which, for the same reason, were declared inoperative by this court. The tax imposed by the first section of the Act of 1885, upon all mortgages, is a tax upon their actual value. The very foundation of taxation by value is a valid assessment.

Cooley, Taxn. 259; Blackw. Tax Titles, 114, 115; Hillhard, Taxn. 290; Thurston v. Little, 3 Mass. 423, 428; Abbott v. Lindenbower, 42 Mo. 166; Bratton v. Mitchell, 1 Watts & S. 310; Miller v. Hale, 26 Pa. 433, Com. v. Blair County, 2 Pearson, 416, 419; San Mateo Co. v. Southern Pac. R. Co. 18 Fed. Rep. 722; Sutton v. Louisville, 5 Dana, 81; People v. Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 426; People v. Waterman, 81 Cal. 412; McReynolds v. Longenberger, 57 Pa. 12; Philadelphia v. Mackey, 2 Pearson, 406; Mott v. Detroit, 14 Mich. 495, 525; People v. Kings Co. 52 N. Y. 557, 587; Morton v. Comptroller Gen. 4 S. C. 453, 454; State v. Readington Twp. 26 N. J. L. 70; Exchange Bank of Columbus v. Hines, 8 Ohio St. 1; Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 188-195; Weber v. Reinhard, 78 Pa. 376, 377; Com. v. Pharis Iron Co. 1 Pearson, 530.

A mere ascertainment of the nominal value of corporate loans is no assessment of the actual value, which alone is made taxable by the first section of the Act of 1895.

See Fox v. Phelps, 17 Wend. 399; 1 Whart. Ev. § 449; Washington Ice Co. v. Webster, 68 Maine, 403; State v. La. Sav. Bank & S. D. Co. 22 La. Ann. 1123; People v. Albany Assessors, 2 Hun, 585; People v. Tax Commr. 4 Hun, 593; Com. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 104 Pa. 89.

Cent. R. Co. v. Jackson, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 222 (19 L. ed. 89); U. S. v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 323 (21 L. ed. 587); Cooley, Taxn. 321.

The interest coupons of railroad bonds are not subject to taxation under the General Laws of Pennsylvania. Jackson v. Northern Cent. R. Co. Chanc. 222.

Creditor not taxable when without jurisdiction.

The creditor cannot be taxed when he is not within the jurisdiction; nor can his property, when out of the jurisdiction. State Tax on Foreign-Held Bonds, 22 U. S. 15 Wall. 300 (21 L. ed. 179); St. Louis v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 480 (20 L. ed. 184); People v. Tax Commr. 23 N. Y. 224; Goldgart v. People, 106 Ill. 25; Com. v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 27 Gratt. 344.

ps
ot oi vi
Je
H 18
v.
D
Ti 80

St
22

money by a nonresident, secured by a mortgage on real estate, is not subject to taxation, although the securities are in the hands of a resident agent. Myers v. Seabarger, 10 West. Rep. 474, 45 Ohio St. 222.

Chose in action follows the person having the right.

A chose in action follows the person of him having the right; and when he resides out of the State the State has no jurisdiction over the person or

"Due process of law" and "equal protection of the law" are denied to owners of the property taxed.

Phila. Contributionship v. Yard, 17 Pa. 388; Phila. v. Miller, 49 Pa. 448; Thomas v. Gain, 35 Mich. 155; Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 186; Mulligan v. Smith, 59 Cal. 206; 8 Pac. Coast L. J. 499; Cooper v. Board of Works, 14 C. B. N. S. (168 Eng. C. L.) 181; Ervin's App. 16 Pa. 256; Davidson v. N. O. 96 U. S. 97 (24 L. ed. 616); Dundee Mortgage & Trust Investment Co. v. Parrish, 24 Fed. Rep. 197; State v. Readington Twp. 36 N. J. L. 70; San Mateo Co. v. Southern Pac. R. Co. 13 Fed. Rep. 722; Hutson v. Woodbridge Protection Dist. 16 Pac. Rep. 549.

No tax is due until it is assessed.

Miller v. Hale, 26 Pa. 432; Com. v. Blair Co. 2 Pearson, 416, 419; Abbott v. Lindenbouer, 42 Mo. 168; Thurston v. Little, 3 Mass. 432; Hilliard, Taxn. 290, 291; Blackw. Tax Titles, 114-120; Cooley, Taxn. 259, and cases cited; State Tax on Foreign-Held Bonds, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 300 (21 L. ed. 179); Com. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 104 Pa. 89.

The corporation has the legal right to interpose the defense of the unconstitutionality of the Act and the invalidity of the settlement made under it.

If an assessment of taxes be made in violation of law it is a void Act, and the collector in enforcing its collection is a trespasser.

See Cooley, Taxn. 562; Tuttle v. Everett, 51 Miss. 27; Moore v. Allegheny City, 18 Pa. 53; Ruth's App. 10 W. N. C. 498; People v. Chenango Co. 11 N. Y. 563; Newman v. Livingston Co. 45 N. Y. 676; Union Nat. Bank v. N. Y. 51 N. Y. 639; Bank of Commonwealth v. N. Y. 43 N. Y. 184; Sessums v. Botts, 34 Tex. 385; over the thing, and can tax neither. State v. Earl, 1 Nev. 394.

All bonds or stocks, whether of bodies politic or corporate, are personal property, taxable under the laws of the State where their owner resides. Seward v. Rising Sun, 79 Ind. 353; Murray v. Charleston, 96 U. S. 432 (24 L. ed. 760).

Properties of mortgagor and mortgagee distinguished.

Except between the immediate parties, the mortgagor before the foreclosure is owner of the property; his interest is real estate, to be conveyed, attached, taxed and inherited only as such, while the interest of the mortgagee is mere personal property. Waterbury Sav. Bank v. Lawler, 46 Conn. 245; Lacon v. Davenport, 16 Conn. 311; Funderson v. Brown, 1 Day, 98; Gunn v. Scovill, 4 Day, 242; Toby v. Reed, 9 Conn. 224.

Mortgages upon real estate should be held to be taxable unless this should lead to double taxation. Cook v. Burlington, 59 Iowa, 251; McGregor v. Vanpel, 24 Iowa, 436.

The Maryland Declaration of Rights does not prohibit the Legislature from taxing to the mortgagees investments on mortgages, notwithstanding the property mortgaged may be taxable and be taxed to the mortgagors. Baltimore Appeal Tax Ct. v. Bloo, 50 Md. 202.

A mortgage, given to secure the purchase money of the premises mortgaged, is not exempt from taxation. Cook v. Burlington, 59 Iowa, 251; McGregor v. Vanpel, 24 Iowa, 436; Finley v. Philadelphia, 32 Pa. 381.

An Act which subjects all mortgage interests to taxation in common with other property at the place where the mortgaged premises are situated is not a violation of the uniformity clause of the Constitution; nor, as respects prior mortgages, is it an impairment of the obligation of contracts. State v. Runyon, 41 N. J. L. 98; Desty, Taxn. 331.

A mortgage in the hands of the mortgagee is liable to be taxed at the domicile of the creditor. 2 L. R. A.

People v. Halsey, 58 Barb. 547; Norton v. Shelby Co. 118 U. S. 425 (30 L. ed. 178).

Clark, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This case comes here upon an appeal, under the Act of 1811, from the settlement by the auditor-general and state treasurer, against the Delaware Division Canal Company, for state taxes on the bonded indebtedness of the company under the Act of June 30, 1885.

The claim of the Commonwealth is for taxes upon that portion of said indebtedness held by resident owners, at the rate of three mills on the nominal value thereof, for the year ending on the first Monday in November, 1886.

The Delaware Division Canal Company, the defendant, as we learn from the findings in the court below, is a corporation of the State of Pennsylvania, chartered in 1858, and having authority to borrow money, issue bonds, and to secure the same by mortgage. During the year ending as aforesaid, the defendant's bonds, secured by mortgage, were outstanding to the amount of $800,000; of these $700,000 were held by residents, and $100,000 by nonresidents of the State. The company denies the authority of the Legislature to require an assessment to be made by the treasurer; and, although it made a return of the amount of the outstanding indebtedness, it refused to assess the tax or deduct it from the interest as required by the 4th section of the Act referred to.

The company further contends that by the first section of the Act of 1885, all mortgages, money in the hands of solvent debtors, etc., are made taxable at the rate of three mills "on the dollar of the value thereof, annually," which is the actual value; and, therefore, to create a

Baltimore Appeal Tax Ct. v. Patterson, 30 Md. 308; Latrobe v. Baltimore, 19 Md. 13; Desty, Taxn. 330.

A nonresident loaning on a mortgage in this State is subject to a personal tax herein. Re Jefferson, 35 Minn. 215.

A tax on money at interest, secured by mortgage on land, is a tax neither on the coin, the land on which the security is taken, nor upon the paper upon which the promise to pay is written, but on the chose in action or right to collect the debt. State v. Earl, 1 Nev. 394; Desty, Taxn. 330.

Property in notes; where taxable.

Property in notes must be at the place where the owner resides, and not at the place of deposit of the evidence of the debt. Hunter v. Page County, 83 Iowa, 379; Desty, Taxn. 66.

So a resident of Iowa was held liable to taxation on notes deposited by him in Illinois, and which were never in fact brought into Iowa. Wilcox v. Ellis, 14 Kan. 588; Desty, Taxn. 63.

A note payable at a specified place in the State is an "indebtedness within the State," within the meaning of the Revenue Law, notwithstanding the owner of the note may be a nonresident, and absent. Ankeny v. Multimohah Co. 8 Oreg. 386. Compare Johnson v. Oregon City, 2 Oreg. 327.

Where land is sold and conveyed, and notes given for the purchase money, the vendee may be taxed for the land, and the vendor for the notes received for the purchase money. Wilcox v. Ellis, 14 Kan. 608; People v. Ogdensburg, 48 N. Y. 390; Poppleton v. Yamhill Co. 8 Oreg. 337.

Property of nonresident held by resident trustee.

Property held by a resident trustee for a nonresident beneficiary is subject to state taxation. Price v. Hunter, 34 Fed. Rep. 365.

"Property," as used in the Constitution, excludes "money," credits, investments in bonds, etc. Pullen v. Raleigh, 68 N. C. 451.

valid tax on corporate loans the rate must be applied to the actual, and not the nominal, value thereof, and that the actual value can be ascertained only by assessment in due form of law, upon notice to the holder and with the right of appeal. Its contention is that, in view of the provisions of the first section of the Act, the system of taxation provided for in the 4th section, as to corporate loans, is repugnant to that clause of the Constitution which provides that "All taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects, within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax."

The argument is that the taxing section of the Act subjects all the taxable subjects therein designated, including corporate loans, to a tax of three mills on the dollar of their value; that all the other subjects are valued and taxed according to such value by the local assessors, while corporate loans are, without being valued and assessed, taxed at their nominal value; that nominal value is not a certain measure of actual value, which is often much greater and often much less; so that, in many instances, the tax upon corporate obligations is much more, and, in many others, much less, than it would be if imposed upon the actual value.

The case of Com. v. Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, 104 Pa. 89, which has been much referred to in the argument of counsel, on the subject of assessment, presented a wholly different question from that involved in this controversy. The taxation there complained of was of corporate bonds, under the Act of June 7, 1879 (P. L. 112), and its Supplement of June 10, 1881 (P. L. 90).

By the express words of these Acts, such securities were made taxable at the rate of four mills "on every dollar of the value thereof," which was the precise basis for assessment of individual property and securities, under the general revenue system of the State, by the local assessors; only the rate was different. The phrase "every dollar of the value thereof" was held to be the actual value; and as neither the Act of 1879 nor 1881 made any provision for the ascertainment of the actual value, it was held that they did not constitute an independent scheme for the taxation of corporate loans, but were to be aided by the machinery of the Act of 1844; for as the loans were taxable in the hands of resident owners, at their actual value, a legal ascertainment of that value was essential to the assessments. The tax of a citizen, as we there said, is the result of the rate applied to the value of the property he owns, and he is not taxed until the rate is thus applied by some legal mode of adjustment. It was held, further, that neither the return of the amount of the indebtedness, nor the account settled by the auditor-general thereon, could be taken as an assessment, for neither the corporation nor the accounting officer of the Commonwealth had any authority to make it. That could not be regarded as an assessment of an ad valorem tax, made by a person whose interests were adverse, who was charged with no duty, and was under no oath or obligation; where the real party in interest had no notice, no right to interfere if he had notice, and no appeal.

As there was no other means of assessment provided by law, it was the duty of the local 2 L. R. A.

assessors, in making the general assessment in 1880 and in 1881, to value and assess corporate bonds wherever found in the hands of resident owners; and it was presumed in law that these officers had performed their full duty in the premises.

But, by the Act of June 30, 1885 (P. L. 193), the Legislature has attempted to supply the machinery, which was found to be wanting in the Acts of 1879 and 1881, for taxation of corporate loans, and, in so doing, has adopted substantially the system suggested by the 42d section of the Act of April 29, 1844, relating to the taxation of municipal loans, in the hands of resident holders.

By the first section of the Act of 1885, all mortgages, money owing by solvent debtors, etc., are made "taxable for state purposes, at the rate of three mills on the dollar of the value thereof, annually."

By the 4th section, however, it is provided, "that hereafter it shall be the duty of the treasurer of each private corporation, incorporated by or under the laws of this Commonwealth, or the laws of any other State, or of the United States, and doing business in this Commonwealth, upon the payment of any interest on any scrip, bond or certificate of indebtedness issued by said corporation, to residents of this Commonwealth, and held by them, to assess the tax, imposed and provided for state purposes, upon the nominal value of each and every said evidence of debt, and to report, on oath, annually on the first Monday of November, to the auditor-general, the amount of indebtedness of the corporation owned by the residents of this Commonwealth, as nearly as the same can be ascertained; and it shall be his further duty to deduct three mills on every dollar, of the interest paid as aforesaid, and return the same into the state treasury," etc.

By the 6th section the obligations of public or private corporations, the tax upon which is required by law to be collected by the corporation from the holder, and paid into the state treasury, are wholly withdrawn from the general and ordinary processes of assessment by the local assessors.

We are clear in our convictions that if there is any constitutional authority to impose the tax under the 4th section of the Act, the settlement by the accounting officer was rightly made against the company; the Act constitutes the company, or its treasurer as such, the collector of the tax; and, upon failure to discharge the duty imposed by law, the settlement is properly made against the company, whose servant he is, as in case of default of any other officer of the government, upon whom a like duty is imposed.

The obligation rests upon the company; but as the company can only act through its officers, the default of the officers is esteemed the default of the company, and the penalty is visited upon them. The treasurer is designated, in order that there may be no evasion; he has exceptional opportunities to know, and has the power in his own hands to perform, the several matters required. The system of collecting state taxes was first introduced under the 42d section of the Act of April 29, 1844, where it is applied to municipal loans, and by the Act of April 30, 1864 (P. L. 218), was first extended to the loans of private corporations

In a number of cases, both before and since the adoption of the present Constitution, this court has affirmed the right of the Commonwealth to impose this duty upon corporations, both public and private. Maltby v. Reading & C. R. Co. 52 Pa. 140; Com. v. Phoenix Iron Co. 1 Pearson, 383; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Com. 66 Pa. 69; Com. v. Martin, 107 Pa. 185; Com. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 104 Pa. 89.

In the last case cited we said: "We can see no constitutional or other difficulty in the way of obliging the officers of corporations, municipal or private, by appropriate legislation, to assess and collect taxes upon their corporate loans or stocks. This method of reaching subjects capable of successful concealment, and liable to escape the notice of the most vigilant assessor, has for many years been recognized as a valid exercise of legislative power . . . The tax is imposed indiscriminately upon all mortgages, etc., in the hands of the owner or possessor, but the corporation is made the collector of the tax upon the corporate loan. This was the construction put upon the Act of April 30, 1864, by this court, in the case of Maltby v. Reading & C. R. Co. 52 Pa. 140, and the reasons there assigned are generally applicable here.

The case of Maltby v. Reading & C. R. Co., supra, it is true, was overruled in the Supreme Court of the United States [in the case of State Tax on Foreign Held Bonds, 82 U. S.] 15 Wall. 300 [21 L. ed. 179], in so far as it recognized the taxation of bonds in the hands of nonresident owners; but to the extent stated, it is still of undoubted authority.

But assuming the power of the Legislature to enforce this method of collecting, it is contended that the tax is not uniform on the same class of subjects, and is therefore illegal and void; that whilst all mortgages, money in the hands of solvent debtors, etc., are by the Act of 1885 made taxable for state purposes annually, at the rate of three mills "on the dollar of the value thereof," the like obligations of private corporations are to be assessed, at the same rate, upon "the nominal value."

The actual value of private or individual obligations for money in the hands of solvent debtors is, as a general rule, equivalent to their nominal value. Such obligations are not ordinarily put upon or quoted in the market, and therefore have no variable market value as other securities have; on the contrary, the actual value of corporate securities is dependent upon a variety of conditions, independent of the value of the debtor's estate—the fluctuations of trade, the date of maturity, the rate of interest, the amount of competition, and generally upon the stringency of the market and the financial condition of the country. Some of these securities, it is said, upon which interest is regularly paid, sell in the market as low as fifty cents, and others, perhaps, as high as one hundred and fifty cents, on the dollar. And it is argued that as by the first section of the Act of 1885 individual and corporate obligations constitute a single class for taxation the Act unjustly discriminates between them in the fourth section, and that therefore the taxes imposed cannot be said to be uniform upon the same class of subjects.

The first section of the Act does indicate certain subjects for taxation at a certain rate, and these may in some sense be said to constitute a general class; but the classification of these subjects is extended by the fourth section—one class, consisting of the securities of private corporations, is to be taxed at their nominal value, and the residue (excepting the securities of municipal corporations, which are still taxable under the 42d section of the Act of April 29, 1844) constitute another class, taxable at the same rate, but upon their value, to be ascertained under the ordinary processes of assessment by the local assessor.
2 L. R. A.

The new Constitution does not withdraw the power of classification from the Legislature (Kitty Roup's Case, 31* Pa. 211; Kittanning Coal Co. v. Com. 79 Pa. 100); indeed, the power is necessarily implied in the constitutional provision to which the 4th section of the Act of 1885 is supposed to be obnoxious.

The power to impose taxes for the support of the government, subject to the limitations of the Constitution, still belongs to the Legislature; the selection of the subjects, their classification and the methods of collection are purely legislative matters. When the action of the Legislature, with respect to these matters, is not repugnant to the Constitution, it would certainly be a case of the grossest inequality, which would call for the intervention of the courts. Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 85 Pa. 170.

It may be conceded, however, that classification should be made according to some reasonable, practical rule, drawn from experience, which would prevent a gross inequality in the burdens of taxation. "It must," in the language of Mr. Justice Agnew, "visit all alike in a reasonably practical way, of which the Legislature may judge, but within the just limits of what is taxation. Like the rain, it may fall upon the people in districts and by turns; but still it must be public in its purpose and reasonably just and equal in its distribution, and cannot sacrifice individual right by a palpably unjust exaction. To do so is confiscation, not taxation; extortion, not assessment; and falls within the clearly implied restriction in the Bill of Rights." Re Washington Ave. 69 Pa. 352.

Absolute equality is of course unattainable; a mere approximate equality is all that can reasonably be expected. A mere diversity in the methods of assessment and collection, however, if these methods are provided by general laws, violates no rule of right, if when these methods are applied the results are practically uniform. If there is a substantial uniformity, however different the procedure, there is a compliance with the constitutional provisions (Fox's Appeal, 112 Pa. 353, 3 Cent. Rep. 561); even when there may be some disparity of results, if uniformity is the purpose of the Legislature, there is a substantial compliance. Hunter's App. 42 Legal Int. 394; Loughlin's App. 19 W. N. C. 517.

Nor is classification necessarily based upon any essential differences in the nature or, indeed, the condition of the various subjects; it may be based as well upon the want of adaptability to the same methods of taxation, or upon the impracticability of applying to the various subjects the same methods, so as to produce just and reasonably uniform results; or it may be based upon well grounded considerations of public policy.

Hence it is that some classes of corporations are taxed upon net earnings, or income; others upon capital stock, the value thereof to be ascertained by their annual dividends, or in a certain event upon the actual value of the shares; others upon their gross receipts; insurance companies upon the gross amount of their premiums; coal and mining companies at a specific sum for every ton of coal mined, etc.

Real estate, for taxation, has been classified as seated and unseated, and for municipal purposes may, perhaps, admit of further classification. Kitty Roup's Case, supra.

Collateral inheritances are distinguished from those that are direct, the former being subject to taxation, the latter not. Foreign insurance companies have been distinguished from domestic companies, and taxed independently and differently. Germania L. Ins. Co. v. Com. 85 Pa. 515.

So trades, professions, callings, and even single men, have been taxed by classification, and it has been said that professional men may be classified as physicians, lawyers, clergymen, etc.; tradesmen as merchants, mechanics, etc.; and other persons as bankers, manufacturers, etc., and a uniform tax assessed upon each class. Hanger's App. 109 Pa. 79.

Not only have taxes been laid in all these various forms, rated on values, on dividends or profits, on premiums, on net earnings, and on gross receipts, but also by specific sums on specific articles. The roadbed, station houses, rolling stock and equipments of a railroad company; the canal bed, and berm banks, the locks, lock houses, etc., of a canal company; the banking house or place of business of a banking company, etc., are withdrawn from the ordinary process of general taxation and are reached in a tax upon capital stock, which has always been regarded as a tax upon the property and assets.

These several classifications and departures from uniformity in methods, were intended simply to bring about a just uniformity in results. So places of amusement and the luxuries of life may be taxed in relief of the necessities; household and kitchen furniture, gold and silver plate, exceeding a certain value, pleasure carriages, and gold and silver watches, kept for use, prior to the Act of May 13, 1887 (P. L. 114), were selected from the like articles in trade, and from other articles of personal property, and with money at interest, were subjected to a special tax. Illustrations might be multiplied to show that classification does not depend upon differences in the physical nature or condition of the subjects selected, but upon a variety of considerations.

Corporate obligations by the fourth section of the Act of 1885 are taken out of the general designation of subjects contained in the first, and as a distinct class are subject to a different standard of valuation, and the tax to a different method of collection. There are several reasons why corporate and individual obligations should be distinguished, in classification, not arising wholly out of any essential difference in their physical nature, perhaps, but out of want of adaptation in our general tax laws to reach them, in the ordinary methods of taxation. They are, as a class, transferable by delivery, and therefore capable of concealment. The transactions out of which individual securities originate in the ordinary course of business for the loan of money, have more or less publicity.

Experience has shown that the ordinary methods of valuation, as to these, do not fail of enforcement; but in the case of corporate loans, whilst corporate mortgages may be recorded in one city or county, the bonds may be found in the pocket of the holder in another city or county of the Commonwealth. Experience has taught us that, in the ordinary processes of valuation, they are not found; the law, generally applicable, lacks adaptation to the discovery of this quality of obligations. Moreover, their negotiability gives them a commercial quality; a vast brood of bonds is covered by a single mortgage, and as they are issued they fly from hand to hand throughout the whole commercial world; it is only upon their annual return at the interest periods that their ownership can be ascertained.

These securities constitute one of the commodities on sale in the market; they are sensitive in many instances to the conditions which affect the price of stocks. They are subject to great fluctuations, caused by the condition of the money market or the condition of the country, and sometimes by artificial or even accidental means. Well informed men must differ greatly in their estimate of the value of such property. The stock market exhibits changes in the quotations daily, sometimes hourly. Presumptively, however, the nominal value is the true value of securities yielding and paying interest; and the Legislature has therefore fixed the nominal value, or the par value, for the purpose of taxation. These peculiarities of corporate securities, with others, perhaps, that might be mentioned, arising partly from their nature and properties, and partly from a want of adaptation in our general system to reach this quality of subjects, gives rise to their distinct classification.

The moment we concede the power to classify we have disposed of the question of uniformity, for then all that is required by the Constitution is that the taxes shall be uniform upon the members of a class. Kitty Roup's Case, supra.

Classification for purposes of taxation, as a general rule, is a matter for the Legislature; it is the uniformity of taxation, according to that classification, which is for the courts; and it is plain that the Act of 1885, having constituted corporate loans in the hands of resident holders a distinct class, does not discriminate against any member of that class. The tax is not upon the corporation, it is upon the holder of the corporate bonds; and the holder may be an individual, a partnership, a banker or broker, or a private corporation; the law is general, and applies to all holders.

Whether the tax is paid or not is a matter of indifference to the corporation, for if they pay it, they may defalk it from the interest. The tax being paid by the debtor, out of the interest he pays to the creditor, we cannot see that there is any ground of complaint, that the obligations are taxed at their face value; the tax is to be deducted from the interest, and the payment of the interest, by the debtor himself, is presumptive evidence of his solvency. Com. v. Phoenix Iron Co. supra.

As to the power of the Legislature, under such circumstances, to fix the face value of the obligation as the value for taxing purposes, we think there can be no doubt.

"The right of the financial officers of the corporation," says Chief Justice Thompson, in Delaware Railroad Company v. Commonwealth, 66 Pa. 66, "to retain the three mill tax, under the Act of 1844, out of the interest payable to loan or bondholders of the company, under the Act of April 30, 1864, without an assessment of the county commissioners, or assessing officers, was maintained to be undoubted in Maltby v. Reading Railroad Company, 52 Pa. 140, and reasserted in Commonwealth v. Phoenix Iron Company [1 Pearson, 393]. The question is therefore settled." To the same effect are Susquehanna Canal Co. v. Com. 72 Pa. 72; Buffalo & E. R. Co. v. Com. 3 Brewst. 374, and Com. v. Martin, 107 Pa. 185.

The Act of 1844 was the beginning of our present revenue system; that Act repealed all laws theretofore passed for levying taxes for State purposes; the methods provided by the 42d section of that Act for assessment and collection of state taxes on municipal bonds has met the approval of the profession, and has in all cases been recognized as valid by the courts. A reference to the cases already cited will abundantly verify this statement.

The 4th section of the Act of 1885 is a substantial copy of the 42d section of the Act of 1844; its purpose was simply to apply the same system to the taxation of corporate loans. It has proved to be an efficient and just method of collecting taxes upon this class of securities; it is easy of enforcement and precludes the escape of large amounts of taxable property which would evade collection in the ordinary methods, and we are of opinion that it is in no way repugnant to the provisions of the Constitution.

Although there is some diversity in the methods of procedure, as well as in the standard of valuation in the taxation of individual and corporate obligations, there is, in fact, no great disparity in result; the difference is more apparent than real. Individual mortgages, money in the hands of solvent debtors, etc., are ordinarily—indeed, we think universally—valued at their face.

The actual value of an individual mortgage, or of an obligation for money in the hands of a solvent debtor, is presumptively its face value. If the mortgage is bad, or the obligor is not solvent, the debt is not taxable; if, on the contrary, they are good, the common experience of business men is that the face value is the actual value, ascertained in the ordinary modes of assessment.

But in Noad's Appeal, 112 Pa. 337, 3 Cent. Rep. 561, it was held that the tax on mortgages, etc., imposed by the first section of the Act of 1885, does not extend to such securities, held by private corporations; that these are reached by the tax on capital stock, under the Act of 1879. The fourth section of the Act of 1885 only requires the treasurer of the corporation to assess the tax imposed by the first section; and as there is no tax imposed by that section, on mortgages, etc., in the hands of private corporations, it follows, of course, that they are not to be assessed or any deduction made for taxes from the interest thereon.

Foreign corporations exercising their franchises under the laws of other States and countries are beyond the reach of our processes of taxation. We could not require them ordinarily to comply with any such regulation of our law, and therefore they are necessarily excluded from the provisions of the Act. Such foreign corporations as are engaged in business in the State might, doubtless, be required to comply as a condition of their right so to do; but this could only embarrass the action of the local assessor, and upon this ground doubtless they were wisely excluded from the operation of the Act.

We are of the opinion, therefore, for the reasons given, that the treasurer of the Delaware Division Canal Company was bound to make this assessment and to deduct the tax off the interest paid; the word "off" in the 4th section was doubtless intended for "off;" this is a manifest blunder, and cannot be permitted to change the plain meaning of the Legislature.

According to the findings of the learned Judge of the court below, $300,000 of the bonds of the Delaware Division Canal Company were outstanding at the time specified in the return: of these $100,000 were held by nonresidents of the State, and $415,000 by corporations of the State of Pennsylvania; the residue being $285,000 therefore, is all that would appear to be subject to the tax imposed by the first and fourth sections of the Act of 1885.

That the defendants have a legal standing to contest the constitutionality of the law, and the validity of the settlement, we have no doubt; if the tax were illegal the company would have been under no obligation to retain it, or to pay it to the State.

The judgment is therefore reversed, and judgment is now entered against the defendant, and in favor of the Commonwealth, in the sum of $940.50 with interest at the rate of 12 per cent per annum from June 27, 1887, and costs.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT, SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF GEORGIA.

UNITED STATES

v.

Mary P. HUTCHESON et al.

(....Fed. Rep. ....)

*1 Where the quarterly returns of a

*Head notes by SPER, J.

2 L. R. A.

postmaster, in which are reported receipts for sale of stamps, etc., and amount of commissions claimed for cancellation of stamps, have been regularly rendered to the department and have been passed upon by the auditor, and the balances therein found to be due the Government have been each quarter carried into a general account—held, that such action by the auditor is a complete allowance of the commissions claimed and adjustment of such quarterly returns.

2. Where the credits in the general account kept by the auditor against the postmaster, and made up as above stated, show that the postmaster has fully paid all balances so charged, so that a complete balance could be struck upon such general account held, that in such case there is a complete settlement of the account, and that thereafter the commissions covered by such adjusted accounts were not withheld in the power of allowance by the Postmaster General so as to give him the right to "withhold" the same within the meaning of the Act of Congress of June 17, 1878 (20 U. S. Stat. at L. 141). There was nothing to "withhold."
3. If the Postmaster General, in the exercise of the power conferred upon him by the Act of June 17, 1878, before the allowance of credit for commissions is made, directs that it shall not be made, and it is not made, but in lieu thereof credit is given on the account kept with the postmaster for the amount of the allowance deemed reasonable by the Postmaster General, the balance shown due the Government by such an account would be prima facie sufficient, but not conclusive, evidence against the postmaster.
4. Where an account of a postmaster, regular on its face, has been adjusted and allowed by the proper accounting officers and fully paid, such officers cannot, after the term of office of the postmaster has expired, evolve ex parte a balance in favor of the Government, founded solely upon a general and vague allegation of fraud in accounts formerly passed upon, so as to make such balance prima facie evidence against the postmaster and his sureties. Such allegations must be specific, and sustained by competent evidence.

(February, 1886.)

ACTION against principal and sureties in a postmaster's bond, to recover the amount alleged to be due from the principal as postmaster to the United States Government. Judgment for defendants.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion Mr. Du Pont Guerry, Dist. Atty., for the United States.

Messrs. Lester & Ravenel for defendants.

Speer, J., delivered the following opinion: The District Attorney has brought suit in behalf of the Government against the defendants on a postmaster's bond. The Government has offered in evidence a certified copy of the bond, a certified copy of a demand for $1,296.26, and what purports to be a transcript of the account kept by the postoffice department with the defendant Mary P. Hutcheson as postmaster at Marysville, Georgia; and appended thereto are copies of the quarterly returns or accounts current of the said postmaster, rendered to the postoffice department during her incumbency of the office.

This account and the returns are under one certificate from the department, the language of which is that the writing annexed to the certificate is "a true and correct statement of the account, from October 1, 1878, to June 30, 1885, of Mrs. Mary P. Hutcheson, late postmaster at Marysville in the State of Georgia, and that the papers thereto appended are copies of papers pertaining to his accounts in the office of the sixth auditor."

2 L. R. A.

The Government has also offered in evidence a certified copy of an order made by the Postmaster General, which is in the following words:

Post Office Department,
Office of the Postmaster General,
Washington, D. C., Oct. 30, 1886

Ordered No. 230.

Being satisfied that Mary P. Hutcheson, late P. M. Marysville, Johnson Co., Ga., has made a false return of business at the postoffice at said place during the period from Oct. 1, 1878, to June 30, 1885, in order to increase her compensation beyond the amount she would justly have been entitled to have by law; Now, In the exercise of the discretion conferred by the Act of Congress entitled "An Act Making Appropriations for the Service of the Postoffice Department for the Fiscal Year ended June 30, 1879, and for Other Purposes," approved June 17, 1878 (section 1, chapter 259, Supplement to Revised Statutes), I hereby withhold commissions on the returns aforesaid and allow as compensation (in place of such commissions and in addition to box-rents) deemed by me under the circumstances to be reasonable, during the period aforesaid, the rate of $10 per quarter, and the auditor is requested to adjust her accounts accordingly.

Wm. F. Vilas,
Postmaster General.

An inspection of the certified copies of the accounts current, or quarterly returns of the postmaster, shows that they are made upon the forms prescribed by the department, and that there are parallel columns provided for the figures stating the amount of the different items of the account as rendered by the postmaster and as found by the auditor upon adjustment. It further appears from the figures entered in red ink in the column provided for the entries by the auditor, that the findings of the auditor as to the items of the accounts agreed with the statement of the accounts as rendered by the postmaster. It further appears from inspection that the general account kept by the department with the postmaster was made up in the following manner: On the debit side the postmaster is charged quarterly with the balances found due by the auditor on adjustment of the quarterly returns of the postmaster, the aggregate of which up to and including the quarter ending June 30, 1885, is $771.88. On the credit side the postmaster is given credit for his payments or deposits made to the credit of the Government, the aggregate of which amounts to $771.96. On the debit side of the account, however, there are additional entries which appear under date of "December, 1886"—long after she had ceased to be postmaster, and long after the last entry on the credit side, showing an amount more than sufficient to offset the debit items—these are stated to be for "amount of commissions illegally retained" during the quarters stated from 1878 to June 30, 1885. These items aggregate $1,296.39.

A general balance is struck upon the account below these items, leaving the defendant in debt to the Government, according to the account, in the sum of $1,296.26. And for this amount the Government now brings suit.

It is contended by the district attorney that the provision in the Act of June 17, 1878 (20 U. S. Stat. at L. 141), "That in any case where the Postmaster General shall be satisfied that a postmaster has made a false return of business, it shall be in his discretion to withhold commissions on such returns, and to allow any compensation that under the circumstances he may deem reasonable," gave to that officer the power to make the order which he did make on October 30, 1886, and under it to reopen the entire account from 1878 and charge back upon the postmaster the excess of the commissions which had been retained in excess of the $10 per quarter deemed reasonable by the Postmaster General; and that the balance shown on the account after such recharges were made is to be taken as prima facie correct in this proceeding.

The court does not so construe the law, nor does it think the statute referred to applicable to the facts of this case.

The action of the auditor in passing upon each quarterly return which covered the charges for commissions, and in carrying the balance therein found to be due the Government into the general account of the postmaster, was a complete adjustment of such quarterly returns; and since the Government account shows that such adjusted balances were fully paid and that there was no balance due in February, 1886, we do not think there was anything for the Postmaster General to "withhold." The postmaster had already been given credit for the commissions claimed, and had been paid in full.

We think the meaning and scope of the statute is simply this: If the Postmaster General shall be satisfied that a postmaster has made a false return of business, it shall be in his discretion not to give the postmaster credit for the amount of commissions claimed in such returns, but to allow any compensation that under the circumstances he may deem reasonable.

If the Postmaster General had made the order fixing the compensation deemed reasonable by him before giving the postmaster credit for the commissions, and had given the postmaster credit on his account for the $10 per quarter instead, and had withheld the credit of commissions claimed in excess of that amount, the Government's account would have shown the balance now sued for, and would have been prima facie sufficient; but that is not the case at bar.

But even such an account would not be conclusive upon a postmaster. He has the legal right to the commission fixed by the statute for the service, if actually performed, and may plead that right when sued upon his bond, or may assert it in an independent suit against the Government, brought in the court of claims or in a circuit or district court since the Act of March 3, 1887. 24 Stat. at L. 505.

It is not questioned that even after the adjustment and allowance of an account, the department ought to withhold payment of a balance found due a postmaster or other officer, if it be discovered that the account is fraudulent; or even where the account has been fully adjusted and paid, there can be no doubt of the right of the Government to recover the money so fraudulently obtained upon proper proof of fraud. But where an account regular on its face has been adjusted by the proper accounting officers and fully paid, such officers cannot, after the term of office of the postmaster has expired, evolve ex parte a balance in favor of the Government, founded solely upon a general and vague allegation of fraud in accounts formerly passed upon, so as to make such balance prima facie evidence against the postmaster and his sureties.

Such a re-statement of the account is proper enough as a guide to the district attorney in making out his case; but the postmaster and his bondsmen have the constitutional right to a trial by jury, and to have the allegations of fraud plainly specified. Moreover, these specifications, if not self-evident, must be proven by competent evidence, before a judgment can be rendered against the citizen which would deprive him of his property.

To condense in a few words the conclusions of the court:

The postmaster is presumed to have done his duty until the contrary is made to appear by the proof. The accounts of the postmaster, in the absence of the incriminatory letter of the Postmaster General, are fairly and honestly kept and balance to a cent. That letter charges simply that the postmaster "made a false return of business during the period from October 1, 1878, to June 30, 1885," without other notice to the postmaster or other specification of fraud. In consequence the Postmaster General arbitrarily assesses and adjudges a balance against the postmaster of $1,296.26. The district attorney offers no proof to show that the Postmaster General was right in his conclusions, and admits that there is nothing he can submit either upon the face of the accounts or proof alunde to show the falsity and the fraud. He closes his case. To allow a verdict upon such a presentation, in the opinion of the court, would be to substitute assertion for proof in a judicial proceeding, to hold the plaintiff entitled to recover because the suit is brought, to adjudge the defendant guilty of fraud because she is accused, and, in other words, to presume fraud in violation of the settled rule that it is never presumed, and to avoid that sovereign and beneficent principle of the Constitution conferring upon the defendants in such cases the right to trial by jury, with due process of law, and to accept in lieu thereof the novel and dangerous formula condemned for centuries among all English speaking races, that the assertions of power are all sufficient to bereave the citizen of his property and good name, even though there is not a syllable of testimony submitted to the jury to assess the one or assail the other. It is to be hoped that the day will never come when a citizen of these United States can be adjudged guilty of malfeasance in office, mulcted in pecuniary penalties, upon the evidence of the unsworn and unsupported statement of an official, howsoever elevated in station or great in power.

The jury is directed to return a verdict for the defendants.

ALABAMA SUPREME COURT.

Joseph WHEELER

McGUIRE, Scroggins &amp; Co.

( — Ala. — )

1. An agent placed in charge of a retail store to conduct the business, with express authority to use money especially deposited for that purpose, and the cash receipts of the business, in purchasing goods, is a general agent in conducting the business of the store with special powers to purchase, and cannot bind the principal by a purchase on credit.
2. In order to bind a principal by ratification, assent or acquiescence to prior acts of his agent in excess of authority actually given, a knowledge of the material facts must be brought home to him.
3. Any evidence is relevant, on an issue as to

NOTE.—General and special agents defined.

A general agent is one appointed to do all acts connected with a particular business or employment. A special agent is one appointed to do a single act. Keith v. Horshberg Optical Co. 48 Ark. 133.

Power to sell and collect constitutes a special agency. Robinson v. Anderson, 3 West. Rep. 377, 133 Ind. 122.

Power to act generally, in a particular business, or a particular course of trade in a business, however limited, would constitute a general agency, if the agent is held out to the world, however restricted his private instructions may be. Dunn v. Duncan, 17 Ill. 272; Craig v. First Nat. Bank, 1 West. Rep. 403, 114 Ill. 515; Story, Ag. § 17.

That the authority of an agent is limited to a particular business does not make the agency special; it may be as general in regard to that as if the range of it were unlimited. Hall v. Moffatt, 10 Bush. 323; Craig v. First Nat. Bank, 1 West. Rep. 403, 114 Ill. 515; Anderson v. Cornsley, 21 Wend. 273; Jeffrey v. Jilgower, 18 Wend. 313; Houstron v. Dungan, 30 Wis. 332.

A general agent is one who has unlimited power in the transaction of all kinds of business; but an agent to transact business of a particular kind is, as to that business, a general agent. Wheeler v. Mouth, 9 Smiles & H. 470.

"A general authority," says Mr. Bouvier (Inst. Vol. 2, p. 14), "is one which extends to all acts connected with a particular employment embracing an intermediate power. A man may be a general, without being a universal, agent, and generic language, giving the most extensive agency, will be confined within such bounds as to make the agent a general, and not a universal, agent. A special agent is one whose authority is confined to a special or an individual instance. Story, Inst. 14. And see Walker v. Ralston, 10 Mo. 505; Tomlinson v. Collett, 3 Black. 433; Dunlop's Pastry, Ag. 301.

General and special agents distinguished.

There is an important distinction between a general agent and a particular agent. Jacobs v. Todd, 3 Wend. 32; Anderson v. Cornsley, 21 Wend. 273; Rivins v. His 9 N. H. 333; Whitcomb v. Tuckett, 13 East. 403; 1 Parsons, Cont. 30.

Those who deal with an agent whose authority is limited to special purposes are bound at their peril to know the extent of his authority. Robert v. Ober, 25 Kan. 336; Robinson v. Anderson, 3 West. Rep. 377, 133 Ind. 122; Hend v. Postell, U. & P. A. R. Co. 5 West. Rep. 301, 42 Mich. 512.

If a particular agent exceed his authority, the principal is not bound. Purvis v. Armour, 20 U. S. 307, 417 7 L. ed. 730; Fleming v. Hector, 2 Mees. & W. 176; Todd v. Emly, 7 Mees. & W. 427; 9 Mees. & W. 333; East India Co. v. Henderson, 1 Esp. 111; Wentin v. Burford, 3 Cramp. & M. 301; Jordan v. Norton, 4 Mees. & W. 154; Byles v. Gilre, 5 Mees. & W. 645; Waters v. Brocken, 1 Youngs. & J. 43; Donald v. Adams, Amb. 455. And see Rodney v. Culbertson, 21 Pa. 537.

But if a general agent exceed his authority the principal is bound. Duke of Brunswick v. Wood, 12 Clark & F. 343, 273; Nelson v. Brohan, 10 Mod. 300, 9 L. R. A.

the implied authority of an agent to exercise powers in excess of those expressly given him, which shows prior, similar acts and tends to prove or disprove the knowledge of the principal, and the reliance on the part of those dealing with the agent upon the principal's recognition of such acts.

4. Where a man gave an agent in charge of a retail store authority to purchase goods, when he was on the eve of leaving home to be absent for some months, which he revoked on his return, it is a question for the jury whether the parties dealing with the agent, after such revocation, had notice thereof.
5. The principal is not estopped to deny the authority of his agent to do acts in excess of the authority expressly given him, because he might have known that the agent was exercising such power if he had exercised ordinary diligence; he is not required to distrust his agent.

Where an agent is supplied by his principal with money to buy goods, and the agent buys the goods on credit, the principal is not liable to the seller of the goods, notwithstanding the goods have come to his use, unless he had authorized the vendor to trust him by previously allowing the agent to purchase on credit. Boston Iron Co. v. Main, 9 N. H. 333; Dunlop's Pastry, Ag. 301; Malynn, 33 Brewster, 42, 13 Vin. Abr. 8.

A master is not responsible for a contract entered into by a servant to whom he had always given cash for making purchases. Rusby v. Scarlett, 1 Esp. 73; 1 Parsons, Cont. 45, as with any particular agent who obtains on credit goods which the principal gave him money to purchase. Fleming v. Hector, 2 Mees. & W. 176.

Authority of agent.

An agent with power to conduct a business has authority to do everything necessary or proper and usual in the ordinary course of the business. Hinton v. Mechanics Bank, 20 U. S. 1 Post. 45 7 L. ed. 473; Boydell v. Kennedy, 20 La. Ann. 670; Gorman v. Ins. Co. v. Grinnell, 112 Ill. 31; Hanner Tobacco Co. v. Jenison, 49 Mich. 433; Cummings v. Hargrett, 9 Mo. 172; Taylor v. Labrousse, 14 Mo. 572, 17 Mo. 333; Hamlin v. P. Steamboat Co. v. Brown, 34 Pa. 77; Dunlop v. Hawley, 18 Wend. 313; Shepherd v. Milwaukee Gas Light Co. 11 Wis. 24; Hridenbush v. Lowell, 2 Barb. 8.

If the purchase made by the agent was a part of the business, the principal is liable; otherwise not. Sulphur v. Dyles (Mich.) 3 West. Rep. 314.

One can be bound only by the authorized acts of another. He cannot be charged because another holds a commission from him, and falsely asserts that his acts are within it. Mechanics Bank v. New York & N. H. R. Co. 13 N. Y. 333; Grant v. Norway, 10 C. R. 333; Hubberty v. Ward, 3 Rich. 330; 1 Parsons, Cont. 42.

has the right to rely on the statements concerning his own agency. Hend v. Postell, U. & P. A. R. Co. 5 West. Rep. 301, 42 Mich. 512; Howe Machine Co. v. New Eng. Iron, 33; Parsons & M. Bank v. Rutledge, 10 N. Y. 333.

Principal estopped to deny authority of agent.

When one holds another out to the world and accredits him as his agent in determining the liability of the principal the question is, not what authority was intended to be given to the agent, but what authority was a third person dealing with him justified, from the acts of the principal, in believing was given to him. Griggs v. Saldan, 3 New Eng. Rep. 73, 30 Vt. 331.

Suffering another to represent himself as agent with power to make a particular contract stops the principal from denying his liability thereunder. Fleming v. Hector, 2 West. Rep. 377, 30 Mo. App. 577.

If one, with notice that his agent assumes to have and to exercise a power he really does not possess as agent, permits the agent to hold himself out as clothed with such power, then the principal will be as fully bound by the acts of the agent as though the latter possessed the power. Collins v. Cooper, 45 Tex. 403.

Though an agent exceeded his authority in making but may act on the presumption that third parties dealing with the agent will not be negligent in ascertaining the extent of his authority.

6. The knowledge of an agent, to operate as constructive notice to the principal in Alabama, must have been acquired after the relation of principal and agent was formed.

7. Where a jury finds that the evidence as to any fact, essential to plaintiff's right of recovery, and as to which the burden of proof rests upon him, is evenly balanced, or in equilibrium, the verdict must be for defendant.

(December 12, 1888.)

A PPEAL by defendant, from a judgment of the Lawrence County Circuit Court in favor of plaintiffs in an action to recover for goods sold and delivered. Reversed.

The points presented sufficiently appear from the opinion.

Mr. Joseph Wheeler for appellant.

a certain contract, yet if he had previously made contracts of a similar character which had been approved by the principal, the latter would be bound by the contract in question, if he permitted it to be performed by the other party without notice that the agent exceeded his authority in making it. Gallinger v. Lake Shore Traffic Co. 57 Wis. 529.

Where the agent acting, as he supposed, for the best interest of his distant principal, had gone beyond his instructions, if the principal did not choose to affirm the act, it was his duty, when informed of the agent's act, to give immediate information of his repudiation. Law v. Cross, 65 U. S. 1 Black, 68 (17 L. ed. 185).

A principal who does not use the means within his reach, which for his own protection prudence would suggest, to ascertain how his agent clothes with general powers in a particular business conducts that business, should not be heard to deny notice of the authority which the agent has assumed to exercise, or to deny the existence of such authority, when to do so would operate to the injury of a person who, on the faith of an open and long continued exercise of such apparent power, has dealt with the agent in the belief of its real existence. Collins v. Cooper, 55 Tex. 460.

A principal is estopped from denying his agent's representation, as against a third person, when he has clothed the agent with power to do an act upon the existence of some extrinsic fact. Bank of Batavia v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 7 Cent. Rep. 825, 106 N. Y. 105.

When a principal, with knowledge of the facts adopts and takes the benefit of the acts of his agent he cannot afterwards impeach the agent's acts in that particular. French v. Barre, 2 New Eng. Rep. 809, 57 Vt. 567; Hakes v. Myrick, 69 Iowa, 189.

Ratification of acts of agent.

If a principal, with knowledge of the facts, ratify a contract with reference to his property made by another, he is bound by the contract. Drake v. Gregg, 75 U. S. 8 Wall. 242 (19 L. ed. 409); Stark v. Starr, 94 U. S. 477 (24 L. ed. 276).

If an agent, without authority, sells the property of another, assuming to act for him, and the latter waives the tort, and ratifies the contract, in an action against the purchaser, he must ratify it as the agent made it. Rogers v. Holden, 2 New Eng. Rep. 659, 142 Mass. 196.

Ratification operates upon the act ratified precisely as though authority to do the act had been previously given, except where the rights of third parties have intervened between the act and ratification. Cook v. Tuilla, 55 U. S. 18 Wall. 882 (21 L. ed. 933).

A subsequent assent by a principal is equivalent to an original authority. Clark v. Van Biesedyk 18 U. S. 9 Cranch, 153 (3 L. ed. 688).

If a principal ratifies that part of a transaction which favors him, he ratifies the whole. Gaines v. Miller, 111 U. S. 336 (23 L. ed. 466).

Principals adopt and ratify an agent's acts by accepting a settlement by him, and bringing an action upon a covenant in a submission to arbitration signed by him. Smith v. Morse, 75 U. S. 9 Wall. 56 (19 L. ed. 507).

2 L. R. A.

Messrs. Simpson & Jones and T. N. McCallan for appellees.

Clopton, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Appellees seek to recover the price of certain goods, which they allege were sold and delivered to appellant through T. A. Tatham, as his agent. The agency was not disputed, but defendant contends that Tatham was in his employ merely as a clerk, and was not authorized to purchase goods on a credit and bind him.

The plaintiffs contend that Tatham was a general agent, having authority to transact all of defendant's mercantile business, or was held out by defendant, or permitted to hold himself out, as such, so as to justify the belief that he was clothed with the powers of a general agent. The question mainly controverted by the parties relates to the character of the agency and the extent of his authority.

The general rule is that one who deals with an agent is bound to ascertain the nature and extent of his authority, but in the application of the rule a distinction is observed between general and special agencies. The power to do everything necessary to its accomplishment may be included in a particular agency, so that private instructions as to the particular mode of execution, which are not intended to be communicated and are not communicated to the party with whom the agent may deal, will not be regarded as limitations on his power. But with this qualification a special authority must be strictly pursued.

A general agent may exceed his express authority, and the principal, nevertheless, be bound. The scope and character of the business which he is empowered to transact is, as to third persons, the extent and measure of his authority. By his appointment the principal is regarded as saying to the public that he has the authority to transact the business in the usual and customary modes. Secret limitations on his power, or private instructions as to the mode of transacting the business, will not affect the rights of third persons who have no notice of such limitations or instructions. When a general agent transacts the business intrusted to him within the usual and ordinary scope of such business, he acts within the extent of his authority, and the principal is bound, provided the party dealing with the agent acts in good faith, and is not guilty of negligence which proximately contributes to the loss. Louisville Coffin Co. v. Stokes, 78 Ala. 372.

Third persons, dealing with a person as a general agent are not acquitted of all duty to inquire and ascertain the character and extent of his agency; but if on inquiry ascertained to be general, actually or apparently, they are not bound to inquire whether there are secret limitations or private instructions, unless they have bound thereby. Du Souchet v. Dutcher, 12 West. Rep. 802, 113 Ind. 249.

Where an agent makes a contract outside of his actual and apparent power, and the fruits of his contract are received by his principals in ignorance of the material facts, such receipt and retention will not amount to an adoption and ratification of the unauthorized contract. Bohart v. Oberne, 38 Kan. 234.

One cannot be permitted to repudiate a contract made in his name by an assumed agent, on the ground of want of authority in the agent to make it, without restoring all the money which he received under the contract. Las Vegas First Nat. Bank v. Oberne, 8 West. Rep. 558, 121 Ill. 25.

Ratification operates retroactively.

A ratification of an unauthorized act of an agent is retroactive and equivalent to original authority. Hoesac Min. & Milling Co. v. Donat, 10 Colo. 529.

Subsequent ratification of the acts of an agent is as effective to bind the principal as previous authority, provided the principal has knowledge of the action which he ratifies. Levick's App. (Pa.) 2 Cent. Rep. 61; Camden & A. R. Co. v. Core (Pa.) 2 Cent. Rep. 343.

The ratification of an agent's acts, with knowledge of the circumstances, relates back to the time when such acts were performed, and binds the principal the same as if authority had been given in advance. U. S. Express Co. v. Rawson, 8 West. Rep. 665, 108 Ind. 215.

There must be some mutuality between the ratifying principal and the third party who is to be affected by his ratification, else the ratification will not have a retrospective effect as against the interests of such third party (Johnson v. Johnson, 31 Fed. Rep. 700); but no new or additional consideration is necessary to support the ratification. Drakeby v. Gregg, 75 U. S. 8 Wall. 242 (19 L. ed. 400).

Principal; Liability for acts of agent.

The general rule is that the principal is responsible civilly for the acts of his agent, but not criminally, unless done under his express authority. The principal is responsible for the negligent, but not in general for the criminal, conduct of his agent. Mitchell v. Mims, 8 Tex. 6; Johnson v. Barber, 10 Ill. 425; Dunlap's Paley, Ag. 294.

The principal is liable for any injury to a third person resulting from the negligent or unskillful manner in which an act is done by the agent, but not for an act done outside of the scope of his authority, unless he commanded it, participated in it, or ratified it with knowledge of the facts. Lilley v. Fletcher, 81 Ala. 234.

What an agent does within the scope of his authority binds his principal; and this applies, not only to his acts, but to all the representations made by him in that business. Cotton States L. Ins. Co. v. Edwards, 74 Ga. 220; Byne v. Hatcher, 75 Ga. 289; Lilley v. Fletcher, 81 Ala. 234; Hakes v. Myrick, 69 Iowa, 189; Higgins v. Armstrong, 9 Colo. 83.

It is a general rule that where the acts of the agent will bind his principal, representations, declarations and admissions respecting the subject matter will also bind him, if made at the same time and constituting a part of the res gestae. Lanblom knowledge of facts which should put them on such inquiry. As to these issues, the burden is on the plaintiffs to establish by proof that Tatham was the general agent of defendant, or that the latter, by acts, conduct or negligence, justified the belief that he had authority to purchase goods on credit for the store. If these issues be found in favor of plaintiffs, no subsequent misconduct of the agent, misappropriating the goods or otherwise, will affect their rights.

: L. R. A.

After having given a general charge, which in the main is in accord with the foregoing principles, the court instructed the jury, at the instance of the plaintiffs, that if defendant employed Tatham, and put him in charge of his retail store at Wheeler's Station, to conduct his mercantile business, and placed money to his credit in Louisville, Ky., and Nashville, Tenn., and authorized him to use this money, and also that taken in from cash sales, to replenish the stock, and instructed him not to purchase on credit, he was, as to innocent third persons, the general agent of defendant in that business, and had authority to do whatever was usual or customary in conducting the same; and if plaintiffs sold to Tatham, as such agent, the goods for the price of which this suit is brought, their verdict must be for plaintiffs, unless they had notice that Tatham's authority was limited to purchases for cash.

In considering the correctness of the instruction, any evidence, if there be such, tending to show that Tatham was apparently clothed with the powers of a general agent, cannot be taken into consideration. The proposition of the charge is that as to third persons the facts recited therein, of themselves, without the aid of extrinsic facts and circumstances, constituted Tatham a general agent, possessing authority to purchase goods on credit. In other words, he was a general agent as to plaintiffs, though they may have known the terms of his employment, including the deposit of money with which to purchase goods, except the instruction not to purchase on credit. The most general powers that may be conferred on an agent are necessarily limited to the business or purpose for which the agency is created.

The terms of the employment of Tatham—"in charge of his retail store at Wheeler's Station to conduct his mercantile business"—in connection with the limitations on his authority to purchase, limit his powers as a general agent to the transaction of the local mercantile business of defendant. In the matter of buying goods, his power was expressly restricted to the use of money specially deposited for that purpose, and to cash receipts. In appointing Tatham his agent, defendant withheld power to buy and pledge his credit under any circumstances. By the terms of his commission, Tatham may be regarded a general agent to also enlarged powers which have been ratified. Central Pa. Teleph. & S. Co. v. Thompson, 2 Cent. Rep. 545, 112 Pa. 118. See Fradley v. Hyland, ante, 749; Hubbard v. Tenbrook, post, 823.

Liability of principal; on what depends.

In a et
U 62
81
It
31
38
v.
24
of 56
11
Cl 87
8.
84
T
C
P
I
B 21
R
p p
n
a
O
A
E pe
th
p
to
T
69 Ga. 708.

Liability of agent on his contracts.

An agent may become liable upon contracts made by him in that capacity: first, where the principal is not known; secondly where there is no responsible principal (except in the case of public agents); thirdly, where he becomes liable by an undertaking of his own. Degelder v. Savory, 2 Keb. 812; Dunlap's Paley, Ag. 371.

Where an agent pledges his own credit, either expressly or impliedly, he will be bound thereby. Hovey v. Magill, 2 Conn. 680; Reed v. Latham, 40

Principal liable on contract of his agent.

Where an agent contracts in his own name and does not disclose his principal, the principal, having notice, is liable. 2 L. R. A.

conduct the local business of the store, with special powers to purchase. To construe it otherwise would be to establish the rule that a merchant who furnishes his clerk with funds to purchase goods and make immediate payment clothes him with power to buy on his principal's credit, and that persons dealing with him are relieved of the obligation to ascertain the nature and extent of his warrant of authority. This would press too far the application of the doctrine of general agency. Jaques v. Todd, 8 Wend. 88; Cleland v. Walker, 11 Ala. 1058; 1 Am. Lead. Cas. 679; 1 Pars. Cont. 48.

When an express authority is given, the extent thereof must be ascertained from its terms, and another or different authority cannot be implied, unless facts are shown from which such other authority may be presumed, or arises by implication of law. Therefore proof of facts or circumstances from which the authority is presumed or arises, by implication of law—an appearance of authority, caused, not by the agent himself, but by the defendant—is essential to his liability for Tatham's acts not within the scope of his commission. In such case it is incumbent upon the plaintiff to prove that defendant by ratification, assent or acquiescence in previous acts, held out Tatham as clothed in the character in which he assumed to act, which fairly led the plaintiffs to believe that more extensive powers had in fact been given than were conferred by the terms of the appointment.

On this question, all the circumstances of the transaction, the previous conduct of the defendant, and the usages of the business, may be properly considered. It should, however, be remarked that, in order to bind the defendant by ratification, assent or acquiescence in prior acts of his agent in excess of the authority actually given, knowledge of the material facts must be brought home to the defendant; and if, in the absence of express authority to bind defendant in the manner in which he is sought to be charged, his liability is rested on previous recognition of similar acts of Tatham as his agent, it is requisite to show that plaintiffs sold the goods to Tatham on the faith of such previous recognition. St. John v. Redmond, 9 Port. (Ala.) 428; Blevins v. Pope, 7 Ala. 371.

In this aspect of the case, any evidence is relevant which shows prior similar acts of Tatham, and tends to prove or disprove defendant's knowledge, and plaintiffs' reliance on his recognition of them.

The charge under consideration is objectionable in another respect. The authority, as hypothetically stated therein, was conferred in

Watts & S. 9; Meyer v. Barker, 8 Binn. 228; Youghiogheny Iron & Coal Co. v. Smith, 66 Pa. 840.

Liable on contract.

The agent will be liable on a contract entered into for an undisclosed principal, even if it is well known to the third party that he acts only as an agent. Merrill v. Wilson, 6 Ind. 436; Scott v. Messick, 4 T. B. Mon. 535; Wilkins v. Duncun, 2 Litt. 168; Keen v. Sprague, 3 Maine, 77; Sumner v. Williams, 8 Mass. 162; Cabot Bank v. Morton, 4 Gray, 156; Raymond v. Crown & E. Mills, 2 Met. 319; Wilder v. Cowles, 1-0 Mass. 487; Winsor v. Griggs, 5 Cush. 210; Cunningham v. Soules, 7 Wend. 106; Becker v. Robert, 13 Wend. 413; Canal Bank v. Bank of Albany, 1 Hill, 287; Taintor v. Prendergast, 3 Hill, 72; Allen v. Rustain, 11 Serg. & R. 302; Ducon v. Sandley, 3 Strobb. L. 542; Royce v. Allen, 28 Vt. 234.

Election, to proceed against principal or agent.

When a party deals with the agent, without any disclosure of his agency, he may elect to treat the after discovered principal as the person with whom he contracted. Ford v. Williams, 62 U. S. 21 How. 287 (16 L. ed. 36); Jones v. New York Guaranty & I. Co. 101 U. S. 622 (25 L. ed. 1030).

He has a right, within a reasonable time, to elect to proceed against the principal, unless in the mean time, with full knowledge as to who was the principal, and with the power of choosing between him and the agent, he had elected to treat the agent alone as his debtor. Armstrong v. Stokes, L. R. 7 Q. B. 548; Smethurst v. Mitc' 11, 1 El. & El. 622; 29 L. J. N. S. (Q. B.) 241; Thomson v. Davenport, 9 Barn. & C. 78, 30; Addison v. Gandasequi, 4 Taunt. 374; Paterson v. Gandasequi, 15 East, 62; 2 Evans, Prin. & Ag. 524.

After a third party has elected whom to sue, and has sued either the agent or the principal to judgment, he cannot after that sue the other, whether the suit has been successful or not. Garrard v. Moody, 48 Ga. 96; Cobb v. Knapp, 71 N. Y. 318; McGraw v. Godfrey, 14 Abb. Pr. N. S. 397, 56 N. Y. 610; Jones v. Ains Inc. Co. 14 Conn. 101; Kingsley v. Davis, 104 Mass. 178; Prically v. Fernie, 8 Hurl. & C. 277.

If, at the time of the sale, the seller knows, not only that the person who is nominally dealing with him is not principal, but agent, and also knows who the principal really is, and notwithstanding all that knowledge, chooses to make the agent his debtor, dealing with him alone, the seller cannot charge the principal, having once elected to sue the agent. Addison v. Gandasequi, 4 Taunt. 374; Paterson v. Gandasequi, 15 East, 62; Wilmot v. Richardson, 4 Abb. App. Dec. 614; 2 Evans, Prin. & Ag. 523.

fernan, 13 Johns. 58; Taintor v. Prendergast, 3 Hill, 72; Newman v. Greoff, 2 Cent. Rep. 421, 101 N. Y. 663; Rultzen v. Nicolay, 58 N. Y. 407; Brockway v. Allen, 17 Wend. 40; Waring v. Mason, 13 Wend. 425; Mills v. Hunt, 20 Wend. 620; Parker v. Donaldson, 2 S. L. R. A.

November, 1881, when the defendant was on the eve of leaving home to be absent for months. There is evidence tending to show that on his return in June, 1882, the authority to purchase was revoked. The transactions with the plaintiffs were in January, February and March, 1883, and were the first transactions which Tatham had with plaintiffs as agent of defendant.

An authority conferred is always revocable, unless coupled with an interest, or founded on a valuable consideration, and may be revoked expressly, or by act clearly inconsistent with its continuance. When third parties have dealt with an agent clothed with general powers the agency continues as to them, after revocation, until they have notice thereof. Also the principal may be liable for the acts of the agent, after revocation, to third persons, who never dealt with him previously, if they, in common with the public at large, are justified in believing that such agency existed, and have no notice of its revocation. Clafin v. Lenheim, 66 N. Y. 301; 1 Pars. Cont. 70.

On the case as presented by the record, these questions should have been submitted to the jury. They were withdrawn from their consideration by the instruction to find a verdict for the plaintiffs, independent of the evidence in regard to the revocation of the authority of Tatham and notice to plaintiffs.

The court also charged the jury that if the defendant placed Tatham in charge of his retail store with instructions to buy for cash only, it was the duty of defendant to keep himself posted as to the manner in which his agent conducted his business, and to see that his instructions were obeyed; and if he knew the agent was buying on credit, or could have known it by the exercise of ordinary diligence, he is estopped to deny the authority of Tatham to purchase on credit. The rule is stated by Mr. Wharton as follows:

"Where a principal conducts his affairs so negligently as to lead third parties to reasonably suppose that his agent has full powers, then, if the agent exceeds his authority, the principal must bear the loss. It is true that the principal is not chargeable with culpa levisima. He is not chargeable, in other words, with the consequences of those slight negligences into which good business men are liable to fall. But if he is negligent to an extent beyond what is usual with good business men in his department, and if, in consequence of this negligence, third parties repose trust on the supposed agent, then the loss, if loss accrue, must fall on the principal." Whart. Ag. § 123.

Though mere negligence—mere want of ordinary diligence—may furnish the agent an opportunity of undue assumption of authority, it does not of itself work an estoppel. A principal is not required to distrust his agent, nor to keep a vigilant watch over the manner in which he exercises his authority, and to see that his instructions are obeyed. He may act on the presumption that third parties, dealing with his agent, will not be negligent in ascertaining the extent of his authority as well as the existence of his agency; and negligence, to constitute a ground of liability, must have caused the plaintiffs to repose trust on the authority of Tatham, and the negligence of plaintiffs must not have proximately contributed to the loss. The charge exacts of the principal a degree of diligence not required by the law.

Many cases hold that notice to an agent is notice to his principal, though acquired before the relation is created, if present in his mind at the time of the particular transaction, and he can communicate it or act upon it without violating a legal or moral duty. It was, however, early settled in this State, that knowledge of an agent, to operate as constructive notice to the principal, must have been acquired after the relation of principal and agent was formed. This rule having been followed ever since, whatever might be our opinion were it an open question, it would not be prudent to disturb it now. Mundine v. Pitts, 14 Ala. 84; McCormick v. Joseph, 33 Ala. 401; Frenkel v. Hudson, 32 Ala. 158.

If the jury should find that the evidence as to any fact essential to plaintiffs' right of recovery, and as to which the burden of proof rests on them, is evenly balanced, or in equilibrium, their verdict must be for the defendant. Vandeventer v. Ford, 60 Ala. 610.

We have not deemed it necessary to specifically consider the numerous exceptions to the rulings of the court on the evidence, and in instructing the jury, each of which is assigned for error. We have endeavored to select such as related to the issues properly made by the evidence in its different aspects, and involved the principles on which the rights of the parties must ultimately depend, and which should govern the court in putting the case before the jury.

Evidence which proximately tends to prove or disprove these principal issues should be received, and that excluded which is incapable of affording a reasonable presumption of their truth or falsity; and charges based on partial facts, ignoring other material facts, such as a bare shipment of goods to defendant, and the appropriation of them to his use by him or his authorized agent, omitting reference to the fact of a prior purchase, and Tatham's authority, are calculated to mislead and confuse the jury, and should not be given.

Reversed and remanded.

MONTANA SUPREME COURT.

Charles P. H. BIELLENBERG, Respt.,

v.

MONTANA UNION R. CO., Appt.

(...Mont....)

1. Montana Compiled Statutes, p. 820, § 713, making every railroad corporation liable.

tion liable to the owner for damages sustained by injuring or killing an animal by running trains, is unconstitutional as attempting to create the liability without reference to any violation of law or omission of duty.

2. A statute attempting to make a railroad liable for all damages to animals by running trains cannot, in order to prevent its condemnation as being unconstitutional, be construed to mean that the killing shall be prima facie evidence of negligence.

(February 2, 1899.)

APPEAL by defendant from an order of the Silver Bow County District Court denying a new trial in an action to recover damages for the killing of a horse, in which judgment had been rendered for plaintiff. Reversed.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Mr. William H. DeWitt, for appellant:

If the defendant railroad company exercised due care, was guilty of no negligence, and the accident was unavoidable, then the plaintiff cannot recover.

Walsh v. Va. & T. R. Co. 8 Nev. 110; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Betts, 10 Colo. 481; Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Locke, 11 West. Rep. 877, 112 Ind. 404; Kansas City, L. & S. K. R. Co. v. Bolton, 36 Kan. 584; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Walton, 9 Pac. Rep. 351; Volkman v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 87 N. W. Rep. 731; Williams v. Southern Pac. R. Co. 72 Cal. 120, 13 Pac. Rep. 219; Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Henderson, 10 Colo. 1, 13 Pac. Rep. 910; Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Chandler, 8 Colo. 371, 8 Pac. Rep. 571; Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 577, notes 2, 3; P. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. McMillan, 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 538; Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. McMillan, 37 Ohio St. 554; McKissock v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co. 78 Mo. 456; Macon & A. R. Co. v. Vaughn, 48 Ga. 464; Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Williams, 53 Ala. 595; Fisher v. Farmers Loan & T. Co. 21 Wis. 73; Jeffersonville, M. & I. R. Co. v. Underhill, 48 Ind. 389; Darling v. Boston & A. R. Co. 121 Mass. 118; Drake v. Phila. & E. R. Co. 51 Pa. 240; Munger v. Tonawanda R. Co. 4 N. Y. 349; Spinner v. N. Y. Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 67 N. Y. 153; Isbell v. N. Y. & N. H. R. Co. 27 Conn. 898; Needham v. San Francisco & S. J. R. Co. 37 Cal. 409; Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. McGinnis, 71 Ill. 846; Witherell v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 24 Minn. 410; Cincinnati & Z. R. Co. v. Smith, 23 Ohio St. 227; Jackson v. Rutland & B. R. Co. 25 Vt. 150; Kentucky Cent. R. Co. v. Talbot, 78 Ky. 621; Chicago St. L. & N. O. R. Co. v. Packwood, 59 Miss. 280.

The law of Montana, 12th Session, p. 68, is invalid in its attempt to create an absolute liability upon a railroad company for killing stock. It deprives the defendant company of any defense. It makes the railroad company insurers of the safety of all stock trespassing on its track. It prescribes a rule of conclusive evidence.

See Cairo & F. R. Co. v. Parks, 32 Ark. 181; Little Rock & F. S. R. Co. v. Payne, 33 Ark. 816; Macon & A. R. Co. v. Vaughn, 48 Ga. 464; Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Williams, 53 Ala. 595; Graves v. Northern Pac. R. Co. 5 Mont. 558.

It is not the law that, the killing being proved, negligence is presumed, and that the burden of proving due care is thereby cast upon the defendant. Such is not the law in the absence of a positive and direct statute creating such rule of evidence, although, where such rule is established by statute, it may be good.

Little Rock & F. S. R. Co. v. Payne, supra; Walsh v. Virginia & T. R. Co. 8 Nev. 110, supra; 2 J. R. A.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Betts, 10 Colo. 481; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Walton, 9 Pac. Rep. 351, 355; 8 Wood, Railway Law, p. 1565, § 422, and cases in note; Kentucky Cent. R. Co. v. Talbot, 78 Ky. 621; Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. p. 581, citations par. 8.

Such is not the law in jurisdictions where the statute does not compel railroad companies to fence their tracks, although such rule of evidence may be good where the companies are required to erect and maintain fences along their right of way.

Walsh v. Virginia & T. R. Co. 8 Nev. 110; Bethje v. Houston & C. T. R. Co. 26 Tex. 604; Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. McMillan, 37 Ohio St. 554; McKissock v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co. 78 Mo. 456; Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Hudson, 50 Miss. 572; Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Chandler, 8 Colo. 371, 8 Pac. Rep. 571; Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. supra, citations par. 5.

If section 1, Laws of the 12th Session, p. 68, is void for the purpose of its creation, it is not valid for a totally different purpose, and one not even implied in its language.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Betts, 10 Colo. 481; Cooley, Const. Lim. 177, 178, 188.

Messrs. Knowles & Forbis, for respondent:

Section 713, p. 826, Comp. Laws of Montana, does not make the railroad company absolutely liable, but only shifts the burden of proof. Under it, the killing being proven, the burden is upon the railroad company to show due care or want of negligence.

A statute which, by giving an exact meaning or effect to its words, would make certain acts conclusive evidence of a fact has been construed to be only prima facie evidence of the fact.

Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 178, p. 246; Kip v. Hirsch, 18 Abb. N. O. 167. See Lathrop v. Dunlop, 4 Hun, 218, 63 N. Y. 610; Walker v. Hall, 84 Pa. 488-486; Little Rock & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Payne, 33 Ark. 816, 34 Am. Rep. 55; Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Williams, 53 Ala. 595; Macon & A. R. Co. v. Vaughn, 48 Ga. 464.

The legislative power can create or change the rules of evidence and enact that the killing of cattle by a railway train shall be prima facie evidence of negligence.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 288, 267-269, marg.

In some States the courts have adopted the rule as the proper one, that, the killing being proven, the railway company should show that it exercised due care.

Danner v. S. C. R. Co. 4 Rich. L. 329, 55 Am. Dec. 678; Wilson v. Wilmington & M. R. Co. 10 Rich. L. 52; Murray v. South Carolina R. Co. Id. 237; Galpin v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 19 Wis. 609.

In Montana, cattle are what are termed free commoners. No one can recover for the trespass of an animal unless his premises are inclosed by a lawful fence.

Comp. Laws Mont. p. 958, § 1119; Smith v. Williams, 2 Mont. 195; Waters v. Moss, 12 Cal. 535; Chase v. Chase, 15 Nev. 259.

The fact that the plaintiff placed his horse in his own field would not change the rule and make the horse unlawfully upon track of defendant.

Richmond v. Sacramento Valley R. Co. 18 Cal. 351; Housatonic R. Co. v. Waterbury, 28 Conn. 101; Tonawanda R. Co. v. Munger, 5 Denio, 255, 49 Am. Dec. (N.) 264; McCoy v. California Pac. R. Co. 40 Cal. 532.

Bach, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This action is for damages for the alleged negligent killing of plaintiff's horse by defendant, upon its railroad. The defendant appeals from the order denying a new trial.

One of the alleged errors relied upon by appellant is the following instruction, given by the court at the request of respondent: "Under the laws of this Territory, the killing being proved, or being admitted, as in this case, the negligence of the defendant must be presumed, and the burden of proving the exercise of due care devolves upon the defendant; and unless the defendant shows that it exercised reasonable care and caution to avoid the killing, then you will find for the plaintiff."

Section 718, p. 826, Comp. Stat. provides as follows: "Every railroad corporation or company operating any line of railroad or railway, or any branch thereof, within the limits of this Territory, which shall damage or kill any horse . . . by running any engine or engines, car or cars, over or against any such animal, shall be liable to the owner of such animal for the damages sustained by such owner by reason thereof."

It is conceded by counsel for respondent that this section, literally construed, is unconstitutional; and we would not pass upon the question if we were not of the opinion that the instruction complained of is erroneous, unless it can be held good under the statute, thus stating a rule more favorable to the appellant than the law requires.

There is an apparent conflict of authorities upon this question; but upon a careful investigation of the cases the conflict disappears, and few authorities can be found sustaining a statute similar to that which we are now considering. The leading case upon the subject is Thorpe v. Rutland Railroad Company, 27 Vt. 140, and this case has been followed in the case of Rodemacher v. Milwaukee Railroad Company, 41 Iowa, 802, which also cites Ohio Railroad Company v. McClelland, 25 Ill. 148.

These cases will serve to show the distinction which we think is to be made between the case under consideration and the majority of those cases which are usually cited as sustaining a doctrine contrary to the conclusion which we have reached upon this question. The statutes of Illinois and Vermont, which the courts of those States were considering, enacted that all railroads should erect and maintain sufficient fences along their tracks, and declared that all railroads failing to comply with that law should be liable for all damages accruing to the owners of live stock killed or injured by such railroads.

The Supreme Court of the United States, in a recent case, has decided that a law compelling railroads to fence their lands is not unconstitutional, holding that it is a police regulation. R. Co. v. Beckwith, 129 U. S. 26 [Bk. 32 L. ed. 58 ].

This doctrine had already been announced by many state courts. Bearing this in mind, we find that the Vermont and Illinois cases establish the rule that where a railroad company conducts its business in violation of the law, it shall be liable for all damages to stock, which damage is the result of such violation. Such statutes, therefore, merely affix a penalty to the violation of a duty imposed by a valid law of the land. That this distinction is recognized by the courts of Illinois is apparent from a later case in the supreme court of that State (Ohio & M. Railroad Company v. Lackey), hereafter referred to in this opinion.

There is no law in this Territory which compels railroads to fence their lands; and in order to hold the literal provisions of this section constitutional, we must lay down the doctrine that the Legislature can inflict a penalty upon one who is doing a lawful act in a lawful manner. We think such a construction violates the principles of the Constitution.

After a careful consideration of all the cases, we firmly believe that the case from the Iowa Supreme Court is the only case which sustains a statute similar to ours. It would be almost impossible to add aught to what has been said upon this subject by other courts, and we content ourselves with stating the conclusion already announced; citing as authorities the following cases: Cairo & F. R. Co. v. Parks, 52 Ark. 181; Zeigler v. South & N. Ala. R. Co. 58 Ala. 595; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Lackey, 78 Ill. 55.

In Illinois the statute required railroads to defray the expenses of burial of all persons dying on or killed by their trains. In the case last cited, the court says: "On what principle is it that railroad corporations, without any fault on their part, shall be compelled to pay charges which, in other cases, are borne by the property of the deceased, or, in default thereof, by the county in which the accident occurred? An examination of the section will show that no default or negligence of any kind need be established against the railroad company; but they are mulcted in bearing charges if, notwithstanding all their care and caution, a death should occur in one of their cars, no matter how caused, even if by the party's own hand. Running of trains by these corporations is lawful, and of a great public benefit. It is not claimed that the liability attaches for a violation of any law, the omission of any duty, or the want of proper care and skill in running their trains . . . The penalty is not aimed at anything of this kind. We say penalty, for it is in the nature of a penalty, and there is a constitutional prohibition against imposing penalties where no law has been violated or duty neglected."

As we have already stated, counsel for appellant concedes that the statute, when literally construed, is unconstitutional, because it lays down a rule of conclusive evidence; but he claims that the statute should be construed so that it may establish a rule of prima facie evidence of negligence; that is to say, when it appears in evidence that one of the animals mentioned in the statute has been killed by a railroad, a prima facie case of negligence shall be deemed to have been established. Counsel cites as authority section 178 of Endlich on the Interpretation of Statutes.

We apprehend the rule to be as follows: Courts will not set aside a declaration of the legislative will, unless it is plainly in violation of a constitutional provision; that where a statute upon its face is capable of two interpretations, one void, as being contrary to the Constitution, the other valid, the courts will adopt the latter; but (citing from the learned author, Mr. Endlich, § 180) "The rule stated does not warrant the avoidance of unconstitutionality in a statute by forcing upon its language under construction a meaning which, upon a fair test, is repugnant to its terms. Where the language will not fairly bear a construction consistent with the Constitution, the courts can only refuse to enforce the Act."

The statute under consideration was evidently enacted to create a conclusive presumption. It is not susceptible of two interpretations. If the court could force upon it such a meaning as is sought to be established, we could with equal propriety declare it to be but a statement of the common law that a railroad should be liable for damages to stock resulting from the negligence of such railroad; and such an interpretation would have a twofold authority—one that, thus construed, it is a declaration of the common law, and not in conflict with it, which is a general rule of interpretation; the other that, when thus construed, it violates no principle of common justice; for to say that the owner of live stock may permit it to go upon the lands purchased by a railroad company, and may recover damages for any injury inflicted upon it by such company, irrespective of actual negligence upon its part, seems to present a case of great injustice, and this violates the rule of statutory construction contained in section 638, p. 236, Comp. Stat.

Counsel for respondent has cited upon this point a case from 58 Ala. 595—Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Williams.

In a later case from the same State the court refused to give such a construction to the statute, and held that a rule of positive and conclusive proof was contained in the statute, which was therefore unconstitutional. See Zeigler v. South & N. Ala. R. Co. 58 Ala. 594.

We are of the opinion that the instruction cannot be sustained, either as a statutory rule of law or as a correct interpretation of the general law upon the subject of negligence.

There are cases cited in the brief of respondent which declare the rule to be as stated in the instruction under review. But the great weight of authority is against such a proposition, and we consider it to be contrary to the true principle governing the case. The gist of the action is negligence, and until some negligence is shown there cannot be said to be any liability. Much has been said in argument in this case for and against this rule, as applied to railroads. It is not for us to declare what the law should or should not be, or to declare that what is law for one is not law for all. The Legislature is now in session, and may adopt such law as to it seems wise.

This decision does not conflict with the rule established in Diamond v. Northern Pacific Railroad Company, 6 Mont. 580. That case was decided upon a statute expressly declaring that railroad companies shall keep their right of way free from dead grass, and that a failure so to do shall be prima facie evidence of negligence. Section 719, p. 880, Comp. Stat.

And in the opinion in that case the learned judge further fortified the decision upon the ground that there are accidents arising from certain causes, the very existence of which show a prima facie case of negligence, the cause of the accident in that case being sparks from a locomotive. Mr. Bailey, in his work upon the Conflict of Judicial Decisions, has collected the cases upon either side of this question; and a reference to page 250 of his work will show an extensive line of authorities sustaining the rule as stated in the Diamond Case.

The order appealed from is reversed, with costs, and the cause remanded to the court below for a new trial.

McConnell, Ch. J., and Liddell, J., concur.

WEST VIRGINIA SUPREME COURT OF APPEALS.

Matilda MCCLINTOCK et al., Appts.,

v.

Eugene LOISSEAU et al.

(...W. Va....)

"1. Where a father purchases land, and has it conveyed to his son, the presumption is that the *Head notes by SNYDER, J.

NOTE.—Trusts between family relatives; presumptions.

In trusts between family relatives, a presumption arises on the face of the transaction that a gift was intended and that no trust results. So a feoffment by a father to a son, without other consideration, raises no use by implication in the father; for the consideration of blood settles the use in the son, and makes it an advancement (Grey v. Grey, 2 Swanst. 598); so if a grandparent purchases in the name of his grandchild. Ebrand v. Dancer, 2 Ch. Cas. 26; Loyd v. Read, 1 P. Wms. 627; Currant v. Jago, 1 Coll. 285, n.; Tucker v. Burrow, 2 Hem. & M. 525.

This result, however, is merely a presumption, and may be overcome. 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1041.

Extrinsic evidence, either written or parol, is admissible on behalf of the parent to rebut the presumption of an advancement or gift, and to show purchase was intended to be an advancement or gift to the son, and no trust results in favor of the father. But extrinsic evidence, either written or parol, is admissible on behalf of the father to rebut this presumption, and to show that a trust results in his favor.

2 L. R. A.

2. Where a contract has been made to accomplish a fraudulent purpose, a court of equity will not, at the suit of a party to the that a trust results; and, conversely, such evidence may be used to fortify and support the presumption. Kilpin v. Kilpin, 1 Myl. & K. 520; Lamplugh v. Lamplugh, 1 P. Wms. 111, 113; Hall v. Hill, 1 Dr. & War. 94, 114; Murless v. Franklin, 1 Swanst. 13; Tucker v. Burrow, 2 Hem. & M. 515, 524; Sidmouth v. Sidmouth, 2 Beav. 447, 455; Williams v. Williams, 82 Beav. 370; Dumper v. Dumper, 3 Giff. 583; Devoy v. Devoy, 3 Smale & G. 403; Stevens v. Stevens, 70 Maine, 12.

The presumption that a purchase by the parent in the name of a child is an advancement and not a trust may be rebutted by evidence or circumstances (Binion v. Stone, Freeman, Ch. 169, Nels. 63; Rumboll v. Rumboll, 2 Eden, 17; Finch v. Finch, 13 Ves. Jr. 43; Murless v. Franklin, 1 Swanst. 13); so where a child was already provided for. Elliot v. Elliot, 2 Ch. Cas. 231; Pole v. Pole, 1 Ves. Sr. 76; fraud—a particeps delicti—if the contract is executory, either compel its execution, or decree its cancellation; nor, after it has been executed, set it aside, and thus restore to the plaintiff the property or other interest which he has fraudulently transferred. It will leave the parties in the position in which they have placed themselves.

3. This rule applies not only to the original parties to the fraudulent transaction, but to their heirs, and to all parties claiming under or by title derived from them, where no equitable rights intervene to protect such parties.

4. Evidence. A father purchased real estate, and had it conveyed to his son by an absolute deed. In a suit in equity by the heirs, after the father's death, to set up a resulting trust in their favor, they cannot be permitted to show that the conveyance to the son was made for a fraudulent purpose by the father, in order to rebut the presumption that it was an advancement or gift to the son.

(December 8, 1888.)

APPEAL by plaintiffs, from a decree of the Wood County Circuit Court dismissing their bill filed to obtain partition of certain real estate. Affirmed.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.
Mr. Barna Powell for appellants.

Snyder, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Louis J. Loisseau died intestate, in Wood County, this State, on February 12, 1879, leaving a widow, Henrietta Loisseau, and five children, viz.: Eugene, Matilda, August O., Louis N. and Alfred Loisseau, as his heirs at law. Eugene was the son by a former marriage. He was born in France and always resided there. The father removed to and became a resident of the United States many years before his death. After his immigration to this country he married the aforesaid Henrietta, who is the mother of the four children last above named.

The decedent and his family, except the said Eugene, resided in the City of Parkersburg for several years before and at the time of his death. The said Matilda having become the wife of W. N. McClintock, she and her husband, in December, 1879, filed their bill in the Circuit Court of Wood County against the widow and the other children of said Louis J. Loisseau, deceased, and the S. P. Wells Oil Company, a domestic corporation.

The material allegations in the bill are that prior to the year 1874 the said Louis J. Loisseau had purchased in the name of his son Eugene, from one B. H. Latrobe, certain real estate, consisting of several lots of land situate in the City of Parkersburg, which was afterwards, by deed dated May 19, 1877, conveyed by said Latrobe to said Eugene; that, acting under a power of attorney executed by said Eugene and wife in the City of Paris, France, the said Louis J., in his own right, and as attorney in fact for said Eugene and wife, executed to S. P. Wells

1. 82 N. Y. 393; Mariatt v. Warwick, 19 N. J. Eq. 439;
2. Cutler v. Tuttle, Id. 549; Owens v. Owens, 28 N. J.
3. Eq. 60; Roman v. Mali, 42 Md. 518; Jones v. Gorman,
4. 7 Ired. Eq. 21; York v. Merritt, 77 N. C. 213; Shaw v.
5. Carlisle, 9 Helsk. 594; Logan v. Gligley, 11 Ga. 243;
6. Galt v. Jackson, 9 Ga. 151; Adams v. Harrett, 5 Ga.
7. 404; DeWolf v. Pratt, 42 Ill. 196; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. 457.

Neither law nor equity will afford relief.

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18 19 20 21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28
29
30
31
32
33
34
35
36
37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47
48
49
50
51
52
53
54
55
56
57
58
59
60
61
62
63
64
65
66
67
68
69
70
71
72
73
74
75
76
77
78
79
80
81
82
83
84
85
86
87
88
89
90
91
92
93
94
95
96
97
98
99
100 was made to injure another. Randall v. Howard, 67 U. S. 2 Black, 569 (17 L. ed. 271); 1 Story, Eq. § 208.

Instance.

If the illegal contract be executed and both parties are in pari delicto, no action lies to recover money paid under it. Williamson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 58 Iowa, 125, 38 Am. Rep. 211; Stokes v. Twitchen, 8 Taunt. 422; Thistlewood v. Cracoft, 1 Maule & S. 600, 751; Burt v. Place, 6 Cow. 482; Spence v. Harvey, 29 Cal. 337; Holladay v. Patterson, 5 Oreg. 177.

Contracts executed or executory, given upon the consideration of, or stipulating for, the compounding of a felony, the forbearance to prosecute for crime or the abandonment of a pending criminal prosecution are contrary to good morals and are illegal and void. Shaw v. Reed, 30 Maine, 105; Atwood v. Fisk, 101 Mass. 368; Swartzer v. Gillett, 1 Chand. 207; Averbeck v. Hall, 14 Bush. 505; Lindsay v. Smith, 78 N. C. 328; Laing v. McCall, 50 Vt. 657; Wight v. Rindkopf, 43 Wis. 344; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. 452.

and others a deed of lease for a part or all of said real estate for the term of ten years from the 23d day of January, 1874, for $500, and the annual payment of $300 during the term of the lease; that after the death of the father, Louis J., the said Eugene and wife, by deed with special warranty, dated September 22, 1879, conveyed the whole of said real estate to the defendant the S. P. Wells Oil Company, in consideration of $1,200; that the widow, the said Henrietta Loisseau, had, at the September Rules, 1879, instituted in this court a suit to have her dower assigned in said real estate, but that afterwards, on October 13, 1879, she sold and conveyed all her interest in said real estate to the said S. P. Wells Oil Company, in consideration of $600, whereby the said oil company became entitled to the said dower interest in said real estate.

The plaintiffs then aver that the said Louis J. for many years previous to his death was disagreeable and abusive to his wife and the children of his family; that, although he continued to occupy apartments in the same house—a house owned by his wife—his habit was to supply, cook and eat his own food by himself, and leave his wife and children to shift and provide for themselves—his ultimate purpose being to leave this country, desert his wife and children here, go to France, and make that his home as soon as he could make a satisfactory sale of the real estate aforesaid; that said Louis J. purchased and paid his own money for said real estate, without the knowledge of his son Eugene, or any aid from him, but for the purpose of evading his legal responsibility to his wife and family, and, to enable him to sell and convey said real estate away from his wife without her consent, the said Louis J. made the purchase of said real estate in the name of, and had the same conveyed to, said Eugene; that the said Eugene never paid any consideration for said real estate; that it was never intended by his father that he should have any interest therein, nor did he ever claim to have any until after his father's death, but, on the contrary, admitted that it belonged to his father; that the said Eugene held the title to said real estate simply as trustee for his father; and the sole purpose the father had in making the purchase in his son's name, and having the title conveyed to him, was to enable the father, through his said son and trustee, to sell and convey the said real estate without the consent of his wife, and thus to facilitate his scheme to desert her and his family, and to defraud her of her right to dower therein, as also of any means to charge said real estate for the support of herself and children.

The bill further avers and charges that the defendant, the S. P. Wells Oil Company, its officers and agents, were fully advised that Louis J. Loisseau was the real owner of said real estate long before his death, and that they were specially informed that the plaintiffs and the other children of the said Louis J. claimed to own said real estate long before the said company purchased the same from the said Eugene Loisseau, and that the said purchase was made with full notice of the rights and interest of the plaintiffs in said real estate.

The prayer of the bill is for an account of rents and profits of said real estate, partition of the same, and for general relief.

The defendants, August C. and Louis N. Loisseau, answered, admitting the truth of the allegations of the bill, and joining in its prayer for relief.

On March 22, 1880, the cause was heard on the bill taken for confessed as to the defendant, the S. P. Wells Oil Company, and the court entered a decree granting the relief prayed for in the bill. This decree was, however, on April 2, 1881, that being a subsequent day of the same term, upon the motion of the said S. P. Wells Oil Company, suspended, and leave given to said company to file its answer, which it did on the following day.

By its answer said company denies that the said Eugene Loisseau held said real estate in trust for his father, or that the company at the time of its purchase from said Eugene had any notice of any such trust, or of any claim of the heirs of said Louis J. Loisseau, deceased, to the said real estate.

Depositions were taken and filed by both the plaintiffs and defendants; and on December 8, 1887, the cause was finally heard on its merits, and the court, being of the opinion that the plaintiffs were not entitled to any relief, entered its decree dismissing the plaintiffs' bill, with costs. From this decree the plaintiffs have appealed.

It is claimed for the appellants that inasmuch as the court, by its decree of April 2, 1881, simply suspended its former decree of March 22, 1881, it erred in dismissing the bill by its final decree without having set aside said decree of March 22, 1881. This decree, as well as the one suspending it, was made at the same term. This court has decided that the court may at any time during the same term modify or set aside any decree entered by it. Keary v. High, 29 W. Va. 381.

The court, therefore, had the legal right to suspend said decree of March 22, 1881, at the time it did; and as the final decree did, in effect, set aside and annul that decree, the appellants were not prejudiced.

It is further contended for the appellants that the facts alleged in the bill show that Louis J. Loisseau had, by resulting trust, an equitable title or right to the real estate therein mentioned, which upon his death descended to his legal heirs. It is well settled that where land is paid for by a stranger, and the conveyance made to another, a resulting trust will in equity arise in favor of the person thus paying the purchase money. Murry v. Sell, 23 W. Va. 475; Shaffer v. Petty, 30 W. Va. 248.

But where the consideration is paid by a husband or father, and the deed is made to his wife or son, the presumption is that the purchase was intended to be an advancement or gift to the grantee, and no trust results. Lockhard v. Beckley, 10 W. Va. 87.

As this rule is based on presumptions of fact, extrinsic evidence, either written or parol, is admissible, on behalf of the husband or father paying the consideration, to rebut the presumption of an advancement or gift, and to show that a trust results, and conversely such evidence may be used to fortify and support the presumption. In general this extrinsic evidence to defeat an advancement and establish a trust, as against the grantee and those holding under him, must consist of matters substantially contemporaneous with the purchase or conveyance, so as to be fairly connected with the transaction. 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1041; Jackson v. Malsdorf, 11 Johns. 91.

It has been held that possession of the estate and the receipt of its rents by the father during his life, after conveyance to his child, or a devise or lease of the property by the father after the purchase, will not be sufficient to rebut the presumption of an advancement or gift, and to establish a resulting trust in favor of the father. Lamplugh v. Lamplugh, 1 P. Wms. 111; Crabb v. Crabb, 1 Myl. & K. 511; Jeans v. Cooke, 24 Beav. 518.

According to these authorities, it seems to me the allegations of the bill are insufficient to rebut the legal presumption that the purchase and conveyance of the real estate in controversy by the father, Louis J. Loisseau, in the name of his son Eugene, was intended to be an advancement or gift to the son. On the contrary, they tend to show that the reverse was intended.

It is alleged that the purpose of the father was to deprive the wife of her dower, and the children by her of any claim upon this property for their support. If a resulting trust had existed in favor of the father, then his purpose in respect to both his wife and children would be defeated; because his wife would be entitled to dower in this equitable estate, and his children by this wife would, in part, at least, inherit it upon his death. These are the two things which the bill alleges it was the purpose of the father to prevent. In order to give this purpose the effect which the bill avers the father intended it should have, the conveyance to Eugene must be treated as an advancement or gift by the father. But, be this as it may, there is another view of the case made by the bill which concludes the right of the plaintiffs to any relief.

It is a maxim in equity that where a contract has been entered into through fraud, or to accomplish any fraudulent purpose, a court of equity will not, at the suit of one of the fraudulent parties, a particeps dolus, while the agreement is still executory, either compel its execution or decree its cancellation, nor, after it has been executed, set it aside, and thus restore the plaintiff to the property or other interest which he had fraudulently transferred. Equity will leave such parties exactly in the position in which they have placed themselves, refusing all affirmative aid to either of the fraudulent participants. The only equitable remedies which they can obtain are purely defensive.

Upon the same principle, wherever one party, in pursuance of a prior arrangement, has fraudulently obtained property for the benefit of another, equity will not aid the fraudulent beneficiary by compelling a conveyance or transfer thereof to him; and generally, where two or more have entered into a fraudulent scheme for the purpose of obtaining property in which all are to share, and the scheme has been carried out so that all the results of the fraud are in the hands of one of the parties, a court of equity will not interfere on behalf of the others to aid them in obtaining their shares, but will leave the parties in the position where they have placed themselves. 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 401; James v. Bird, 8 Leigh, 510; Johns v. Norris, 22 N. J. Eq. 102; Horn v. Star Foundry Co. 28 W. Va. 522.

2 L. R. A.

A voluntary or fraudulent conveyance, though made to defraud creditors, is binding upon the parties thereto. Chamberlayne v. Temple, 2 Rand. (Va.) 384; Core v. Cunningham, 27 W. Va. 206.

This rule applies not only to the original parties to the fraudulent transaction, but to the heirs and representatives of those parties, and, generally, to any parties claiming under or through or by title derived from such fraudulent parties, where no equity, such as a bona fide purchase, intervenes to protect them.

Thus in Owen v. Sharp, 12 Leigh, 427, it was decided that, where one makes a fraudulent bill of sale of a female slave, absolute on its face, in order to protect the property from his creditors, but with a secret trust that the grantee shall hold the property for the benefit of the grantor's daughters, the daughters cannot, in equity, establish the secret trust, and have a decree for the slave, her increase and profits. The court in that case says: "The deed being absolute, the plaintiffs attempt to establish the secret trust, and in doing so show the intent with which it was created. If the facts were reversed, if the trust had been expressed on the face of the deed, and the grantee had refused to execute it on the ground of fraud, he would then be compelled to allege his own fraud to protect himself, and could not be heard."

Thus, whenever a party, whether plaintiff or defendant, is compelled to allege his own fraud to protect himself, equity will refuse to hear him or grant any relief. Starke v. Littlepage, 4 Rand. (Va.) 368.

If the widow, Henrietta Loisseau, had prosecuted her suit, this rule would not apply in her case, for the reason that she neither claims under the husband, nor was she a party to the fraudulent transaction. Her right to dower arises out of the marital relation, and is fixed by law, regardless of the acts of the husband; but she is not a plaintiff in this suit, and, moreover, having conveyed all her right and title in the subject in controversy, she has no interest in this suit, and therefore any consideration of what might have been her rights, under other circumstances, may be dismissed.

But the female plaintiff and the other children of Louis J. Loisseau, who ask relief in this suit, come clearly within the equity rule above announced. They stand in the place of their father. They are his heirs at law, and the only claim they have or assert is derived as such heirs from their father. They are simply volunteers, claiming the benefit of his act, and seeking it through his fraud.

The defendant Eugene Loisseau, at the time his father died, had an absolute conveyance of the property, which vested in him a complete title. Proof that the father paid the full consideration would not of itself, as we have shown, raise a resulting trust in favor of the father or his heirs. In order to establish such trust, proof must be offered to rebut the presumption that the conveyance to the son was intended as an advancement or gift. This the plaintiffs attempt to do by alleging that the conveyance was fraudulent. The bill alleges that the sole purpose of the father in having the property conveyed to the son was to defraud his wife of her right of dower, and to enable him to desert his family, and avoid the responsibility of their support.

Certainly the father would not be permitted to succeed in a court of equity by alleging his own fraud; and the plaintiffs who stand in his place, and derive title from him, if they have any, cannot, for the same reason, be heard to allege the father's fraud. They must accept the whole situation. They cannot claim the benefit of the fraudulent act of the father, and escape the consequences of his fraud. If they claim under him, and upon the consideration paid by him, and none other, they can only obtain what he had. If his claim was of a nature that he could not enforce it in a court of equity, neither can the plaintiffs, claiming as his heirs, do so. What he had they got, and nothing more; and, as he had no demand which he could enforce in a court of equity, neither have they.

It necessarily follows, therefore, that if neither the father nor the plaintiffs could obtain any relief against Eugene Loissac, the grantee of the real estate in controversy, the plaintiffs are not entitled to any relief against the S. P. Wells Oil Company, the purchaser from Eugene, whether said purchase was made with or without notice of the pretended rights of the plaintiffs.

The decrees of the Circuit Court must, therefore, be affirmed.

Johnson, P., and Green and Woods, JJ., concurred.

PENNSYLVANIA SUPREME COURT.

PENNSYLVANIA R. CO., Plff. in Err.,
v.

Herbert G. MacKINNEY.

(....Pa....)

1. An injury to a passenger on a railroad train sitting next to an open window, by a blow on his eye by some hard substance, probably a piece of coal, hurled with considerable force, while the engine of another train was directly opposite the window, passing in another direction, where there is nothing to explain the cause of the accident, does not create a presumption of negligence against the carrier.

2. No presumption of negligence on the part of a carrier arises from the naked fact that an injury has been inflicted upon a passenger, unless it appears that it did not result from something entirely disconnected with the operation of the road and with which neither the company nor its employes had anything whatever to do. Such presumption must arise, if at all, from the cause of injury or from other circumstances attending it.

(March 4, 1882.)

ERROR to the Common Pleas No. 8, of Philadelphia County (Finletter, P. J.), to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have resulted from defendant's negligence. Reversed.

The case is fully stated in the opinion.

Messrs. George Tucker Blapham and John Hampton Barnes, for plaintiff in error:

Under the evidence in this case no presumption of negligence arose against the carrier, and the plaintiff below was not entitled to recover.

Although the action be by a passenger, the mere fact of injury is not sufficient to raise a presumption of negligence against the carrier; but the evidence upon the part of the plaintiff must show a positive act, occurrence or omission upon the part of the defendant, contributing to the injury, which may be reasonably referred to the negligence of the defendant.

Federal St. & P. V. R. Co. v. Gibson, 96 Pa. 88; Laing v. Colder, 8 Pa. 481; Sullivan v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 80 Pa. 224; Pittsburg & O. R. Co. v. Pillow, 76 Pa. 518; Philadelphia negligence on his own part, the burden of proof as to his contributory negligence is on the defendant. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Redeker, 67 Tex. 181; Washington & G. R. Co. v. Gladmon, 68 U. S. 15 Wall. 401 (21 L. ed. 114).

NOTE.—Burden of proof on charge of negligence.

Presumption of negligence; how established.

To establish "presumption of negligence" the accident must first be connected with the defendant by direct evidence, either that the act was his

2 L. R. A.

P. R. Co. v. Anderson, 94 Pa. 357; South Side P. R. Co. v. Trick, 10 Cent. Rep. 367, 117 Pa. 390.

Mr. Mayer Sulzberger, for defendant in error:

The mere happening of an injurious accident raises prima facie a presumption of neglect and throws upon the carrier the onus of showing that it did not exist.

Laing v. Colder, 8 Pa. 488; Spicer v. Phila. W. & B. R. Co. 11 Cent. Rep. 643, 119 Pa. 61; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Raiorden, 13 Cent. Rep. 177, 119 Pa. 577.

The rule of Laing v. Colder is subject only to the modification that when the cause of the injurious accident is known to result from the act of a stranger, the onus is shifted.

Starrett, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

In May, 1887, plaintiff below was a passenger on one of defendant's cars, bound for Philadelphia. While he was occupying the third or fourth seat from the front end of the car, left side, next to an open window, and the train was running rapidly, some distance south of Trenton, he received a violent blow on the left eye, causing the severe and painful injury of which he complains. The nature of the injury indicated that he was struck by some hard substance, hurled with considerable force. Surgical examination of the eye, made on arrival at Philadelphia, showed that it was probably a piece of coal. Small particles of some hard substance resembling coal were found and removed from the injured organ.

Plaintiff testified that the blow was so severe that it almost stunned him, and threw him back into his seat. He further said: "As I recovered, to an extent, from the shock, I covered the right eye to see if the sight was entirely lost, as I presumed the blow had burst the left eye. I found I could see a little, but I was suffering excruciating agony."

The character of the injury and circumstances attending it were such that plaintiff had no opportunity for successful investigation, and of course, he was unable to explain how it occurred. All he knew was that, at the time he was struck, he saw, through the open window at which he was sitting, one of the company's trains passing in the opposite direction, immediately on the left of the train on which he was carried; that simultaneously with receiving the blow, the engine of that train was directly opposite the window, and was thus interposed between him and that side of the railroad and land adjacent thereto. That fact, it was claimed by him, negatived any inference that the injury resulted from the act of a stranger, or anyone not connected with the operation of the road. His theory was, that a piece of slate or coal was negligently thrown by the fireman or other employé on the passing engine, either in an effort to get rid of it, or in drawing or working at his fire, etc.; but, of course, that could not be assumed by the court as an admitted or established fact.

While the circumstances in evidence tended to sustain the plaintiff's theory, the cause of the accident was not satisfactorily explained by either party. The company's employés in charge of the train on which plaintiff was testified that they knew nothing of the occurrence, and had done nothing to bring it about. Other employés, in charge of passing trains, testified that they had not drawn or worked at their fires, or thrown off any slate, coal or any other substance from their engines or tenders, and that none had fallen therefrom.

Evidence was also introduced to prove that all the appliances, machinery, etc., of the road, including the engines, were in good order, and that the latter were properly provided with spark arresters, etc. There was no derailment of the train, no collision with any train or other objects on the road, no breaking of any machinery connected with the south bound train, nor any evidence of anything wrong with the passing trains or cars.

In view of the evidence tending to prove a state of facts such as that above indicated, the defendant company presented four points for charge, in the first and fourth of which binding instructions to find for defendant were asked on the ground that there was no evidence of negligence proper for the consideration of the jury. These points, we think, were rightly 101, 102 N. Y. 297; Holbrook v. Utica & S. R. Co. 19 N. Y. 238; Kirst v. Milwaukee, L. S. & W. R. Co. 46 Wis. 489; Byrne v. Roadie, 2 Hurl. & C. 728; Scott v. London & St. E. Docks Co. 3 Hurl. & C. 398; Briggs v. Olson, 4 Hurl. & C. 408; Kearney v. London, B. & S. C. R. Co. L. R. 5 Q. B. 411, L. R. 5 Q. B. 728.

Rule in action based on contract.

BY THE COURT.
J. H. MCKINNEY, CLERK.

ter as to raise a presumption of negligence. Edgerton v. New York & H. R. Co. 30 N. Y. 227; Mullen v. St. John, 39 N. Y. 367; Lyons v. Rosenthal, 11 Hun, 48; Brown v. N. Y. Cent. & H. R. Co. 11 Cent. Rep.

3 L. R. A.

ing down of a coach (Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Beyer, 83 Ill. 60); by the upsetting of a stage coach (Wall v. Livenay, 6 Colo. 465; Doyce v. California Stage Co. 35 Cal. 400); or of a sleigh (Ryan v. Gilmer, 2 Mont. 517).

refused. The other two points were as follows:

2. "Under the circumstances of the present case, no presumption of negligence arises against the defendant from the mere fact that the plaintiff was a passenger, and was injured while riding in the defendant's cars."

3. "The burden of proof is on the plaintiff to show that the injury, for which he sues, was occasioned by the defendant; and, under the circumstances of the present case, the burden resting on the plaintiff is not satisfied by the mere presumption of negligence which sometimes arises against the carrying company when a passenger is injured."

The learned president of the common pleas also declined to affirm either of these points, and emphasized his refusal by charging, inter alia, as complained of in the first specification of error, viz.: "The rule of law, as applicable to this case, is that the mere happening of an injurious accident to a passenger while in the hands of the carrier will raise prima facie a presumption of negligence, and throws the onus that it did not exist on the carrier."

"Under this principle and the facts in this case, the jury will begin their consideration with the fact established that the injuries were the result of negligence of the defendant. This fact must be rebutted or answered by evidence. In other words, the defendant must show by evidence that it was not negligent. If it has not done this the verdict must be for the plaintiff."

In immediate connection therewith, he said to the jury: "It is your duty, of course, to consider all the evidence in the case and to come to a conclusion on this question of negligence. If you find that the defendant was negligent, then the question of damages must be considered by you."

The rule clearly stated by the learned Judge in the foregoing excerpt from his general charge, is not only an old and well settled principle of law, but one of very general application in cases of injury to passengers while in the course of transportation. The only question is whether it is of such universal application that it can be invoked without proof of something more than the mere fact of an injurious accident to a passenger while in the hands of the carrier, and in the absence of any admission or evidence tending to connect the latter, or his servants, or any of the appliances of transportation, with the happening of the injury.

The rule in question has been frequently recognized, and the presumption of negligence applied in a variety of cases, among which are stage-coach accidents, resulting from breaking an axle, etc., railroad accidents, including derailment of cars, collisions, breaking of machinery, falling of berth of sleeping-car, violent outbreak among other passengers on train, explosion on passenger vessel, etc. Christie v. Griggs, 2 Camp. 79; Stokes v. Saltonstall, 88 U. S. 18 Pet. 181 [10 L. ed. 115]; Ware v. Gay, 11 Pick. 109; Hipsley v. Kansas City, St. J. & O. B. R. Co. 88 Mo. 848, 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 287; Feital v. Middlesex R. Co. 109 Mass. 398; Edgerton v. New York & H. R. Co. 39 N. Y. 229; Sullivan v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 80 Pa. 234; Cleveland, C. C. & I. R. Co. v. Wal- rath, 38 Ohio St. 461, 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 371; Pittsburg & C. R. Co. v. Pillow, 78 Pa. 510, 513; Spear v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. 119 Pa. 61, 11 Cent. Rep. 643; Memphis & O. R. Packet Co. v. McCool, 83 Ind. 392, 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 390; Laing v. Colder, 8 Pa. 481; Holbrook v. Utica & S. R. Co. 12 N. Y. 236; Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Anderson, 94 Pa. 351; Story, Bailments, 592, 601; Shearm. & Redf. Neg. §§ 280, 280 a, and notes.

In nearly every case in which the rule under consideration has been applied, it will be found that the injury complained of was shown to have resulted from breaking of machinery, collision, derailment of cars, or something improper and unsafe in the appliances of transportation or in the conduct of the business, and not from any cause wholly disconnected therewith.

In Laing v. Colder the plaintiff's arm was broken because the side of the bridge was dangerously close to the side of the track; but in that case there was evidence of contributory negligence, etc. The injury in Sullivan v. Philadelphia Railroad Company resulted from collision of the train with an obstruction on the track. In Pittsburg Railroad Company v. Pillow the injury was caused by an outbreak of violence among other passengers in the car; and in Spear v. Philadelphia Railroad Company the injury resulted from an unexplained explosion on board a crowded steamer.

In the latter case our Brother Williams summarized the controlling facts and applied the rule thus:

"The person injured was a passenger; the injury occurred after the carriage had begun, and the cause of the injury was an explosion on the boat, which was the vehicle or instrument of carriage, and which was under the exclusive care and control of the defendant's servants. The rule of law is that the mere happening of an injurious accident to a passenger while in the hands of the carrier will raise prima facie a presumption of negligence, and throw the onus of showing that it did not exist on the carrier."

Of course, the rule, as thus broadly stated, must be considered in connection with the facts which warranted its application; and this is so in regard to all the cases. The facts and circumstances connected with the injury complained of in each furnished the basis for a presumption of negligence.

As was said in Delaware Railroad Company v. Napheys, 90 Pa. 141, the general rule undoubtedly is that the party who alleges negligence as the basis of a claim for damages must prove the fact alleged, and the extent of the injury if more than nominal damages are claimed; but, in some cases, slight proof only is required to justify a presumption of negligence. The mere circumstance attending the injury when put in proof may be enough to cast the burden of exculpation on defendant. If a passenger seated in a railroad car is injured in a collision, or by the upsetting of the car, breaking of a wheel, axle, or other part of the machinery, he is not required to do more, in the first instance, than prove the fact and show the nature and extent of the injury.

A prima facie case for plaintiff is thus made out and the onus is cast on the carrier to dis-prove negligence. It is reasonable that it should be so, because the company has in its possession and under its control, almost exclusively, the means of knowing what occasioned the injury, and of explaining how it occurred, while as a general rule the passenger is destitute of all knowledge that would enable him to present the facts and fasten the negligence on the company, in case it really existed. The contract to carry implies that the company is provided with a safe and sufficient road; that its cars are staunch and road worthy; that every precaution which human skill, prudence and foresight could suggest has been taken to guard against every apparent danger that may beset the passenger, and that the servants in charge are tried, sober and competent men.

When a passenger is injured by any accident connected with the means or appliances of transportation, there naturally arises a presumption that it must have resulted from some negligent act of omission or commission of the company or some of its employes; because, without some such negligence, it is very improbable that the accident would have occurred. That is the basis on which the presumption rests, and it stands as proof of negligence until it is successfully rebutted. It arises, not from the naked fact that an injury has been inflicted, but from the cause of the injury, or from other circumstances attending it. As a rule of evidence the principle was approvingly recognized and applied in Philadelphia Railroad Company v. Anderson, 94 Pa. 851, and other cases.

In Holbrook v. Utica Railroad Company, supra, a case in some respects similar to the one before us, it appeared that at the moment plaintiff's arm was broken, the passenger car, in which he sat, was opposite a boarding car which had been placed on the adjoining track for the accommodation of the company's workmen. A long horizontal mark on the passenger car and other circumstances indicated that plaintiff's arm, as well as the car, had come in contact with some object of considerable size and strength firmly fixed in its position and probably connected in some way with the boarding car, and at the same time tended to negative any inference that the injury could have been caused by a stone or other missile thrown by any person outside. The immediate cause of the injury, however, was not explained. The case having been submitted to the jury with instructions to ascertain from the evidence whether the injury resulted from anything disconnected with the company or not, etc., a verdict in favor of the plaintiff was rendered. After stating the general rule as to the burden of proof, etc., the court of appeals said:

"It generally happens, however, in cases of this kind, that the same evidence which proves the injury done, proves also the defendant's negligence; or shows circumstances from which strong presumptions of negligence arise, and which cast on the defendant the burden of disproving it. For example, a passenger's leg is broken while on his passage in a railroad car. This mere fact is no evidence of negligence on the part of the carrier until something further be shown. If the witness who swears to the injury testifies also that it was caused by a crash in a collision with another train of cars belonging to the same carriers, the presumption of negligence immediately arises; not, however, from the fact that the leg was broken, but from the circumstances attending the fact. On the other hand, if the witness who proves the injury swears that at the moment when it happened he heard the report of a gun outside of the car, and found a bullet in the fractured limb, the presumption would be against the negligence of the carrier. It is incorrect therefore to say that the negligence of the carrier is to be presumed from the mere fact that an injury has been done to the plaintiff. The presumption arises from the cause of the injury or from other circumstances attending it and from the
2 J. R. A.

with the property and for the benefit of his principal, the latter cannot escape liability for the purchase price of goods by a secret limitation upon the agent's authority to purchase.

1. One clothing an agent with apparent authority is, as to parties dealing on the faith of such authority, conclusively estopped from denying it.

(February 25, 1899.)

ERROR to the Common Pleas No 8, of Philadelphia County, to review a judgment in favor of plaintiffs in an action to recover the value of certain goods sold to the alleged agents of defendants. Affirmed.

The facts sufficiently appear from the opinion.

Mr. Joseph L. Tull, for plaintiffs in error:

It was specially stated by the defense that Sides' employment was as salesman only, and it was equally denied that he had any authority or power to make purchases on credit of the firm with which he was employed. This being the extent and limitation of his authority to act for the firm, when it is attempted to show that he had the right to do more—the right to bind the firm by purchases on credit—the plaintiff below should definitely state what the authority of the agent was and not leave the power to bind the firm in this way to a mere inference. The burden of proving the authority in making the purchase from the plaintiffs below by Sides rests upon them.

See Hays v. Lynn, 7 Watts, 524; Am. Underwriter's Assn. v. George, 87 Pa. 241; Pa. R. Co. v. Irvine, 85 Legal Int. 411.

It is always competent for a principal to show the scope and extent of his agent's authority.

Central Pa. Teleph. & S. Co. v. Thompson, 2 Cent. Rep. 544, 112 Pa. 183.

The extent of an agent's powers depends upon the authority under which he acts.

Am. L. Ins. & T. Co. v. Shultz, 82 Pa. 46.

An agent who has no authority to purchase for his principal without express directions for that purpose, and then only with funds which have been furnished by such principal, cannot bind his principal by a purchase on credit. Such purchase being made renders the agent alone responsible.

Komorowski v. Krumdick, 56 Wis. 28; Laing v. Butler, 87 Hun, 144.

Mr. Joseph De F. Junkin, for defendants in error:

If an agent duly authorized makes a contract in his own name without disclosing his principal, and even when such principal is entirely unknown to the other contracting parties, he is nevertheless bound.

Youghiogheny Iron Co. v. Smith, 66 Pa. 843; Baymer v. Bonsall, 79 Pa. 298.

The only exceptions to this rule appear to be where, (1) the principal, in good faith, has paid the agent at a time when the creditors still gave credit to the agent and knew of no one else as principal; and (2), where the creditor has settled up with the agent, and the principal is put in a worse position by the creditor than he otherwise would have been in.

Wharton, Ag. § 469.

Mitchell, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This case affords one among many examples of the failure of the so called reformed procedure to accomplish anything towards the brevity, the clearness, the accuracy or the convenience of legal forms. So long as the fundamental principle of our remedial jurisprudence shall be that upon conflicting evidence the jury shall ascertain the facts, and upon ascertained facts the judges shall pronounce the law, so long will it be a cardinal rule of pleading, by whatever name pleading shall be called, that the line of distinction between facts and the evidence to prove them, shall be kept clear and well defined.

The notion of the reforming enthusiast that the average litigant or his average lawyer can make a shorter, clearer or less redundant statement of his case if left to his own head, than if directed and restrained by the settled forms, sifted, tested and condensed as they have been by generations of the acutest intellects ever devoted to a logical profession, is as vain as that of any other compounder of panaceas.

The plaintiffs' statement is at least three times as long as a declaration in the established forms need to have been; and about one half of it is occupied, not with the averment of facts, but with a recital of evidence. Indeed, the strongest argument for the defendants is that the statement fails to aver two essential facts, to wit: the delivery of the goods to Sides, and the agency of Sides for the defendants as his undisclosed principals.

Fortunately for the plaintiffs their statement is helped out, as to the first fact, by the bill of particulars—which, being sworn to be a copy, of their book of original entry, imports delivery as well as sale.

The agency though stated in the objectionable form of an inference from the previously recited evidence, is clearly intended to be averred and may fairly be so treated.

Taking the statement, therefore, in its plain intent, it sets out that plaintiffs sold and delivered a quantity of hams to one Sides, who was conducting a grocery business in his own name, but with the property and as the agent of defendants. The defendants filed an affidavit of defense, and a supplementary one, the substance of which is that "Sides was not the agent of defendants to purchase from plaintiffs or anyone else," and that he "was employed as salesman only, by said defendants, without any authority whatever to act for or bind defendants for the purchase of any goods or merchandise upon credit of the said defendants."

We have thus the question presented whether an agent may be put forward to conduct a separate business in his own name, and the principal escape liability by a secret limitation upon the agent's authority to purchase.

The answer is not at all doubtful. A man conducting an apparently prosperous and profitable business obtains credit thereby, and his creditors have a right to suppose that his profits go into his assets for their protection in case of a pinch or an unfavorable turn in the business. To allow an undisclosed principal to absorb the profits, and then when the pinch comes to escape responsibility on the ground of orders to his agent not to buy on credit, would be a plain fraud on the public.

No exact precedent has been cited. None is needed. The rule so vigorously contended for by the plaintiffs in error, that those dealing with an agent are bound to look to his authority, is freely conceded; but this case falls within the equally established rule that those clothing an agent with apparent authority are, as to parties dealing on the faith of such authority, conclusively estopped from denying it.

The affidavits set up no available defense, and the judgment is affirmed.

NEW YORK COURT OF APPEALS.

RE ESTATE OF Mary HOWE, Deceased.

(....N. Y....)

1. The New York Act of June 10, 1885, taxing certain property given by will

Note.—Collateral inheritance tax, a tax on privilege.

A tax on collateral inheritances is not a tax on property, but on the privilege of succeeding to the inheritance. Miller v. Com. 27 Gratt. 117; Eyre v. Jacob, 14 Gratt. 422. See Williams' Case, 3 Bland. Ch. 198; Tyson v. State, 28 Md. 577, 1 Desty, Taxn. 316. The privilege may be taxed although the property is also taxed. Eyre v. Jacob, 14 Gratt. 422.

Legislative power to impose tax.

The power of the Legislature over the subject of taxation, except as limited by constitutional restrictions, is unbounded. It is for that body, in the 2 L. R. A.

"after the passage of this Act," is not an exception to the general provision of the New York Revised Statutes declaring that "Every law, unless a different time shall be prescribed therein, shall begin to take effect only on the twentieth day after its final passage as certified by the Secretary of State."

exercise of its discretion, to select the objects of taxation. Re McPherson, 6 Cent. Rep. 739, 104 N. Y. 306.

It may raise revenue by capitation taxes, by special taxes upon carriages, horses, servants, dogs, franchises, and upon every species of property, and upon all kinds of business and trades. People v. Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 419; Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 183; People v. Equitable Trust Co. 96 N. Y. 387; Portland Bank v. Apthorp, 12 Mass. 252; Cooley, Taxn. 7; Re McPherson, 6 Cent. Rep. 739, 104 N. Y. 306.

It may restrict the succession to a decedent's es-

2. The provision of the New York Act of June 10, 1885, that an estate valued at less than $500 shall not be subject to the collateral inheritance tax applies, not to the whole estate left by a testator, but to the portion of property passing to the legatee or devisee.

(January 15, 1889.)

A PPEAL by the District Attorney of Tompkins County, on behalf of the People, from an order of the General Term of the Supreme Court, Fourth Department, reversing an order of the surrogate adjudging that certain legacies given by the will of Mary Howe, deceased, were subject to the collateral inheritance tax, imposed by chapter 488 of the Laws of 1885. Affirmed.

The facts of the case and points in controversy are sufficiently stated in the opinion.

Mr. Chas. F. Tabor, Atty-Gen., for appellant.

Messrs. Newman & McLachlan, for respondents.

Danforth, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The record shows that Mary Howe died on the 16th day of June, 1885, leaving property tate to a particular class, as to either descendants or ascendants. Eyre v. Jacob, 14 Gratt. 422; 1 Descy, Taxn. 316.

In the New York Laws of 1885, chap. 488, § 1, relating to the taxation of gifts, legacies, and collateral inheritances in certain cases, the term "lineal descendants" is limited to the children of the deceased and to their children and children's children, and does not include the children of brothers and sisters of deceased. Re Miller, 45 Hun, 244, 10 N. Y. B. R. 341.

Statute providing for collateral inheritance tax is valid.

td.
30 ly
m
F.
d.
1)
v.
r.
e.
i-
v.
to
h.

The section of the Constitution which requires that a law which imposes a tax shall state its object is not applicable to the statute providing for a collateral inheritance tax, but applies to annually recurring taxes imposed upon the entire property of the State. Re McPherson, 6 Cent. Rep. 781, 104 N. Y. 308.

The statute is not unconstitutional and void for the reason that it does not give the taxpayer notice of the proceeding against him and a hearing; for there is sufficient provision therein for notice and hearing for all parties interested, and the Act secures to every taxpayer due process of law. Id.

A tax on legacies to aliens is not a tax on commerce, nor is it an infringement of the constitutional powers of Congress. Mager v. Grima, 49 U. S. 8 How. 490 (12 L. ed. 1168); 1 Descy, Taxn. 316.

It does not confer powers upon surrogates' courts not authorized by or contrary to the Constitution. Re McPherson, 6 Cent. Rep. 781, 104 N. Y. 308.

No Act of the Legislature may be condemned as unconstitutional if by fair implication or any just construction of its language it can be upheld. Id.

When imposed.

The tax is imposed on the disposition of real esof more than $20,000 in value, and a will by which she devised it in different proportions to various persons; giving, among others, to Myra Taylor a legacy of less than $500. So far as is material to this appeal, two questions were presented to the surrogate:
2 L. R. A.

(1) Whether any of the property which passed by the will was subject to the tax imposed by the "Act to Tax Gifts, Legacies and Collateral Inheritances in Certain Cases," Chap. 488, Laws 1885. (2) And, if any, whether the legacy to Myra Taylor was liable to taxation under that Act.

The surrogate answered both questions in the affirmative. Upon appeal, the general term were of a different opinion upon the first point, and found it unnecessary to pass upon the other.

The Act was passed June 10, 1885, and declared that, "After the passage of this Act, all property which shall pass by will," etc., to any person, etc., other than the father or certain other excepted persons, "shall be and is subject to a tax of $5 on every $100 of the clear market value of such property . . . Provided, That an estate which may be valued at a less sum than $500 shall not be subject to said duty or tax."

tate past or future by deed, will, or the laws of descent, whereby any person becomes beneficially entitled in possession or in expectancy to real estate or the income thereof, upon the death of another person. 2 Bright, Dig. 837, 838.

It cannot be defeated by reciting a nominal consideration which would be deemed valuable in the technical sense of that term, for the consideration must not only be valuable but adequate. U. S. v. Hart, 4 Fed. Rep. 293; Lynn v. Lynn, 29 Pa. 889; Keeler v. Baker, 1 Helsk. 639.

No tax is imposed until the beneficiaries under the will or under the intestate come into possession or enjoyment of the property. Clapp v. Mason, 94 U. S. 569 (24 L. ed. 212); U. S. v. Hazard, 8 Fed. Rep. 361.

Taxation in proportion to value of benefit.

principles of natural justice that the . . . be regulated in the benefit which . . . t. 429. See Mager v. Grima, 49 U. S. 8 How. 490 (12 L. ed. 1168); Wil- son v. State, 28 Md.

made as an ad-under the Act of 1884, as a conveyance without "valuable and adequate consideration," and is taxable at one per cent on the value of the property conveyed. U. S. v. Banks, 17 Fed. Rep. 822; U. S. v. Hart, 4 Fed. Rep. 293.

No one can be compelled to pay a share of the succession tax due on land, greater than his share in the land. Wilhelmi v. Wade, 65 Mo. 28.

Persons subject to the tax.

Corporations are included in the Acts imposing a tax on inheritances under the term "persons." Miller v. Com., 27 Gratt. 110.

Bequests to colleges, etc., are taxable under the general statute taxing bequests. Harranger v. Cowan, 2 Jones, Eq. 436.

By the law of Louisiana every person, not being domiciled in that State, and not being a citizen of any State or Territory, who shall be entitled, whether as heir, legatee or donee, to the whole or any part of the succession of a person deceased, shall pay a tax to the State of 10 per cent of the value of the same. Mager v. Grima, 49 U. S. 8 How. 490 (12 L. ed. 1168).

Where a widow refused to take under the will, but arranged with the executors to take less than her share of the estate, she was not subject to the collateral inheritance tax. Commonwealth's App., 34 Pa. 204.

Money received in virtue of a compromise with

In the absence of any other provision, this Act would have taken effect from its date; that being the time when, according to the certificate of the Secretary of State, the bill became a law (1 Rev. Stat. p. 157, tit. 4, pt. 1, chap. 7, § 11; 7th ed. p. 438); but the words, "after the passage of this Act," are no more significant than the word "hereafter," and the general provision of the Revised Statutes (Id. § 12), "of the enactment and promulgation of statutes, and of the time from which they take effect," declares that "Every law, unless a different time shall be prescribed therein, shall commence and take effect, throughout the State, on and not before the twentieth day after the day of its final passage, as certified by the Secretary of State."

The provisions of this section governed the statute in question. It follows that as the Act itself could not take effect within twenty days after its passage, or until the 30th day of June, the clause relied upon by the appellant was necessarily inoperative until that time. It commenced, therefore, on the twentieth day after its passage; and, as the property in question passed by the will before that day, no tax was payable upon it.

The remaining inquiry is as to its meaning as respects the $500 limitation. We think that applies to the portion of property passing to the legatee or devisee, and not to the whole estate left by the testator. The tax is not imposed upon the estate of which she was seised or possessed, but only upon so much of it as passes to certain persons—not all persons or any person; and, although the executor is required to pay the tax, he is to deduct it from the particular legacy, and cannot "deliver, or be compelled to deliver, any specific legacy or property, subject to tax, to any person, until the executor is not liable to the tax. Page v. Rives, 1 Hughes, 297.

Adopted children.

The collateral inheritance of adopted children is not taxable. New York Laws 1885, chap. 483, as amended by New York Laws 1887, chap. 713. Re Cayuga Co. Surrogate, 45 Hun, 667, 18 N. Y. S. R. 45.

In Pennsylvania an adopted child is not exempted by statute from paying the collateral inheritance tax. Com. v. Nancrede, 82 Pa. 389; 1 Desty, Taxn. 316.

An estate held under an adopting act changing the name of the heir, and making her capable of taking, etc., is subject to the collateral inheritance tax. Tharp v. Com. 58 Pa. 500.

That the laws of another State exempting religious corporate bodies from taxation created by the laws of such State cannot operate to exempt such corporations existing in this State from a collateral inheritance tax, see Catlen v. Trinity College, Daily Register (N. Y.) April 1, 1889.

Estate subject to the tax.

Collateral inheritance tax accrues at the decease of the person whose estate, passing to collateral heirs or strangers, is subject to the tax; and this is so whether the estate passes in actual enjoyment, directly or remotely upon the termination of an intervening life estate, or term of years. Mellon's App. 5 Cent. Rep. 489, 114 Pa. 584.

A died, leaving all his estate by will to an illegitimate and only child, who was legitimized after A's death by an Act of the Legislature. There were numerous collateral heirs. It was held that the State was entitled to a collateral inheritance tax out of the estate, as this right had vested on A's death, and before his child's rights were established. Galbraith v. Com. 14 Pa. 258.

The word "estate" is synonymous with "succession." N. O. v. Stewart's Estate, 28 La. Ann. 180.

The tax is not payable on an annuity in Maryland. Citizens Nat. Bank v. Sharp, 58 Md. 521.

The tax is due when settlement is made with the legatee, although the estate is not fully settled. Atty-Gen. v. Pierce, 6 Jones, Eq. 240.

Where a deed to the grantor's sister is not delivered until after the grantor's death, the real estate conveyed by it is subject to collateral inheritance tax. Davenport's App. (Pa.) 18 Cent. Rep. 67.

An estate passing to a grandmother, as next of kin, is subject to the collateral inheritance tax. McDowell v. Addams, 45 Pa. 420.

Property subject to the tax.

In Great Britain it has been determined upon much consideration by the highest authority that an Act imposing a legacy duty does not apply to property of a person whose domicile at the time of his death is not within the realm. Thomson v. Advocate Gen. 12 Clark & F. 1, 9 Jur. 217.

In the courts of North Carolina and of Missouri, on the other hand, it is held that all personal property within the State is liable to such a duty, whether the owner's domicile at the time of his death is within or without the State. Alvany v. Powell, 2 Jones, Eq. 51; State v. St. Louis Co. Ct. 47 Mo. 564.

2 L. R. A.

that wherever the owner of it, there a tax may be imposed, although the property is in another State. Re Short's Estate.

administration is granted, the collateral inheritance tax on property within the State. Alvany v. St. Louis Co. Ct. 47

York State, belonging to a person in another State is subject to the collateral inheritance tax imposed by New York. Re Enston, 45 Hun, 506.

has control over neither the person nor the property, it can tax. Hood's Estate, 21 Pa.

by a distributee in the State who is residing abroad is taxable under the statute taxing property of the next of kin of an intestate. Re Enston, 45 Hun, 506.

within the State.

property given by will by a wife to her husband is not subject to the estate tax is due, notwithstanding it was bought and paid for by the wife under an understanding to devise the same at her death. Ransom v. U. S. S. Reporter.

in case of transfer of property by the owner, the manifest intention of the owner is to clothe the grantee with a right of the State to the collateral inheritance tax is not defeated. M. 106 Pa. 521; Selbert's App. 121 Pa. 829; Dubois App. 121 Pa.

by a daughter to her brothers is not subject to the estate tax in Pennsylvania. Com. v. Will- trustees, to pay out the income of the estate for a certain number of years to pay the debts of the testator's heirs, and profits to testator's heirs, is not subject to the estate tax. Massachusetts Statute, Hathaway, 287; Schler v. Eldredge, 103

United States Revenue Laws.

October, 1870, the legacy and estate tax was repealed, saving, by a proviso, that any and collecting taxes payable to be assessed, the right accrued, or which thereafter the right had become absolute. 44 Stat. 8439; Mason v. Clapp, 859 (24 L. ed. 212); U. S. v. Co. 9 Ben. 418; Wright v. U. S. 4 (25 L. ed. 1043); Blake v. Mc- Mason v. Sargent, 104 U. S. 689; U. S. v. Blatch, 18; Jay v. Shook, 10 Int. Rev. Rec. 134.

he shall have collected the tax thereon." Sec. 6. There are many other provisions of the Act requiring the same construction, all tending to show that in the matter of taxation it is simply the "estate" or share of the beneficiary acquired through the will or the Statute of Distribution, which is to be valued, and the duty estimated according to its value.

The order appealed from should be affirmed, with costs.

All concur.

William S. JOHNSTON et al., Expts.,
Hamilton WALLIS et al., Exrs., et al., Appls.
(...N. Y....)

1. The general rule, that executors and administrators can be sued only in the State where they are appointed, is confined, at least in the State of New York, to claims and liabilities resting wholly upon their representative character.

2. Foreign executors who, by virtue of their appointment, have become owners of a judgment, and have made a contract to assign it, may be sued on such contract outside of the State of their appointment.

(January 14, 1893.)

APPEAL by defendants, from a judgment of the General Term of the Supreme Court, Second Department, affirming a judgment of the Dutchess Special Term in favor of plaintiffs in an action to compel specific performance of a contract. Affirmed.

The facts are sufficiently stated in the opinion.

Mr. William G. Wilson for appellants.

Messrs. Thompson, Weeks & Lowry for respondents.

Finch, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action in equity to compel the specific performance by the vendors of a contract to sell and assign a judgment recovered by John McAnerney and others in the Supreme Court of this State against a corporation known as the Hudson River Iron Company. The judgment was assigned to one Alexander H. Wallis, who was a resident of New Jersey, and who died leaving a last will and testament, which has been duly proved in that State, and by which the defendants were appointed executors. They have qualified and entered upon the performance of their trust. They thereafter made a written contract with one Jacob Russell, all whose rights have passed to the present plaintiffs to sell and assign to him such judgment for a price to be fixed as follows.

The judgment was a lien or supposed to be a lien upon certain lands under the waters of the Hudson River near Poughkeepsie in this State, and had no value beyond such lien. Arbitrators were chosen to fix the value of one acre of the upland and that value multiplied by the number of acres subject to the lien was to be the purchase price of the judgment. That value was ascertained, the price tendered and a deed duly demanded, which was refused, and thereupon this action was brought. The plaintiffs had judgment which the general term affirmed, and the defendants appealed to this court.

They rely mainly upon the proposition that as foreign executors they could not sue or be sued in this State, and acquire all their rights from and owe their responsibilities to another jurisdiction. That is the general rule; but in this State at least is confined to claims and liabilities resting wholly upon their representative character.

In Lawrence v. Lawrence, 3 Barb. Ch. 74, the rule was declared to be applicable only to suits brought upon debts due to the testator in his lifetime or based upon some transaction with him, and does not prevent a foreign executor from suing in our courts upon a contract made with him as such executor. Of course where he can sue upon such a contract, he may be sued upon it. The remedy must run to each party or neither.

In the present case the action is not founded upon any transaction with the deceased but upon a contract which the defendants themselves made. By force of the will and their appointment they became owners of the judgment. Their title, although acquired under the foreign law, was good.

In Peterson v. Chemical Bank, 83 N. Y. 31, the foreign executor sold an obligation of the estate and his assignee sued upon it. The action was sustained on the grounds that the title of the foreign executor was good and he could transfer it; and while he could not have sued upon it his assignee was not prevented.

In this case, therefore, the defendants were owners of the judgment and could lawfully

NOTE.—Foreign executor; incapacity to sue.

Although a foreign executor cannot sue or be sued in an action here by virtue of his appointment abroad (Metcalf v. Clark, 41 Barb. 48; Smith v. Webb, 1 Barb. 280); yet he may sue in one State in his individual capacity on a judgment recovered by him in another State as administrator. Bright v. Currie, 5 Sandf. 437; Nichols v. Smith, 7 Hun, 381.

A foreign executor or administrator cannot sue or be sued in his representative character in the courts of this State; but where claims by a rightful assignment have become transferred to another, or to the administrator in his private capacity, where the obligor resides, the rule that a foreign executor or administrator cannot obtain recognition in our courts does not apply. Lucas v. Byrne, 83 Md. 494.

So a party deriving title to a chose in action by transfer from such an executor or administrator, can prosecute the debtor residing here in our courts. Middlebrook v. Merchants Bank, 37 How. Pr. 474; Peterson v. Chemical Bank, 83 N. Y. 41.

3 L. R. A.

In courts of equitable cognizance.

ov
in th
in fe ch
Es
Al
Pl
we
H
.
m
to be to Bl
11
288.

contract for its sale. Having done so they were liable upon that contract which could be enforced against them because they made it, and it did not derive its existence from any act or dealing of their testator. We agree, therefore, with the courts below that the action could be maintained.

Objection is made that the arbitrators valued the land under water and not the upland. The arbitrators certify that they valued the land per acre lying between the railroad and the river. That was upland and not land under water. While they describe it as eleven and eight tenths acres, that may be rejected as an immaterial element of the description, and does not establish that their valuation extended to anything but the upland. Taking their whole report together its fair meaning is that they valued one acre of upland at $25, and so the value of the eleven and eight tenths was $295.

The judgment should be affirmed, with costs.
All concur.

Philip DIEFFENBACH, Respt.,

v.

Jacob ROCH, Appt.

(....N. Y....)

1. An action upon a judgment rendered in a justice's court is barred in six years from its rendition, although the judgment has been docketed in the county clerk's office under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, § 8017.
2. An action to compel defendant to allow plaintiff's judgment to be set off against one held by defendant is an action upon a judgment, within the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, § 882, that an action upon a judg-

NOTE.—Code of Civil Procedure construed; § 882, subdivision 1.

Where the action is founded on an implied contract, obligation or liability, and not on the ground of fraud, and no facts were stated from which fraud on the part of the defendant might be implied, the limitation of six years provided for by section 882, subd. 1, applies. Price v. Mulford, 9 Cent. Rep. 558, 107 N. Y. 309; Carr v. Thompson, 87 N. Y. 160, 9 Daly, 281; Klinge v. Hull, 2 Dem. 564.

An action upon the express or implied promise of a grantee is barred in six years, although the transfer was made by a sealed instrument, if it contained no obligation to pay. Coleman v. Second Ave. R. Co. 38 N. Y. 201, 6 Trans. App. 146, 48 Barb. 371.

A debt from an administrator, for which a judgment has been recovered, is a simple contract debt. Ball v. Miller, 17 How. Pr. 300.

Any liability which could be enforced in an action at law is barred in six years under this section. Pierson v. McCurdy, 33 Hun, 534.

Where the only causes of action were causes of action at law for destruction of the equitable lien by sale of the bonds, they were barred by this section, in six years. Hovey v. Elliot, 21 Jones & S. 347.

Where bills are rendered for goods sold from time to time, and payments are made and applied specifically, it is not a running account, and sales not made within six years are barred. Albro v. Figuera, 60 N. Y. 630.

A purchasing broker of undisclosed principal must bring his suit within six years after vendor's claim accrues. Knapp v. Simon, 14 Jones & S. 225.

The statute bars a recovery for the use of goods for any period antecedent to six years before action (Hilder v. Union India Rubber Co. 38 N. Y. 879; 5 Bosw. 88); so of a claim for the amount of a check on the bank. Brush v. Barrett, 32 N. Y. 400, 16 Hun, 409.

An action on a note payable on demand is barred 2 L. R. A.

ment rendered in a court not of record shall be commenced within six years.

(March 5, 1889.)

APPEAL by defendant, from a judgment of the General Term of the Supreme Court, Second Department, affirming a judgment of the Kings Special Term in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to compel defendant to allow the set-off of a certain judgment. Reversed.

The facts fully appear in the opinion.

Mr. Edward P. Wilder for appellant.

Mr. Ira Leo Bamberger for respondent.

Earl, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Early in February, 1885, the plaintiff held against the defendant a judgment for $221.79, recovered in a justice's court on the 27th day of May, 1875; and later in the same month the defendant recovered a judgment against the plaintiff in the supreme court for $918.09.

A transcript of plaintiff's judgment was filed in the office of the clerk of the County of Kings on the second day of June, 1875, and the judgment was docketed in that office on that day. The plaintiff commenced this action on the 28th day of February, 1885, to procure an adjudication that his judgment be set off against that of the defendant, and that the defendant be required to receive from him the balance of his judgment, and to satisfy and discharge the same.

The defendant alleged in his answer, among other things, that the plaintiff's judgment was barred by the six years' Statute of Limitations; and the sole question we deem it important now to consider is whether the plaintiff's judgment, notwithstanding the filing of the transcript and the docketing in the office of the county clerk, was barred in six years from the if not brought within six years after its date (Wheeler v. Warner, 47 N. Y. 519); but demand is necessary to charge the indorser. Merritt v. Todd, 23 N. Y. 22.

It is a bar though the payee, after six years from the time the note became payable, paid it to his indorsee, and became repossessed of it. Woodruff v. Moore, 3 Barb. 171.

Equitable causes of action.

The provision of subdivision 5 includes all cases formerly cognizable by a court of chancery, and in which a court of law could not give relief although, as part of the relief sought, a money judgment is also demanded. Carr v. Thompson, 87 N. Y. 160.

An action by the receiver of an insolvent corporation against those who were its trustees or directors de facto, to compel them to account for alleged fraudulent mismanagement and diversion of funds, and make good the damage occasioned thereby, is an equitable action, and not an action of a legal nature. Hence the ten years' limitation (Code Civ. Proc. § 888), and not the six years' limitation (Code Civ. Proc. § 882), applies. Pierson v. Morgan, 20 Abb. N. C. 423.

An action for the recovery of license fees and for an accounting of royalties for the use of a patented invention is within this section. Keller v. West, 11 & C. Mfg. Co. 39 Hun, 555.

Other equitable actions must be brought within six years, as: an action to cancel municipal bonds (Venice v. Breed, 1 Thomp. & C. 130, 65 Barb. 597); an action to enforce the equitable lien for the purchase money of land (Borst v. Corey, 15 N. Y. 305); a creditors' bill, after return of execution unsatisfied (Eyre v. Beebe, 28 How. Pr. 333; Gates v. Andrews, 37 N. Y. 357, 5 Trans. App. 173); or an action to set aside a conveyance made in fraud of judgment creditors. Taft v. Wright, 2 Thomp. & C. 614, 50 N. Y. 554.

The provision in subdivision 5 of § 882 does not apply to an action to remove a cloud upon the title to rendition thereof in the justice's court. The contention of the plaintiff is that it became a judgment of the county court to all intents and purposes, and that, therefore, the limitation claimed by the defendant was not applicable.

It was provided in the Revised Statutes that a transcript of a justice's judgment for above $25, exclusive of costs, could be filed and the judgment docketed in the clerk's office of the county, and that the judgment, from and after the filing and docketing by the clerk, "shall be a lien on the real estate of the defendant within the county in the same manner and with like effect as if such judgment had been rendered in the court of common pleas; and may, in the same manner, be discharged and cancelled." 2 Rev. Stat. 947, §§ 127, 128.

And it was also provided that all actions on judgments rendered in any court, not being a court of record, should be commenced within six years next after the cause of action accrued. 2 Rev. Stat. 295, § 18.

land. This right is never barred by the Statute of Limitations so long as the cloud continues to exist. Babcock v. Limauer, 9 Ont. Rep. 444, 107 N. Y. 114, citing Minor v. Bankman, 40 N. Y. 337, 343.

One who is not actually a trustee, but upon whom that character is forced only for the purpose of a remedy, may avail himself of the statute. Kane v. Bloodgood, 1 Johns. Ch. 80; Baxter v. Moses, 77 Maine, 411; Baker v. Atlas Bank, 3 Met. 1st, 10; Peabody v. Hunt, 5 Allen, 22; Farnam v. Brooks, 9 Pick. 213; Stringer's Case, L. R. 4 Ch. App. 473; Re Alexandra Palace Co. L. R. 21 Ch. Div. 140; Carroll v. Green, 20 U. S. 602 (20 L. ed. 700); 3 Pom. Dig. Jur. 610.

ACTIONS UPON LIABILITIES CREATED BY STATUTE.

A stockholder's liability is a liability for debts created by statute, and in case of his death an additional period of a year is allowed. Chase v. Lord, 10 Hun, 320.

The statute runs from the time his liability is incurred. Knox v. Baldwin, 30 N. Y. 430.

The right of action under a manufacturing company's Act, against a stockholder for a debt of the company, does not accrue till action brought against the company, judgment issued thereon and execution returned unsatisfied. Merritt v. Reid, 10 Daly, 212.

A claim against stockholders for nonpayment of stock must be brought within six years after the two years allowed to pay up the stock. Phillips v. Thurston, 11 Hun, 141.

The time within which a mandamus must be reported to is the same as that within which an action must be brought to obtain a remedy for the same injury. (Code Civ. Proc. § 414), and therefore, a mandamus to compel payment of a liability created by statute—e. g., the salary of a municipal police officer—must be limited to suits which became due within six years prior to the application. People v. French, 13 Abb. N. C. 413, 12 Abb. N. C. 184, 21 Hun, 419.

ACTION OF DAMAGES FOR INJURY TO PROPERTY.

An action to recover damages for an injury to property is controlled by this section. Groth v. Washburn, 34 Hun, 510.

"Injury to property" is "an actionable suit where by the estate of another is lessened, other than a personal injury or the breach of a contract." § 3343; and an action for damages therefor is within the six years' limitation of this section 335, subd. 1. Miller v. Wood, 41 Hun, 601.

An action to recover damages for the loss of services of a wife and for moneys expended for necessary medical aid and attendance upon her is within this section (Groth v. Washburn, 34 Hun, 510, followed in Maxon v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co., 46 Hun, 173; while an action brought for the loss of comfort or society must be brought within the six years' limitation (Craig v. Brooklyn Coss-Town R. Co., 53 N. Y. 303, also followed), so an action for personal injuries is barred in three years. Dickinson v. New York, 20 Hun, 164, 48 How. Pr. 214.

Where the source of the injury complained of is

By section 68 of the old Code of Procedure, it was provided that where a judgment was recovered in a justice's court for any amount, a transcript thereof could be filed and the same could be docketed in the county clerk's office; and that from that time "The judgment shall be a judgment of the county court," but that no such judgment "for a sum less than $25, exclusive of costs, shall be a lien on or enforced against real property."

In section 90 it was provided that an action upon a judgment or decree of any court of the United States, or any State or Territory within the United States, should be commenced within twenty years. Thus it is seen that some change was made by the Code in the provisions of the prior law. It was no longer requisite that the justice's judgment should be for $25, before a transcript could be filed and the judgment docketed; the six years' limitation was abrogated, and the twenty years' limitation was made applicable to all judgments whether of courts of record or not.

negligence, the action is barred if not commenced within three years (Code Civ. Proc. § 335, subd. 2); and it is immaterial whether the action is in form ex contractu or ex delicto. A different period being expressly prescribed, such action does not come within the provisions of section 335. Webster v. Herkimer & M. Street R. Co., 12 Ont. Rep. 224, 109 N. Y. 314.

The third subdivision of section 335 applies to all cases where the personal injury results from acts other than those constituting negligence in the defendant. Id.; Diaber v. N. Y. Cent. & H. R. R. Co., 13 N. Y. Week. Dig. 277.

ACTION FOR RECOVERY OF CHATTEL.

In an action for conversion of personal property the statute commences to run from the time of the conversion (Kelsey v. Griswold, 4 Barb. 486; and the case cannot thereafter be taken out of the statute refusal to return the property, 25 N. Y. 194.

or back money paid under section and is barred within 1 year. Portchester, 21 Hun, 131. As an administrator appointed legatee as wrong doer to all property would be barred limitations. Quackenbush v. 1, 222, Brown v. Brown, 1 Leake & W. Orphins House.

TRANSACTION GROUNDED ON FRAUD.

Where a transaction could only be avoided on the ground of fraud it could only be barred by the lapse of six years after discovery of the fraud. Decker v. Decker, 11 Ont. Rep. 102, 105 N. Y. 120; Piper v. Hoard, 9 Ont. Rep. 444, 107 N. Y. 12; Morehouse v. Morehouse, 17 Abb. N. C. 422.

An action to recover damages for fraud in the sale of land is barred in six years from the purchase, and an action brought more than six years after discovery of the fraud is too late. Northrup v. Hill, 67 N. Y. 252, 61 Barb. 124.

TIME RUNS FROM DISCOVERY OF THE FRAUD.

Knowledge of fraud must be brought to plaintiff before the statute begins to run. Gates v. Andrews, 27 N. Y. 637, 3 Trans. App. 174; Mayne v. Griswold, 3 Sandf. 485; Taft v. Wright, 47 How. 1; Kent v. Kent, 66 N. Y. 601.

An answer setting up the statute casts upon plaintiff the burden of proof that the fraud was not discovered until within six years from commencement of the suit. Baldwin v. Martin, 14 Abb. N. S. 9; Venice v. Reed, 65 Barb. 697, 1 Thomp. & C. 124.

ACTION UPON JUDGMENT OR DECREE.

Under section 335 an action must be commenced within six years upon a judgment or decree rendered in a court not a court of record. The Marine Court of the City of New York is classed as a court of record. Camp v. Hallahan, 48 Hun, 823.

The statute furnishes the right to bar a recovery

Section 3017 of the Code of Civil Procedure provides that a transcript of any judgment rendered in a justice's court for any amount may be filed in the county clerk's office, and that "Thenceforth the judgment is deemed a judgment of the county court of that county, and must be enforced accordingly; except that an execution can be issued thereupon only by the county clerk, as prescribed in section 3043 of this Act, and that the judgment is not a lien upon and cannot be enforced against real property unless it is for $25, or more, exclusive of costs."

And by section 383 of the Code of Civil Procedure it is provided, as it was in the Revised Statutes, that an action upon a judgment or decree rendered in a court not of record shall be commenced within six years and that the cause of action in such a case is deemed to have accrued "when final judgment was rendered."

upon a justice's judgment before the transcript is filed with the county clerk. Code Civ. Proc. § 383, subd. 7.

The right of a judgment debtor to avail himself of the Statute of Limitations may become perfect before the transcript is filed with the clerk; and such right is a vested right which cannot be defeated even by subsequent legislation. Davidson v. Horn, 47 Hun, 58; Ryder v. Wilson, 41 N. J. L. 9; Girdner v. Stephens, 1 Helsk. 230; Yancy v. Yancy, 5 Helsk. 353; Bradford v. Shine, 13 Fla. 393; Rockport v. Walden, 54 N. H. 167; Shriver v. Shriver, 86 N. Y. 680.

When statute begins to run.

In computing the time when an action may be brought, the first day upon which it might have been brought is excluded. Cornell v. Moulton, 3 Denio, 12; McGraw v. Walker, 2 Hilt. 404.

When the right to sue on a note did not accrue till a certain date, and summons and complaint were served within six years from the day when the right accrued, it prevented the bar of the statute. Davidson v. Budlong, 40 Hun, 247; Osborn v. Moncure, 3 Wend. 170; Edw. Bills, 2d ed. 679, 958.

The statute begins to run on a note given as part of the guaranty fund of an insurance company, from the time of notice of assessment. Hope Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Taylor, 2 Robt. 273.

That demand must be made to set the statute running, see Sands v. Annesley, 56 Barb. 573.

A guaranty note is due and payable when made. Bartholomew v. Seaman, 25 Hun, 619.

The law will not imply that payment for services shall be postponed until the termination of the employment, but will regard the hiring as from year to year. Davis v. Gorton, 16 N. Y. 255.

The statute begins to run on the claim of an attorney for costs from the time his services are so ended that he could sue therefor. Adams v. Fort Plain Bank, 36 N. Y. 255, 2 Trans. App. 234; Mygatt v. Wilcox, 45 N. Y. 806, 1 Lans. 55; Richardson v. Brooklyn City & N. R. Co. 7 Hun, 60; Bathgate v. Haskin, 56 N. Y. 533.

Transcript of justice's judgment, filed with county clerk.

The transcript must be filed within six years (Kincaid v. Richardson, 9 Abb. N. C. 315); and by order of court it may be filed nunc pro tunc. Both v. Schloss, 6 Barb. 303.

The case of Belgard v. McLaughlin, 44 Hun, 587, refers to this section of the Code, on the point that the transcript of a judgment of a justice docketed in the county clerk's office is evidence of the jurisdiction of the justice's court over the defendant in the original suit. It need not show jurisdiction on its face. Jackson v. Rowland, 6 Wend. 686; Jackson v. Jones, 9 Cow. 132; Dickinson v. Smith, 25 Barb. 102.

It is prima facie evidence of the judgment, but not conclusive (Stephens v. Santee, 46 N. Y. 35); but is conclusive of the facts stated therein. Hard v. Shipman, 6 Barb. 621.

Effect of filing transcript.

Filing the transcript deprives the justice of any further control over the judgment (Sholts v. Judges of Yates Co. 2 Cow. 506); but the transcript 2 L. R. A.

To sustain the contention of the plaintiff it must be held that his judgment was rendered, within the meaning of the statute, in the county court, when it was docketed there. Such a meaning of the word rendered is certainly not according to the common understanding. Ordinarily, no one would understand that a judgment which had been recovered in a justice's court, and subsequently docketed in the county court, was in any sense rendered in the county court; and there is no countenance for such a meaning to be found in any statute.

The word rendered, as applied to judgments, is many times used in the Code and other statutes, and always in the sense of judgments given by judicial action. Judgments by default are no exception, as they are supposed to be rendered in the presence of the court, and by its authority and direction.

Section 3017 has this language: "A justice falls with the judgment legally set aside by the justice for default. McGloin v. Lackey, 7 Alb. L. J. 416.

After filing the transcript the county has such control over the judgment as enables it to order set-off between judgments (Hayden v. McDermott, 9 Abb. Pr. 14; Lyon v. Manly, 18 How. Pr. 267, 10 Abb. Pr. 337, 32 Barb. 51); but it cannot vacate the judgment on motion. Martin v. N. Y. 12 Abb. Pr. 243. Although there is no express statutory limitation of time within which such transcript may be filed and judgment be docketed, the statute provides that when that is done, it becomes a judgment of the county court (id. § 3017; Davidson v. Horn, 47 Hun, 58); and with like effect as if rendered by a justice of the peace of that county, except as to leave to issue execution thereon in that county. Vedder v. Lansing, 44 Hun, 591; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 3022, 3043.

Where the original action was brought in the justice's court and judgment by confession was entered therein, and the transcript was filed in the county court, it is deemed a judgment of the county court where filed (Itasca Agricultural Works v. Eggleston, 9 Cent. Rep. 840, 107 N. Y. 275); and it becomes subject to all the rules applicable to the enforcement of judgments in county courts. Bergman v. Noble, 19 Abb. N. C. 63; McIntyre v. Allen, 43 Hun, 126. The cases of Spencer v. Wait, 22 Week. Dig. 214; 2 How. Pr. N. S. 117; Baldwin v. Roberts, 80 Hun, 163; Kincaid v. Richardson, 9 Abb. N. C. 315; as to the extent to which justice's judgments become, on their transcripts being filed, judgments of a court of record under section 382, subd. 7, seem to be overruled in the principal case.

Lien created by filing transcript.

The filing of the transcript after death of the judgment debtor does not create a lien on real estate. Henderson v. Brooks, 3 Thomp. & C. 445. See, as to filing transcript for less than $25, Vulte v. Whitehead, 2 Hilt. 596; Butts v. Dickinson, 12 Abb. Pr. 60; 20 How. Pr. 230; Anonymous, 32 Barb. 201.

The lien by the transcript of the judgment continues for twenty years. Waltemire v. Westover, 14 N. Y. 16. See Nicholls v. Atwood, 18 How. Pr. 475; Young v. Remer, 4 Barb. 442; Geller v. Hoyt, 7 How. Pr. 265.

The lien is not affected by errors in the transcript (Sears v. Burnham, 17 N. Y. 445); as by errors in misspelling. Jackson v. Browner, 7 Wend. 388.

Execution may be issued by leave of court.

Execution may be issued thereon by leave of court in the same manner as an execution issued on a judgment of the county court. Kincaid v. Richardson, 9 Abb. N. C. 315; McIntyre v. Allen, 43 Hun, 126.

The court should adhere to the literal expression of the statute, and every construction derived from a consideration of its reason and spirit should be discarded. Demarest v. Wynkoop, 3 Johns. Ch. 129; Bennett v. Worthington, 24 Ark. 422; Adams v. Davis, 47 Ga. 341; McDonald v. Underhill, 10 Bush, 500; Sacia v. DeGraaf, 1 Cow. 356; Bank of Alabama v. Dalton, 50 U. S. 9 How. 522 (18 L. ed. 242); Troup v. Smith, 20 Johns. 33.

of the peace who renders a judgment except in an action to recover a chattel, must upon the application of the party in whose favor the judgment was rendered, and payment of the fee therefor, deliver to him a transcript of the judgment. The county clerk of the county in which the judgment was rendered must, upon the presentation of the transcript and payment of the fees therefor, indorse thereupon the date of its receipt, file it in his office, and docket the judgment, as of the time of the receipt of the transcript; for in section 882 prescribing the limitation for commencing an action upon a judgment not of a court of record, the language is that, except in a decree heretofore rendered in a surrogate's court, "The cause of action in such a case is deemed to have accrued when final judgment was rendered."

In the Revised Statutes providing for the limitation of actions upon judgments in any court, not a court of record, the judgments are spoken of as judgments rendered in any court not a court of record; and in the same statutes, in reference to procuring and filing transcripts and docketing judgments of justices' courts, it is provided that on the demand of any person in whose favor the justice shall have rendered a judgment, if above $25, the justice shall deliver a transcript of the same, and such a judgment, after it is docketed, shall be a lien upon real estate as if the judgment "had been rendered in the court of common pleas."

By chapter 470 of the Laws of 1847, section 80, it was provided that transcripts of judgments "rendered in this State or any court of the United States, duly certified by the clerk of such court, may be filed and docketed in the same manner as judgments rendered in the supreme court of this State." There the word rendered has plain reference to the original judgment, and clearly under that statute the docketing of such a judgment in the county clerk's office was not the rendition of the judgment in the supreme court. The word rendered has the same meaning in section 1918 of the present Code, where provision is made in reference to actions upon judgments rendered in courts of record.

After a justice's judgment has been docketed in the county clerk's office, it becomes a mere statutory judgment of the county court. It is not in fact a judgment of that court. There has been no judicial action there and no judgment has been in fact entered or rendered. It is simply to be deemed a judgment of that court. Such a judgment has not been twice rendered, once in the justice's court and once in the county court; and as it may be docketed in all the counties of the State it certainly cannot be deemed to have been rendered in every county where it has been docketed.

Therefore, plaintiff's judgment is a statutory judgment of the county court, but it was not rendered there. It was rendered in a justice's court, and therefore an action upon it is barred within six years from the time of its rendition by the express language of section 882 of the Code.

By this construction full force is given to all the language contained in subdivision 7 of that section, and in section 8017, and what is believed to have been the intention of the lawmakers is given effect. If the six years' limitation L. R. A.

itation does not apply to such a judgment as this, then there is no limitation to an action upon such a judgment, as section 876 of the Code, providing that judgments shall be presumed to be paid and satisfied after the expiration of twenty years, applies only to judgments rendered in courts of record. And then, too, subdivision 7 of section 882 could be practically nullified in all cases, as the judgments of justices' and other courts not of record could, even after the lapse of six years from their rendition, be docketed in the county clerk's office; and if they are to be regarded as judgments then rendered in a court of record, there would be no statutory bar to an action upon them for twenty years more, and thus the judgments rendered in courts not of record would, as to the lapse of time, have a better position in the law than judgments rendered in actions commenced in courts of record—a result certainly not within the contemplation of the lawmakers.

It cannot be doubted that this is an action upon plaintiff's judgment. It is, in a certain sense, an action to enforce the judgment against the defendant by compelling him to allow the same in satisfaction pro tanto of his judgment. The judgment is the sole basis of the action, and in a real sense the action is to recover thereon.

We are therefore of opinion that the judgments of the General and Special Terms should be reversed, and a new trial granted, costs to abide event.

All concur.

Delora M. HUNTER et al., Admins. etc.,
Repts.,

COOPERSTOWN & SUSQUEHANNA VALLEY R. CO., Appt.

(....N. Y....)

Endeavoring to board a train moving at the rate of six miles an hour is an act of such danger as to prevent any recovery from the railroad company for the death of the person attempting it, even though the train was evidently about to pass the station where it was advertised to stop, and where he was waiting for it, without stopping.

NOTE.—Getting on and off a car while in motion.

Generally it is not per se contributory negligence for a person to get on or off a railroad train in the ordinary manner, while the train is only slightly in motion, but to attempt to jump upon a stock car of a freight train while in motion, which car has no convenience for getting upon it, is such contributory negligence per se as will exempt the company from liability. Waters v. Southern Kan. R. Co.

a rapidly moving train is negligent. Stige v. Penn. R. Co.

1. If a person jumps from a car at the time well grounded fear of danger and is thereby injured, he is not negligent, although the injury is avoided in fact if he had not jumped. O. R. Co. v. McKensie, 81 Va.

2. Recovery of damages for injuries received from a train of cars, an instruction that the plaintiff should not recover, if her negligence caused or contributed to the injury is proper, although the word "proximately" was omitted. Craven v. Central Pac. R. Co. 75 Cal. 865. See N. Y. P. & N. R. Co. v. Conibourn, 1 L. R. A. 541 note.

and the conductor called to him to jump on if he was going.

(February 8, 1880.)

APPEAL by defendant, from a judgment of the General Term of the Supreme Court, Fourth Department affirming a judgment of the Onsego Circuit in favor of plaintiffs in an action to recover damages for the death of their intestate, alleged to have been caused by defendant's negligence. Reversed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion.

Mr. E. M. Harris, for appellant:

The attempt of plaintiffs' intestate to get on the train while in motion, under the circumstances proven in this case, was an act of negligence which in fact contributed to the injury he received; and for this reason the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover.

Philips v. Kesselacker & S. R. Co. 49 N. Y. 177; Burrows v. Erie R. Co. 68 N. Y. 556; Gavett v. Manchester & L. R. Co. 16 Gray, 501; Harvey v. Eastern R. Co. 116 Mass. 269; Lucas v. New Bedford & T. R. Co. 6 Gray, 64; Solomon v. Manhattan R. Co. 4 Cent. Rep. 775; 103 N. Y. 437.

The boarding or alighting from a moving train is presumably and generally a negligent act, per se.

The deceased knew that the train was in motion when he attempted to board it, and he took the risk of the attempt.

Solomon v. Manhattan R. Co. 4 Cent. Rep. 775, 103 N. Y. 437; Shannon v. Boston & A. R. Co. 1 New Eng. Rep. 681, 78 Maine, 52.

If he was in fact guilty of contributory negligence, although the company was also negligent, no recovery can be had.

3 Wood, Railway Law, 1155; Poultack v. N. Y. Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 3 Cent. Rep. 836, 102 N. Y. 280.

Where the facts are controverted, the question of negligence is a question of law for the court.

Wilds v. Hudson River R. Co. 24 N. Y. 430; Owen v. Hudson River R. Co. 85 N. Y. 516; Gonzales v. N. Y. & H. R. Co. 88 N. Y. 440; Dwight v. Germania L. Ins. Co. 4 Cent. Rep. 529, 103 N. Y. 841, 8 N. Y. S. R. 115; Crafts v. Boston, 109 Mass. 519; Lancaster v. Kissinger, 11 W. N. C. 151; Powell v. N. Y. Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 11 Cent. Rep. 906, 109 N. Y. 618, 14 N. Y. S. R. 74. See Reynolds v. N. Y. Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 58 N. Y. 248; Cordell v. N. Y. Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 75 N. Y. 830; Deyo v. N. Y. Cent. R. Co. 84 N. Y. 9; Morrison v. Erie R. Co. 56 N. Y. 802.

A passenger must not do that which is obviously dangerous, although he is advised to do it by the company's agents.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Hazard, 26 Ill. 378; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Jones, 95 U. S. 439 (24 L. ed. 506); Ginnon v. N. Y. & H. R. Co. 3 Robt. 25.

Whether the train was going to stop or not, or whether the deceased could or could not have known that it would stop at the station is unimportant; or whether there was only one brakeman on the train and he was not able to stop the train, is also unimportant. These conditions did not relieve the deceased from the necessity of taking ordinary precautions for his safety.

Chicago, B. I. & P. R. Co. v. Houston, 95 2 L. R. A.

U. S. 697 (24 L. ed. 543), 5 N. Y. Week. Dig. 523; Pnkalinaky v. N. Y. Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 82 N. Y. 424.

Mr. James A. Lynes, for respondents:

The defendant was guilty of negligence in inviting the plaintiffs' intestate to get on a moving train.

1 Rorer, Railroads, 476-479; 2 Rorer, Railroads, 1130; Weston v. N. Y. Elevated R. Co. 73 N. Y. 595; Brassell v. N. Y. Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 84 N. Y. 241. See also 27 Alb. L. J. 88; Carpenter v. Boston & A. R. Co. 97 N. Y. 494; Beach, Contrib. Neg. 171-176; Bucher v. N. Y. Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 94 N. Y. 128.

Under the circumstances and the evidence, the jury had a right to find that plaintiffs' intestate was not guilty of contributory negligence.

See Filer v. N. Y. Cent. R. Co. 49 N. Y. 47; McIntyre v. N. Y. Cent. R. Co. 87 N. Y. 287; Abbey v. N. Y. Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 20 N. Y. Weekly Dig. 87; Bucher v. N. Y. Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 94 N. Y. 128; Western & A. L. Co. v. Wilson, 71 Ga. 22; Fitzgerald v. Long Island R. Co. 10 N. Y. S. R. 433; Wharton, Neg. 2d ed. § 869; Harvey v. Eastern R. Co. 116 Mass. 269; Solomon v. Manhattan R. Co. 4 Cent. Rep. 775, 103 N. Y. 437; Glushing v. Sharp, 96 N. Y. 676.

It is not contributory negligence, as matter of law, to attempt to get on a moving railroad train.

Beach, Contrib. Neg. 155, 156; Johnson v. West Chester & P. R. Co. 70 Pa. 357.

Peckham, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Accepting the facts as testified to on the part of the plaintiffs in this action, it appears that on the 25th day of September, 1884, the plaintiffs' decedent came to the station of the defendant, called "Phoenix Mills," in the early morning, for the purpose of taking a train to the neighboring village of Oneonta.

There was a platform in front of the station, the northern end of which was used for freight, and was two or three feet higher than the southern end, which was used more especially for passengers. The passenger portion of the platform was only about one foot above the ground, and communication between the upper and lower platforms was had by steps leading from one to the other. The top of the freight platform was four and one half feet higher than the rails of the defendant's road. At the north end of the freight platform the distance between it and a car, as it would pass along the track, would be six inches. At the center of the freight platform it would be four inches, and the same distance at the south end.

The plaintiffs' decedent, upon hearing the whistle of a train approaching from the north on its way toward Oneonta, got up and stood on the passenger portion of the platform, awaiting its arrival; and, when it had got within a short distance of the station, the conductor came out on to the platform of the rear passenger car and asked plaintiffs' decedent if he was going, and added: "If you are, jump on."

There were but two witnesses sworn on the part of the plaintiffs in regard to the rate at which the train was moving when this direction was given by the conductor. One of them says the train was moving at that time six or eight miles an hour; the other, who was the engineer of the train, stated that it was going from four to six miles an hour. When the conductor directed the deceased to jump on, he was standing on the passenger platform three or four feet north of the steps connecting with the freight platform, and he started to jump on the front platform of the passenger car while it was thus in motion. He was caught in some shape, as the witnesses say, without being able to describe exactly how, and rolled along the station platform with his head and shoulders above it. His body was caught about the hips. The train was stopped, and he was taken out, and died within a short time.

From this evidence it is quite plain that the train was in comparatively rapid motion at the time when the deceased made his attempt to board it. I say comparatively rapid motion—meaning by that a motion that was rapid, when taking into consideration that a man was attempting to board it. There can be no doubt from this evidence that the train was moving at least six miles an hour. The engineer fixes it from four to six; and being a witness for the plaintiff, and not in the defendant's employ at the time he was sworn, it may be assumed that he did not put the speed any greater than in fact it was.

The deceased was a man in the full vigor of life, presumably of ordinary judgment, at least up to the average of mankind, and he was at a familiar station, and about to take a train to go to a neighboring village a few miles distant. It was the duty of the railroad company (having advertised so to do) to stop its trains at the station in question, and to give ample time to all persons desirous of getting on or leaving trains at that station to do so.

The important question which arises is, Does a man who is sui juris, and in the full possession of his faculties, with nothing to disturb his judgment, act with ordinary care in endeavoring to board a train moving at the rate of six miles an hour? It seems to me there can be but one answer to such a question. That it is a dangerous—a most hazardous—attempt must be the common judgment of all men. Persons are taught from their earliest youth the great danger attending upon an attempt to board or leave a train while it is in motion, and there is no person of mature years and judgment but has the knowledge that such an attempt is dangerous in the highest degree.

It is substantially admitted in this case that it would have been negligence on the part of the deceased to make the attempt, had it not been for the request, or what is termed the direction, of the conductor to him to get on. It may be assumed that this direction implied a notice to the deceased that the train would not stop at that station, and that unless he attempted to get on while the car was thus in motion, he would be left at the station, and compelled to take another and a later train. It may be assumed that, in giving this direction, and in failing to stop the train, the company was chargeable with negligence; and yet it counts for nothing as a justification or excuse for the conduct of the deceased in attempting to board a train while thus in motion.

There may undoubtedly be circumstances under which an attempt to get on or off a moving train would not be regarded as negligence, as matter of law, and where the question of negligence, under all the circumstances of the case, should be submitted to the jury. One such case was that of Filer v. N. Y. Cent. R. Co. 49 N. Y. 47.

There the plaintiff received the injuries complained of in attempting to get off the cars while they were in motion making very slow progress. The plaintiff, who was a woman, was directed by the brakeman on the car to get off; and there was evidence upon which the jury might have found that she was told by him that they would not stop or move more slowly to enable her to do so. The name of the station had been called and the speed of the train had been greatly reduced, so much so that baggage had been taken from the baggage car and removed by the porter, and one man who was supposed to be a little lame had gotten off safely. Allen, J., in delivering the opinion of this court, said: "She was put to her choice without any fault of hers whether to obey the advice and suggestion of the defendant's servant and follow the example of the man who had preceded her, or to remain on the cars and be carried beyond the place of her destination and away from her friends; and it was a proper question for the jury whether this was or was not, under the circumstances, an act of ordinary care and prudence." The learned judge, continuing, said: "Had the cars been going at a rapid rate the plaintiff must have known that she would be injured in leaping from them; and the attempt to leave the cars under such circumstances, even at the instance of a railway servant, would have been a wanton and reckless act, and no recovery could be had against the defendant."

In Morrison v. Erie Railway Company, 56 N. Y. 802, it was held that the question whether a person has been guilty of contributory negligence in attempting to alight from a car while it is in motion is not in every case a question of fact for a jury; that, when the facts are undisputed, the question of contributory negligence may become one of law. In that case the plaintiff, suing by guardian, was about twelve years of age, and the train when it approached the station slowed up. It had passed the platform, and while still in motion the plaintiff's father took her under his arm and stepped from the car, and fell, and she was injured. Folger, J., delivering the opinion of the court, said:

"Can it be said that a person of ordinary prudence and care would have swung himself from a car in motion down to the ground in the dark, laden with the weight of a child twelve years old, having but one hand and one arm to aid himself with, when there was no other danger to be avoided by meeting this, and no incentive to the act other than the inconvenience of being carried by his place of abode, and with a full apprehension of the danger he was about to run? I think not, and I am of the opinion that it is so clear that the law and the court should have given the answer without calling in the aid of a jury." See also Phillips v. Rensselaer & S. R. Co. 49 N. Y. 177; Solomon v. Manhattan R. Co. 103 N. Y. 487, 4 Cent. Rep. 775.

In the last cited case Andrews, J., says:

"Negligence, no doubt, is usually a question of fact, of which the jury must inquire; but the inference of negligence in a given case may be so clear and convincing that the Judge may direct a verdict. The conclusion that it is prima facie dangerous to alight from a moving train is founded on our general knowledge and common experience, and it is akin to the conclusion, now generally accepted, that it is in law a dangerous, and therefore a negligent, act, unless explained and justified by special circumstances, to attempt to cross a railroad track without looking for approaching trains. In boarding a moving train there is generally less excuse than in alighting from one. The party attempting it is not often under the same stress of circumstances as frequently happens in the former case. He may be compelled to wait for another train, but this is an inconvenience merely, which does not justify exposing himself to hazard. . . . If men will take hazards they must bear the consequences of their own rashness; and it is no just reason for visiting the consequences upon another that his negligence co-operated in producing the result."

We think that the facts in this case are so overwhelming in their nature that no reasonable judgment can be formed as to the act of the deceased in attempting to jump upon this moving train other than that it was dangerous and reckless, and that the injury resulting therefrom was contributed to by him. We do not regard it as of the slightest importance, under the circumstances of this case, that the conductor of the train notified the deceased to jump on. That notification certainly cannot be interpreted to mean more than that the train would not stop or go slower than it was then going, and that if the deceased wanted to take it he must jump on at that moment. That does not alter the highly dangerous nature of the act itself. The deceased was in absolute safety at the time the direction was given. It created no emergency which called for the exercise of immediate judgment in the choice between the two dangers. It was a simple question of possible inconvenience of taking a later train, or reaching his destination by some other conveyance, and it afforded not the slightest justification or excuse for attempting to board a train moving at that rate of speed; and when he did it he did it at his own risk. We think the plaintiff, upon this state of facts, should have been nonsuited.

For these reasons the judgments of the Courts below should be reversed, and a new trial granted, costs to abide the event.

All concur, except Danforth, J., who reads for affirmance.

Danforth, J., dissenting:

It is not suggested by the appellant that there was any misdirection by the trial Judge, nor but that the defendants were guilty of negligence in not stopping their train.

The appeal rests upon the single proposition that the attempt of the plaintiffs' intestate to get upon the moving train was an act of negligence contributing to his injury, and therefore sufficient as matter of law to defeat a recovery. On the contrary, it seems to me that it was merely one act among others in the case, and to be considered with all the attendant circumstances. It may derive its explanation from the conduct of the defendants, and it was therefore for the jury to say how far the decedent was influenced by them upon the occasion of the accident. Bucher v. N. Y. Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 98 N. Y. 128; Filer v. N. Y. Cent. R. Co. 49 N. Y. 47; Glushing v. Sharp, 96 N. Y. 676.

And if they found that the conditions which led him into danger were of the defendants' own creation, both common sense and justice forbid that they should be allowed to withhold compensation. If, on the other hand, the danger, notwithstanding the solicitation of the conductor, was so manifest that in the exercise of ordinary prudence the intestate should have observed it, or, if observing it, he went recklessly to the car, he should suffer the consequences of an injury brought on by himself. Many circumstances are to be taken into account in answering these questions, and if inferences are to be drawn, not all one way, then no tribunal save a jury is authorized to pass upon them.

The appellant relies upon the single fact that the train was in motion. That, as appears from the cases referred to, is not enough to exonerate the defendants. Those decisions show that an intending passenger may attempt to board a moving train, and if injured in doing so may still recover; that is, the act is not negligent of itself. The speed of the train is in all cases to be considered, but this in connection with the conduct of the train servants, and the age and activity of the traveler, before his action upon the occasion in question can be characterized. Eppendorf v. Brooklyn City & N. R. Co. 69 N. Y. 195; Filer v. N. Y. Cent. R. Co. supra; Burrows v. Erie R. Co. 63 N. Y. 556; Hickey v. Boston & L. R. Co. 14 Allen, 429.

It is of the greatest importance, therefore, to ascertain the speed of the train. What was it? No exact testimony was given. But the train left Cooperstown at the usual time. The run to Phoenix was two and one half or three miles only, and at Cooperstown the engineer shut off steam and the train ran north to Phoenix, a distance of only two and one half or three miles, without steam. It was a regular passenger station, where all trains were advertised to stop. The conductor intended to stop at that station, and was trying to do so.

At about eighty rods distant the whistle was blown for the station, and the brakes applied continually until the train in fact came to a standstill, a short distance beyond the platform, twenty or thirty feet, or, as one witness says, fifty feet, and would have stopped sooner, or at the station, except that there was only one brakeman, and his brakes were defective. All that time the conductor stood upon the platform. In that position, and while eight or ten rods distant, he leaned out by the side of the car looking forward, and saw Hunter upon the station platform, facing the incoming train, and evidently waiting for it. When within eight or ten feet the conductor said to him: "Are you going? If you are, jump on." He reached out his hand and foot, tried to get on the car, and in some way was caught and killed.

These are circumstances about which there is no doubt—the engine moving without steam; the conductor intending to stop at the station; the whistle blown for the station as notice of that intention; the brakes applied; the train actually slowing up; and the conductor, expecting a passenger, calling him to get on. The effort was made to do so, and it failing, the train was actually stopped within a few feet from the place where the accident occurred. Do not these circumstances all tend to show and permit the inference that the train was moving very slowly? There was the intention to stop, the conductor's expectation to take his passenger, and the actual stoppage of the train when the accident occurred.

But the opinions of witnesses are referred to as showing the contrary. In view of the circumstances I have exhibited, those opinions may be taken with many grains of allowance.

One witness says: "I should think the train was going about six or eight miles an hour." He was a bystander. His attention was not called to the speed of the train at the time in question; but he was the plaintiffs' witness, and his evidence is in the case for what it is worth. What is it worth? About six or about eight—at once a difference of two miles.

The engineer says: "At the time the train passed the station I should say it was going from four to six miles an hour." Wicks, the fireman, testifies: "I would say from four to six miles an hour, slackening all the while."

The phrase used by all the witnesses in expressing an opinion is in the highest degree indefinite, and their testimony must be weighed in view of the circumstances to which I have alluded. The rate of speed was to be determined as a fact. No witness spoke from accurate information, but gave his opinion merely, the conductor not testifying to it.

Observers are competent witnesses, but few are able to say, with even tolerable accuracy, the rate of speed at which a train at any given moment is moving. In this case their attention was not directed to it, and the weight of their testimony was to be determined. The court cannot say from it that the train was, as a fact, moving at a given rate. A jury might say the speed was less than four miles an hour—as much less as the circumstances alluded to might indicate to them, and not necessarily faster than one might walk. The deceased was a young man, so far as appears, with the active habits of that age. He stood upon the platform of the station, mentally prepared to take the train, with every reason to expect that it would stop as usual.

It cannot be said as matter of law that a man of ordinary prudence would not have yielded to the direction of the conductor; nor can it be said that to him, in view of the circumstances, the train was moving at a palpably dangerous rate. He did not attempt to board the train by reason of his own impatience, but upon the invitation of the defendant's servant. It is to be considered whether this direction of the conductor was not only a practical expression of his belief that the step might be taken in safety, but also as a strong expression of his opinion that the movement of the train was slow and within the bounds of safety.

All these things might properly lead a jury to the reasonable belief that to the decedent the train did appear to be moving slowly, and, moreover, that it was in fact brought to such a point as only prevented complete inertness or stoppage—a resource of engineers to avoid the necessity of overcoming the vis inertia of a heavy train at rest. At any rate, the defendant ought not to be permitted to assert that the intestate did not exercise what now it seems would have been better judgment in the condition in which he was placed by their acts. That he did not act prudently should not be adjudged as matter of law, nor to what extent his action was governed by what he might reasonably infer from that of the conductor.

The questions were for the jury, and were properly submitted to them. I think the judgment which followed their verdict should be affirmed.

ALABAMA SUPREME COURT.

EAST BIRMINGHAM LAND CO. et al.,

Appts.,
v.

J. F. DENNIS.

(...Ala....)

1. A bona fide purchaser of certificates of corporate stock standing on the company's books in the name of the former owner, regularly indorsed by him in blank, and stolen from the present owner without his fault, gets no title, because such instruments are not negotiable.

2. Certificates of stock not being negotiable

NOTE.—Usages and customs.

A usage is ineffectual unless established, known and applicable to the matter in controversy. Janney v. Boyd, 30 Minn. 312; Taylor v. Mueller, 1d. 243; Dunham v. Haggerty, 1 Cent. Rep. 603, 110 Pa. 600. That custom cannot deprive a person of a legal right, see Attorney-General v. Tarr, 2 L. R. A. 37, note.

2 L. R. A.

paper, it is not permissible to prove a custom or usage among stockbrokers to the contrary.

3. No usage is good which conflicts with an established principle of law.

(January 15, 1893.)

APPPEAL by defendants, from a decree of the City Court of Birmingham (Sharpe, J.), in favor of plaintiff in an action to compel a transfer of certain stock on the books of the corporation and a delivery of a certificate therefor. Affirmed.

The bill was filed against J. P. Mudd and the East Birmingham Land Company, to compel a transfer on the books of the corporation of ten shares of stock of which complainant claimed to be owner, and to compel the delivery of the certificate therefor to him by Mudd who had possession thereof and claimed to be the owner. The certificate was issued in the name of one Dearborn, and was indorsed by him in blank. Complainant claimed to have derived title to it through Dearborn, and that it had been lost by or stolen from him without fault on his part. Mudd purchased the certificate for value from stockbrokers in Birmingham, and denied complainant's ownership as well as claimed that he acquired a good title by the custom and usage of the brokers in Birmingham. A decree having been rendered for complainant each defendant appealed separately.

Further facts appear in the opinion.

Mr. S. D. Weakley, for J. P. Mudd, appellee:

"A certificate of stock, accompanied by an irrevocable power of attorney, either filled up or in blank, is, in the hands of a third party, presumptive evidence of ownership in the holder; and where the party in whose hands the certificate is found is a holder for value without notice of any intervening equity his title cannot be impeached. The holder of the certificate may fill up the letter of attorney, execute the power, and thus obtain the legal title to the stock. And such a power is not limited to the person to whom it was first delivered, but inures to such bona fide holder into whose hands the certificate and power may pass."

Pall v. Tilt, 28 N. J. Eq. 479; Mount Holly, L. & M. Turnp. Co. v. Perree, 17 N. J. Eq. 117; Rogers v. New Jersey Ins. Co. 8 N. J. Eq. 167; Fulman v. Lobach, 1 Duer, 354; Leavitt v. Fisher, 4 Duer, 1; Bank of Utica v. Smalley, 2 Cow. 770; Cornick v. Richards, 3 Lea, 1; Cherry v. Frost, 7 Lea, 1; Moore v. Metropolitan Nat. Bank, 55 N. Y. 41. See also 1 Morawetz, Corp. §§ 181, 185, 188, 190, and authorities cited; Galveston City Co. v. Sibley, 56 Tex. 269; Cleveland & M. R. Co. v. Robbins, 35 Ohio St. 488.

The question in this case was decided in Winter v. Belmont Mining Company, 53 Cal. 428, and also in Bartolo v. Savage Mining Company, 64 Cal. 888, but differently in each case.

Cook, Stocks, § 868, does not agree with Morawetz. It appears there is a conflict in the authorities; but the rule announced in the case in the New Jersey Equity Reports and in Morawetz on Corporations is the better, more just and equitable rule.

We are not without a statute upon this subject. Section 1671 of the Code of Alabama (1886) is as follows: "It is the duty of every private corporation to require the transfer of its stock to be made or registered on the books of the corporation; and persons holding stock not so transferred or registered, or holding any stock under hypothecation, mortgage or other lien, must have the transfer, hypothecation, mortgage or other lien made or registered on the books of the corporation; or, upon failing to do so within fifteen days, all such transfers, hypothecations, mortgages or other liens shall be void as to bona fide creditors or subsequent purchasers without notice."

If Mudd is a "subsequent purchaser without notice" within the meaning of this section, then the result must be in his favor.

Buying, as he did, upon the faith of Dearborn's blank indorsement, with no knowledge or notice of Dennis's claim, with the stock standing on the books of the company in the name of Dearborn, he in effect bought from Dearborn and comes clearly within the spirit of the statute, if not the letter.

Mr. W. R. Houghton for appellee.

Somerville, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

We concur in the conclusion reached by the judge of the city court, that the appellee, Dennis, complainant in the bill, is the owner of the ten shares of stock which are the subject of litigation in the present suit. The testimony satisfactorily proves that the certificate of stock, indorsed in blank by Dearborn, who was the owner on the books of the defendant corporation, was the property of the appellee, and was taken or stolen from his possession without any negligence on his part whatever, several months before it was purchased by the defendant Mudd, who innocently bought and paid value for it some time in March, 1888.

The only question is whether Mudd, who paid full value for this stock, without notice of the complainant's claim to it, acquired a title superior to that of complainant. The established rule is that no person can ordinarily be deprived of his ownership of property save by his own consent or his negligence. The only exception to this rule is the case of a bona fide purchaser for value, of negotiable paper. We have no reference, of course, to the taking of property for public uses by judicial condemnation, which may be done without the owner's consent.

It cannot be contended, with any degree of plausibility, that, under the facts of this case, the complainant was guilty of negligence or the want of ordinary care in the custody of the certificate. He kept it in a box in the vault of a banking house, whence it was abstracted by some unknown person, apparently without any fault on his part. Nor does any question arise involving the rights of a subsequent bona fide purchaser of stock from one shown to be the owner on the corporate books, who has already made a prior unregistered transfer of it to another purchaser. All such transfers made by the true owner, and not registered on the books of the corporation within fifteen days, are declared by statute to be "void as to bona fide creditors or purchasers without notice." Code 1886, § 1671; Fisher v. Jones, 82 Ala. 117.

If the defendant Mudd had claimed by a subsequent purchase from Dearborn, the owner of the stock on the corporate books, this question would arise. But he does not so claim, his title being derived through the complainant, Dennis, himself, by two or more intermediate transfers, the first of whom was a fraudulent holder without title.

Whether Mudd's title to the stock, therefore, is superior to that of Dennis depends on whether a certificate of stock, indorsed in blank by the owner, is to be treated as negotiable paper. The rule is well settled that a bona fide purchaser of a negotiable bill, bond or note, although he buys from a thief, acquires a good title, if he pays value for it, without notice of the infirmity of his vendor's title.

The authorities are clear in support of the view that a certificate of corporate shares of stock, in the ordinary form, is not negotiable paper; and that a purchaser of such certificate, although indorsed in blank by the owner, where no question arises under the registration laws, obtains no better title to the stock than his vendor had, in the absence of all negligence on the part of the owner, or his authority to make the sale.

This question arose and was decided by the New York Court of Appeals in Mechanics Bank v. New York Railroad Company (1856), 13 N. Y. 599. It was there held that such a certificate does not partake of the character of a negotiable instrument, and that a bona fide assignee, with full power to transfer the stock, takes the certificate subject to the equities which existed against his assignor. Such certificates, said Comstock, J., "contain no words of negotiability. They declare simply that the person named is entitled to certain shares of stock. They do not, like negotiable instruments, run to the bearer or order of the party to whom they are given." They were said to be in some respects like a bill of lading or warehouse receipt, being "the representation of property existing under certain conditions, and the documentary evidence of title thereto."

The most that can be said is that all such instruments possess a sort of quasi negotiability, dependent on the custom of merchants and the convenience of trade. They are not, in the matter of transferability, protected strictly as negotiable paper.

In Shaw v. Spencer, 100 Mass. 382, it was also decided that a certificate of corporate stock, transferred in blank on its back, was clearly not a negotiable instrument. "No commercial usage," it was said, "could give to such an instrument the attribute of negotiability. However many intermediate hands it may pass through, whoever would obtain a new certificate in his own name must fill out the blanks . . . so as to derive title to himself directly from the last recorded stockholder, who is the only recognized and legal owner of the shares."

The case of Seawall v. Boston Water Power Co. 4 Allen, 282, decided by the same court a few years before, is referred to as a precedent in support of this conclusion.

The precise point in the present case was also decided in Barstow v. Savage Mining Company, 64 Cal. 388, where it was expressly held that a bona fide purchaser of stock standing on the company's books in the name of the former owner, regularly indorsed by him, and stolen from the present owner without his fault, gets no title. The decision was based on the fact that such certificates are not negotiable instruments, but simply muniments of title, and evidences of the holder's right to a given share in the property and franchises of the corporation. It was observed, in regard to the matter of negligence, as follows:

"But if the purchaser from one who has not the title, and has no authority to sell, relies for his protection on the negligence of the true owner, he must show that such negligence was the proximate cause of the deceit."
2 L. R. A.

The same principle was applied to bills of lading in Gurney v. Behrend, 8 El. & Bl. 622, decided by the English Queen's Bench, where an instrument of that kind, indorsed in blank by the consignor, and sent by him to his correspondent, had been misappropriated. The correspondent, without authority, fraudulently transferred the bill for value, and it was held by Lord Campbell that, for the want of the element of negotiability in the paper, the title to the goods was unaffected by the transaction.

The doctrine of Barstow v. Savage Mining Company, supra, is well supported by authority, and, in our judgment, announces a correct principle of law, and we fully approve it. Woolley v. Sergeant [8 N. J. L. 262], 14 Am. Dec. note, p. 427, and cases there cited; Cook, Stocks, §§ 7, 10, 192, 368, 487; 2 Daniel, Neg. Inst. 8d ed. § 1708 g.

It harmonizes entirely with the declaration of our statute that shares of stock in private corporations are "personal property, transferable on the books of the corporation" in accordance with the rules and regulations of the corporation. Code 1886, § 1669; Campbell v. Woodstock Iron Co. 88 Ala. 351.

There is a class of cases, not to be confounded with the one in hand, where the holder of such a certificate of stock, indorsed in blank, is clothed with power as agent or trustee to deal with such stock to a limited extent, and transfers it by exceeding his powers, or in breach of his trust. In such cases it has often been held that the true owner, having conferred on the holder by contract all the external indicia of title, and an apparently unlimited power of disposition over the stock, "is estopped to assert his title as against a third person, who, acting in good faith, acquires it for value from the apparent owner." 2 Daniel, Neg. Inst. 8d ed. § 1708 g; McNeil v. Tenth Nat. Bank, 46 N. Y. 325; Mount Holly, L. & M. Turnp. Co. v. Ferree, 17 N. J. Eq. 117; Prall v. Tilt, 28 N. J. Eq. 479; Merchants Bank v. Livingston, 74 N. Y. 223.

These cases rest on the principle that it is more just and reasonable, where one of two innocent parties must suffer loss, that he should be the loser who has put trust and confidence in the deceiver, than a stranger who has been negligent in trusting no one. Allen v. Maury, 66 Ala. 10.

It being an established principle of law that certificates of stock are not to be regarded as negotiable paper, it is not permissible to prove a custom or usage among stockbrokers to the contrary. No usage is good which conflicts with an established principle of law, any more than one which contravenes or nullifies the express stipulations of a contract. Dickinson v. Gay, 7 Allen, 29, 83 Am. Dec. 656, note 664; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Johnston, 75 Ala. 596; Lehman v. Marshall, 47 Ala. 362.

The decree of the Court below is in accordance with these views, and must be affirmed.

TEXAS SUPREME COURT.

ST. LOUIS, ARKANSAS & TEXAS R. CO., Appl.,

L. WELCH.

(....Tex.....)

1. A foreman of a bridge gang, engaged in repairing bridges along the line of a railroad, is a fellow servant with the persons operating a freight train on the same road, and cannot recover for injuries occasioned by negligence.
2. Although asleep upon a side track in a car provided for that purpose, the foreman of a bridge gang, who is liable to be called at any moment to go out with his gang upon the road, is on duty so far as to be at the time a fellow servant with the men operating a freight train, whose negligence causes his injury.

(December 14, 1883.)

APPEAL by defendant, from a judgment of the District Court of Smith County in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have been occasioned by defendant's negligence. Reversed.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion of the court.

Mr. N. Webb Finley, for appellant:

An employé of a railway company who receives injuries while engaged in the line of his employment, resulting from the negligence of a fellow servant, cannot recover from the railway company; what is here meant by "while engaged in the line of his employment" is that he is in his place as such employé, subject to and ready to respond to immediate orders of service from his superior in such employment.

Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. McNamara, 59 Tex. 255; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Marcelles, Id. 834; Murray v. S. C. Railroad Co. 38 Am. Dec. 283; 2 Thomp. Neg. p. 1046; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. State, 33 Md. 554; Baird v. Pettit, 70 Pa. 483; Russell v. Hudson River R. Co. 17 N. Y. 138; Gillshannon v. Stony Brook R. Corp. 10 Cush. 231; East Line & Red River R. Co. v. Scott, 71 Tex. —.

The servant undertakes all risk of being injured through the negligence of his fellow servants in all such matters as are incident to such employment.

Dallas v. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. 61 Tex. 196; 2 Thomp. Neg. p. 969.

The court should have instructed the jury that if the plaintiff and those operating the freight train were in any degree mutually dependent upon each other for their personal safety in the discharge of their respective duties, then, in law, they would be fellow servants, and plaintiff could not recover.

Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Rider, 62 Tex. 267.

Messrs. John M. Duncan, J. J. Rice and Robertson & Robertson, for appellee:

Appellee, Welch, though engaged in the line of his employment, was in a department or line of the railroad service wholly unconnected with the department in which the fireman, conductor and engineer who hurt him were at the time engaged; therefore he assumed no risk of their negligence and correctly recovered for the injury caused by the negligence of the latter.

Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Marcelles, 59 Tex. 834; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Ross, 113 U. S. 377 [28 L. ed. 787]; 2 Thomp. Neg. pp. 1037, 1038, § 38; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Moranda, 93 Ill. 803; 1 Redfield, Railways, 6th ed. p. 568, and authorities cited in note 17, also Id. 570, note 20; Ryan v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 60 Ill. 171; Fitzpatrick v. New Albany & S. R. Co. 7 Ind. 436; Gillenwater v. Madison & I. R. Co. 5 Ind. 339; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. De Armond, 86 Tenn. 73; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Gregory, 58 Ill. 272-235; Meloy v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 83 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 358; Hobson v. New Mexico & A. R. Co. 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 360; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Weaver, 28 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 341, 353, 354, 35 Kan. 412.

Welch, though he may have been a fellow servant of the engineer and conductor, who negligently caused his injuries when on duty in the line of his employment, was not such fellow servant at the time he was hurt, and so properly recovered.

2 Thomp. Neg. p. 1046, § 48; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. State, 33 Md. 542-555; Washburn v. Nashville & C. R. Co. 3 Head, 638.

Gaines, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action for personal injuries brought by appellee against appellant. The case made by the plaintiff showed the following facts:

The plaintiff was the foreman of a bridge gang in the employment of the defendant company, engaged in putting in and repairing bridges along the line of its road. About 8 o'clock in the morning, on the day of the accident, he was asleep in the bunk of a sleeping car, provided by the company for the purpose, which was lying on a side track of the railway in the Town of Gilmer. At the time mentioned the employes of the defendant operating a freight train on its road negligently ran the train rapidly upon the side track, and struck the car upon which he was sleeping with such violence that he was thrown from his bunk, and seriously injured. He and the employes who caused the injury were engaged in different departments of the company's road. His employment was in the bridge department, and he received his instructions from the superintendent or management of that department, while the employes on the train were working in the transportation department, and were under the orders of its superintendent.

It appears from the testimony that the plaintiff was subject to the orders of the company to go out on duty at any time. Without referring to the assignments of error, it is sufficient to say here that the two questions presented by the record are, whether the plaintiff and the employes of the train are to be deemed fellow servants in the sense that precludes him from a recovery of the company for injuries inflicted by reason of their negligence; and, if so, whether he is to be considered as on duty at the time of the accident.

§ L. R. A.

Upon the question, who are to be held "fellow servants," in the legal sense of that term, there is great contrariety of judicial opinion. The doctrine that one fellow servant cannot recover of the master for injuries inflicted through the negligence of his fellow servant is of comparatively recent origin. It was first announced in 1887, in the English Court of Exchequer, in the case of Priestly v. Fowler, 3 Mees. & W. 1.

The Supreme Court of South Carolina laid down the same rule in the case of Murray v. South Carolina Railroad Company, 1 McMul. L. 885. This case was decided in 1841, and is the first case in which the rule was applied in this country. The opinion shows that the court was unaware of the decision in Priestly v. Fowler, supra.

In 1842 the subject was very carefully considered by the Supreme Court of Massachusetts in the case of Farwell v. Boston Railroad Corporation, 4 Met. 49, and the same doctrine was announced. This has become the leading case, and has been rigidly followed by the courts of England and by a majority of the courts in this country. The question of persons employed in different departments of the same general business of the common master was considered in that case, and in discussing it, Chief Justice Shaw, who delivered the opinion, uses this language:

"It was strongly pressed in argument that, although this might be so, where two or more servants are employed in the same department of duty, where each can exert some influence over the conduct of the other, and thus to some extent provide for his own security, yet that it could not apply where two or more are employed in different departments of duty, at a distance from each other, and where one can in no degree influence or control the conduct of another. But we think this is founded upon a supposed distinction, on which it would be extremely difficult to establish a practical rule. When the object to be accomplished is one and the same, when the employers are the same, and when the several persons employed derive their authority and compensation from the same source, it would be extremely difficult to distinguish what constitutes one department and what a distinct department of duty."

The language employed in the last sentence quoted has been generally used by courts and text writers as the basis of the definition of the term fellow servants. Substantially the same language has been frequently employed by our own courts in defining the term. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Rider, 62 Tex. 207; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Harrington, Id. 597; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Watts, 68 Tex. 549.

The rule so announced in Farwell's Case has, as previously intimated, been followed closely in the Courts of England, and generally in the American Courts, in its broadest application. Lately there has been shown some disposition to modify the doctrine, but it has mainly been in the direction of making a distinction between servants of a different grade.

The case of Chicago Railroad Company v. Ross, 112 U. S. 877 [23 L. ed. 787], is a case of this latter character. As to service in different departments of the same common employment, there is less conflict of authority. In the courts of a few of the States it has been held that the employees in different branches of the same general employment are not fellow servants.

This is the rule in Illinois (Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Moran, 108 Ill. 576); in Tennessee (Nashville & D. R. Co. v. Jones, 9 Heisk. 37); in Kentucky (Louisville, C. & L. R. Co. v. Cavens, 9 Bush, 559); in Georgia (Cooper v. Mullins, 30 Ga. 150); and perhaps in Virginia (Moon v. Richmond & A. R. Co. 78 Va. 745).

This was the ruling in Indiana in the earlier decisions (Gillenwater v. Madison & I. R. Co. 5 Ind. 889; Pitpatrick v. New Albany & S. E. Co. 7 Ind. 486); but these cases have since been overruled (Columbus & I. C. R. Co. v. Arnold, 81 Ind. 174).

Judge Thompson, in his work on Negligence, lays this down as the exceptional doctrine. 2 Thomp. Neg. 1026.

Our researches have satisfied us that this is correct, and that the great weight of authority is the other way. The cases are too numerous for citation; but see Thomp. Neg. supra; Shearm. & Redf. Neg. §§ 103, 109; Whart. Neg. § 230; Wood, Master & Servant, § 425. See also Patterson, Ry. Accident Law, §§ 324, 325, where the cases are grouped.

In reference to these citations, the caution is to be observed that in many of the cases in which certain employees were not held fellow servants it was upon the ground that the one was subject to the control of the other. In considering this question, there is danger of a mistake growing out of that class of cases which hold a railroad company liable to its servants operating its trains for injuries resulting from negligence in the keeping of the track. In deciding these cases, the courts sometimes say that the train men and the track repairers are not fellow servants; and it is pretty generally held that in these cases the person charged with the duty of keeping up the track is the representative of the company, and not a servant only. But the true rule, as we take it, is that it is the implied obligation and duty of the company to its employees to furnish a safe track.

But in the present case, if we should hold that the plaintiff, as to repairing bridges, etc., was the representative of the company, and that the servants in the transportation department could recover for injuries resulting from his neglect, it would not follow that he could recover for their negligence. A servant may be a representative of the company in one relation; a fellow servant with coemployees in another. Crispin v. Babbitt, 81 N. Y. 516.

Recurring to our own decisions, we think it has been decided in the case of Dallas v. Gulf, C. & S. F. Railway Company, 61 Tex. 196, that service in different departments of duty does not exempt an employee of a railroad company from the operation of the general rule. There the railroad company was engaged in constructing an extension of its line. The plaintiff had been employed in watching the ties along the line, but had undertaken (for the company) to procure and record a deed, and in the discharge of this duty took passage upon the construction train, when he was injured by the negligence of the employees who were operating the train. He was held not entitled to recover. We understand the decision to be placed upon the broad ground that the fact that plaintiff though engaged in a different line of duty from the employes who were running the train, was their fellow servant. We confess that the reasoning upon which the rule has been adopted is not very satisfactory.

It is said that when the servant accepts the employment of the master he impliedly assumes the risk of the negligence of his fellow servants. The argument seems illogical. It amounts to saying that the law is that he cannot recover because he takes the risk, and that he takes the risk because the law is so. By a parity of reasoning, we might assume that he takes the risk of his master's own personal negligence, and that, therefore, the master would not be liable to a servant for such negligence.

A more reasonable ground is that of public policy. It is frequently asserted as the true basis of the doctrine, and is founded upon the theory that it is calculated to make servants in a common employment watchful of each other, and thereby to promote carefulness in the performance of their duties. If this is to be taken as the true ground, the rule should be confined to those servants whose duties bring them into such juxtaposition that one would be enabled to observe the negligence of his fellows. But, however unsatisfactory may be the reasons for the doctrine, it is too well established, and its limits, in so far as the question before us is concerned, are too well defined, to permit us to intrench upon it.

We feel constrained, both by the former opinions of this court and the great weight of authority elsewhere, to hold that the employes who were operating the train which caused the injury in this case were the fellow servants of the plaintiff. If we could hold it an open question, our ruling might be otherwise; but we consider the doctrine too firmly established to be changed, except by the action of the Legislature.

The other proposition in this case requires no extended discussion. The plaintiff at the time of the accident was asleep on a car belonging to the company, provided by it for that purpose, which was placed upon its side track. He was liable to be called upon at any moment to go out with his gang upon duty upon the road. We think he must be held to have been upon duty at the time he received the injury. That the accident occurred when he was resting from his labors, we think makes no difference. He was subject to the call of the company at the time, and his case differs from that of other servants who engage for certain hours of employment, and who are injured during the intervals in which the master has no claim upon his services.

We think the court should have instructed the jury that if plaintiff was foreman of the bridge gang, and was injured by the negligence of the employes operating a train on the road, he was the fellow servant of such employes; and also that if at the time of the accident he was asleep upon a car provided for the purpose by the company, and under his contract was subject to be called out for duty at any moment, he was on duty.

The assignment that the court erred in overruling the motion for a new trial, on the ground that the evidence is not supported by the verdict, sets out fully the particulars in which the evidence fails to support the verdict, and is well taken.

The judgment will accordingly be reversed, and the cause remanded.

CALIFORNIA SUPREME COURT.

MERRILL LODGE, No. 299, I. O. G. T.,

*Resp.,
v.*

A. M. ELLSWORTH et al., Appts.

(....Cal....)

A subordinate lodge, duly incorporated under state laws, cannot be deprived of the possession and control of property belonging to it, by the grand lodge of the order with which it is connected, although under the constitution of the order it has been suspended by the grand lodge.

(January 28, 1889.)

A PPEAL by defendants, from a judgment of the Los Angeles County Superior Court (Brunson, J.), in favor of plaintiff in an action to restrain interference with certain real and personal property. Affirmed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion of the commissioner.

NOTE.—Fraternal and benevolent societies; property rights.

The Supreme Lodge of A. O. U. W., incorporated under the laws of Kentucky, demanded assessments of the Michigan Grand Lodge, which in turn demanded them from the members of subordinate lodges; but it was decided by the courts that this could not be done. It is not competent for the respondent (the grand lodge) to subject itself or its members to a foreign authority in this way. There is no law of the State permitting it, nor could there be any law of the State which would subject a corporation created and existing under the laws of this State to the jurisdiction and control of a body existing in another State and in no manner under control of our laws. Lumphere v. Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W. 47 Mich. 429; Hirschl, Fraternities & Societies, 45.

Plaintiff, as treasurer of Cayuga Lodge, sued the defendants to recover from them certain lodge property, and stated that the defendants had formerly constituted said lodge, but had been expelled by the grand lodge, and their charter revoked, and that plaintiffs had then been installed by the grand lodge, and had been directed to receive from the defendants all the lodge property. It was unanimously decided that the defendants were not bound by the decree rendered against them in the grand lodge, and that such decree formed no valid basis on which to rest the lawsuit. Austin v. Searing, 18 N. Y. 112; Hirschl, Fraternities & Societies, 45.

It has been decided that the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania A. O. U. W. had no power to demand assessments from members of subordinate lodges, in order to raise a fund to be sent to the other States, because by its charter it (the grand lodge) is limited to the relief of the members of its own lodge, and of its subordinate lodges. Corona Lodge v. Grand Lodge, Iowa Workman, April, 15, 1888; Hirschl, Fraternities & Societies, 45.

3 L. R. A.

Messrs. Julius Lyons and Chapman & Hendrick for appellants.

Messrs. Will D. Gould and James H. Blanchard, for respondent:

The plaintiff's power to hold and control its property is derived from the State.

Civil Code, §§ 895, 896.

The plaintiff could not be divested of this power without due process of law.

Const. Cal. art. 1, par. 18.

"Due process of law" means judgment of law in its regular course of administration through courts of justice.

Peltier v. Witt, 46 Pa. 480.

Neither the grand lodge nor any of its agents had any authority to interfere with plaintiff's property.

Good Templar's Dig. pp. 10, 286; Proceedings of the Right Worthy Grand Lodge, 5th Sess. p. 18; 14th Sess. p. 12; Hirschl, Fraternities & Societies, pp. 44, 45; Austin v. Searing, 16 N. Y. 112; Lamphere v. Grand Lodge A. O. U. W. 47 Mich. 429; McCallion v. Hibernia S. & L. Society, 70 Cal. 166.

It would be against public policy to allow a secret organization, by means unknown to the law and the courts, to amass and control property all over the country. The courts will not lend their power to aid or enforce obedience to the commands of any secret organization. Obedience must be voluntary.

Austin v. Searing, 16 N. Y. 112; McCallion v. Hibernia S. & L. Society, 70 Cal. 166.

Either party may sever the relations between a subordinate and a grand lodge.

Hirschl, Fraternities & Societies, pp. 44, 45; Austin v. Searing, 16 N. Y. 112.

Hayne, C., delivered the following opinion:

Suit for an injunction to restrain the defendants from interfering with certain real and personal property. The court below gave judgment for the plaintiff, and the defendants appeal.

The case appears to have grown out of a dispute between the members of the lodge, as to its management and control.

The answer admits that the plaintiff is, and was at the time in question, a corporation duly organized under the laws of the State of California, and avers that on April 1, 1886, "Will D. Gould, James H. Blanchard, C. C. Dunn, M. W. Childs and others, members of said Merrill Lodge, got control of said lodge, and elected the officers thereof, the said Gould, Blanchard and Childs being elected trustees thereof, and undertook to destroy the said order, and to control the same for their own private ends."

It further avers, in substance, that the plaintiff is a "subordinate" lodge of the order; that by the constitution of the grand lodge it is declared that any subordinate lodge which fails to do certain things "shall be deemed an extinct lodge, and its charter shall be forfeited;" that the plaintiff by its conduct brought itself within this provision, and was "suspended" by the grand lodge; and that the defendant Ellsworth "was by the grand chief templar of the grand lodge of the State of California appointed the deputy of said grand chief templar, and directed by him to take possession of the books, papers and the other property of said Merrill

? I. R. A.

Lodge, and hold the same subject to and until the further order of said grand lodge," which the said Ellsworth proceeded to do.

These averments of the answer (except as to the wrongful intent of the persons who "got control" of the corporation) appear to be true. Upon the question of the ownership of the property the court finds that "Said plaintiff, in furtherance of its objects, leased a certain hall . . . that said plaintiff is now, and has been since December 8, 1874, in possession of, and entitled to the possession of said hall;" that plaintiff, "for the purpose for which it was incorporated, has expended for carpets, furniture, fixtures, books and necessary property, for the carrying on of its work, the sum of $2,000; that said hall is a necessary and proper place in which to keep all of said property, and for the promotion of its said benevolent purposes;" and that "The defendants, or either of them, have no right, title or interest in or to, or any right of possession of said hall, or the furniture, books," etc.

The appellants make no criticism upon the sufficiency of this finding as a finding of ownership. Their position seems to be that the suspension by the grand lodge, and the appointment of Ellsworth as the deputy of the grand chief templar, entitled him to the possession and control of the property. The relation between the grand lodge and the corporation plaintiff is not very clear from the record before us; but, as we view the case, no question as to the rights of the plaintiff or its members, as members of the order, is involved.

The question presented is one of property merely; and in relation to this two controlling facts appear from the record, viz.: that the plaintiff is a corporation duly organized under the laws of the State of California, and that it is the owner of the property in question, in which the defendants have no right, title or interest. It follows from these facts that the plaintiff is entitled to be protected against the acts of the defendants. The ownership of the property draws to itself the right of possession and control. And since the plaintiff is a corporation it can only be dissolved in the manner prescribed by the laws of California.

The provision of the constitution of the grand lodge that in certain contingencies the subordinate lodge "shall be deemed an extinct lodge, and its charter shall be forfeited," and the "suspension" by the grand lodge, and the action taken by the grand chief templar, have not the slightest effect upon the legal existence of the corporation; and as long as it exists its affairs must be managed by its duly elected officers, as provided by law. If they misconduct themselves, appropriate proceedings to remove them must be resorted to. But the propriety of their conduct will not be inquired into in a suit by the corporation to protect its property.

The showing seems to us to be sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to an injunction. We therefore advise that the judgment be affirmed.

We concur: Belcher, C. C.; Foote, C.

Per Curiam:

For the reasons given in the foregoing opinion, the judgment is affirmed.

GEORGIA SUPREME COURT.

FLUKER, Pff. in Err.,
v.

GEORGIA RAILROAD & BANKING CO.

(....Ga....)

1. The dominion of a railroad corporation over its trains, tracks and right of way is no less complete or exclusive than that which every owner has over his own property. Hence, the corporation may exclude whom it pleases when they come to transact their own private business with passengers or other third persons, and admit whom it pleases when they come to transact such business. This applies to selling lunches to or soliciting orders from passengers for the sale of lunches.
2. A mere implied license, no matter how long enjoyed, to transact such business, for which no consideration has been paid, is revocable at any time; and such revocation results from notice not to prosecute the business in the future.
3. One who persists in using the license after notice of its termination, may be prevented from so doing by such force, not extending to life or limb, as may be necessary to effectuate his expulsion from the premises.
4. A lessee or licensee of the exclusive privilege of entering the cars or upon the right of way to sell or supply lunches, is not a servant or agent of the corporation, so as to render it liable for an assault, or an assault and battery, committed by such lessee or licensee upon a competitor who seeks lawfully, on his own premises, to obtain the patronage of passengers.
5. A master has no right of action for an assault, or an assault and battery, upon his servant, unless some loss of service or capacity to serve results therefrom.

(January 21, 1899.)

ERROR to the Green County Superior Court (Jenkins, J.), to review a judgment of nonsuit in an action to recover damages alleged to have resulted to plaintiff by being expelled from defendant's right of way. Affirmed.

The facts appear in the opinion.

Messrs. H. F. & H. G. Lewis for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. J. B. Cumming and J. A. Billups for defendant in error.

Bleckley, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff had for some nine years, without objection on the part of the company, exercised the privilege of coming upon the right of way, and dealing with passengers by supplying them with lunches. A part of the time he had even used the platform of the company for this purpose, and perhaps also had been allowed to enter the cars. The privilege, except as to coming upon the right of way, was revoked some four years previously to October, 1886. On the 10th of said October the plaintiff received notice to cease the exercise of the privilege as to the right of way, and was also informed that the exclusive right of serving lunches to passengers had been leased by the company to one Hart.

*Head notes by BLECKLEY, Ch. J.

2 L. R. A.

About a week after receiving this notice the plaintiff's servant was on two or three occasions expelled from the right of way by a servant of the company and in one instance the company's servant, in controlling the action of the plaintiff's servant, did not desist where the right of way stopped, but conducted the intruder across the public street, and up to the plaintiff's door. The plaintiff, seeing that he could not carry on his business through the medium of a servant, undertook to conduct it himself, and he also was expelled—both Hart and the defendant's servant co-operating in his expulsion, and Hart, but not the servant, continuing the use of force beyond the right of way, and into the public street.

The plaintiff, after this, undertook to advertise his business by ringing a bell in the street in front of his premises, and Hart alone interfered with that, and committed an assault upon him in the street. For these grievances he brought his action against the company. The case was tried, and the court granted a nonsuit.

1. It is contended that the company has no such exclusive dominion over the tracks and spaces embraced in its right of way as to entitle it to exclude therefrom any person entering thereon in an orderly manner, and upon lawful business; and especially that it cannot discriminate against one person and in favor of another. We have discovered no authority for this position, either in its more limited or more extended form. On the contrary, it would seem that the very nature of property involves a right of exclusive dominion over it in the owner.

We cannot believe that there is a sort of right of common lodged in the public at large to enter upon lands on which railroads are located, and over which they have secured the right of way. Such lands the railroad companies may inclose by fences if they choose to do so, and exclude any and all persons whomsoever. Their dominion over the same is no less complete or exclusive than that which every owner has over his property. If they do not choose to erect fences and make inclosures, they may, by mere orders, keep off intruders, and they may treat as intruders all who come to transact their own business with passengers, or with persons other than the companies themselves. To do this, however, they must give fair notice; inasmuch as by a sort of common law or common understanding in this country an unforbidden entry on uninclosed lands is not a trespass, unless the intruder comes for some improper purpose, or to remain an undue or unnecessary length of time.

It is manifest that the grant of the privilege to one or more is no rightful cause of complaint on the part of others to whom a like privilege is denied. The right to make such discriminations is incident to the ownership of all property which is not devoted to some use that in and of itself involves an invitation to the public to enter and enjoy for the time being. The business of selling lunches to passengers, or of soliciting from them orders for the same, is not one which every citizen has the right to engage in upon the tracks and premises of a railway.

company; and consequently those who do engage in it and carry it on must be dependent upon the company for the privilege. And whether the permission, when granted, be called a lease or a license, makes no difference; nor does it make any difference, except in the matter of revocation, whether the grant be gratuitous, or made for a consideration. Barney v. Oyster Bay & H. Steam-Bout Co. 67 N. Y. 301; Landrigan v. State, 31 Ark. 50; Hason v. Boston & M. R. Co. 2 Gray, 577; Junction R. Co. v. Philadelphia, 88 Pa. 424; Sweeney v. Boston & A. R. Co. 128 Mass. 5; Pittsburgh, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. v. Bingham, 29 Ohio St. 364; Keller v. Dillon, 26 Ga. 701.

2. That the company allowed the plaintiff to sell his lunches upon its right of way for a long space of time, say nine years, without objection, gave him no right to the privilege in perpetuity. He paid the company no consideration, but enjoyed a mere implied license, which was revokable at any time; certainly so after giving him reasonable notice. In this instance, he had notice for about one week before any decisive steps were taken to put a stop to his dealings. He refused to yield to the notice, and for that reason alone a resort to force on the part of the company was had. There can be no doubt that such a license could be terminated by notice. 1 Washb. Real Prop. 400; 8 Kent, Com. 452, 453; Parish v. Kaspars, 109 Ind. 596, 7 West. Rep. 869; Wingard v. Tift, 24 Ga. 179; Coleord v. Carr, 71 Ga. 105; Cook v. Bridgen, 45 Ga. 340; Macon v. Franklin, 12 Ga. 289; Sheffield v. Collier, 8 Ga. 62.

The force used by the company's servant was of a mild and gentle character; certainly so as against the plaintiff himself. Not only was no violence done to life or member, but not even was the plaintiff treated rudely; and the company's servant desisted before the plaintiff had withdrawn beyond the right of way. A far greater degree of force than that used would have been justifiable, had the plaintiff rendered it necessary in order for his expulsion to be accomplished. Wood v. Leadbitter, 13 Mees. & W. 838.

4. For the violence of Hart, the lessee or licensee of the privilege, the company is not responsible. He was not acting as a servant of the company, but in his own behalf; and although the company, by its servant, co-operated with him in the beginning, that co-operation ceased before Hart had transcended the limits of his own rights. If Hart pursued the plaintiff into or upon the street, he alone is responsible. The company's servant declined to take part in that proceeding, but confined himself and his action to the company's premises. This same distinction applies to Hart's interference with ringing the bell in front of the plaintiff's premises on the street. Hart alone undertook to deal with the plaintiff for using the bell, and, so far as appears, no servant of the company was even present on that occasion. His conduct then and there certainly affords no cause of action against the company.

5. It does appear, however, that the company's servant, although he did not chase the plaintiff beyond the right of way, pushed the matter further in dealing with the plaintiff's servant. He not only forced him off the right of way, but across the street, and to the plaintiff's door. This may give a cause of action to the servant, but it furnishes none to the plaintiff, because there was no loss of service, nor any impairment of capacity to render service; and, for a master to have a right of action for an assault and battery committed upon his servant, one or both of these consequences must ensue. Robert Mary's Case, 9 Coke, 112 a; Wood, Mast. & Serv. § 224; Bigelow, Torta, 103, 109; 1 Minor, Inst. 224, and authorities cited.

Judgment affirmed.

MARYLAND COURT OF APPEALS.

William H. RITTLER, Appt.,

v.

Emeline SMITH, Admrx.

(.....Md.....)

1. A creditor has an insurable interest in the life of his debtor.

2. A life insurance policy is but a chose in action for the payment of money, and may be assigned as such under the Maryland Act of 1838, chap. 51.

3. A creditor who, in pursuance of a bona fide effort to secure payment of his debt, insures the life of his debtor and takes a policy in his own name, or for his own benefit, which he is obliged to keep alive by paying premiums, is entitled to hold all he can recover on the policy, if there is not such a gross disproportion between the debt and the amount of the policy as to make the transaction a speculation or wager.

4. A creditor who took out policies in mutual aid associations on the life of his debtor, on which policies he became liable to be assessed as a member, and on which he paid, within the period of about nine months thereafter, the sum of $361.75, and the amount collected on which, on the debtor's death, was $2,124.82, being an excess of $474.53 over the amount of the debt, is entitled to hold the whole amount received, as there is no such disproportion between the debt and the insurance as to warrant a condemnation of the transaction as a speculation or wager.

(February 21, 1889.)

APPEAL by defendant, from a judgment of the Circuit Court of Baltimore City in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover insurance money collected by defendant upon a policy insuring the life of plaintiff's intestate. Reversed.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Argued before Miller, Robinson, Irving, Stone, Bryan, Yellott and McSherry, JJ. Messrs. J. Wilson Leakin and R. R. Battee for appellant.

Mr. T. Alexander Seth for appellee.

Miller, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

In June, 1886, Victor Smith was indebted to William H. Rittler in the sum of about $1,000; and Smith, being insolvent, Rittler took out certificates of insurance on Smith's life in four several mutual aid associations, aggregating on their face the sum of $6,500. These certificates were all in favor of Rittler and he paid all the premiums or assessments thereunder.

Smith died in March, 1887, and Rittler collected from these insurances the sum of $2,124.82, which appears to have been all that could have been collected, according to the terms of the certificates and the financial conditions of the associations. Deducting from est in the life of each member of the firm; and each member of a firm has such interest in the life of every member of another firm which is its debtor. Each member of the debtor firm is individually liable for the whole debt, and each member of the creditor firm is interested in the whole debt. Mitchell v. Union L. Ins. Co. 45 Maine, 104; Lewis v. Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. 39 Conn. 100; Rawls v. American L. Ins. Co. 36 Barb. 337, 27 N. Y. 223; Bills, L. Ins. § 27, p. 37.

Persons advancing money, have an insurable interest in the lives of those going to dig gold, and for whom the advances were made. Leonard v. Eagle L. & H. Ins. Co. (N. Y. Supreme Ct.) 4 Liv. U. S. Law Mag. 238; Miller v. Eagle L. & H. Ins. Co. 2 E. D. Smith, 238; Morrell v. Trenton Mut. L. & F. Ins. Co. 10 Cush. 282; Bevin v. Conn. Mut. L. Ins. Co. 28 Conn. 244; Trenton Mut. L. & F. Ins. Co. v. Johnson, 24 N. J. L. 578; Hoyt v. N. Y. L. Ins. Co. 3 How. 440; Mitchell v. Union L. Ins. Co. 45 Maine, 104.

It has been said, however, on the authority of Goodell v. Holders, 9 East, 72, that an insurance upon the life of a debtor, in behalf of a creditor, is in legal effect but a guaranty of the debt, and if the debt is paid, the insurance is at an end; but it is now settled that this case is now the law. It was directly drawn in question and was expressly overruled in Dalbey v. India & L. L. Assur. Co. 15 C. L. 265; Corson's App. 4 Cent. Rep. 310, 113 Pa. 428.

Amount insurable on life of debtor.

As to what will constitute an insurable interest in this sum the debt and interest due Rittler the premiums he had paid and the costs and expenses of effecting the insurances, there remained a balance of $474.53, as of the first of June, 1887.

2 L. R. A.

On the third of October following, letters of administration on Smith's estate were granted to an administratrix, who thereupon filed her bill claiming this balance as belonging to the estate of the decedent. In his answer Rittler denied this claim, and insisted that the money belonged to him. The case was heard on bill and answer, and the court below decreed in favor of the complainant. From this decree Rittler has appealed.

The question as thus presented is an interesting one, is of first impression in this State, and has been very ably argued. On the part of the appellant it is contended that where a creditor with his own money, and for his own account, effects and keeps up an insurance on the life of his debtor, the whole of the proceeds belong to him, unless it appears that he has gone into it for the mere purpose of speculation, which in this case is expressly negatived by the answer, the averment of which must be taken as true, the case having been on bill and answer.

On the other hand, counsel for the appellee contend that where the creditor receives more than enough to reimburse him for his debt and outlay with interest, he will, as to the balance, be regarded as a trustee for the personal representative of the debtor; that the law says to the creditor in such a case: "You may protect yourself; you may, by insuring your debtor's life, secure your debt with all outlay and expenses; you may make yourself whole, but you shall not have a greater direct pecuniary interest in his death than you may have in his life."

There have been numerous decisions upon this subject, some of which are conflicting. On many points, however, bearing upon the question, there is a general concurrence of judicial opinion and authority. For instance it is generally held by the courts in this country that one who has no insurable interest in the the life of another, and the amount to which a creditor should be permitted to take insurance on the life of his debtor, see Keystone Mut. Ben. Assn. v. Norris, 7 Cent. Rep. 304, 115 Pa. 446; Grant v. Kline, 7 Cent. Rep. 623, 115 Pa. 612; Baldorf v. Fehler (Pa.) 8 Cent. Rep. 230.

The amount of the insurance placed upon the life of the debtor cannot be grossly disproportionate to the benefit which might be reasonably supposed to accrue from the continuance of the debtor's life, without leaving the transaction open to the imputation of being a speculation or wager upon the hazard of a life. Wainwright v. Bland, 1 Moody & Rob. 431; Miller v. Eagle L. & H. Ins. Co. 2 E. D. Smith, 238; Cammack v. Lewis, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 643 (21 L. ed. 244).

Measure of recovery.

The law seems to be well settled that it is wholly unnecessary to prove an insurable interest in the life of the assured, at the maturity of the policy, if it was valid at its inception, and in the absence of express stipulation to the contrary, the sum expressed on the face of the policy is the measure of recovery. Rawls v. Am. Mut. L. Ins. Co. 27 N. Y. 232; Mowry v. Home L. Ins. Co. 9 R. I. 346; Hoyt v. N. Y. L. Ins. Co. 8 Bosw. 440; Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Bailey, 50 U. S. 13 Wall. 618 (20 L. ed. 501); Corson's App. 4 Cent. Rep. 311, 113 Pa. 428.

There is no reason why the contract should not be carried out according to its terms. McKee v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 28 Mo. 333; Corson's App. 4 Cent. Rep. 311, 113 Pa. 428.

life of another cannot insure that life. Such insurances are considered gambling contracts and for that reason void at common law, apart from any statute forbidding them. In England they were held valid at common law, but were prohibited as introducing a "mischievous kind of gaming," by the first section of the Statute 14 Geo. III. chap. 48. The effect of this section, as construed by the English courts, is to make the law of England, by Act of Parliament, the same as it has been held to be by the courts of this country without such an Act.

In some cases they have been denounced as void, not simply because they tend to promote gambling, but because they are incentives to crime. The force of this latter suggestion has been, and may well be, doubted. It means that one not related or connected by consanguinity or marriage, who may have a direct pecuniary interest in the speedy death of another, will thereby be tempted to murder him, though he knows that hanging is the penalty of such a crime.

This doctrine carried to its logical result has a far reaching effect. It strikes down every legacy to a stranger which may become known to the legatee, as is frequently the case, before the death of the testator. It makes void every similar limitation in remainder after the death of a life tenant. Every like conveyance of property in consideration that the grantee shall support the grantor during his life falls under the same condemnation. Yet we know of no case in which a court has declared such testamentary dispositions or conveyances to be void on this ground. Other instances in which the same result would follow from the application of this doctrine could be readily suggested, but we need not pursue the subject further.

All the authorities also concur in holding that a creditor has an insurable interest in the life of his debtor. In England it was at one time held that though the creditor had an insurable interest at the time the policy was issued, yet if his debt was paid in the lifetime of his debtor, and his interest had therefore ceased, he could not recover, because the contract of life insurance, like insurance of property, was one of indemnity. But this doctrine has long since been repudiated, and the settled rule in England now is that a life insurance in no way resembles a contract of indemnity, but is an agreement to pay a certain sum of money upon the death of the person insured, in consideration of the due payment of a certain fixed annual sum of premium during his life; and hence if the contract be valid at the time it was entered into, the fact that the interest of the creditor has ceased during the life of his debtor is immaterial; he may still recover on the policy though the result may be that he will be twice paid for his debt, once by his debtor and again by recovery on the policy. Dalby v. India & L. L. Assur. Co. 15 C. B. 865.

The same construction of the contract has been approved and adopted by this court. Emerick v. Oakley, 85 Md. 193; Whiting v. Independent Mut. Ins. Co. 15 Md. 326.

In support of the view taken by the appellee's counsel, cases have been cited in which it has been held that the assignee of a life policy, who has no insurable interest in the life, stands in the same position as if he had originally taken out the policy for his own benefit. In other words the contention is that the assured himself can make no valid absolute assignment of his policy to one who has no insurable interest in his life.

But our own decisions are opposed to this. It is settled law in this State that a life insurance policy is but a chose in action for the payment of money, and may be assigned as such under our Act of 1829, chap. 51. N. Y. L. Ins. Co. v. Flack, 8 Md. 341; Whitridge v. Barry, 42 Md. 150.

It is quite a common thing for the bond or promissory note of a private individual to be sold through a broker to a bona fide purchaser for less than its face value; and when the latter takes an assignment of it without recourse, he becomes its absolute owner, and is not bound to refund to the vendor anything he may recover upon it over and above what he paid for it. So a life policy being a similar chose in action may be disposed of and assigned in the same way, provided the assent of the insurer is obtained where it is so stipulated in the instrument. In such case the assignee must of course keep the policy alive by the due payment of premiums if he wishes to realize anything from it. Such an assignment is valid in this State if it be a bona fide business transaction, and not a mere device to cover a gaming contract. Such is also the English rule. Ashley v. Ashley, 3 Sim. 149.

These considerations prevent us from adopting some of the reasoning of the supreme court in Warnock v. Davis, 104 U. S. 775 [26 L. ed. 924].

It seems to us, with great deference, that, from the facts in that case, the association, which was the assignee, could well be regarded as standing in the same position as if it had taken out the policy in its own name, and having no insurable interest in the life, it clearly became a wager policy. The assignment was made the day after the policy was issued in pursuance of an agreement to that effect made the day of its issuance. The assignment was evidently a mere device to cover up a gaming transaction.

In the preceding case of Cammack v. Lewis, 83 U. S. 15 Wall. 648 [21 L. ed. 244], the debt due the creditor was only $70, and the policy was for $3,000. It was taken out by the debtor, who was in bad health, at the suggestion of the creditor, and was assigned to him immediately after it was made out—he, at the same time, taking a note from his debtor for $3,000, confessedly without consideration. In view of these facts the court well said: "It was a sheer wagering policy and probably a fraud on the insurance company. To procure a policy for $3,000 to cover a debt of $70, is of itself a mere wager. The disproportion between the real interest of the creditor and the amount to be received by him, deprives it of all pretense to be a bona fide effort to secure the debt; and the strength of this proposition is not diminished by the fact that Cammack was only to get $2,000 out of the $3,000; nor is it weakened by the fact that the policy was taken out in the name of Lewis and assigned by him to Cammack." It was "under these circumstances" that the court held that Cammack could hold the policy only as security for the debt due him when it was assigned, and such advances as he might afterwards make on account of it.

If such, then, be the nature of a life insurance contract, and if a bona fide assignee for value, though a stranger, may recover and hold the whole amount for his own use, why may not a creditor, who in pursuance of a bona fide effort to secure payment of his debt, insures the life of his debtor and takes the policy in his own name or for his own benefit, be entitled to hold all he can recover? He is, in fact, the owner of the policy, takes the risk of the continued solvency of the insurance company, and is obliged to keep the policy alive by paying the annual premiums during the life of the debtor, and the latter is under no obligation to do anything, and in fact does nothing in this respect. If he pays the debt to his creditor he has only discharged his duty; and what interest has he either in the policy or in what his creditor may recover upon it?

In a recent English case it was held that a creditor who had insured the life of his debtor could retain all the sums he had received from the policies, without accounting for them to the representatives of the debtor, unless there was distinct evidence of a contract, to the effect that the creditor had agreed to effect the policy and that the debtor had agreed to pay the premiums; in which case only will the policy be held in trust for the debtor. Bruce v. Garden, L. R. 5 Ch. App. 82.

This is the latest English authority to which we have been referred, and was decided by Lord Chancellor Hatherly on appeal. In that case the amount received from the policies by the creditor was nearly twice as much as the debt due him by his debtor.

We agree that there may be such a gross disproportion between the debt and the amount of the policy as to stamp the transaction as indicating upon its face want of good faith, and as a mere speculation or wager. The case of Cammack v. Lewis affords an instance of such gross disparity; but no general rule on this subject has as yet been laid down by the courts, and it is probably better to leave each case to depend on its own circumstances. The disparity between the debt of $1,000 and $6,500, the aggregate of the sums named in the certificates, is certainly great; but upon examination it is more apparent than real.

The answer, which we must take as true shows bona fides on the part of the creditor. The policies were all in mutual aid associations where mortuary dues are paid by assessments and where, of course, the sum to be realized depends upon the number and solvency of the members. One of the certificates for $2,000, contained a condition that only one half should be paid if the assured should die within one year from its date, an event which actually occurred. Another expressly provided that he should receive an amount not exceeding $2,000, but according to the numbers liable to assessment on this certificate, and from that he received according to its terms only $250. Another of the associations was in financial difficulties and he compromised his claim on a certificate for $1,000 and received only $182.82. By taking out these certificates he became liable to be assessed as a member; and during the short time they were running (from June to the following March) he paid in this shape and in premiums the sum of $351.75.

In view of the character of these certificates and of the associations by which they were issued, we cannot say the disproportion between the debt and the real amount and value of the insurances is so great in this case as to warrant a sentence of condemnation against the transaction as being a mere speculation or wager on the life of the debtor.

Without attempting a review of all the numerous decisions on this subject, we simply refer, in support of our views, to the following cases in addition to those already cited: Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Allen, 188 Mass. 24; Clark v. Allen, 11 R. I. 439; Olmsted v. Keyes, 85 N. Y. 598; Amick v. Butler, 111 Ind. 578, 9 West. Rep. 842; Johnson v. Van Epps, 110 Ill. 562; Corsan's App. 113 Pa. 488, 4 Cent. Rep. 807; and among the text writers, to Bliss on Life Insurance, § 80, and Life Insurance, Law of Assignments (Hines & Nichols) 81, 82.

On the whole we are of opinion the weight of reason as well as of authority sustains the appellant's claim.

We shall therefore reverse the decree appealed from and dismiss the appellee's bill.

MISSISSIPPI SUPREME COURT.

Charles W. McCROY, Appt.,

v.

H. A. TONEY.

(...Miss....)

A lease made on the 15th day of December, 1887, for the year 1888, may be valid, although not in writing, under Mississippi Code, § 1282, excepting from the necessity of writing a lease for not longer than one year.

(February 4, 1889.)

APPEAL by plaintiff, from a judgment of the Circuit Court of Coahoma County sustaining a demurrer to the declaration in an action to recover damages for the alleged breach of a parol contract to lease lands. Reversed.

Defendant, on December 15, 1887, orally leased certain land to plaintiff for the year 1888. He refused to deliver possession when the time agreed upon arrived, and this suit was brought to recover damages for breach of contract. Defendant demurred to the declaration, alleging invalidity of the contract under the Statute of Frauds. The demurrer having been sustained, the case was brought to this court.

Messrs. Calhoun & Green for appellant.
Messrs. Cutrer & Cutrer for appellee.

Campbell, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The single question presented for decision by this record is, Was the lease of the land by words, without writing, on the 15th day of December, 1887, for the year 1888, invalid? After careful consideration of all the learning on the subject furnished by the text books and English and American decisions accessible to us, and touching this question, we answer it in the negative.

The reasoning by which we reach this conclusion is this: Without the Statute of Frauds such leases would be valid, and they are expressly excepted from it. It is as if our statute was, in the language of that of Georgia, "contracts creating the relation of landlord and tenant, for any time not exceeding one year, may be by parol;" and from that language the Supreme Court of Georgia thought it indisputable that a contract for the renting of land, made on the 25th of December, 1875, for the year 1876, was valid. Steininger v. Williams, 68 Ga. 475.

The object in excepting from its provisions contracts for the making any lease (of land) for not more than one year is to let them stand as at common law, whereby they were valid. The exception may be supposed to have been made with reference to the custom of the country in which leases for a year are generally made without writing. As the statute applies only to leases for a longer term than one year, and thereby excludes leases for a year or less, it is not to be assumed that the very next clause of the statute (the infra annum clause) was intended to apply to and invalidate what had been carefully excepted by the preceding clause, for the purpose of leaving it, as at common law, unaffected by the statute.

Our view is sustained by the courts of England, New York, Colorado, Iowa, Indiana, Georgia, Michigan and Tennessee, and maintains the prevailing custom of the people of this State. Reed, Stat. Frauds, §§ 196, 815, and notes, where cases are cited.

It is opposed by the courts of Alabama, Illinois, Kentucky, Massachusetts and perhaps other States, but upon grounds unsatisfactory to us, and in most instances, as it appears to us, without much consideration of the question. The Statute of Frauds sprung from the notion that certain matters should be evidenced by writing, lest perjury should be committed to maintain claims on them.

In England it was thought a lease for not more than three years from the making thereof, with a prescribed rent, was not of sufficient moment to incite to perjury, and such leases were excepted from the statute (29 Car. II.), and, being excepted, were held not to be embraced by the infra annum clause of the fourth section of that statute. With us it was considered that a lease for one year is not of sufficient importance to cause perjury, and therefore it is not required to be evidenced by writing.

Section 11-8 of the Code, corresponding to section 2 of 29 Car. II., excepts a term of not more than one year from the requirement of a writing to convey land, and section 1292, which corresponds to the fourth section of the statute (29 Car. II.), also excepts from its provisions the making any lease of land for a term not longer than one year, while the English Statute does not, in its fourth section, except the leases excepted by its second section; and yet it is held there that such leases as are excepted by the second section, although not excepted expressly by the fourth section, are by virtue of the exception in section 2 not embraced in section 4.

Surely, as our statutes (sections 1188 and 1292) both exclude leases for a term not longer than one year, they cannot be held to be affected by section 1292.

Before the statute (29 Car. II.) a term might be created by parol to commence in future. By that Act writing was made necessary, except as to leases for not more than three years from the making thereof, etc. By our statute writing is necessary, except as to leases for not more than one year, but the clause of the English Statute, "from the making thereof," is omitted; hence, the conclusion that it has reference to the duration of the term, and not to the date of its commencement. The term created by parol must not be for more than a year; but that may commence when the contracting parties agree it shall begin. Ita lex scripta est, and it conforms to the practice of the people of this State.

It is said if a lease may be made on Christmas Day for the next year, without writing, it may be made to commence a year or five or ten years hence. If true, what of it? If two persons, able and willing, actually should contract, the one to let and the other to enjoy and pay rent for premises for the year 1900, where is the harm of upholding the contract, though not in writing? The improbability of any such contracts being made suggests the improbability of their inclusion in any legislative scheme to regulate the transactions of society.

Reversed, demurrer overruled, and cause remanded.

VIRGINIA SUPREME COURT OF APPEALS.

William H. COFFMAN, App't,
v.

D. A. HEATNOLE, Admr. etc., of Hiram Coffman, Dec'd., et al.

(....V....)

1. A testator can disinherit his heirs or

NOTE.—Disinheriting heir.

It is one of the rules of construction of wills that the heir is not to be disinherited without an express next of kin only by leaving his property to others. Mere words of exclusion will not suffice. The estate must be actually given to somebody else.
3 L. R. A.

2. A will which simply revokes all other wills theretofore made by the testator, and declares that a certain son shall be excluded from all participation in the estate because he has become or necessary implication (Rowe v. Fulton, 7 Cow. 71; Jackson v. Burr, 9 Johns. 194), importing, not natural necessity, but so strong a come the heir to certain other property, and testator is about to make a final settlement, giving him as much as the estate would pay to the other legal heirs, is not sufficient to exclude such son from participation in the estate, but is a nullity, where no provision is made for giving the estate to anybody else.

(November 15, 1895.)

APPEAL by defendant, William H. Coffman, from a decree of the Circuit Court of Rockingham County (McLaughlin, J.), in a suit brought for the settlement of a certain estate and the distribution of the property according to testator's will. Reversed.

This was a suit in equity brought by Alberta Coffman against the heirs and personal representatives of Hiram Coffman, deceased, to settle his estate and construe his will.

William H. Coffman, a son of decedent, filed an answer denying that his father left a will and averring that the alleged will was and is not a testamentary paper.

The paper was as follows:

"I, Hiram Coffman, of Rockingham County and State of Va. do make and ordain this to be my last will and testament, hereby revoking all other wills heretofore by me made. It is my will that my son Wm. H. Coffman be excluded from all of my estate at my death and have no heirship in the same, he having become the heir to his mother's interest in her father's estate, and I his guardian have paid him, and am now about to make a final settlement with him which will make as much to him and probably more than my estate will pay to each of my other legal heirs.

"In witness," etc.

The paper was proven to be wholly in testator's handwriting and was admitted to probate in the probate court as his will. The court decided that it was a devise by implication and that it operated to exclude W. H. Coffman from any participation in the estate of his father; whereupon, he took this appeal.

Mr. William B. Compton, for appellant:

A man cannot disinherit his heirs or next of kin in any other way than by giving his estate to some one else.

probability that an intention to the contrary cannot be supposed. Br. Devise, 53; Claude's Case, Dyer, 380 b; Comber v. Hill, 3 Strange, 989; Gulliver v. Wickett, 1 Will. 105; Roe v. Wickett, Willes, 809; Doe v. Wilkinson, 3 T. R. 209; Doe v. Dring, 3 Maule & B. 443; Wilkinson v. Adam, 1 Ves. & B. 466; Denn v. Mellor, 5 T. R. 556; Trent v. Hanning, 7 East, 97; Boa & P. N. R. 118; Dashwood v. Peyton, 18 Ves. Jr. 40; Coryton v. Helyar, 3 Cox, Ch. 240; 3 Jarm. Wills, 341.

Whether or not an omission to provide for a child by will was intentional or by mistake, may be ascertained from the terms of the will or by parol. Loring v. Marsh, 73 U. S. 8 Wall. 837 (18 L. ed. 808).

When answered from perusal of will it is limited to the time of its execution, and oral proof is reserved to ascertain the mind of the testator at the same period. Id.

In Pennsylvania, the heir cannot be disinherited without the use of express words; and evidence of memoranda of the testator is not admissible. Wilkins v. Allen, 59 U. S. 18 How. 386 (15 L. ed. 393).

By the Spanish law a testator cannot disinherit a child without naming the child and the reasons for doing so. Meegan v. Boyle, 60 U. S. 18 How. 120 (15 L. ed. 577).

Merely negative words are not sufficient to exclude the title of the heir or next of kin. There must be an actual gift to some other definite object. Accordingly, a direction that the proceeds of land shall be deemed personal estate, although 2 T. R. A.

Boissieu v. Aldridge, 5 Leigh, 229; Wright v. Hicks, 12 Ga. 155, 56 Am. Dec. 457; Doe v. Lanús, 8 Ind. 441, 56 Am. Dec. 518, and notes, 5 1; Blackman v. Gordon, 3 Rich. Eq. 48, 44 Am. Dec. 341; Denn v. Gaekin, 3 Cowp. 657; Schauber v. Jackson, 3 Wend. 13; Hall v. Hall, 3 McCord, Ch. 369.

Messrs. George G. Gratian and J. B. Stephenson, for appellees:

A will is a declaration, made in due form of law, of a man's mind or last will of what he would have to be done with his estate after his death.

1 Jarm. Wills, 26.

While the testator may not use express words to indicate the persons to take his estate, yet if it can be fairly implied from the context of the will the persons who are to be the recipients of his bounty, this will be sufficient, and the courts will effectuate the will of the testator so implied from the language employed by him.

3 Lomax, Dig. 143; 1 Jarm. Wills, 441.

In performing the duty of expounding a will the court will make the amplest allowance for the unskillfulness and negligence of the testator; technical informalities will be disregarded, the most perplexing complications of words and sentences will be carefully unfolded, and the traces of the testator's intention will be diligently sought out in every part of the instrument, and the whole carefully weighed together.

Wootton v. Redd, 12 Gratt. 205.

In Boissieu v. Aldridge, 5 Leigh, 240, every Judge in the cause declared that if the paper had at all intimated who should take his estate, to the exclusion of the Aldridges, they would sustain it as a will; or if it could have been implied from the language of the paper what disposition he desired should be made of his estate, that would have been sufficient.

Lewis, P., delivered the opinion of the court:

A will is defined to be the disposition of one's property, to take effect after death. Therefore, to sustain the decree of the circuit court in this case, two things must be implied from the paper in question, viz.: first, that the decedent intended it as a disposition of his property, to ration that the heir is of lapses, will not sit at law. Taylor v. Robinson, 1 London v. Weber, 4 Haro, 145; Gordon v. Atkinson, Warren, 16 Sim. 134; v. 50; Hopkinson v. Williams, 5 L. J. N. n, 3 Ves. Jr. 603; cited

Heirs favored at law.

Heirs are favored in law, and get the benefit of any doubt affecting their rights. See Roberts v. Osbourne, 37 Ala. 174; Parish v. Parish, Id. 391; Cleveland v. Spilman, 25 Ind. 95; Sim v. Smith, 3 Jones, Eq. 347; Burke v. Chamberlain, 21 Md. 300; Ferris v. Smith, 17 Johns. 221; Olmstead v. Olmstead, 4 N. Y. 56; Shutt v. Rambo, 37 Pa. 149; Bacon's App. Id. 504; Turner v. Kittrell, 1 Winst. Eq. 30; Doe v. Dill, 1 Houst. 303; Physick's App. 50 Pa. 128; McKenzie v. Jones, 39 Miss. 230; Striner v. Kolb, 57 Pa. 123; Quillman v. Custer, Id. 125; Wigram, Wills, p. 78.

Where the will contains no special provision on the subject, the land of deceased descends to his heirs, and their rights cannot be devested or impaired by the unauthorized acts of the testator. Brumb v. Ware, 40 U. S. 15 Pet. 98 (10 L. ed. 672).

take effect at his death; and second, that he meant to leave, and did leave, the whole of his estate to those persons standing in the relation of his heirs and next of kin, other than the appellant, who is expressly excluded.

On the other hand, the appellant contends that the instrument makes no disposition of the estate at all, and consequently that the decedent died intestate.

The paper is certainly an anomalous one, and none exactly like it is to be found in any case that has heretofore come before this court. The application, however, of certain well settled principles, in construing it, leads, we think, to the conclusion that the position taken by the appellant is the correct one.

It is a maxim that a testator can disinherit his heirs or next of kin only by leaving his property to others. Mere words of exclusion will not suffice; the estate must be actually given to somebody else. "Though the intention to disinherit the heir be ever so apparent," said Lord Mansfield in Denn v. Gaskin, Cowp. 657, "he must, of course, inherit, unless the estate is given to somebody else; and the reason is that the law provides how a man's estate at his death shall go, unless he, by his will, plainly directs that it shall be disposed of differently; so that the doctrine is not peculiar to the law of primogeniture, as is very properly conceded."

It is true the devise or bequest need not be in express terms, and that it may be by necessary implication; but to justify such an implication the intention of the testator must be so apparent that an intention to the contrary cannot be supposed, for otherwise the implication is not a necessary one. 1 Jarm. Wills, 582.

Thus a devise to the testator's heirs after the death of A gives to A a life estate by implication, because otherwise the devise to the heirs, upon whom the law casts the property in the absence of a disposition of it by the testator, would be rendered nugatory; and it would therefore be absurd to suppose that the testator meant to devise the land to his heirs at the death of A, and yet that the heirs should have it in the mean time. But no such implication arises where the devise is to a stranger after the death of A; for in such a case it is possible to suppose that the testator meant the heir to take the land during the life of A; and therefore an intention to give a life estate to A cannot be supposed. And this, says Jarman, is an exact illustration of the difference between necessary implication and conjecture.

According to Lord Mansfield, "necessary implication" is that which clearly satisfies the court what the testator meant by the words used. It is the opposite, he said, of "conjecture," and leaves no room to doubt. Wilkinson v. Adam, 1 Ves. & B. 466; Jones v. Morgan, cited in 4 Brown, Ch. 460; Hawk. Wills, 5.

Redfield lays it down that, in order to create a devise or legacy by implication, it must not be a case of mere slight probability, but something in regard to which most men would not be expected to raise any question. It must not rest upon conjecture. Neither is it required that the inference should be absolutely irresistible. It is enough if all the circumstances taken together leave no doubt in the mind of the court. The words of the will, he adds, 2 L. R. A.

must admit of no other implication. 2 Redf. Wills, 203.

In Cruise's Digest, title, Devise, chap. 10, § 18, it is said: "The courts have, in some instances, allowed of a devise by implication, where it has been very apparent, in order to support and effectuate the intention of the testator; but in cases of this kind the implication must be a plain, and not merely a possible or probable, one; for, the title of the heir at law being plain and obvious, no words in a will ought to be construed in such a manner as to defeat it, if they can have any other signification." See also 8 Lomax, Dig. 148; Bac. Abr. title, Wills, G; 2 Minor, Inst. 969; Schouler, Wills, § 470; Wright v. Hicks, 12 Ga. 155; Wilkinson v. Allen, 18 How. 385; Bradford v. Bradford, 6 Whart. 244; Fitch v. Weber, 6 Hare, 145.

The doctrine of devises by implication was very fully considered in Boissacau v. Aldridge, 5 Leigh, 232. In that case the decedent left a written instrument as follows: "Not having made any will so as to dispose of my property, and two of my sisters marrying contrary to my wish, should I not make one I wish this instrument to prevent either of their husbands from having one cent of my estate—say the husbands of my two sisters Martha Aldridge and Dorothy Aldridge—nor either of them to have one cent, unless they should survive their husbands; in that case, I leave them to be paid out of the collection of any of my moneys $500 each. Given under my hand and seal," etc. And on the paper was indorsed the following: "Memorandum. To prevent Burnett Aldridge and Burwell Aldridge from having any part of my estate that each might claim in right of their wives, without a will made by me."

It was argued by Messrs. Johnson and Leigh that, excepting the two contingent legacies, this writing was a devise and bequest, by implication, of the whole of the testator's estate to those persons who would take according to the Statutes of Descents and Distributions, other than the two sisters and their descendants. The latter they insisted could have been excluded for no other purpose than to give the estate to others, and that, if the testator did not mean that, he meant nothing. But this view, though pressed upon the court with great earnestness and ability, was not adopted, and the decree of the lower court was affirmed, which declared that the right of a person to disinherit his heirs, or any one of them, exists, not as an abstract substantive power, but as the consequence of the power to leave his estate to others; that the paper in question was not a devise or bequest by necessary implication; and that it was evidently executed under the erroneous impression that, if its author declared his intention to exclude his two sisters, the law would dispose of his estate among his heirs and next of kin, to the exclusion of the sisters mentioned therein. It is true that two of the Judges who delivered opinions in that case were of opinion that the instrument itself furnished internal evidence that it was not intended by the decedent to operate as a will any further than the contingent legacies therein bequeathed; but the principle that a man can disinherit his heirs only by unmistakably giving his estate to somebody else was none the less emphatically asserted. To hold otherwise, it was said, would give to a testator the power to repeal the Statute of Descents and Distributions, so far, at least, as it affected his own estate. It was also held that if in every case in which a testator declares an intention to exclude his heirs, or any one of them, it is to be implied from that alone that he intends to devise away his estate from such excluded person or persons, the principle that to disinherit his heirs he must give his estate to somebody else would be of no consequence, since it would give effect to the simple disinherison by holding it tantamount to a positive disposition. Another analogous principle affirmed in that case, and which is very material to the present, is this: that while the intention of the testator, when consistent with the rules of law, is the pole star to guide the judicial expositor of the will, yet his intention to dispose of his estate must be indicated with a legal certainty; otherwise effect, as a will, cannot be given to the instrument—the true inquiry being, not what the testator meant, but what the words used import. Judge Brooke, in his opinion, said:

"When a testator has devised his estate by will, and is not precise as to the persons who are to take, or as to the quantity of estate they are to take, from necessity, and to effectuate his intention to dispose of his estate, and not to leave it to the law to dispose of it, courts imply his intent as to persons, and the quantity of the estate they are to take. But when the question is whether he intended to devise his estate or not, we are not unauthorized to imply that he does, unless it is a necessary inference from the language he uses."

He then referred to the case of Denn v. Gaskin, in which the testator gave his heir at law a disinheriting legacy, as it is called (that is, he gave him ten shillings), and then gave his nephews real estate without adding words of inheritance. He began his will thus: "As to all such worldly estate as God has endued me with," etc.; and the question was whether by necessary implication from these words, and the intended exclusion of the heir, the life-estate given the nephews was enlarged into a fee. Lord Mansfield held that it was not, although he said he suspected extremely that the testator meant to give the devisees an estate in fee, as he had no other landed property, and had made them residuary legatees of his personalty, and had disinherited the heir; but that, if he did mean it, the misfortune was that quod voluit non dixit. And he added the remark already quoted from his opinion, namely: that, though the intention is ever so apparent, the heir at law must of course inherit, unless the estate is given to somebody else. Accordingly, it was held that the fee, being undisposed of, descended to the heir, notwithstanding the intention of the testator to disinherit him; just as in Boissieu v. Aldridge the two excluded sisters were held entitled, not only to their contingent legacies, but to share in the residue of the estate as to which the testator died intestate, because, as was said, the statute gives the power to devise, and not in any other way to disinherit.

In Wootton v. Reidd, 12 Gratt. 196, Judge Lee, speaking for the court, announced the same doctrine. He said: "Conjecture cannot be permitted to usurp the place of judicial conclusion—nor to supply what the testator has failed to sufficiently indicate. The law has provided a definite successor to the estate in the absence of a testamentary disposition, and the heir is not to be disinherited, unless by express words or necessary implication." "The courts must therefore declare, if they can," he continued "what intention the testator has expressed with sufficient legal certainty; not the intention which he may have entertained, but which he has failed sufficiently to manifest"—citing Guy v. Sharp, 1 Myl. & K. 589, 602; Martin v. Drinkwater, 2 Beav. 215. See also, Hatcher v. Hatcher, 80 Va. 169; Senger v. Senger, 81 Va. 687; Sutherland v. Sydnor, 6 S. E. Rep. 480.

Let us now apply these principles to the present case. The paper in question is as follows:

I, Hiram Coffman, of Rockingham County and State of Virginia, do make and ordain this to be my last will and testament; hereby revoking all other wills heretofore by me made. It is my will that my son William H. Coffman be excluded from all of my estate at my death, and have no heirship in the same, he having become the heir to his mother's interest in her father's estate; and I, his guardian, have paid him, and am now about to make a final settlement with him, which will make as much to him, and probably more, than my estate will pay to each of my other legal heirs. In witness of this being my last will and testament, I hereunto set my hand, and annex my seal, this, the 10th day of March, 1877.

Hiram Coffman. [Seal.]

Now, this paper is certainly in the form of a will, and was declared by the decedent to be his will, and it excludes his son William, the appellant here, as plainly as the intention could be expressed. But is it in substance a will? Does it dispose of anything? The circuit court held that by implication it does. But is such a conclusion a necessary implication from the words used? Can the words be said to have no other signification? Taken together, do they clearly satisfy the mind, leaving no room to doubt that the decedent meant to dispose of his estate?

We think not. On the contrary, fairly construed, the instrument simply revokes all other wills theretofore made by the decedent, and excludes the appellant, giving the reason therefor. That is all, and to hold that it amounts to anything more would render futile the principle that a man can disinherit his heirs only by giving his estate to somebody else; and by carrying too far the doctrine of devices by implication would by judicial construction make a will for the decedent that he has not made for himself.

The record presents the case of a man who has a valuable estate, and a wife and five children, a son by his first marriage, another son by his second marriage, and three children by his third and last marriage. All his children are equally as near, and all presumably are equally as dear, to him. The eldest son has already inherited property equal in value, we will say, to one fourth of his father's estate. Accordingly, the father, wishing to do what he considers justice to all of his children, writes a paper which he calls a "will;" and in that paper he says, in substance, that he wishes to disinherit his eldest son; and then, lest his motive be imputed to a want of parental affection (we will assume) he goes on and gives the reason for wishing to exclude him, and there he stops. He does not say his "other legal heirs" are to have the estate, but that his eldest son is not to have any part of it; and from this we are asked to imply that he intended to give, and consequently, as a legal conclusion, to hold that he did give, the whole of his estate to his other children; in other words, to hold that the reason assigned to exclude one of the children operates a disposition of the estate to the other children.

But this view is contrary to the plainest principles of the law, as we have already seen, for the question is not what the decedent intended, but what he has said; not what he may have thought would be the result of what he wrote, but what is the legal effect of the paper. And, although he may have intended to dispose of his estate, yet, if he has not said so with legal certainty, we cannot alter or add to his words, but our judgment must be as Lord Mansfield's was in Denn v. Gaskin, quod voluit non dixit; for we sit here, not to make wills, but to construe them—not to make law, but to administer it.

It is quite probable the paper was written by the decedent under the erroneous impression that if he would declare his intention to exclude the appellant, in the form of a will, the Statute of Descents and Distributions would step in and do the rest; i. e., that it would in effect make a better will for him than he could make for himself, by giving his estate to his other heirs and next of kin, and hence he made no disposition of it. His language, we think, shows this. Had he stopped at the point where he declared the appellant is to have no heirship in the estate, there could be no controversy, notwithstanding the paper in the introductory part is called a will. This is conceded, and yet what follows merely shows why he wished to exclude him, which is a very different thing from actually excluding him by disposing of his estate, no matter what his intention was; for in such a case an intention not expressed or clearly manifested is equivalent in law to an absence of a testamentary intent altogether. And herein lies the error of the decree complained of, namely: in giving effect to the intention of the decedent to exclude the appellant by making it tantamount to a disposition of the estate to the other children, which can no more be rightly done than the starting of a person on a journey can be said to be, in legal contemplation, the arrival of such person at the point of destination; and so here the decedent, intending to exclude the appellant, started out well enough in that direction; but unfortunately for the appellees he stopped before he reached the legal consummation of his purpose. That, in order to effect that purpose, he would have gone further, and given his estate in unmistakable terms to his other children, if the necessity for so doing had occurred to him, is also probable; for it is impossible to read the paper in question without perceiving that the thought uppermost in his mind was to exclude the appellant. But the idea that under any circumstances he would have done so rests upon conjecture merely, which is not necessary implication, but the opposite, and can never alone support a devise or bequest.

In Jones v. Morgan, Lord Mansfield said that 2 L. R. A.

"Conjecture," is when you suppose what would have been the testator's meaning if he had had the whole case before him, and what, if he had thought of such an event, he would have said upon it;" "and," he added: "You are not to conjecture what he would have done in an event he never thought of; that will not do,"—citing 1 Fearne, Contingent Remainders, App. 577.

Every man, it is true, is presumed to know the law; but to say that the decedent must be presumed to have known that the mere exclusion of the appellant would not operate to give the estate to anybody else, and therefore that he meant to give, and consequently did give, the estate to his remaining children, is substantially to assert a proposition which has been emphatically repudiated by this court, and by all courts where our system of jurisprudence prevails. Moreover, no executor is appointed by the paper in question, nor is there any mention of the debts of the decedent, or of the widow's dower or interest in the estate, or any direction as to how the estate shall be divided or disposed of; and, while it is true the law provides for the payment of debts, the assignment of dower, etc., yet the omission to make mention of any of these matters is a circumstance in the case not without significance, as tending to support the view already expressed.

Persons often die intestate, but it is certainly not usual, nor can it hardly be said to be natural, for a man having a valuable real and personal estate to leave a will disposing of it, and make no specific devises or bequests, or give any direction touching the estate whatever. And here there is no direction as to anything, but simply a revocation of previous wills, and a disinherison of the appellant; because, in the language of the decedent, the appellant's inheritance from another source "will make as much to him, and probably more, than my estate will pay to each of my other legal heirs"—words which of themselves import intestacy, being emphatically words of inheritance. And as to the word pay, upon which so much stress is laid by counsel for the appellees, that is quite as applicable to the distribution of an estate of an intestate as to any other.

Again, suppose the appellant had died before the decedent, leaving descendants. What is there in this paper to prevent those descendants, as heirs at law of the decedent, from sharing in the estate? There is certainly nothing that would expressly exclude them, and this circumstance also strengthens the view that the paper was written, not to dispose of anything, but simply to revoke previous wills, and to exclude the appellant, without going or intending to go further than to give the reasons.

Our conclusion therefore is that the paper is not the will of the decedent; that, if he meant to dispose of his property, he has not said so with legal certainty; and consequently that at his death his estate passed to his heirs and next of kin, including the appellant. It is certainly safer, and more consonant with public policy, to closely adhere to settled principles, than in doubtful cases to interrupt the course of descents and distribution of estates which the statute describes in cases of intestacy; for the statute, which has been said to be a transcript of the human affections, is a wise and just one, and ought to govern in all cases not plainly without it.

In Boissieu v. Aldridge it was said by Judge Brooke, and reaffirmed by the court without dissent in the recent case of Sutherland v. Sydnor, 6 S. E. Rep. 480, that property is the creature of the law, and can be disposed of at all only because the law permits it to be done in certain modes. And hence the result in the present case imposes no hardship on anyone, as it puts all the children of the decedent on the same footing with respect to his estate, simply because their father has not availed himself of the permission that the law gave him to dispose of it differently.

The decree must therefore be reversed, and a decree entered here in conformity with this opinion.

TENNESSEE SUPREME COURT.

SOUTH NASHVILLE STREET R. CO. et al., Appls.,
v.

Henry B. MORROW, Trustee of Davidson County.

(...Lea...)

1. A statute authorizing assessments of property omitted from the assessment made by the regular assessor, or an additional assessment, where the first one has been made upon an inadequate valuation, is not unconstitutional.
2. Taxation of shares of corporate stock in the hands of stockholders, as their individual property, is not unconstitutional as constituting double taxation because a tax has already been laid upon the property of the corporation but from which the capital stock in the hands of the corporation is omitted.
3. Shares of stock in a corporation have no actual situs and may properly be made taxable at the place where the corporation has its situs.
4. The burden of proof is on a taxpayer claiming that he has not been allowed an exemption to show that he has not, at some time or place, received it.
5. Bonds of a corporation can only be taxed by the government having jurisdiction of the owner, and are not taxable in a State where the owner does not reside.
6. A citizen cannot be taxed on corporate bonds in a county where he does not reside, although that is the location of the corporation.
7. An Act requiring a corporation to retain, from the interest due on its bonds having negotiable coupons the amount of state, county and city taxes assessed against the owners of the bonds, is invalid, inasmuch as the tax is void as to nonresidents, and the corporation cannot be required to determine as to each coupon, whether it may lawfully reserve the tax from the interest or not.

(February 23, 1889.)

APPEAL by plaintiffs, from a judgment of the Circuit Court of Davidson County (McAlister, J.), in favor of defendant in an agreed case submitted to the court to determine the validity of certain tax assessments. Affirmed in part and reversed in part.

The facts fully appear in the opinion.

Messrs. Vertrees & Vertrees and Hill & Granbery, for appellants:

1. One tax on the property of an incorporated company, and another upon the shares of stock in the hands of the shareholders, is double taxation, and forbidden by the Constitution of Tennessee.

Although it has been held in Union Bank v.
2 L. R. A.

State, 9 Yerg. 490; Memphis v. Enaley, 6 Baxt. 553; Mayor and Council v. South Nashville St. R. Co. 1885. Nashv. 1879; Nashville Gas Light Co. v. Nashville, 8 Lea, 406; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. State, 8 Heisk. 795; and Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 686 (24 L. ed. 560),—that the capital stock and the shares of stock are distinct things, and that they may both be taxed, and it is not double taxation, yet we maintain that the differences are not of a kind to establish that a tax on both is not double taxation.

In Tennessee v. Whitworth, 117 U. S. 186 (29 L. ed. 582), the court says:

"In corporations four elements of taxable value are sometimes found: (1) franchises; (2) capital stock in the hands of the corporation; (3) corporate property; (4) and shares of the capital stock in the hands of the individual stockholders. Each of these is, under some circumstances, an appropriate subject of taxation;" and the Chief Justice shows conclusively that a tax on both capital stock and shares is double taxation.

See De Soto Bank v. Memphis, 6 Baxt. 415; Bank of Commerce v. McGowan, 6 Lea, 703; affirmed, 104 U. S. 493 (26 L. ed. 810); State v. Butler, 83 Tenn. 693. See also Bank of Cape Fear v. Edwards, 5 Ired. L. 516.

Trust property held by an incorporated trustee is no more liable to double taxation than when held by a trustee who is not incorporated.

Berry v. Windham, 59 N. H. 288. See also Robinson v. Dover, 59 N. H. 527.

Numerous decisions of high authority concur in declaring that the taxation now complained of is unequal, and violative of the constitutional provision requiring equality of taxation.

See People v. Badlam, 57 Cal. 594; San Francisco v. Mackey, 22 Fed. Rep. 602; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Shacklett, 30 Mo. 550; approved in 6 Lea, 706; State v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 87 Mo. 205; Cheshire Co. Telegraph Co. v. State, 68 N. H. 167; Robinson v. Dover, 59 N. H. 527; State v. Brant, 28 N. J. L. 484; Bangor & P. R. Co. v. Harris, 21 Maine, 538; Oliver v. Washington Mills, 11 Allen, 268; Hoadley v. Essex Co. 105 Mass. 527; N. O. R. Co. v. Alamance, 91 N. C. 459; Rice Co. v. Citizens Nat. Bank, 23 Minn. 282, 233; New Haven v. City Bank, 31 Conn. 106; Nichols v. New Haven & N. Co. 42 Conn. 103; State v. Cumberland & P. R. Co. 40 Md. 22; Frederick Co. v. Farmers & M. Nat. Bank, 48 Md. 117; State v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 13 J. 49; Johnson v. Com. 7 Dana, 842; Ryan v. Leavenworth Co. 30 Kan. 188.

When the tangible property of a corporation is taxed at its actual value, and its capital stock is also taxed at its market value, without any deduction on account of the value of the tangible property of the corporation, it is plain that that would be double taxation.

Welty, Assessm. § 246; Com. v. Standard Oil Co. 101 Pa. 119.

The authority of Union Bank v. State, 9 Yerg. 490, has been shaken in the following cases:

Memphis & C. R. Co. v. Gaines, 8 Tenn. Ch. 804; Chicago, B. & K. O. R. Co. v. Guffey, 120 U. S. 575 (30 L. ed. 734); Bank of Commerce v. McGowan, 6 Lea, 703; De Soto Bank v. Memphis, 6 Baxt. 415; State v. Butler, 86 Tenn. 633; Nashville v. Thomas, 5 Coldw. 604; McLaughlin v. Chadwell, 7 Heisk. 408.

II. Even though one tax on the company's property and another tax upon the individual shares be not in themselves double taxation, nevertheless, when the company is required to pay the tax levied upon the shares, and look to the shareholders for reimbursement, it then is double taxation; and the Assessment Act of 1887, which operates companies with this obligation, is unconstitutional and void.

See New Orleans v. Houston, 119 U. S. 265 (30 L. ed. 411).

III. Negotiable bonds are mere evidences of debt.

Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 496 (25 L. ed. 562).

When the debt is evidenced by a writing having the quality of negotiability, no tax can be imposed upon such bond in the hands of a nonresident. As to nonresident bondholders the Act is undoubtedly void.

State Tax on Foreign-Held Bonds, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 300 (21 L. ed. 179); appd. in Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pa. 114 U. S. 206 (29 L. ed. 164); Com. v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 27 Gratt. 844; Pierce, Railways, 472; Falle v. Ziegler, 84 Mo. 214; Cooley, Const. Lim. 4th ed. p. 607; Murray v. Charleston, 96 U. S. 432 (24 L. ed. 760); Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 496 (25 L. ed. 562).

IV. The Assessment Law of 1887, in so far as it affects the bonds issued by the South Nashville Street Car Company, is unconstitutional and void, because it impairs the obligation of the contracts contained in the bonds, and also on the coupons. These bonds were issued in July, 1884. The law taxing such bonds and requiring the companies to pay the tax first appeared in the Assessment Act of 1885. The obligation of the bond and the detachable coupons is to pay 6 per cent interest semi-annually at the American National Bank in Nashville.

By the present law the business manager is allowed to retain the tax out of the interest for the company's indemnity; but pay it he must. The result is that instead of being a contract for interest at the rate of 6 per cent, the contract is altered into one for interest at the rate of 6 per cent minus the tax assessed.

Cooley, Taxn. 65; State Tax on Foreign-Held Bonds, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 300 (21 L. ed. 179); Murray v. Charleston, 96 U. S. 432 (24 L. ed. 760).

To require the tax assessed upon the bond to be paid out of the interest payable upon the coupons is to make the holder of the coupon pay the tax due from the bondholder.

2 L. R. A.

See Hartman v. Greenhow, 102 U. S. 684 (26 L. ed. 276).

V. The Constitution provides that "All property, real, personal and mixed, shall be taxed; but the Legislature . . . shall exempt $1,000 worth of personal property in the hands of each taxpayer."

Art. 2, § 23.

This assessment is invalid to the extent of $1,000 in each shareholder's case.

See New York v. Weaver, 100 U. S. 542 (25 L. ed. 706); Albany Co. v. Stanley, 105 U. S. 805 (26 L. ed. 1044); 1 Desty, Taxn. 384, 335.

The assessment made for and in the year 1887, by the regular assessor, was a judicial act and, unless fraudulent in the matter of valuation, was final and conclusive.

Stanley v. Albany Co. 121 U. S. 550 (30 L. ed. 1008); 1 Desty, Taxn. 548; Cooley, Taxn. 283.

Messrs. Matt W. Allen, J. B. Daniel, T. M. Steger, M. R. Priest and G. W. Pickle, Atty-Gen., for appellee:

The county trustee has the power to assess omitted property and to correct and increase inadequate assessments.

Act 1879, chap. 79, p. 93; Otis v. Boyd, 8 Lea, 679; Acts 1883, chap. 81, p. 255; Acts 1885, chap. 23, p. 70.

The Code (Mill. & V.), § 663, reads as follows:

"All collectors are hereby made assessors to assess all property which by mistake of law or fact has not been assessed, whether the omission be for the particular year for which the collector is acting, or for any previous year or years. And it is hereby made the duty of such collectors in all cases, where property has not been assessed, but on which taxes ought to be paid by law, to immediately assess the same and proceed to collect the taxes."

See also Acts 1883, chap. 105, p. 111, § 25; Acts 1885, chap. 1, p. 13, § 25; Acts 1887, chap. 2, p. 34, §§ 24, 46.

The constitutionality of the Act of 1879 and amendments was passed upon and sustained by this court in State v. Whitworth, 8 Lea, 600; and Wilson v. Benton, 11 Lea, 51.

See also Franklin Co. v. Nashville, O. & St. L. R. Co. 12 Lea, 521; State v. Memphis & O. R. Co. 14 Lea, 56, 63; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. State, 8 Heisk. 795; Shelby Co. v. Miss. & T. R. Co. 16 Lea, 410.

Such statutes have always been held constitutional.

People v. Board of Assessors, 92 N. Y. 430; Bradley v. Lincoln Co. 60 Wis. 71; Cooley, Const. Lim. 209; Belous v. Weeks, 41 Vt. 590-599; Mills v. Charleston, 29 Wis. 400; Weister v. Hade, 52 Pa. 479.

Statutes authorizing reassessments of property inadequately assessed have likewise been held valid and constitutional.

State v. Northern Belle Mill & Min. Co. 15 Nev. 385; Simmons v. Aldrich, 41 Wis. 250.

An abortive attempt to make an assessment does not exhaust the power.

Himmelmann v. Cofran, 36 Cal. 411; Pond v. Negus, 3 Mass. 230; Libby v. Burnham, 15 Mass. 144; Bangor v. Lancey, 21 Maine, 472. See also Overing v. Foote, 43 N. Y. 294; N. O. v. Southern Bank, 15 La. Ann. 89; Dean v.

Borchsenius, 80 Wis. 286; Cooley, Taxn. 1st ed. p. 232; citing Goodrich v. Lunenburg, 9 Gray, 88; Hubbard v. Garfield, 102 Mass. 72; May v. Holdridge, 23 Wis. 93; Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. 810.

The property of the corporation is taxable, the stocks issued by the corporation are taxable, and the bonds issued by the corporation are taxable under the law.

See § 28, art. 2, Tenn. Const.; Assessment Act 1887, chap. 2, § 4.

Street railroads and corporate franchises are taxable.

1 Desty, Taxn. pp. 800, 879; Baltimore Appeal Tax Ct. v. Western Md. R. Co. 50 Md. 300; People v. Cassidy, 46 N. Y. 46; North Beach & M. R. Co's Appeal, 32 Cal. 499; Providence Gas Co. v. Thurber, 2 R. I. 21; Providence & W. R. Co. v. Wright, 2 R. I. 462; Mohawk & H. R. Co. v. Clute, 4 Paige, 384; Wheeler v. Rochester & S. R. Co. 12 Barb. 227; San José Gas Co. v. January, 57 Cal. 614; Vesste Bank v. Fenno, 75 U. S. 8 Wall. 547 (19 L. ed. 487); Wilmington & W. R. Co. v. Reid, 80 U. S. 13 Wall. 284 (20 L. ed. 568); New Orleans City Gaslight Co. v. Assessors, 31 La. Ann. 476; Atlantic, T. & O. R. Co. v. Mecklenburg, 87 N. C. 129; Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Brogren, 74 N. C. 707; Belo v. Forsyth County, 82 N. C. 415; Ottawa Glass Co. v. McCaleb, 81 Ill. 557; Porter v. Rockford, R. I. & St. L. R. Co. 76 Ill. 561; State Tax on Railway Gross Receipts, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 296 (21 L. ed. 163); Com. v. Lancaster Sav. Bank, 124 Mass. 495; Monroe County Sav. Bank v. Rochester, 87 N. Y. 365; People v. Utica Ins. Co. 15 Johns. 882; Ontario Bank v. Bunnell, 10 Wend. 186; North Mo. R. Co. v. Maguire, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 46 (23 L. ed. 287); Providence Bank v. Billings, 29 U. S. 4 Pet. 517 (7 L. ed. 989); Memphis Gaslight Co. v. Shelby County Taxing Dist. 109 U. S. 398 (27 L. ed. 976); Society for Savings v. Cotte, 73 U. S. 6 Wall. 594 (18 L. ed. 897); Proident Institution for Savings v. Massachusetts, 73 U. S. 6 Wall. 611 (18 L. ed. 907).

Cooley, on Taxation, 274, 1st ed. says:

The tracks of a local railway company may be assessed as real estate, though laid down in a highway where the company has no title.

See People v. Cassidy, 46 N. Y. 46; New Haven v. Fair Haven & W. R. Co. 88 Conn. 422; Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Spearman, 12 Iowa, 112; North Beach & M. R. Co's App. 32 Cal. 499; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. State, 9 Baxt. 509; Chicago City R. Co. v. Chicago, 90 Ill. 578, 82 Am. Rep. 54; Chicago v. Baer, 41 Ill. 306; Parmeles v. Chicago, 60 Ill. 267.

Our supreme court in Louisville Railroad Company v. State, 8 Heisk. 795, mentions specifically the franchises as one of the four distinct taxable properties of a corporation.

Nashville v. Thomas, 5 Coldw. 604; McLaughlin v. Chadwell, 7 Heisk. 889; Bedford v. Nashville, 7 Heisk. 409; Union Bank v. State, 9 Yerg. 490, and Brightwell v. Mallory, 10 Yerg. 196, sustain this tax and the mode of collection.

The Union Bank Case has been approved in—McLaughlin v. Chadwell, 7 Heisk. 890; Memphis v. Ensley, 6 Baxt. 553; Nashville Gaslight Co. v. Nashville, 8 Lea, 406; Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 689 (24 L. ed. 561); Memphis v. Farrington, 8 Baxt. 540.

The capital stock and the shares may both 2 L. R. A.

be taxed, and it is not double taxation; and the corporation may be required to pay the tax out of its corporate funds or be authorized to deduct the amount paid for each shareholder out of his dividends.

Angel & A. Corp. §§ 556, 557; Union Bank v. State, 9 Yerg. 490; Van Allen v. The Assessors, 70 U. S. 8 Wall. 573 (18 L. ed. 229); Bradley v. Illinois, 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 459 (18 L. ed. 433); First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 853 (19 L. ed. 701); State v. Bransin, 23 N. J. L. 484; McCulloch v. Maryland, 17 U. S. 4 Wheat. 316 (4 L. ed. 579). See Nashville Gaslight Co. v. Nashville, 8 Lea, 406; New York v. Tax Commrs. 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 244 (18 L. ed. 344); Maltby v. Reading & O. R. Co. 52 Pa. 140; Haight v. Pittsburg etc. R. Co. 73 U. S. 6 Wall. 15 (18 L. ed. 818); U. S. v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 322 (21 L. ed. 597); Minot v. Phila. etc. R. Co. 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 206, 230 (21 L. ed. 888, 896); Am. Coal Co. v. Allegany County, 59 Md. 197; St. Albans v. National Car Co. 57 Vt. 80; Wilmington v. First Nat. Bank, 35 Iowa, 272; Cummings v. Merchants Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 153 (25 L. ed. 903).

Notwithstanding a corporation has paid a tax upon its real estate, purchased with money paid in as capital stock, it may still be bound to pay the tax imposed on its shareholders, retaining the same out of their dividends.

Memphis v. Ensley, 6 Baxt. 554; Nashville Gas-Light Co. v. Nashville, 8 Lea, 406; Baltimore v. Baltimore City Pass R. Co. 57 Md. 81; First Nat. Bank of Mendota v. Smith, 65 Ill. 54; St. Albans v. Nat. Car Co. 57 Vt. 81.

If the Legislature could have provided, in the charter, originally, that the stocks and bonds should be taxed here, it may do so at any time thereafter by general or special law.

Providence Bank v. Billings, 29 U. S. 4 Pet. 516 (7 L. ed. 989); Augusta v. North, 57 Maine, 392, 2 Am. Rep. 55.

The Legislature has power to fix the situs of the shares of stock.

Nashville v. Thomas, 5 Coldw. 604; McLaughlin v. Chadwell, 7 Heisk. 889; Bedford v. Nashville, 7 Heisk. 409; Fox v. South Tredegar Iron Co. 85 Tenn. 189; Tappan v. Merchants Nat. Bank, 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 490 (23 L. ed. 189); Maltby v. Reading & O. R. Co. 52 Pa. 146.

All taxes shall be presumed legally assessed and also that the assessors did not neglect an important part of their duty.

2 Desty, Taxn. p. 615; Hunt v. Chapin, 42 Mich. 25; Blackwood v. Van Vleet, 30 Mich. 118; Buck v. People, 78 Ill. 560; St. Peter's Church v. Scott Co. 12 Minn. 895; New Orleans v. N. O. Canal & Bkg. Co. 29 La. Ann. 851, 99 U. S. 97 (25 L. ed. 409); Beers v. People, 83 Ill. 489; Towle v. Holt, 14 Neb. 221; Miller v. Hurford, 13 Neb. 18; State Auditor v. Jackson Co. 65 Ala. 152; State, Harmed. v. Manning, 41 N. J. L. 275; Blossom v. Cannon, 14 Mass. 177.

Lurton, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error is a corporation, organized in 1859 under a charter granted by the Legislature of this State. As such corporation it obtained from the City of Nashville a right to lay down, maintain and operate a line of street railway upon certain streets of that city. Under this charter and right of way granted by the city, it has, for many years, been running a line of street cars.

In 1887 it was assessed by the regular assessor, for purposes of state and county taxation upon the following valuations: real property $10,000; personal property $50,000. In 1888 it was assessed as follows: mules $3,600; cars $2,500; real estate $9,000; stockholders $75,000.

By section 24 of the Assessment Law of March 24, 1887, it is provided that, if at any time after the assessments have been made, it should come to the knowledge of the chairman or judge of the county court, or the clerk of the county court, the county trustee or sheriff, that any person or corporation has not been assessed, or has been assessed upon an inadequate amount, then it shall be the duty of such officer on the motion of the Attorney-General to cite said person or corporation, their agent, or attorney or representative, to appear before the trustee for the purpose of being assessed according to law, "and said trustee is hereby authorized and empowered to make the proper assessment against such person, firm or corporation . . . and to cause the same to be entered on the tax books for collection." Acts 1887, p. 84.

Under this authority the defendant, who is the county trustee for Davidson County, upon the motion of the Attorney-General, and upon notice to the said corporation, reassessed the corporate property for both 1887 and 1888, and at the same time and upon the same notice treating the corporation as the agent for and representative of the shareholders and bondholders of said company, he assessed the shares of stock in said corporation to the individual shareholders by name, and the outstanding coupon bonds of the company to "unknown owners."

By this reassessment the valuation of the corporate property has been largely increased. The shares of stock and the bonds of the company not having before been assessed are assessed as omitted property. The company denied the right of the county trustee to increase the assessment for 1887, it having theretofore paid the tax assessed against it for that year. It denied the right of the trustee to assess the shares of stocks, or to assess its bonds in such manner as to compel the company to collect the tax thus assessed from its shareholders or bondholders, or to compel the company to pay such tax so assessed, or be liable for the same. It likewise denied the liability of its bonds to assessment, and the legality of the assessment made. Both the shareholders and the company denied the right of the trustee to assess both the company's property and the shares of capital stock, as being double taxation.

Thereupon an agreed case was made up, to have the validity of these several assessments determined, and to have the Act of 1887 construed and its constitutionality considered and the liability of the company by reason of said assessments under the provisions of the Act, declared and ascertained. The parties to this agreed case are the company and its shareholders upon the one side and the county trustee upon the other. The bondholders are unknown and of course are not parties to this suit.

2 L. R. A.

The agreed case was submitted to the Circuit Court of Davidson County, and all of the assessments were sustained as valid, except in so far as the franchise of the corporation had been, in the opinion of the learned Circuit Judge, assessed separately and independently of other property of the company. The action of the learned Circuit Judge is supported by an exceedingly able and exhaustive opinion, which having been made a part of the record has been of great service in reaching the conclusions we shall presently announce.

That part of the assessment quashed by the circuit court will be first disposed of. The assessor has undertaken to itemize the several properties of the company and to value them separately. The franchises of the company, together with its easement in the streets of Nashville, under the ordinances of said city and the contract between the city and the street railway company, are assessed as of a valuation of $50,000.

This assessment was quashed under the authority of the case of Louisville Railroad Company v. Bate, 12 Lea, 573, as being a separate and independent assessment upon a mere franchise.

We think this a misconception of the property included in the item valued at $50,000. The right of way in the streets of Nashville is an easement in realty and is assessable as realty. This is well settled. Desty, Taxn. 800, 805, 861, 879.

In the case of Chicago City Railway Company v. Chicago this question as to whether the easement of a street railway company in the streets of a city was assessable as property was determined in the affirmative. Concerning such an interest the court said: "It is true, as urged by counsel, that the railway company has not become the owner of any portion of the street in fee, but it has certainly through its charter . . . and its contracts with the city acquired a property in them of a most valuable character, which neither the Legislature nor the city can take away without the consent of the company, and capable, like other property, of being sold and conveyed. The city has made a contract with the company, by which it has granted to the latter what is substantially a leasehold in a portion of this street for a number of years. It has acquired rights in the street which no other person or company, nor the general public, possess." 90 Ill. 573.

This easement in the streets, together with the franchises, are assessed as of a valuation of $50,000. It would have been better to assess these elements of value with the iron rails, ties, spikes, etc., as together constituting so much street railway.

In the case of Louisville Railroad Company v. Bate, supra, we held that an assessment upon a line of railway, as a continuous line, without a separate and independent assessment upon its franchises as a corporation, was not error. This was sound law and we adhere to it. But we do not think that case governs this.

The franchise to be a corporation is property, and as such must be assessed; it ought, however, to be assessed with the tangible property of the company and not separately. Here it has been assessed along with a valuable easement, and interest in realty, and we see no reason for quashing such an assessment as void.

The assessment of property, omitted from the assessment made by the regular assessor, is expressly authorized by the Act of 1887; we have repeatedly sustained the validity of such assessments and the constitutionality of the Acts authorizing them. State v. Whitworth, 8 Lea, 594; Shelby Co. v. Miss. & T. R. Co. 16 Lea, 401.

That part of the Act which authorizes an additional assessment when the original assessment has been upon an inadequate valuation is not new legislation. The same provision was contained in the Act of 1873, and a reassessment of the property of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company was sustained by this court as being authorized by that Act. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. State, 8 Helsk. 790. See also the case of State v. Nashville Sav. Bank, 16 Lea, 114.

We do not see any constitutional objections to such legislation. The objection that the actual payment of the tax as originally assessed should preclude any further or additional assessment, does not go to the constitutionality of the Act. The objection is not of serious import in any view of it. The reply of the Circuit Judge is complete in every aspect of the question. He said: "The Constitution and laws prescribed that all property should be assessed according to its value; and if by the misfeasance or nonfeasance or mistake of the assessor, it is not assessed according to its value, but upon arbitrary basis fixed by the assessor at far less than its value, why should the tax debtor escape simply because he has made payment? . . . It may be that such a law will work inconvenience and annoyance to the citizen, but all tax laws are odious and vexatious. It is said the citizen ought to know when he is through with the tax gatherer; but he will know when he has paid his taxes on his property according to its value. He will know then he is secure against reassessment, and the law will protect him."

The next objection to be considered is that the assessment of the corporate property and of the shares of stock is double taxation and prohibited by that clause of the State Constitution which requires that "All property shall be taxed according to its value."

Conceding that the effect of this provision is to prohibit double taxation, the first question is as to what is double taxation. It is not every indirect duplication of a tax which constitutes double taxation. If the duplication be only an incident of the tax, it is not double taxation in the sense of the requirement that equality and uniformity shall be preserved. Taxes may be divided into two great classes: direct and indirect. A direct tax, as defined by Mr. Mill, is "one demanded from the very person who it is intended or desired should pay it." A tax assessed as a direct tax, in the sense in which Mr. Mill uses the term, may nevertheless fall ultimately upon one other than the one desired to pay it. To illustrate: Political economists are generally agreed that the greater part of a tax assessed against a landlord falls finally upon his tenant. So a tax upon mortgages upon land in the end proves to be a tax upon the borrower. In neither of these cases was it intended or desired that the burden of the tax should fall upon either the renter or the borrower. Yet, although it may happen that the renter and the borrower have in other forms fully paid their due proportion of taxation, the unintended duplication of their burden will not make the tax, which they have indirectly been compelled to pay, double taxation. So there seems to be double taxation of the same property to two individuals where the purchaser of property on credit is taxed to its full value, while the seller is taxed to the same amount on the debt.

Concerning all these incidents of taxation, Judge Cooley says: "Now, whether there is injustice in the taxation in every instance, in which it can be shown that an individual who has been directly taxed his due proportion is also compelled indirectly to contribute, is a question we have no occasion to consider. It is sufficient for our purposes to show that the decisions are nearly, if not quite, unanimous in holding that taxation is not invalid because of such unequal results . . . There is a sense," he says further on, "however, in which duplicate taxation may be understood—and which we think is the proper sense—which would render it wholly inadmissible under any Constitution requiring equality and uniformity in taxation. By duplicate taxation in this sense is understood the requirement that one person or any one subject of taxation shall directly contribute twice to the same burden, while other subjects of taxation belonging to the same class are required to contribute but once." Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. 220, 225.

In this connection and as illustrating what he deems double taxation, he cites the instances of a tax on a merchant's stock by value, and another tax for the same purpose and by the same authority on the same stock as a part of his whole property. So he says: "The same may be said of a tax on the property of a corporation, and also on the capital which is invested in the property; if the latter is taxed as property, this is also duplicate taxation, and as much unequal as would be the taxation of a farmer's stock by value, when on the same basis it is taxed as a part of his general property. When, for instance, the money paid in as capital of a manufacturing corporation has been invested in buildings and machinery, these are what then represent the capital; and to tax the capital as valuable property distinct from that which represents it, would be to tax a mere shadow, and it would make the shadow stand for the substance in order that it might be taxed when the substance itself is taxed directly under its own proper designation." Supra, 226.

It is clear upon careful consideration that in the paragraph just quoted the eminent author is not speaking of a tax upon the shares in the hands of stockholders, but upon the capital as property of the corporation and taxed to it as such. This is evident, not only from the illustration he uses and which we have quoted; but in his chapter upon equality and uniformity of taxation, he says that "A tax on the shares of stockholders in a corporation is a different thing from a tax on the corporation itself or its stock, and may be laid irrespective of any taxation of the corporation when no contract relations forbid. Supra, 231.

For this proposition he cites a great number of cases. If the whole of the capital stock had been converted into property and a tax was laid upon the latter, it would be difficult to see what valuation could be put upon capital, considered apart from the property into which the capital had gone, and apart from the shares in the hands of stockholders. Capital stock, when so considered, would not have any thinkable substance or shape, and as such could hardly be valued for taxation without treating the property into which it had been converted as the element which gave it taxable value, and this would be to duplicate the latter as a taxable value.

It was to the capital stock in the hands of the corporation that Judge Cooper referred when, in the case of Bank of Commerce v. McGowan, he said that "As a general rule the taxation of the capital stock of a corporation may protect its property in which the capital may be invested, and the taxation of the property may protect the capital stock, for the capital is usually representation of the property of the corporation and the property the representative of the capital stock." 6 Lea, 705.

Neither would be under all circumstances the representative of the whole of the other. All of the capital might not be converted into property, then something of value might remain for taxation as capital stock. So the property of a corporation might greatly exceed in value the whole of the capital, then a tax laid upon the latter might still leave an excess of property, which might be taxed without imposing a double tax upon the capital stock. The tax in the case now being considered is laid upon the property of the corporation, and the capital stock in the hands of the corporation is by express direction of the law makers omitted from assessment. The shares of stock in the hands of the stockholders, and as the individual property of the shareholders, are taxed.

Now, are these shares exempted by reason of the taxation laid upon the property of the company? It may be true that the tax upon the property of the corporation may ultimately fall upon the shareholders, but this is only so by indirection, and such a result is only an incidence of a tax laid upon this peculiar and anomalous species of property. It is no more double taxation than the instances already put of the final result of a tax upon rental property or mortgaged land, or that upon property sold upon a credit where the debt is also taxed in the hands of the seller. That a tax upon the shares laid upon the owners and a tax upon the corporate property is not double taxation, has been settled law in this State for half a century. The opinions of our predecessors upon this subject are numerous and the constitutionality of such taxation has been vindicated by reasoning so forcible and exhaustive that we cannot hope to add to their strength. Union Bank v. State, 9 Yerg. 490; McLaughlin v. Chadwell, 7 Heisk. 389; Memphis v. Ensey, 6 Baxt. 555; Nashville Gas-Light Co. v. Nashville, 8 Lea, 406; South Nashville Street R. Co. v. Nashville, 18 S. Nashville, 1880.

We have already seen the view taken by Judge Cooley upon this question, which he supports by opinions from a large majority of the States of this Union. The Supreme Court of the United States, in a number of opinions, has taken precisely the same view of this question.

In the case of Farrington v. Tennessee, a case which went up from this State, Mr. Justice Swayne so clearly defines the distinction between the capital stock and the property in shares in the hands of the stockholders that we cannot refrain from quoting a paragraph from his opinion:

"The capital stock," says the Judge, "and the shares of the capital stock, are distinct things. The capital stock is the money paid, or authorized or required to be paid in, as the basis of the business of the bank, and the means of conducting its operations. It represents whatever it may be invested in. If a large surplus be accumulated and laid by, that does not become a part of it. The amount authorized cannot be increased without proper legal authority. If there be losses which impair it, there can be no formal reduction without the like sanction. No power to increase or diminish it belongs inherently to the corporation. It is a trust fund held by the corporation as a trustee. It is subject to taxation like other property. If the bank fail, equity may lay hold of it, administer it, pay the debts and give the residuum, if there be any, to the stockholders. If the corporation be dissolved by judgment of law, equity may interpose and perform the same functions." "The shares of the capital stock are usually represented by certificates. Every holder is a cestui que trust to the extent of his ownership. The shares are held and may be bought and sold and taxed like other property. Each share represents an aliquot part of the capital stock. But the holder cannot touch a dollar of the principal. He is entitled only to share in the dividends and profits. Upon the dissolution of the institution each shareholder is entitled to a proportionate share of the residuum after satisfying all liabilities. The liens of all creditors are prior to his. The corporation, though holding and owning the capital stock, cannot vote upon it. It is the right and duty of the shareholders to vote. They in this way give continuity to the life of the corporation and may thus control and direct its management and operations. The capital stock and the shares may both be taxed, and it is not double taxation. The bank may be required to pay the tax out of its corporate funds, or be authorized to deduct the amount paid for each stockholder out of his dividends." 95 U. S. 686, 687 [24 L. ed. 560].

The later case of Tennessee v. Whitworth, 117 U. S. 129 [29 L. ed. 830], has been cited as in conflict with the Farrington Case. There is no conflict between the cases as we understand them. The Whitworth Case involved a claim of exemption from taxation by the shareholders by virtue of the charter of the Nashville & Chattanooga Railroad, which provided that the capital stock of the company should be forever exempt from taxation, and that the property of the company should be exempt for the period of twenty years, and no longer. The court held that the exemption of capital stock meant an exemption of the shares in the hands of the shareholders, this view being reached upon a construction of the words of the charter. Two distinct things were held to be exempted: the property of the corporation for twenty years, and the capital stock forever. That the same thing was not meant by "capital stock," which had been exempted by other express words and for a shorter term. The distinction between capital stock in the hands of the corporation and shares of stock in the hands of stockholders was distinctly recognized, Chief Justice Waite saying:

"It is no doubt true that the Legislature may make a difference for the purpose of taxation between capital stock in the hands of the corporation itself, and the shares of the same stock in the hands of the individual shareholders."

Counsel for the plaintiff have urged that under section 9 of the Assessment Act, the president or manager of the associations or corporations referred to in said section is expressly required to pay the tax assessed against the shares of stock out of the corporate funds, and that therefore the tax is one assessed against the corporation and hence double taxation. If the corporation were required to pay such tax whether it had dividends due to the tax debtors or not, there might be something in this objection.

Section 9 is taken from the Act of 1873. In the latter Act it was manifestly limited to private banking associations. The original section has added to it words which seemingly make parts of it apply to all corporations. Just what is meant by this section it is unnecessary to say, farther than that it has no application, in our opinion, to domestic corporations. The liability cast upon such corporations, by assessments upon stocks or bonds, is defined by the other sections of the Act. By the 8th section, it is provided that no tax shall be assessed upon the capital stock of corporations, but that they shall be taxed upon their property. It is also provided that the shares of stock and the bonds issued by such corporations shall be taxed in "the valuation of the personal property of such bondholders and stockholders in the assessment of state, county and city taxes," at the place where such corporation is located whether such owners reside at such place or not.

Section 10 requires each corporation to keep, subject to inspection, a correct list of such shareholders and bondholders, with their residences, and the amount of stock and bonds owned by each.

By section 11 a lien is declared to exist upon the shares of stock and bonds assessed under this Act, and the collector authorized to institute attachment proceedings to collect the tax in certain cases.

By the 12th section it is provided "that it shall be the duty of the president or managing officer of every such bank or other corporation doing business in the State to retain so much of any dividend or interest belonging to such stockholder or bondholder as may be necessary to pay any and all taxes assessed in pursuance of this Act, until it shall be made to appear to such officers that said taxes have been paid."

From these provisions it is most obvious that the tax is not to be assessed against the corporation, but against the shareholders and bondholders individually. The last section cited impounds in the hands of the corporation any dividends or interest, or so much thereof as may be necessary, which may be due or which may thereafter become due, to such shareholder or bondholder, and by implication authorizes the corporation to pay out of the fund so due to the tax debtor the taxes assessed upon the stock or bonds held by such tax debtor in the corporation. The company is thereby made an agency of the taxing power for the collection of the tax due from its shareholders or bondholders. It is under no obligation to pay the tax out of its own funds, being only required to reserve from dividends or interest a sufficiency to pay the particular tax.

Clearly, if the corporation should, after such assessment, pay out to its shareholders any dividend without reserving for the payment of the tax, it would voluntarily make itself liable for the payment of the tax. This is the full limit and measure of the responsibility imposed upon such corporations by this Act.

If the corporation is a non-dividend-paying concern, and this condition is real and not colorable, this scheme for the better collection of such a tax will be wholly inoperative. Is this plan for the collection of the tax upon shares of stock liable to taxation subject to any constitutional objections? We see none. It is nothing more than a garnishment proceeding against the corporation, to better secure the payment of the tax out of the dividends due or to become due. No injustice is done the company. The plan looks to a cheap, speedy and sure means of collecting a tax otherwise exceedingly difficult to either assess or collect. The shares are the things taxed. It matters not who may own them, the dividends attach to and belong to the owner of the shares at the time it is declared, and out of these dividends the sum necessary to pay the tax must be reserved. Such methods of collection are not at all unusual or unique.

"For the most part," says Judge Cooley, in his work on Taxation, "the taxes levied by the States are collected of the persons taxed, or are enforced against the property in respect to which they are imposed. In a few cases, however, in which no injustice could result from such a course, the State may reach the party taxed by indirection and collect in the first instance from some one else, who in turn will become collector from the person on whom the tax is really imposed. The reason is that in such cases it is more convenient to the State, and perhaps makes more certain the collection; and it could be resorted to only when the case is such that injustice could result to no one. A case of this kind is where the tax is imposed on the dividends or other receipts of shareholders from the profits of corporations, or upon their shares, and the corporation is required to make the payment, which it would then deduct from the payments to be made to shareholders. Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. 432.

Indeed, much more vigorous and onerous statutes of this kind have been sustained in other States. The federal government collected an income tax from shareholders and bondholders in corporations by requiring its payment by the corporation in the first instance and permitting the company subsequently to deduct the same from dividends or interest afterwards due. The act was held valid. Haight v. Pittsburg Ft. W. & O. R. Co. 73 U. S. 6 Wall. 15 [18 L. ed. 818].

The State of Kentucky had a statute which required corporations to pay the tax assessed against the shareholders of banks, and in turn collect the same from the dividends next due such tax debtor.

This Act was held valid by the Supreme Court of the United States, Mr. Justice Miller saying that "The mode under consideration is the one which Congress itself adopted in collecting its tax on dividends and on the income arising from bonds of corporations. It is the only mode which certainly and without loss secures the payment of the tax on all the shares, resident and nonresident, and it is the mode which experience has justified in the New England States as the most convenient and proper, in regard to the numerous and wealthy corporations of those States." First Nat. Bank v. Ky. 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 363 [19 L. ed. 701].

An Ohio statute very similar in its provisions to our own was held valid and obligatory upon the corporations affected. Cummings v. Merchants Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 156 [25 L. ed. 904].

Many other States have similar statutes, and constitutional objections have not been sustained as to the collection of the tax on shares. Maltby v. Reading & O. R. Co. 52 Pa. 140; Ottawa Glass Co. v. McCaleb, 81 Ill. 556; New Orleans v. Louisiana Sav. Bank & S. D. Co. 81 La. Ann. 828; Baltimore v. Baltimore City Pass. R. Co. 57 Md. 81; St. Albans v. National Car Co. 57 Vt. 68; Lionberger v. Rowse, 43 Mo. 67; Am. Coal Co. v. Allegany Co. 59 Md. 197.

The next question to be considered is as to the taxability in this State of shares of nonresidents, it appearing that certain of the stockholders of this company reside in other States. Since the Act of 1869 the situs of stocks in domestic corporations has for purposes of taxation been fixed at the place where the corporation was located. Shares of stock are an anomalous kind of personal property. The corporation itself, being an artificial creation of the law, dwells only in law in the State of its creation. Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Wheeler, 66 U. S. 1 Black, 286 [17 L. ed. 180]; Young v. South Traders Iron Co. 85 Tenn. 189.

Its shares are only transferable on the books of the corporation. Supra. They only represent the interest the owner has in the dividends of a business carried on by the officers of the company as the agents of the corporation, and protected by the laws of this State. In the event the corporation shall wind up, the shares represent the interest the stockholders may take in the assets remaining after payment of debts. While the company is a going concern, its affairs are controlled and its management directed by vote of the shareholders. Shares are not debts of the corporation as are its bonds or other obligations. The fiction that personal property has no situs but that of the owner will always yield whenever the actual fact is opposed to the fiction, and when the purposes of justice likewise demand that the actual situs shall be examined. Shares are a species of intangible personal property. They have no actual situs, such as tangible personals may have. 2 L. R. A.

The situs of such an anomalous kind of intangible property may very well be fixed, for purposes of taxation, at the place where the corporation has its situs. Such a situs is more nearly in accord with the fact than any other, and the location is in accord with reason and the demands of justice. The validity of legislation thus fixing the place of taxation has been more than once vindicated by this court. McLaughlin v. Chadwell, 7 Heisk. 389; Nashville v. Thomas, 5 Coldw. 600; Bedford v. Nashville, 7 Heisk. 409.

Precisely similar legislation has been sustained by the Supreme Court of the United States and by the supreme courts of nearly every State in the Union. The constitutionality of such statutes is no longer open to controversy. Tappan v. Merchants Nat. Bank, 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 490 [23 L. ed. 189]; First Nat. Bank of Mendota v. Smith, 65 Ill. 44; American Coal Co. v. Allegany Co. 59 Md. 186; St. Albans v. National Car Co. 57 Vt. 81; People v. Tax Comrs. 85 N. Y. 423.

A question has been made upon the argument that each shareholder so assessed is entitled to an exemption of $1,000, as provided by article 2, § 28, which exempts $1,000 worth of personal property from taxation in the hands of each taxpayer.

This is an agreed case. No such question was submitted or ruled upon by the circuit court; and in this situation no demand for exemption being made in the court below, we think the question is not raised on this record. But upon another ground the contention cannot be here sustained, and that is that it does not appear that such of the shareholders as are entitled have not, in fact, been allowed this exemption by the regular assessor. He is presumed to have done his duty, and it devolves upon the taxpayer when he is assessed upon omitted property, or when the assessment is ancillary to the principal assessment of the tax debtor, to show that he has not at some other time or place received such exemption.

The agreed case shows that in 1884 this company issues bonds to the amount of $132,000, secured by a mortgage on all of its property. These bonds were divided among its then shareholders. The only consideration seems to have been that the stockholders had for several years suffered all the profits to be expended in extending and improving the corporate property. Having thus voluntarily submitted to a deprivation of dividends, they regarded themselves as entitled to a "bond dividend." The contention of the State and county, that because these bonds were issued without consideration, therefore they are to be treated and taxed as an additional issue of stock is unsound for many reasons. It might be enough to say that they have not been assessed as stock, but as bonds held by unknown owners.

This is not like the case of Morrow v. Iron & Steel Company, 3 L. R. A. 37, decided at this term. This was an organized and going corporation, its capital stock all being paid up. The validity of such bonds as they may affect creditors is a question not before us on this record. It is enough, however, that the validity of the assessment, as made, is the only question which we can consider. These bonds were assessed as bonds to the amount of $132,000 in the hands of "unknown owners." We are not to be understood as assenting to the validity of an assessment of a larger lot of bonds owned by many different owners, as a block of $182,000 to "unknown owners." We waive the consideration of this question.

By sections 8, 10, 11 and 12, of the Assessment Act under consideration bonds issued by corporation are placed for purposes of taxation upon precisely the same footing. The tax situs of the bonds of such companies is fixed for purposes of state, county and city taxation at the place, county or city where the corporation is located, regardless of the actual residence of the owners of such bonds. The corporation is made the agency of the State, county and city for the collection of the taxes assessed by the several governments, being required to reserve from the interest due on the bonds a sufficient fund to pay the tax assessed against each bondholder. The assessed bondholders being unknown are of course not parties to this proceeding. But inasmuch as a duty and a liability is imposed by the law upon the corporation owning these bonds, it very rightly insists that the law be construed, and its duty defined under the law, with reference to the tax thus assessed upon its bondholders. That the officers of this company should not know who are now owners of these bonds is not remarkable. The bonds bear coupons and are negotiable and have thirty years to run. Such bonds, when sold, require no transfer on the books of the company. The coupons mature every six months and are payable at the American National Bank, and as the agreed case shows are paid by the bank, upon presentation, out of funds of the company placed there for that purpose. Some of these bonds were originally owned by residents of other States; and from the fact that coupons from such bonds are sent to the bank for payment from other States, it may be presumed that some of the bonds are now owned by nonresidents.

Are bonds owned by nonresidents subject to taxation in this State? In a case involving the power of the State to tax bonds owned by nonresidents, Mr. Justice Field, in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "The power of taxation, however vast in its character and searching in its extent, is necessarily limited to subjects within the jurisdiction of the State. These subjects are persons, property and business. Whatever form taxation may assume, whether as duties, imports, excise or licenses, it must relate to one of those subjects. It is not possible to conceive of any other, though as applied to them the taxation may be exercised in a great variety of ways . . . It may touch business in the almost infinite forms in which it is conducted in professions, in commerce, in manufactures and in transportation, unless restrained by provisions of the Federal Constitution; the power of the State as to the mode, form and extent of taxation is unlimited where the subjects to which it applies are within her jurisdiction." State Tax on Foreign-Held Bonds, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 218 [21 L. ed. 186].

"These," says Judge Cooley, in his able and exhaustive work on Taxation, "are conceded or adjudged principles and have ceased to be the subject of discussion or argument." P. 22. 3 L. R. A.

The power of the State must then rest upon the proposition that these bonds are constructively within the jurisdiction of the State, although their owners have no residence here. When a nonresident is the owner of tangible property, real or personal, which has its actual situs here, there is no doubt but that the jurisdiction of the State over such property for the purposes of taxation is complete. This is true notwithstanding the fiction of the law that personal property has no situs but that of the owner. In such case the fact that the actual situs of such personalty is here authorizes the taxation.

Says Judge Story: "The general doctrine is not controverted that although movables are for many purposes to be deemed to have no situs, except that of the domicile of the owner, yet this being but a legal fiction, it yields whenever it is necessary for the purposes of justice that the actual situs of the thing should be examined." Conf. Laws, § 500.

Upon this ground, the fiction as to the situs of personalty is overcome by an examination as to the actual situs; and the purposes of justice requiring that property actually within the State and protected by the State shall bear its just proportions of the expenses of government renders its taxation legal and just. Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. 373, and cases cited by him.

The bonds sought to be taxed are undoubtedly property, and personal property. They are, however, intangible property, and can have no actual situs. They are the mere evidence of debts by the company to the holder or owner thereof. The bond is evidence to support a demand for payment of money. Its destruction by accident would not discharge the debt. The debt would remain and might still be demanded and recovered. Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 498 [25 L. ed. 562].

The bond is property, but it is the property of the owner—the creditor, and not the debtor. It is not like shares of stock, which is not a debt but which represents the interest owned by the stockholder in the profits of a business conducted here by his agents. The owner of the bond has no interest in the business of the corporation, and no control over it whatever. The losses of the business must be borne and its profits shared by the stockholders. In all this the creditor, by bond or otherwise, has no interest other than that which every creditor has in seeing his debtor preserve an ability to meet his debts. A tax upon the bond is not a tax upon the corporation; it is a tax upon the owner of the bond. Bonds are undoubtedly subject to taxation. But when? By what government? The answer cannot be doubtful. They can only be taxed by the government having jurisdiction of the owner. The situs of intangible personals, such as bonds, notes, accounts, etc., is necessarily the situs of the owner.

This identical question was decided in the Case of the Foreign-Held Bonds already cited. The case arose under a Pennsylvania statute similar to our own, by which it was sought to tax in Pennsylvania bonds owned by nonresidents, upon the ground that they had been issued by a Pennsylvania corporation and were secured by a mortgage upon property situated in that State. Discussing this question of the situs of such bonds, the court said:

"Corporations may be taxed, like natural persons, upon their property and business. But debts owing by corporations, like debts owing by individuals, are not property of the debtors in any sense; they are obligations of the debtors, and only possess value in the hands of the creditor. With them they are property, and in their hands they may be taxed. To call debts property of the debtors is simply to misuse terms. All the property there can be, in the nature of things, in debts of corporations, belongs to the creditors to whom they are payable, and follows their domicile wherever that may be. These debts can have no locality separate from the parties to whom they are due. This principle might be stated in many different ways and supported by citations from numerous adjudications; but no number of authorities and no forms of expression could add anything to its obvious truth." 83 U. S. 15 Wall. 820 [21 L. ed. 187].

That these debts are secured by a mortgage upon property situated here can make no difference. The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania had sustained such taxation upon the ground that the situs of the security gave the State jurisdiction. Malby v. Reading & C. R. Co. 52 Pa. 140.

But this theory was repudiated and its unsoundness demonstrated in the case just cited from 15 Wallace. Upon this the court said: "The property mortgaged belonged entirely to the company, and so far as it was situated in Pennsylvania was taxable there. If taxation is the correlative of protection, the taxes which it there paid were the correlative for the protection which it there received. And neither the taxation of the property nor its protection was augmented or diminished by the fact that the corporation was in debt or free from debt. The property in no sense belonged to the non-resident bondholders or to the mortgagee of the company. The mortgage transferred no title; it created only a lien upon the property. Though in form a conveyance, it was, both at law and in equity, a mere security for the debt." 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 822 [21 L. ed. 188].

In this State, as in Pennsylvania, the mortgagee's interest in the mortgaged land is but a security for the debt—the debt being the principal and the land only an incident. McGan v. Marshall, 7 Humph. 121.

In Iowa it was held that mortgages held by nonresidents on property in that State were not subject to taxation in Iowa. Davenport v. Mississippi & M. R. Co. 12 Iowa, 589.

So in California it was held that the owner of a judgment of foreclosure of a mortgage on lands could not be taxed in the county where the mortgaged lands were, he being a citizen of another county in the State—the debt being held to have only the situs of the owner, the mortgage being a mere security. People v. Eastman, 25 Cal. 603.

That the legal fiction as to the situs of persons will, under certain circumstances, yield is most true. If the State had in the charter of this company authorized the issuance of bonds only upon condition that they should be taxable here, and this provision had been contained in the bonds and coupons, it could not be doubted that each purchaser would take such bonds with notice, and would by contract 2 L. R. A.

subject himself to taxation here. In such a case the purchaser would undoubtedly take this burden into consideration when he bought and abate his price accordingly, and thus the tax would fall at last upon the debtor. The fiction that debts have no situs but that of the creditor is founded upon a consideration of the nature of such property. It is not property save in the hands of the creditor. "It is a certain rule," says Lord Mansfield, C. J., "that a fiction of law shall never be contradicted so as to defeat the end for which it was invented, but for every other it may be contradicted." Comp. 177.

"No fiction," says Sir Wm. Blackstone, "shall extend to work an injury, its proper operation being to prevent a mischief or remedy an inconvenience which might result from the general rule of law." 3 Com. 43.

To sustain the jurisdiction of the State over these bonds for purposes of taxation, we must ignore or contradict the legal fiction which ascribes to such property the situs of the owner. If the actual situs upon examination should prove to be here, then the legal fiction must yield. But the actual situs is not here; and to sustain the jurisdiction we must create a fictitious or constructive situs, based upon the notion that debts are in some way property in the hands of the debtor, or that, the security for the debt being here, therefore the debt is here. By no sort of fiction can the jurisdiction of the State be held to extend to the property which a nonresident has in a debt which he holds against a resident. The creditor cannot be taxed, because he is not within the jurisdiction, and his property cannot be taxed because it is not within the jurisdiction. State Tax on Foreign-Held Bonds, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 800 [21 L. ed. 179]; St. Louis v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 430 [20 L. ed. 191]; People v. Tax Comrs. 23 N. Y. 224; Goldart v. People, 106 Ill. 25; Com. v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 27 Gratt. 344.

Another question arises. The holders of such bonds are required to be assessed for county taxation and for city taxation at the place where the corporation is located. Now may a citizen and resident of a county, other than that of the location of the corporation, be assessed for county taxation by a county in which he does not reside and in which he has no property? The same jurisdictional defect which prevents the State from assessing bonds of nonresidents of the State exists with reference to the county. Davidson County has assessed all the bonds issued by this corporation. This Act authorizes it. Can the Legislature authorize a county to assess, for county purposes, property not within the county? Is the Act valid in so far as it authorizes either the County or City of Nashville to assess bonds owned by nonresidents of the county or city?

We have already decided that the situs of debts is that of the creditor and not that of the debtor. The Constitution authorizes the Legislature to empower counties and towns to assess taxes. This power has two limitations. The taxation must be applied to subjects within the jurisdiction of the county or the city, and it must be exercised only for county or municipal purposes. The State cannot empower a county or city to tax property not within the jurisdiction. The injustice which would result if it were otherwise would be most obvious. If Davidson County could tax the property of a resident of another county just because that property happened to be a debt due by a resident of that county, it would be a gross injustice. This consideration makes the conclusion we have reached upon constitutional grounds accord with every sense of right and justice.

There are two other infirmities which attach to this part of this Act. The first is, that the tax is imposed upon the holder of the bond; the corporation is required to reserve the tax from interest due; the bonds are coupon bonds and run for thirty years; such coupons may be detached and are negotiable. If the coupon should be owned by A and the bond by B, the deduction of the tax from the coupon would be to compel A to pay the tax of B. This precise question arose and was determined in the case of Hartman v. Greenhow, when it was held that the tax against the bond was not collectible from the interest where it appeared that the coupon belonged to one and the bond to another. 103 U. S. 684 [26 L. ed. 276].

The second infirmity is this: the tax against nonresidents of the State is void in toto; the tax of Davidson County upon bonds not owned in the county is void; the tax of the City of Nashville upon bonds not owned in the city is void. Now, when a coupon is presented for payment, how is the company to determine whether it may lawfully reserve the tax from its interest payment? If the coupon does not belong to the owner of the taxed bonds, it cannot reserve any tax. If it does not belong to a resident of the State, it cannot reserve any tax. If it does not belong to a resident of Nashville, it cannot reserve the city tax. If it does not belong to a resident of the county, it cannot reserve either the county or city tax.

The burden imposed by the Act upon the corporation with respect to the collection of the tax lawfully assessed is too onerous and threatens gross injustice. It would have no way to secure itself against liability to either the bondholder, whose interest it has illegally detained, or to the State for failure to reserve the tax justly due, except by requiring every coupon to be sued upon. The whole scheme of the Act, in so far as it undertakes to convert corporations into agencies for the collection of a tax upon their bondholders, is fatally defective and void. The Act is not limited to collection of state taxes alone, but undertakes to provide machinery for collection of county and city taxes as well. The Act is so faulty as a scheme for collecting the tax on bonds that it cannot be sustained. We therefore hold the Act invalid in so far as it impounds interest due by corporations, or imposes on them any duty or liability on account of the tax assessed upon their bonds. Other objections to the validity of the Act in this particular have been argued, but it is unnecessary to pass upon them. The assessment against unknown holders of bonds is void. The assessment was made, as we have before stated, under the provisions of the law authorizing assessment of omitted property. The Act requires notice to be given to the taxpayer, his attorney, agent or representative. Notice was given to the corporation as the agent of the bondholder. Under the view we have taken of the Act, the corporation is not the agent or representative of the bondholders; hence, the assessment of these bonds as omitted property is void.

The judgment of the Circuit Court will be reversed in this matter, and as to the assessment on franchises or right of way; affirmed in other particulars. Costs will be divided as indicated by the Circuit Court.

TEXAS SUPREME COURT.

E. HAWES et al., Appts.,
v.

Emma J. NICHOLAS.

(....Tex....)

The revocation of a will by intentionally destroying it will not revive a former will which was expressly revoked by the later one.

(January 22, 1890.)

APPEAL by contestants, from a decree of the District Court of Calhoun County admitting to probate, upon appeal from the County Court, the will of H. W. Hawes, deceased.
Reversed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion.
Mr. E. Hawes for appellants.

Messrs. Glass, Callender & Proctor for appellee.

NOTE.—Revocation of will, effect of.

The revocation of a subsequent will does not have the effect to revive the prior will. Brown v. Brown, 8 El. & Bl. 876; Hale v. Tokelove, 14 Jur. 817; Boulcott v. Boulcott, 2 Drew. 26. See Lawson v. Morrison, 2 U. S. 2 Dall. 286 (1 L. ed. 384); Boudinot v. Bradford, 2 U. S. 2 Dall. 300 (1 L. ed. 375); Re Dietz, 4 Cent. Rep. 842, 41 N. J. Eq. 231.
2 L. R. A.

Henry, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

In the year 1878 H. W. Hawes executed a will, by which he devised specified portions of his estate to one of his sons and his granddaughter Emma J. Nicholas. This paper was styled a "deed," and shortly after its execution was acknowledged by the maker, and recorded as a deed by the County Clerk of Calhoun County. The instrument remained in the custody of one of the devisees, and was produced by him after the death of the maker.

In the year 1879 the said H. W. Hawes executed another will, in which he expressly revoked all prior wills, and which was inconsistent in some material respects with the will of 1878. In 1888 the testator destroyed the will of 1879 by tearing and burning it. He died in the year 1888.

In the year 1887 appellee, Emma J. Nicholas, filed in the County Court of Calhoun County an application to probate the will of 1878, which she produced and proved. This application was opposed by the widow and a number of the children of the deceased, H. W. Hawes.

The contestants pleaded, as reasons why the will of 1873 should not be admitted to probate, the execution and subsequent destruction of the will of 1879.

The case was tried in the county court, and appealed to the district court.

In the district court exceptions to the answer of contestants were sustained, and the will of 1873, upon proper proof of its execution being produced, was admitted to probate. The contestants offered, but were not permitted to prove, the execution as required by law of the will of 1879, containing a clause expressly revoking all previous wills, and provisions inconsistent with the will of 1873, and the subsequent destruction by tearing and burning of the will of 1879.

The contestants appeal, and assign as error that "The court erred in sustaining the exceptions of applicant to contestants' answer, and in holding that the destruction by the decedent of the will of 1879, in 1883, had the effect of reviving the will of 1873."

The question as to whether, and under what circumstances, the destruction of a subsequent will, will revive a prior one, has been much discussed. The authorities are conflicting. In 4 Kent's Commentaries, 532, it is said: "If the first will be not actually canceled, or destroyed, or expressly revoked, on making a second, and the second will be afterwards canceled, the first will is said to be revived. But the first will is not revived if the testator makes a second, and actually cancels the first by an absolute act rendering it void, and then cancels the second will. It will, in such a case, require a republication to restore the first will."

The attorneys for appellee quote in their brief the following language from Redfield on Wills: "The general rule seems to be firmly established from an early day that a later will, revoked, will not prevent an earlier and inconsistent one from remaining in force; and it makes no difference whether the later will contained an express clause of revocation or not." Vol. 1, pp. 808, 809.

But further on the same author says: "It seems to have been regarded as an unsettled question in the English courts, both in Westminster Hall and Doctors' Commons, whether the cancellation of a later revoking will would have the effect to revive the former will thus revoked. The result of the most careful examination of the cases leaves the question in a state of distressing uncertainty. The most we can say is that it depends upon circumstances; and that extrinsic evidence is admissible, in regard to the intention of the testator, was freely admitted before the late statute, which required some positive act of revival." Id. 320, 322.

The question is discussed in the case of Colvin v. Warford, 20 Md. 391, and there it is said: "The authorities undoubtedly established the principle that an unconditional revocation is not essentially testamentary in its nature, and, like the will containing it liable to vary with the testamentary purpose, but a positive consummated act, producing an immediate and conclusive effect . . . The principle established in the ecclesiastical courts of England is that the canceling of a will containing an express revocation of a previous will does not necessarily revive the will revoked, although the presumption of an intention on the part of the testator to revive the previous will may be raised by his destruction of the revoking will."

In the case of James v. Marvin, 8 Conn. 577, Chief Justice Hooper says: "An express revocation is a positive act of the party, which operates, by its own proper force, without being at all dependent on the consummation of the will in which it is found, and absolutely annuls all precedent devises." "It is because an express revocation is a positive act of the party, independent of the will which may happen to contain it, and operating instantaneously, and per se. As a clear consequence resulting from this principle, all prior wills are recalled or reversed—the proper meaning of the word 'revoked'—and must remain in this condition until revived by republication . . . A deed of revocation, separate from a will, has the effect of annulling a prior will instantaneously; and the operation is the same whether the revoking clause be in deed or will, for it is never a necessary part of the latter."

In the case of Peck's Appeal, 50 Conn. 563, it appears that Lucy Peck made a will in 1875, and in 1880 made another inconsistent with the first. She died not long afterwards. The last will was never found, but the first one was. The new will did not expressly revoke the first one. The court held that "Prior to 1821 any will might be revoked in writing, and it was not necessary that the writing should be executed with every particular formality. It was then held that a revocation contained in another will was not ambulatory, but took effect immediately, and that the will revoked could not be revived without a republication."

In 1821 a statute enacted that "No devise of real estate shall be revoked otherwise than by burning . . . or by some other will or codicil in writing," etc. That section required that a written revocation should be in another will. The statute changes the aspect of the question. Before the statute any written declaration to that effect revoked a will, irrespective of any statute, and without regard to the death of the testator. Now, the statute requires that the writing, in order to have that effect, must itself be a will or codicil, and executed with all the formalities required for such instruments.

In our State a statute prescribes the method of revoking a will to be "by a subsequent will, codicil or declaration in writing, executed with like formalities, or by the testator destroying, canceling or obliterating the same, or causing it to be done in his presence." Rev. Stat. art. 4861.

A written declaration, properly executed, as effectually revokes a will from the date of its execution as does its destruction. If the purpose to revoke is sufficiently expressed, and the writing is properly executed, it cannot be controlled or limited by the name given the instrument, or by its containing other provisions. If the will of 1879 was properly executed as a will, and contained a clause expressly revoking the will of 1873, we do not think that the subsequent destruction of the will of 1879 had the effect of reviving the will of 1873.

We think there was error in sustaining exceptions to the answer of contestants, and that for this cause the case must be reversed.

RÉSUMÉ OF THE DECISIONS REPORTED IN THIS BOOK.

SUBJECTS Discussed and Points Decided during First Quarter of 1889, and Reported in this Book, Classified as follows:

1. GOVERNMENTAL AND POLITICAL RELATIONS.
2. COMMERCIAL RELATIONS.
3. CONTRACTUAL RELATIONS.
4. FIDUCIARY RELATIONS.
5. DOMESTIC RELATIONS.
6. SOCIAL RELATIONS.
7. PROPERTY AND PROPERTY RIGHTS AND REMEDIES.
8. DAMAGES FOR TORTS.
9. CRIMINAL LAW.

1. GOVERNMENTAL AND POLITICAL RELATIONS.

United States Government; the Judiciary. Congress in establishing "inferior courts" must confer upon the judges thereof the constitutional tenure of office, that of holding "during good behavior," before they can become invested with judicial power. p. 239.

Jurisdiction of circuit courts. Equity jurisdiction of the federal courts may extend suits for discovery and distribution of assets held by an executor de son tort, although the probate system of the State afforded a complete remedy. p. 235. Jurisdiction is not conferred by making a necessary party a nominal defendant in order to comply with the requirement of the Act of Congress as to diverse citizenship of parties. Id. To give jurisdiction to federal circuit courts, where two or more parties, whose interests are so separate that any number of them may proceed with the litigation, the interests of each, independent of the others, must amount to $2,000. Id. The courts of the United States, sitting in equity, may administer in suits of which they have jurisdiction, equitable rights peculiar to the laws of the State where the courts are held. p. 153. Where citizens and residents of Pennsylvania, bring their bill in the Circuit Court of Georgia, against citizens of Georgia, and a citizen of New Jersey, and a citizen of New York, and claim therein an equitable lien upon a trust in the assets of the New Jersey citizen, which are entirely within jurisdiction of the court and in which assets all the parties are in a more or less degree interested, the jurisdiction of the circuit court depends upon the situs of the property upon which the lien or trust is asserted rather than upon the residence of the several defendants. p. 120. In an action brought by the assignee of a claim founded on contract, it must be shown that the suit could have been maintained by the assignor, if no assignment had been made. p. 746. And an action for damages for breach of a written lease is within this rule. Id.

Removal of cause from state court. A citizen of Alabama brought suit against a citizen of Georgia, a mere stakeholder; a citizen of Ohio, the real defendant, was made a party and removed the cause to the United States Circuit Court. On motion to remand, held, that the parties being citizens of different States and more than the jurisdictional amount being involved, the defendant nonresident could remove the case. p. 469.

Accounting with Treasury Department. While assignments, transfers, etc., before the issuance of a warrant therefor, are void if the assignors or principals revoke and repudiate them before payment, yet the accounting officers of the Treasury may recognize them, state accounts in their favor, and pay at any time before revocation. Such payments will be binding and conclusive upon the parties and a complete discharge of the indebtedness. p. 571. A United States Marshal may pay witness fees to others than those in whose favor such fees are taxed upon orders, assignments or transfers thereof by the witnesses. Payment of such orders is a valid discharge of the indebtedness. Id. Unrevoked and undisputed orders and transfers of such claims against the United States are so far valid that if payment be made thereon the assignors will be estopped from setting up any other claim on their behalf. Such payment is a discharge of the indebtedness. Id. While the accounting officers of the Treasury may state and certify accounts in favor of purchasers, assignees or transferees of claims against the United States whose assignments are not controverted, it is not obligatory, but they may exercise their discretion in the matter, with due regard to the convenience of parties and the Government. Id. The Act of February 23, 1875 (18 Stat. at L. 338), which requires that the accounts of district attorneys, clerks, marshals etc., shall be forwarded, "when approved," "to the proper accounting officers of the treasury," construed. p. 229.

Accounting with Post Office Department. Where the quarterly returns of a postmaster have been regularly rendered to the department and have been passed upon by the auditor, and the balances therein found to be due the Government have been carried into a general account each quarter, such action by the auditor is a complete allowance of the commissions claimed and adjustment of such returns. p. 806. Where the credits in the general accounts show full payment of all balances charged, so that a complete balance could be struck, it is a complete settlement and commissions are covered by it; and the Postmaster-General cannot "withhold" them as there was nothing to "withhold." Id. If, before allowance of credit for commissions, he directs that it be not made, but in lieu thereof credit is given for the amount of the allowance deemed reasonable, the balance thereby shown to be due the Government would be prima facie, but not conclusive, evidence against the postmaster. Id. Where a postmaster's account has been adjusted, allowed and fully paid, accounting officers cannot, after the postmaster's term of office has expired, evolve an ex parte balance in favor of Government solely upon a general allegation of fraud in accounts formerly passed upon, so as to make such balance prima facie evidence against the postmaster and his sureties. The allegations must be specific and be sustained by competent evidence. Id.

Military law. The enlistment of a minor without the written consent of his parent or guardian is invalid, and the invalidity may be claimed by the minor himself either before or after his majority. p. 831.

Regulation of commerce. The power to regulate commerce among the several States comprehends the power to regulate the navigable waters of the United States on which such commerce may be or is carried; Congress may make any regulation to secure and maintain the safety and convenience of the waterway. p. 830. The regulation forbidding a steamboat to carry more passengers than allowed in her certificate of inspection applies to such boats engaged in carrying passengers on a navigable water of the United States between ports of the same State only. Id.

Interstate Commerce Commission. The Act to Regulate Commerce does not undertake either to create an "inferior court," or to invest the commission appointed thereunder with judicial powers or functions. p. 289. An indictment under the Interstate Commerce Act (§ 2) for "unjust discrimination," need not aver by what device defendant managed to discriminate (p. 444); and counts under the third section for "undue and unreasonable preference" and for "undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage" need not allege that the service was rendered "under substantially similar circumstances and conditions." It is sufficient if it shows that accused has committed an act which gives one shipper or class of shippers an advantage or subjects others to disadvantage. Id. It must show with precision that the lower rate was for transportation between the same points as the higher rate. Id. Under the sixth section, a count which alleges the allowance of a rate less than that established and published "in force on that date" sufficiently negatives the inference that it might have been reduced without notice. Id. In the prosecution of a railroad agent, it need not be alleged or proved that the act complained of was done under authority conferred by the principal; it is sufficient to show that accused was in fact its agent. Id.

State Constitution; passage of statutes. Although the courts of Michigan may take cognizance of legislative journals in testing constitutionality of a statute, they cannot act upon anything not found in the journal, nor presume that any requirement of the Constitution has not been fulfilled. p. 609. Every intendment is to be made in favor of the constitutionality of a statute. Id. A statute whose object as expressed in the title is to incorporate a city, which is substituted for one whose object as expressed in the title is to organize a new township, cannot be considered a new bill and invalid because not introduced within the first fifty days of the session, when the lands to be affected belong to the same county, and the original bill does not appear in the legislative journals. Id. The legislative practice of reading a bill twice by title and only once at length, must be regarded by the courts as a substantial compliance with the Michigan Constitution. Id.

Title of Act. The title to a statute must be such at least as fairly to suggest or give a clew to the subject dealt with in the Act. p. 789. The titles of statutes, as "An Act to Charter" a railroad company, and "An Act to Amend an Act Entitled 'An Act to Charter'" such company, relate to but one subject and are sufficient to sustain a provision in the Act authorizing counties, townships, etc., to subscribe to the stock of such company. p. 242. An Act, the title to which indicates but one subject, and that the amendment of prior statutes relating to the transportation of passengers and property through pneumatic tubes by atmospheric pressure, but whose provisions enlarge the powers of a corporation formed for such purposes by giving authority to operate a grand underground railway not less than fifteen miles long with two or more tracks through passageways, and which could not be operated by atmospheric pressure, with authority, by the consent of a board of engineer commissioners, to use any other motive power, is unconstitutional and void. p. 789.

Inhibition of special and local legislation. The constitutional provision that corporations shall not be created by special Act does not prohibit the assignment of a franchise to a legally organized corporation by those having the right to make the transfer. p. 92. It does not prohibit the assignment of a franchise to a legally organized corporation by persons having the lawful right to transfer the same. Id. When the enlargement of corporate powers becomes indistinguishable from a grant of new, substantive rights, a statute attempting to give such powers is within the purview of a Constitutional Amendment prohibiting private or local statute granting any exclusive privileges or franchises to a corporation. p. 789.

Classification of cities. The classification of cities, with the view of legislating for either class separately is unconstitutional, unless there exists a necessity springing from manifest peculiarities clearly distinguishing those of one class from each of the other classes, and imperatively demands legislation for each class. p. 577. The Pennsylvania Act dividing cities into seven classes is unconstitutional where the only possible purpose is to evade the constitutional limitation in respect to local and special laws. Id. It cannot go into effect and become operative till the terms of all the members of the council in office at the time of its approval have fully expired. Id. Local and special laws in force in some cities at the time of the adoption of the Constitution are not affected thereby; yet other local or special laws cannot be substituted in their stead. Id. Whether the Legislature has transcended its power in passing a local or special Act, is essentially a question of law. Id.

Police regulations. A rule of the Boston board of police, that "No person shall sing or play, or perform on any musical instrument in the streets or public places of the city, except in connection with a funeral, a military parade or a procession for which a police escort is provided, unless licensed thereto," confers authority upon that board to regulate "itinerant musicians," and is reasonable and valid. A member of the organization known as the "Salvation Army" comes within the general phrase "itinerant musician." p. 142. That an Act was done as a matter of religious worship only will not protect one from the consequences of such act made subject to a penalty under the law. Id. The constitutional provision securing freedom of worship was not designed to prevent the adoption of reasonable rules for the use of streets. Id. It is not unconstitutional delegation of power to authorize a city council to empower its board of police to make rules and regulations in reference to itinerant musicians. Id. An Act of Legislature which will not be declared invalid by the courts, because it abridges the exercise of the privilege of local self government in a particular regard, which privilege is not guarantied by the Constitution, will not be declared invalid. Id. The Legislature may provide that powers previously vested in cities or towns shall be appointed by the Governor, and may provide the mode of appointment and qualifications of appointees. Id. An ordinance of a city of the second class that declares it unlawful for any persons, society, association or organization, under whatsoever name, to parade any public way of the city, shouting, singing or beating or playing upon any musical instruments, to attract an unusual crowd upon such way, without the written consent of the mayor, or president of the city council, city clerk or city marshal, is unreasonable, illegal and void. p. 110. Power to fix rates to be charged by a telephone company is not conferred upon a city by provisions of its charter giving it power to "license, tax and regulate," businesses; nor is such power included in the general police power of a municipal corporation. p. 278.

Liability for neglect of duty. A municipal corporation cannot abrogate or dispense with the duties and liabilities imposed upon it by its charter in respect to the care of streets. p. 691. A city ordinance permitting a person engaged in building, to deposit materials upon the street for one half of its width is no defense to an action against the city for personal injuries caused by obstructions permitted to remain without light or other signal of warning. Id. A recovery can be had against a municipal corporation only where it negligently performs or negligently fails to perform a duty in its nature ministerial, and then only in cases where the ministerial duty is imposed by law. p. 712. It is not liable for damages caused by the falling of a wall of a burned building left standing after the fire, although it had been notified of the fact that the wall was dangerous. The owner of the burnt building is liable. Id. The owner of the building in such case is liable and his liability is not relieved by the promise of a city officer to take charge of, and, if necessary, take down the wall. Id.

Liable for negligent acts of its employts. A town which maintains a farm for the support of its paupers and from the surplus income boards paupers of other towns for pay, and also boards persons engaged to work upon its highways, is liable for injuries resulting to third persons from negligence in conducting such farm. p. 500. An employé on a town farm, maintained for the support of paupers is so far the servant of the town that it is liable for injuries resulting from his negligence. Id. A blind person walking unattended upon a public street is bound to use only ordinary care to avoid accidents. What care is reasonably necessary to insure his safety is a question for the jury in view of all the circumstances. Id. But a city is not liable for injuries resulting to a traveler upon its highway while attempting to cross a draw bridge, from the momentary negligence of the gateman. p. 447.

But not liable for acts of its officials. A city is not liable for injuries or damages caused by neglect of its officers in the performance of their duties. p. 866. Street commissioners who, after advertising for proposals fail to enter into any contract, undertake to perform the work themselves and to carry it on through other persons employed by them, are individually liable for injuries sustained by a person through the falling of a derrick in consequence of the negligence of their servants. Id. When street commissioners exercise judicial and legislative powers, they are not amenable to anyone except the public for errors, negligence or misfeasance in the matters within their jurisdiction, but become liable when they undertake to carry out their plans and do the work themselves through agents and servants. Id.

Dedication for highway purposes. No dedication for highway purposes, of a covered surface of a canal feeder belonging to the State, can be inferred from public use for more than twenty years. The land being appropriated to such use, a ground for highway purposes would be unlawful and therefore cannot be presumed. p. 578. Mere acquiescence by the State in the use of a strip of land for purposes of a passage creates a duty on the State to abstain from injuring a person using it, but not a duty of active vigilance to prevent injury, especially where a traveler is familiar with the condition of the surface. Id. An acceptance, by the public, of land for a public use, is to be construed in connection with the grant or dedication. p. 87.

County indebtedness. The provision of the Missouri Constitution, that "No county shall be allowed to become indebted, in any manner or for any purpose, to an amount exceeding in any year the income and revenue provided for such year," refers only to that class of debts which it is optional with the governing body of the county to incur. p. 426.

Townships. Townships in South Carolina since the Act of 1870 are mere territorial divisions, with no officials, no perpetual succession, no corporate powers, privileges or purposes; and therefore power to take stock in a railroad and to levy taxes in payment therefor cannot be exercised for any corporate purpose, within the meaning of the Constitution. p. 242.

Election to office. The residence, for purposes of registration as an elector in Detroit, of a single man having no family, is the ward in which he boards. p. 208. Where a township trustee has voted for himself for the office of county superintendent of schools, and been duly elected, the failure of electors not voting for him to interpose objection is not such acquiescence and tacit consent to the announcement of his election as amounts to his appointment to such office. p. 510.

Election contest. In an election contest the plaintiff must establish that the ballots have been kept intact, and are the genuine, identical ballots cast at the election. p. 596. The official returns, when duly certified, are prima facie evidence of the result, but never conclusive, unless made so by statute. Their record is entitled to the presumption of regularity, and is prima facie of its integrity. Id. The ballots constitute the best—the primary—evidence of the intention and choice of the voters in an election contest; and such evidence will control the official count if they have not been tampered with and are preserved. The ballots are the best evidence. Id. That "Such ballots are entitled to be recounted" is in conformity with the law, and such as it pronounces on that state of facts. Id. When shown that they have been securely kept and preserved inviolate, they will not be excluded on account of some omission to comply with directions of the statute. Id.

State courts. Jurisdiction of courts of equity in New York does not extend to questions arising upon the due execution of alleged wills, they having been committed to the courts of probate. p. 175. Courts in this State have no jurisdiction of an action by a nonresident against a foreign corporation on a cause which did not arise within the State. p. 636. An order of publication in such action may be set aside. Id. Where intangible property of nonresidents is transferred out of the State, no jurisdiction attaches over the subject of the action or its cause. Rule applied to copyrights and their royalties. p. 635.

Co-ordinate departments of government. The rule which forbids suit against officers of a State, because in effect a suit against the State, applies only where the interest of the State is through some contract or some property right, or where its interest is in a suit in its own name, brought or threatened by its officers, to enforce some state claim. p. 504. Acts in the discretion of state officers will not be interfered with or controlled by courts; for their injustice or oppression some other remedy must be sought. Id. The statute gives state railroad commissioners discretion in making rates for railroads; and whether such rates, when made by them, are reasonable and just, or not, is not open to inquiry in a suit to enjoin their discretionary action. Id. The statute which confers on them this power is not a delegation of legislative power inhibited by the Constitution. Id. The statute having fixed a penalty for violation of the rates fixed, a bill which seeks to enjoin them from instituting an action to recover the penalty is in effect a suit against the State. Id. Suit by a railroad company against the commissioners, to enjoin them from promulgating unreasonable and unjust rates, is not in effect a suit against the State, except so far as the bill seeks to enjoin them from instituting actions in the name of the State to recover the penalty prescribed by the Act. Id.

Board of claims. An Act authorizing the board of claims to rehear, audit and determine and allow reasonable compensation for meritorious services, on a claim previously rejected by the board of audit because of the lack of legal authority to employ such services, does not violate the Constitution. It is neither an audit nor allowance by the Legislature. p. 603. The Legislature can ratify and approve by subsequent legislation any act performed for the benefit of the State, which it had original authority to provide for. Id. So it may ratify acts of its officers in procuring individuals to voluntarily furnish property or render services to the State, and create a liability on the part of the State to make payment therefor. Id. The proviso in the Constitution, exempting existing claims from the prohibition against allowing claims after they are barred, cannot apply to any claim accruing after the adoption of the proviso. Id. The fact that a claim against the State on an imperfect obligation previously existing would have been barred by lapse of time does not make legislative ratification and authority to allow such claim invalid, under the constitutional provision that no claim shall be audited or allowed, or paid, which, as between citizens, would be barred by lapse of time. Id. The fact that the statute has run against an unenforceable obligation, the defect of which may be cured or waived by the debtor, does not bar an action on a new obligation when the defect is waived. Id. The value of materials furnished in performance of services referred to in the Act, authorizing the board of claims to rehear and audit claims for work and services for the State, constitutes a part of the claim. Id.

State railroad commissioners. A power conferred by the Legislature upon a board of commissioners, will not be extended by implication; and if the board attempts to do certain acts under the power, the authority to act must be affirmatively shown to be included in the power. p. 195. Where the Legislative Assembly of the State passed an Act creating a board of railroad commissioners, empowering it to examine into the affairs of railroad corporations, and required the board to make a biennial report, with suggestions "as to what changes in the classification of freights, or in the rate of freights or fares are advisable for the public welfare," but conferred no express authority upon it to regulate the price or to determine when freight charges were unreasonable, the board has no jurisdiction to require a company to refund to a shipper a sum of money alleged to have been exacted from him in excess of a reasonable charge for the shipment. Id. Where an Act directs the board to examine into such affairs, and specially requires it to report the result of its investigation to the Legislature, it will not be presumed that it intended to give the board authority to adjust these matters, although empowered by certain of its provisions to hear complaints against railroad companies on account of acts in general done or omitted to be done by them. Id. A provision to the effect that whenever any railroad company violated, refused or neglected to obey a lawful order or requirement of the board, it shall be the duty of the commissioner to enter complaint in the circuit court of the State, sitting in equity, with power in such court upon notice to the company to proceed to hear and determine the matter speedily, etc., did not authorize the court in such proceeding to enforce the repayment of money charged in excess of a reasonable charge; such claim can only be enforced by a common-law action. Id. The South Carolina Railroad Commission has no jurisdiction of a complaint against a railroad partly in another State, for charges for transportation partly in such other State. p. 105.

Public lands; title to. Adverse possession of the south half of a quarter section of land, claimed by another under a prior patent, is not constituted by actually occupying adversely part of the north half under a registered patent for the whole quarter section. p. 277.

Eminent domain; due process of law. A law which authorizes taking property without due process and impairs the obligation of contracts, is unconstitutional. p. 255. A proceeding conclusively and finally disposing of individual property rights will be void, unless founded upon a law providing for notice of some kind. It is not enough that some notice or information may be given; but the law must provide for notice. p. 655.

Property taken must be for public use. Railroad companies have the right to invoke the exercise of eminent domain when they need the property for public use; but for private interests and for private purposes, they cannot call into exercise the power of eminent domain. p. 690. Where a corporation sought to condemn land, over which to build a switch, branch road or lateral work, to reach a private manufactory, the use to which the land was to be subjected was a private, not a "public use." Id. Evidence that all who wish to avail themselves of the proposed switch, etc., can do so, is not sufficient to show that the use of the work will be for the benefit of the public. Id. Whether the use for which property is sought to be taken is public or private is a judicial question, subject to review by the appellate court. Id.

Compensation must be made to owner. The Compiled Laws do not contravene the State Constitution, or the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, as to compensation for private property taken. p. 59.

Exercise of right by railroad companies. Under the provision of the State Constitution a railroad company must make full compensation for the right of way appropriated to its use, irrespective of supposed benefits from the construction of the road, or any improvement thereon. p. 217. Where a railroad is laid through a farm or tract of land used for stock purposes, danger to stock may be considered in giving compensation to the land owner, so far as the same affects depreciation of the tract, but not danger or injury resulting from negligent operation of the road. Id. A farmer not engaged in buying and selling real estate cannot be a witness as to the value of the land before and after the appropriation of the right of way; but one conversant with the land, its situation, soil, advantages, etc., may be. Id. Danger from fire to buildings, etc., in so far as it depreciates the value of the property, may be properly considered. Id.

Proceedings for condemnation; assessment of damages. Improvements made for a public use, by a railroad company in possession, with the right to condemn do not belong to the owner of the land, and the value thereof will not be allowed him as damages on condemnation. The maxim Quicquid plantatur solo, solo cedit, does not apply in such a case. p. 528. Evidence of average monthly profits of the business conducted on the premises is admissible upon the question of the loss during the time necessarily consumed in moving. p. 422. Where there is conflicting evidence the court will not set aside the verdict; it will interfere only when the amount fixed is contrary to all the proofs when it will be its duty to resubmit the case to another jury. Id. It is not intended that the right given the jury to personally examine the premises shall permit them to disregard the sworn testimony in fixing the assessment of damages. Id. A new trial should not be refused because the railroad corporation had entered giving bond pending appeal and had made such changes therein as would prevent a new jury viewing it as it was when the proceeding for condemnation was begun. Id.

Protection of navigation within state limits. The Legislature may authorize building a structure tending to obstruct the navigation of a river altogether within its own boundary; it is only when Congress acts as to such obstructions that its will must be obeyed so far as necessary to insure free navigation. p. 540. The reasonable obstruction of navigation by the repair of a lawful bridge in replacing a drawspan creates no right of action in favor of parties entitled to navigate the river, although it was possible to have avoided all obstruction to navigation by another mode of repair which would have involved unreasonable delay and expense. Id. Where a river navigation company acquired by statute only the improvements belonging to the State in its corporate capacity, as distinguished from what was subject to public use under common right, and not any exclusive right of navigation, it has no right of action against a railroad company for the obstruction of navigation by repairing a bridge, under a license valid against the public, when the improvements included in the lease were not injured or interfered with. Id.

Taxation; due process of law. The denial of due process of law resulting from a statute which assumes to confer authority upon the county board of equalization to increase the valuation of property of an individual taxpayer without giving him an opportunity to be heard, renders such provisions unconstitutional. p. 655.

Public property not taxable. Property of a municipality acquired and held for governmental and public uses, and used for public purposes, is not a taxable subject, within the purview of the tax laws, unless specially included. p. 148. It seems that this principle, unless expressly made so by statute, does not depend upon the origin of the title, whether acquired by purchase or voluntary grant, or as the product of taxation; nor does it depend on the locality of the property—whether situate within or without the territorial limits of the municipality. Id. The landing place of Fulton Ferry, in the City of Brooklyn, which has been occupied and used as an incident to the ferry franchise, being held and used for public purposes, is not taxable in Brooklyn, unless special authority to tax it is given by the Legislature. Id. That the City of New York operates the ferry through leases, and derives its revenues from the rental, does not make the franchise or the landing taxable. Id.

Exemption. The burden of proof is on a taxpayer claiming that he has not been allowed an exemption, to show that he has not, at some time or place, received it. p. 858.

Assessment of omitted property. A statute authorizing assessments of property omitted from the assessment made by the regular assessor, or an additional assessment, where the first one has been made upon an inadequate valuation, is not unconstitutional. p. 858.

Collateral Inheritance Act. The Act taxing certain property thereafter given by will is not an exception to the general provision of the Revised Statutes that "Every law shall begin to take effect only on the twentieth day after its final passage." p. 825. The provision that certain estates shall not be subject to the collateral inheritance tax applies, not to the whole estate, but to the portion passing to the legatee or devisee. Id. The statute requiring, as a condition precedent to probate proceedings, payment to the county treasurer, of specified sums arbitrarily prescribed with reference to the value of the estate, is in violation of the constitutional clauses requiring equality of taxation, and the dispensation of justice freely and without purchase. p. 701.

Real property. Real property must be assessed to the owner thereof, unless it is occupied and the owner unknown. p. 773. The owner, for the purpose of taxation, is the person having the legal title or estate, and not one who has a mere equity therein. Id.

Tax on mortgage not double taxation. The owner of a mortgage is taxable in the State of his residence, although the land mortgaged is in another State where taxes were paid upon it within the preceding twelve months. p. 860.

Interstate railroad bridges. The revenue statute does not require from officers of railroad corporations within Nebraska a return for assessment of the bridges constructed across the Missouri River, said river being a navigable stream, the right to bridge which can be obtained only by a law of Congress. p. 188. The state board of equalization would have no jurisdiction or authority to include such bridge within the line of roadbed of the railroad for taxation, and could therefore levy no legal tax thereon. Id. Such bridge not being within the definition of "roadbed, right of way and superstructure thereon," such part thereof as is within any county of this State would be liable to assessment and taxation by the local assessing and taxing officers of such county. Id.

Corporation stock. Taxation of shares of corporate stock in the hands of stockholders, as their individual property, is not double taxation because a tax has already been laid upon the property of the corporation, but from which the capital stock in the hands of the corporation is omitted. Such shares have no actual situs, and may be taxed where the corporation has its situs. p. 853. A construction, to the effect that under the Tax Laws of Ohio shares held by residents of stock of foreign railroad corporations having property in this State on which they pay taxes, and of consolidated railroad companies, are not taxable, does not bind the State in the proper assessment and collection of taxes upon such shares. p. 556.
2 L. R. A.

Corporate securities. The constitutional provision requiring uniformity of taxation is not violated by a section of the statute which makes any scrip, bond or certificate of indebtedness, etc., taxable upon its nominal value; while a prior section provides that "All mortgages, money paid by solvent debtors, etc.," shall be taxable at a certain rate on their value. p. 798. All interest-bearing indebtedness of private corporations is made a separate class for the purpose of taxation; and such classification is justified by the peculiar nature of corporate securities. Id. The word "of" in a statute, being intended for "off" will not be permitted to affect the plain meaning of the Legislature. Id. The provision of the Act that "No person shall be required to include in his statement, as a part of the personal property, moneys or credits, any share or portion of the capital or property of any company which is required to list or return its capital and property for taxation in this State," does not apply to shares of a foreign corporation, although the capital is taxed elsewhere; nor does it apply to shares of a company formed by the consolidation of companies of other States, notwithstanding such company pays taxes elsewhere on the portion of its property which is situated here. p. 556.

Corporate bonds. The bonds of a corporation are not taxable in a State where the owner does not reside; nor can a citizen be taxed thereon in a county where he does not reside; although it is the situs of the corporation. p. 853.

Corporation as collector of tax on its securities. A corporation may be compelled by statute to act as collector of a tax on its securities, by deducting it from the interest due thereon and returning it into the state treasury, instead of paying it to the holders of the securities. p. 798. But the corporation may contest the constitutionality of such a law. Id. An Act requiring a corporation to so act as collector of a tax against the holders of its bonds having negotiable coupons was held invalid. It cannot be required to determine as to each coupon, whether it may lawfully reserve the tax from the interest or not. p. 853. The commissioners of taxes having deducted unearned premiums from the net surplus of an insurance company because it is less than 10 per cent of the capital, the regularity of the assessment must be determined by the valuation so fixed by them. p. 772.

Payment. Parol evidence is admissible to show that taxes were in fact paid by a person other than the one named as payer in the tax receipts. p. 512. A voluntary payment without duress of person or goods, of an assessment for grading and paving under a void or dinance, is a mistake of law, and cannot be recovered back. p. 626.

Payment by tenant in common. One who redeems property, in which he afterwards becomes a tenant in common, from a tax sale, is entitled to have the lien kept alive as against his cotenant. p. 172. Statutes relating to the preservation of a lien in favor of one tenant in common who pays taxes apply simply to a payment in the first instance, not to a redemption of the premises after a sale. Id. A suit for partition, brought by a tenant in common, will be defeated by a valid adverse tax claim to the premises, made by his cotenant. Id.

Municipal tax on railroads. A municipal ordinance levying a tax upon every railroad running through the corporate limits is not void as a tax on interstate commerce, nor as a violation of the principle of uniformity in taxation. p. 284.

License to practice medicine. The words in the statute, "suitable graduate in medicine," include one legally licensed to practice under the laws of the State, although never graduated as a doctor of medicine. p. 710.

Club liable for liquor license. A club properly organized in good faith under Public Acts cannot purchase liquors by the quantity and distribute them among its members receiving pay therefor by the glass, the proceeds to be used in purchasing other liquors, without being liable to pay a retail tax for selling such liquors and exhibit the tax receipt. p. 494. The servants, agents and employees of the club are liable equally with the principal. Id.

Tax title. Title acquired by taking actual possession of vacant land after having paid taxes thereon for seven years under color of title in good faith is such a fixed title as will enable one to defend his possession, or to recover possession from a subsequent taker. p. 512. A tax deed under an Act which provides that such deed shall be conclusive evidence of the regularity of the assessment, except for fraud, is a contract with the State; and a subsequent Act making such deed only prima facie evidence of such regularity is void; it impairs the obligation of the contract. p. 778. But parties may stipulate to waive the conclusive character of the deed. So an admission that if, in the judgment of the court, the person to whom the property was assessed was not the true owner, will make the tax deed void. Id.

Municipal corporations; contracts of. Under the New York City Charter conferring upon the common council the power and duty of deciding whether the provisions as to letting a contract by public advertisement shall be dispensed with, an ordinance delegating to the commissioner of public works power to decide whether work for the city shall be done by contract or otherwise is void as being an unlawful delegation of authority. p. 626. The certificate of the proper officer that certain work is necessary to complete a particular job for the city, or that any supply is needful for any purpose, is conclusive as between the contractor and the city, where there is no fraud, and the facts indicate that the necessity certified is a possible incident of such work or supply. p. 751. The conclusion of the officer specially charged with the determination of the question of the necessity of certain work or supplies for the City of New York, where the facts called for the exercise of his judgment, will not be reviewed by the court of appeals. Id. A contract with the City of New York, for a consideration, to substitute cherry for pine in finishing the interior of a public building in process of construction, need not be founded upon a sealed bid or proposal under the Consolidation Act, requiring contracts for extra work to be so founded. Id.

Control and care of streets. The power given to a municipal corporation by its charter to control and regulate streets does not give power to prohibit the circulation or giving away of any circulars, handbills or advertising cards in or upon any of the public streets and alleys of the city. p. 721. Where the alleys of a city have been dedicated to the public, no further action is required by the city to open them for public use. p. 56. They retain the character of alleys, although the lots on both sides thereof are owned by one person, and so intersected by a railroad as to make them practically impassable. Id. Where a dangerous piece of machinery is placed in an alley by the owner of abutting lots, and is allowed to remain for years, both the individual and corporation are guilty of negligence, and both are liable for injuries sustained thereby. Id. Municipal corporations, in Michigan, are held not liable for damages occasioned by grading or otherwise improving streets; they have no power to erect a bridge in a street over a railroad, and damages which would be caused by such a bridge must be provided for under the power of eminent domain. p. 54. The city is therefore liable for damages to abutting private property, occasioned by such bridge and its approaches. Id. A railroad company may, under the statute and the authority of a city ordinance, construct its railroad in a public street without being liable to abutting lot owners or others for damages; but cannot wrongfully and unnecessarily block up or obstruct a street. p. 59. Where a corporation lays out and plats its land as an addition to the city, a reservation, to itself, of the use of the streets for the purpose of a railroad, does not relieve the company from constructing, operating and maintaining its line of railroad in a legal and proper manner. Id. A city is liable for damages to private property occasioned by grading a street without the authority of an ordinance, passed as required by the Code. p. 606.

Street Railroads. The franchise of a street railroad company, for the transportation of freight and passengers, survives the dissolution of the corporation. p. 255. The company, although created for a limited period, may take from a city in which the title to streets is vested an interest in perpetuity which is irrevocable. Id. The resolution granting the franchise expressly providing for traffic contracts by another company to obtain a right to run cars over its tracks without limitation as to time gave an estate in perpetuity under the authority of the Constitution and laws of the State. Id. A law attempting to take away from a dissolved street railroad company, such franchise, and to direct its sale and transfer and the payment of the purchase price to the city, is unconstitutional. Id. An express reservation of power to repeal a charter gives no such authority. Id. The provisions of New York Laws 1860, § 48, that the repealing of a charter shall not impair any remedy existing against the corporation, its directors or officers upon a liability previously incurred, is a contract protected by the provisions of the Federal Constitution. Id. Whether the Attorney General can, to avoid multiplicity of suits, maintain another action in the name of the People to obtain a judgment declaratory of the rights and the liabilities of the several parties affected by dissolution—quære. Id. The law prohibiting leases of parallel roads does not prohibit traffic contracts for a portion of their length, where possession or control is not surrendered. Id. A contract between street railroad companies to make no change in rates of fare will terminate by force of its own limitation when a statute is passed reducing such rates. p. 884. A statute making it unlawful for the street railroad companies in a certain city to change the rates of fare does not impair the obligation of a contract between companies operating street railroads by which each has agreed to change the rates without the consent of the other. Id. Under the constitutional Amendment prohibiting the passage of a private or local bill giving to any corporation any exclusive privilege or franchise, an Act which gives to a corporation the right to a complete occupation of a street for underground railway purposes, is unconstitutional. p. 789. When the provision of the Rapid Transit Act has been complied with, and the determination of the commissioners to construct the road has been confirmed by the supreme court, after the giving public notice and opportunity to be heard, such decision of the supreme court, being the decision of a competent tribunal, will estop such owners from thereafter attacking the validity of such incorporation collaterally. p. 859.

2. COMMERCIAL RELATIONS.

Partnership. Though a partnership is not a person, it is a legal entity, and for some purposes a quasi person, with powers and functions exercisable by the partners severally or jointly. p. 838. In a limited partnership, the majority of the partners have no authority to change the location of the works, against the will of the minority. p. 43. Notice of dissolution, as in the case of a general partnership, is not necessary where a person attempting to become a special partner has by virtue of the Pennsylvania Act (Pub. Laws, 148), become liable as a general partner by reason of non-compliance with the provisions of that statute. p. 796.

Corporation; suit against. A corporation cannot be sued as such, on the ground that it is not a corporation, because suing the corporation as such is an admission of its existence. Defendants sued jointly with it cannot be charged in such an action with having, jointly with such corporation, usurped the rights of a corporation, etc. p. 92. In such a case, the facts showing that its existence has terminated must be set forth. Id. An answer which specifically denies an unlawful claim or unlawful exercise of such franchise, etc., is sufficient, without affirmatively justifying their right to its exercise. Id. The affirmative allegation of the existence of a corporation is mere surplusage. Id. The persons unlawfully claiming to be a corporation, and not the corporation, are the parties to be proceeded against. Id. A count based on the nonexistence of a corporation will not sustain a judgment which merely decrees a recovery of its franchises, and enjoins defendant from their exercise. Id.
9 L. R. A.

Conditions imposed upon foreign insurance companies. A person or corporation is liable under the statutes of Illinois for aiding a foreign insurance company in the transaction of insurance business in any manner; although not the agent of such company in the ordinary sense of the term, and although acting under a contract with the insured expressly stating that such person or corporation is his agent only. p. 840. It is a question of fact for the jury, whether a corporation acting under a contract which declares it to be the agent of the insured only in obtaining insurance from a foreign corporation, in any manner aids the foreign company in transacting its insurance business within the prohibition of the Act of 1869. Id.

Action against foreign corporation. In an action against a foreign corporation it is not necessary under the Texas Act of March 31, 1886, to allege that it had an agent or representative in the county, and that its principal office was also in the county; but it is enough to allege either that it had an agent or representative in the county, or that its principal office was there. p. 405.

Banking. The genuineness of the last indorsement on a check does not relieve the bank from scrutinizing preceding indorsements. p. 96. The liability of a bank to its depositor is not avoided by payment of money upon his check to a person who forges the name of the payee. Id. The depositor is not precluded from holding the bank liable for cashing his check on a forged indorsement, by the fact that a note and deed forged in the same manner had been palmed off on the depositor himself. Id. The entry in his bank book, of the payment of a check, puts him under no obligation to see whether the check was paid upon a forged indorsement or not. Id. Where the money was held by the bank as a mere deposit he is not entitled to interest on recovery of the money paid out on a forged indorsement. Id. A bank holding a check for collection has no right, unless specially authorized to do so, to accept anything in lieu of money. p. 491. If it surrenders a check to a bank on which it is drawn, and accepts a cashier's check or other obligation in lieu thereof, its liability to its depositor is fixed as much as if it had received the cash. Id. Where it has become liable to pay a check sent to it for collection, it cannot claim the benefit of any payment made in the mean time to the payee of the check by the drawer. Id. A check properly indorsed as for collection and sent by a national to a third bank to be collected, which is not accomplished until after such insolvency, is the property of the principal bank and may be recovered by it in a suit against such third bank. p. 700. Where money collected by a bank for another bank, under instructions for immediate return, is allowed to remain for several months with the collecting bank, which becomes insolvent without having made return, the banks for which the collection was made will not be considered a cestus que trust, but will be treated as an ordinary creditor. p. 480.

Warehousemen. Warehousemen in Alabama who deliver up cotton stored with them, to a third person producing their receipt therefor, may be held liable to the mortgagee of such cotton whose mortgage is properly recorded in another county, although they have no actual notice of the mortgage. p. 475.

Railroad corporations. The dominion of a railroad corporation over its trains, tracks and right of way is no less complete or exclusive than that which every owner has over his own property. The corporation may exclude whom it pleases when they come to transact their own private business with passengers, and admit whom it pleases when they come to transact such business. This applies to selling lunches to or soliciting orders from passengers for the sale of lunches. p. 848. A mere implied license, no matter how long enjoyed, to transact such business, is revocable at any time; and such revocation results from notice not to prosecute the business in the future. Id. One who persists in continuing the use of such license, after notice may be prevented by force sufficient to effectuate his expulsion from the premises. Id. Such licensee is not a servant or agent of the company. Id.

Property of railroad corporation. Property of railroad corporations is to all intents and purposes private property, although applied to a use in which the public have an interest. p. 680. Where a railroad company took title to a portion of mortgaged premises from one who acquired title by adverse possession, subsequently to the execution of the mortgage, and the validity of such title was not litigated in the foreclosure suit, the company was estopped by the decree from setting up its title so acquired, in a proceeding thereafter instituted by it to condemn the mortgaged land to railroad uses. p. 628.

Consolidated railroad corporation. While the Constitution of this State provides that no foreign railroad corporations doing business in this State shall be entitled to exercise the right of eminent domain, or acquire the right of way or real estate for its uses, until it becomes a body corporate of this State, it does not prohibit existing companies from becoming a body corporate by consolidation, if done pursuant to the laws of this State. p. 564. Where two corporations consolidated their stock and franchises into one corporation or joint stock company, to be known as the "Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company," under the provisions of law by virtue of such consolidation, it thereby became a body corporate of this State, and was therefore not a foreign corporation. Id.

Stockholders may enjoin transfer of stock. A stockholder may, without consulting the directors, bring an action to enjoin them from unlawfully transferring the stock to a consolidated corporation. p. 594. An answer alleging that the consolidation had been made and ratified by the stockholders will not be construed as meaning that the stockholders applying for the injunction assented thereto, where the Act under which the consolidation was attempted, allowed a consolidation by a majority vote. Id. The Legislature cannot authorize the consolidation of a corporation under the general power reserved to alter or annul the charter, when the rights of stockholders will thereby be affected, unless the consolidation is made by the unanimous consent of the stockholders. Id.

Carrier of passengers. A regulation of a railroad company, by which, although a passenger may himself get off at a regular station he will not be sold a ticket to that place or his baggage checked to or delivered at that station, but will be compelled to pay for a ticket to another station a mile distant, and go there for his baggage, is unreasonable, arbitrary and invalid. p. 489. The reasonableness of such a regulation is within the province of the court as a matter of law. Id. Exemplary damages may be awarded for refusal to sell a passenger a ticket or to check his baggage to a regular station in pursuance of such a regulation. Id.

Carrier by water. A passenger is entitled to protection as such as well while leaving the vehicle and returning as at any other time. p. 88. A passenger on a steamboat, who has purchased a ticket not entitling him to meals, can properly go on shore for them at an intermediate stopping place, and has a passenger's right to protection during his egress, for that purpose. Id. A carrier of passengers is bound to exercise the utmost care and diligence in providing against those injuries which human care and foresight can guard against. This is the rule at all times and in all places while the relation of passenger and carrier exists. Id. "Utmost care and diligence" mean the utmost consistent with the carrier's undertaking, and with a due regard for all other matters considered in conducting the business. Id. When a proper place of exit is provided, a warning not to leave at another part of the boat is a reasonable regulation; and disobedience thereof will prevent the passenger's recovery from the carrier for an injury growing out of it. Id. Effects of passengers, not in daily use or attached to the person, are not only to be contributed for, but are liable to contribute, in general average. p. 287.

Carrier of goods. Liability cannot be avoided by the road last named on the through bill of lading by the simple fact that it pushed the cars to the track of another railroad and procured that road to haul them with its engine a short distance and deliver them to the mills to which the goods were shipped. p. 102. A complaint alleging that defendant, a connecting railroad of a continuous line, received machinery which it negligently transported, states only a common-law action and does not raise the question of liability of the last of several railroads under the Georgia Code, making such railroad liable for damage to goods received in good order from the shipper. Id. The carrier may be liable for damage caused by the weather or rust, if occasioned by its negligence or by unreasonable delay, although the goods were shipped at the owner's risk. Id. Though a shipper agrees to transportation upon open cars, the carrier may still be liable for such damage during detention on the road, if the carrier failed to cover the cars during such detention. Id. A contract in a bill of lading for a shipment from Boston to Atlanta, although not a good contract if made in Georgia, can be enforced in that State if a good contract in Massachusetts and not intended to take effect wholly in Georgia, but to be partly performed in different States, including Massachusetts. Id.

Carrier of stock. A common carrier has no right to demand of a shipper a waiver of his rights, as a condition precedent to receiving freight (p. 75); and a custom cannot repeal or suspend a law. Hence, evidence of a custom requiring the owner of stock to hold railroads harmless against ordinary delays in taking up freight is inadmissible. Id. So a custom of railroads not to receive for transportation any live stock, unless under certain conditions modifying their common-law liability, would be contrary to law and public policy. Id. A carrier has the duty to feed and water stock during transportation, and cannot transfer it to the shipper by a custom requiring him to go along on the same train with the stock. Id. A custom cannot require a shipper expressly to agree that he would give notice before removing the stock, as a condition precedent to right of recovery for loss. Id. A custom in delivering stock at destination cannot be stated by a witness unless it is shown that the custom is uniform, reasonable and notorious. Id. Nor can a shipper, by custom, be required to agree that his measure of damages shall not be more than the cash value of the stock shipped, at the place of shipment. Id. Where the contract is in writing, testimony cannot be elicited from the shipper on cross examination as to its nature. Id. But he may give his opinion as to what the value of the stock would have been at its destination if not injured in transportation. Id. The measure of damages, where mares are with foal when shipped, and lose their foal on the way, if the loss is total, is the price, less freight charges, they would have brought if delivered in reasonable time having had due and necessary care while in the carrier's possession; and if the loss is partial, it is the difference between such price, less freight, and the actual value of the animals as delivered. Id. A carrier is not guilty of conversion where he in good faith takes goods from the possession of the owner, by the direction of another having the apparent control of the goods, and delivers them to such other person in another place. p. 80.

Telegraph company. A telegraph company which has, by mistake, changed the first name of the person to whom the message is sent, is not liable for damages consequent on the failure of a connecting line to deliver the message promptly, when, by the exercise of due diligence it would have been delivered to the proper person. p. 801. A printed condition on a telegraph blank, "This company is hereby made the agent of the sender, without liability to forward any message over the lines of any other company when necessary to reach its destination"—is reasonable. Id. Delay in delivering a telegram stating the death of a relative will not subject the company to damages based on injury to fraternal feelings from inability to attend the funeral. p. 766.

Telephone company. A telephone company having special franchises and privileges is subject to public regulations; and the State has power to fix and prescribe a maximum rate to be charged by it for telephone service. p. 278.

3 L. R. A.

Power to fix rates is not conferred upon a city by provisions in its charter, giving power to "license, tax and regulate" business; nor is such power included in the general municipal police power. p. 278.

Liability of officers for debts of corporation. The liability imposed on the officers of a corporation for debts of the corporation incurred while they were officers, if any certificate, report or notice by them shall be false in any material representation, is in the nature of a penalty, and cannot be enforced by the courts of another State. p. 779. A judgment rendered in one State against directors, under an individual liability statute for debts of their corporation, the original claim being a penalty for a false certificate, cannot be enforced in another State. The original claim is not changed by reduction to judgment. Id.

Liability of stockholder for corporate debts. When a corporation, lessee of property, permits waste thereon, for which the lessor recovers damages, the judgment obtained on the claim is an "indebtedness" for which any stockholder is liable to the amount unpaid on his stock. p. 270.

Pledge of corporate stock. Railroad bondholders, to whom stock has been mortgaged as collateral security, cannot in equity charge the lessor of the mortgaged road with the earnings derived under the lease, when such lease is not alleged to be void or voidable as between the parties to it. p. 467. That the mortgage for such stock was given by the State does not bind the State to use its controlling interest in the road exclusively in the interest of its mortgagees of the stock, nor to impress the earnings received by the lessor of the road with a trust for the benefit of such mortgagees. Id.

Purchaser of corporate stock. A bona fide purchaser of stock standing on the company's books in the name of a former owner, and indorsed by him in blank, is not negotiable. p. 886. It is not permissible to prove a custom or usage to the contrary; as no usage is good which conflicts with an established principle of law. Id. A guaranty of a certain per cent in dividends so long as the purchaser should retain the stock sold him, given by a firm, is not limited to the duration of the partnership or the lives of the copartners. p. 183. A guaranty of the amount of dividends that shall be received from the stock, made as inducement to the purchase of the stock, is an original, and not a collateral, undertaking. Id. A purchaser at execution sale, of stock in a corporation, previously transferred in good faith on the books of the corporation as collateral security, acquires no title by such purchase, so as to make him chargeable with liability, as stockholder, to the creditors of the corporation. p. 476. The transfer of stock on the books of a corporation, by persons holding it as collateral security to such purchaser, does not make him liable as a stockholder, where such transfer is made without his request or knowledge. Id.

Chicago Board of Trade. The doctrine that when private property is devoted to a public use it ceases to be jure privati, subject only to public regulation, applies to the furnishing of market reports to the public by the Chicago Board of Trade. p. 411. The Chicago Board of Trade cannot discriminate between persons and say that anyone shall not receive the market reports, when he is willing to conform equally with others to reasonable rules on the subject and pay for the information. Id. The Chicago Board of Trade, and the telegraph companies acting in connection with it, have no right to refuse to furnish another "exchange" corporation organized for buying and selling grain with the regular telegraphic "ticker" market quotations—where such exchange was willing to conform to the regulations of the board of trade and to pay for the same, it not being engaged in a gambling or "bucket shop" business. Id.

Conspiracy to monopolize trade; sugar trust. The formation of the "Sugar Refineries Company"—an unincorporated association composed of a board of trustees created under a deed of trust executed in the names of certain sugar refining corporations and partnerships, owning nearly all the sugar refineries in the country—is to be considered as the corporate act of the corporations concerned and not simply the individual act of the stockholders. p. 38. Such trust, being in effect the uniting of corporations concerned into a practical consolidation or partnership, not authorized by their charters nor effected under the statutes in reference to consolidation of corporations, is ultra vires and warrants the forfeiture of corporate existence, and its dissolution at the suit of the people. Id. Such combination being the centralization of corporate franchises in a single irresponsible power, furnished with every delegated facility for regulating and controlling at will, throughout the country, the production and price of a particular and necessary article of commerce, viz.: refined sugar—creates a monopoly in a legal sense, is detrimental to the public, and is consequently unlawful. Id.

Restraint of trade. Under the Constitution of Georgia, a purchase by a railway company in Georgia of the contract to construct the line of a competitive company, with a view to prevent its construction, is illegal and void. p. 120.

3. CONTRACTUAL RELATIONS.

Bills, notes, etc. A telegram by a bank offering to pay a draft means at the bank's place of business, and imposes no obligation to accept "with exchange" on another place. p. 709. One who indorses a note in blank, whether by writing his name above or below that of the payee, is liable, prima facie, as a maker, and may be sued as such. p. 428. A note given for borrowed money with interest, stipulating for every $10 so advanced to deliver to the lender for storage and sale on commission one bale of cotton, in default of which he should pay as liquidated damages storage for one month, and commissions for selling, is not usurious if the advance is made by a warehouseman or commission merchant; but if there is no reasonable expectation of his being able to deliver it, the contract is usurious. p. 589.

Conversion of negotiable instrument. Payment of a judgment for the conversion of a promissory note, left with converter by payees and holders for discount, gives title to the note as of the date of the conversion, which was merely the obligation of the makers, no contract of indorsement having been consummated, by reason of the refusal to discount the note, and retaining it. p. 449.

Building contract. A written contract for building a house, stipulating that no charge for extra work or materials shall be made unless ordered in writing, will not prevent recovering for extra expense incurred on the express agreement of the other party to pay for it, or on his request therefor, under circumstances implying consent irrespective of the written contract. Parties cannot, by contract, tie up their freedom of dealing with each other. p. 625. When a building contract provided that the decision of the architect should be conclusive it was an implication, indispensable to the effectuation of the purpose of the parties, that such decision should be an honest one. p. 544.

Consideration. The surrender of a prior mortgage with accrued interest is a valuable consideration for a new mortgage. p. 784. Whether a mortgagee is chargeable with notice of a prior unrecorded mortgage in possession of the attorney who acted in both transactions, and whose duties to both were consequently conflicting—quære. Id.

Continuing guaranty. A guaranty creating a continuing pecuniary obligation, the consideration for which is given once for all, is not terminated by the death of the guarantor, unless such intention is plainly in the guaranty itself. p. 188. Where a man gives his note jointly with his sons, to raise money for the use of the sons' firm, and he executes a mortgage to secure the note, all parties are bound as principals, although, as between themselves, he may be merely a surety. p. 589.

Insurance policies. The receipt of insurance policies, under a written agreement that they shall be returned if policies held by the insured in other companies should not be surrendered on terms satisfactory to him, is an acceptance of the policies only upon a condition precedent; and no valid contract is thereby created until the condition is complied with. p. 150. A creditor who insures the life of his debtor, and takes a policy for his own benefit, is entitled to hold all he can recover on the policy, if there is not such a gross disproportion between the debt and the amount of the policy as to make the transaction a speculation or wager. A life policy is but a chose in action for the payment of money, and may be assigned as such under the Maryland Act. p. 844. A certificate of life insurance payable to the devisees or heirs at law of the insured, where insured dies intestate without issue, is payable to his widow. p. 161. A fire policy cannot be reformed to cover the interests of children of insured, when nothing was said at the time of the insurance as to the nature of the interest insured. p. 64. Where an agent, to effect insurance was fully apprised of the illiteracy of the insured, and he knew the extent of her title, a policy will not be void because she is not the absolute and unconditional owner. Id. An agent issuing an insurance policy, with full power to do so, will be regarded as the principal—however his knowledge may have been acquired. Id. A policy insuring horses, with other personal property, as "all contained in above described barn," against fire and lightning, and excluding personal property while removed from the particular building, does not cover a horse killed by lightning while in a field at pasture. p. 52.

Leases. A provision in a lease of a building that if during the term the premises should be rendered partially untenable by fire or the elements, but the business of the lessee could still be conducted therein while the lessor should repair the same as soon as practicable, and during the time of repair the basement became untenable, by reason of water percolating under the basement walls—held, that only some sudden, unusual or unexpected action of the elements, as floods, tornadoes and the like, are referred to in the lease. p. 849. A lease for fourteen years, with a covenant to renew for another fourteen years, is a lease for a longer period than fifteen years, within the meaning of the Maryland Act making leases for more than fifteen years redeemable at the lessee's option, after the expiration of ten years. p. 711. The lessee cannot waive his option of redemption by agreement; the act not being for his exclusive benefit, but being based upon ground of public policy. Id. A lease made on the 15th day of December, 1887, for the year 1888, may be valid, although not in writing, under Mississippi Code. p. 847.

Sales. Where a contract for the sale of sugar of a certain test and color, to be shipped from a foreign port, is performed by the seller by delivering it on board the vessel at the port of shipment, where he assumes no risks of the voyage he is not responsible for any deterioration in the strength or color. p. 519. The words in the contract, "The sugars to be thoroughly sampled and tested on arrival," will not imply an assumption of risk as to its condition or quality on arrival at the port of destination. Id. Although delivery of goods to a person in compliance with his request makes out a prima facie case of liability to pay for them, yet if the presumption is shaken the seller must show an assumption of liability to him to pay money. p. 697. If a contract is usurious no custom can legalize it. p. 589. If a lender of money charges a greater price for selling and storing cotton than he charges for the same services where no money is loaned the contract is usurious. Id.

Statute of Frauds. The provisions of the Statute of Frauds in reference to a note or memorandum in writing, of an agreement, does not require the whole agreement to appear in a single writing. p. 212. A memorandum is sufficient to support an action for the price of goods sold, where a verbal order containing necessary particulars was given to a traveling salesman and the buyer, after the goods were shipped, wrote to the seller "Don't ship paint ordered through your salesman; we have concluded not to handle it." Id. An executed consideration avoids the Statute of Frauds. p. 697. So, if one furnishes goods upon an executed consideration he cannot maintain an action to recover for their price although the original agreement was void under the Statute of Frauds. Id.

Sale of seed wheat; contract, when complete. Where, upon a bona fide sale of seed wheat, the amount of wheat specified in the seed grain note was in a bin containing a larger quantity, out of which the purchaser was to take away the wheat purchased—weighing or measuring is not absolutely essential to a completed sale except when necessary to define the subject matter. p. 409. Where the seed grain is actually and in good faith sold and furnished for seeding purposes, and a portion of the amount received is appropriated by the maker of the note, and not sown on the land, that fact will not defeat the lien of the seller, for the price of that portion actually sown, upon the crop grown therefrom. Id. The statute authorizes the holder of a seed grain note, upon condition broken, to take possession of the crop raised from the seed for which it is given; and the holder thereof may maintain an action against the holder of a subordinate lien thereon for the conversion thereof. Id.

Literary services. A recovery upon a quantum meruit cannot be had for literary services under a contract which provides that compensation therefor is to be derived solely from a division of profits from sales after publication. p. 159.

Contracts in relation to right of way of railroad. A written agreement by the grantor of the right of way to a railroad company, to fence it on each side through his lands, will not affect the right of a subsequent purchaser to require the company to fence its road. p. 199. The mere use and occupation of the right of way by the company and its successors for the purpose of a railroad will not constitute constructive notice of the existence of such agreement. Id. A stipulation in a deed of right of way to a railroad company, that the company shall construct and maintain a fence along its right of way where land is used solely for pasturage, cannot be enforced by a subsequent owner of such land. It is not a covenant running with the land. p. 281.

Remedy or practice cannot be ingrafted by contract. A judgment by confession in an action of forcible detainer upon a warrant of attorney in a lease, is coram non judice and void. A party cannot ingraft by contract a remedy or practice not warranted by statute. p. 717.

Action; abatement of. A suit does not abate by reason of the nonresidency of some of the defendants; but the nonresident defendants who have been properly served by publication or otherwise, and who fail to appear, are nevertheless bound. p. 120.

Limitation of. A mortgage which contains a covenant to pay the sum thereby secured is not barred in six years, under the Indiana Statute. p. 189. The Statute of Limitations may be set up in the orphans' court precisely as in a court of law, and is not tolled by a mere demand upon an executor. p. 159. Where a suit on coupons is barred by the statute, overdue interest on the bonds cannot be included in an action on such bonds. p. 358. The fact that the Statute of Limitations has run against an obligation unenforceable by reason of some vice or defect, which may be cured or waived by the debtor, does not bar a cause of action on a new obligation growing out of the old one, when the vice or defect is waived. p. 603. A defense of the statute properly arises under a demurrer when the facts creating the bar are shown by the complaint. p. 779.

Garnishment process. Garnishment process served within the State upon a resident common carrier will not reach property not actually within the State but in course of transportation by the carrier to a point without the State. p. 417.

Security for costs required of nonresident. An independent foreign government is "a person residing without the State," within the meaning of New York Code of Civil Procedure, requiring security for costs. p. 642. When a deposit of money as security for costs has once been made, the court has no authority to require any additional security. Id.

Doctrine of lis pendens. The doctrine of lis pendens affects only those who purchase from parties to the suit. p. 48. It applies only to a purchaser pendente lite; hence, the purchaser will not be affected with notice of a pending suit, involving simply the title to the mortgage, not to the land. Id. The rule applies to a purchaser from a husband pending a divorce suit. p. 615. Joint obligors will be affected by acts of their co-obligor and will not be released, by erroneous payment, from their joint personal liability to the actual owner of the bond and mortgage. p. 48.

Arbitration and award. An express agreement not to revoke, and to waive any right to revoke, a submission to arbitration does not prevent a revocation thereof, under New York Code, at any time before the closing of the proofs and the final submission of the cause for decision. p. 180. Making a claim to land and erecting a fence thereon, after an adverse award by arbitrators as to the boundary line, does not constitute a breach of a stipulation "to abide by and perform the award;" the remedy is by an action of tort. p. 532. Fraud in the decision of the arbiter may be set up in a suit on the contract, in avoidance of his decision, even though it does not appear that the party who would benefit by it has colluded. p. 544.

4. FIDUCIARY RELATIONS.

Attorney or agent. An attorney has no lien on the land in controversy nor any claim against defendants personally for his fees under Kentucky General Statutes, giving an attorney a lien on a demand arising out of contract for collection on judgment, and on property recovered, upon the dismissal, in good faith, of an action, although against the consent of such attorney. p. 708. No person is entitled to demand or receive greater compensation for services rendered as agent or attorney in procuring a pension than that provided by statute, although such person is not recognized by the commissioner of pensions as a pension agent or attorney. p. 745. An attorney who has done a large amount of business for a client in investing money upon mortgages will not be held, in the absence of evidence, to have remembered facts at the time of taking a mortgage on the same property for another client, so as to charge the latter with notice of the prior mortgage. p. 784. An attorney, who has prepared deeds of trust and been consulted as to the purposes for which they were made, cannot afterwards, on purchasing the land included therein, on an execution sale, maintain a suit to set aside such deeds as fraudulent. p. 78.

Agent in charge of business. An agent placed in charge of a retail store to conduct the business, with express authority to use money especially deposited for that purpose, is a general agent with special powers, and cannot bind the principal by a purchase on credit. p. 808. In order to bind a principal by ratification, assent or acquiescence in prior acts, a knowledge of the material facts must be brought home to him. Id. Any evidence is relevant on an issue as to the implied, in excess of express, authority of an agent, which shows prior, similar acts, and which tends to prove or disprove the knowledge of the principal, and reliance on the part of those dealing with the agent upon the principal's recognition of such acts. Id. Where a man on leaving gave an agent authority to purchase goods, which he revoked on his return from a temporary absence, it is a question for the jury whether the parties dealing with the agent had notice of such revocation. Id. The knowledge of an agent, to operate as constructive notice to the principal, must have been acquired after the relation of principal and agent was formed. Id. That the principal might have known that the agent was exercising power in excess of his authority, if he had exercised ordinary diligence, does not estop him from denying such authority. He may act on the presumption that third parties dealing with the agent will not be negligent in ascertaining the extent of his authority. Id. To hold a principal chargeable with knowledge which his agent obtained on a prior occasion in an independent transaction, it must be shown that the knowledge was in the mind of the agent at the very time of the later transaction. p. 784.

Knowledge of agent; effect of. If an agent recollected a prior mortgage, but honestly though mistakenly believed it had been satisfied, the principal for whom he takes a subsequent mortgage will not be chargeable with knowledge of the former one by reason of the agent's knowledge. p. 784. The burden of proof to show that an agent had in mind knowledge gained by him on a former occasion, and in a different transaction, is on the party who seeks to charge the principal with notice by reason of such knowledge. Id.

Persons dealing with agent. The rule that a seller who deals with the agent of an undisclosed principal can, upon discovering the principal, resort to the latter for payment, does not apply in a case in which the agent bought contrary to instructions, and the seller gave credit to the agent, and the principal has in the mean time paid the agent. p. 749. Where the principal settles with his agent in good faith supposing the latter had purchased for cash supplied to him for the purpose, or upon his personal credit, he is not liable to the seller. Id.

Brokers. It is not the duty of a broker to buy in the corn within a reasonable time after the principal's refusal to supply the margin, where such refusal was accompanied by a promise to pay the losses when differences were settled. p. 896. Under the rules of the Chicago Board of Trade, where a broker sells for future delivery, the principal must furnish margins when demanded; and if he fails, the broker is authorized to buy produce to fill his contracts. Id. The sum paid a broker for corn purchased to fill a contract is a debt recoverable upon common money counts, as money advanced to defendant's use. Id. Interest is recoverable under statute, upon such advances made by a broker. Id.

Guardians of estates of insane. The provisions of general laws authorizing the organization of annuity, safe-deposit and trust companies, granting power to act as guardians of the estates of insane persons, are valid. p. 418.

Township trustees. A township trustee acts in a fiduciary as well as an official capacity, and is amenable to the rule which forbids an agent or trustee to have his interest conflict with his duty towards his principal or cestui que trust. p. 510.

5. DOMESTIC RELATIONS.

Husband and wife; antenuptial contract. A contract in consideration of marriage, where each releases all interest in the property of the other is upon a sufficient consideration. It is upon a valid consideration although the promise was made six years before the contract was drawn, as such contract merges mere oral negotiations. Such contract may be made by a woman who has an estate of her own, and no particular form of words is necessary; for, however informal, it will be effectual if the intention is manifest, and can be executed in law or in equity. Such a contract is generally considered a good bar to dower, and the word heirs, contained in it, includes any legal heirs, and excludes the claim of either as heir of the other. p. 872.

Contracts between. A wife cannot contract partnership with her husband under the Michigan statute giving a married woman the right to acquire separate property. p. 848. Nor can she contract jointly with him in reference to property held in entirety. p. 845. The doctrine of estoppel cannot be invoked to remove the incapacity of a married woman where her contract is utterly void for want of power or capacity to make it. p. 769. The parol agreement of a wife, in consideration of her husband's leaving her his property by will absolutely, to transfer the remainder to his heirs, may be enforced against her representatives, after her death, notwithstanding the Statute of Frauds. p. 662.

Inchoate right of wife in husband's property. The inchoate interest of a married woman in real estate of her husband is discharged from a mortgage in which she joined with him to secure a note given by him and others, when with the mortgagee's consent one of the makers of the note has been released or discharged by renewal or otherwise. Extension of time of payment of a note to which a married woman is not a party does not of itself discharge her inchoate right in her husband's property from a mortgage in which she has joined. p. 189.

Wearing apparel of family. In an action for the loss of a trunk containing clothing of wife and child the presumption is that the clothing was furnished by the husband and father. p. 716. Merely providing ordinary clothing by the husband does not make it the wife's property, within the statute providing that all property acquired by a wife, including that acquired by gift from or contract with the husband, shall become her separate estate. Id.

2 L. R. A.

Conveyance to husband and wife. A deed conveying real estate to a husband and wife conveys the same to them in entirety; and on the death of one, the survivor takes the entire estate. This rule of the common law has not been changed by statute in Kansas. p. 434.

Conveyances by. The grantee in a deed executed by a husband and his infant wife, married before the Enabling Acts were passed, but after that Act empowering her to sell by joining her husband in the conveyance, takes the husband's right to the possession and the wife's interest, subject to her right of disaffirmance, which she may do, on a bill filed during her husband's lifetime; and the Statute of Limitations does not run against her right to disaffirm until her coverture is ended. She is under no obligation before rescinding to refund purchase money not coming to her hands, but must pay her individual indebtedness canceled by grantee at the time of the conveyance as part of the consideration. p. 741. A conveyance of community property by the husband, with full statutory power to sell, passes the common title although he signs only as his wife's agent. p. 715.

Mortgage by. A married woman, who, with her husband, has executed a mortgage containing covenants of seisin, quiet possession and warranty, on her separate property, is, in Dakota, estopped from setting up against the purchaser on foreclosure any title subsequently acquired by her. p. 868. A mortgage by a wife on her separate property, in which her husband does not join, is void, although he has been absent fifteen years, although the man with whom she lives, believing him in good faith to be her lawful husband, joins with her in the instrument. The doctrine of estoppel cannot be invoked to remove her incapacity to contract where her contract is void for want of power to make it. p. 769.

Divorce; decree for wife's support. On a divorce granted to the wife for causes other than adultery, the court may decree to her the title of her husband's property under statutes authorizing it, to be "set apart" for her support. p. 615. In such case the rule of lis pendens applies to a purchaser pending the divorce suit. Id. Nor is a sale by the husband taken out of the rule merely because the wife told him he might sell it. Id.

Sale pending divorce. A sale by a husband, pending divorce, in which a decree is asked setting apart the property to the wife, is not taken out of the rule of lis pendens by the fact that the wife told him he could sell it if he wanted to, and that she wished he would, where the purchaser had no knowledge of such statements. p. 615. A suit in equity to set aside such deed will not be defeated on the ground that she had a remedy at law. Id.

Master and servant. A master has no right of action for an assault, or an assault and battery, upon his servant, unless some loss of service or capacity to serve results therefrom. p. 843.

6. SOCIAL RELATIONS.

Fraternal societies. A subordinate lodge, duly incorporated under state laws, cannot be deprived of the possession and control of property belonging to it by the grand lodge of the order with which it is connected, although under the constitution of the order it has been suspended by the grand lodge. p. 841.

Financial aid associations. It is ultra vires a corporation created "to give financial aid and benefit to the widows, orphans and heirs or devisees of deceased members," and declared by statute not to be an insurance company, to contract for "endowment insurance" payable to a member on his arriving at a certain age. The plea of ultra vires is maintainable by it as a defense to an action for such endowment insurance. p. 420. The beneficiary certificate or policy is valid as a certificate or policy payable to the widow or children of the plaintiff upon his death, and void only as a certificate or policy payable to him after being a member in good standing for twenty-five years or upon arriving at seventy years of age. Id. The assessments were not paid by insured to be retained to increase property of the association, but to be paid out to other persons entitled by virtue of beneficiary certificates, and it is to be presumed this was done; and the payment is not recoverable back. Id.

Railroad relief association. A railroad employé relief association cannot be bound by the declaration of a paymaster of the railroad company, so as to be rendered liable to an employé for benefits, where the railroad company was authorized to deduct dues only after being notified that the employé has been admitted to membership, and it had not been so notified. p. 44. A railroad paymaster is a servant, not an agent, of the railroad company. Id. Mortality tables have no connection with a suit for weekly benefits. Id. In an action to recover benefits, testimony of the association's medical examiner may be admitted to show that plaintiff had not become a member. Id. Benefits accruing after commencement of suit are not recoverable in an action of assumpsit. Id. The measure of damages in such action is the sum stipulated by the constitution and by-laws. Id. An injury which incapacitates a member from labor, but which permits him to earn as much at some other employment, will not entitle him to benefits for a "total inability to labor." Id. Receipts for benefits as a former member are not admissible to show the rules and regulations of the association. Id.

Mutual benefit association. For a substantial breach of the contract contained in a policy to pay a percentage of an assessment upon the happening of a certain event, the beneficiary may recover substantial damages in an action at law. p. 786. The question whether or not the beneficiary in a policy issued by a mutual benefit association has mistaken his remedy in bringing an action at law to compel an assessment to pay his claim may be raised by demurrer. Id. Upon demurrer to a complaint alleging the refusal to make an assessment and also that plaintiff's share of the assessment would be a certain amount, the court cannot say, as matter of law, that plaintiff has only sustained nominal damages by reason of such refusal, merely because it may be difficult, in advance of a levy, to ascertain the precise damages to which plaintiff is entitled. Id.

Minors as members. Minors are not, merely because of their minority, disqualified from becoming members of mutual benefit societies, in the absence of any statute on the subject. p. 549.

Benefit certificate, as a contract. When a benefit certificate is sent by the supreme lodge to a subordinate lodge, for a person who has passed a medical examination which has been approved, the contract between the applicant and the supreme lodge is complete. p. 206. An action on a benefit certificate may be maintained without producing it at the trial, when it is in the possession of a subordinate lodge, which had refused to deliver it on the ground of fraud. Id. In such action the failure of defendant to deny an explicit averment that there was duly prepared a paper in the usual form is an admission of the execution of the certificate. Id.

Notice of assessment. Although the charter prescribes what notice of assessment shall be sufficient, and limits it to notice by posting, yet, if the company adopts the practice of sending written notice by mail, and as soon as informed, payment was tendered, the company is estopped from claiming the forfeiture. p. 118. Forfeitures are not favored by the law; and where the company misleads the insured his rights will be protected, and the company estopped from claiming a forfeiture, under the letter of the contract. Id. In matters affecting the execution of contracts, estoppel has no significance when the contract has been complied with. Id.

Right of action by beneficiary. When a mutual benefit life insurance association refuses to make an assessment in a proper case, the remedy is by an action for a breach of contract. p. 784. Unless the association establishes that the amount should be less, because all members do not respond to assessments, the measure of damages in such cases is the amount assessable upon all insured. Id. That the insured had used alcoholic drinks to such extent as to induce delirium tremens is not conclusive on the rights of the beneficiary, nor is he estopped by affidavits of physicians as to the cause of death. Id.

Dissolution of society; jurisdiction. Jurisdiction to decree the dissolution of a corporation may be conferred upon courts of equity by statute; and such jurisdiction is conferred by the Illinois Act in reference to mutual benefit societies. p. 549. A proceeding to dissolve a mutual benefit society, or to remove its officers, is not a criminal prosecution, but is a civil proceeding in equity to protect property rights. Id. Dissolution will be warranted where mortuary assessments were used to pay current expenses; or for the creation of a tontine reserve fund out of moneys collected for death benefits; or a promise to refund to members all the reserve fund to which they would be equitably entitled; or limiting and perpetuating the administration by means of a system of blank proxies; or numbering certificates of membership higher than the actual number issued; or for a failure to keep correct and intelligible books of account. Id.

7. PROPERTY AND PROPERTY RIGHTS.

Homestead right. Under the North Carolina Constitution, giving a homestead right in real estate, a person who moved with his family out of the State and then returned is not, while so living out of the State, although returning two or three times a year for the purpose of purchasing supplies and looking after property left there, a resident entitled to a homestead in North Carolina. p. 106. A change of residence, clearly manifested as matter of law by acts, cannot be defeated by a subsequent declaration of the person that he did not intend his acts to have such effect. Id.

Patent rights. When one has taken out two patents, the first for a novel composition of matter, the second for a combination of this composition with another article, such first patent may be set up as a prior patent to defeat his claim under the second. p. 357. The principle that an infringing article or machine made before the expiration of a patent cannot be used after such expiration does not apply to a combination of parts which is bona fide broken up and, after the expiration of the patent, recombined. p. 489. An order requiring a defendant to operate a machine invented by him for discovery as to such invention, which would in effect compel him to disclose his defense, is an improvident exercise of chancery powers, and will not support a commitment as for a contempt. p. 228. An English patent, if regular in form, is sufficient consideration to support a promissory note given therefor and made in Massachusetts. p. 168. A clause in a contract for its sale that "It is understood that said English patent is in full force and effect," means that the patent was to be "of effect" in a sense that a United States patent must be. Id.

Right of fishery. No rights in favor of fishermen now exist by virtue of the proviso in the Province Charter of Massachusetts Bay that the rights of English subjects to fish, etc., and to erect wharves, etc., upon waste lands not in the possession of particular proprietors should not be abridged. p. 87.

Right to use of navigable waters. A person who, after the erection of a bridge over a lake, has purchased boats and engaged in renting them, has no other rights than are enjoyed by other persons in respect to the navigation of the lake. p. 282.

Right to erect structures in navigable waters. The right of the City of New York to erect structures in the navigable waters of the State is subject to sovereign control; and the authority to grant such right to others than littoral owners inhibits such grants, except by implication, on compliance with the conditions annexed. p. 629. Lessees of a wharf may extend and improve it so as to increase its facilities; the pier becomes an accretion to the wharf and upon surrender of leased premises vests in the landlord title to the structures remaining thereon (Id.); and tenants who obtained the right to build a pier attached to the wharf are estopped to set up any right against their landlords except under the lease. Id. A tenant who has never surrendered his rights during the term, or committed any act which authorized a re-entry, can acquire no rights during that term by adverse possession. Id.

Reservation in town grant for landing places. A reservation in an ancient town grant of land "for landing places for the inhabitants of Gloucester forever," is a reservation for the 2 J. R. A.

public at large, and not merely for the inhabitants of the town. p. 87. Acceptance is not limited to those parts of the lands so reserved which were in actual use as landing places. Id. No acceptance by the public, or by the inhabitants of the town was necessary. Id.

Right to the use of running water. An adverse, exclusive and uninterrupted use of all the water of a creek, taken by ditch and conveyed for mining purposes for any period beyond that of the Statute of Limitations relating to entry upon land, bars the owner of the land through which the creek runs of his riparian rights; but where originally appropriated under a license, such adverse use, unless hostile to the owner, cannot be established. p. 568. The use must have been in defiance of any right upon the part of the owner to use it for any purpose. Id. To authorize one to claim a forfeiture of valuable property rights for violation of a condition of grant, he must proceed to enforce it at once. Id. Acquiescence in sales and transfers of the ditch and water-right must be deemed a waiver of the condition that they should not be sold by the miner. The case discusses the relative rights of parties under an arrangement between them for the use of the water for the several purposes of each party. Id.

Right of subrogation. An insurer, on payment of insurance covering only part of a mortgage debt, cannot take by subrogation from a mortgagee any part of his claim until the mortgage debt is paid in full. p. 667. A ship owner, who has recovered and received from the owner of another vessel damages for a collision, is answerable to the owner of the cargo (or to insurer subrogated to such owner's right) for the whole value received. p. 178.

Property rights; estate created by deed. A condition in a deed that, in default of payment for three consecutive years of the yearly payment, the conveyance might be revoked by repaying the amount already paid, is not opposed to public policy nor repugnant to the estate granted. p. 526. A demand of each annual payment on the day it becomes due is not necessary in order to create a forfeiture of the estate, the party bound having equal knowledge of the thing to be done and the time to do it. Id. Mere indulgence or silent acquiescence in the failure to perform a condition is never construed into a waiver, unless some element of estoppel can be invoked. Id. The vendor who executed and delivered a deed with the name of the grantee left blank cannot question the title of an innocent purchaser for value from him who fills up the blank. p. 529. A purchaser, although bound to take notice of the right claimed by one in possession, is not chargeable with notice of a claim which may subsequently accrue or a right which is not asserted. Id. Relinquishing other security in consideration of a transfer of land by deed absolute, but in reality as security, entitles grantee to protection as a bona fide purchaser against the defects in the grantor's title. Id. A purchaser at a judicial sale, who contracts for a deed on a day fixed, is entitled to a deed under a decree which will convey an unquestionable title on the day fixed, and should not be subjected to further proceedings to perfect title. p. 465. A covenant of warranty in a deed of land on which is situated a mill and dam embraces an easement claimed by the grantor as to ponded water occasioned by such dam on an adjoining tract of land of another person, and the grantees may maintain an action for breach of the covenant in respect to such easements. p. 285.

Estate created by will. The statutory provision that an exemplified copy of a will devising real estate executed by a nonresident or of the record thereof shall be presumptive evidence of the will and of its execution, does not render such will effectual to pass real estate in this State unless executed in accordance with the laws of this State. p. 425. A will giving property to a daughter with power to dispose of it by her own will in case she dies before her father, operates, in case of her death leaving a will, to devise and bequeath the property by its own force in accordance with her will. p. 198. A devise which assumes to give a life estate to the ancestor and the remainder in fee to the "heirs" of such ancestor (the word "heirs," being used in its technical sense and not as the intention to give only a life estate), will not control; but under the rule in Shelley's Case (in force in Illinois) the ancestor takes the fee. p. 455, disapproving and partly overruling Belkay v. Engel, 107 Ill. 182. The word "surviving," in a will devising property to a testator's wife for life, and adding: "But on her decease I give and devise the same to my surviving children to be divided equally between them," refers to the children surviving on the wife's decease. p. 448. A restraint upon alienation of an equitable life estate may be imposed by the settlor of the estate and will be enforced in equity. p. 118. A testator can disinherit his heirs or next of kin, only by leaving his property to others. Mere words of exclusion will not suffice. p. 849. A will which simply revokes all prior wills and declares that a certain son shall be excluded from all participation in the estate is a nullity. Id. A devisee of the legal estate in land, in possession of the property devised, there being no trust, cannot, in New York, maintain an action in equity to establish the will against the heir at law. p. 175. The Code of Civil Procedure which repeals the law which provides for determination of the validity of a will by the supreme court, provides for an action to determine such validity of a devise in a properly executed will, and not for an action to determine the validity of the will itself. Id. The revocation of a will by intentionally destroying it will not revive a former will which was expressly revoked by the later one. p. 833.

Sureties on official bond. Sureties to whom money of an estate has been loaned by an administratrix as a condition of becoming her sureties are not relieved from liability by repaying the money when a decree discharging her and them from their bond is subsequently vacated on the ground of fraud. p. 644. The sureties are not entitled to notice of a proceeding to vacate such decree, and are precluded from questioning any lawful order in a proceeding wherein she is a party, if obtained without collusion. Id.

Estute by descent. A grandchild whose father is dead and who has been adopted by his paternal grandfather cannot, if his grandfather dies intestate, inherit in a double capacity, as adopted son and as representative of his deceased father, but will take only one portion and that as adopted son. p. 698.

Right of administration of estate. Upon a petition for letters of administration, although it is not necessary to cite a citizen of the United States having a right to letters prior or equal to that of the petitioner, but residing in another State, yet if such person appears before the surrogate, and presents his claim before the issue of letters, his claim cannot be disregarded. p. 796. The right of a nonresident to sue is not one of the privileges and immunities granted to citizens of the several States by the Federal Constitution. p. 686. Appointment of a nonresident as administrator in this State does not authorize him to sue as a resident under New York Code of Civil Procedure. Id.

Partition of estate. Partition cannot be maintained where there has been an ouster of the complainant by acts so overt and notorious as to imply notice to his cotenants. p. 223. A tenant by curtesy in an estate which consists of coal mines and mining privileges has the right to work open mines even to exhaustion, although he is not tenant of the surface. p. 429. Where he had a share of the property delivered to him in severalty in partition, other parties to the partition cannot afterwards deny that he was a life tenant. Id. A devise of coal mines and mining privileges, separate from the estate in the surface of the land, includes the use of the surface so far as necessary for mining purposes, and the use of a pit mouth thereon. Id. When the record in a partition suit discloses the existence of persons not made parties who might have an interest, a purchaser will not be compelled to accept title, although such omitted persons were, by reason of alienage, incapacitated from having an interest. To be conclusive the record must establish their incapacity. p. 465. The burden of establishing alienage of persons otherwise interested in property is upon the plaintiff in partition. Id.

Property held in trust. Where a will gives property to trustees upon certain trusts, and directs that the trustees may sell the real estate and divide the net proceeds, if necessity compels the sale of part of the real estate before the ten years expires the proceeds of the sale will be held upon the same trusts and will not be distributed before the expiration of such time. p. 768. The limitation of the power of a cestui que trust to dispose of his interest in the income of property devised in trust, is valid; and an assignment by one son of his interest in rents and profits is not valid. p. 118. Where a father purchases land, and has it conveyed to his son, the presumption is that the purchase was intended to be an advancement to the son, and no trust results in favor of the father. But evidence is admissible to rebut this presumption, and show that a trust results in favor of the father. p. 816.

Estate of insolvent. An assignment made in New York, which is legal there, will not be held void in Georgia for failure to attach a schedule and inventory as the law of that State requires, where there is nothing to show that it was intended to have effect in Georgia, merely because debts due by citizens of that State to the assignors, were assigned in the Instrument. p. 99. The schedules are not part of the contract, and such contract is not within the rule that contracts made out of the State, which contravene the policy of the State, are void. Id. The status of a debt follows the creditor, and where the debtor and creditor reside in different States the law of the domicile of the creditor prevails. Id. An assignment in one State passes title to the property in another State as between residents of the former State, although never recorded in the latter State. p. 355. Statutes which relate to voluntary assignments by "insolvent debtors" and require sworn schedules of assets and creditors, assume the right of insolvent firms to assign the partnership property for the benefit of their creditors, though the partners themselves, as individuals, may be solvent. p. 328. When the schedules are in fact attached, failure of the writings to declare expressly on their face that they were then attached is of no consequence. Id. That one of the preferred debts was a due-note payable to the attorney who drafted the assignment and was given to him by the firm "for services and advice and counsel in reference thereto," does not render the assignment void per se. If no fraud was intended, but the amount of the note is more than services are worth, a proper deduction from the amount can be made, and the note be left to stand good against the assets for the balance only. Id. The statutory prohibition against preferences in the distribution of assets of insolvent national banks will not prevent a cestui que trust from following trust money held by such bank into any new investment thereof, capable of identification, but will prevent its being followed after it is mingled with the general funds of the bank. p. 480. The fact that the local statute provides that a creditor whose debt is mature and unpaid may ask for a receiver, is an exception to the rule making the existence of a lien a prerequisite to such an application. p. 158.

Unconstitutional laws regarding. A law which requires creditors to accept payment of obligations before maturity is unconstitutional. p. 255. So one making proof of the cost of an obligation the measure of the creditor's recovery, instead of the liability of the debtor as shown by the terms of his contract, is unconstitutional. Id. So a law which provides for the appointment of a receiver of a dissolved corporation and a transfer of its assets to him after the title to the property vested by dissolution to its directors, as trustees for stockholders and creditors, and which makes him a referee to take proof of claims and a judge to determine the materiality of evidence offered in their support, is unconstitutional. Id.

Uses and trusts; common school funds. Courts will take judicial notice that funds raised for the support of common schools pertain to the school corporation of a township, and can only be administered by the township trustee. p. 187. A school township is capable of taking a devise in trust for the support of common schools therein. And a bequest for such purpose is for a public and charitable use. Id. A devise or bequest will be held to be for the school township when the intention appears to create a fund for the support of common schools. Id. And where there is more than one township of the same name, evidence is admissible to prove which one was meant. Id. The trust does not fail if a corporation trustee is incapable of acting; the proper court may appoint a new trustee. Id.

Colleges. The provisions of the New York Revised Statutes as to the incorporation of colleges are not restricted to colleges incorporated by the regents of the university of the State, but apply also, except as otherwise provided, to colleges created by special charters. p. 887. The charter of Cornell University gives it power to take and hold property, by gift, grant or devise, to a certain limit in amount, and a devise or bequest which will exceed the limit of the amount it is entitled to take and hold is void for the excess. Id. The power to raise the question of its right to take the property is not confined to the State, but may be raised by the heirs or next of kin. Id. Where certain sums were given in trust to a university with directions to convert the estate into money, it operates as an equitable conversion of the estate, and no real estate of the testator is thereby devised. Id.

Trusts for charitable uses. It is competent to prove by parol evidence that land conveyed to a grantee by a deed absolute on its face is in fact held by him in trust for charitable uses; but such evidence should be clear, convincing and conclusive. p. 758. Where the grantee is Archbishop of the Roman Catholic Church, the canons and decrees of his diocese are competent evidence to show that it is so held in trust by him; and the courts will take cognizance, and assume control over it, for the purpose of preventing its abuse, perversion or destruction. Id. Where the property is held for separate uses, each use is a separate trust, and property held for such separate use cannot be charged with the expense of improving another. Id. Property so held in trust does not pass to the assignee of the trustee, whose assignment in insolvency passes no better or different title than the assignor had. Id. Although the several congregations and persons respectively having charge of churches, schools, cemeteries and asylums are severally unincorporated, yet they have such an interest in the trust property as permits their representation in court, for the purpose of protecting the trust property. Id. Changes in membership do not affect their legal identity, but they respectively remain in legal contemplation the same congregations and bodies. Id. The interest of the beneficiaries is measured by and limited to the uses for which the property is held, and a pecuniary interest need not be shown by them. Id. Where such trustee has made advances from his own private means, to assist in buying or improving the trust property, he has a claim upon the property so purchased or improved, which passes to his assignee in insolvency; and it is competent for the court to order an accounting with a view to subjecting such property to the satisfaction of such claim. Id. Such a trustee may charge the trust property with the reasonable expense of its necessary preservation, in favor of one who expends money, labor or materials for that purpose. Id. Where property is claimed by a church organization not incorporated, and the property is in dispute, any number of the members of such association or congregation may maintain an action for the benefit of the church, under Kansas Compiled Laws 1885, § 35, p. 146. Where the association purchases real estate for the benefit of such congregation, and the property is conveyed to some person in trust for such church, a trust is thereby created that may be enforced, although not in writing; and it can make no difference that the person to whom the land is conveyed is the bishop of the denomination of which said church is a part. Id.

Rights and remedies. Where the invasion of a right, if submitted to on the one hand and persisted in on the other a sufficient length of time, may result in its extinction, a remedy may be sought before actual damage has occurred. p. 87. Relief in equity may be had before plaintiff has established his rights at law, where the material facts out of which his rights arise are admitted; and if there is a doubt it is one of law only. p. 429. One from whom property has been wrongfully taken may regain his momentarily interrupted possession thereof by the use of reasonable force short of wounding or the employment of a dangerous weapon, especially after making demand for its return. Whether or not the force used is excessive is a question for the jury. p. 623.

Enforcement of trust. Where a contractor for railroad construction transfers the contract and securities to another, who borrows from a pledgee of part of the profits to arise under the contract, money to pay the purchase price, such pledgee has an equitable lien on the contract and securities, and a subsequent purchaser of the contract and securities, takes them subject to such lien, and the moneys and assets arising under the transfer constitute a trust as to pledgee enforceable in equity, especially where fraud is shown. p. 120. An attorney will be compelled to reconvey land conveyed to him by a client in trust for the client's children, for the purpose of coercing his wife to a separation on advantageous terms. p. 164.

Following trust fund wrongfully converted. The doctrine that when a trust fund has been wrongfully converted it can be followed and subjected to the preferential rights of the cestui que trust, is to be limited to cases where the identity of the fund can be traced, and is not to be extended to cases where it has been so mingled with other moneys or property that it can no longer be specifically separated. p. 480. A bill is not multifarious although the claims of the several complainants arose under different contracts, if they are pursuing a common trust fund in which they are jointly interested. p. 120.

Equitable relief from fraud. A person not intending to pay, by inducing one to sell him goods on credit through the fraudulent concealment of his insolvency, is guilty of a fraud which entitles the vendor to disaffirm the contract, if no innocent third party has acquired an interest in the property. p. 154. If the traders were insolvent at the time of their statement to Bradstreet, their statement of complete solvency, made "willfully with the intent to deceive, or recklessly without knowledge," is fraudulent under the law of Georgia, as to parties who were misled thereby. Id. The facts stated by the bill and affidavits make this a proper case for the chancellor to grant the injunction sought and to appoint a receiver. Id.

When equity will not relieve. Where a contract has been made to accomplish a fraudulent purpose, equity will not at the suit of a particeps delicti, if the contract is executory, either compel its execution or decree its cancellation, but will leave the parties in the position in which they have placed themselves. p. 816. If another person, having notice of reduction of property to possession, takes possession by any other means than legal procedure, he is a mere trespasser and has no standing to maintain a suit to quiet his title. p. 512. He who comes into a court of equity must come in with clean hands; therefore when both are in fault, equity will not interfere and enjoin as a nuisance what one does against the other. p. 868. A reconveyance should not be refused on the ground that the transaction was against public policy and that the grantor was in pari delicto, where a deed of trust has been made by a man while sick and under nervous excitement. p. 164.

Specific performance of contract. An agreement by a vendor on rescission of a contract to reimburse the other party for expenditures upon the land is not within the Statute of Frauds, and may be enforced. p. 487. In an action to compel conveyance of land in performance of a contract, where the defense is insolvency of the widow of vendee, and abandonment by her of all claim to the land, a reply that the vendor agreed to take back the lot and pay her the value of the improvements, and demanding a sum due her under such agreement, is not such a departure in pleading as to defeat the action.

Id. A judicial sale of the equitable interest of a deceased vendee will not bar his widow's right to recover the value of improvements on such agreement. Id. The tender of a deed after verdict, for a sum claimed as alternative relief in an action for specific performance, is too late to be effectual. Id.

Practice and procedure; trial of issue of will or no will. Upon an issue devisavit vel non, the proponents of the will have the affirmative of the issue, and the right to open and conclude the argument. p. 668.

Proponents may offer the will, and evidence of its due execution. In the trial it is proper for the proponents to offer the will, the evidence of its due execution, and the competency of the testator at the time it was executed, and having made a prima facie case to rest; and after evidence against its validity to permit them to offer other evidence to sustain the will, as well as evidence in rebuttal. p. 668. The time to be looked to by the jury, in determining the capacity of a testator, is the time when the will was executed. Id. It requires less capacity to make a will than to make a deed. Id. It is not necessary that a person should possess the highest qualities of mind, nor that he should have the same strength of mind as formerly; it is sufficient if he have mind enough to understand the nature of the business in which he is engaged. Id.

Old age is not of itself evidence of incapacity. It is sufficient if at the time he was mentally capable of recollecting all his property and the objects of his bounty. p. 668. It is not necessary that he should name all his children or give each a portion; it is immaterial to whom he gives his property. Id. Although he may have been influenced by feelings of resentment or dislike which may have influenced him to give his whole estate to one or more and little or nothing to others, it will not make the will invalid. If he was induced by extreme kindness and attention it will not constitute undue influence. Id. This case states the evidence admissible and inadmissible on trial of such an issue and the practice in giving instructions. Id.

Practice and procedure, generally. The defense of payment in advance need not be pleaded as payment, but may be raised by the general issue. p. 697. So proof of an estoppel is admissible in trespass to try title under the plea of not guilty. p. 715. The opinions of experts are admissible in evidence (p. 450—a case of injury by moving cars); of medical experts can only be given in a hypothetical case stated (p. 669); may testify as to effect of personal injury. p. 450. Admissibility of testimony of deceased witness on a former trial (p. 78); of testimony where charge of court confines jury to sole question (p. 54); granting instructions when immaterial error (p. 834); refusal when not error. p. 450. Verdict: liberty to jury to further hold consultation (p. 186); may be directed by the court (pp. 840, 808); when general verdict must control special interrogatories (p. 614); failure to find some facts in issue not objectionable (p. 520); newspaper comments on trial not a ground for setting aside verdict. p. 671. A general objection to evidence will not present any question on appeal. p. 614. Exceptions to findings and refusals to find present questions of law on appeal. p. 629. Cross petition in error must be filed within two years from rendition of judgment. p. 758. The exclusion of a question to a witness cannot be considered on appeal, unless the bill of exceptions shows what the answer would have been, or what it was offered to prove. p. 696. An appeal from an order of the general term is not premature although no judgment is entered thereon. p. 795.

8. DAMAGES FOR TORTS.

Liability for tortious or negligent acts. One who violates a duty owing to others, or commits a tortious or wrongfully negligent act, is liable not only for those injuries which are the direct and immediate consequences of his act, but for consequential injuries such as are likely to and do result from his act. p. 696.

Libel and slander. Publications of commercial agencies, issued to their subscribers generally, are privileged only when made in confidence to a subscriber interested in the pecuniary standing of the merchant reported; and the question of agency is one of fact. p. 405. If a libel consisted in reporting plaintiff's standing as a merchant, "in blank," the complaint must show that it was injurious and defamatory. Stating the substance of the language or its meaning is bad on general demurrer. Id. A witness in possession of a key to the reports may be allowed to explain what is reporting a merchant's standing "in blank." Testimony which is mere opinion as to the effect upon the credit of plaintiff is not admissible. Id. In oral defamation, as in the written, if the words uttered are not privileged the law implies malice. p. 139. A letter of a mere volunteer containing defamatory statements as to character, not known to be true, is not privileged. Id. A communication based upon mere rumors and hearsay, although believed to be true, is not rendered privileged by a request for information as to such rumors. Id. Defamatory words do not become privileged merely because uttered in the strictest confidence by one friend to another, nor because uttered on the most urgent solicitation, where the person is under no obligation of interest or duty to utter them, and he to whom they are addressed has no right, interest or duty to hear. Id.

Fraudulent representations. False representations by one selling railroad bonds, as to their value as security, will not render him liable even though he made the statements in bad faith. p. 743.

Malicious prosecution. A plaintiff, in a suit for malicious prosecution on a criminal charge, may show his general good reputation known to the defendant, to show that the prosecution was without probable cause. p. 517. Evidence of what defendant had stated before the complaint was made may properly go to the jury as tending to show a warrant for belief in the statements. Id. Testimony of statement of witness in the criminal case in the absence of the one making the complaint is not admissible. Id.

Nuisances. The fall of ice and snow from a building upon a horse, causing him to start, is the direct, proximate cause of injury to the driver although the ice and snow did not hit the driver. p. 695. Where a portion of the roof of a building projects over the highway, and injury results therefrom by the fall of snow, and such injury is caused by negligence in the construction, the encroachment on the highway is wrongful. Id. The Act, making a private nuisance of any fence unnecessarily exceeding six feet in height, is within the limits of the police power and constitutional. p. 81. Malevolence must have been the motive for erecting such a fence to render it a nuisance. If such height is necessary, there is no liability; and if the owner thinks it necessary he is not liable because he also acts malevolently. Id. Help given by one lawfully building such a fence upon his wife's land will not of itself render him liable to prosecution. Id. A right, by custom, to maintain a building or permanent structure upon the land of another cannot be acquired. p. 87.

Abatement of nuisance. The Iowa Code, section 8331, giving the right to "any person injured thereby" to maintain an action to abate a nuisance, does not change the ordinary rule that a private individual will not be allowed to restrain or abate a public nuisance unless he can show some peculiar or special damage or injury to himself. p. 282. Where two families occupy rooms in the same house, using in common the halls and stairways, equity will not restrain the one from committing a nuisance against the other, unless the proof is clear and strong; equity will discourage interfering in mere domestic broils. p. 368. While the doing of certain acts in the use of his dwelling-house might not in themselves amount to a private nuisance, yet when done wantonly and maliciously, to annoy his neighbor, and destroy the peace and quiet of his home, they may amount to a nuisance which equity will restrain. Id.

Tort for loss of son's services. In an action of tort brought by a father for the loss of his son's services, the father will not be permitted to testify that in his own mind he did not intend to emancipate the son, if the facts in the case warrant a finding by the jury of an implied emancipation which would cut off the father's right to maintain the action. p. 608.

Negligence of directors of savings bank. Where the directors of a savings bank met, in some years, but once or twice, instead of every week as required by their by-laws, and never caused the books of the bank to be examined, or called for a statement of their accounts with other banks, although there was nothing to show dishonesty or bad faith, they were held guilty of such negligence as held them liable for losses to depositors occasioned by the insolvency of the bank. p. 584. They are personally responsible for frauds and losses resulting from their gross negligence of duties to their trusts. Id.

Negligence of horseman on crowded thoroughfare. Riding a horse at an improper speed along a public street, and at the time looking in another direction, is culpable negligence. p. 614. Foot passengers have equal rights in the streets with those mounted on horseback or driving in carriages. Neither has a priority of right over the other; both are bound to use reasonable care to avoid collision. Id. Evidence is admissible to show the excess of travel on that street over other streets. Id.

Negligence of physician and surgeon. The degree of care and skill required of physicians is that reasonable degree of care and skill which physicians ordinarily exercise in the treatment of their patients. p. 587. In an action for damages, based upon lack of care and skill of a physician, the burden of proof is on the plaintiff. Id. If for the preservation and prolongation of a woman's life the physicians perform an operation, they are justified in doing so if she consents, whether her husband consents or not. Id. The patient is presumed to consent; and the burden of proof to show lack of consent is on the party alleging it. Id.

Passenger carriers; liability for injuries by negligence. Railroad corporations are not insurers of the lives or safety of passengers upon their cars; their neglect of a duty owing to the passenger must be shown to render them liable. p. 252. The failure of a railroad company to remove, while yet on the route, a thin covering of ice and snow which had accumulated on the platform, will not constitute such negligence as will make it liable for an injury which a passenger sustained by slipping thereon. Id.

Their obligation. The obligation in this respect is analogous to that imposed on municipal corporations, and the degree of care required must be determined by the circumstances of each case. Id. A passenger who goes from one car to another of a moving train, to find a seat, does not, while so upon the platform, take the risk of a collision with another train. p. 166. The relation of passenger is established on safely entering the car with intent to become a passenger. Id. If a railroad company in using tracks belonging to a third party might have discovered, by the exercise of due care, their dangerous character, it will be liable for an accident whether the defect was in the original construction of the road or however otherwise it may have been caused. p. 502. Under the Public Statutes that in certain cases the damages shall be assessed with reference to the degree of culpability of the corporation or of its agents or servants, "the corporation is not rendered liable by showing that it had assumed a contractual or quasi contractual responsibility for third persons who were not its servants, but through whose negligence the injury happened. p. 502. The corporation is entitled to go to the jury on the question of safety of the road. Id. The Pennsylvania Act limiting the amount to be recovered in actions against common carriers for negligence, to $3,000 in cases of personal injuries and $5,000 in case of death, did not constitute a contract with a corporation, and is abrogated by the new Constitution. p. 621. "Utmost care and diligence" mean the utmost care consistent with the carrier's undertaking and with a due regard for all the other matters which ought to be considered in conducting the business. p. 68. A woman carried by a railroad train beyond her station, the employees refusing to put her off, and to whom they were "indecorous or insulting" in manner, may recover punitive damages. p. 694. Exemplary damages may be given for the refusal to sell a passenger a ticket or to check his baggage to a regular station of a passenger train. p. 490.

Damages for injury to traveler. A railroad company which has made an excavation in a highway for its track, throwing up an embankment on which travelers may pass, is liable for injury sustained by a traveler where his horse is frightened by the running of a hand car on the track. p. 450. Knowledge that there is some danger will not preclude a recovery where the traveler was using the only highway which led to or from his home, with ordinary care. Id. The rights of a traveler are not lost by one who stops his wagon in a reasonable manner in the highway, for the purpose of unloading goods. p. 696.

Damages for death caused by negligence. A widow, resident of Nebraska, appointed as executrix of her late husband who died in Kansas from injuries received in Missouri, may maintain an action for damages against a railroad company for negligently causing his death. p. 67. The distribution of the money recovered may be enforced by the courts of Nebraska, in the manner prescribed by the laws of Kansas. Id.

Liability of master for negligently causing death of servant. A railroad company is liable for negligence in permitting a defective car to be used so as to make it dangerous to brakemen going between cars to uncouple them, where the defect was known or might have been known to the company. p. 520. Where the material facts to show were a hidden or latent defect in a car, a special verdict which shows the manner in which the accident and injury occurred and the condition of the car and appliances, need not be required to describe the appliances. Id. If a special verdict is silent as to facts in issue the court will assume that the party upon whom rested the burden of proof failed to prove them. Id. A brakeman is not chargeable with contributory negligence in going between cars to uncouple them, not knowing of a dangerous defect in the appliances. Id. Where it appears that decedent was at the time of his death in the employ of the company, and that he left a widow and one child four years old, the inference is that he was in the vigor of manhood and was at the time earning money for their support. Id. The company cannot defend on the ground that he was killed while working in violation of the Sunday Law. Id. Declarations which are the natural emanation or outgrowth of the act or occurrence in litigation, although not precisely concurrent in point of time, may be admissible as part of the act or transaction itself. Id. Declarations of a brakeman within two minutes after he was thrown under a car while attempting to uncouple it are admissible as part of the res gestæ. Id. The construction and operation of a railroad without blocking its frogs and switches is not negligence per se, of which a court will take judicial notice. To warrant a recovery evidence must be adduced to show that the frogs and switches were inherently unsafe and dangerous when prudently working them, and that blocking lessens the danger. p. 67. To hold a corporation liable for an injury to an employé, resulting from the negligence of a superior employé, there must not only be subordination, but the party in control should have such an extended authority that the court may justly say that he is a vice-principal. p. 192.

Fellow servants; who are. A foreman of a bridge gang, engaged in repairing bridges, is a fellow servant with the persons operating a freight train on the same road. p. 839. Although asleep upon a side track, liable to be called at any moment to serve with his gang, he is on duty so as to be at the time a fellow servant with the men operating a freight train, whose negligence causes his injury. Id.

Damages for killing cattle. The Montana statute attempting to make a railroad liable for all damages to animals by running trains cannot be construed to mean that the killing shall be prima facie evidence of negligence. p. 818. It is unconstitutional as attempting to create the liability without reference to any violation of law or omission of duty. Id.

2 L. R. A

9. CRIMINAL LAW.

Procedure in federal courts. A state law passed since 1789 cannot affect criminal procedure in the federal courts. The federal courts are governed in criminal causes by general common-law procedure. The common-law practice and procedure detailed. p. 229. In a State where the use of local jails for the United States prisoners is permitted, when a prisoner is committed to jail, a copy of the commitment should be left with the jailer; and where practicable it should be certified and bear the seal of the court. Id.

State statutes. The Illinois Warehouse Act imposing a penalty for issuing receipts for property not actually in store, is germane to and embraced within the title: "An Act to Regulate Public Warehouses," etc. p. 461. It was intended to protect the public; and the issuance of receipts, transferable by indorsement, when no property is in store, and given as security for loans, renders the warehouseman liable criminally, without intent to defraud; as knowing it to be false is sufficient. Id. The Act was not repealed by the Criminal Code. Id. The words "intoxicating liquors" as used in the Iowa statute mean "alcohol, wine, beer, spirituous, vinous and malt liquors and all intoxicating liquors whatever." Liquor containing alcohol is, as a matter of law, intoxicating, however much diluted, and regardless of the quantity drunk at any one time. p. 408. Whether cider is vinous or spirituous is to be determined by the jury; and this may be determined by its effect upon the drinker. p. 415. Citizens of Tennessee prohibited from again marrying because of their adultery are not protected from prosecution, by leaving the State temporarily for the purpose of evading its laws, and contracting a marriage in another State where such marriages are not prohibited. p. 708. When punishment is prescribed within defined limits, evidence of intent is admissible to fix the degree of criminality and the punishment commensurate thereto. p. 461.

Adultery. Citizens of Tennessee prohibited from marrying because of their adultery while married to another are not protected from a prosecution by leaving the State temporarily for the manifest purpose of evading its laws and contracting a marriage in another State where such marriages are not prohibited. p. 708

INDEX TO NOTES.

(The General Index follows this.)

|   |     |  |          |
|---|-----|--|----------|
| Acceptance. See BILLS AND NOTES.  |     | Collateral inheritance tax.   | 335      |
| Action ; for death caused by negligence  | 67  | Commerce ; interstate; when vessel engaged in   | 330      |
| Survivability of right  | 235 | Condition. See REAL PROPERTY.  |          |
| Adverse possession ; under tax title; color of title; period of limitation   | 512 | Conflict of laws. See also BANKRUPTCY.   |          |
| Appeal ; erroneous admission of evidence; when harmless  | 212 | Validity of contract; assignment for creditors   | 333, 365 |
| Arbitration ; submission to; effect of; revocation of; judgment on award   | 120 | Constitutional law. See also RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES; STATUTES   |          |
| Assault ; right to recapture property; defense of person and property; degree of force   | 622 | Protection of rights; due process  | 355, 655 |
| Average ; contribution of passengers' effects  | 237 | Contempt ; lack of jurisdiction   | 222      |
| Bankruptcy ; effect of foreign proceedings   | 90  | Contracts. See also HUSBAND AND WIFE.  |          |
| Banks. See also SET-OFF.  |     | Statute of Frauds; memorandum of agreement; sufficiency of; in several writings; what must contain; as evidence  | 212      |
| Relation to depositor; collecting agent; accept only money in payment   | 491 | Statute of Frauds; attempt to defraud by   | 602      |
| Liability to depositor; payment of altered or raised check or forged paper  | 96  | Fraudulent or illegal; denial of remedy  | 317      |
| Collections; rights and liabilities arising from  | 600 | To stifle competition in trade; conspiracies to injure trade; monopolies   | 38       |
| Benefit societies. See also INSURANCE.  |     | Corporations. See also TAXES.  |          |
| What are; purposes of; ultra vires ; as insurance companies  | 420 | Forfeiture of franchise; how declared  | 255      |
| Property rights   | 641 | Liability of stockholder   | 270      |
| Remedy for refusal to levy assessment; damages; practice and pleading   | 736 | Directors as trustees; liability for frauds and breaches of trust; obligation as to care and prudence  | 524      |
| Dissolution of  | 549 | Dissolution of; remedy of stockholder; jurisdiction of equity  | 549      |
| Bills and notes. See also BANKS.  |     | Consolidation of; partnership  | 544      |
| Promise to accept; agreement by telegram; payable at banking house  | 700 | Consolidation of; suit to restrain   | 594      |
| Conversion of   | 449 | Power to take property by will, and to hold property   | 327      |
| Bona fide purchaser ; relinquishing security; valuable consideration   | 520 | As trustee   | 412      |
| Bonds ; past-due coupons attached  | 353 | Acts ultra vires  | 420      |
| Bridges. See WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.   |     | Counties ; constitutional limitation on debts   | 426      |
| Carriers ; passengers, who are; mail agents and clerks; freight owner as free passenger; tramps; person riding free  | 163 | Coupons. See BONDS.  |          |
| Rights of passenger on leaving vehicle and returning; degree of care required; distinction between freight and passengers; liability for defects in cars and appliances | 83  | Courts ; federal, jurisdiction of; suit by assignee of chose in action; dismissal of suit   | 745      |
| Round-trip tickets; regulations respecting tickets; through tickets   | 125 | Federal; equity jurisdiction; matter in dispute  | 225      |
| Of passenger, not insurer; inevitable accident; negligence; distinction between goods and passengers  | 262 | Federal; jurisdiction as to bridge over navigable waters; removal of cause relating to bridge across navigable river   | 540      |
| Negligence in getting on and off moving car   | 616 | Jurisdiction of executors and administrators   | 320      |
| Conversion by   | 80  | Jurisdiction of suit to determine validity of devise; interference with proceedings before surrogate; concurrent jurisdiction in equity; auxiliary jurisdiction; retaining suit in court whence process first issued | 175      |
| Of livestock; duty and obligations; liabilities; effect of usage  | 75  | Enforcement of penal laws of foreign State   | 779      |
| Of freight; rights, duties, and obligations   | 103 | Covenants ; in grant to corporation; running with land; personal covenants binding on purchaser; enforcement of restrictive covenants; discretion of court  | 120      |
| By water; responsibilities of; recovery for loss or destruction of cargo  | 172 | For quiet enjoyment; warranty; running with land; estoppel by  | 324      |
| Duties and liabilities under Interstate Commerce Act; reasonableness of and discrimination in rates; classification; preferences as to localities                       | 44  | Custom. See also PLEADING.   |          |
| Claims ; against United States; assignment   | 571 | Effect on legal right  | 67       |
| 2 L. R. A.  |     | Effect of.   | 526      |
|   |     | Damages ; in eminent domain; assessment of  | 422      |
|   |     | By appropriation of right of way; elements of; inconvenience; reasonably antici-   | 897      |

- pated; speculative and contingent; danger of fire; special; injury to farm or tract of land as a whole; rule as to measure of; uses and purposes of land considered; tract out off 217
 For conversion 449
 For breach of contract; for neglect of duty to deliver telegram; for mental anguish 768
 In action against benefit society 786
Death. See also ACTION.
 Caused by negligence; action for 620
Deed; reservations and exceptions in 87
 Filling blank in name of grantee 620
Delivery. See INSURANCE.
Descent and distribution; disinheriting heir; heirs favored at law 849
Discovery; essentials to bill for 223
Dismissal; of proceeding; power of officer 644
Divorce. See HUSBAND AND WIFE; LIS PENDENS.
Domicil; what constitutes; change of 208
Easements. See WATERS AND WATER-COURSES.
Eminent domain. See also DAMAGES; HIGHWAYS; NEW TRIAL.
 Authority to take lands; title acquired 255
 Power of; exercise of right through agents; public use 660
Equity. See also COURTS; SET-OFF.
 Maxim as to coming with clean hands 368
Estoppel. See also COVENANTS; HUSBAND AND WIFE; PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.
 To deny execution of deed 620
Evidence; of deceased witness at former trial 78
 Opinions; hypothetical case 668
 Presumption of; burden of proof as to negligence 620
Executors and administrators. See also PRINCIPAL AND SURETY.
 Foreign; incapacity to sue; jurisdiction of 623
Forfeiture. See CORPORATIONS; REAL PROPERTY.
Forgery. See BANKS.
Fraternal societies. See INSURANCE.
Fraud; false representations, right of action for 743
Garnishment; on property in transit 417
Grant. See RAILROADS.
Guaranty; contract construed; effect of death of guarantor or cosurety; of dividends on corporate stock 183
Highways; dedication 56
 Right of railroads to use; dedication subject to railway use; injury to owners; power of municipality to license 59
 Railway in, ordinance authorizing 255
 Temporary use for building purposes 601
Homestead; right, how secured; removal from State 106
Husband and wife; partnership between; powers of wife under statute 843
 Disability of wife at common law; note by; statutory power; estoppel 845
 Tenancy in entirety; rule of different States 434
 Antenuptial contract; consideration; validity; Statute of Frauds; enforcement 373
 Contracts of wife; estoppel 769
 Divorce and adultery; right to remarry; effect of divorce in another State 703
 Gift to wife 716
Insolvency. See also CONFLICT OF LAWS. PARTNERSHIP.
 Not dissolution 225
Insurance. See also BENEFIT SOCIETIES.
 Fraternal societies; payment of policy, to whom made; designation of beneficiary; designation by statute; restriction on designation; revocation of appointment; distinction between benefit policies and life insurance policy; appointment by will; powers of members of benefit societies 161
 Benefit certificate of relief association 206
 Insurable interest in life; measure of recovery 844
 Reformation of policy 64
 Forfeiture, not favored; notification of premium due 113
 Conditional delivery of policy 150
Interstate Commerce Commission; jurisdiction and power of; complaint before 446
Intoxicating liquors; what are; judicial notice; question of fact 408
Joint tenants and tenants in common. See PARTITION.
Judgment. See also PRINCIPAL AND SURETY.
 Against corporation, conclusive on stockholder 270
 Limitation of actions upon; of justice of the peace; effect of filing transcript 629
 Foreign; force and effect of 730
Justice of the peace; judgment of; filing transcript 631
Label and slander; privileged communications by commercial agency 405
 Malice as an element; inference and presumption of; tendency to injure; privileged publications 129
License. See also SHIPPING.
 Municipal taxation of occupations 264
Life estate; use or income, commences when; incidents of; provision against alienation 113
Limitation of actions. See also ADVERSE POSSESSION.
 Under New York Code 629
Lis pendens 43
 Effect of; in divorce cases 615
Master and servant; care required; neglect to block frogs and guard rails; action for death 67
 Obligation as to machinery, implements, etc.; contributory negligence not presumed; violation of Sunday Law 520
 Liability for negligence of vice-principal; servant and agent distinguished 129
Mills. See WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.
Monopolies. See CONTRACTS.
Mortgages. See also TAXES.
 Holder of, as bona fide purchaser 736
Municipal corporations. See also RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES.
 Powers generally 64
 As agencies of government 143
 Powers of; ordinances and by-laws; reasonableness of; prohibition of business; special grant of power 721
 Liability for negligence; for misfeasance or neglect of officers 500
 Liability for negligence of officers 296

|  |     |   |     |
|--|-----|---|-----|
| Liabilities of; damage from falling wall:   |     | Statutes; suggestion of subject in title   | 730 |
| misfeasance or neglect of officers   | 713 | Title, sufficiency of; aid to construction;   |     |
| Liable for injuries caused by grading street  | 606 | passage; readings; when becomes a law;  |     |
| Navigable waters; what are  | 390 | presumption as to validity; joint resolutions; legislative journals   | 608 |
| Negligence. See also CARRIERS; MASTER AND SERVANT; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.                            |     | Local and special legislation   | 577 |
| What constitutes; liability of physicians  | 587 | Steamboats. See SHIPPING.  |     |
| Action for death   | 67  | Street railways; right to construct, a franchise   | 255 |
| Defined; concurrent and proximate cause  | 605 | Sunday; violation of Sunday Law as defense to action   | 320 |
| Presumption and burden of proof  | 320 | Taxes. See also LICENSE; PARTITION.  |     |
| In getting on and off moving car   | 516 | Assessment and taxation of railroad;  |     |
| New trial; in eminent domain  | 323 | state board of equalization; limitation of taxing power; for county and municipal purposes  | 158 |
| Notice; by possession   | 201 | On land; to whom assessed; contesting tax title; tax deed as evidence   | 773 |
| To agent; effect on principal; constructive notice; possession of land                                       | 784 | On collateral inheritance   | 335 |
| Partition; trial of title; cotenant paying taxes  | 173 | On mortgages  | 260 |
| Sale; rights of purchaser; record  | 465 | Exemption of public property  | 143 |
| Partnership; limited  | 43  | Voluntary payment; protest; right to recover back   | 626 |
| Assignment for creditors   | 333 | Compelling corporation to collect; on dividends and stock; corporate property and shares, where taxable; valuation; taxation of credits; creditor out of jurisdiction; on mortgages and mortgaged property; on property in notes; property of nonresidents held by resident trustee | 793 |
| Passenger. See CARRIERS.  |     | Telegraph companies; reasonable regulations; connecting lines  | 601 |
| Payment. See also TAXES.  |     | Telephone companies; legislative control   | 273 |
| What agent can accept  | 431 | Tenancy in entirety. See HUSBAND AND WIFE.   |     |
| Penalty. See COURTS; SHIPPING.  |     | Tickets. See CARRIERS.   |     |
| Physicians; care and skill required; liability  | 587 | Trade. See CONTRACTS.  |     |
| Flooding; of usages and customs   | 709 | Trial; direction of court to modify or amend verdict; polling the jury   | 136 |
| In action on benefit certificate   | 736 | Directing verdict; instructions   | 340 |
| Police power. See RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES.  |     | Issue of devastavit vel non ; duty to determine sufficiency of evidence  | 608 |
| Principal and agent. See also BANKS; PAYMENT.   |     | Question for jury as to cause   | 606 |
| Liability of principal when credit is given to agent   | 749 | Trover. See BILLS AND NOTES; CARRIERS.   |     |
| General and special agent; authority; estoppel; ratification; liability for agent's acts and contracts       | 808 | Trusts; in devise or bequest   | 602 |
| Private restrictions on authority; special instructions; estoppel  | 823 | In property converted; mingling funds; following fund into hands of third person  | 430 |
| Principal and surety; effect of decree against principal; vacating or setting aside decree            | 644 | Between family relatives; presumptions; fraudulent contracts  | 316 |
| Proceedings in rem; to enforce penalty against vessel   | 332 | Interest of cestui que trust , when inalienable  | 113 |
| Proximate cause. See NEGLIGENCE.  |     | Resulting; how created; what sufficient to constitute   | 146 |
| Railroad commissioners; authority of  | 195 | Usage; effect on carrier's liability   | 75  |
| Railroads. See also DAMAGES; HIGHWAYS.  |     | Effect of   | 336 |
| Taxes; grant of right of way   | 231 | Vendor and purchaser. See BONA FIDE PURCHASER; COVENANTS; NOTICE.  |     |
| Ratification. See PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.  |     | Verdict. See TRIAL.  |     |
| Real property. See also LIFE ESTATE.  |     | Wall. See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.  |     |
| Forfeiture by breach of condition  | 526 | Waters and watercourses; navigable; power of Congress to regulate; legalizing bridge over; jurisdiction of courts  | 540 |
| Relief association. See INSURANCE.  |     | Conveyance of mill; what passes   | 235 |
| Religious societies; police power over  | 110 | Wills. See CORPORATIONS; COURTS; TRUSTS.   |     |
| Reservations. See DEED.   |     | Issue of devastavit vel non ; attesting witnesses; evidence; testamentary capacity; undue influence  | 603 |
| Sale; completion of contract by delivery; duty of purchaser   | 519 | Probate; executors and administrators; grant of letters; citation; renunciation   | 795 |
| Rescission for fraud; representations of solvency; concealment of insolvency; remedies; demand not necessary | 153 | Revocation  | 353 |
| Limitation of actions; application of statute in equity  | 159 |   |     |
| Savings banks; liability of directors   | 533 |   |     |
| Set-off; equity rule as to cross demands; by debtor of insolvent bank; against assignee               | 274 |   |     |
| Shelley's Case; rule in   | 455 |   |     |
| Shipping. See also AVERAGE; CARRIERS.   |     |   |     |
| Regulation of steam vessels; inspection; license; penalties; remedies; injury to employees                   | 330 |   |     |
| Social clubs; excise tax  | 494 |   |     |
| Social corporations. See BENEFIT SOCIETIES.   |     |   |     |
| Specific performance; of parol trust  | 602 |   |     |
| 3 L R A   |     |   |     |

GENERAL INDEX

TO

OPINIONS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

(Separate Index to Notes precedes this.)

ACCEPTANCE. See BILLS AND NOTES, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

ACTION OR SUIT. See also INSURANCE, 18, 21.

1. Where the invasion of a right,—as, by the erection of a permanent structure on the land of another,—if submitted to on the one hand and persisted in on the other a sufficient length of time, may result in the extinction of the right, a remedy may be sought before actual damage has occurred. Attorney-General, Adams, v. Tarr (Mass.) 87

2. Where it is claimed that certain persons are unlawfully claiming to be, and are exercising the functions of, a corporation which never had an existence, such persons are the proper parties to be proceeded against, and the alleged corporation is not a proper defendant. People, Attorney-General, v. Stanford (Cal.) 92

3. A bill is not multifarious, although the claims of the several complainants arose under different contracts, if they are pursuing, upon the same grounds and for the same reasons, a common trust fund in which they are jointly interested. Langdon v. Central R. & Bkg. Co. (C. C. S. D. Ga.) 120

4. Where a citizen or citizens of one State sue in equity citizens of other States, to enforce a trust, in the district where the property in controversy is situated, and of which one or more of the defendants is or are inhabitants, the suit does not abate by reason of the non-residency of some of the defendants; but the nonresident defendants who have been properly served by publication or otherwise, and who shall fail to appear, are nevertheless bound. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Executor or administrator as a party. 660

For death caused by negligence. 67

Survivability of right. 226

ADVANCEMENTS. See EVIDENCE, 5.

ADVERSE POSSESSION. See also WATERS AND WATERCOURSES, 5, 6, 9.

1. Actually occupying adversely part of the north half of a quarter section of land, under a recorded patent including the whole quarter section, does not constitute adverse possession of the south half, which is claimed under a separate title. Turner v. Stephenson (Mich.) 277

2. A tenant that has never attempted to surrender his rights during the existence of the term, or committed any act which authorized a re-entry thereunder, can acquire no rights during that time by adverse possession. Bedlows v. New York Floating Dry Dock Co. (N. Y.) 629

3. Title acquired by taking actual possession of vacant land after having paid taxes thereon for seven years under color of title made in good faith is, by force of the Illinois Statute of Limitations, such a fixed title as will enable one, not only to defend his possession, but to recover possession from another who has subsequently taken it. Gage v. Hampton (Ill.) 512

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Under tax title; color of title; period of limitation. 512

ALIENS. See EVIDENCE, 7.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

As heirs to real property. 465

ALLEY. See HIGHWAYS, 1, 2.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Right of public in. 57, 62

ANIMALS. See RAILROADS, 1.

ANTENUPTIAL CONTRACTS. See HUSBAND AND WIFE, 1-3.

APPEAL AND ERROR. See also DAMAGES, 2.

1. An appeal from an order of the general term is not premature, although no judgment has been entered thereon, where the order is in a special proceeding appealed from the surrogate which could only terminate in an order. Libbey v. Mason (N. Y.) 795

2. Under Ind. Code, § 658, a judgment cannot be reversed where it appears that the merits of the cause have been fairly tried and determined in the court below. McNutt v. McNutt (Ind.) 372

3. The court of appeals will not review the conclusion of the officer specially charged with the determination of the question of the necessity of certain work to complete a job or certain supplies for the city of New York, where it appears that the facts called for the exercise of his judgment, and that a reasonable necessity might by possibility have existed. Brady v. New York (N. Y.) 751

4. A defendant in error against whom, as cross petitioner in the trial court, a judgment had been rendered which is in favor of all the other parties to the suit, and to which no error is assigned by another party, is required to file his cross petition in error within two years after the rendition of such judgment, in order to obtain its reversal. Mannix v. Purcell (Ohio) 753

5. Objections to a judgment must be presented by the proper motion to the trial court, or they will not be regarded on appeal. McNutt v. McNutt (Ind.) 872

6. Exceptions to alleged findings of fact when they are supported by evidence, and to the refusals to find when they are established by undisputed proof, present questions of law reviewable in the New York Court of Appeals. Hedlow v. New York Floating Dry Dock Co. (N. Y.) 639

7. A general objection to evidence as "incompetent, immaterial, and irrelevant," is not sufficient to present any question on appeal. Stringer v. Frost (Ind.) 614

8. The exclusion of a question to a witness cannot be considered on appeal, unless the bill of exceptions shows what the answer would have been, or what it was offered to prove by him if he were allowed to answer. Smethurst v. Independent Cong. Church (Mass.) 685

9. Where, on the trial of an issue devotus vel non, a medical expert was permitted to answer two improper hypothetical questions, which he did, fully covering the whole case, and the court refused to permit him to answer two proper hypothetical questions which embraced no more than the two he was permitted to answer, the party who was thus deprived of having his proper hypothetical questions answered was not, and could not have been, prejudiced by the error; and for such error the appellate court would not reverse the decree and set aside the verdict. Kerr v. Lungford (W. Va.) 668

10. The admission of testimony relative to an injury to property by the flow of water is not injurious where the charge of the court confines the jury to the sole question of damages caused by the obstruction of the street in front of the property. Schneider v. Detroit (Mich.) 54

11. Where there is no pretense of any defense except under the general issue requiring plaintiff to prove his case, and this is done by undisputed testimony showing a right to recovery, error in the instructions is immaterial. Perin v. Parker (Ill.) 836

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Erroneous admission of evidence, when harmless. 218

ARBITRATION AND AWARD. See also ASSUMPSIT, 8; CONTRACTS, 11, 17.

1. An express agreement not to revoke, and to waive any right to revoke, a submission to arbitration, does not prevent a revocation thereof, under N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 2383, at any time before the closing of the proofs and the final submission of the cause for decision; and upon such revocation the foundation of the arbitrator's power is gone, and no further action can be had under the submission. People, Union Ins. Co. v. Nash (N. Y.) 180

2. When a building contract provided that the decision of the architect should be conclusive on the question whether work done in the course of the erection of the building was within the specifications, or not, it was an implication indispensable to the effectuation of the purpose of the parties, that such decision should be an honest one. Whism v. Schipper (N. J.) 544

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Submission to; effect of; revocation of; judgment on award. 180

Effect of award; remedies. 533

ARMY AND NAVY.

The enlistment of a minor without the written consent of his parent or guardian, if he has one entitled to his services and control, is invalid and of no legal effect; and the invalidity may be claimed by the minor himself, either before or after attaining his majority. Re Chapman (C. C. N. D. Ga.) 332

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Enlistment of minor. 333

ASSAULT AND BATTERY. See also LICENSE, 2.

1. A master has no right of action for an assault, or an assault and battery, upon his servant, unless some loss of service or capacity to serve results therefrom. Fuker v. Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. (Ga.) 843

2. A lessee or licensee of the exclusive privilege of entering the cars or upon the right of way to sell or supply lunches is not a servant or agent of the corporation, so as to render it liable for an assault, or an assault and battery, committed by such lessee or licensee upon a competitor who seeks lawfully, on his own premises, to obtain the patronage of passengers. Id.

3. One from whom property has been wrongfully taken may regain his momentarily interrupted possession thereof by the use of reasonable force short of wounding or the employment of a dangerous weapon, especially after making demand for its return. Com. v. Donahue (Mass.) 623

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Right to recapture property; defense of person and property; degree of force. 623

ASSIGNMENT. See CLAIMS, 6, 7; INSURANCE, 9, 10; PLEADING, 5.

ASSIGNMENT FOR CREDITORS. See CONFLICT OF LAWS, 1-4; INSOLVENCY AND ASSIGNMENT FOR CREDITORS.

ASSUMPSIT. See also EVIDENCE, 60.

1. A voluntary payment, without duress of person or goods, of an assessment for the expense of grading and paving a street, under an ordinance which was void on its face, is a mistake of law, and no action will lie to recover back the money so paid. Phelps v. New York (N. Y.) 626

2. A recovery upon a quantum meruit cannot be had for literary services, under a contract which provides that compensation therefor is to be derived solely from a division of profits from sales after publication. Keyser's Appeal (Pa.) 159

8. Making a claim to land and erecting a fence thereon, after an award by arbitrators as to the boundary line, finding that the land belongs to the adjoining owner, does not constitute a breach of a stipulation in the submission "to abide by and perform the award," for which assumpsit will lie; but the remedy is by an action of tort. Weeks v. Trask (Me.) 532

4. If one furnishes goods upon an executed consideration, he cannot maintain an action to recover for their price, although the original agreement was void under the Statute of Frauds. Starratt v. Mullen (Mass.) 697

5. The sum paid by a broker for corn purchased by him to fill a contract, in conformity with rules and usages of the board of trade, whereby the principal is under an implied obligation to indemnify him, is a debt recoverable upon common money counts as money advanced to defendant's use. Perin v. Parker (Ill.) 336

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Recovery on quantum meruit. 159

ATTACHMENT.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

By nonresident. 100

ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

A proceeding in equity to enjoin an intrusion thereon, and to compel the removal of buildings erected on land reserved for public landing places by private individuals, may be maintained by the attorney-general. Attorney-General, Adams, v. Tarr (Mass.) 87

ATTORNEYS. See also NOTICE, 1.

1. Plaintiff's attorney has no lien on the land in controversy, or any claim against defendants personally for his fees, under Ky. Gen. Stat. chap. 5, § 15, giving an attorney a lien on a demand arising out of contract placed in his hands for collection, and on a judgment whether in contract or for a tort, and on property recovered, upon the dismissal in good faith of an action to enforce a contract for land, without any recovery or consideration except that each party shall pay his own costs, although it is against the consent of such attorney. Rowe v. Fogle (Ky.) 703

2. An attorney who has prepared deeds of trust and been consulted as to the purposes for which they were made cannot afterwards, on purchasing the land included therein, on an execution sale, maintain a suit to set aside such deeds as fraudulent; and where another person simply loans to him the use of his name in purchasing the lands and bringing the suit, the case will be treated as if the attorney were the actual party. Davis v. Kline (Mo.) 78

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Lien of; dismissing action without his consent. 708

3 L. R. A.

AVERAGE.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Contribution of passengers' effects. 287

BANKRUPTCY.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Effect of foreign proceedings. 99

BANKS AND BANKING. See also INTEREST, 2; TRUSTS, 4, 5.

1. The entry in a depositor's bank book, which is returned to him, of the payment of a check to the payee named therein, puts the depositor under no obligation to look to see whether the check was paid upon a forged indorsement or not. Atlanta Nat. Bank v. Burke (Ga.) 96

2. A bank depositor is not precluded from holding the bank liable for cashing his check on a forged indorsement, by the fact that a note and deed forged in the same manner had been palmed off on the depositor himself. Id.

3. The liability of a bank to its depositor is not avoided by payment of money upon his check to a person who forges the name of the payee. Id.

4. The genuineness of the last indorsement on a check does not relieve a bank from looking to the genuineness of preceding indorsements. Id.

5. Where money collected by a bank for another bank, under instructions for immediate return, is allowed to remain several months with the collecting bank, which becomes insolvent without having made return, the bank for which the collection was made will not be considered a cestui que trust, but will be treated as an ordinary creditor. Philadelphia Nat. Bank v. Dowd (C. C. E. D. N. C.) 480

6. The statutory prohibition against preferences in the distribution of assets of insolvent national banks will not prevent a cestui que trust from following trust money held for him by such bank as trustee, into any new investment thereof made by the bank, capable of identification, but will prevent its being followed after it has lost its identity by being mingled with the funds of the bank. Id.

7. Where a national bank contracts to collect drafts and checks for another bank, under which contract it has the right to mingle the proceeds of collections with its own funds and make itself debtor for the amount, its insolvency will terminate such right; and the proceeds of a check properly indorsed as for collection and sent by it to a third bank to be collected, which is not accomplished until after such insolvency, are the property of the principal bank, and may be recovered by it in a suit against such third bank. Manufacturers Nat. Bank v. Continental Bank (Mass.) 699

8. Directors of savings banks are personally responsible for frauds and losses resulting from gross negligence and inattention to the duties of their trust. Marshall v. Farmers & M. Sav. Bank (Va.) 584

9. Where, instead of meeting every week, as required by their by laws, the directors of a savings bank met, in some years, but once or twice, and never caused the books of the bank to be examined, or called for a statement of their accounts with other banks, while their vaults and cash drawer were emptied by illegal abstractions and insolvent loans; and while one of them was president of an insolvent railroad company, and knew its condition, and secured himself, its notes to the bank for a large sum were allowed to become worthless, — although there was nothing to show dishonesty or bad faith, they were held guilty of such negligence as made them liable for losses to depositors, occasioned by the insolvency of the bank. Marshall v. Farmers & M. Sav. Bank (Va.) 584

10. A person who is not the owner of stock in a national bank, and has no beneficial interest therein, cannot be held liable for assessments thereon by reason of the fact that the shares have been assigned to him to hold in trust, where it appears upon the proper books of the bank that he holds the same as trustee. If he can be held to be technically a stockholder, under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5151, he must be also held exempt from liability as trustee, under § 5152. Wells v. Larrabee (C. C. N. D. Iowa) 471

11. A pledgee of stock in a national bank, who holds it solely as collateral security for a debt due from the real owner of the stock, cannot be held liable as a stockholder for assessments thereon, when the name of such pledgee as owner or holder of the shares has never appeared upon the books of the bank, or even upon the certificates of stock. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also SET-OFF AND COUNTERCLAIM.

Liability to depositor; payment of altered or raised check or forged paper. 96

Relation of depositor; duty to know signature; payment of forged paper. 97

Relation to depositor; collecting agent; accept only money in payment. 491

Cashier's check; deposit of drafts or checks; paper for collection; set-off. 275

Liability of pledgee of stock. 471

Presentation of check; effect of; delay in presenting. 493

Collections; rights and liabilities arising from. 699

BENEFIT SOCIETIES. See also CORPORATIONS, 23, 24; EVIDENCE, 48; INSURANCE, 11; TRIAL, 11.

1. Minors are not, merely because of their minority, disqualified from becoming members of mutual benefit societies, in the absence of any statute on the subject; and their admission is not such a violation of the policy of the law as will subject such a society to dissolution. Chicago Mut. L. Indemnity Assn. v. Hunt (Ill.) 549

2. The use of advance mortuary assessments to pay current expenses is such a violation of law as will warrant the dissolution of a mutual benefit society, where the statute provides that no part of the funds collected for the payment of death benefits shall be applied for any other purpose. Id.

3. It is a breach of official duty for the officer of a mutual benefit society to fail to keep correct and intelligible books of account, whether such failure results from design, carelessness, or want of skill. Id.

4. Limiting and perpetuating the administration of the society in the hands of the manager and secretary, by means of a system of blank proxies unadvisedly signed by applicants for membership, is a violation of the provision of the statute requiring the affairs of mutual benefit societies to be managed by not less than five trustees. Id.

5. A promise to members to refund to them, at the expiration of a certain period, all the reserve fund to which they would be equitably entitled, is a violation of the statutory prohibition against the receipt by members of mutual benefit societies of any money as profit. Id.

6. The creation of a tontine reserve fund to be distributed among persistent members after a certain period, out of moneys collected for death benefits, is a violation of the statute which requires such moneys to be devoted to payment of death benefits only, and will warrant a dissolution of the society. Id.

7. Numbering certificates of membership much higher than the actual number issued operates as a fraud upon those becoming members in reliance upon such false numbers, and is an improper practice, whether or not done with an actual intent to deceive and defraud. Id.

8. A subordinate lodge duly incorporated under state laws cannot be deprived of the possession and control of property belonging to it, by the grand lodge of the order with which it is connected, although under the constitution of the order it has been suspended by the grand lodge. Merrill Lodge, No. 299, I. O. G. T. v. Ellsworth (Cal.) 841

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also INSURANCE.

What are; purposes of; ultra vires; as insurance companies. 420

Remedy for refusal to levy assessment; damages; practice and pleading. 786

Property rights. 841

Dissolution of. 549

BILLS AND NOTES. See also CONTRACTS, 8; USURY, 1.

1. An English patent, if regular in form and in existence as a document, is, by force of the English decisions, sufficient consideration to support a promissory note made in Massachusetts, even although the patent is in fact invalid for want of novelty, and notwithstanding the fact that, under the Massachusetts decisions, a note given for an invalid United States patent is without consideration. Chemical Electric Light & Power Co. v. Howard (Mass.) 163

2. Where the payees of a promissory note, who, for the purpose of discounting it, had left it, with their indorsement, to enable the proposed purchaser to inquire as to the solvency of the makers, had obtained judgment for the value of the note against the purchaser, who refused either to discount or return it, the payment of the judgment invested the latter with title to the note as of the date of the conversion, but without any obligation of the payees as indorsers, because the indorsement, being made for the mere purpose of discounting the note, had never been consummated. Haas v. Sackett (Minn.) 449

3. One who indorses a note in blank, whether by writing his name above or below that of the payee, is liable prima facie as a maker, and may be sued as such. Bellows Falls Nat. Bank v. Dorset Marble Co. (Vt.) 428

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also BANKS AND BANKING.

Liability of cashier; parol evidence to affect. 428

Acceptance by telegram; qualified acceptance; payable at banking house. 709

Conversion of. 449

BOARD OF TRADE.

1. The doctrine that when private property is devoted to a public use and becomes affected with a public interest it ceases to be juris privati only, and is subject to public regulation, applies to the furnishing of market reports to the public by the Chicago Board of Trade. New York & C. Grain & Stock Exch. v. Chicago Board of Trade (Ill.) 411

2. The Chicago Board of Trade cannot, after having so conducted its affairs for a long term of years as to create a standard market for agricultural products, and, in concert with telegraph companies, built up a system for the instantaneous and continuous indication of that market, until such system has become impressed with a public interest, be allowed to discriminate between persons, and say that one shall and another shall not receive the market reports, when all are equally willing to conform to reasonable rules on the subject and pay for the information. Id.

3. Hence, —held, that the Chicago Board of Trade, and the telegraph companies acting in connection with it, have no right to refuse to furnish the New York & Chicago Grain & Stock Exchange—an Illinois corporation organized for buying and selling grain—with the regular telegraphic “ticker” market quotations, it appearing that such Exchange was willing to conform to the regulations of the Board of Trade in reference to furnishing such quotations, and to pay for the same, and that it was not engaged in a gambling or “bucket shop” business. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Regulation of business; discrimination by, in giving information. 411

BONA FIDE PURCHASER. See DEED; MORTGAGE, 3; VENDOR AND PURCHASER, 4, 5.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Relinquishing security; valuable consideration. 529

3 L. R. A.

BONDS. See EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, 5, 6; FRAUD AND FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, 6; TAXES, 8-10.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also TAXES.

Of municipality; validity of; recitals; power of towns to issue. 243

Past-due coupons attached. 858

BRIDGES. See HIGHWAYS, 12; TAXES, 4; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES, 2-4, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

BROKERS. See also ASSUMPSIT, 5; INTEREST, 1.

1. It is not the duty of a broker who is entitled to have a margin supplied by his principal on the sale of corn, to buy in the corn within a reasonable time after the principal's refusal to supply the margin, where such refusal is not absolute, but accompanied by a promise to pay the losses when differences were settled, and not before. Perin v. Parker (Ill.) 836

2. Under the rules of the Board of Trade of Chicago, where a broker sells for future delivery under authority from his principal, the latter is under an implied contract to furnish margins when demanded; and if he fails to do so the broker is authorized, without waiting for the maturity of the contract, to buy produce to fill his contracts. Id.

BURDEN OF PROOF. See EVIDENCE, II.

CANALS. See also HIGHWAYS, 8.

The State, having for more than twenty years suffered merely by acquiescence, without permission or agreement, the use of a strip of covered surface over a canal feeder for purposes of passage, owes a duty to abstain from injuring, either carelessly or intentionally, a person so using it, but not a duty of active vigilance to prevent such injury, especially where the traveler is perfectly familiar with the condition of the surface. Donahue v. Swiss (N. Y.) 576

CARRIERS.

I. OF PASSENGERS.

II. OF FREIGHT.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also CONFLICT OF LAWS, 5; CUSTOM AND USAGE, 2; DAMAGES; EVIDENCE, 14, 15; INDICTMENT, ETC.; TROVER.

I. OF PASSENGERS.

1. An excursion ticket having the words “Not good for passage,” on the going part of the ticket, and the words “If detached,” on the returning part, is valid when both parts are presented together at the same time, to the same conductor, on the going trip, although the parts have become separated by inadvertence. Wightman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. (Wis.) 185

2. The relation of passenger is established when one has safely entered a passenger car, with the intention of becoming a passenger, although at a stopping place not a station; and where no invitation was held out to take trains, but where they were permitted to be taken. Devire v. Boston & M. R. Co. (Mass.) 106

8. A passenger who goes to one car from another of a moving train to find a seat does not, while so upon the platform, take the risk of collision with another train; and when his conduct does not contribute to an injury from such collision, he may recover from the railroad company for its negligence. Id.

4. Railroad corporations are not the insurers of the lives or safety of passengers upon their cars, and in order to render them so, it is essential to show that they have neglected the performance of some duty which, in the exercise of reasonable care, prudence, and diligence, they owe to such passengers. Palmer v. Pennsylvania Co. (N. Y.) 253

5. The failure of a railroad company to remove from the platform of a passenger car on a through train, before 5 o'clock A. M., while yet on the route, a thin covering of ice and snow which had accumulated during the night, will not constitute negligence such as will make it liable for an injury which a passenger sustained by slipping thereon, especially when he had several times crossed over the platform during the night and knew of its slippery condition. Id.

6. Endeavoring to board a train moving at the rate of 6 miles an hour is an act of such danger as to prevent any recovery from the railroad company for the death of the person attempting it, even though the train was evidently about to pass the station where it was advertised to stop, and where he was waiting for it, without stopping, and the conductor called to him to jump on if he was going. Hunter v. Cooperstown, etc. R. Co. (N. Y.) 823

7. If a railroad company is using tracks belonging to a third party, and the dangerous character of such tracks might have been discovered by the exercise of due care, it will be liable for an accident occasioned thereby and resulting in the death of a passenger, whether the defect was in the original construction of the road, or was due to the failure of the owner to make repairs, or however otherwise it may have been caused. Littlejohn v. Fitchburg R. Co. (Mass.) 502

8. A passenger is, whenever the performance of the contract of carriage in a usual and proper way necessarily involves leaving the vehicle and returning to it, entitled to protection as such, as well while so leaving and returning as at any other time. Dodge v. Boston & B. Steamship Co. (Mass.) 83

9. A passenger on a steamboat, who has purchased a ticket not entitling him to meals, can properly go on shore for a meal at any intermediate stopping place before reaching his destination, and has a passenger's right to protection during his egress, in the proper manner, from the steamer for that purpose. Id.

10. When a proper place of exit for passengers from a steamer is provided, a warning to a passenger not to leave at another part of the boat is a reasonable regulation which the passenger is bound to obey; and his disobedience thereof will, in the absence of a good reason for it, prevent his recovery from the carrier for an injury growing out of it. Id.

11. A carrier of passengers is bound to exercise towards its passengers the utmost care and diligence in providing against injuries which human care and foresight can guard against. This rule applies at all times when, and in all places where, the parties are in the relation of passenger and carrier, and includes attention to all matters which pertain to the business of carrying the passenger. Id.

12. The words "utmost care and diligence," which carriers of passengers must exercise, do not mean the utmost care and diligence which men are capable of exercising; but they mean the utmost care consistent with the carrier's undertaking and with a due regard for all the other matters which ought to be considered in conducting the business. Id.

13. The traveling public have the right to stop and receive their baggage at any regular station or stopping place for the train on which they may be traveling; and any regulation that deprives them of that right is necessarily arbitrary, unreasonable, and illegal. Pittsburgh, O. & St. L. R. Co. v. Lyon (Pa.) 489

14. A regulation of a railroad company by which, although a passenger may himself get off at a regular station or stopping place of a passenger train, which is just across the street from the station of another railroad, he will not be sold a ticket to that place, or his baggage checked to or delivered at that station, but will be compelled to pay for a ticket to another station a mile distant, and go there for his baggage,—is unreasonable and invalid. Id.

15. The dominion of a railroad corporation over its trains, tracks, and right of way is no less complete or exclusive than that which every owner has over his own property. Hence, the corporation may exclude whom it pleases when they come to transact their own private business with passengers or other third persons, and admit whom it pleases, when they come to transact such business. This applies to selling lunches to or soliciting orders from passengers for the sale of lunches. Flucker v. Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. (Ga.) 843

II. OF FREIGHT.

16. A custom cannot require that a shipper should expressly agree, as a condition precedent to his right to damages for injury to stock during transportation, that he would give notice before removing the stock. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Fagan (Tex.) 75

17. A custom requiring a shipper to agree, as a condition of shipment, that his measure of damages should not be more than the cash value of the stock shipped at the place of shipment, is illegal. Id.

18. A common carrier has no right to demand of a shipper a waiver of his rights as a condition precedent to receiving freight. Id.

19. A carrier has the duty to feed and water stock during transportation, and cannot transfer it to the shipper by a custom requiring him to go along on the same train with the stock to feed and water them at his own risk and expense. Id.

20. Although goods are shipped at the owner's risk, the carrier may be liable for damage caused by the weather or rust, if occasioned by the carrier's negligence or by unreasonable delay upon the road. Western & A. R. Co. v. Exposition Cotton Mills (Ga.) 102

21. If a shipper of machinery agrees that it may be transported upon open cars, the carrier may still be liable for damage by rust or by the weather during a detention on the road, if ordinary diligence required the carrier to cover the cars during such detention, and it failed to do so. Id.

22. On a shipment from Boston to Atlanta, the last road named on the bill of lading, which runs into Atlanta, cannot avoid its liability, under Ga. Code, § 2084, as the last of several connecting roads, by the simple fact that it pushed the cars to the track of another railroad in Atlanta, and got that road to haul them with its engine  $2\frac{1}{2}$  miles, and deliver them to the mills to which they were shipped. Id.

23. Contracts by a railroad company with other companies for the establishment of through routes and through rates for the continuous carriage of interstate traffic do not violate § 7 of the Act to Regulate Commerce, prohibiting a combination to prevent the carriage of freights from being continuous. Kentucky & I. Bridge Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (C. D. Ky.) 289

24. No authority to issue through tickets or through bills of lading for property, at through rates, over connecting lines, is conferred by the Act to Regulate Commerce upon common carriers of interstate commerce, in the absence of arrangements between the companies. Id.

25. The requirement of the Act to Regulate Commerce, that every common carrier shall afford reasonable, proper, and equal facilities to connecting lines, imposes upon a carrier no duty either to form new connections or to establish new stations, yards, or depots, or to pay any part of the expense of providing such new facilities, either for the convenience of the public or of other carriers; and a carrier cannot be compelled to receive or deliver traffic at a point where another company has made a new connection with its roads, but has not provided proper facilities. Id.

26. Neither at common law nor under the Act of Congress of June 15, 1866 (U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5258), or the Interstate Commerce Act of February 4, 1887, can a common carrier be compelled to make through traffic arrangements with connecting lines. Id.

27. The Interstate Commerce Law does not require a common carrier subject to its provisions to establish through routes and through rates with all connecting lines, merely because it may have done so with one of them. Id.

28. Where the charter of a railroad company provided "that any and all such railroad or railroads hereafter constructed may connect and join with the road hereby contemplated," the connection thus authorized is a physical, and not a business connection, and it does not require an interchange of traffic at the point of junction. Id.

29. An individual shipper or consignor cannot legally require a railroad company to send a shipment by a particular route beyond the 2 L. R. A.

company's line, at the same or equivalent through rates which such company may have established with other connecting lines; and what the individual shipper of interstate commerce may not lawfully demand, common carriers engaged in transporting such traffic may not lawfully require of connecting lines. Id.

30. Refusal of a carrier to interchange traffic with a new road, at a point where proper facilities therefor do not exist, does not constitute any discrimination or any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage, within the meaning of the Interstate Commerce Act. Id.

31. All discriminations and preferences by one carrier between others are not forbidden or made unlawful by the Interstate Commerce Act, but only such as are unjust or undue or unreasonable. Id.

32. A carrier cannot be compelled by a new connection formed with its road by another railroad, at a point where there are no facilities for handling freight, to concede the use of its own track and terminal facilities to the new company, and accomplish the interchange of traffic at its own yards and with its own employes. The use of such advantages can be acquired only by mutual agreement. Id.

33. A bridge company owning no freight cars, which solicits freight for railway companies who will furnish the cars and over whose lines the freight is to go, and merely transfers such cars over its bridge to the railway companies furnishing them, charging for its service its regular bridge toll, but making no charge for transporting the freight contained or carried in the cars,—is not a common carrier of such interstate freight. Id.

34. A bridge company which is not, either in law or in fact, a common carrier of interstate traffic, cannot invoke the provisions of the Act to Regulate Commerce to compel railway companies to transact business with or through such bridge company. Id.

35. The franchises and powers of building, maintaining, and operating a bridge and approaches, designated as its terminal facilities, do not, in and of themselves, constitute the bridge company a common carrier of property; nor do they, by any clear implication, confer upon it authority "to equip its road, and to transport goods and passengers thereon, and charge compensation therefor." Id.

36. Under the charter of a bridge company making its bridge and approaches thereto a public thoroughfare or highway, for the use of which, by railroads or street cars, wagons, vehicles, animals, and foot passengers, it was authorized to charge "reasonable tolls," for the collection of which suitable tollgates could be established, the word "tolls" is strictly applicable to charges for the use of its highway, rather than to compensation for transportation services which the bridge company may perform or be permitted to render. Id.

37. Where a railroad company, by contract with a bridge company, acquires the right to use a bridge, with its approaches, for its engines, cars, and trains, it is regarded, under the Act to Regulate Commerce, § 1, as the owner or operator of the bridge and approaches, for the time being, as to all freight transported by it over the bridge. And as to all such traffic, it, and not the bridge company, must be regarded as the common carrier. Kentucky & I. Bridge Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (C. O. D. Ky.) 280

88. A corporation which, being under no legal obligation to do so, voluntarily contracts to switch cars over its tracks, between two or more railways, for which service it collects a certain switching charge for switching the cars, loaded or empty, but charges no traffic rates on the freight transported or transferred in the cars in the performance of such service, assumes none of the responsibilities of a common carrier, but only those of a switchman. Id.

89. When an agent of a railroad is prosecuted under the Interstate Commerce Act, it is not necessary either to allege or prove that the particular unlawful act complained of was done under authority conferred by its principal or by its direction; it is sufficient to show that the accused was in fact an agent of a railroad subject to the Act, and that the wrong was committed under color of his office or agency. United States v. Tozer (D. C. E. D. Mo.) 444

40. The South Carolina Railroad Commission has no jurisdiction of a complaint for charges unlawfully made by a railroad partly in North Carolina, for transportation which was partly in the latter State, although it was for part of the original transportation by connecting lines between points both in South Carolina, such transportation being interstate commerce. Sternberger v. Cape Fear & Y. V. R. Co. (S. C.) 105

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Conversion by. 80

Rights of passenger on leaving vehicle and returning; degree of care required; distinction between freight and passengers; liability for defects in cars and appliances. 88

Passengers, who are; mail agents and clerks; freight owner as free passenger; tramps; person riding free. 166

Round-trip tickets; regulations respecting tickets; through tickets. 185

Of passenger, not insurer; inevitable accident; negligence; distinction between goods and passengers. 252

Negligence in getting on and off moving car. 816

Duty towards passengers; using track of another company. 508

Attempt to get on moving train. 833

Reasonableness of rules and regulations. 490

Of livestock; duty and obligations; liabilities; effect of usage. 75

Of freight; rights, duties, and obligations. 102

By water; responsibilities of; recovery for loss or destruction of cargo. 178

Duties and liabilities under Interstate Commerce Act; reasonableness of, and discrimination in, rates; classification; preferences as to localities. 444

CHARITABLE USES. See also EVIDENCE, 25, 27.

1. A charitable trust is one of which the 2 I. R. A.

courts will take cognizance and assume control for the purpose of preventing its abuse, perversion, or destruction. Mannis v. Purcell (Ohio) 75:3

2. Where property is held by an archbishop, of the Roman Catholic Church in trust to be devoted to the uses of public religious worship, cemeteries, orphan asylums, and schools, each church, cemetery, asylum, and school is held upon a separate trust and for its own separate uses; and one piece of property so held is not chargeable with any part of the expense of improving another, or of improving church property generally in the diocese. Id.

3. Property held upon such trusts by the archbishop does not pass to his assignee in insolvency by a deed of assignment made in his individual capacity for the payment of his individual debts. Such an assignment passes to the assignee no better or different title to the assigned property than the assignor held; and cestuis que trust may assert, as against the assignee and the creditors of the assignor, the same rights that they could against the latter if no assignment had been made. Id.

4. Though the several congregations of the churches so held in trust, and the persons respectively possessing and having charge of such schools, cemeteries, and asylums, are severally unincorporated and otherwise incapable of holding the legal title to the property so used, they nevertheless have such an interest in the trust property as permits them to be represented in court by a number less than the whole, having a common interest with them, for the purpose of protecting the property from seizure and sale for the satisfaction of the private debts of the trustee. Id.

5. Changes in the membership of such congregations and bodies do not affect their legal identity; and for the purpose of continuing and enjoying the uses to which the properties respectively possessed by them are devoted, they respectively remain, in legal contemplation, the same congregations and bodies. Id.

6. It is not essential to the existence or enjoyment of a trust for charitable uses that the individual beneficiaries are able to show that they contributed to, or have a personal, pecuniary interest in, the trust property; their interest is measured by, and limited to, the uses for which the property is held. Id.

7. Where such trustee has made advances from his own private means, otherwise than as donations, to assist in buying or improving the trust property, he has a claim upon the particular property so purchased or improved, which passes to his assignee in insolvency as individual assets; and in a proceeding by the assignee to subject the assets of his assignor to the payment of his debts, it is competent for the court to order an accounting of the advances so made, with a view to subjecting such property to the satisfaction of such claim. Id.

8. Such a trustee has power, by contract, to charge the trust property with the reasonable expense of its necessary preservation, improvement, and repair, in favor of one who expends money, labor, or materials for that purpose. Id.

9. A bequest to a school township for the support of common schools is a public and charitable use. Skinner v. Harrison Twp. (Ind.) 187

10. A school district in Indiana is capable of taking a devise in trust for the support of common schools therein. Id.

CHATTEL MORTGAGE. See MORTGAGE.

CHECK. See BANKS AND BANKING, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

CITIZEN. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 18.

CLAIMS.

1. An Act authorizing the board of claims to rehear, audit and determine, and allow reasonable compensation for meritorious services, etc., rendered to the State, on a claim which had been previously rejected by the board of audit because of the lack of legal authority for employing such services, does not violate N. Y. Const. art. 3, § 19, which declares that "the Legislature shall neither audit nor allow any private claim or account against the State," etc. O'Hara v. State (N. Y.) 608

2. The proviso in the amendment to N. Y. Const. art. 7, § 14, exempting existing claims from the prohibition against allowing claims after they are barred, cannot apply to any claim accruing after the adoption of that amendment. Id.

3. The value of the materials furnished by the claimant in the performance of the services referred to in the New York Act of 1886, authorizing the board of claims to rehear and audit the claims of O'Hara & Co. for work and services performed by them for the State under the directions of the quarantine officials, constitute a part of the claim. Id.

4. When individuals voluntarily furnish property or render valuable services to the State at the request of state officers, with the expectation of payment, the Legislature may ratify the acts of such officers, although previously unauthorized, and make the State liable for the payment. Id.

5. Legislative ratification of an unauthorized contract by officers on the part of the State gives a claim therefor a legal existence for the first time; and the fact that a claim against the State on the imperfect obligation previously existing would have been barred by lapse of time does not make such legislative ratification and authority to allow such claim invalid, under the New York Constitution, art. 7, § 14, providing that no claim shall be audited or allowed or paid which, as between citizens of the State, would be barred by lapse of time. Id.

6. While the accounting officers of the treasury may state and certify accounts in favor of purchasers, assignees, or transferees of claims against the United States for witness fees, whose assignments are not controverted, they may exercise their own discretion in the matter, with due regard to the convenience of parties and the Government. Such assignees have no rights which make it obligatory upon the accounting officers to so state accounts in their favor. Lopez v. United States (D. C.) 571

7. Unrevoked and undisputed orders, as 2 L. R. A.

signments, and transfers of claims against the United States are so far valid under the law, that, if payment be made thereon, the assignors will be estopped from setting up any other claim on their behalf; and such payment will be a valid discharge of the indebtedness. Id.

8. A marshal may pay witness fees to persons other than those in whose favor such fees are taxed by the court, upon the unrevoked and undisputed orders, assignments, or transfers thereof by the witnesses. Id.

9. The Act of Congress of February 22, 1875 (18 Stat. at L. 333), which requires that the accounts of district attorneys, clerks, marshals, etc., shall be forwarded, "when approved," to the proper accounting officers of the treasury, does not make presentation to such officers a condition precedent to a right of action, nor is rejection of a claim by the accounting officers of the treasury such a determination of a "commission or department authorized to hear and determine," within the meaning of the Act of Congress of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 505), as will bar an action in the proper courts. Erwin v. United States (D. C. S. D. Ga.) 229

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Against United States; assignment. 571

CLERK.

1. In determining the number of folios in a final record, each separate and distinct order, notice, or other paper is to be counted separately according to the rule prescribed in U. S. Rev. Stat. § 854; and the aggregate of the folios so found is the number of folios in the record. Erwin v. United States (D. C. S. D. Ga.) 230

2. Where the clerk makes the copy subpoenas or subpoena tickets, and furnishes them to the marshal for service, at the request or by the acquiescence of the district attorney, the clerk is entitled to charge the Government for making such copies. Id.

3. When the clerk states the accounts of jurors and witnesses, taking their affidavits as to travel and attendance, and presents the accounts stated in a report to the court for its approval, he is entitled to the fee prescribed by the statute "for making any report." The original orders signed by the judge should be entered of record and placed upon file by the clerk; and he is entitled to a fee of 10 cents for filing each. Id.

4. Where, by order of the court, the clerk enters upon the minutes, as memorial services in respect to the late Vice-President, a proceeding in court of official character, the fee for entering is properly chargeable to the government. Id.

5. The fees of the clerk for entering orders approving accounts of marshals, clerks, attorneys, commissioners, etc., as required by the Act of Congress of February 22, 1875 (18 Stat. at L. 333), and for certified copies of such orders for the department, are properly chargeable against the United States. Id.

6. The clerk is entitled to charge for filing each separate paper sent up by commissioners after hearing in criminal cases, and for filing each separate account of deputy marshals, being the vouchers to accounts current of the marshal. Erwin v. United States (D. C. S. D. Ga.) 229

7. The clerk is entitled to a docket fee for a hearing by the court on application for a warrant for the transportation of a defendant to another district, under the provisions of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1104. Id.

8. An attachment against a defaulting witness or juror for contempt of court is an independent suit, and a "cause" for which a docket fee is chargeable, under the fee bill. The clerk is required to make a final record of the proceedings in such a case. Id.

9. The offices of clerk and commissioner are compatible. A person who holds two distinct compatible offices may receive the compensation of each. A clerk is given a per diem fee "for his attendance" at a session of the court; a commissioner is given a per diem fee "for hearing and deciding,"—services clearly distinct. Id.

10. Since the passage of the Act of Congress of March 3, 1887 (44 Stat. at L. 541), it is not necessary that business be transacted in court to entitle the clerk to his per diem; it is sufficient if the court be opened for business by the judge. Id.

11. Where his deputy attends a session of the court, the clerk is entitled to a per diem compensation for such attendance, even though the clerk has received a per diem for his personal attendance at a session of the court at another place. Id.

12. A clerk of a Circuit or District Court of the United States is entitled to compensation for revising the jury box, at the rate of $5 per day, for a period not exceeding three days for a term of the court; also to charge 15 cents per folio for recording the names, residences, etc., of jurors, on a record which he is required to make by a rule of court. Id.

13. While the general rule is otherwise, when a statute is silent as to compensation, if additional labor is imposed on a clerk, not in the line of the duties ordinarily appertaining to such an office, and if contemporaneous construction of the statute by the Attorney-General, and analogous provisions of other statutes subsequently passed, indicate an intention to pay for such services, the officer is entitled to compensation. Id.

14. The affidavit and other papers to show proper proceedings before a committing magistrate, in compliance with the constitutional provisions in respect to criminal information, in a court of the United States, should be entered on the record; and the clerk is entitled to fees for making such entries. Id.

15. The fee for attaching a seal to certified copies of commitments furnished for service on a jailer by a clerk is properly allowed. Id.

16. A clerk of a court of the United States is entitled to fees for making certified copies of writs of commitment to be served on the jailer, where prisoners are committed to the local jails of the State. Id.

3 L. R. A.

CLOUD ON TITLE.

When possession has been taken of vacant land, after payment of taxes for seven years under color of title, another person, having notice of such reduction to possession, has no right, although claiming title, to take possession except by due legal procedure; and if he takes possession by any other means, he is a mere trespasser, and has no standing to maintain a suit to quiet title. Gage v. Hampton (Ill.) 512

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Removal of. 659

CLUB. See INTOXICATING LIQUORS, 2, 3.

CODE. See STATUTES, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

COLLATERAL INHERITANCE TAX. See STATUTES, 11; TAXES 31, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

COLLEGE.

1. The provisions of the New York Revised Statutes as to the incorporation of colleges are not restricted to colleges incorporated by the Regents of the University of the State, but apply also, except as otherwise provided, to colleges created by special charters. Re McGraw's Estate (N. Y.) 387

2. An agreement made August 4, 1886, between the State of New York, through the commissioners of the land office acting under and by virtue of N. Y. Laws 1886, chap. 481, and Ezra Cornell, for the sale to the latter of the agricultural land scrip held by the State, must be construed to make such sale at 80 cents per acre, with an additional 80 cents if so much should be thereafter realized on the sale by the vendee; and the fact that he agreed to pay his profits, if any were realized, into the treasury of the State as the property of Cornell University, does not make such profits any portion of the purchase price of the scrip. These profits which he hoped to realize, and which were entirely speculative, were paid over, not as a debt to the State, but as a gift of his own to the university. Id.

3. Section 5 of the Charter of Cornell University, which provides that "the corporation hereby created may hold real and personal property not exceeding $3,000,000 in the aggregate," gives the measure of the power of the university to take, as well as to hold, real property. It cannot be held that, while the power of a college, given by 1 N. Y. Rev. Stat. 480, "to take and hold by gift, grant, or devise any real or personal property the income or revenue of which shall not exceed the value of $25,000," is enlarged in respect to the power to hold property, the power to take is thereby left unlimited. Id.

COLLISION. See SHIPPING, 1.

COMMERCE. See also INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION.

The power to regulate commerce among the several States comprehends the power to regulate the navigable waters of the United States on which such commerce may be or is carried; and to this end Congress may make any regulation concerning such navigation, including the vessels engaged therein, as may be necessary and proper to secure and maintain the safety and convenience of the waterway; which regulations are as applicable to vessels engaged only in intrastate commerce thereon as to those engaged in interstate commerce. The City of Salem (D. C. Or.) 890

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Power of Congress to regulate or tax. 298
Interstate; when vessel engaged in. 890

COMMERCIAL AGENCIES. See LIBEL AND SLANDER, 4.

COMMISSIONERS. See RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS.

CONDEMNATION. See EMINENT DOMAIN.

CONDITION. See REAL PROPERTY, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

CONFLICT OF LAWS. See also WILLS, 1.

1. The rule that contracts made out of the State, which contravene the policy of the State, will be held void, does not make void an assignment for creditors merely because it does not have annexed to it the schedule required in such cases by the laws of the State, as such schedules are not parts of the contract. Birds-eye v. Baker (Ga.) 99

2. An assignment made in the State of New York, which is legal there, will not be held void in Georgia for failure to attach such a schedule and inventory as the law of that State requires in such cases of assignment, under the provision of Ga. Code, § 8, that a writing intended to have effect in that State must be in conformity to the laws of that State, where there is nothing to show that it was intended to have effect in Georgia, merely because debts were due by citizens of that State to the assignors and were assigned in the instrument. Id.

3. The situs of a debt follows the creditor, and where the debtor and creditor reside in different States, the law of the domicile of the creditor prevails. Id.

4. An assignment for creditors, made in New York in conformity with the laws of that State, passes the title to property in Pennsylvania, as between residents of New York, although the assignment has never been recorded in Pennsylvania in accordance with the Pennsylvania Act of May 8, 1855 (P. L. 415). Bacon v. Horne (Pa.) 855

5. A contract in a bill of lading for a shipment from Boston to Atlanta, although it would not have been a good contract if made in Georgia, not being intended to take effect wholly in Georgia, can be enforced in that State if it is a good contract in Massachusetts. Western & A. R. Co. v. Exposition Cotton Mills (Ga.) 102

6. A widow appointed administratrix of her husband in Nebraska may sue a railroad company in Kansas for causing her husband's death in that State, to enforce a cause of action given by the Kansas Statute to the administratrix, as the statute does not limit the right to an administratrix appointed in the State of Kansas. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Lewis (Nebr.) 67

7. The distribution of money recovered in Nebraska on a cause of action, under the Kansas Statute, for causing the death of a person in Kansas, may be enforced in the former State in the manner prescribed by the Statute of Kansas. Id.

8. Citizens of Tennessee prohibited by its laws from marrying because of their adultery while one of them was married to another person are not protected from a prosecution in that State for lewdness in living together as man and wife, by leaving the State temporarily for the manifest purpose of evading its laws and contracting a marriage in Alabama, where such marriages are not prohibited. Pennegar v. State (Tenn.) 708

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also BANKRUPTCY.
Validity of foreign assignment. 100
Validity of contract; assignment for creditors. 338, 855

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also BANKRUPTCY.
Validity of foreign assignment. 100
Validity of contract; assignment for creditors. 338, 855

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW. See also BOARD OF TRADE, 1; COMMERCE; RAILROADS, 1; STATUTES, 7-10; TAXES, 5.

1. Under the New York City Charter (Acts 1873, chap. 835, § 91) embodied in the Consolidation Act of 1882, § 64, conferring upon the Common Council of New York City the power and duty of deciding in each particular case whether the provisions as to letting a contract by public advertisement shall be dispensed with, where work for the corporation is to be performed requiring an aggregate expenditure of more than $1,000, an ordinance delegating to the Commissioner of Public Works power to decide whether work for the city shall be done by contract or otherwise is void as being an unlawful delegation of authority. Phelps v. New York (N. Y.) 626

2. A statute conferring on a commission authority to regulate the charges of railroads for transportation of passengers and freights is not a delegation of legislative power forbidden by the Constitution of Florida. McWhorter v. Pensacola & A. R. Co. (Fla.) 504

3. The constitutional provisions securing freedom of worship were not designed to prevent the adoption of reasonable rules for the use of streets; and a religious body cannot avail itself of these provisions as an authority to take possession of a city street, in violation of such rules, for the purpose of public worship therein. Com. v. Plaisted (Mass.) 142

4. That an act was done as a matter of religious worship only will not protect one from the consequences of an act which is made subject to a penalty under the law. Id.

5. It is not an unconstitutional delegation of power for the Legislature to authorize a city council to empower the city board of police to make rules and regulations in reference to itinerant musicians. Id.

6. An Act of the Legislature will not be declared invalid by the courts because it abridges the exercise of the privilege of local self-government in a particular in regard to which such privilege is not guaranteed by the Constitution. Com. v. Plaisted (Mass.) 149

7. Mass. Acts 1887, chap. 848, making a private nuisance of any fence unnecessarily exceeding 6 feet in height, maintained for the purpose of annoying owners of adjoining property, is within the limits of the police power, and is constitutional in respect to fences erected either before or after its passage. Rideout v. Knox (Mass.) 81

8. Kan. Comp. Laws 1885, chap. 28, § 47, subd. 4, authorizing the construction of railroads in streets, is not in contravention of Kan. Const. art. 13, § 4, or of the 5th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, as the constitutional right to compensation for private property taken for public use does not extend to instances where the land is not actually taken, but indirectly or consequentially injured. Ottawa, O. & C. G. R. Co. v. Larson (Kan.) 59

9. N. Y. Laws 1886, chap. 271, attempting to take away from a street railroad company which is dissolved by legislative action, the franchise which has been granted to it in perpetuity to construct and maintain a street railroad in a certain street, and to direct the sale and transfer of such franchise, and the payment of the purchase price to the city, is unconstitutional as an effort to change the ownership of the franchise without due process of law. People v. O'Brien (N. Y.) 255

10. The appointment of a receiver of property of a dissolved corporation, and the transfer of its assets to him by force of a statute, after the title to the property had become vested, by dissolution of the corporation, in its directors as trustees for the stockholders and creditors, in an action to which such directors were not parties, is a violation of the constitutional provisions in relation to the taking of property without due process of law. Id.

11. Under S. C. Const. art 9, § 8, giving counties, townships, etc., power to assess and collect taxes for corporate purposes, which thereby impliedly inhibits taxation for other purposes, a statute declaring that townships may subscribe to the stock of a railroad company, and that they shall be bodies politic and corporate, invested with the necessary powers to carry out that purpose, is unconstitutional, for the reason that townships in South Carolina, since the Act of 1870 repealing most of the provisions of the Act of 1868 organizing townships, etc., are mere territorial divisions, with no officials, no perpetual succession, no corporate powers, privileges, or purposes; and therefore power to take stock in a railroad and to levy taxes in payment therefor cannot be exercised for any corporate purpose, within the meaning of the Constitution. Floyd v. Perrin (S. C.) 249

12. The denial of due process of law resulting from the provisions of the Indiana Statute which assumes to confer authority upon the county board of equalization to increase the valuation of property of an individual taxpayer 2 L. R. A.

listed by him for taxation, by a decision which is final, without giving him an opportunity to be heard, renders such provisions unconstitutional. Kunts v. Sumption (Ind.) 655

13. The right of a nonresident to sue in the courts of a State is not one of the privileges and immunities granted to citizens of the several States by Fed. Const. art. 4, § 2. Robinson v. Ocean Steam Nav. Co. (N. Y.) 636

14. Where individual rights are concerned, and the matter is one upon which a party is entitled to be heard, a proceeding conclusively and finally disposing of individual property rights will be void, unless founded upon a law providing for notice of some kind. It is not enough that some notice or information may be given, but the law must provide for notice. Kunts v. Sumption (Ind.) 655

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES; STATUTES.

Control of business affected with public interest. 411

Attempt to create absolute liability upon railroad for killing stock. 814

Devesting property without due process. 843

Protection of rights; due process. 255, 655

CONTEMPT.

An order requiring a defendant to operate a machine invented by him (the so-called "Keely Motor"), made in a suit for a discovery as to such invention, before issue joined and before legal testimony could have been taken, and which would in effect compel him to disclose his defense, is an improvident exercise of chancery powers, and hence not sufficient to support a commitment as for a contempt in not obeying such order. Com. v. Perkins (Pa.) 223

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Lack of jurisdiction. 223

CONTRACTS.

I. NATURE AND REQUISITES.

II. CONSTRUCTION; VALIDITY.

III. PERFORMANCE; CHANGE OR EXTINGUISHMENT.

IV. ACTIONS; IMPAIRING OBLIGATIONS.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also ASSUMPSIT, 4; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 1; CORPORATIONS, 18; HUSBAND AND WIFE, 1-3; INSURANCE, 5; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES, 7.

I. NATURE AND REQUISITES.

1. A contract with the city of New York, for the consideration of $975, to substitute cherry for pine in finishing the interior of a public building in process of construction under a valid contract, need not be founded upon a sealed bid or proposal, under the Consolidation Act, § 64, requiring contracts for extra work to be so founded where "the several parts of the said work or supply shall together involve the expenditure of more than $1,000." Brady v. New York (N. Y.) 751

2. Where a verbal order is given to an agent for goods, which he immediately enters in a memorandum book, and the purchaser subsequently writes to the other party: "Don't ship paint ordered through your salesman; we have concluded not to handle it."—the written entry by the agent, taken in connection with the letter, makes such a note or memorandum in writing of the bargain as will satisfy the requirements of the Statute of Frauds. Louisville Asphalt Varnish Co. v. Lorick (S. C.) 212

8. The parol agreement of a wife, in consideration of her husband's leaving her his property by will absolutely, to transfer the remainder, after she was done with it, to his heirs, may, after her death leaving it unperformed, be enforced against her representatives notwithstanding the Statute of Frauds. Glipatrick v. Glidden (Me.) 662

4. An agreement by a vendor, on rescission of a contract, to reimburse the other party for expenditures upon the land, is not within the Statute of Frauds. Houston v. Sledge (N. C.) 487

5. A lease made on December 15, 1887, for the year 1888, may be valid, although not in writing, under Miss. Code, § 1292, excepting from the necessity of writing a lease for not longer than one year. McCoy v. Toney (Miss.) 847

6. The fact that a promise to marry was made six years before the writing was drawn and signed does not impeach the consideration of the contract, as the written instrument merges mere oral negotiations. McNutt v. McNutt (Ind.) 372

II. CONSTRUCTION; VALIDITY.

7. A written contract for building a house, stipulating that no charge for extra work or materials shall be made, unless ordered in writing, will not prevent the contractor from recovering for extra expense incurred on the express agreement of the other party to pay for it, or on his request therefor, under circumstances implying a consent to be liable for it, irrespective of the written contract. Parties cannot by contract tie up their freedom of dealing with each other. Bartlett v. Stanchfield (Mass.) 625

8. A telegram by a bank offering to pay a draft by a certain person for $2,000 means to pay it at the bank's place of business, and imposes no obligation to accept a draft for $2,000 "with exchange" on another place. Lindley v. Waterloo First Nat. Bank (Iowa) 709

9. A clause in a contract made in the United States, by citizens thereof, for the sale of a certain English patent, that "it is understood that said English patent is in full form and effect, otherwise said H. is to be relieved from payment," etc.,—construed to mean that the patent was to be "of effect" in a sense that a United States patent must be to obtain recognition in our courts. Chemical Electric Light & Power Co. v. Howard (Mass.) 168

10. A father purchased real estate, and had it conveyed to his son by an absolute deed. In a suit in equity by the heirs, after the father's death, to set up a resulting trust in their favor, they cannot be permitted to show that the conveyance to the son was made for a fraudulent purpose by the father, in order to rebut the presumption that it was an advancement or gift to the son. McClintock v. Loiseau (W. Va.) 816

11. Fraud in the decision of an arbitrator, to whose decision a question is referred by contract, may be set up in a suit on the contract, in avoidance of his decision, even though it does not appear that the party who would benefit by it has colluded. Chism v. Schipper (N. J.) 544

III. PERFORMANCE; CHANGE OR EXTINGUISHMENT.

12. Where a contract has been made to accomplish a fraudulent purpose, a court of equity will not, at the suit of a party to the fraud,—a particeps delicti,—if the contract is executory, either compel its execution or decree its cancellation, or, after it has been executed, set it aside, and thus restore to the plaintiff the property or other interest which he has fraudulently transferred. It will leave the parties in the position in which they have placed themselves. This rule applies, not only to the original parties to the fraudulent transaction, but to their heirs, and to all parties claiming under or by title derived from them, where no equitable rights intervene to protect such parties. McClintock v. Loiseau (W. Va.) 816

13. A mechanics' lien given by statute is liable always to be modified, altered, or repealed by the same power that created it. Being only a means for enforcing the payment of a debt arising from the performance of a contract, it is not a vested right, but may be taken away without impairing the obligation of the contract. Hanes v. Wade (Mich.) 498

14. A married woman who, during minority, joins with her husband in a conveyance of her land in which he has a life interest, is under no obligation, before rescinding, to refund purchase money paid to the husband and which did not come to her hands, but which may be presumed to have been paid for his interest. She must, however, pay her individual indebtedness to the grantee, which he canceled at the time of the conveyance as part of the consideration thereof. Stull v. Harris (Ark.) 741

15. The fact that a deed of trust was made by a man while sick, troubled, and under nervous excitement, to a trustee acting as his counsel, for the purpose of coercing his wife into a separation on advantageous terms, will not prevent the grantor from demanding a reconveyance, on the ground that the transaction was against public policy and that he was in pari delicto. James v. Steere (R. I.) 164

16. An attorney will be ordered to reconvey land conveyed to him by a client in trust for his children, for the purpose of coercing his wife to a separation on advantageous terms, although it contains no power of revocation, where the client was under a misapprehension as to the trustee's power to reconvey. Id.

17. The certificate of the proper officer that certain work is necessary to complete or perfect a particular job which is being performed for the city of New York, or that any supply is needful for any particular purpose, is conclusive as between the one contracting to furnish such work or supply and the city, where there is no allegation of fraud, and where the facts indicate that the necessity certified is a possible incident of such work or supply. Brady v. New York (N. Y.) 751

IV. ACTIONS; IMPAIRING OBLIGATIONS.

18. A judicial sale of the equitable interest of a deceased vendee in a contract for lands will not bar an action by his widow to recover the value of improvements, on an agreement by the vendor to pay her therefor in consideration of rescission of the contract for the lands. Houston v. Sledge (N. C.) 487

19. The time of payment of a pecuniary obligation is a material provision in the contract, and a creditor cannot be compelled by statute to accept payment in advance. People v. O'Brien (N. Y.) 255

20. A statute making proof of the cost of an obligation the measure of the creditor's recovery, instead of the liability of the debtor as shown by the terms of his contract, is unconstitutional. Id.

21. The provision of N. Y. Laws 1850, § 48, that the repealing of a charter shall not impair any remedy existing against the corporation, its directors or officers, upon a liability previously incurred, is a contract protected by the provisions of the Federal Constitution. Id.

22. A tax deed made in pursuance of a sale of property for a delinquent tax, under an Act which provides that such deed shall be conclusive evidence of the regularity of the assessment, except for fraud, is a contract with the State that the deed shall so far remain conclusive evidence of title in the grantee therein; and a subsequent Act of the Legislature, making such deed only prima facie evidence of such regularity, is void because it impairs the obligation of the contract. Tracy v. Reed (C. C. D. Or.) 778

23. It cannot be presumed, without the clearest language indicating such an intention, that parties to a contract anticipated the enactment of an unconstitutional law, or contracted upon such assumption; and therefore a contract between street railroad companies, to make no change in rates of fare so long as the rates allowed by law upon a certain date shall be received, will terminate by force of its own limitation when a statute is passed reducing such rates. Buffalo East Side R. Co. v. Buffalo Street R. Co. (N. Y.) 884

24. A statute making it unlawful for street railroad companies in a certain city to charge the rates of fare then received does not impair the obligation of a contract between two of the companies operating street railroads in that city, by which they have agreed not to change the rates without the consent of each other. Id.

25. The Pennsylvania Act of 1868 (P. L. 53) limiting the amount to be recovered in actions against railroad companies and common carriers for negligence to $3,000 in case of personal injuries and $5,000 in case of death, providing that "upon the acceptance of the provisions hereof by any carrier or corporation the same shall become a part of its Act of incorporation," does not constitute a contract with a corporation, and is abrogated by the new Constitution of Pennsylvania, art. 3, § 21, providing that no statute shall limit the amount of recovery for injuries resulting in death, or for injuries to persons or property. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Bowser (Pa.) 631

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also HUSBAND AND WIFE.

Merger of preliminary negotiations. 153
Presumption as to, binding personal representatives. 184

Sufficiency of memorandum; note in private book of salesman. 212

Effect of legislation upon. 284

Requiring certificate from architect; effect of fraud. 545

With municipality; changes in, as to extra work. 751

To stifle competition in trade; conspiracies to injure trade; monopolies. 33

Statute of Frauds; memorandum of agreement; sufficiency of; in several writings; what must contain; as evidence. 212

Statute of Frauds; attempt to defraud by. 663

Fraudulent or illegal; denial of remedy. 817

CORPORATIONS.

I. NATURE; CREATION; FRANCHISES.

II. POWERS, LIABILITIES, AND OFFICERS.

III. STOCK AND STOCKHOLDERS.

IV. DISSOLUTION.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also BENEFIT SOCIETIES; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 9, 10; COURTS, 13; EVIDENCE, 23; INSURANCE; JUDGMENT, 3, 4, 7; MASTER AND SERVANT, 6; PLEADING, 1, 10, 11; STATUTES, 9, 10, 19; STREET RAILWAYS; TAXES; TRUSTS, 1.

I. NATURE; CREATION; FRANCHISES.

1. Cal. Const. art. 4, § 81, providing that corporations shall not be created by special Act, does not prohibit the assignment of a franchise to a legally organized corporation by persons having the lawful right to transfer the same. People, Attorney-General, v. Stanford (Cal.) 93

2. A corporation cannot be sued as such and brought into court, and the action maintained against it, on the ground that it is not a corporation; and other defendants sued jointly with it cannot be charged in such an action with having jointly, with such corporation, usurped the rights of a corporation, etc.,—because by suing a corporation as such its existence is admitted. Id.

3. The centralization of corporate franchises in a single irresponsible power furnished with every delegated facility for regulating and controlling at will, throughout the country, the production and price of a particular and necessary article of commerce,—viz., refined sugar,—creates a monopoly in a legal sense, is detrimental to the public, and is consequently unlawful. People v. North River Sugar Refin. Co. (N. Y.) 33

4. A trust which is, in effect, the uniting of several corporations into a practical consolidation or partnership not authorized by their charters, or effected under the statutes in reference to consolidation of corporations, is ultra vires, and warrants the forfeiture of corporate existence. Id.

5. The formation of the "sugar trust" denominated the "Sugar Refineries Company," an unincorporated association composed of a board of trustees created under a deed of trust executed in the names of certain sugar refining corporations and partnerships owning nearly all the sugar refineries in the country, with the express object of promoting economy of administration, and reducing the cost of refining, and promoting the interest of all parties to the deed in all lawful ways, in accordance with the terms of which such partnerships were turned into corporations, and the stock of all the corporations was then transferred to such trustees, in lieu of which they issued trust certificates to the stockholders of the several corporations,—is to be considered as the corporate act of the corporations concerned, and not simply the individual act of the stockholders. Id.

6. A corporation which has entered into an illegal combination creating a monopoly is, by reason thereof, liable to forfeiture and dissolution, at the suit of the People, under N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 1796, for the abuse of its powers and for the exercise of privileges and franchises not conferred upon it by law. Id.

II. POWERS, LIABILITIES, AND OFFICERS.

7. The power conferred by the New York Act of 1859 upon a railroad corporation to contract with another for the use of their respective roads in such manner as the contract may prescribe involves the power to make a lease for a term of years. Beveridge v. New York Elevated R. Co. (N. Y.) 648

8. Where a tripartite agreement between three corporations has been held invalid as to one of them, an action to sever the contractual relations is within the honest discretion of the directors of the other companies. Id.

9. An agreement by the directors of a corporation, made in good faith and with apparent reasons, to reduce the amount of moneys payable under a lease of their corporation, is not in excess of their power or voidable at the instance of the stockholders, especially where nearly nine tenths of them have acquiesced and given practical effect to the agreement. Id.

10. A corporation, although created for a limited period, may take from a city in which the title to streets is vested, by a grant of a franchise to maintain a street railroad, an interest in perpetuity which is irrevocable. People v. O'Brien (N. Y.) 255

11. A corporation, by the common law, had power to take property by devise. Re McGraw's Estate (N. Y.) 887

12. A devise or bequest to a corporation of property which will exceed the amount or value which the corporation is by law permitted to take will be void for the excess; and as to that excess no title will vest for a single moment in the corporation, but will vest instantly in the heir or next of kin. The power to raise the question of the right of the corporation to take the property is not confined to 2 L. R. A.

the State, but the question may be raised by the heirs or next of kin. Id.

13. Under a provision of the Constitution of the State of Georgia, reciting that "the General Assembly of this State shall have no power to authorize any corporation to buy shares or stock in any other corporation in this State or elsewhere, or to make any contract or agreement whatever with any such corporation, which may have the effect, or be intended to have the effect, to defeat or lessen competition in their respective businesses, or to encourage monopoly; and all such agreements and contracts shall be illegal and void,"—a purchase, by a railway company in Georgia, of the contract to construct the line of a competitive company, and of the securities of such competitive company, with a view to prevent the construction of such competing line, is illegal and void, although accomplished indirectly, and constitutes all concerned in such illegal transaction trustees, as to assets resulting therefrom, for the benefit of persons whose rights have been invaded. Langdon v. Central R. & Bkg. Co. (O. C. S. D. Ga.) 120

14. The liability imposed on the officers of a corporation by N. Y. Act 1875, chap. 611, § 21, for debts of the corporation incurred while they were officers, if any certificate, report, or notice by them shall be false in any material representation, is in the nature of a penalty, and cannot be enforced by the courts of another State. Atrill v. Huntington (Md.) 779

III. STOCK AND STOCKHOLDERS.

15. A stockholder may, without consulting the directors, bring an action to enjoin them from unlawfully transferring the stock to a consolidated corporation. Botts v. Simpsonville & B. C. Turnp. Co. (Ky.) 594

16. Whether or not the Legislature can authorize the consolidation of a corporation, under the general power reserved to alter or annul the charter, it cannot do so when the rights of stockholders will thereby be affected by increasing their liability as such, or diminishing the value of their stock, unless the consolidation is made by the unanimous consent of the stockholders. Id.

17. The clause in the charter of a turnpike company, that it, "in matters not expressed in the charter, shall have the rights and privileges granted to the most favored turnpike companies," will not authorize a consolidation against the consent of the stockholder. Id.

18. A guaranty by one corporation, on a lease of the road of another, of an annual dividend of 10 per cent on the capital stock of the lessor company, creates no privity between the lessee company and the stockholders of the other; and a statement printed on the certificates of stock to the effect that such dividend is guaranteed, purporting only to be a statement of a fact having reference to an agreement between the companies, which statement is not signed by the lessee company, does not constitute any contract with the stockholders. Beveridge v. New York Elevated R. Co. (N. Y.) 618

19. Whether or not a claim of damages for waste is an indebtedness of a corporation, within the scope of Or. Const. art. 11, § 8, mak ing a stockholder liable for the indebtedness of the corporation to the amount unpaid on his stock, a judgment obtained thereon is such an indebtedness. Powell v. Oregonian R. Co. (C. D. Or.) 270

20. A purchaser, at a sale on execution, of stock in a corporation, which defendant had previously transferred in good faith on the books of the corporation as collateral security, acquires no title by such purchase so as to make him chargeable with liability as a stockholder to the creditors of the corporation. Simmons v. Hill (Mo.) 476

21. The transfer, on the books of a corporation, of stock by persons holding it as collateral security, to one who had bid off such stock on execution against his debtor, who had pledged it as collateral, does not make him liable as a stockholder, where such transfer is made without his request or knowledge. The fact that he had bid it off on execution does not, by implication, authorize such transfer. Id.

22. A bona fide purchaser of certificates of corporate stock standing on the company's books in the name of the former owner, regularly indorsed by him in blank, and stolen from the present owner without his fault, gets no title, because such instruments are not negotiable. East Birmingham Land Co. v. Dennis (Ala.) 836

IV. DISSOLUTION.

23. A proceeding to dissolve a mutual benefit society, or to remove its officers, for failure to make proper reports or for improperly conducting its business, instituted under Ill. Act 1883, § 10, is not a criminal prosecution within the meaning of Ill. Const. art. 6, § 33, which requires criminal prosecutions to be carried on "in the name and by the authority of the People of the State of Illinois," but is a civil proceeding to protect property rights, and may be brought in equity by the attorney-general in his own name. Chicago Mut. L. Indemnity Assn. v. Hunt (Ill.) 549

24. Jurisdiction to decree the dissolution of a corporation may be conferred upon courts of equity by statute; and such jurisdiction is so conferred by the Illinois Act of 1883 (1 Starr & C. Stat. 1349) in reference to mutual benefit societies. Id.

25. The franchise of a street railroad company, under which it is authorized to construct and maintain a street railroad and run cars thereon for the transportation of freight and passengers, survives the dissolution of the corporation. People v. O'Brien (N. Y.) 255

26. An express reservation by the Legislature of power to repeal a charter can give no authority to take away or destroy property lawfully acquired or created under authority conferred by the charter. Id.

27. Whether the attorney-general, who has brought an action to wind up the affairs of a corporation in which a receiver has been appointed, and which is still pending undetermined, can, to avoid multiplicity of suits and to carry out the provisions of N. Y. Laws 1886, chap. 810, maintain another action in aid of the former, to obtain a judgment declaratory of the rights and liabilities of the several parties.

as affected by the dissolution of the corporation, and to determine the fact as to what were the assets of the company, and the extent of the interests of the several parties therein, and to restrain mortgagees and contractors and others from enforcing their rights in and liens upon the property, by legal proceedings,—doubted, but not decided. Id.

28. Neb. Const. art. 11, § 8, denying the right of eminent domain to a railroad corporation organized under the laws of another State or of the United States, until it has become a body corporate under the laws of Nebraska, does not prohibit existing railroad companies, one of which is a domestic corporation, from forming a new corporation by consolidation, pursuant to the laws of the State, and thereby becoming a domestic corporation. State, Leese, v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. (Neb.) 564

29. A corporation consolidated under the provisions of Neb. Comp. Stat. 1887, chap. 16, § 114, by the union of a corporation operating a railroad from a point within the State, on the Missouri River, and another corporation organized under the Laws of Illinois and of Iowa, operating a railroad from a point on the Missouri River directly opposite the terminus of the other road, to Chicago, is not a foreign corporation. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also BANKS AND BANKING; TAXES.

Rights of stockholders; mortgage on stock; directors as trustees. 467

Directors as trustees; liability for frauds and breaches of trust; obligation as to care and prudence. 584

Liability of directors for negligence; capital stock as trust fund. 585

Amendment of charter. 623

Contract disposing of all property; compelling dividend; effect, as to stockholders, of agreement between corporations; rights of minority of stockholders. 643

Transfer of stock. 887

Forfeiture of franchise; how declared. 265

Liability of stockholder. 270

Power to take property by will and to hold property. 387

As trustee. 418

Acts ultra vires. 420

Dissolution of; remedy of stockholder; jurisdiction of equity. 549

Consolidation of; partnership. 564

Consolidation of; suit to restrain. 594

COSTS AND FEES. See also CLAIMS, 8.

1. The fact that a party signs his bill pro se, where it is not shown that he was not in fact represented by other solicitors, does not prevent him from claiming a solicitor's fee on the foreclosure of a mortgage containing a provision for such fee. Barry v. Guild (Ill.) 334

2. An independent foreign government is "a person residing without the State," within the meaning of N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 3266, requiring security for costs from such persons. Republic of Honduras v. Soto (N. Y.) 643

3. When a deposit of money, as security for costs, has once been made, the court has no authority, under N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 8276, to require any additional security. Id.

COUNTIES.

The provision of Mo. Const. art. 10, § 12, that "no county shall be allowed to become indebted, in any manner or for any purpose, to an amount exceeding in any year the income and revenue provided for such year," is to be construed as referring to that class of debts which it is optional with the county court or other governing body of the county to incur, and not to compulsory obligations cast on the county by operation of law. Barnard v. Knox County (C. C. E. D. Mo.) 426

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Constitutional limitation on debts. 426

COUPONS. See BONDS, NOTES AND BRIEFS; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, 6.

COURTS. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 18; CORPORATIONS, 14, 24; EMINENT DOMAIN, 1; EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, 8, 4; INJUNCTION, 5; JUDGMENT, 3; SUMMARY PROCEEDINGS; WILLS, 2, 8.

1. The courts of the United States sitting in equity may administer, in suits of which they have jurisdiction, equitable rights peculiar to the laws of the State where the courts are held. Fechheimer v. Baum (C. C. S. D. Ga.) 153

2. The equity jurisdiction of the federal courts may extend to a suit for the disclosure and distribution of assets held by an executor de son tort, although such suit could not be maintained in the state courts for the reason that the probate system of the State affords a complete remedy. Rich v. Bray (C. C. W. D. Mo.) 225

3. Jurisdiction is not conferred on a federal court by making a necessary party, whose interests are all in common with those of the complainants, a nominal defendant, in order that all the complainants may be nonresidents of the State in which the suit is brought and of which the defendants are citizens. Id.

4. To give jurisdiction to a federal circuit court, where two or more parties, whose interests are so separate that any number of them may proceed with the litigation without the others, join, as a matter of convenience to prevent multiplicity of suits, in one action for the ascertainment and distribution of their respective interests in a common fund, the interests of each, independent of the others, must amount to $2,000. Id.

5. An action for damages for the breach of a written contract of lease is an action "founded upon contract," in the sense of that language as used in the restriction contained in the Act of Congress of March 3, 1875, § 1; and a Circuit Court of the United States cannot take cognizance of such a suit in favor of an assignee unless the same might have been prosecuted by the assignor if no assignment had been made. Republic Iron Min. Co. v. Jones (C. C. N. D. Ga.) 746

6. A state law passed since 1789 cannot affect criminal procedure in the federal courts. 2 L. R. A.

A final record was required to be made by the clerk at common law, and the general method of making the record prescribed by the common law should be followed now, subject to such changes as have been wrought by the character of our institutions and the modifications made necessary by the enlarged Bill of Rights of the Federal Constitution. Ervin v. United States (D. C. S. D. Ga.) 220

7. The right asserted by a petitioner asking for the enforcement of an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission arises and is claimed under a law of the United States which relates to a subject over which Congress has exclusive control; and this is sufficient to sustain the jurisdiction of the circuit court, independent of the citizenship of the parties to the controversy, since it involves a federal question. Kentucky & I. Bridge Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (C. C. D. Ky.) 289

8. Congress, in establishing "inferior courts" and prescribing their jurisdiction, must confer upon the judges appointed to administer them the constitutional tenure of office,—that of holding "during good behavior,—before they can become invested with any portion of the judicial power of the government. Id.

9. Where jurisdiction of a Circuit Court of the United States is based on the fact that the parties on one side are citizens of a different State from any of those on the other, a suit to enforce a lien or trust may be brought in the district where the property is situated and where some of the defendants claiming an equitable lien thereon reside, although neither the plaintiffs nor the defendant who owns the property reside in that district. Langdon v. Central R. & Bkg. Co. (C. C. S. D. Ga.) 126

10. Whether, in any given case, the Legislature has transcended its power and passed a law in conflict with the constitutional limitation in respect to local or special laws, is essentially a question of law, and must necessarily be decided by the courts. Ayars's Appeal (Pa.) 577

11. A construction by officers having the enforcement of the tax laws of Ohio, since the enactment thereof, to the effect that, under such laws, shares held by residents of Ohio of stock of foreign railroad corporations having property in Ohio on which they pay taxes, and of consolidated railroad companies, are not taxable in Ohio, does not bind the successors of such officers, or the State, in the proper assessment and collection of taxes upon such shares. Western Ins. Co. v. Ratterman (Ohio) 556

12. The appointment of a nonresident as an administrator in the State of New York does not authorize him to sue as a resident of the State, under N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 1780. Robinson v. Ocean Steam Nav. Co. (N. Y.) 636

13. No court in the State of New York has jurisdiction of an action by a nonresident against a foreign corporation on a cause of action which did not arise within the State. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Jurisdiction of suit to determine validity of devise; interference with proceedings before surrogate; concurrent jurisdiction in equity;

auxiliary jurisdiction; retaining suit in court whence process first issued. 175

Federal; equity jurisdiction; matter in dispute. 225

Federal; jurisdiction as to bridge over navigable waters; removal of cause relating to bridge across navigable river. 540

Federal; nonjudicial power. 295

Federal; jurisdiction of; suit by assignee of chose in action; dismissal of suit. 746

Enforcement of penal laws of foreign State. 779

Jurisdiction of executors and administrators. 828

COVENANT. See also VENDOR AND PURCHASER, 1, 2.

1. A covenant of warranty of title in a deed conveying a tract of land on which is situated a mill and dam embraces an easement as to ponded water occasioned by such dam or back water therefrom, on an adjoining tract of land of another person, and like easements necessary and incident to the free use and beneficial enjoyment of the mill and dam conveyed, although such easements are not expressly mentioned in the deed. Bowling v. Burton (N. C.) 285

2. A stipulation in a deed of land to a railroad company, that the company shall construct and maintain a fence along its right of way where land is used solely for pasturage and enclosed on the other sides, so long as it is used exclusively for pasturage, is not a covenant running with the land, and cannot be enforced by a subsequent owner of such land. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Smith (Tex.) 281

3. To constitute a breach of a covenant for quiet enjoyment (or warranty, which is in fact equivalent), there must be a union of acts of disturbance and lawful title. Barry v. Guild (Ill.) 834

4. Testimony of a person that he "saw evidence of the possession of the third party in the shape of a derrick and tool-house situated on the land, operated by a stone company," where it does not show whether the stone company had or claimed possession of 1 acre or 20, or that it claimed to hold under lawful title; and testimony of the vendee's agent, "that he never could get possession," without stating what efforts were made; where it does not appear that any of the land is occupied except by the derrick and tool house, — is not sufficient to show a breach of covenant of quiet enjoyment of a tract of 20 acres of land. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

In grant to corporation; running with land; personal covenants binding on purchaser; enforcement of restrictive covenants; discretion of court. 199

For quiet enjoyment; warranty; running with land; estoppel by. 834

CRIMINAL LAW.

In a State where the use of jails for United States prisoners is permitted, whenever a prisoner is committed to jail a copy of the writ of commitment, showing the grounds therefor, 2 L. R. A.

should be left with the jailer, whether the commitment is pending examination, or for trial, or after conviction. Erwin v. United States (D. C. S. D. Ga.) 229

CURTESY. See also MINES AND MINING, 2.

Executors, by paying taxes and selling a portion of the estate in coal, which is reserved from the sale of the surface of the ground, but who are not in the actual occupancy or possession of the property, and have no interest therein except a simple power of sale, are in no such possession as to prevent a seisin of the owner sufficient to support a claim of curtesy by her husband after her death. Hankin's Appeal (Pa.) 429

CUSTOM AND USAGE. See also CARRIERS, 16-19; EASEMENT, 1; EVIDENCE, 28, 57, 58; STATUTES, 18; USURY, 8.

1. No usage is good which conflicts with an established principle of law. East Birmingham Land Co. v. Dennis (Ala.) 836

2. A custom of railroads not to receive for transportation any livestock unless under certain conditions modifying their common-law liability would be contrary to law and public policy. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Fagan (Tex.) 75

3. A custom which is not pleaded cannot be considered as modifying an unambiguous written promise on which an action is based. Lindley v. Waterloo First Nat. Bank (Iowa) 709

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also PLEADING.

Effect on legal right. 87

Effect of. 823

Effect on carrier's liability. 75

DAMAGES. See also CONTRACTS, 25; INSURANCE, 20, 22; NEW TRIAL, 2, 3; PLEADING, 7; TELEGRAPH COMPANIES.

1. A woman carried by a railroad train beyond her station, at which the railroad employes refused to put her off, and to whom they "were indecorous or insulting, either in words, tone, or manner," may be allowed to recover punitive damages. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Ballard (Ky.) 694

2. A judgment for $3,005 damages in favor of a woman who was carried past her station on a railroad train, in consequence of which she was obliged to walk between one and two miles, carrying a large bundle and valise, and, by the exertion and excitement thereby caused, was made sick for several days, and who was treated in an insulting manner by the railroad employes, will not be set aside as excessive, where substantially the same amount has been given on a former trial. Id.

3. Exemplary or vindictive damages may be given for the refusal to sell a passenger a ticket or to check his baggage to a regular station of a passenger train, in pursuance of an unreasonable regulation of the company which indicates a wanton disregard of the rights of passengers. Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Lyon (Pa.) 459

4. Improvements made for public use by a railroad company lawfully in possession, with the right to condemn for such use at any time, do not belong to the owner of the land, and the value thereof will not be allowed him as damages on condemnation. The maxim quicquid plantatur solo, solo cedit, does not apply in such a case. St. Johnsbury & L. O. R. Co. v. Willard (Vt.) 538

5. When a part of a farm or tract of land is appropriated for the right of way of a railroad, danger from fire to buildings, fences, timber, or crops upon the remainder, in so far as it depreciates the value of the property, may be properly considered in giving compensation to the landowner. Leroy & W. R. Co. v. Ross (Kan.) 217

6. Where a railroad is laid through a farm or tract of land used for stock purposes, or adapted to stock purposes, the accidental danger to which stock thereon will be exposed may be considered in giving compensation to the landowner for the right of way appropriated for the railroad, so far as the same affects the value or depreciation of the land, or tract of land, but not any danger or probable injury resulting from the fault or negligence of the railroad company in operating or failing to fence its road. Id.

7. Under the provisions of Kan. Const. art. 12, § 4, a railroad company must make full compensation for the right of way appropriated to the corporation, irrespective of any benefits or supposed benefits from the construction of the road, or any improvement thereby. Id.

8. The owner of a coal mine is not entitled to any damages in a suit for an injunction, from the fact that one of the defendants had driven away from the mine a person who had a contract with the plaintiff, without any limit as to time, to take coal at a certain price per bushel, and who had cleaned out the entry to the mine, for which plaintiff had paid nothing, where it does not appear that plaintiff may not still mine and sell the coal and get a higher price for it. Rankin's Appeal (Pa.) 429

9. Where mares being with foal are shipped, they constitute freight having what is called an inherent defect; and if they lose their foal on the way, the measure of damages is not the difference in their market value as they are and what it would have been had they arrived in good condition; but if the loss is total, it is the price, less freight charges, they would have brought if delivered in reasonable time, having had due and necessary care while in the carrier's possession; and if the loss is partial, it is the difference between such price, less freight, and the actual value of the animals as delivered. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Fagan (Tex.) 75

10. In an action of assumpsit for weekly benefits due from a relief association, recovery can be had only for what was due at the time the writ issued. Baltimore & O. Employees Relief Assn. v. Post (Pa.) 44

11. One who violates a duty owed to others, or commits a tortious or wrongfully negligent act, is liable, not only for those injuries which are the direct and immediate consequences of his act, but for such consequential injuries as, according to common experience, are likely to and in fact do result from his act. Smethu'at v. Independent Cong. Church (Mass.) 695

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Exemplary; right to recover. 490

By appropriation of right of way; elements of; inconvenience; reasonably anticipated; speculative and contingent; danger of fire; special; injury to farm or tract of land as a whole; rule as to measure of; uses and purposes of land considered; tract cut off. 217

In eminent domain. 528

In eminent domain; assessment of. 423

For conversion. 449

For breach of contract; for neglect of duty to deliver telegram; for mental anguish. 766

In action against benefit society. 766

DEATH.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also ACTION OR SUIT.

Caused by negligence; action for. 520

DEDICATION. See also HIGHWAYS.

1. The acceptance, by the public or by the inhabitants of a town, of landing places reserved to the public in a grant by a town, is not to be held to have been limited to those parts of the lands so reserved which were in actual use as landing places, where it appeared that the parts thereof intruded upon by private individuals could have been fitted for and used as landings, and that they were used by fishermen for the drying of nets, and by them and others for passage to actual landing places, and similar purposes connected with landings and not inconsistent therewith. Attorney-General, Adams, v. Tarr (Mass.) 87

2. An acceptance, by the public, of land for a public use, is to be construed in connection with the grant or dedication. Where that clearly includes the premises, less evidence is required to show that any particular part has been accepted than where it is uncertain whether there has been more than a partial and limited dedication. Id.

DEED. See also CONTRACTS, 16; HUSBAND AND WIFE, 9.

A vendor who has executed and acknowledged a deed with the name of the grantee left blank, and delivered it to his vendee, who fills up the blank, cannot question the title of an innocent purchaser for value. McClurey v. Wakefield (Iowa) 529

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Reservations and exceptions in. 87

Filling blank in name of grantee. 529

DEFINITIONS. See WATERS AND WATERCOURSES, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

DELIVERY. See INSURANCE, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION.
See also WILLS, 16, 17.

1. A grandchild whose father is dead and who has been adopted by his paternal grandfather, under Mass. Pub. Stat. chap. 149, cannot, if his grandfather dies intestate, inherit shares of his personality in a double capacity, as adopted son and as representative of his deceased father, but will take only one portion, and that as adopted son. Delano v. Bruerton (Mass.) 698

2. A policy of life insurance payable to the "devisees or heirs at law" of the insured, where he dies intestate without issue, is payable, under Ill. Rev. Stat. chap. 89, § 1, to his widow as sole heir, and not to his next of kin. Alexander v. Northwestern Masonic Aid Asso. (Ill.) 161

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Disinheriting heir; heirs favored at law. 849

DISCOVERY.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Essentials to bill for. 223

DISMISSAL.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Of proceeding; power of officer. 644

DIVORCE. See HUSBAND AND WIFE, 4; LIS PENDENS, 1, 2, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

DOMICIL.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

What constitutes; change of. 203

DUE PROCESS. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 12.

EASEMENTS. See also WATERS AND WATERCOURSES, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

1. A right to maintain a building or permanent structure upon the land of another cannot be acquired by custom. Attorney-General, Adams, v. Tarr (Mass.) 87

2. A party who conveys a mill and dam conveys all the easements that he has, or claims and purports to have, at the time of the conveyance, in connection therewith, incident and necessary to the just enjoyment of the mill and dam. Douling v. Burton (N. C.) 285

EMINENT DOMAIN. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 8; CORPORATIONS, 28, 29; DAMAGES, 4-7; NEW TRIAL, 2, 3; TRIAL, 7, 8.

1. Whether the use for which property is sought to be taken under the exercise of eminent domain is public or private is a judicial question, subject to review by the appellate court. Pittsburg, W. & K. R. Co. v. Benwood Iron Works (W. Va.) 680.

2. Evidence that all who wish to avail themselves of the proposed switch, branch road, or lateral work can do so, is not sufficient to show that the use of the work will be for the benefit of the public. Id.

3. The property of railroad corporations, so far as concerns the ownership thereof, and the profit or gain to be made from their use, is, in all intents and purposes private property, although applied to a use in which the public have an interest. Id.

2 L. R. A.

4. As far as the public is concerned, when what railroad corporations need is for "public use," they have the right to invoke the exercise of eminent domain; but, in so far as that which concerns them as to their private interests, their profits and gains, are concerned, they stand as individuals, or merely as private corporations, in which the public has no concern, and for such private purposes cannot call into exercise the power of eminent domain. Id.

5. Where a railroad corporation sought to condemn land over which to build a switch, branch road, or lateral work to reach a private manufactory,—a steel-mill,—for the purpose of transporting freight to and from said steel-mill over petitioner's road,—held, the use to which the land was to be subjected was a private, not a "public use." Id.

6. Under the Eminent Domain Act of Illinois, it is not intended that the right given the jury to personally examine the premises is to be construed as permitting them to disregard the sworn testimony in fixing the assessment of damages. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Schneider (Ill.) 422

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also DAMAGES; HIGHWAYS; NEW TRIAL.

Authority to take lands; title acquired. 255

Power of; exercise of right through agents; public use; necessity of taking. 690

Use of highway for railroad; damages for. 61

Power of commissioners; damages. 528

ENTIRETIES. See HUSBAND AND WIFE, 5, 8.

EQUITABLE CONVERSION. See WILLS, 15.

EQUITY. See also TRUSTS, 2.

1. A suit in equity by a woman to set aside a deed made by her former husband pending a divorce suit in which a decree was made giving her the land will not be defeated on the ground that she has a complete remedy at law. Powell v. Campbell (Nev.) 615

2. Where the material facts out of which plaintiff's rights arise are admitted, and, if there is a doubt as to his rights, it is one of law, not of fact, it is not necessary that he should first establish his rights at law before asking relief in equity. Rankin's Appeal (Pa.) 429

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also COURTS; SET-OFF AND COUNTERCLAIM,

Maxim as to coming with clean hands. 368

ESTOPPEL. See also ATTORNEYS, 2; DEED; HUSBAND AND WIFE, 12; INSURANCE, 19, 23, 24.

1. The doctrine of estoppel cannot be invoked in order to remove the incapacity of a married woman, where her contract relates to a matter concerning which all the common-law disabilities continue, so that the contract is utterly void for want of power or capacity to make it. Cook v. Walling (Ind.) 769

2. A married woman in Dakota, who, with her husband, has executed a mortgage containing covenants of seisin, quiet possession, and warranty, on her separate property, is estopped from setting up against the purchaser on foreclosure any title subsequently acquired by her, even though it is acquired after the foreclosure, and although the mortgage is a mere lien, and not an estate in the land. Yorke v. Hadley (Dak.) 863

8. One clothing an agent with apparent authority is, as to parties dealing on the faith of such authority, conclusively estopped from denying it. Hubbard v. Tenbrook (Pa.) 823

4. The principal is not estopped to deny the authority of his agent to do acts in excess of the authority expressly given him, because he might have known that the agent was exercising such power if he had exercised ordinary diligence; he is not required to distrust his agent, but may act on the presumption that third parties dealing with the agent will not be negligent in ascertaining the extent of his authority. Wheeler v. McGuire (Ala.) 808

5. To authorize a person to claim a forfeiture of valuable property rights on account of the violation of a condition upon which they are granted, he must proceed to enforce it at once. He cannot remain passive for a long time after acts have transpired upon which others have relied in matters of importance to them, and then insist upon the forfeiture in consequence thereof. Huston v. Bybee (Or.) 568

6. Where the owner of land has acquiesced for some years in sales and transfers of a ditch and water right, he thereby waives a condition in the agreement under which the ditch was constructed, that it should not be sold, but should revert to him. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also COVENANTS; HUSBAND AND WIFE; PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.

|                            |     |
|----------------------------|-----|
| To deny execution of deed. | 529 |
| As to municipal bonds.     | 242 |
| By silence.                | 741 |

EVIDENCE.

I. JUDICIAL NOTICE.

II. PRESUMPTIONS AND BURDEN OF PROOF.

III. BEST AND SECONDARY EVIDENCE.

IV. DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE.

V. PAROL EVIDENCE CONCERNING WRITINGS.

VI. OPINIONS AND CONCLUSIONS.

VII. DECLARATIONS.

VIII. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY.

IX. WEIGHT, EFFECT, AND SUFFICIENCY.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also APPEAL AND ERROR, 9; CONTRACTS, 10; TRIAL, 1.

I. JUDICIAL NOTICE.

1. A court in Indiana will take judicial notice that funds raised for or appropriated to the support of common schools pertain to the school corporation of a township, and can only be administered by the township trustee in that behalf. Skinner v. Harrison Twp. (Ind.) 187.

2 L. R. A.

2. The court will not take judicial notice of the fact that unprotected frogs and switches of a railroad are inherently unsafe and dangerous. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Lewis (Neb.) 87.

II. PRESUMPTIONS AND BURDEN OF PROOF.

8. Every intendment is to be made in favor of the constitutionality of a statute. People, Hart, v. McElroy (Mich.) 809

4. The burden of proof is on a taxpayer claiming that he has not been allowed an exemption to show that he has not, at some time or place, received it. South Nashville Street R. Co. v. Morrow (Tenn.) 858

5. Where a father purchases land and has it conveyed to his son, the presumption is that the purchase was intended to be an advancement or gift to the son, and no trust results in favor of the father. But extrinsic evidence, either written or parol, is admissible on behalf of the father to rebut this presumption, and to show that a trust results in his favor. McOlinlock v. Loiseau (W. Va.) 816

6. A grant cannot be presumed where it would have been unlawful. Donahue v. State (N. Y.) 576

7. The burden of establishing alienage of persons otherwise interested in property sought to be partitioned is upon the plaintiff in partition. Toole v. Toole (N. Y.) 465

8. In a contested election case, the burden of proof rests on the plaintiff. He must establish, to the satisfaction of the jury or trial court, that the ballots have been kept intact, and are the genuine, identical ballots cast at the election; otherwise they will receive no credence, and be rejected as unworthy of credit. Hartman v. Young (Or.) 596

9. The burden of proof to show that an agent, in a transaction for his principal, had in mind knowledge gained by him on a former occasion and in a different transaction, is upon the party who seeks to charge the principal with notice by reason of such knowledge. Constant v. Rochester University (N. Y.) 784

10. In the case of oral defamation, as in the case of written, if the words uttered are not privileged the law implies malice. Byam v. Collins (N. Y.) 129

11. In an action against a physician, based on his lack of care or skill, the burden of proof to show such lack is on the plaintiff. State Janney, v. Housekeeper (Md.) 587

12. The party who allows a surgical operation to be performed is presumed to have employed the surgeon for that purpose, and the burden of proof to show lack of consent is on the party alleging it. Id.

13. In an action by a man for the loss of a trunk containing the clothing of his wife and child, the presumption is that the child's clothing was furnished by the father, in the absence of evidence to the contrary. Richardson v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Ala.) 716

14. An injury to a passenger on a railroad train sitting next to an open window, by a blow on his eye by some hard substance, probably a piece of coal, hurled with considerable force, while the engine of another train was directly opposite the window, passing in another direction, where there is nothing to explain the cause of the accident, does not create a presumption of negligence against the carrier. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. MacKinney (Pa.) 820.

15. No presumption of negligence on the part of a carrier arises from the naked fact that an injury has been inflicted upon a passenger, unless it appears that it did not result from something entirely disconnected with the operation of the road and with which neither the company nor its employes had anything whatever to do; such presumption must arise, if at all, from the cause of injury or from other circumstances attending it. Id.

III. BEST AND SECONDARY EVIDENCE.

16. Where a witness who has testified on the first trial of a case dies before the second trial, his testimony on the first trial may be proved by persons who heard his evidence; and where it is preserved in a bill of exceptions, it can be read therefrom upon proof that the report is correct in substance. Davis v. Kline (Mo.) 78

17. Where there is evidence to show the existence of an antenuptial contract, and that it has been destroyed by one of the parties, the other party may be allowed to give parol evidence of its contents. McNutt v. McNutt (Ind.) 872

18. It is a primary rule of elections that the ballots constitute the best—the primary—evidence of the intention and choice of the voters. Hartman v. Young (Or.) 596

19. Where the court finds that the ballots have been safely kept and preserved, that no one has tampered with them, and, notwithstanding the opening of the box for the purpose of finding a poll book, that the ballots were the genuine, identical ballots cast by the voters of a precinct, such ballots are the best evidence. Id.

20. As between ballots shown or admitted to be the identical ballots cast by the voters, and the official count, the ballots are the best evidence. Id.

IV. DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE.

21. The record of an inquisition de lunatico inquirendo is admissible on the trial of an issue devisavit vel non; but where the court refused to permit to be read, on such an issue, such portion of the order of adjudication as instructed the committee appointed as to the scope of his duties,—held, no error. Kerr v. Lunaford (W. Va.) 668

22. Where, on the trial of such an issue, a witness for contestants had testified that the testator, in giving his evidence in a certain action in ejectment was incoherent, and on cross examination said he had the stenographer's notes of his evidence in the action, but that the stenographer was not sworn, but the witness said the notes were substantially correct, and on motion the proponents, to contradict the witness, were permitted to read the notes to the jury,—held, no error. Id.

23. On the trial of such issue, a will executed in 1879, about two years before the will in issue, at which former date it is shown the testator was competent, is admissible on the question of 2 L. R. A.

his capacity at the time the will in issue was executed. Id.

24. Provisions of the statute for the safe keeping of ballots are treated by the courts as directory; and when it is shown that the ballots have been securely kept and preserved inviolate, they will not be excluded as evidence on account of some omission to comply with their directions. Hartman v. Young (Or.) 596

25. Where a grantee is in fact archbishop of the Roman Catholic Church for his diocese, its canons and decrees regulating the mode of acquiring and holding church property are competent evidence to show that the property so held by him is held in trust for purposes of public religious worship and other charitable uses. Mannix v. Purcell (Ohio) 753

V. PAROL EVIDENCE CONCERNING WRITINGS.

26. Parol evidence is admissible to show that taxes were in fact paid by a person other than the one named as payer in the tax receipts. Gage v. Hampton (Ill.) 512

27. It is competent to prove by parol evidence that land conveyed to a grantee by a deed absolute on its face is in fact held by him in trust for charitable uses, but such evidence should be clear, convincing, and conclusive. Mannix v. Purcell (Ohio) 753

28. Certificates of stock not being negotiable paper, it is not permissible to prove a custom or usage among stockbrokers to the contrary. East Birmingham Land Co. v. Dennis (Ala.) 836

29. Where a devise to a certain township is made, and there is more than one of the same name in the State, evidence is admissible to prove which was intended. Skinner v. Harrison Twp. (Ind.) 187

VI. OPINIONS AND CONCLUSIONS.

30. A physician speaking as an expert can testify as to the effect of a personal injury. Beanville & T. H. R. Co. v. Orist (Ind.) 450

31. A man who has managed hand cars, or assisted in managing them, may express an opinion as to the rate of speed of a moving hand car on a specified occasion. Id.

32. A farmer not engaged in buying and selling real estate, not knowing the market value of real estate, not living in the neighborhood of the land inquired about, and who does not know its situation and fertility, its advantages and disadvantages, cannot, as a witness, give his evidence as to the value of the land before and after the appropriation of the right of way by a railroad company. A farmer conversant with the land as to its situation, soil, advantages, etc., is competent as a witness to the value, as having particular knowledge of the facts in issue. Leroy & W. R. Co. v. Ross (Kan.) 217

33. A witness in possession of a key to the reports of a mercantile agency may be allowed, in an action for libel, to explain what was indicated by reporting a merchant's standing "in blank," which constitutes the alleged libel. Bradstreet Co. v. Gill (Tex.) 405

34. Testimony of witnesses as to the general effect in commercial circles upon the credit of a person of a rating by a commercial agency is inadmissible, being only the opinion of the witnesses about a matter that the jury are capable of judging. Id.

35. A shipper of stock may give an opinion as to what the value of stock would have been at destination if they had not been injured in transportation. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Fagan (Tex.) 75

36. Upon the trial of an issue deviseavit vel non, a general question, put to a witness, "Was there anyone who influenced the testator?"—is improper. Kerr v. Lunsford (W. Va.) 668

37. When a medical expert is asked to give his professional opinion to a jury, not upon matters within his own knowledge, but upon a hypothetical case founded upon the testimony of witnesses previously examined in the case, the questions to him must be so shaped as to give him no occasion to mentally draw his conclusion from the whole evidence, or a part thereof, and from these conclusions, so drawn, express his opinion, or to decide as to the weight of evidence or the credibility of witnesses; and his answers must be such as not to involve any such conclusion, so drawn, or any opinion of the expert as to the weight of the evidence or the credibility of witnesses. Id.

38. The opinion of medical experts, founded on testimony already in the case, can only be given on a hypothetical case; and the hypothesis must be clearly stated, so that the jury may know with certainty upon precisely what state of assumed facts the expert bases his opinion. Id.

39. In putting hypothetical questions to expert witnesses, counsel may assume the facts in accordance with their theory of them; it is not essential that he states the facts as they exist, but the hypothesis should be based on a state of facts which the evidence in the cause tends to prove. Id.

40. Where, in the trial of an issue deviseavit vel non, the contestants, on the question of the testator's capacity, offered a witness who testified that about three months before the execution of the will the testator had sold a property for $10,000, and it was sold very cheaply: the proponents offered the purchaser of the property, who testified he had paid full value for it; the contestants then offered a witness who had occupied the property as lessee, and testified he knew its value, and asked the witness, "What is the property worth?"—the proponents objected, objection was sustained, and contestants excepted,—held, that, if error, it was not a reversible error. Johnson, P., dissenting. Id.

VII. DECLARATIONS.

41. The testimony of statements tending to show the guilt of accused, made by witnesses to the justice who issued the warrant in a criminal case, in the absence of the one making the complaint, is not admissible in favor of the latter in a subsequent suit brought against him for malicious prosecution by the person arrested. McIntire v. Levering (Mass.) 517

42. Evidence, in an action for malicious prosecution, that defendant had stated before the complaint was made that he had heard that the person upon whose statements he acted in commencing the prosecution had been in jail, may properly be allowed to go to the jury as tending to show how far defendant was warranted in believing the statements, and how far he did in fact believe them. Id.

43. In an action against a railroad relief association for benefits as a member, declarations of the paymaster of the railroad company, which is another and distinct corporation, to the effect that dues to the relief association were deducted from plaintiff's pay for a certain month on making such payment, are inadmissible, although the by-laws of the relief association provide that contributions due by the members shall be deducted from the monthly wages due them by either company; especially where it appears that the paymaster had nothing to do with the deductions for dues, and that the money therefor did not pass through his hands, and he had nothing to do with any data from which the pay roll was made up. Baltimore & O. Employees Relief Assn. v. Post (Pa.) 44

44. Declarations of a brakeman within two minutes after he was thrown under a car while attempting to uncouple it, made while remaining in presence of the train and of the alleged defective machinery, which he declared was instrumental in producing his hurt, which caused his death in about six hours afterwards and before he had been removed from the spot,—are admissible as part of the res gestæ. Louisville, N. A. & O. R. Co. v. Buck (Ind.) 530

45. Declarations which are the natural emanations or outgrowths of the act or occurrence in litigation, although not precisely concurrent in point of time, if they were yet voluntarily and spontaneously made, so nearly contemporaneous as to be in the presence of the transaction which they illustrate and explain, and were made under such circumstances as necessarily to exclude the idea of design or deliberation,—are admissible as part of the act or transaction itself. Id.

VIII. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY.

46. A plaintiff in a suit for malicious prosecution upon a criminal charge may show his general good reputation, known to the defendant when the prosecution was commenced, as tending to show that the prosecution was without probable cause. McIntire v. Levering (Mass.) 517

47. In an action of tort brought by a father to recover for the loss of his son's services, the father will not be permitted to testify that in his own mind he did not intend to emancipate the son, if the facts in the case warrant a finding by the jury of an implied emancipation which would cut off the father's right to maintain the action. McCarthy v. Boston & L. R. Co. (Mass.) 608

48. Any evidence is relevant, on an issue as to the implied authority of an agent to exercise powers in excess of those expressly given him, which shows prior similar acts, and tends to prove or disprove the knowledge of the principal, and the reliance on the part of those dealing with the agent upon the principal's recognition of such acts. Whitler v. McGuire (Ala.) 808

49. Evidence of business transactions by the testator, both before and after the execution of the will, indicating his mental condition, are admissible on the question of his capacity at the time the will was executed. Kerr v. Lunsford (W. Va.) 668

50. In the trial of an issue devisavit vel non, it is not improper for the proponents to offer the will, and the evidence of its due execution, and the competency of the testator at the time it was executed, and, thus having made a prima facie case, to rest, and, after the contestants have offered their evidence against the validity of the will, to permit the proponents to offer other evidence to sustain the will, as well as evidence in rebuttal. Id.

51. Proof of an estoppel is admissible in an action of trespass to try title under the plea of not guilty. Dooley v. Montgomery (Tex.) 715

52. On the question of negligence in riding at an improper speed on a street, evidence is admissible that there is more travel on that street than on any other in the city. Stringer v. Frost (Ind.) 614

53. Where loose declarations have been admitted to prove membership of plaintiff in a relief association, defendant has the right to show that he has never been examined by the medical adviser, as required by the rules, and never accepted as a member. Baltimore & O. Employees Relief Assn. v. Post (Pa.) 44

54. When punishment is prescribed within defined limits,—as, in the Illinois Warehouse Act, § 25, imprisonment for not less than one and not more than ten years,—evidence of intent is admissible in order to fix the degree of criminality and the punishment commensurate thereto, notwithstanding it may not be admissible upon the question of guilt or innocence. Sykes v. People (Ill.) 461

55. As tending to show the depreciation in the value of the property through which a right of way for a railroad is appropriated, by reason of the danger from fire, all the facts in regard to the situation of the property and improvements relatively to the railroad should be introduced in evidence, and the distance from the road to which the danger extends may also be shown. Leroy & W. B. Co. v. Ross (Kan.) 217

56. Evidence of average monthly profits of the business conducted on the premises sought to be condemned under the Eminent Domain Act is admissible when limited to the question of the loss which would be incurred by the suspension of business during the time necessarily consumed in moving. Aitchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Schneider (Ill.) 422

57. Evidence of a custom requiring the owner of stock to hold railroads harmless against ordinary delays in taking up freight is inadmissible because, if the law held the railroad harmless, the custom was not necessary; if the law held it liable, the custom could not repeal or suspend the law. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Fagan (Tex.) 75

58. A witness cannot state what the custom of a railroad is in delivering stock at destination, where it is not shown that the custom is uniform, reasonable, and notorious, and he does not testify to the facts constituting the custom. Id.

2 L. R. A.

IX. WEIGHT, EFFECT, AND SUFFICIENCY.

59. Where a jury finds that the evidence as to any fact essential to plaintiff's right of recovery, and as to which the burden of proof rests upon him, is evenly balanced, or in equilibrium, the verdict must be for defendant. Wheeler v. McGuire (Ala.) 808

60. Although proof of delivery of goods to a person in compliance with his request makes out a prima facie case of liability to pay for them, yet this is only a probability; and if it is shaken, the seller must show that language or circumstances import an assumption of liability by the purchaser to pay money. Starratt v. Mullen (Mass.) 697

61. The opinions of witnesses not experts are entitled to little or no regard, unless they are supported by good reasons founded on facts which warrant them; but if the reasons and facts upon which they are founded are frivolous, the opinions of such witnesses are worth little or nothing. Kerr v. Lunsford (W. Va.) 668

62. The evidence of witnesses who were present at the execution of the will is entitled to peculiar weight, and especially is this the case with attesting witnesses. Id.

63. It is not necessary for proponents to prove that the testator actually recollected all his property, the objects of his bounty, etc.; it is sufficient if he was, at the time, mentally capable of doing so. Id.

64. In an action by a grantee in a tax deed to recover the premises mentioned therein, a stipulation as to the existence of certain facts from which it appeared, in the judgment of the court, that the tax assessment was made to a person who was not the owner of the property, is a waiver of the conclusive character of the deed, under the statute, as to the regularity of the assessment. Tracy v. Reed (C. C. D. Or.) 773

65. In determining a contested election, the evidence of the ballots actually cast will control that furnished by the official count, provided the ballots have been preserved and protected from tampering. Hartman v. Young (Or.) 596

66. The official returns, when duly certified, are prima facie evidence that the result is as declared, but such return or canvass is never conclusive unless made so by statute. As a quasi record, it is entitled to the presumption of regularity, and is prima facie evidence of its integrity. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Judicial notice of power of railroad company to make a lease; presumption as to legality of acts of directors. 467

Declarations, when part of res gestae; burden to show cause of injury or due care. 523

Of elections; ballots; burden of proof. 596

Examination of legislative journals. 609

Communications between husband and wife. 616

Presumption as to rightfulness of possession. 660

Presumption of, burden of proof as to, negligence. 631

|                                      |     |
|--------------------------------------|-----|
| Burden of proving authority.         | 824 |
| Of deceased witness at former trial. | 78  |
| Opinions; hypothetical case.         | 668 |

EXCEPTIONS. See APPEAL AND ERROR.*EXECUTION AND JUDICIAL SALE.See also CORPORATIONS, 20, 21.

1. A purchaser at a judicial sale who contracts for a deed on a day fixed is entitled to a deed, under a decree, which will convey an unquestionable title on the day fixed, and should not be subjected to further proceedings to perfect title. Toole v. Toole (N. Y.) 465

2. When the record in a partition suit discloses the existence of persons not made parties who might have an interest, the title acquired at the judicial sale under the decree therein is defective; and a purchaser will not be compelled to accept it, although it may be that such omitted persons were, by reason of alienage, incapacitated from having an interest. To be conclusive against such persons, the record must establish their incapacity. Id.

EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS. See also COURTS, 12; TAXES, 1.

1. Upon a petition for letters of administration, although it is not necessary to cite a citizen of the United States having a right to letters prior or equal to that of the petitioner, but residing in another State, yet if such person appears before the surrogate, and presents his claim before the issue of letters, his claim cannot be disregarded. Lidbey v. Mason (N. Y.) 795

2. The judgment of a county court in Nebraska granting letters of administration to a widow may be upheld as coram judice, although the sole assets of the estate consisted of a claim against a railroad company for causing the death of the intestate. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Lewis (Neb.) 67

3. The general rule, that executors and administrators can be sued only in the State where they are appointed, is confined, at least in the State of New York, to claims and liabilities resting wholly upon their representative character. Johnston v. Wallis (N. Y.) 828

4. Foreign executors who, by virtue of their appointment, have become owners of a judgment, and have made a contract to assign it, may be sued on such contract outside of the State of their appointment. Id.

5. The sureties of an administratrix who has obtained a decree discharging her and her sureties from their bond are not entitled to notice of a proceeding to vacate such decree for fraud. They are privies of the administratrix, and precluded from questioning any lawful order made by the surrogate in a proceeding wherein she is a party, if obtained without collusion between her and the next of kin or creditors of the estate. Deobold v. Oppermann (N. Y.) 644

6. Sureties to whom money of an estate has been loaned by an administratrix as a condition of their becoming sureties for her, to be retained until they are discharged from liability on the bond, are not relieved from such liability by repaying the money after examining a decree of the surrogate discharging her and them from their liability on the bond, when such decree is subsequently vacated on the ground of fraud. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.See also PRINCIPAL AND SURETY.

|   |     |
|---|-----|
| Foreign; incapacity to sue; jurisdiction of.  | 828 |
| Presentation of claim; time for.              | 159 |
| Effect of decree discharging, as to sureties. | 644 |

EXPERTS. See EVIDENCE, VI.FALSE REPORT. See FRAUD AND FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES.*FEDERAL COURTS. See COURTS.*FENCES. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 7; COVENANT, 2; VENDOR AND PURCHASER, 3.

1. Help given by one in lawfully building a fence upon his wife's land to a greater height than 6 feet will not of itself render him liable to prosecution under Mass. Acts 1887, chap. 348, for erecting or maintaining a nuisance, whatever his motive may be; nor will it tend to prove that he maintained the fence. Rideout v. Knox (Mass.) 81

2. Malevolence must have been the motive for erecting the fence to a greater height than 6 feet, without which it would have not have been erected or maintained, to render it a nuisance, within the provisions of Mass. Acts 1887, chap. 348. If such height is really necessary for any reason, there is no liability; and if the owner thinks it necessary and acts upon his opinion, he is not liable because he also acts malevolently. Id.

FERRIES. See TAXES, 2.FIRE INSURANCE. See INSURANCE, I.FISHERIES.

No rights in favor of fishermen now exist by virtue of the proviso in the Province Charter of Massachusetts Bay, that the rights of English subjects to fish, etc., and to erect wharves, etc., upon waste lands not in the possession of particular proprietors, should not be abridged. Attorney-General, Adams, v. Tarr (Mass.) 87

FIXTURES. See LANDLORD AND TENANT, 4.FORCIBLE ENTRY AND DETAINER. See JUDGMENT, 1.FORFEITURE. See CORPORATIONS, BRIEFS AND NOTES; REAL PROPERTY.FORGERY. See BANKS, 2, 4, NOTES AND BRIEFS; INTEREST, 2.FRATERNAL SOCIETIES. See INSURANCE, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

FRAUD AND FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES. See also CONTRACTS, 11, 12; PLEADING, 13; SALE, 4, 5; WAREHOUSEMEN, 2-4.

False representations by one selling railroad bonds, that the "bond was an A No. 1 bond," and that "the railroad was good security" therefore, made to the purchaser for the purpose of inducing the sale, will not render him liable to damages, even though he made the statements in bad faith. Deming v. Darling (Mass.) 748

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

False representations, right of action for. 748

GARNISHMENT.

Property not actually within the State, but in course of transportation by a common carrier to a consignee in another State, cannot be reached by process of garnishment served on the carrier within the State. Montross Pickle Co. v. Dodson & H. Mfg. Co. (Iowa) 417

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

On property in transit. 417

GOVERNMENT. See COSTS AND FEES, 2.

GRANT. See RAILROADS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

GUARANTY.

1. A guaranty of 7 per cent per annum in dividends so long as the purchaser should retain the stock sold him, given by a firm as an inducement for the purchase from them of shares of stock, is not limited to the duration of the partnership or the lives of the copartners. Ker-nochan v. Murray (N. Y.) 183

2. A guaranty of the amount of dividends that shall be received from stock, made by the seller as an inducement to the purchase of the stock, is an original, and not a collateral, undertaking; and the guarantors are principals, and not sureties, in such obligation. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Contract construed; effect of death of guarantor or cosurety; of dividends on corporate stock. 183

GUARDIAN AND WARD. See TRUSTS, 1.

HEIRS. See WILLS; HUSBAND AND WIFE, 1-3.

HIGHWAYS. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 3-6; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 1-3.

1. Where the alleys of a city have been dedicated to the public, no further action is required by the city to open them for public use. Oeage City v. Larkins (Kan.) 56

2. An alley retains its character as an alley, although the lots on both sides thereof are owned by one person, and it is so intersected by a railroad as to make it practically impassable. Id.

3. No dedication for the purpose of a highway can be inferred by the public use, for more than twenty years, of the covered surface formed by timbers, planks, and earth over a canal feeder belonging to the State. The land being appropriated for use as a canal feeder, a grant for highway purposes could not be made, and a dedication for such purposes, therefore, cannot be presumed. Donahue v. State (N. Y.) 576

4. The power given to a municipal corporation by its charter to control and regulate the manner in which streets shall be used does not, expressly or by implication, give power to pass an ordinance prohibiting the circulation or giving away of any circulars, hand-bills, or advertising cards in or upon any of the public streets and alleys of the city. People v. Armstrong (Mich.) 721

5. A municipal ordinance making it unlawful to "circulate, distribute, or give away circulars, hand-bills, or advertising cards of any description in or upon any of the public streets and alleys" of a city, even if it can be held to be within the general power granted by the city charter to control and regulate the use of streets, is unreasonable and unwarranted, so far as it applies to giving, to those who express or appear to express a desire therefor, small cards of invitation to attend meetings of the Young Men's Christian Association. Id.

6. A municipal corporation cannot abrogate or dispense with the duties and liabilities imposed upon it by its charter for the safety of the public in respect to the care of streets, by means of an ordinance. McCull v. Manchester (Va.) 691

7. A city ordinance permitting a person engaged in building, etc., to deposit materials upon the street for one half of its width is no defense to an action against the city for negligence in permitting obstructions to remain in the street without any light at night or other signal to give warning of them, in consequence of which a traveler sustained injuries. Id.

8. Where a corporation owning land adjoining to a city lays out and plats its land as an addition to the city, and dedicates the streets for public use, with the condition that it reserves to itself, its successors, or assigns, the right to use and occupy the streets for the purpose of operating a railroad, such reservation does not relieve the corporation from constructing, operating, and maintaining its line of railroad in a legal and proper manner. Ottawa, O. C. & O. G. R. Co. v. Larsen (Kan.) 59

9. A railroad company may, under the provisions of the Kansas statute and under the authority of a city ordinance, construct and operate its railroad in a public street in a legal and proper manner, making such alterations in the surface of the street as are necessary to the construction and operation of its road, and which do not necessarily impair the usefulness of the street, without being liable to abutting lot owners or others for damages; but such a company cannot, any more than an individual, wrongfully and unnecessarily block up or obstruct a street, without being liable therefor. Id.

10. A city is not liable for injuries resulting to a traveler upon its highway while attempting to cross a drawbridge, from the momentary negligence of the gateman, where it has supplied a sufficient draw and suitable gates, and has employed competent persons to manage them. Butterfield v. Boston (Mass.) 447

11. Under Iowa Code, § 485, providing that no street of a city shall be graded unless it is ordered to be done by the affirmative vote of two thirds of the city council or trustees, a city is liable for the damages to private property occasioned by grading a street without the authority of an ordinance so passed. P. H. Church v. Anamosa (Iowa) 606

12. Municipal corporations in Michigan, in which State they are held not to be liable for damages occasioned by grading or otherwise improving streets, have no power to erect a bridge in a street over a railroad, under the general authority to grade, make, repair, and improve streets, and are liable for damages to property fronting on the street, occasioned by such a bridge; and damages which would be caused by such a bridge must be provided for under the power of eminent domain. Schneider v. Detroit (Mich.) 54

13. A railroad company which has made an excavation in a highway for its track, throwing up an embankment on which travelers may pass, and has failed in its duty to so restore the highway as not unnecessarily to impair its use, is liable for injury sustained by a traveler riding on such embankment, where his horse is frightened by the running of a hand car on the track, although, if the company had been free from fault respecting the highway, there might have been no right of action on account of the hand car. Evansville & T. H. R. Co. v. Crist (Ind.) 450

14. Knowledge that there is some danger in attempting to ride along a highway on an embankment thrown up by a railroad company, which has failed to restore the highway to its proper condition, will not preclude a recovery for injuries sustained in consequence of the fright of a horse, occasioned by the running of a hand car, where the traveler was using the only highway which led to or from her home. Id.

15. Where the wall of a building is on the line of the highway, and a portion of the roof projects over the highway, an injury resulting therefrom by the fall of snow is incidental to its construction and use; and an allegation that such injury is caused by negligence in the construction or management of the building is none the less true because the encroachment on the highway is wrongful. Smethurst v. Independent Cong. Church (Mass.) 695

16. The rights of a traveler are not lost by one who stops his wagon in a reasonable manner in the highway, for the purpose of unloading goods. Id.

17. Riding a horse at an improper speed along a much used public street in a populous city, and at the same time looking in another direction from that in which the rider is going, is culpable negligence. Stringer v. Frost (Ind.) 614

18. A footman about to cross a public street is not required to exercise the same high degree of vigilance in order to avoid contact with a horseman that is required at railroad crossings. Foot passengers have equal rights in the streets with those mounted on horseback or driving in carriages. Neither has a priority of right over the other; both are bound to use reasonable care to avoid collision. Id.

19. A blind person walking unattended upon a public street is bound to use only ordinary care to avoid accidents; but in determining what is ordinary care the jury must consider his blindness and other infirmities, and all the circumstances which bear upon the question. What care is reasonably necessary to ensure his safety? Neff v. Wellesley (Mass.) 500

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Duty of city; recovery of damages for defects; nuisance in; right to use alley. 57

Railroads in; reservation of right of way; rights of abutting owners; change of grade. 61

Injury to traveler; horse frightened by car; neglect of railroad company to restore. 451

Dedication. 58

Right of railroads to use; dedication subject to railway use; injury to owners; power of municipality to license. 59

Railway in, ordinance authorizing. 255

Temporary use for building purposes. 691

HOMESTEAD.

Under N. C. Const. art. 10, § 2, giving a homestead right in real estate not exceeding $1,000 in value, "owned and occupied by any resident of this State," a person who moved with his family out of the State for the purpose of cultivating his wife's land there, and to make it his home until he got the property there in order, which he thought would take about two years, and then return, is not, while so living out of the State, although returning two or three times a year for the purpose of purchasing supplies and looking after property left there, a resident entitled to a homestead in North Carolina. Lee v. Moseley (N. C.) 106

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Right, how secured; removal from State. 106

HUSBAND AND WIFE. See also CONFLICT OF LAWS, 8; CONTRACT, 6, 14; EQUITY, 1; ESTOPPEL, 1, 2; EVIDENCE, 18; LIS PENDENS, 2; MORTGAGE, 4, 5; PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, 2.

1. No particular form of words is necessary to constitute a valid antenuptial contract. However informal the instrument may be, it will be given effect if the intention of the parties is manifest, and it is such as can in law or in equity be executed. McNutt v. McNutt (Ind.) 872

2. The word "heirs," in a marriage contract providing that neither party shall take any interest in the property of the other, but that it shall descend to their heirs as if they had not married, is not restricted to the children of the parties, but includes any legal heirs; and such provision excludes any claim of either party as heir by virtue of marriage. Id.

3. A contract in consideration of marriage, where each party releases all interest in the other's property, is upon a sufficient considerasion as to both parties, at least where each is possessed of property before marriage. McNutt v. McNutt (Ind.) 872

4. When a divorce is granted to a wife for causes other than adultery, if the accomplishment of her support renders it necessary the court may decree to her the title of either real or personal property belonging to her husband, under Nev. Gen. Stat. § 496, authorizing property, in certain cases, to be "set apart" for the support of the wife under such circumstances. Powell v. Campbell (Nev.) 615

5. A deed conveying real estate to a husband and wife conveys the same to them in entirety, and on the death of one the survivor takes the entire estate. Neither the statutes relating to married women, nor the statutes relating to descents and distributions, nor any other statutes, have changed this rule of law in Kansas with respect to the rights of the survivor. Baker v. Stewart (Kan.) 484

6. Merely providing ordinary and necessary clothing for the wife by the husband in discharge of his duty growing out of the marital relation does not make it her property, within the meaning of the Alabama Statute providing that all property acquired by a wife after marriage in any manner, including that acquired by gift from or contract with the husband, shall become her separate estate. Richardson v. Louisville & N. E. Co. (Ala.) 716

7. The Michigan Statute giving to a married woman the right to acquire and hold property separate from her husband and free from his influence and control (How. Stat. §§ 6295-6299) does not empower a married woman to make a contract of partnership with her husband. Artman v. Ferguson (Mich.) 848

8. The power given to a married woman by How. (Mich.) Stat. §§ 6295-6297, to contract in regard to her separate property, does not extend to a joint contract with her husband in reference to property held by them by entireties. Spicer v. Offer (Mich.) 845

9. The grantee in a deed, executed by a husband and wife, of the land of the wife, who is also an infant and who was married before any of the Married Women's Enabling Acts were passed, except that empowering her to sell her land by joining her husband in the conveyance, takes the husband's right to the possession and enjoyment of the rents during his lifetime, and also the wife's interest in the land subject to her right of disaffirmance. Stull v. Harris (Ark.) 741

10. An infant married woman who has joined with her husband in a conveyance of her land may file her bill to disaffirm the conveyance during her husband's lifetime. Id.

11. A conveyance of community property in Texas, by the husband,—who, under Tex. Rev. Stat. art. 2852, has full power to sell it,—passes the whole of the common title, although he signs only as agent of his wife, under a power of attorney which gave him no power to sell the property. Dooley v. Montgomery (Tex.) 715

12. A mortgage by a married woman, on her separate property, in which her lawful husband does not join, is void, under Ind. Rev. Stat. 1876, p. 550 (Rev. Stat. 1881, § 5117), although 3 L. R. A.

he has been absent fifteen years, and she, believing him to be dead, is living with another man whom she believes to be her lawful husband and who joins with her in executing the instrument. As to the effect of the Indiana Statute of 1881 touching estoppels in pais affecting married women, on such an instrument if made after the passage of that Act,—quære. Cook v. Walling (Ind.) 769

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Partnership between; powers of wife under statute. 843

Disability of wife at common law; note by; statutory power; estoppel; separate estate of wife. 845

Tenancy in entireties; rule of different States. 484

Antenuptial contract; consideration; validity; Statute of Frauds; enforcement. 372

Divorce and adultery; right to remarry; effect of divorce in another State. 703

Gift to wife. 716

Contracts of wife; estoppel. 769

Community property. 715

Right of wife to disaffirm contract made during infancy. 742

ICE. See HIGHWAYS, 15; NEGLIGENCE, 4.

INDICTMENT, INFORMATION, AND COMPLAINT.

1. An indictment under the Interstate Commerce Act, § 2, for "unjust discrimination," need not aver by what particular device the defendant managed to discriminate in favor of a particular shipper. United States v. Trues (D. C. E. D. Mo.) 444

2. Counts, under § 3, for "undue and unreasonable preference" and for "undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage," need not allege that the service for which a different rate was charged was rendered "under substantially similar circumstances and conditions,"—those words being only found in § 4, in relation to greater charge for shorter haul. Id.

3. A count, under § 3, is sufficient if it shows with requisite certainty by any apt language that the accused has committed an act which gives one shipper or class of shippers an advantage, or subjects others to a disadvantage. Id.

4. A count, under § 3, charging the subjection of a certain locality to an undue prejudice, by charging its merchants a higher rate for transporting property to a certain point than was exacted from residents of a certain other locality, must show with precision that the lower rate was for transportation between the same points as the higher rate. Id.

5. A count, under § 6, alleging the allowance of a rate less than the established and published rate which "was in force on that day," sufficiently negatives the inference that the rate might have been reduced by the carrier without notice, as permitted by that section. Id.

INFANTS. See ARMY AND NAVY; BENEFIT SOCIETIES, 1; CONTRACTS, 14; HUSBAND AND WIFE, 10; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, 3.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also ARMY AND NAVY.

Right to disaffirm contract during coverture. 742

INFORMATION. See INDICTMENT, ETC.

INJUNCTION. See also DAMAGES, 8; NUISANCE, 1, 2.

1. Where the law invests an officer with discretion in the performance of an act, the courts will not interfere with or control his action by injunction. If injustice is done by his action, some other remedy must be sought. Under a statute giving railroad commissioners discretion in making rates for railroads, they are entitled to the benefit of this rule. McWhorter v. Pensacola & A. R. Co. (Fla.) 504

2. Whether rates made by railroad commissioners are reasonable and just or not, even if subject to judicial control, is not open to inquiry in a suit to enjoin their discretionary action. Id.

3. Where two families are occupying rooms in the same house, using in common the halls and stairways, a court of equity will not restrain the one from committing a nuisance against the other, unless the proof of the existence of such nuisance is clear and strong. A court of equity will, as far as it can, discourage a resort to its aid for the purpose of interfering in mere domestic broils. Matford v. Levy (W. Va.) 368

4. Where a trustee holding property for the separate use of a married woman for life, with power of appointment in her by will, and, in default thereof, for her child in fee, after the death of the wife and of her child, who left an heir, made a devise of the property upon a trust to convey it to the State upon certain conditions; and the devisee has asked the acceptance, by the State, of the property; and the General Assembly has put an Act on its passage for this purpose,—the right of the heir to assert her claims in court being imperilled, a preliminary injunction will be issued to prevent the transfer of the property by the devisee to the State. Lee v. Simpson (O. C. D. S. C.) 659

5. When a defendant pendente lite in a Circuit Court of the United States seeks to convey land, the subject of controversy, to a State, he will be restrained by injunction. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Against threatened danger. 660

INSANE PERSONS.

Letters of appointment as guardian of an insane person are conclusive, in a collateral action, of the regularity of the proceedings resulting in their issuance, as well as of the insanity of the person upon whose estate they were issued. Minnesota Loan & Trust Co. v. Beeds (Minn.) 418

2 L. R. A.

INSOLVENCY AND ASSIGNMENT FOR CREDITORS. See also BANKS AND BANKING, 5-7; CHARITABLE USES, 8; CONFLICT OF LAWS, 1-4.

1. Statutes which relate to voluntary assignments by "insolvent debtors" for the benefit of creditors; and require sworn schedules of assets and creditors to be prepared and attached to the deed or instrument of assignment by "the person, firm, or corporation" making such assignment; and provide that "in case of assignments by firms" the required oaths may be made by any member of the firm,—assume the right of insolvent firms to assign the partnership property for the benefit of their creditors, though the partners themselves, as individuals, may be solvent. It follows that the individual property of the partners respectively need not be assigned in order to render the assignment valid. Drucker v. Wellhouse (Ga.) 328

2. Where the schedules required by statute are in fact attached to a deed of assignment, and there is no reason to conclude or even suspect that they were not attached at the time the assignment was executed, failure of the writings to declare expressly on their face that they were then attached is of no consequence. Id.

3. That one of the preferred debts of a firm was a due-note payable to the attorney who drafted the assignment, and was given to him by the firm "for services rendered in drawing this deed of assignment, and for advice and counsel in reference thereto, and services to be rendered hereafter for the purpose of protecting and upholding this assignment," does not render the assignment void per se. If there was actual fraud, the fraud is matter for proof aliunde; and if no fraud was intended, but the amount of the note is more than the services rendered and to be rendered are worth, or if the assignee should not accept the attorney as his counsel in behalf of the creditors, or should not need his services, a proper deduction from the amount can be made, and the note be left to stand good against the assets for the balance only. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also CONFLICT OF LAWS; PARTNERSHIP.

Not dissolution. 255

Foreign assignment. 100

Assignment of firm for creditors; provisions for attorney's fee. 339

Recording of assignment; effect of assignment in another State. 356

INSPECTION. See SHIPPING, 2.

INSURANCE.

I. FIRE.

II. LIFE; ACCIDENT; BENEFIT SOCIETIES.

III. FOREIGN COMPANIES.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, 2; NOTICE, 7; TRIAL, 23.

I. FIRE.

1. The interest of a widow in property insured may include a claim against the property for payment of incumbrances, although barred by statute. The insurer, not being a creditor of the estate or interested in any manner in the property itself, cannot plead the statutory bar against such claim. Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Haas (Ky.) 64

2. A policy of insurance cannot be reformed to cover the interests of children of the insured, merely because she supposed she was insuring their interests as well as her own, when nothing was said at the time of the insurance as to the nature and extent of the interest insured. Id.

3. A colt killed by lightning while in a field at pasture is not covered by a policy by which the colt, with other property, is insured as "all contained in above described barn," and in which there is a general printed clause providing that the policy does not cover or insure personal property of any kind while removed from the particular building therein described. Huaves v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co. (Pa.) 52

4. Where an agent, having power to effect insurance without even consulting the home office, was fully apprised of the ignorance of the person insured, who was an illiterate German woman unable to read or write the English language, and knew all about the nature and extent of her title, a policy issued by him on her property will not be void because she is not the absolute and unconditional owner, although it contained a stipulation that it should be void in that event. Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Haas (Ky.) 64

5. An insurer, on payment of insurance covering only part of a mortgage debt, cannot take by subrogation from a mortgagee any part of his claim until the mortgage debt is paid, both principal and interest, in full. Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Harrisburg First Nat. Bank (Va.) 667

6. Where a person who has property was injured by an explosion of gas, brought an action against the gas company for such portion of his loss as was not covered by insurance, and gave a release which was expressly declared not to affect his claim against the insurance companies, such release is no defense to an action on policies of insurance. North America Ins. Co. v. Fidelity Title & Trust Co. (Pa.) 586

II. LIFE; ACCIDENT; BENEFIT SOCIETIES.

7. The receipt of insurance policies, under a written agreement that they shall be returned if policies held by the insured in other companies should not be surrendered on terms satisfactory to him, is an acceptance of the policies only upon a condition precedent, and no valid contract is thereby created until the condition is complied with. Whether the agent of the company had power to make such conditional delivery or not is immaterial, as, if he had not, the result would still be that no contract was made. Harnickell v. New York L. Ins. Co. (N. Y.) 150

8. A creditor has an insurable interest in the life of his debtor. Rittler v. Smith (Md.) 844

9. A life insurance policy is but a chose in action for the payment of money, and may be assigned as such, under Md. Act 1829, chap. 51. Id.

10. A creditor who, in pursuance of a bona fide effort to secure payment of his debt, insures the life of his debtor and takes a policy in his own name, or for his own benefit, which he is obliged to keep alive by paying premiums, is entitled to hold all he can recover on the policy, if there is not such a gross disproportion between the debt and the amount of the policy as to make the transaction a speculation or wager. Id.

11. A creditor who took out policies in mutual aid associations on the life of his debtor, on which policies he became liable to be assessed as a member, and on which he paid, within the period of about nine months thereafter, the sum of $381.75, and the amount collected on which, on the debtor's death, was $2,124.82, being an excess of $474.53 over the amount of the debt, is entitled to hold the whole amount received, as there is no such disproportion between the debt and the insurance as to warrant a condemnation of the transaction as a speculation or wager. Id.

12. The words "total inability to labor, in the by-laws and constitution of a relief association, defining the time for which benefits may be paid, are not restricted to labor in the same employment, where the member is capable of earning as much or more in some other employment. Baltimore & O. Employees Relief Assn. v. Post (Pa.) 44

13. Where the Supreme Lodge of the Knights of Honor sends a benefit certificate properly signed and sealed to a subordinate lodge, for a person who has applied for membership, been ballotted for, elected, and had a degree conferred upon him, and has paid his fees and passed a medical examination which has been approved, the contract relations between him and the supreme lodge are complete, although the subordinate lodge has not delivered to him the certificate. Lorecher v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor (Mich.) 206

14. An action on a benefit certificate of the Knights of Honor may be maintained without producing it at the trial, when it is in the possession of a subordinate lodge to which it had been sent, and which had refused to deliver it on the ground of fraud, which is relied upon as a defense to the action. Id.

15. It is ultra vires a corporation created "to give financial aid and benefit to the widows, orphans, and heirs or devisees of deceased members," and declared by statute not to be an insurance company, to contract for "endowment insurance" payable to a member on his arriving at a certain age. Rockhold v. Canton Masonic Mut. Benev. Assn. (Ill.) 420

16. The plea of ultra vires is maintainable by such a corporation as a defense to an action for such endowment insurance, by a member charged with knowledge of the want of power to make such contract, and whose payments of assessments to the corporation had not been retained by it to increase its property, but had been paid to those entitled thereto. Id.

17. The beneficiary certificate containing such unauthorized agreement for endowment insurance will be valid in so far as it is payable to the beneficiaries on the death of the member; and when the member has not seasonably rescinded the contract, and the benefits of the beneficiaries thereunder have intervened, he cannot recover from the corporation assessments paid by him, none of such assessments having been for endowment insurance. Id.

18. When a mutual benefit life insurance association incorporated under the laws of Minnesota, and dependent upon securing such amounts as may be required to meet and liquidate death claims through assessments upon its members, refuses to make an assessment in a proper case, the remedy is by an action for a breach of contract. Bent v. Northwestern Aid Assn. (Minn.) 784

19. Affidavits of physicians as to the cause of death of a person insured, made on blanks furnished by the insurance association, and forwarded with other proofs of death, will not conclude or estop the beneficiary as to the real cause of death. Id.

20. The measure of damages, in an action against a mutual benefit association on a certificate of insurance agreeing to pay the amount of an assessment on the members, where it refuses to make an assessment, is the amount assessable upon all the insured, unless it is shown that the amount would be less because all members did not respond to assessments. Id.

21. For a substantial breach of the contract contained in a policy issued by a mutual benefit association to pay to a certain person a percentage of an assessment upon its members upon the happening of a certain event, the beneficiary may recover substantial damages in an action at law. Jackson v. Northwestern Mut. B. Assn. (Wis.) 786

22. Upon demurrer to a complaint alleging the refusal of a mutual benefit association to make an assessment in accordance with the terms of its contract, and also that plaintiff's share of the assessment would be at least a certain amount in case the assessment was made, the court cannot say, as matter of law, that plaintiff has only sustained nominal damages by reason of such refusal, merely because it may be difficult, in advance of a levy and attempted collection of the assessment, to ascertain the precise damages to which plaintiff is entitled. Id.

23. The fact that by the charter of a mutual benefit association a particular method of notice of assessments falling due is declared to be sufficient and binding on all members does not exempt the corporation from the operation of the principles of equitable estoppel, which apply to all other persons, natural or juridical. Gunther v. New Orleans Cotton Exch. Mut. Aid Assn. (La.) 118

24. Though the charter of a benefit society provides only for notice by posting, yet, if the company adopts the practice of always sending written notice by mail, to a particular class of members, of assessments due; and if, on a particular occasion, it failed to send such notice; and if the failure to pay was solely due to the want of notice; and if, upon information, payment was tendered,—the company is estopped from claiming the forfeiture. Id.

III. FOREIGN COMPANIES.

25. Under Ill. Act 1869, § 22, making it unlawful for any agent or agents, or any other person, in any manner to aid any insurance company not incorporated in the State in transacting insurance business within the State a person or corporation is liable for aiding such foreign insurance company in the transaction of insurance business in any manner, although not the agent of such company in the ordinary sense of the term, and although acting under a contract with the insured expressly stating that such person or corporation is his agent only. People v. People's Ins. Exch. (Ill.) 840

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also BENEFIT SOCIETIES.

Fraternal societies; payment of policy; to whom made; designation of beneficiary; designation by statute; restriction on designation; revocation of appointment; distinction between benefit policies and life insurance policy; appointment by will; powers of members of benefit societies. 161

Benefit certificate of relief association. 206

Forfeiture not favored; notification of premium due. 118

Insurable interest in life; measure of recovery. 844

Reformation of contract; acceptance of policy. 65

Preliminary agreement; power of agent; delivery of policy; notice to agent; surrender of premium notes. 153

Compelling assessment by benefit society. 785, 787

INTEREST. See also LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, 6.

1. Interest is recoverable, under the Illinois Statute Concerning Interest, § 2, upon advances made by a broker for which his principal is under an implied obligation to repay him. Perin v. Parker (Ill.) 886

2. A depositor is not entitled to interest on money which he claims to recover against a bank that has paid it out on a forged indorsement of a check, where the bank held the money without interest as a general deposit. Atlanta Nat. Bank v. Burke (Ga.) 96

INTERSTATE COMMERCE. See CARRIERS, 39; INDICTMENT, ETC.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION. See also CARRIERS, 28-38; COURTS, 7; STATUTES, 16.

1. Congress, under its sovereign and exclusive power to regulate commerce among the several States, has the power to create a commission for the purpose of supervising, investigating, and reporting upon matters or complaints connected with or growing out of interstate commerce. Kentucky & I. Bridge Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (C. C. D. Ky.) 289

2. The Interstate Commerce Commission is given no power to establish through routes or to fix through rates between connecting lines, such as is conferred upon the English Commission by the English Act of 1873. Id.

3. The Interstate Commerce Commission is invested with only administrative powers of supervision and investigation, which fall far short of making it a court or its action judicial, in the proper sense of the term. Its action or conclusion upon matters brought before it for investigation is neither final nor conclusive. Nor is it invested with any authority to enforce its decision or award. Kentucky & I. Bridge Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (C. C. D. Ky.) 289

4. The Interstate Commerce Commission is charged with the duty of investigating and reporting upon complaints; and the facts found or reported by it are only given the force and weight of prima facie evidence in such judicial proceedings as may thereafter be had for the enforcement of its recommendation or order. Id.

5. The United States Circuit Court is not restricted to the mere ministerial duty of enforcing an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The suit in that court is, under the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act, an original and independent proceeding in which the court hears and determines the cause de novo upon proper pleadings and proofs; the latter including, not only the prima facie facts reported by the Commission, but all such other and further testimony as either party may introduce, bearing upon the matters in controversy. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Jurisdiction and power of; complaint before. 446

INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

1. The Pennsylvania Act of 1887 prohibits the sale of intoxicating liquors only so far as they are included in the description, "vinous, spirituous, malt, and brewed liquors, and various admixtures thereof." Com. v. Reyburg (Pa.) 415

2. A club properly organized in good faith, under Mich. Pub. Acts 1888, No. 22, cannot purchase liquors by the quantity and distribute them among its members, receiving pay therefor as they are distributed by the glass, the proceeds to go into the treasury of the club, to be used in purchasing other liquors or in paying expenses, without being liable, under the laws of Michigan, to pay a retail tax for selling such liquors, and exhibit the tax receipt. People v. Soule (Mich.) 494

8. The servants, agents, and employes of a club engaged in the business of purchasing liquor by the quantity and selling it to its members by the glass, who are engaged as such in said business, if they have not paid the tax, are equally liable with their principal therefor; and under the Michigan Liquor Law of 1887, p. 458, § 24, they may be informed against as principals. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

What are. 416

What are; judicial notice; question of fact. 408

JOINT CREDITORS AND DEBTORS. See NOTION, 6.

2 L. R. A.

JOINT TENANTS AND TENANTS IN COMMON. See also TAXES, 20.

Mass. Pub. Stat. chap. 12, §§ 63-65, relating to the preservation of a lien in favor of one tenant in common who pays taxes, as against his cotenants, apply simply to a payment in the first instance,—not to a redemption of the premises after a sale, when the tenant takes a deed which is put on record. Hurley v. Hurley (Mass.) 173

NOTES AND BRIEFS

See also PARTITION.

Trust among. 173

JUDGE. See COURTS, 8.

JUDGMENT. See also EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, 2; INSANE PERSONS; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, 4.

1. A judgment by confession in an action of forcible detainer in Illinois, upon a warrant of attorney contained in a lease, is coram non judice and void. The proceeding provided by statute in such cases is exclusive. French v. Willer (Ill.) 717

2. A judgment against a director of a corporation for a corporate debt, based on his liability as director, under the New York Act of 1875, by reason of having made a false certificate, merges a claim for the same debt against him as a stockholder. Attrill v. Huntington (Md.) 779

3. A judgment rendered in one State for the debt of a corporation against one of its directors, under a statute making them individually liable for such debts by reason of making a false certificate, cannot be enforced in another State; the nature of the original claim, being for a penalty, is not changed by its reduction to a judgment. Id.

4. When the provision of the Rapid Transit Act (N. Y. Laws 1875, chap. 606) providing for the appointment of commissioners, and their determination as to the propriety of constructing the proposed railroad in public streets, in lieu of the consents of abutting owners, has been complied with, and their determination that the road should be constructed has been confirmed by the supreme court, after the giving of public notice and an opportunity to abutting owners to be heard, such decision of the supreme court involves the determination of the validity of the incorporation of the company proposing to construct the road, and, being the decision of a competent tribunal in a judicial proceeding in which the abutting owners had an opportunity to be heard on that question, will estop such owners from thereafter attacking the validity of such incorporation collaterally. Re Union Elevated R. Co's Petition (N. Y.) 859

5. A railroad company which took title to a portion of mortgaged premises from one who acquired title by adverse possession subsequently to the execution of a mortgage thereafter foreclosed by a suit in which the validity of such title could have been litigated, but was not, is estopped by the decree of foreclosure from setting up the title so acquired by it, in the proceeding thereafter instituted by it to condemn the mortgaged land to its road uses. St. Johnsbury & L. O. R. Co. v. Willard (Vt.) 528

6. Where a tenant by curtesy has had a share of property allotted or delivered to him in severally, in partition, other parties to the partition who did not in these proceedings raise the question of his right cannot afterwards deny that he was a life tenant. Rankin's Appeal (Pa.) 429

7. A judgment declaring a tripartite agreement between three corporations to be void as to one of them, rendered in an action by that one against the other two, is not res judicata upon any question arising between one of the defendant corporations and the stockholders of the other, or as to the attitude of one of the defendant corporations towards its own stockholders. Beveridge v. New York Elevated R. Co. (N. Y.) 648

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also PRINCIPAL AND SURETY.

Against corporation, conclusive on stockholder. 270
Foreign; force and effect of. 780
Limitation of actions upon; of justice of the peace; effect of filing transcript. 829
In divorce; effect of. 616

JUDICIAL NOTICE. See EVIDENCE, I.

JUDICIAL SALE. See EXECUTION AND JUDICIAL SALE.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Right of purchaser to good title. 466

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE. See LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, 4.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Judgment of; filing transcript. 831

LANDINGS. See DEDICATION; TOWN.

LANDLORD AND TENANT. See also ADVERSE POSSESSION, 2; CONTRACTS, 5; WHARFAGE AND WHARVES, 3-5.

1. A lease providing for repair of the premises by the lessor, or termination of the lease in case the premises become partially or wholly untenable "by fire or the elements," refers, by the term "elements," only to some sudden, unusual, or unexpected action of the elements, such as floods, tornadoes, or the like,—extraordinary disasters not anticipated by either party,—and not to percolation of water through and under the basement walls, by reason of springs, making the basement so wet and unhealthy as to be untenable. Harris v. Cortice (Minn.) 849

2. A lease for fourteen years, with a covenant to renew for another fourteen years, especially when the covenant is that the second shall contain the same covenants as the first, is a lease for a longer period than fifteen years, within the meaning of the Maryland Act of 1888 making leases for more than fifteen years redeemable, at the lessee's option, after the expiration of ten years. Stewart v. Gorter (Md.) 711

2 L. R. A.

8. The lessee cannot waive his option of redemption by any agreement in the lease, which option is given by the Maryland Act of 1888 providing that rents on leases for more than fifteen years shall be redeemable at any time after the expiration of ten years, the Act not being intended for the exclusive benefit of the lessee, but being based on grounds of public policy. Id.

4. The surrender of leased premises by operation of law vests the landlord with the title of any structures remaining thereon. Bedlow v. New York Floating Dry Dock Co. (N. Y.) 629

LARCENY. See CORPORATIONS, 22.

LAW OF PLACE. See CONFLICT OF LAWS.

LEASE. See CONTRACTS, 5; CORPORATIONS, 7; LANDLORD AND TENANT; STREET RAILWAYS.

LEGACY. See WILLS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

LEGISLATURE.

The Legislature can ratify and approve, by subsequent legislation, any act performed for the benefit of the State which it had original authority to legislate and provide for. O'Hara v. State (N. Y.) 603

LIBEL AND SLANDER. See also EVIDENCE, 10; PLEADING, 2-4; TRIAL, 22.

1. Defamatory words do not become privileged merely because uttered in the strictest confidence by one friend to another, or because uttered upon the most urgent solicitation, where the person uttering them is under no duty to utter them, and has no interest to subserve by uttering them, and the person to whom they are addressed has no interest or duty to hear, and no right to demand that he may hear them. Byam v. Collins (N. Y.) 129

2. A request by a young lady for information as to any rumors about the young men of the locality does not render privileged a communication based upon mere rumors and hearsay, although believed to be true by the person giving the information. Id.

3. A letter by a mere volunteer, containing defamatory statements as to a man's character, not known to be true, written for the purpose of breaking off relations which may lead to his marriage with a friend, but not a near relative, of the writer,—is not privileged. Id.

4. Publications of commercial agencies, issued to their subscribers generally, are not privileged communications. They are only privileged when made in confidence to a subscriber who is interested in the pecuniary standing of the merchant reported. Bradstreet Co. v. Gill (Tex.) 405

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Malice as an element; inference and presumption of; tendency to injure; privileged publications. 139

Privileged communications by commercial agency. 405

LICENSE.

1. A mere implied license, no matter how long enjoyed, to transact a business on railroad cars, for which no consideration has been paid, is revocable at any time; and such revocation results from notice not to prosecute the business in the future. Fluker v. Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. (Ga.) 843

2. One who persists in using the license after notice of its termination may be prevented from so doing by such force, not extending to violence to life or limb, as may be necessary to effectuate his expulsion from the premises. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also SHIPPING.

Municipal taxation of occupations. 284

LIENS. See also ATTORNEYS, 1; CONTRACTS, 18; JOINT TENANTS AND TENANTS IN COMMON; TAXES, 20.

1. The special exception in Mich. Pub. Acts 1887, No. 270, repealing former statutes as to mechanics' liens, by which proceedings pending are saved, shows clearly the legislative intent to save nothing else; and a lien which no steps had been taken to fix or enforce is not saved. Hanes v. Wade (Mich.) 498

2. Where the seed grain described in a note or contract is actually and in good faith sold and furnished to the maker of the note for seeding purposes, pursuant to the agreement of the parties, and a portion of the amount received is subsequently sold or otherwise appropriated by him, and not sown upon the land designated, that fact will not defeat the lien of the seller, under the Minnesota Statute, for the price of that portion of such seed grain actually sown upon the land, upon the crop grown therefrom. Nash v. Brewster (Minn.) 409

3. The Minnesota Statute authorizes the holder of a seed-grain note, upon condition broken, to take possession of the crop raised from the seed for which it is given; and the holder thereof may in such case enforce his lien as against the holder of a subordinate lien thereon who has taken possession, and may maintain an action against him for the conversion thereof. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Vested right in; repeal of statute; strictly construed; lien on several lots. 499

LIFE ESTATE.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Use or income; commences when; incidents of; provision against alienation. 118

LIFE INSURANCE. See INSURANCE, II.

LIMITATION OF ACTIONS. See also INSURANCE, 1, 2.

1. The Statute of Limitations may be set up in the orphans' court of Pennsylvania, precisely as in a court of law, and is not tolled upon a mere demand upon an executor. Keyser's Appeal (Pa.) 159

2. The fact that the Statute of Limitations has run against an imperfect obligation which is unenforceable by reason of some vice or defect therein which may be cured or waived by the debtor does not bar a cause of action on a new obligation growing out of the old one, when the vice or defect is waived. O'Hara v. State (N. Y.) 605

3. When an infant married woman, who was married before any of the Married Women's Enabling Acts were passed, except that empowering her to sell her land by joining her husband in the conveyance, joins with her husband in a conveyance of her land, the grantee's possession is rightful against her during the lifetime of her husband, and the Statute of Limitations does not run against her right of disaffirmance until coverture is ended. Stull v. Harris (Ark.) 741

4. An action upon a judgment rendered in a justice's court is barred in six years from its rendition, although the judgment has been docketed in the county clerk's office, under the provisions of N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 3017. An action to compel defendant to allow plaintiff's judgment to be set off against one held by defendant is an action upon a judgment, within the provisions of N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 383, that an action upon a judgment rendered in a court not of record shall be commenced within six years. Dieffenbach v. Roch (N. Y.) 829

5. Although a mortgage which is one of indemnity merely is barred in six years, under the Indiana Statute of Limitations, a mortgage which contains a covenant or express agreement to pay the sum of money thereby secured is not barred in six years. Crauford v. Hazelrigg (Ind.) 189

6. Overdue interest on bonds represented by negotiable coupons cannot be included in the recovery in an action on the bonds after an independent suit on the coupons has become barred by the Statute of Limitations. Griffin v. Macon County (C. C. E. D. Mo.) 853

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also ADVERSE POSSESSION.

Under New York Code. 629

LIS PENDENS.

1. The rule of lis pendens applies to one who purchases real property from a husband, with actual notice of a pending divorce suit in which the wife seeks a decree giving her the title to the property. Powell v. Campbell (Nev.) 615

2. A sale of property by a husband, pending a divorce suit in which a decree is asked setting apart the property to the wife, is not taken out of the rule of lis pendens by the fact that the wife told him he could sell it if he wanted to, and that she wished he would, where the purchaser had no knowledge of such statements. Id.

3. Purchasers pendente lite are only chargeable with notice when the purchase is from a party to the suit. Green v. Rick (Pa.) 48

4. The purchasers of mortgaged land are not affected by the pendency of a suit to which their grantors were not parties, involving only the authority of an agent to whom the mortgage debt was payable, to receive payment. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Doctrine of; when applies; alienation pending suit void; when initiated. 48

Effect of, in divorce cases. 615

LODGE. See BENEFIT SOCIETIES, 8.

MARKET REPORTS. See BOARD OF TRADE, 1-3.

MARRIED WOMEN. See ESTOPPEL, 1, 2; HUSBAND AND WIFE; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, 8.

MASTER AND SERVANT. See also ASSAULT AND BATTERY, 1, 2; SUNDAY.

1. A foreman of a bridge gang engaged in repairing bridges along the line of a railroad is a fellow servant with the persons operating a freight train on the same road, and cannot recover for injuries occasioned by negligence. St. Louis, A. & T. R. Co. v. Welch (Tex.) 889

2. Although asleep upon a side track in a car provided for that purpose, the foreman of a bridge gang, who is liable to be called at any moment to go out with his gang upon the road, is on duty so far as to be at the time a fellow servant with the men operating a freight train, whose negligence causes his injury. Id.

3. A railroad company is liable for negligence in permitting a car to be used from which the reach rod was absent from the brake beam in front of the wheels, causing the beam to hang lower and farther forward than it otherwise would have done, making it dangerous to brakemen going between cars to uncouple them, where the absence was known, or might have been known, to the company. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Buck (Ind.) 520

4. A brakeman on a railroad train is not chargeable with contributory negligence in going between cars to uncouple them, by reason of the absence of the reach rod from the brake beam on one of them, which was not known to him, and was not obvious, and could not have been discovered except by stooping down and looking under the car. Id.

5. An employé on a town farm maintained for the support of paupers and under the management of the overseers of the poor is so far the servant of the town that it is liable for injuries resulting from the negligent performance of his duties, where the overseers are also highway surveyors and selectmen, and where the surplus income is used for town purposes, and the whole operations of the farm are approved by the town. Neff v. Wellesley (Mass.) 500

6. Under the provisions of Mass. Pub. Stat. chap. 112, § 212, that in certain cases of death occasioned by the negligence of a corporation, etc., the damages shall be "assessed with reference to the degree of culpability of the corporation or of its agents or servants," the corporation is not rendered liable by showing that it had assumed a contractual or quasi contractual responsibility for third persons who were not its servants, but through whose negligence the injury happened. Littlejohn v. Fitchburg R. Co. (Mass.) 502

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Care required; neglect to block frogs and guard rails; action for death. 67
2 L. R. A.

Liability for negligence of vice-principal; servant and agent distinguished. 192

Obligation as to machinery, implements, etc.; contributory negligence not presumed; violation of Sunday Law. 520

Injury by negligence of fellow servant. 889

MAXIMS.

Quicquid plantatur solo, solo cedit. St. Johnsbury & L. C. R. Co. v. Willard (Vt.) 528

MECHANICS' LIEN. See CONTRACTS, 18; LIENS.

MILLS. See EASEMENT, 2; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

MINES AND MINING. See also CURTESTY.

1. A tenant for life, when not precluded by restraining words, may not only work open mines, but may work them to exhaustion. Rankin's Appeal (Pa.) 420

2. A tenant by curtesy in an estate which consists of coal mines and mining privileges has the right to work open mines even to exhaustion, although he is not tenant of the surface. Id.

3. A devise of coal mines and mining privileges, separate from the estate in the surface of the land, includes the use of the surface so far as necessary for mining purposes, and the use of a pit mouth thereon, although testatrix in her lifetime had granted a right of way for a tunnel, which had been constructed and could be used for taking the coal to market. Id.

4. In partition of coal between owners who do not own the surface, mining privileges pass as appurtenant or incident to the coal, without express words, and include the use of a pit mouth which is not within the lines of either purpart, but which is close to one of them, where it was the manifest intention to divide all the good merchantable coal. Id.

MONEY RECEIVED. See ASSUMPSIT, 1-5.

MONOPOLIES. See CONTRACTS, NOTES AND BRIEFS; CORPORATIONS, 9-6.

MORTGAGE. See also ESTOPPEL, 2; EVIDENCE, 25; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, 5; NOTICE, 4; WAREHOUSEMEN, 1.

1. That the mortgage for railroad stock was given by the State, which owned a majority of the stock, does not bind the State to use its controlling interest in the road exclusively in the interest of its mortgagees of the stock, or to impress the earnings received by the lessor of the road with a trust for the benefit of such mortgagees. Gibson v. Richmond & D. R. Co. (C. C. S. D. N. Y.) 467

2. Railroad bondholders to whom stock of the corporation has been mortgaged as collateral security cannot maintain a suit in equity to charge the lessor of the mortgaged road with the earnings derived under the lease, when such lease is not alleged to be void or voidable as between the parties to it. Id.

3. A mortgagee occupies the position of mortgagee for a valuable consideration where the mortgage is taken for the surrender of a prior mortgage and accrued interest thereon. Constant v. Rochester University (N. Y.) 784

4. The mere extension of the time of payment of a note to which a married woman is not a party does not discharge her inchoate right in her husband's property from a mortgage thereon in which she has joined to secure such note. Crawford v. Hazelrigg (Ind.) 189

5. The inchoate interest of a married woman in real estate of her husband is discharged from a mortgage in which she joined with him to secure a note given by her husband and others, when, with the mortgagee's consent and without her knowledge or consent, one of the makers of the note has been released or discharged, by renewal or otherwise, from liability for the note and debt secured; and she may set up such defense to protect such inchoate right from sale on the foreclosure of the mortgage. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also TAXES.

Holder of, as bona fide purchaser; effect of failure to record. 786

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 1, 8-6, 11; COUNTIES; HIGHWAYS; NEGLIGENCE, 8; STATUTES, 12-15; TAXES, 2, 8, 14, 15; TELEPHONE COMPANIES; TOWN; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES, 1; WHARFAGE AND WHARVES, 2.

1. A rule of the Boston board of police, that "no person shall sing or play or perform on any musical instrument in the streets or public places of the city of Boston, except in connection with a funeral, a military parade, or a procession of a political, civic, or charitable organization, for which a police escort is provided, unless licensed thereto by the board of police for the city of Boston, or as hereinafter set forth,"—is within the authority conferred upon that board to regulate "itinerant musicians," and is reasonable and valid. Com. v. Plaited (Mass.) 142

2. The Legislature has the right to provide—as by Mass. Stat. 1895, chap. 323, placing the police of Boston under the control of a board of police appointed by the governor—that powers previously vested in cities or towns, but not by force of any constitutional provision, shall be vested in officers appointed by the governor, and may fix the qualifications of such officers, and provide that they be appointed from two principal political bodies. Id.

3. An ordinance of a city of the second class in Kansas, that declares it unlawful for any person, society, association, or organization, under whatsoever name, to parade any public street, avenue, or alley of the city, shouting, singing, or beating drums or tambourines, or playing upon any other musical instruments, or doing any other act designed, intended, or calculated to attract or call together an unusual crowd or congregation of people upon any of said public streets, avenues, or alleys, without first having obtained in writing the consent of the mayor, or, in his absence, the president of the city council, city clerk, or city marshal, in the order named, authorizing such parade,—is of doubtful delegated power, is unreasonable, does not fix the conditions uniformly and impartially, contravenes common right, and is illegal and void. Anderson v. Wellington (Kan.) 110

4. A city is not liable for damages caused by the falling of a wall left standing after a building which belonged to a private owner was burned, although it had been notified of the fact that the wall was dangerous. Anderson v. East (Ind.) 712

5. A recovery can be had against a municipal corporation only where it negligently performs or negligently fails to perform a duty in its nature ministerial, and then only in cases where the ministerial duty is imposed by law. Id.

6. A city is not liable for injuries or damages caused by neglect of its officers in the performance of their duties. Robinson v. Rohr (Wis.) 366

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also HIGHWAYS; RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES.

Delegation of power; validity of ordinances regulating business; interference with religious rights. 143

Limitation of power of; regulation of telephone business. 279

Powers generally. 54

As agencies of government. 142

Liability for negligence; for misfeasance or neglect of officers. 866, 500

Liable for injuries caused by grading street. 606

Liabilities of; damage from falling wall; misfeasance or neglect of officers 712

Powers of; ordinances and by-laws; reasonableness of; prohibition of business; special grant of power. 721

NAVIGABLE WATERS. See WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

NAVIGATION. See COMMERCE; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES, 2-4.

NEGLIGENCE. See also CANALS; CARRIERS; CONFLICT OF LAWS, 6, 7; DAMAGES, 11; EVIDENCE, 2, 14, 15, 44; HIGHWAYS; MASTER AND SERVANT; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 4, 5; OFFICERS, 1, 2; PLEADING, 6; RAILROADS; SUNDAY; TELEGRAPH COMPANIES; TOWN, 3; TRIAL, 20.

1. The owner of a building which is burned is liable for damages caused by the falling of one of its walls which he had negligently left standing, knowing it be dangerous. Anderson v. East (Ind.) 712

2. The promise of a city officer to take charge of, and, if necessary, take down a wall of a burned building, does not relieve the owner of the premises from liability for damages caused by the fall, when he has negligently left it standing. Id.

3. Where a dangerous piece of machinery is placed in an alley by the owner of abutting lots, and is allowed to remain for years, both the individual and the corporation are guilty of negligence, and both are liable for injuries sustained by a child under nine years who was hurt upon such machinery. Oauge City v. Larkins (Kan.) 56

4. The fall of ice and snow from a building upon a horse, causing him to start, whereby the driver, who was engaged in unloading, was thrown from the wagon and injured, is the direct, proximate cause of the injury, although the ice and snow did not hit the driver. Smethurst v. Independent Cong. Church (Mass.) 695

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also CARRIERS; MASTER AND SERVANT; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

In attempting to get on moving train. 816, 883

Action for death. 67

What constitutes; liability of physicians. 587

Defined; concurrent and proximate cause. 695

Presumption and burden of proof. 820

NEW TRIAL.

1. The court will not set aside a verdict merely because a newspaper, during the trial, made improper reference to the trial and the case. Kerr v. Lunford (W. Va.) 668

2. The rule as to the assessment of damages for property taken under the Eminent Domain Act is that, where there is a conflict of evidence, and the verdict is consistent with all the facts and circumstances in the case, it will not be set aside merely because the court may regard the weight of evidence in the record against it; but when it clearly appears that the amount fixed is wholly inconsistent with and contrary to all the proofs, it is the duty of the court to interfere and resubmit the case to another jury. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Schneider (Ill.) 423

3. A new trial as to the assessment of damages should not be refused for the reason that the railroad corporation seeking to acquire the property had entered thereon on giving bond pending appeal as provided by the statute, and had made such changes therein as would prevent a new jury viewing it as it was when the proceeding for condemnation was begun. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

In eminent domain. 422

NEW YORK. See WATERS AND WATER-COURSES, 1.

NOTICE. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 14; EVIDENCE, 9; PARTNERSHIP, 8.

1. An attorney who has done a large amount of business for a client in investing money upon mortgages, which aggregate $3,000,000 or more, and who has in his office, in a pigeon-hole appropriated to satisfied mortgages, an unrecorded mortgage in favor of such client, taken eleven months before, will not be held, in the absence of any evidence upon that point, to have remembered the facts as to such mortgage at the time of taking a mortgage on the same property for another client, so as to charge the 2 L. R. A.

latter with notice of the prior mortgage. Con-stant v. Rochester University (N. Y.) 734

2. To hold a principal chargeable with knowledge which his agent has obtained on a prior occasion in an independent transaction, it must be shown that the knowledge was present to the mind of the agent at the very time of the transaction in question. Id.

3. If an agent recollected that there had been a prior mortgage, but honestly believed that it had been satisfied, although mistaken upon that point, the principal for whom he takes a subsequent mortgage will not be chargeable with knowledge of the former one by reason of the agent's knowledge. Id.

4. Whether a mortgagee can be held chargeable with notice of a prior unrecorded mortgage in the possession of his attorney in the transaction, who is also the attorney of the prior mortgagee, and whose duties to his clients are therefore conflicting,—quære. Id.

5. The knowledge of an agent, to operate as constructive notice to the principal, in Alabama, must have been acquired after the relation of principal and agent was formed. Wheeler v. McGuire (Ala.) 808

6. Where one of the obligors in a joint bond secured by a mortgage knew of the revocation of the authority of the agent to whom it was payable, and was present when the grantee of the land, who had assumed the mortgage, paid it to the agent, and did not disclose his knowledge, all the co-obligors in the bond are liable for its payment. Green v. Rick (Pa.) 48

7. An agent issuing an insurance policy, with full power to do so without even consulting the home office, will be regarded, so far as concerns his knowledge as to the title of the property insured, as if he was in fact the principal; and it is immaterial that his knowledge may have been acquired in business transactions entirely disconnected with the matter of insurance. Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Haas (Ky.) 64

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

To agent; effect on principal; constructive notice; possession of land. 784

By possession. 201

NUISANCE. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 7; FENCES; INJUNCTION, 8.

1. He who comes into a court of equity must come in with clean hands; therefore, when there appears to be an unfortunate quarrel between two women, which involves the families of each and both are in fault, a court of equity will not interfere to protect one against the other and enjoin as a nuisance what one does against the other. Medford v. Levy (W. Va.) 868

2. While the doing of certain acts by a person in the use of his premises as a dwelling-house might not in themselves amount to a private nuisance, yet when the same acts are done wantonly and maliciously for the mere purpose of annoying his neighbor and to destroy the peace and quiet of his home, and they have such effect, they amount to a nuisance which a court of equity will restrain. Id.

3. A provision of Iowa Code, § 3831, gov-ing the right to "any person injured thereby" to maintain an action to abate a nuisance, does not change the ordinary rule that a private person will not be allowed to maintain an action to restrain or abate a public nuisance unless he can show some peculiar or special damage or injury to himself. Innis v. Cedar Rapids, I. F. & N. W. R. Co. (Iowa) 233

4. A person who, after the erection of a bridge over a lake, has purchased boats and engaged in the business of renting them, has no other or different rights than are enjoyed by other persons in respect to the navigation of the lake, sufficient to enable him to maintain an action to abate the bridge as a nuisance, on the ground that it obstructs the navigation of the lake. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

In highway or alley. 57

OFFICERS. See also INJUNCTION, 1; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 6.

1. A board of street commissioners who, after advertising for proposals for building a bridge and accepting a proposal therefor, fail to enter into any contract, but, in accordance with the recommendation of a committee, undertake to perform the work themselves, and carry it on through their superintendent and other persons employed by them and under the supervision of their committee, are individually liable for injuries sustained by a person through the falling of a derrick in consequence of the negligence of their servants. Robinson v. Rohr (Wis.) 308

2. Although a board of street commissioners, in adopting plans and specifications, exercise judicial and legislative powers, and are not amenable to anyone except the public for any errors, negligence, or misfeasance in the matters within their jurisdiction, they become liable to third persons for their negligence or misfeasance when, after adopting plans and specifications, they undertake to carry them out practically, and do the work themselves through agents and servants, as in so doing, if they are acting as officers at all, they are merely ministerial officers. Id.

3. A vote by a township trustee in Indiana for himself, for the office of county superintendent of schools, is contrary to public policy, and, for that reason, an utterly illegal vote. Hornung v. State, Gamble (Ind.) 510

4. Where the announcement is made that a township trustee who has voted for himself for the office of county superintendent of schools has been duly elected, and is made upon the mistaken assumption that he had a right to vote for himself, the failure of those who had not voted for him to interpose further objection is not such an acquiescence in and tacit consent to the announcement of his election as amounted to an appointment of him to such office. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Exercising appointing power in his own behalf. 510

OPINIONS. See EVIDENCE, VI.
2 L. R. A.

PARTITION. See also EXECUTION AND JUDICIAL SALE; MINES AND MINING, 4.

1. A suit for partition brought by a tenant in common will be defeated by a valid adverse claim to the premises, made by his cotenant, under a tax title. Hurley v. Hurley (Mass.) 173

2. A suit in the nature of a partition cannot be maintained where there has been an ouster of the complainants by the defendant tenant in common, by acts so overt and notorious as to imply notice to his cotenants. Rich v. Bray (C. C. W. D. Mo.) 225

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Right to entry; trust among cotenants; trial of title; cotenant paying taxes. 172

Sale; rights of purchaser; record. 465

PARTNERSHIP. See also GUARANTY, 1.

1. Though a firm or partnership is not a person, it is a legal entity, and, for some purposes, is recognized as a quasi person having powers and functions exercisable by one of the partners severally or all of them jointly. It may be a debtor or a creditor, within the meaning of a statutory enactment. Drucker v. Wellhous (Ga.) 328

2. The majority of partners in a limited partnership, in Pennsylvania, for the manufacture and sale of steel, have no authority to change the location of their works against the will of the minority. Jennings's Appeal (Pa.) 43

3. Notice of dissolution, as in the case of a general partnership, is not necessary where a person attempting to become a special partner has, by virtue of the Pennsylvania Act of March 21, 1836 (Pub. Laws, 148), become liable as a general partner by reason of noncompliance with the provisions of that statute. Twigs v. Brooks (Pa.) 796

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also INSOLVENCY AND ASSIGNMENT FOR CREDITORS.

Limited; authority of partner; disposal of property; place of business. 43

Special; liability under; notice of dissolution. 797

Assignment for creditors. 328

PASSENGER. See CARRIERS.

PATENTS. See also CONTRACTS, 9.

1. One having taken out two patents,—the first for a novel composition of matter, the second for a combination of this composition with another article,—who brings suit for infringement on the second patent alone, in which it is held that the mere combination is not patentable, cannot be aided by the first patent, at least where it is not alleged or shown that he is still the owner thereof, but, on the contrary, such first patent may be set up as a prior patent to defeat his claim under the second. Underwood v. Gerber (C. O. E. D. N. Y.) 857

2. The principle that an infringing article or machine made before the expiration of a patent cannot be used after such expiration does not apply to a combination of parts which, on being held to infringe the patent covering such combination merely, is bona fide broken up, and, after the expiration of the patent, recombined. Johnson v. Brooklyn & C.R. Co. (C. C. E. D. N. Y.) 489

PAYMENT. See ASSUMPSIT, 1; BANKS AND BANKING, 3; PLEADING, 14.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also TAXES.

What agent can accept. 491

PENALTY. See COURTS, SHIPPING, NOTES AND BRIEFS; CORPORATIONS, 14.

PENSION.

No person is entitled to demand or receive greater compensation for services rendered as agent or attorney to another in procuring for him a pension from the United States than that provided by the statutes of the United States, although such person is not recognized by the commissioner of pensions as a pension agent or attorney. Caterly v. Robbins (Mass.) 745

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Fee for procuring. 745

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON. See also EVIDENCE, 11, 12.

1. The words "suitable graduate in medicine," in the California Act providing for the appointment of a county physician, include one legally licensed to practice medicine and surgery under the laws of the State, although he was never graduated at any college, school, or university which confers the degree of doctor of medicine. People, Johnson, v. Eichelroth (Cal.) 770

2. If physicians attending a woman deem it necessary for the preservation and prolongation of her life, to perform an operation, they are justified in doing so if she consents, whether her husband consents or not. State, Janney, v. Housekeeper (Md.) 587

3. The degree of care and skill required of physicians is that reasonable degree of care and skill which physicians ordinarily exercise in the treatment of their patients. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Right to practice; diploma. 771

Care and skill required; liability. 587

PIERS. See WHARFAGE AND WHARVES, 2-5.

PLATTING.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Of cities, towns, and additions. 62

PLEADING. See also EVIDENCE, 51.

1. Under the Texas Act of March 31, 1835, in an action against a foreign corporation it is not necessary to allege that it had an agent or representative in the county, and that its principal office was also in the county; but it is enough to allege, either that it had an agent or representative in the county, or that its principal office was there. Braintree Co. v. Gill (Tex.) 405

2 L. R. A.

2. Where a suit is brought for libel, it is unnecessary for plaintiff to characterize the suit by averment in his complaint. Id.

3. If a libel consisted in reporting plaintiff's standing as a merchant "in blank," the complaint should inform the court and the defendant of that fact, with such explanations as to what was meant by the report as may be necessary to show that it was injurious and defamatory. A complaint in such case, which undertakes to state the substance of the language used, or its meaning, is bad on general demurrer. Id.

4. A complaint in an action for libel is not insufficient because it does not state whether plaintiff asks for actual or exemplary damages. Id.

5. In an action in a Circuit Court of the United States, founded upon contract, brought by an assignee of the contract, the declaration should show that the suit could have been maintained by the assignor, if no assignment had been made. Republic Iron Min. Co. v. Jones (C. C. N. D. Ga.) 748

6. A complaint for injuries sustained by a traveler on a highway, alleging that she was without any fault or negligence on her part, sufficiently avers her freedom from contributory negligence, although it states that she was riding on an embankment thrown up by a railroad company alongside the track, for which an excavation had been dug in a highway, where such embankment was the only place of passage. Evansville & T. H. R. Co. v. Crist (Ind.) 450

7. In an action for damages for causing the death of a person, a general averment that his widow and child, for whom the action is prosecuted, sustained damages in a specified sum, is not insufficient in respect to their pecuniary loss, where the complaint alleges that deceased was in the employ of the defendant, which was a railroad company, as a brakeman, and that he left a widow and one child four years old, as it is an unavoidable inference that he was in the vigor of manhood and at the time engaged in earning money for their support. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Buck (Ind.) 520

8. In an action for injuries to an employé of a railroad company, a complaint alleging that they were received in consequence of the negligence of the master mechanic having sole control of the switch-yard where the accident took place, but without stating the size of the yard, the amount or responsibility or vastness of the business entrusted to him, or the extent of his control,—is not sufficient to show that he was such a representative of the company as to make his negligence that of the company, instead of that of a fellow servant. Muhlman v. Union Pac. R. Co. (C. C. D. Colo.) 192

9. A complaint based on the sole ground of the nonexistence of a corporation cannot sustain a judgment by which that question is left wholly undetermined, but which decrees that plaintiffs recover certain franchises of the defendants, which the latter are thereby enjoined from exercising. People, Attorney-General, v. Stanford (Cal.) 92

10. Where the defendants are charged by the complaint with usurping the rights of a corporation, an answer specifically denying that they, or any of them, have unlawfully claimed or unlawfully exercised such franchise, etc., is sufficient without affirmatively justifying their right to exercise such franchise, although they affirmatively allege the existence of a corporation, as the latter allegation may be properly treated as mere surplusage, and the answer still contains a complete defense. People, Attorney-General, v. Stanford (Cal.) 92

11. Where the existence of a corporation is expressly averred or admitted, it is not sufficient to allege that it has ceased to exist. The facts showing that its existence has terminated must be set forth. Id.

12. In an application for an injunction against the consolidation of a corporation with another, an answer alleging that the consolidation had been made and ratified by the stockholders, if not denied, will not be construed as meaning that the stockholders applying for the injunction assented thereto, where the Act under which the consolidation was attempted allowed a consolidation by a majority vote. Botts v. Simpsonville & B. C. Turnp. Co. (Ky.) 594

13. In an action against an individual for fraudulent representations made for the purpose of inducing the purchase of property, if the evidence shows the sale to have been made by a firm, an amendment will be allowed at any time. Deming v. Darling (Mass.) 743

14. The defenses of payment in advance need not be pleaded and proved as payment, but may be raised by the general issue. Starratt v. Mullen (Mass.) 697

15. The failure of defendant in an action on a benefit certificate to deny an explicit averment of the declaration that there was duly prepared a paper in the usual form, assuring to plaintiff the sum demanded on the occurrence of death, etc., is an admission of the execution of the certificate, for the purpose of the trial, under Rule 79 of the Michigan Circuit Court. Loracher v. Supreme Lodge, Knights of Honor (Mich.) 206

16. In an action to compel a conveyance of land in performance of a contract, where the defense set up is the insolvency of the vendee and of plaintiff, his widow, and an abandonment by her of all claim to the land, a reply alleging that the vendor agreed with her to take back the lot and pay her the value of the improvements, and demanding payment of a sum due her under such agreement, is not such a departure from the Code system of pleading as to defeat the action. Houston v. Sledge (N. C.) 487

17. A defense of the Statute of Limitations properly arises under a demurrer when the facts creating the bar are shown by the complaint. Attrill v. Huntington (Md.) 779

18. The question whether or not the beneficiary in a policy issued by a mutual benefit association has mistaken his remedy in bringing an action at law to compel an assessment to pay his claim may be raised by demurrer. Jackson v. Northwestern Mut. Relief Assn. (Wia.) 786

19. General averments of negligence are sufficient as against a demurrer. Anderson v. East (Ind.) 712

3 L. R. A.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Of usages and customs. 709
In action on benefit certificate. 786

PLEDGE AND COLLATERAL SECURITY. See BANKS AND BANKING, 10, 11.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Relation of parties. 471

POLICE. See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 1, 2.

POLICE POWER. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 7; RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

POSTOFFICE.

1. Where the quarterly returns of a postmaster, in which are reported receipts for sale of stamps, etc., and amount of commissions claimed for cancellation of stamps, have been regularly rendered to the department and have been passed upon by the auditor, and the balances therein found to be due the Government have been each quarter carried into a general account, such action by the auditor is a complete allowance of the commissions claimed and adjustment of such quarterly returns. United States v. Hutcheon (C. C. S. D. Ga.) 805

2. Where the credits in the general account kept by the auditor against the postmaster, and made up as above stated, show that the postmaster has fully paid all balances so charged, so that a complete balance could be struck upon such general account, in such case there is a complete settlement of the account, and thereafter the commissions covered by such adjusted accounts were not within the power of allowance by the Postmaster General so as to give him the right to "withhold" the same, within the meaning of the Act of Congress of June 17, 1878 (20 U. S. Stat. at L. 141). There was nothing to "withhold." Id.

3. If the Postmaster General, in the exercise of the power conferred upon him by the Act of June 17, 1878, before the allowance of credit for commissions is made, directs that it shall not be made, and it is not made, but, in lieu thereof, credit is given on the account kept with the postmaster for the amount of the allowance deemed reasonable by the Postmaster General, the balance shown due the Government by such an account would be prima facie sufficient, but not conclusive, evidence against the postmaster. Id.

4. Where an account of a postmaster, regular on its face, has been adjusted and allowed by the proper accounting officers and fully paid, such officers cannot, after the term of office of the postmaster has expired, evolve ex parte a balance in favor of the Government, founded solely upon a general and vague allegation of fraud in accounts formerly passed upon, so as to make such balance prima facie evidence against the postmaster and his sureties. Such allegations must be specific and sustained by competent evidence. Id.

POWERS. See TRUSTS, 3; WILLS, 12.

PRINCIPAL AND AGENT. See also BROKERS; ESTOPPEL, 3, 4; EVIDENCE, 9, 43, 48; INTOXICATING LIQUORS, 2, 3; NOTICE, 1-3, 5, 7; TRIAL, 23.

1. If relations exist which will constitute an agency, it will be an agency, whether the parties understand it to be, or not. Their private intention will not affect it. Bradstreet Co. v. Gill (Tex.) 405

2. An agent placed in charge of a retail store to conduct the business, with express authority to use money especially deposited for that purpose, and the cash receipts of the business in purchasing goods, is a general agent in conducting the business of the store, with special powers to purchase, and cannot bind the principal by a purchase on credit. Wheeler v. McGuire (Ala.) 808

3. In order to bind a principal by ratification, assent, or acquiescence in prior acts of his agent in excess of authority actually given, a knowledge of the material facts must be brought home to him. Id.

4. Where an agent authorized by a principal to purchase supplies for the use of the principal, and instructed to purchase only for cash, purchases in his own name, upon credit, of a seller who supposes the agent to be buying for himself only, and the principal pays or settles with the agent for the supplies in good faith, supposing that the agent had purchased them for cash or upon his personal credit, he is not liable over again to the seller for the price of the supplies. Fradley v. Hyland (C. O. S. D. N. Y.) 749

5. The rule that a seller who deals with the agent of an undisclosed principal can, upon discovering the principal, resort to the latter for payment, unless by his conduct he has led the principal in the meanwhile to pay or settle with the agent, does not apply to a case in which the agent bought contrary to his instructions, and the seller gave credit to the agent supposing him to be the only principal, and the principal has in the mean time paid the agent. Id.

6. If an agent is put forward to conduct a separate business in his own name, but with the property and for the benefit of his principal, the latter cannot escape liability for the purchase price of goods by a secret limitation upon the agent's authority to purchase. Hubbard v. Tenbrook (Pa.) 828

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also BANKS AND BANKING; PAYMENT.

Notice to agent. 735

Liability of principal when credit is given to agent. 749

General and special agent; authority; estoppel; ratification; liability for agent's acts and contracts. 808

Private restrictions on authority; special instructions; estoppel; liability of principal. 828

PRINCIPAL AND SURETY. See also EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, 5, 6; GUARANTY, 2.

Where a man gives his note jointly with his sons, who sign as a firm and as individuals, to raise money for the use of the firm, and he executes a mortgage to secure a compliance with the terms of the note, all the parties are bound as principals, although, as between the borrowers, he may be merely a surety for his sons. Harmon v. Lehman (Ala.) 869

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Taking security from principal; agreement for indemnity; effect of decree against or discharging principal; vacating or setting aside decrees. 644

PRIVATE BUSINESS. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

PROCEEDINGS IN REM.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

To enforce penalty against vessel. 883

PROXIMATE CAUSE. See NEGLECT, 4, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

PROXY. See BENEFIT SOCIETIES, 4.

PUBLICATION. See WRIT AND PROCESS.

RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS.

See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 2; JUNCTION, 1, 2; STATE, 2.

A power conferred by the Legislature upon a board of commissioners, required to be exercised with reference to the affairs of certain corporations, will not be extended by implication; and the acts which the board attempts to do under the power will not be upheld, unless the authority to do them is affirmatively shown to be included in it. Oregon R. Comrs v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. (Or.) 195

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Authority of. 195

RAILROADS. See also CARRIERS; CORPORATIONS, 28, 29; COVENANT, 2; CUSTOM AND USAGE, 2; DAMAGES, 8; EMINENT DOMAIN, 2-5; HIGHWAYS, 13, 14; MASTER AND SERVANT, 3, 4; MORTGAGE, 1, 2; SUNDAY; TAXES, 14, 15; TRIAL, 20.

1. Mont. Comp. Stat. p. 826, § 713, making every railroad corporation liable to the owner for damages sustained by injuring or killing an animal by running trains, is unconstitutional as attempting to create the liability without reference to any violation of law or omission of duty. Belenberg v. Montana Union R. Co. (Mont.) 813

2. A statute attempting to make a railroad liable for all damages to animals by running trains cannot, in order to prevent its condemnation as being unconstitutional, be construed to mean that the killing shall be prima facie evidence of negligence. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also DAMAGES; HIGHWAYS; TAXES.

Grant of right of way. 281

Liability for stock killed; constitutionality of statute. 814

RAPID TRANSIT ACT. See JUDGMENT, 4.

RATIFICATION. See PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.

REAL PROPERTY.

1. Where the continuance of an estate depends upon the performance of a specific act which is to be done at a fixed time, no demand is necessary, because the party bound has equal knowledge of the thing to be done and of the time when it is to be done. Royal v. Aultman-Taylor Co. (Ind.) 526

2. A condition in a deed made upon the consideration of yearly payments during the life of the grantor, that, in default of payment for three consecutive years, the conveyance might be revoked by repaying the amount already paid and recording a written declaration revoking the deed,—is not opposed to public policy or repugnant to the estate granted. Id.

3. A demand of each annual payment on the day it becomes due is not necessary in order to make a forfeiture of an estate in accordance with a condition in the deed creating it, which provides that it may be forfeited by recording a written revocation and repaying the amounts received, in default of three consecutive annual payments. Id.

4. A devise of "all the tracts or parcels of land belonging to" the testator, to his son, is sufficient, without any words of inheritance, to pass a fee, where preceding clauses of the will have expressly stated that each of testator's other children and his wife should receive a certain specific portion of property, "and no more," thus expressly disinheriting the other heirs, and where the introductory clause of the will indicates a purpose to dispose of testator's entire estate. Doe, Hitch, v. Patten (Del.) 724

5. In construing a devise which assumes to give a life estate to the ancestor and the remainder in fee to "heirs,"—the word "heirs" being used in its technical sense as meaning all who are to take generally, and not as the equivalent of "children" or some other partial or restricted class of heirs,—the intention to give only a life estate will not control, but under the rule in Shelley's Case, which is in force in Illinois, the ancestor takes the fee. Vanokinder v. Carpenter (Ill.) 455

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also LIFE ESTATE.

Forfeiture by breach of condition. 526

Use of word "heirs" in will; rule in Shelley's Case. 457

Devise of fee; words of inheritance. 724

RECEIVERS. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 9, 10.

1. The fact that the local statute provides that a creditor of an insolvent trader, or firm of traders, whose debt is mature, unpaid, demanded, and payment refused, may ask for a receiver, creates an exception to the rule making the existence of a lien a prerequisite to such an application in a court of the United States. Fechheimer v. Baum (C. C. S. D. Ga.) 153
2 L. R. A.

2. A receiver of the corporation being the representative of the debtor, a law which makes him a referee to take proof of claims against the corporation, and a judge to determine the materiality of evidence offered in their support, violates a fundamental rule in the administration of justice. People v. O'Brien (N. Y.) 255

REFORMATION OF INSTRUMENTS. See INSURANCE, 1, 2.

RELEASE. See INSURANCE, 6.

RELIEF ASSOCIATION. See DAMAGES; EVIDENCE, 43, 53; INSURANCE, 12-14, NOTES AND BRIEFS; TRIAL, 11.

RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES. See CHARITABLE USES, 2, 4, 5.

Where a church organization not incorporated purchases real estate for the benefit of such congregation, and the purchase price is paid, the property improved, and possession retained by such congregation, and the property is conveyed to some person in trust for such church and congregation, a trust is thereby created that may be enforced, although not in writing; and it can make no difference that the person to whom the land is conveyed is the bishop of the denomination of which said church is part. Pink v. Umscheid (Kan.) 146

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Police power over. 110

REMOVAL OF CAUSES.

1. A cause between citizens of different States, neither of whom is a resident or citizen of the State where the action is brought, may be removed into the Circuit Court of the United States for that district, although such court would not have jurisdiction of an original suit between the parties. Sheffield First Nat. Bank v. Merchants Bank (C. C. N. D. Ga.) 469

2. Irregularity in filing the affidavit and bond for removal the day before taking the formal order making the movant a party and removing the cause was cured by such order. Id.

RÉSUMÉ OF DECISIONS.

Subjects discussed and points decided 463

RES GESTÆ. See EVIDENCE, 44.

SALE.

1. Where, upon a bona fide sale of seed wheat to be sown on the land of the purchaser, the amount of wheat specified in the seed-grain note or contract given therefor was contained in a particular bin containing a larger quantity, all of the same quality and value, out of which it was agreed the purchaser was then and there entitled to take away the number of bushels purchased, the sale and delivery of the wheat at the date of the note was sufficient as between the maker and payee. Weighing or measuring is not absolutely essential to a completed sale, except when necessary to define the subject matter. Nash v. Brewster (Minn.) 409

2. The words, in a contract for the sale of sugar to be shipped from a foreign port, "the sugars to be thoroughly sampled and tested on arrival," will not imply a stipulation on the part of the sellers to assume any risk as to its condition or quality upon arrival at the port of destination. Lord v. Edwards (Mass.) 519

3. A contract for the sale of sugar of a certain standard of test and color, to be shipped from a foreign port, is performed by delivering sugar of the required standard on board the vessel at the port of shipment, if the title then passes to the purchaser and the seller does not expressly assume any risk of damage by the perils of the sea. Id.

4. A person not intending to pay, by inducing one to sell him goods on credit through the fraudulent concealment of his insolvency, is guilty of a fraud which entitles the vendor to disaffirm the contract, if no innocent third party has acquired an interest in the property. Fechheimer v. Baum (C. C. S. D. Ga.) 153

5. Where a firm of traders in May make a statement to a commercial news agency (Bradstreet's), showing entire solvency, which statement is intended to be circulated among merchants selling goods upon credit, and which states that there are no liens or mortgages upon their assets, and that they gave no security for borrowed money except farmers' notes as collateral; and in December it appears that they are in debt more than $150,000 and utterly insolvent, and that, at the time of their statement, they had made a written promise to execute mortgages to a favored creditor upon their entire assets, which promise was withheld from the news agency, and that their entire stock was subsequently conveyed by mortgages to such favored creditor,—the entire transaction is fraudulent as to creditors who gave them credit on the faith of said statement. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Rescission for fraud; representations of solvency; concealment of insolvency; remedies; demand not necessary. 153

Limitation of actions; application of statute in equity. 150

Completion of contract by delivery; duty of purchaser. 519

Of property to be taken out of mass. 400

SALVATION ARMY. See also MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 1-3.

A member of the Salvation Army, playing on a musical instrument in a parade of that organization in the street, comes within the general phrase "itinerant musician." Com. v. Plaisted (Mass.) 142

SAVINGS BANKS. See BANKS AND BANKING, 8.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Liability of directors. 584

SCHOOLS AND SCHOOL DISTRICTS. See EVIDENCE, 1.

SEED GRAIN. See LIENS, 2, 8; SALE, 1.

SET-OFF AND COUNTERCLAIM.

A bank holding a check for collection against, 2 L. R. A.

an insolvent bank, when sued by the assignee of the latter, may use such check as a set-off where no defense is shown against the check. Farmers Deposit Nat. Bank v. Penn Bank (Pa.) 273

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Equity rule as to cross demands; by debtor of insolvent bank; against assignee. 273

Of bank against depositor; paper held for collection. 275

SHELLEY'S CASE.

NOTES AND BRIEFS

Rule in. 455

SHIPPING. See also COMMERCE.

1. A ship owner who, to exonerate himself, has, as bailee of the cargo, recovered and received from the owner of another vessel, in a suit in admiralty for damages for a collision, the value of the cargo, as well as damages for injury to his ship, is answerable to the owner of the cargo, or to the insurer subrogated to such owner's right, for the whole value thereof so received, without deduction for the expenses of the litigation in which it was obtained. Hardman v. Brett (C. C. S. D. N. Y.) 173

2. The regulation contained in U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4465, forbidding a steamboat to carry more passengers than allowed in her certificate of inspection, applies to such boats engaged in carrying passengers on a navigable water of the United States between ports of the same State only. The City of Salem (D. C. D. Or.) 830

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also AVERAGE; CARRIERS.

Regulation of steam vessels; inspection; license; penalties; remedies; injury to employes. 830

SNOW. See HIGHWAYS, 15; NEGLIGENCE, 4.

SOCIAL CLUBS.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Excise tax. 494

SOCIAL CORPORATIONS. See BENEFIT SOCIETIES, NOTES AND BRIEFS; INSURANCE, II.

SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE. See PLEADING, 16.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Of parol trust. 662

SPENDTHRIFT TRUST. See TRUSTS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

STATE. See also COSTS AND FEES, 2.

1. The rule which forbids suit against officers of a State, because, in effect, a suit against the State, seems to apply only where the interest of the State is through some contract or some property right of hers, or where her interest is in a suit in her own name, brought or threatened by her officers, to enforce some alleged claim of hers. McWhorter v. Pensacola & A. R. Co. (Fla.) 504

2. Railroad commissioners being authorized by statute to make reasonable rules and regulations for all railroads in the State as to charges for transportation of passengers and freights, and to furnish each company with a schedule of charges made for its observance, and having fixed certain rates for one of the companies which it deems not reasonable and just, said company filed a bill against the commissioners to enjoin them from promulgating said rates, or any other rates substantially the same. Held, that this is not, in effect, a suit against the State; but the statute having prescribed a penalty for violation of the rates fixed, and authorized the commissioners to institute action in the name of the State to recover the penalty, in so far as the bill seeks to enjoin them from doing this, it is in effect a suit against the State. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

As a party to a suit. 660

STATUTE OF FRAUDS. See CONTRACTS, 2-4.

STATUTE OF 'LIMITATIONS. See LIMITATION OF ACTIONS; PLEADING, 17.

STATUTES. See also RAILROADS, 2; STATUTES, 12; WILLS, 3.

1. The constitutional provision as to the title of a statute does not require that provisions of the Act which are all germane to the subject expressed in the title should be specified or detailed in the title. Minnesota Loan & Trust Co. v. Beebe (Minn.) 418

2. The titles of statutes, —as "An Act to Charter" a railroad company, and "An Act to Amend an Act Entitled 'An Act to Charter'" such company,—are sufficient, under a constitutional provision that statutes shall relate to but one subject, which must be expressed in the title, to sustain a provision in the body of the Act giving authority to counties, townships, etc., to subscribe to the stock of such company, and declaring that such townships, etc., shall be bodies politic and corporate, invested with the necessary powers to carry out the statutory provisions. Floyd v. Perrin (S. C.) 242

3. A statute whose object as expressed in the title is to incorporate a city, which is substituted for a statute whose object as expressed in the title is to organize a new township, cannot be considered a new bill, so as to be invalid, under Mich. Const. art. 4, § 28, because not introduced within the first fifty days of the session, when the lands to be affected in both the bill and the substitute are shown to belong in the same county, and the body of the original bill does not appear in the legislative journals. People, Hart, v. McElroy (Mich.) 609

4. Although the courts of Michigan may take cognizance of legislative journals, for the purpose of determining whether constitutional methods have been followed in the passage of a law, they cannot act upon anything not found in the journal, or presume that any requirement of the Constitution has not been fulfilled, in determining the validity of a statute. Id.

3 L. R. A.

5. The legislative practice of reading a bill twice by title and only once at length, having long been maintained in Michigan, must be regarded by the courts as a substantial compliance with Mich. Const. art. 4, § 19, which provides that "every bill and joint resolution shall be read three times in each House before final passage thereof." Id.

6. The Illinois Warehouse Act of 1871, § 25, imposing a penalty for issuing receipts for property not actually in store, is germane to and embraced within the title, "An Act to Regulate Public Warehouses and the Warehousing and Inspection of Grain, and to Give Effect to Article 18 of the Constitution of this State." Sykes v. People (Ill.) 461

7. Under N. Y. Const. art. 3, § 16, providing that no private or local bill shall embrace more than one subject, which shall be expressed in the title, N. Y. Act 1873, chap. 105, the title to which indicates but one subject, and that the amendment of prior statutes relating to the transportation of passengers and property through pneumatic tubes by atmospheric pressure, but the provisions of which enlarge the powers of a corporation formed for such purposes by giving authority to operate a grand underground railway not less than 15 miles long, with two or more tracks through passage ways 18 feet in height and 31 feet in width, which could not be operated by atmospheric pressure, and with authority, by the consent of a board of engineer commissioners, to use horses, steam, or any other motive power,—is unconstitutional and void. Astor v. New York Arcade R. Co. (N. Y.) 789

8. The title to a statute must be such at least as fairly to suggest or give a clue to the subject dealt with in the Act, in order to comply with the constitutional provision that it shall embrace no more than one subject, which shall be expressed in the title. Id.

9. Under the New York Constitutional Amendment which went into effect January 1, 1875, prohibiting the passage of a private or local bill giving to any corporation any exclusive privilege or franchise, the New York Act of 1886 which gives to a corporation the right to a complete occupation of a street for railway purposes, providing a roof over the excavation is left to take the place of the street surface, and to use any motive power which would not permit of the emission of smoke, gas, or cinders, is unconstitutional and cannot be supported as an amendment of the Act of 1873 giving the corporation the right to construct a railway in tubes not more than 31 feet in width by 18 feet in height, exterior measurement, and which should not approach within 2 feet of the curb line or 18 feet of the building line of the street. Id.

10. When the enlargement of corporate powers becomes indistinguishable from a granting of new, substantive rights, a statute attempting to give such powers is within the purview of the New York Constitutional Amendment taking effect January 1, 1875, prohibiting any private or local statute granting any exclusive privileges or franchises to a corporation. Id.

11. The New York Act of June 10, 1885, taxing certain property given by will "after the passage of this Act," is not an exception to the general provision of the New York Revised Statutes declaring that "every law, unless a different time shall be prescribed therein, shall begin to take effect only on the twentieth day after its final passage as certified by the Secretary of State." Re Howe's Estate (N. Y.) 825

12. The fact that local and special laws are in force in some cities at the time of the adoption of a Constitution prohibiting such laws, and are not affected thereby, will not justify the substitution of other local or special laws in their stead. Ayars's Appeal (Pa.) 577

13. Under a constitutional provision against local and special legislation, the classification of cities with the view of legislating for either class separately is essentially unconstitutional, unless a necessity therefor exists,—a necessity springing from manifest peculiarities clearly distinguishing those of one class from each of the other classes, and imperatively demanding legislation for each class separately that would be useless and detrimental to the others. Id.

14. The Pennsylvania Act of May 24, 1887, dividing the cities of the State into seven classes, the charter powers of those between the fourth and seventh classes being precisely similar, with very few and quite unimportant exceptions,—is unconstitutional, as the only possible purpose of the classification is to evade the constitutional limitation in respect to local and special laws. Id.

15. The Pennsylvania Act of May 24, 1887, dividing cities into classes, cannot go into effect (even if valid) and become operative till the terms of all the members of a council in office at the time of the approval of the Act have fully expired. Id.

16. The Act of Congress to regulate commerce should be liberally construed in favor of commerce among the States; but when complaint is made or relief sought solely or mainly in the interest of common carriers, the act complained of or the right asserted must clearly appear to have been forbidden or conferred; and where the complaining carrier is not in a position to commend itself to the favorable consideration of a court of equity, no strained construction of the law will be made in its favor. Kentucky & I. Bridge Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (C. C. D. Ky.) 289

17. The use of the word "of," in a statute, which is a manifest blunder, being intended for "off," will not be permitted to affect the plain meaning of the Legislature. Com. v. Delaware Div. Canal Co. (Pa.) 798

18. A long and inveterate usage for half a century, under express sanction of law, should be able to continue without further re-enactment, unless the legislative will is expressed to the contrary. There can be no presumption against it from mere silence, with no substituted rule on the subject. Warren v. Board of Registration (Mich.) 208

19. N. Y. Laws 1886, chap. 810, making it the duty of the attorney-general to bring a suit to wind up the affairs of any corporation dissolved by Act of Legislature, which does not purport in terms to have a retroactive operation, and in which there is nothing to show that the Legislature intended it to apply to a dissolution already accomplished,—does not apply to a corporation dissolved by legislative Act one week prior thereto. People v. O'Brien (N. Y.) 255

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

|   |     |
|---|-----|
| Interpretation of common law.   | 100 |
| Title, sufficiency of; aid to construction; passage; readings; when becomes a law; presumption as to validity; joint resolutions; legislative journals; change in object. | 609 |
| Local and special legislation.  | 577 |
| Suggestion of subject in title; constitutional provisions.  | 789 |

STEAMBOATS. See SHIPPING.

STOCK EXCHANGE. See BOARD OF TRADE, 1-3.

STOCKHOLDERS. See CORPORATIONS, III.

STREET RAILWAYS. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 8-10; CONTRACTS, 23, 24; CORPORATIONS, 25-27; HIGHWAYS, 8, 9; STATUTES, 7, 9.

1. The resolution of the Common Council of the City of New York granting a street railroad franchise to the Broadway Surface Railroad, which expressly provided for traffic contracts by which another company should obtain a right to run cars over its tracks, with no condition with respect to the duration of such contract rights or otherwise, gave an estate in perpetuity in Broadway to the Broadway Surface Railroad Company, under the authority of the Constitution and laws of the State of New York. People v. O'Brien (N. Y.) 255

2. The provision of N. Y. Laws 1884, chap. 252, § 15, prohibiting leases by street railroad companies of parallel roads, does not prohibit traffic contracts between roads which are parallel for a certain portion of their length, for the partial use of their respective roads beyond the line of parallelism, where such contracts are not in terms or in effect leases, and do not surrender possession or control of the road by its original owner. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

|                                  |     |
|----------------------------------|-----|
| Right to construct, a franchise. | 255 |
|----------------------------------|-----|

STREETS. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 8-6; HIGHWAYS; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

SUBROGATION. See INSURANCE, 5.

SUGAR TRUST. See CORPORATIONS, 8-6.

SUMMARY PROCEEDINGS.

Parties cannot, by contract, ingraft upon the procedure prescribed for a summary proceeding a remedy or practice not warranted by statute. French v. Willer (Ill.) 717

SUNDAY.

A railroad company cannot defend against an action for negligently causing the death of a brakeman by failure to furnish safe appliances, on the ground that he was killed on Sunday while working in violation of the Sunday law. Louisville N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Buck (Ind.) 520

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Violation of Sunday Law as defense to action. 520

TAXES. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 19; CONTRACTS, 22; EVIDENCE, 64; JOINT TENANTS AND TENANTS IN COMMON.

1. The Minnesota Statute requiring, as a condition precedent to probate proceedings for the settlement of estates, the payment to the county treasurer of specified sums arbitrarily prescribed with reference to the value of the estate in question, is unconstitutional, being contrary to those clauses requiring equality of taxation and the dispensation of justice freely and without purchase. State, Davidson, v. Gorman (Minn.) 701

2. The landing place of Fulton Ferry, in the city of Brooklyn, which has been occupied and used as an incident to the ferry franchise for 250 years by the city of New York and its agents or lessees, being held and used for public purposes, is not taxable in Brooklyn, unless special authority to tax it is given by the Legislature. People, New York, v. Assessors of Brooklyn (N. Y.) 148

3. Property of a municipality acquired and held for governmental and public uses, and used for public purposes, is not a taxable subject, within the purview of the tax laws, unless specially included. Id.

4. A railroad bridge over the Missouri River, which river, being navigable, can be bridged only by authority of Congress, and not of the State, is not a part of the roadbed or superstructure of the railroad, within the meaning of Neb. Comp. Stat. chap. 77, § 89, requiring the officers of the railroad corporation to return to the auditor of public accounts for assessment the roadbed and superstructure, depot buildings, and section and tool houses; and therefore the state board of equalization has no authority to levy a tax thereon, but such bridge is within the residue of the railroad property mentioned in the proviso to that section, which is liable to assessment and tax by the local officers of the county in which it is situated. Cass County v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. (Neb.) 188

5. A statute authorizing assessments of property omitted from the assessment made by the regular assessor, or an additional assessment, where the first one has been made upon an inadequate valuation, is not unconstitutional. South Nashville Street R. Co. v. Morrow (Tenn.) 858

6. Taxation of shares of corporate stock in the hands of stockholders, as their individual property, is not unconstitutional as constituting double taxation because a tax has already been laid upon the property of the corporation, but from which the capital stock in the hands of the corporation is omitted. Id.

7. Shares of stock in a corporation have no actual situs, and may properly be made taxable at the place where the corporation has its situs. Id.

8. Bonds of a corporation can only be taxed by the government having jurisdiction of the owner, and are not taxable in a State where the owner does not reside. Id.

9. A citizen cannot be taxed on corporate bonds in a county where he does not reside, although that is the location of the corporation. Id.

10. An Act requiring a corporation to retain, from the interest due on its bonds having negotiable coupons the amount of state, county, and city taxes assessed against the owners of the bonds, is invalid, inasmuch as the tax is void as to nonresidents, and the corporation cannot be required to determine as to each coupon, whether it may lawfully reserve the tax from the interest, or not. Id.

11. A corporation may be compelled by statute to act as collector of a tax on its securities, by deducting it from the interest which has become due thereon and returning it into the state treasury, instead of paying it to the holders of the securities. Com. v. Delaware Div. Canal Co. (Pa.) 798

12. The constitutional provision requiring taxation to be uniform upon the same class of subjects is not violated by a statute, one section of which makes any scrip, bond, or certificate of indebtedness issued by a private corporation to the residents of the State on which interest is paid, taxable upon its nominal value; while a prior section provides that "all mortgages, money paid by solvent debtors, etc.," shall be taxable at a certain rate on their value. All interest-bearing indebtedness of private corporations is thus made a separate class for the purpose of taxation: and such classification is justified by the peculiar nature of corporate securities, the great fluctuations in their value, and the difficulty of reaching them by the general system of taxation. Id.

13. A corporation has a legal standing in court to contest the constitutionality of a law requiring it to deduct from the interest due on its obligations the amount of the tax on them, and pay it into the state treasury, instead of to the holders of the securities. Id.

14. An ordinance levying a tax of $50 on every railroad running through the corporate limits does not violate the principle of uniformity of taxation. Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Reidsville (N. C.) 284

15. A municipal ordinance levying a tax of $50 upon every railroad running through the corporate limits, whether it be called a privilege tax or by some other name, being a tax imposed upon business in the town, if authorized by the state law, is not void as a tax on interstate commerce. Id.

16. By the Oregon Act of 1882 (Comp. 1887, § 2785), real property must be assessed to the owner thereof, unless it is unoccupied and the owner unknown; and an assessment made to a person not the owner of the property is invalid. Tracy v. Reed (U. C. D. Or.) 773

17. The owner of property for purpose of taxation is the person having the legal title or estate thereto or therein, and not one who, by contract or otherwise, has a mere equity therein, or a right to compel a conveyance of such legal title or estate to himself. Id.

18. The provision of Ohio Act April 5, 1859, § 8 (S. & C. 1488), that "no person shall be required to include in his statement as a part of the personal property, moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies or otherwise, which he is required to list, any share or portion of the capital or property of any company or corporation which is required to list or return its capital and property for taxation in this State," does not apply to shares of a foreign corporation, although the capital of the corporation is taxed in the State where located, and although the corporation has substantial property in Ohio on which it pays taxes here; nor does it apply to shares of a railroad company which is formed by the consolidation of an Ohio company with companies of other States, notwithstanding such company pays taxes in Ohio on the portion of its property which is situated here. Western Ins. Co. v. Ratterman (Ohio) 558

19. An assessment on the property of an insurance company, which is attacked by certiorari on the ground that the net surplus of the company is assessed unlawfully because it is less than 10 per cent of the capital, cannot be sustained by the commissioners of taxes by showing that the net surplus as fixed by them is too small, and that unearned premiums deducted therefrom by them should not have been deducted. Having made the deduction they are bound by it, and the regularity of the assessment must be determined on the basis of the valuation which they fixed, and which they cannot, at that stage, either increase or diminish. People, Com. Ins. Co. v. Coleman (N. Y.) 773

20. One who redeems property in which he afterwards becomes a tenant in common, from a tax sale, is entitled to have the lien kept alive as against his cotenant, until the latter shall have paid his share of the taxes, if there are no special fiduciary relations between the parties, although he takes no steps to assert and preserve his lien, as prescribed by Mass. Pub. Stat. chap. 12, §§ 63-65. Hurley v. Hurley (Mass.) 172

21. The provision of the New York Act of June 10, 1885, that an estate valued at less than $500 shall not be subject to the collateral inheritance tax applies, not to the whole estate left by a testator, but to the portion of property passing to the legatee or devisee. Re Hove's Estate (N. Y.) 825

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also LICENSE; PARTITION.

Exemption of public property. 148
Assessment and taxation of railroads; state board of equalization; limitation of taxing power; for county and municipal purposes. 188

On mortgages. 850

Voluntary payment; protest; right to recover back. 62.

On land; to whom assessed; contesting tax title; tax deed as evidence. 778

Compelling corporation to collect; on dividends and stock; corporate property and shares, where taxable; uniformity; due process; valuation L. R. A.

tion; taxation of credits; creditor out of jurisdiction; on mortgages and mortgaged property; on property in notes; property of nonresident held by resident trustee. 798

On insurance companies. 772

On collateral inheritance; what is; legislative power to impose; rate of; persons and property subject to. 825

On corporate property and shares; double taxation on corporate bonds; compelling corporation to collect; legality of taxes. 853

TELEGRAPH COMPANIES.

1. Delay in delivering a telegram stating the death and time of burial of a person referred to merely as "Willie," without notice of his relation to the person addressed, will not subject the company to an action for damages based solely on injury to fraternal feelings from inability to attend the funeral. Only such damages as might naturally result from a failure to receive the message will be considered as being within the contemplation of the parties to the contract. Western U. Tele. Co. v. Brown (Tex.) 766

2. A telegraph company which has, by mistake, changed the first name of the person to whom a message is sent from "Sam" to "Wm.," is not liable for damages consequent on the failure of a connecting line to deliver the message promptly, when, by the exercise of due diligence on the part of the later company's agents, it would have been delivered to the proper person, who would have known that it was intended for him, and thus all damages would have been prevented. Western U. Tele. Co. v. Mumford (Tenn.) 601

3. A printed condition on a telegraph blank, "This company is hereby made the agent of the sender, without liability to forward any message over the lines of any other company when necessary to reach its destination," is reasonable. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Reasonable regulations; connecting lines. 601

TELEPHONE COMPANIES.

1. A telephone company having special franchises and privileges, including the right of eminent domain, is subject to public regulations; and the State has power to fix and prescribe a maximum rate to be charged by it for telephone service. St. Louis v. Bell Teleph. Co. (Mo.) 278

2. The provision of a city charter giving power to license, tax, and regulate business of various kinds, including that of telephone companies, does not confer power to fix the rates to be charged by a telephone company, nor is such power included in the general police power of a municipal corporation. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Legislative control; regulation of charges by municipality. 278

TENANCY IN ENTIRETY. See HUSBAND AND WIFE, l. NOTES AND BRIEFS.

TENDER AND PAYMENT INTO COURT.

The tender of a deed, after verdict for a sum of money claimed as alternative relief by plaintiff in an action for specific performance of a contract, is too late to be effectual. Houston v. Sledge (N. C.) 487

TICKETS. See CARRIERS.

TOWN. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 11; MASTER AND SERVANT, 5; OFFICERS, 8, 4.

1. No acceptance by the public, or by the inhabitants of the town of Gloucester, for whose benefit a reservation in a town grant for landing places was principally designed, was necessary, other than that inferred from the reservation itself. Attorney-General, Adams, v. Tarr (Mass.) 87

2. A reservation, in an ancient town grant, of land "for landing places for the public use for the inhabitants of Gloucester forever," is to be construed as a reservation of a landing place for the public at large, and not merely for the inhabitants of the town. Id.

3. A town which maintains a farm for the support of its paupers, and from the surplus produce thereof boards paupers of other towns for pay, and also boards persons engaged to work upon its highways, is liable for injuries resulting to third persons from negligence in conducting it. Neff v. Wellesley (Mass.) 500

4. A township trustee is the agent of his township in the transaction of its business, and acts in a fiduciary as well as an official capacity, and is amenable to the rule which forbids an agent or trustee to place himself in such an attitude towards his principal or cestus que trust as to have his interest conflict with his duty. Hornung v. State, Gamble (Ind.) 510

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Nature of; power to issue bonds or levy taxes. 242

TRADE. See CONTRACTS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.*TRIAL. See also EMINENT DOMAIN, 6.

1. Upon an issue devisavit vel non, the proponents of the will have the affirmative of the issue and the right to open and conclude the argument. Kerr v. Lunsford (W. Va.) 668

2. It is within the discretion of the trial court to hear the testimony of a witness, although it is not offered until after the evidence has been closed. McNutt v. McNutt (Ind.) 872

3. Where the facts are indisputable, it is the province of the court to determine, as a matter of law, the reasonableness of a regulation by which a railroad company refuses to sell tickets or check baggage to a regular stopping place of a passenger train. Pittsburgh, O. & St. L. R. Co. v. Lyon (Pa.) 489

4. Whether or not the force used in regaining possession of property is excessive is a question for the jury. Com. v. Donahue (Mass.) 628

5. It is not improper for the court, when the 2 L. R. A.

jury has rendered inconsistent findings and has failed to observe the instructions of the court, to intimate that fact and give the liberty to hold further consultation, where he scrupulously avoids anything like dictation as to whether the finding should be in favor of one party or the other, but merely insists upon having the questions submitted determined, with a correct understanding of the instructions; and a request to poll the jury before the verdict is thus perfected is premature. Wightman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. (Wia.) 185

6. It is not error to refuse instructions asked after the argument is begun. Evansville & T. H. R. Co. v. Crist (Ind.) 450

7. In a proceeding to assess damages to a land owner for right of way appropriated for a railroad, in the absence of any evidence showing that the farm or tract of land has stock thereon or is adapted to stock purposes, an instruction to consider the increased risk or the probability of stock upon the premises being accidentally killed or injured in the operation of the railroad, is misleading and erroneous. Leroy & W. R. Co. v. Ross (Kan.) 217

8. In the absence of all evidence tending to show a decrease in the value or rental value of premises, caused by the construction of a railroad, or any increase in the cost of insurance on account of the danger from fire, an instruction to the jury to consider accidental danger from fire to the premises resulting from the operation of the road will be misleading and erroneous. Id.

9. Whether cider is vinous or spirituous is not a question of law to be decided by the court, but a question of fact to be determined by the jury. Com. v. Reyburg (Pa.) 415

10. Where there is some testimony to the effect that persons using cider felt the effects of it the same as if they had been drinking whiskey or beer, it is sufficient to carry to the jury the question whether the cider was a vinous or spirituous liquor. Id.

11. Instructions that the jury have no fixed rule to ascertain damages, but must do that which their consciences will approve of as an act of justice, are erroneous where the action is for weekly benefits, in which the measure of damages is the stipulated sum due under the charter and by-laws of the company, if plaintiff's membership is established. Baltimore & O. Employees Relief Assn. v. Post (Pa.) 44

12. It is improper to single out one witness, although he was the family physician, and instruct the jury that his evidence is entitled to great weight. Kerr v. Lunsford (W. Va.) 668

13. Where an instruction has already been substantially given, the court is not bound to repeat it. Id.

14. Where an instruction refers to a disease by a technical name, is confused in its parts, and assumes facts as proved, it is properly refused. Id.

15. An instruction was properly refused that assumed that the evidence raised in the minds of the jury a doubt of the testator's capacity. Id.

16. An instruction should not be given unless relevant, and it is not relevant unless there was evidence tending to prove the facts on which the instruction is based. Id.

17. Submitting to the jury, under the statute, "particular questions of fact," is within the discretion of the trial court. This is a revisable discretion. Id.

18. The questions must be of such a character that the answers thereto, if contrary to the general verdict, would control the same and be conclusive of the issue. Id.

19. Under the statute, the court did not err in refusing to submit to the jury the following questions: "(1) Was the late Lewis Lunsford, in August, 1880, suffering from a disease known as senile dementia? (2) If so, is that disease curable? (3) Had that disease so far progressed in August, 1882, as to render him (Lewis Lunsford) imbecile and incapable of transacting business? (4) Does a person suffering from such disease have any lucid intervals?" Id.

20. Although a railroad corporation must be taken to have known at the time of a disaster the facts which subsequently pointed out the cause thereof, yet it is entitled to go to the jury on the question whether or not those facts would, before the accident, have indicated to a competent person, considering them with the care which is necessary when human life is involved, that the road was unsafe. Littlejohn v. Fitchburg R. Co. (Mass.) 502

21. Where a party's letters, coupled with testimony that he had made reports to a mercantile agency of the status of merchants, would support a finding that he was an agent, but there was other evidence from which the jury might conclude that he was not such agent, the question of agency should be left to the jury. Bradstreet Co. v. Gill (Tex.) 405

22. A charge to the jury on the question of damage to plaintiff's credit by a libel is not unauthorized where there is some evidence, though slight, tending to show that his credit was injured by the publication, and that he suffered some damage. Id.

23. Whether a corporation acting under a contract which declares it to be the agent of the insured only in obtaining insurance from a foreign corporation in any manner aids the foreign company in transacting its insurance business, within the prohibition of the Illinois Act of 1869, is a question for the jury. People v. People's Ins. Exch. (Ill.) 840

24. When the evidence given, with all the inferences that the jury could justifiably draw from it, is so insufficient that a verdict based thereon must be set aside, the court is not bound to submit it to the jury, but may direct a verdict. Id.

25. Where a man gave an agent in charge of a retail store authority to purchase goods, when he was on the eve of leaving home to be absent for some months, which he revoked on his return, it is a question for the jury whether the parties dealing with the agent after such revocation had notice thereof. Wheeler v. McGuire (Ala.) 808

26. A general verdict must control special interrogatories, unless there is irreconcilable conflict. Stringer v. Frost (Ind.) 614

27. Failure of a special verdict to find some 2 L. R. A.

facts in issue will not necessarily render it objectionable, if the failure to find the facts was not contrary to the evidence. Louisville, N. L. & C. R. Co. v. Buck (Ind.) 520

28. If a verdict is silent concerning any of the facts in issue, the court will assume, upon motion for a new trial, that the party upon whom rested the burden of proof in respect to those facts failed to prove them. Id.

29. Where the material facts to show the liability of a railroad company were a hidden or latent defect in a car by the absence of a reach rod from a brake beam, which increased the ordinary and obvious perils of the service of a brakeman, and its agency in producing an injury, a special verdict which shows the manner in which the accident and injury occurred, and the condition of the car and appliances, need not be required to describe the appliances. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Question for jury as to agency; directing verdict; instructions. 840, 841

Question for court or jury as to reasonableness of regulations. 490

Direction of court to modify or amend verdict; polling the jury. 185

Issue of devisevi vel non; duty to determine sufficiency of evidence. 668

Question for jury as to cause. 695

TROVER.

A carrier is not guilty of conversion where he, in good faith, takes goods from the possession of the owner by direction of another having the apparent control of the goods and the present capacity of investing himself with actual possession, and delivers them to such other person in another place. Gurley v. Armistead (Mass.) 80

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also BILLS AND NOTES; CARRIERS.

Unlawful taking; direction of ostensible owner. 80

TRUSTS. See also BANKS AND BANKING, 5, 6, 10, 11; CHARITABLE USES, 1, 2, 7, 8; CORPORATIONS, 3-6; EVIDENCE, 5, 27; INTERJUNCTION, 4; RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES; TOWN, 4.

1. Minn. Gen. Laws 1888, chap. 107, authorizing the organization of annuity, safe deposit, and trust companies with power to act as trustee, guardian, etc., is not unconstitutional because it grants to a corporation the power to act in a fiduciary capacity, or because it does not require it to take an oath or give a bond, as in the case of natural persons. Minnesota Loan & Trust Co. v. Beebe (Minn.) 418

2. If a corporation to which property is devised in trust for the support of common schools is incapable of acting as a trustee, the trust does not thereby fail, but the proper court may appoint a new trustee. Skinner v. Harrison (Ind.) 187

3. Where a trustee held property in trust for a married woman for life, with power of appointment by will, and, in default thereof, for her child in fee, upon the death of the married woman failing to exercise the power of appointment, the legal estate remains in the trustee; but a person to whom he devises it is a mere volunteer who takes it bound by the trust. Lee v. Simpson (C. C. D. S. C.) 659

4. If a bank, on receiving from another bank commercial paper "for collection and immediate return," makes the collection and mingles the money collected with its general funds, and thereafter becomes insolvent, having cash on hand sufficient to cover such collection, the fund collected must be held to have so lost its identity that the cash on hand will not be impressed with a trust lien in favor of the bank for which the collection was made, as against general creditors. Philadelphia Nat. Bank v. Dorod (C. C. E. D. N. C.) 480

5. The doctrine that, when a trust fund has been wrongfully converted into another species of property, it can be followed and subjected to the preferential rights of the cestui que trust, is to be limited to cases where the identity of the fund can be traced, and is not to be extended to cases where it has been so mingled with other moneys or property that it can no longer be specifically separated. Id.

6. Where an assignee of a contract to construct a railway, for the payment of which certain securities of the railway are pledged, in order to pay the purchase money, borrows from another, and pledges him as consideration thereof part of the profits to arise under the contract, the lender becomes entitled to an equitable lien on the contract and securities pledged to secure payment; and one subsequently purchasing said contract and securities takes them subject to such lien; and the moneys and assets arising under the transfer constitute a trust as to the lender, enforceable in a court of equity. Especially is this so where the allegations of the bill present a strong case of fraud. Langdon v. Central R. & Bkg. Co. (C. C. S. D. Ga.) 190

7. Where a will gives property to trustees upon certain trusts, and directs that, "if at the expiration of ten years a majority of his children then living shall desire it, the trustees shall sell the real estate and shall divide the net proceeds," if necessity compels the sale of part of the real estate before the ten years expires, the proceeds of the sale will be held upon the same trusts as was the real estate, and will not be distributed upon petition of the children before the expiration of such time. Re Chapin (Mass.) 768

8. The limitation of the power of a cestui que trust to dispose of his interest in the income of property devised in trust for the use of testator's sons, to enjoy the rents, issues, and profits thereof during their natural lives, is valid; and an assignment by one son of his interest in such rents and profits is not valid either as to the rents already accrued or thereafter to accrue. Lumpert v. Haydel (Mo.) 118

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Receiving trust property with notice. 659

Interest of cestui que trust, when inalienable; restraining alienation; validity as to creditors. 113, 114

Resulting; how created; what sufficient to constitute. 146

In property converted; mingling funds; following fund into hands of third person. 490

In devise or bequest. 662

Between family relatives; presumptions; fraudulent contracts. 816

TURNPIKE COMPANIES. See CORPORATIONS, 15-17.

UNDUE INFLUENCE. See WILLS, 9, 10.

USAGE. See CUSTOM AND USAGE.

USURY.

1. A note given for the repayment of money borrowed, with interest, stipulating in addition that, for every $10 so advanced, the borrower bound himself to deliver to the lender for storage and sale on commission one bale of cotton, in default of which he should pay as liquidated damages storage for one month and commissions for selling,—is not usurious if the advance is made by a warehouseman or commission merchant with a reasonable expectation that the borrower can perform the stipulation as to delivering the cotton; but if there is no reasonable expectation of his being able to deliver it, the contract is usurious. Harmon v. Lehman (Ala.) 589

2. A lender of money on an agreement stipulating, not only for repayment, but for the delivery to him of cotton to be sold on commission, cannot charge a larger price for the service in selling and storing the cotton than he charges for the same service where no money is loaned. If he does, the contract is usurious. Id.

3. If a contract is usurious, no custom can legalize it. Id.

VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

1. A vendee can claim the benefit of no covenants contained in the deed to his vendor except such as attach to and run with the land,—namely, for quiet enjoyment and warranty. Barry v. Guild (Ill.) 334

2. Where a man who has made a deed with covenants, intending that an undivided part of the land conveyed should be held merely as security, obtains from a subsequent grantee a deed of such undivided part, made, at his request, to a stranger to the former deeds, the latter deed has the same legal effect as if made by the original grantor himself; and the vendee therein is not entitled to the benefit of any covenants contained in the original deed by the grantor. Id.

3. A purchaser of land through which a railroad runs is not bound by his vendor's agreement to fence the railroad, of which he had no actual notice and which was not recorded. Pittsburg, O. & St. L. R. Co. v. Boenworth (Ohio) 199

4. Relinquishing other security in consideration of a transfer of land by a deed absolute in form, but in reality as security, is sufficient to entitle the grantee to protection as a bona fide purchaser against defects in the grantor's title. McCleary v. Wakefield (Iowa) 629

5. A purchaser of land, although bound to take notice of the right under which one in possession of it claims, is not chargeable with notice of a right or claim not asserted, or one which may subsequently accrue. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also BONA FIDE PURCHASER; COVENANTS; NOTICE.

Right of purchaser to good title. 466

VERDICT. See TRIAL.

VIEW. See EMINENT DOMAIN, 6.

VOTERS AND ELECTIONS. See also EVIDENCE, 8, 18–20, 24, 65, 66.

A single man having no family relations in Detroit, or any household of his own of which he is a member, who lodges in one ward and boards in another, is a resident of the latter for the purposes of registration as an elector. All the former charters of the city having contained express provisions to this effect, which have been also incorporated by the Legislature into charters of other cities in the State in numerous instances, without adopting a contrary rule in any instance, the law in this respect must be held to remain the same, although the charter of 1887 is entirely silent on the subject, the changes made from former charters being on entirely distinct matters. Warren v. Board of Registration (Mich.) 208

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Recount of ballots; burden of proof; ballots as evidence. 506

WAIVER. See also EVIDENCE, 64.

While a condition may be waived by a party who has the right to avail himself of it, mere indulgence or silent acquiescence in the failure to perform is never construed into a waiver unless some element of estoppel can be invoked. Royal v. Aultman-Taylor Co. (Ind.) 526

WALL. See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

WAREHOUSEMEN.

1. Warehousemen in Alabama, who deliver up cotton stored with them to a third person, producing their receipt therefor, may be held liable to the mortgagee of such cotton, whose mortgage is properly recorded in another county, although they have no actual notice of the mortgage. Hudmon v. Du Bose (Ala.) 476

2. That there was no intent to defraud the party to whom a warehouse receipt was issued in violation of the Illinois Warehouse Act of 1871, § 25, is immaterial on the question of guilt under that section; the only intent necessary to be found to constitute the offense relates only to whether the warehouseman intended to issue the receipt knowing it to be false. Sykes v. People (Ill.) 461

3. The Illinois Warehouse Act of 1871, § 25, was not repealed by implication by the passage of Ill. Crim. Code, §§ 124, 125, the provisions of the two Acts being distinct and not repugnant,—the offense created by the former consisting solely in issuing a receipt from which a fraudulent result may occur, and that created by the latter consisting in the making or uttering of a receipt for a fraudulent purpose or with fraudulent intent. Id.

4. The Illinois Warehouse Act was intended for the protection of the public; and the issuance, by a warehouseman, to a bank, of receipts transferable by indorsement, purporting to be for property in store belonging to the bank, when in fact no such property was in store, and delivered by him to the bank as security for loans made by it to him, renders such warehouseman liable criminally, under § 25 of the Act, although he had no intent to thereby defraud the bank. Id.

WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

See also COMMERCE; NUISANCE, 4.

1. The right of the city of New York to erect structures in the navigable waters of the State is subject to the sovereign authority over such highways. Bedlow v. New York Floating Dry Dock Co. (N. Y.) 639

2. A State Legislature may authorize the building of a bridge or other structure tending to obstruct the navigation of a navigable river which is altogether within its own boundary; and it is only when Congress, by virtue of the constitutional provision, acts as to such obstructions, that its will must be obeyed so far as may be necessary to ensure free navigation. Green & B. R. Nav. Co. v. Chesapeake, O. & S. W. R. Co. (Ky.) 540

3. The Green & Barren River Navigation Company, by the Kentucky Act of March 9, 1868, leasing to it the "Green & Barren River line of navigation and their tributaries, together with the grounds, houses, waterworks, rents, profits, tools, machinery, implements, and appurtenances, and all the franchises thereunto belonging or appertaining," acquires only the improvements belonging to the State in its corporate capacity, as distinguished from what was subject to public use under common right, and does not acquire any exclusive right of navigation. Therefore it has no right of action against a railroad company for the obstruction of navigation by repairing a bridge, where this was done under a license which was valid against the public, and the improvements included in the lease were not injured or interfered with. Id.

4. The obstruction of navigation by the repairing of a bridge over a river in replacing a draw span, which bridge is maintained under lawful authority, creates no right of action in favor of parties entitled to navigate the river, if the repairs are made in such a manner as not unreasonably to obstruct the navigation, although it was possible to have opened the draw and constructed the new one upon the edge of the river, thus avoiding all obstruction to navigation, but which would have involved unreasonable delay and expense. Id.

5. An adverse, exclusive, and uninterrupted use and enjoyment, by one person and those under whom he claims, of all the water of a creek, taken therefrom by means of a ditch and conveyed to certain mining grounds for mining purposes, for twelve years, or for any period beyond that of the Statute of Limitations prescribing the time in which entry shall be made upon real property, will bar the owner of the land through which the creek runs, of his riparian rights; but where the ditch by means of which the water was originally appropriated was constructed under a license granted by the owner of the land, in which he reserved the right to use the water a part of each year for his own purposes, such adverse use by grantees from the original appropriator cannot be established unless it is shown that the use of the water by them has been in hostility to the use of it by the owner of the land under such reservation. Huston v. Bybee (Or.) 568

6. In order to establish adverse possession, the users of water under a license which reserved certain rights must show that their use of it was in defiance of any right upon the part of the owner to use it for any purpose, that they totally ignored his right to use it at all, and that he acquiesced therein for the statutory period. Id.

7. An agreement by a person through whose land a stream of water ran which he was accustomed to use for purposes of irrigation, for watering stock, and for domestic use, giving permission to another to dig a ditch across his land in order to conduct the water to certain mining grounds, upon the promise of the other that the former should have the exclusive use of the water flowing through the ditch at any point on his lands where he might desire to turn it for irrigating purposes, during the spring and summer months; and that the other would not sell or dispose of the ditch or water right to anyone else; but that they should revert and become the property of the owner of the land,—must be construed to give to such owner the use of the water whenever required for the use of his premises for the purposes mentioned, and to the other party the use of it at all other times, for the purpose of working his mining grounds. Id.

8. A person having the right to the exclusive use of water flowing through a ditch constructed across his land, at any point on said land where he may desire to turn it for irrigating purposes during the spring and summer months, has the preference during the season when the condition of his premises is such as to require the use of the water for the purposes mentioned, but has no right to waste it at any time, or to use it extravagantly or imprudently; and at other times the owner of the ditch has the full and free right to use it; and each is required to respect the rights and interests of the other regarding the matter in every particular. Id.

9. Where a right to construct a ditch across land of another who was to have the privilege of using water therefrom for irrigating purposes was on condition that the ditch should not be sold, use of the ditch by persons to whom it had been sold in violation of the condition is not adverse, where the owner of the land, during a portion of each year, continues to take water from the ditch in accordance with the right reserved to him. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Navigable, what are; obstruction, right to abate. 288

Conveyance of mill; what passes. 285

2 L. R. A.

Navigable; power of Congress to regulate; legalizing bridge over; jurisdiction of courts. 540

Navigable waters; what are. 380

WHARFAGE AND WHARVES.

1. The authority of the city of New York to grant rights under water in the harbor to others than the littoral owners, on certain conditions, by necessary implication inhibits the granting of such rights to others except upon compliance with the conditions annexed to the exercise of such authority. Bedlow v. New York Floating Dry Dock Co. (N. Y.) 629

2. The authorities of the city of New York have power to grant the privilege of constructing piers in front of wharves and bulkheads to others than the owners of such structures, provided they comply with the conditions prescribed by the Act of 1806. Id.

3. Lessees of a wharf have a right to extend and improve it so as to increase its facilities, or to build a pier attached thereto for their use and occupancy, so far as their acts are not prohibited by the terms of the lease and do not constitute waste. Id.

4. Where tenants of a wharf obtained the right to build a pier attached thereto, upon their claim as "lessees having the same rights and privileges as the owners of the soil," they are estopped against setting up any right to the pier against their landlords, except under the lease. Id.

5. A pier erected by a tenant as an addition to a wharf, the effect of which, separately maintained, would be to destroy the essential and profitable use of the wharf, becomes an accretion to the wharf, belonging to the owners after the expiration of the tenancy, unless removed. Id.

WILLS. See also CONTRACTS, 3; EVIDENCE, 21-23, 86, 49, 50, 62, 68; REAL PROPERTY, 4, 5; TRUSTS, 7.

1. The statutory provision in reference to wills devising real estate in New York, executed by a nonresident and probated in another State, that an exemplified copy of such will or of the record thereof shall be presumptive evidence of the will and of the due execution thereof, does not render such will effectual to pass real estate in this State unless executed in accordance with the laws of this State. Lockwood v. Lockwood (N. Y.) 425

2. N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 1866, is to be construed as providing for an action to determine the validity of a devise in a will whose proper execution is assumed, and not for an action to determine the validity of the will itself. Anderson v. Appleton (N. Y.) 175

3. N. Y. Laws 1879, chap. 816, which provides that the validity of a devise or will may be determined by the supreme court in a proper action for that purpose, brought by any heir at law or devisee, was repealed by implication by N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1866, 1867. Id.

4. It requires less capacity to make a will than it does to make a deed. Kerr v. Lunsford (W. Va.) 664

5. Old age is not of itself sufficient evidence of incapacity to make a will. Id.

6. The time to be looked to by the jury, in determining the capacity of a testator to make a will, is the time when the will was executed. Id.

7. It is not necessary that a person should possess the highest qualities of mind in order to make a will, or that he should have the same strength of mind he may formerly have had; the mind may be in some degree debilitated, the memory may be enfeebled, the understanding may be weak, the character may be eccentric, and he may even want capacity to transact many of the ordinary business affairs of life; it is sufficient if he have mind enough to understand the nature of the business in which he is engaged, to recollect the property which he means to dispose of, the objects of his bounty, and the manner in which he wishes to distribute it among them. Id.

8. In order to make a valid will it is not necessary that the testator should name all his children in it, or give each of them a portion of his estate. If he was mentally capable of understanding the disposition which he was making of his property, and acted freely, it is immaterial to whom he gives his property,—whether all to one, or some, of his children, or to strangers. If he has a disposing mind and memory, he has a right to do as he pleases with his property. Id.

9. Although the testator may, perhaps, have been influenced by feelings of resentment or dislike to one or more of his children, and by feelings of affection and attachment towards others, and though these feelings may have influenced him to give his whole estate to the one part, and little or nothing to the others, this is not sufficient to make the will invalid. Id.

10. If the provisions of the will were induced by the extreme kindness and attention to the testator on the part of the principal devisees, that will not constitute undue influence which will invalidate the will. Id.

11. When a final decree is pronounced in favor of a will on the verdict of a jury rendered on an issue deviseavit vel non, the functions of the suit are exhausted, and the bill should be dismissed. In such suit the construction of the will cannot be involved. Id.

12. A will giving property to a daughter, with power to dispose of it by her own will in case she die before her father, and directing payment in that case to the executors or trustees named in her will, operates, in case of her death leaving a will, to devise and bequeath the property, by its own force, in accordance with her will, although her power of appointment, considered as a power, could not be executed in her father's lifetime. Re Piffard's Will (N. Y.) 193

13. The word "surviving," in a will devising property to testator's wife for life, and adding: "But on her decease I give and devise the same to my surviving children to be divided equally between them,"—refers to the children surviving on the wife's decease. Coveny v. McLaughlin (Mass.) 448

14. A bequest or devise to a township in Indiana, although primarily to the civil township, will be held to be for the school township when the intention appears to create a fund for the support of common schools. Skinner v. Harrison Twp. (Ind.) 187

15. Where testatrix gives a university certain sums of money in trust for various purposes, to the fund of one of which the residue of the estate is given, and directs the estate to be converted into money or available securities as soon as it can be done having in view the best interest of the estate, it operates as an equitable conversion of the estate, and no real estate owned by her is thereby devised. Re McGraw's Estate (N. Y.) 887

16. A testator can disinherit his heirs or next of kin only by leaving his property to others. Mere words of exclusion will not suffice. The estate must be actually given to somebody else. Coffman v. Heatnoll (Va.) 848

17. A will which simply revokes all other wills theretofore made by the testator, and declares that a certain son shall be excluded from all participation in the estate because he has become the heir to certain other property, and testator is about to make a final settlement, giving him as much as the estate would pay to the other legal heirs, is not sufficient to exclude such son from participation in the estate, but is a nullity, where no provision is made for giving the estate to anybody else. Id.

18. The revocation of a will by intentionally destroying it will not revive a former will which was expressly revoked by the latter one. Hawes v. Nicholas (Tex.) 863

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also CORPORATIONS; COURTS; TRUSTS.

Lapse of legacy; power of appointment; re-execution by codicil; interpretation. 194

Intent of testator; meaning of word "heirs." 457

What is; interpretation of. 849

Issue of deviseavit vel non; attesting witnesses; evidence; testamentary capacity; undue influence. 663

Revocation. 863

Probate; executors and administrators; grant of letters; citation; renunciation. 795

WITNESSES. See also CLAIMS, 8; EVIDENCE, 38, 39.

One who would inherit a part of the testator's property but for the will, under W. Va. Code, chap. 180, § 28, is incompetent to speak of the testator's capacity to make the will. Kerr v. Lunsford (W. Va.) 668

WRIT AND PROCESS.

1. An order for service of summons by publication should not be made by a court in New York against nonresident defendants in an action by a judgment creditor to reach property in copyrights and royalties thereon, which, for the purpose of defrauding creditors, have been assigned to one of the other defendants by the judgment debtor in another State, to which the debtor has gone, after execution has been issued on the judgment in the State of New York, where it was rendered. The property being intangible, the defendants nonresidents, and the transfer having been made out of the State, there is no jurisdiction over the subject of the action or its cause. Bryan v. University Pub. Co. (N. Y.) 638

2. Where an order for publication of summons has been made in an action, over the subject or cause of which the courts of the State have no jurisdiction, defendant is entitled to make a motion to set it aside, rather than submit to the hardship of coming in to defend the action. Id.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. See HIGHWAYS, 4, 5.

2 L. R. A.

L. R. A. CASES AS AUTHORITIES.

CASES IN 2 L. R. A.

2 L. R. A. 33, PEOPLE v. NORTH RIVER SUGAR REF. CO. 54 Hun, 355, note, 27 N. Y. S. R. 282, 3 N. Y. Supp. 401.

Affirmed in 54 Hun, 354, 5 L. R. A. 386, 7 N. Y. Supp. 406, which was affirmed in 121 N. Y. 582, 9 L. R. A. 33, 18 Am. St. Rep. 843, 24 N. E. 834.

Combinations affecting competition.

Cited in Rafferty v. Buffalo City Gas Co. 37 App. Div. 623, 56 N. Y. Supp. 288, upholding purchase of stock of one corporation with stock of another to prevent ruinous competition; Queen Ins. Co. v. State, 86 Tex. 275, 22 L. R. A. 492, 24 S. W. 397, holding combination to fix insurance rates not one in restraint of trade; Milwaukee Masons & Builders' Asso. v. Niezerowski, 95 Wis. 135, 37 L. R. A. 130, 60 Am. St. Rep. 97, 70 N. W. 166, holding combination of contractors and masons to suppress competition and advance prices illegal; Bailey v. Master Plumbers' Asso. 103 Tenn. 107, 46 L. R. A. 563, 52 S. W. 853, holding illegal, master plumbers' association to prevent competition and restrict purchase of supplies and materials; Distilling & Cattle Feeding Co. v. People, 156 Ill. 487, 47 Am. St. Rep. 200, 41 N. E. 188, holding combination to stifle competition and control production and prices illegal; Brown v. Jacobs' Pharmacy Co. 115 Ga. 443, 57 L. R. A. 554, 90 Am. St. Rep. 126, 41 S. E. 553, holding combination to compel outsider to sell goods at prices fixed by it void; United States v. Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. 46 L. R. A. 136, 29 C. C. A. 160, 54 U. S. App. 723, 85 Fed. 291, holding contract between iron-pipe manufacturers for purpose of restraining competition and maintaining prices void.

Cited in footnotes to Texas Standard Cotton Oil Co. v. Adoue, 15 L. R. A. 598, which holds combination to fix prices of cotton seed and seed cotton void; Van Horn v. Van Horn, 10 L. R. A. 184, which holds combination to drive trader out of business actionable; More v. Bennett, 15 L. R. A. 361, which holds association of stenographers to control prices for work illegal combination; State v. Phipps, 18 L. R. A. 658, which holds combination by foreign companies to increase rates of insurance unlawful.

Cited in note (12 L. R. A. 196) on conspiracy.

— Agreements affecting trade.

Cited in footnotes to Chaplin v. Brown, 12 L. R. A. 428, which holds grocer's agreement not to buy butter from makers for two years if firm opens butter store, void; Gloucester Isinglass & Glue Co. v. Russia Cement Co. 12 L. R. A. 563, which holds agreement to prevent competition between corporations in manufacture of glue under patent valid; State ex rel. Watson v. Standard Oil Co. 15 L. R. A. 145, which holds agreement for transfer of corporate stock to trustees to vote and receive dividends void; Clark v. Needham, 51 L. R. A.

785, which holds void lease of manufacturing machinery, with agreement against lessor's engaging in business for five years; Cummings v. Union Blue Stone Co. 52 L. R. A. 262, which holds void agreement by persons controlling 90 per cent of sale of blue stone to sell through common agent, and maintain agreed prices.

Cited in notes (8 L. R. A. 498, 500) on contracts against public policy; (11 L. R. A. 437, 438) on contracts to regulate competition in trade; (11 L. R. A. 504) on contracts in general restraint of trade; (4 L. R. A. 157) on contracts in partial restraint of trade.

— Monopolies.

Cited in footnote to Stockton v. Central R. Co. 17 L. R. A. 97, which holds lease of railroad franchises and roads tends to monopoly.

Cited in notes (6 L. R. A. 457) on void contracts creating monopolies; (9 L. R. A. 38) on corporations and monopolies; (13 L. R. A. 771) on nature of monopolies; (12 L. R. A. 754) on restraining monopolies as public nuisances.

— Fruits of illegal combinations or agreements.

Cited in footnote to Pittsburgh Carbon Co. v. McMillin, 7 L. R. A. 46, which holds party to illegal trust combination not entitled to proceeds, as against receiver of trust assets.

Necessary articles of commerce.

Cited in Queen Ins. Co. v. State, 86 Tex. 270, 22 L. R. A. 494, 24 S. W. 397, holding insurance not a business of commerce, in which public has any right.

2 L. R. A. 43, JENNINGS'S APPEAL, 2 Monaghan (Pa.) 184, 16 Atl. 19.

Limited partnerships.

Cited in Spencer Optical Mfg. Co. v. Johnson, 53 S. C. 536, 31 S. E. 392, holding members of firm, not strictly complying with statute as to limited partnerships, liable as general partners.

Cited in footnotes to Vanhorne v. Corcoran, 4 L. R. A. 386, holding strict compliance with statute necessary to limit liability; State, Tide Water Pipe Co., Prosecutor, v. State Board, 27 L. R. A. 684, holding limited partnership taxable as corporation; Edwards v. Warren Linoline & Gasoline Works, 38 L. R. A. 791, which holds partnership association organized under laws of Pennsylvania regarded as partnership, instead of corporation, in Massachusetts.

Cited in note (8 L. R. A. 712) on limited partnerships.

2 L. R. A. 44, BALTIMORE & O. EMPLOYEES' RELIEF ASSO. v. POST, 122 Pa. 579, 15 Atl. 885.

Presumption as to agent's authority.

Cited in Smith v. Crum Lynne Iron & Steel Co. 208 Pa. 466, 57 Atl. 953, holding authority of superintendent to bind corporation by contract to give injured employee life employment will not be presumed; Langenheim v. Anshutz-Bradberry Co. 2 Pa. Super. Ct. 291, 38 W. N. C. 508, holding burden of showing extent of agent's authority is on party seeking to charge principal.

Contracts of railway relief associations.

Cited in footnotes to Pittsburg, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Moore, 44 L. R. A. 638, which sustains contract allowing railroad employee option between action for damages or claim on relief fund; Pittsburg, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Cox, 35

L. R. A. 507, which sustains contract that accepting relief from railroad relief association shall release employer from liability; Oyster v. Burlington Relief Department, 59 L. R. A. 292, which denies right to recover on certificate of railroad relief department, after recovering full statutory penalty for employee's death.

Benefits recoverable.

Cited in footnote to Robinson v. Exempt Fire Co. 24 L. R. A. 715, which holds recovery limited to benefits accrued at commencement of suit.

Injuries covered by accident insurance.

Cited in footnote to Lord v. American Mut. Acci. Asso. 26 L. R. A. 742, which holds question for jury, whether entire loss of hand, within meaning of accident policy, caused by injury without amputation above wrist.

2 L. R. A. 48, GREEN v. RICK, 121 Pa. 130, 6 Am. St. Rep. 670, 15 Atl. 497.

Notice of pendency.

Cited in Hillside Coal & I. Co. v. Heermans, 191 Pa. 119, 43 Atl. 76, holding lis pendens notice to one purchasing fourteen years after commencement of action; Hovey v. Elliott, 118 N. Y. 134, 23 N. E. 475, holding purchaser of bonds with knowledge of pending litigation bound by result; Mansur & T. Implement Co. v. Beer, 19 Tex. Civ. App. 313, 45 S. W. 972; holding action to recover vendor's lien notes does not create notice by lis pendens to subsequent lienor; Noyes v. Crawford, 118 Iowa, 18, 96 Am. St. Rep. 363, 91 N. W. 799, holding lis pendens no notice to bona fide purchaser from one not a party, holding by title antedating commencement of action.

Cited in note (2 L. R. A. 615) on divorce; rule of lis pendens.

2 L. R. A. 52, HAWS v. ST. PAUL F. & M. INS. CO. 130 Pa. 113, 15 Atl. 915, 18 Atl. 621.

Effect on policy of removal of property.

Cited in British-America Assur. Co. v. Miller, 91 Tex. 420, 39 L. R. A. 547, 66 Am. St. Rep. 901, 44 S. W. 60, holding insurance on property located in specified place, not covering the property when in another place.

Cited in note (26 L. R. A. 240) on location of movable property as affecting fire insurance thereon.

Loss by lightning.

Cited in note (26 L. R. A. 269) on insurance against loss by lightning.

2 L. R. A. 54, SCHNEIDER v. DETROIT, 72 Mich. 240, 40 N. W. 329.

Appropriating private property for public use.

Cited in Vanderlip v. Grand Rapids, 73 Mich. 536, 3 L. R. A. 253, 16 Am. St. Rep. 597, 41 N. W. 677, holding grading by raising 30-foot embankment in front of lot, taking of private property; Harper v. Detroit, 110 Mich. 429, 68 N. W. 265, holding gross damages should be awarded to abutting owner for carrying street over railroad; Phelps v. Detroit, 120 Mich. 448, 79 N. W. 640, holding city liable for damages to abutting owner for unauthorized construction of bridge across railroad.

Powers, generally, of municipal corporations.

Cited in notes (7 L. R. A. 760) on power of municipal corporations to borrow money; (11 L. R. A. 124) on power of taxation.

2 L. R. A. 56, OSAGE CITY v. LARKINS, 40 Kan. 206, 10 Am. St. Rep. 186, 19 Pac. 658.

Dedication of streets and alleys to public use.

Cited in notes (9 L. R. A. 551) on dedication of land to public use a matter of intention; (11 L. R. A. 58) on effect of dedication for highway; (8 L. R. A. 829) on use of streets in cities and towns.

Misuse of land dedicated to public as an abandonment.

Cited in McAlpine v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. (Kan.) 64 L. R. A. 89, 75 Pac. 73, holding land dedicated to public as a levee does not revert because used for railroad tracks and other unauthorized purposes.

Liability of city for defect in alley.

Cited in Fletcher v. Ellsworth, 53 Kan. 763, 37 Pac. 115, holding city not maintaining alley in safe condition liable.

Temporary obstruction of highway as nuisance.

Cited in Richmond v. Smith, 101 Va. 168, 43 S. E. 345, holding large, temporary platform erected in street for carnival performances a nuisance per se.

Liability for distinct, concurrent, negligent acts.

Cited in Brown v. Cox Bros. & Co. 75 Fed. 691, holding distinct acts of negligence, concurring to produce injury, create joint and several liability.

Liability for maintaining dangerous appliances attractive to children.

Cited in Kinchlow v. Midland Elevator Co. 57 Kan. 378, 46 Pac. 703, holding negligence of owner in leaving unguarded barrel of hot water on premises question for jury; Ryan v. Towar, 128 Mich. 483, 55 L. R. A. 317, 92 Am. St. Rep. 481, 87 N. W. 644 (dissenting opinion), majority holding landowner not liable for maintaining dangerous machine in building accessible to children.

Cited in footnotes to Kopplekom v. Colorado Cement Pipe Co. 54 L. R. A. 284, which holds owner of uninclosed city lot liable for injury to young child by toppling over of large cement pipe used by children as plaything; Rome v. Cheney, 55 L. R. A. 221, which denies city's liability for drowning of child in necessary sewer 4 feet wide and 2 feet deep; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Edwards, 32 L. R. A. 825, holding railroad company not liable for injuries to child climbing upon ties piled in yard inclosed by fence and tracks.

2 L. R. A. 59, OTTAWA, O. C. & C. G. R. CO. v. LARSEN, 40 Kan. 301, 19 Pac. 661.

Followed without discussion in Ottawa, O. C. & C. G. R. Co. v. Peterson, 40 Kan. 310, 19 Pac. 666; Ottawa, O. C. & C. G. R. Co. v. Lindall, 40 Kan. 310, 19 Pac. 666; Ottawa, O. C. & C. G. R. Co. v. Hanson, 40 Kan. 310, 19 Pac. 666.

Liability to abutting lot owners for obstruction of street.

Cited in Wichita & C. R. Co. v. Smith, 45 Kan. 269, 25 Pac. 623, holding abutting owner cannot recover unless virtually deprived of access to his property; Inter-State Consol. Rapid Transit R. Co. v. Early, 46 Kan. 201, 26 Pac. 422, holding railway company not liable to abutting owner for authorized change of street grade; Ottawa, O. C. & C. G. R. Co. v. Peterson, 51 Kan. 607, 33 Pac. 606, and Chicago, K. & W. R. Co. v. Union Investment Co. 51 Kan. 602, 33 Pac. 378, holding railroad company not liable for obstructing street where vehicle space and access to abutting land is left; Kansas, N. & D. R. Co. v. Cuykendall, 42 Kan. 236, 16 Am. St. Rep. 479, 21 Pac. 1051; Leavenworth v. Douglass, 59 Kan. 419, 53 Pac. 123, holding railroad company not liable for obstructing street if lot owner's access is not unreasonably abridged; Ft. Scott, W. & W. R. Co. v. Fox, 42 Kan. 494, 22 Pac. 583, holding railroad company liable for complete obstruction, although lot accessible from another street.

Cited in notes (9 L. R. A. 101) on use of streets in municipalities; (1 L. R. A. 856) on dedication of land to street uses by laying out and platting.

Distinguished in Leavenworth, N. & S. R. Co. v. Curtan, 51 Kan. 439, 33 Pac. 297, holding lot owner entitled to damages where railroad cuts off access to his lot.

Consequential damages.

Cited in Garrett v. Lake Roland Elev. R. Co. 79 Md. 282, 24 L. R. A. 398, 29 Atl. 830, holding authorized erection of stone abutment in street no taking of private property.

Special injury to abutting owner.

Cited in Central Branch Union P. R. Co. v. Andrews, 41 Kan. 379, 21 Pac. 276, holding measure of damages difference in value of land before and after street obstruction.

Right to use public streets by railroads.

Cited in footnotes to Montgomery v. Santa Ana & W. R. Co. 25 L. R. A. 654, which holds railroad on street not additional burden; Chicago G. W. R. Co. v. First Methodist Episcopal Church, 50 L. R. A. 488, which holds water tank in street, and station, at which bells constantly rung and whistles blown within a few rods of church, a nuisance.

Cited in notes (17 L. R. A. 477) on what use of a street or highway constitutes an additional burden; (10 L. R. A. 772) on duty of railroad to keep its right of way in safe condition.

2 L. R. A. 64, HARTFORD F. INS. CO. v. HAAS, 87 Ky. 531, 9 S. W. 720.

Reformation of insurance policy.

Cited in note (5 L. R. A. 712) on reformation of policy of insurance.

Nature of proceeds of insurance policy.

Cited in Spalding v. Miller, 103 Ky. 414, 45 S. W. 462, holding proceeds of policy do not take place of property, but indemnify for loss.

Insurance company bound by agent's act.

Cited in Wright v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. 91 Ky. 213, 15 S. W. 242, holding erroneous description of risk by company's agent in application does not invalidate policy.

Effect of knowledge of insurer's agent.

Cited in note (16 L. R. A. 34, 35) on effect of knowledge, by insurer's agent, of falsity of statements in application.

Conditions in insurance policy.

Cited in note (11 L. R. A. 345) on conditions in insurance policy.

2 L. R. A. 67, MISSOURI P. R. CO. v. LEWIS, 24 Neb. 848, 40 N. W. 401.

Enforcement of statutory liability in another state.

Cited in O'Reilly v. New York & N. E. R. Co. 16 R. I. 396, 6 L. R. A. 720, 19 Atl. 244, and Nelson v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 88 Va. 976, 15 L. R. A. 587, 14 S. E. 838, holding right of action created by statute may be prosecuted in state having similar statute; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 675, 36 L. ed. 1130, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224, holding statute making officers of corporation signing false certificate liable for debts, enforceable in another state.

Cited in notes (56 L. R. A. 196, 203) on taking jurisdiction of cause of action for death or bodily injury arising outside of state,—similar statute in forum as condition; (15 L. R. A. 583) on enforceability of rights of action for causing death, accruing under foreign statutes; (56 L. R. A. 215) on right of representative appointed in forum to maintain action for death caused outside of state.

Actions for negligence.

Cited in footnote to Moe v. Smiley, 3 L. R. A. 341, which holds action for death does not survive against administrator.

Cited in notes (4 L. R. A. 261) on liability for death caused by negligence; (5 L. R. A. 172) on action for damages for death caused by negligence; (1 L. R. A. 798) on liability of master for neglect of duty; (2 L. R. A. 521) on master's duty to provide safe appliances.

Negligence not presumed from fact of accident.

Cited in Sheets v. Chicago & I. Coal R. Co. 139 Ind. 689, 39 N. E. 154; Wabash R. Co. v. Ray, 152 Ind. 398, 51 N. E. 920; Lane v. Missouri P. R. Co. 64 Kan. 758, 68 Pac. 626,—holding operation of railroad without blocking frogs not, as matter of law, negligence; Lane v. Missouri P. R. Co. 64 Kan. 758, 68 Pac. 626, holding, in action for injuries by faulty construction of switch, plaintiff must show it either defective or not of approved kind; Lincoln Street R. Co. v. Cox, 48 Neb. 810, 67 N. W. 740, holding jury may not infer negligence from mere fact of accident.

Cause of action as basis for granting administration.

Cited in Missouri P. R. Co. v. Bradley, 51 Neb. 600, 71 N. W. 283 (distinguished in dissenting opinion), holding cause of action for causing death, estate sufficient for granting administration where nonresident was injured; Re Mayo, 60 S. C. 415, 54 L. R. A. 666, 38 S. E. 634, holding cause of action for death enforceable only by administrator warrants granting administration on estate of nonresident without other assets.

Cited in footnote to Re Mayo, 54 L. R. A. 660, which authorizes appointment of administrator in county where nonresident killed, to bring action for his death.

Cited in note (24 L. R. A. 686) on right of action for wrongful death, giving jurisdiction for appointing administrator.

Appointment of administrator, how assailable.

Cited in Bradley v. Missouri P. R. Co. 51 Neb. 654, 66 Am. St. Rep. 473, 71 N. W. 282, holding appointment of administrator, regular on record, not assailable collaterally; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Bradley, 51 Neb. 605, 71 N. W. 283, holding one sued by administrator cannot institute proceedings to revoke appointment, showing no want of jurisdiction.

Distinguished in Elgutter v. Missouri P. R. Co. 53 Neb. 749, 74 N. W. 255, holding appointment of administrator may be collaterally attacked where record shows lack of jurisdiction.

Judicial notice.

Cited in footnotes to Richardson v. Buhl, 6 L. R. A. 458, holding courts will judicially notice illegality of contract; Com. v. King, 5 L. R. A. 536, which authorizes taking judicial notice that river not a public highway.

2 L. R. A. 75, MISSOURI P. R. CO. v. FAGAN, 72 Tex. 127, 13 Am. St. Rep. 776, 9 S. W. 749.

Usage and custom as affecting contract liability.

Cited in American Cent. Ins. Co. v. Green, 16 Tex. Civ. App. 540, 41 S. W. 74, holding insurance custom as to use of gasoline, not provable to vary policy.

Cited in note (13 L. R. A. 439) on custom and usage as law.

Waiver of rights as condition of receiving and carrying freight.

Cited in Kirby v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 4 S. D. 117, 30 L. R. A. 619, 46 Am. St. Rep. 765, 55 N. W. 759, holding carrier cannot compel shipper to waive rights as condition of carrying freight.

Stipulation as to notice.

Cited in Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Greathouse, 82 Tex. 111, 17 S. W. 834, holding stipulation as to giving notice of damages only enforceable when pleaded and reasonable; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Childers, 1 Tex. Civ. App. 305, 21 S. W. 76, holding reasonableness of stipulation as to notice of loss question for jury; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Davis, 11 Tex. Civ. App. 28, 31 S. W. 308 holding burden upon carrier to allege and prove reasonableness of notice of loss stipulation.

Cited in footnote to Good v. Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. 4 L. R. A. 801, holding stipulation as to written notice of loss to be given to nearest station agent unreasonable.

Measure of damages.

Cited in Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Ball, 80 Tex. 606, 16 S. W. 441, holding freight charges, if not paid, should be deducted from damages; Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Greathouse, 82 Tex. 111, 17 S. W. 834, holding market value at place of destination should govern, cattle being shipped for immediate sale; Taylor, B. & H. R. Co. v. Montgomery, 4 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. (Willson) 401, suggesting, without deciding, that evidence as to value at time cattle were sold is admissible as to damages; New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Estill, 147 U. S. 618, 37 L. ed. 305, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 444, and Baker v. Mims, 14 Tex. Civ. App. 416, 37 S. W. 190, holding reduction of value of stock by premature loss of offspring proper measure of damages; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Eddins, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 121, 26 S. W. 161, holding value of injured animals at place of destination proper measure of damages on contract limiting liability to defendant's own line; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Webb, 20 Tex. Civ. App. 440, 49 S. W. 526, holding difference between value of property at time it was delivered and at time it should have been, proper measure of damages; Virginia F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Cannon, 18 Tex. Civ. App. 593, 45 S. W. 945, holding evidence of market value of goods where salable before and after fire admissible in proof of cash value; New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Estill, 147 U. S. 617, 618, 37 L. ed. 305, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 444, holding difference in market value of cattle on arrival but for and by reason of carrier's negligence proper measure of damages.

Duties and responsibilities of carriers of stock.

Cited in footnote to Good v. Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. 4 L. R. A. 801, which holds carrier liable for needless delay, confinement, and bruising of live stock.

Cited in notes (9 L. R. A. 450, 452) on duty to furnish cars for transportation, and safe mode of delivery; (4 L. R. A. 545) on responsibility of carriers of live stock; (13 L. R. A. 262) on construction of contract for shipment of live stock.

2 L. R. A. 78, DAVIS v. KLINE, 96 Mo. 401, 9 S. W. 724.

Attorney and client.

Cited in Aultman v. Loring, 76 Mo. App. 70, holding attorney buying property on execution holds subject to client's election to take; Eoff v. Irvine, 108 Mo. 383, 32 Am. St. Rep. 609, 18 S. W. 907, holding attorney consulted about land title may not, though withdrawn from employment, purchase outstanding title.

Distinguished in Stewart v. Perkins, 110 Mo. 671, 19 S. W. 989, holding attorney taking no advantage of knowledge acquired in professional capacity may assert adverse title.

Testimony of deceased witness, how proved.

Cited in Dwyer v. Bassett, 1 Tex. Civ. App. 515, 21 S. W. 621, holding agreed statement of facts on appeal, its correctness being proved, admissible to prove testimony of deceased witness.

Distinguished in Fisher v. Fisher, 131 Ind. 464, 29 N. E. 31, holding bill of exceptions not admissible to prove evidence of deceased witness, without proof of correctness; Simmons v. Spratt, 26 Fla. 463, 9 L. R. A. 347, 8 So. 123, holding bill of exceptions not admissible of itself to prove testimony of deceased witness.

Equity disregards incompetent evidence.

Cited in Bush v. Arnold, 50 Mo. App. 17, holding court of equity must disregard incompetent evidence in deciding case.

Sufficiency of sheriff's deed.

Cited in Hall v. Klepzig, 99 Mo. 89, 12 S. W. 372, holding sheriff's deed sufficient where recitals conform to execution, though varying from judgment.

2 L. R. A. 80, GURLEY v. ARMSTEAD, 148 Mass. 267, 12 Am. St. Rep. 555, 19 N. E. 389.

Conversion.

Cited in Robert C. White Live Stock Commission Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 87 Mo. App. 336, holding possession of personal property prima facie evidence of ownership; Steele v. Marsicano, 102 Cal. 670, 36 Pac. 920, holding there must be a tortious act to establish conversion.

Cited in note (50 L. R. A. 652) on liability of servant or agent for conversion, trespass, or other positive act of wrongdoing against third parties under orders of his employer.

Distinguished in Wright & C. Wire Cloth Co. v. Warren, 177 Mass. 289, 58 N. E. 1082, holding notice of consignment to plaintiff, with words "Notify A.," not to authorize treatment of A. as consignee.

2 L. R. A. 81, RIDEOUT v. KNOX, 148 Mass. 368, 12 Am. St. Rep. 560, 19 N. E. 390.

Legislation to prevent nuisance.

Cited in Com. v. Parks, 155 Mass. 532, 30 N. E. 174, holding that it was valid exercise of power for board of aldermen to forbid blasting without its written consent; Townsend v. State, 147 Ind. 632, 37 L. R. A. 299, 62 Am. St. Rep. 477, 47 N. E. 19, holding valid, act to prevent wasteful use of natural gas; Com. v. Roberts, 155 Mass. 283, 16 L. R. A. 401, 29 N. E. 522, holding act to regulate water closets was intended to apply to violations continuing after its passage; Health Department v. Trinity Church, 145 N. Y. 42, 27 L. R. A. 714, 45 Am. St. Rep. 579, 39 N. E. 833, holding act compelling use of water in tenements valid; Horan v. Byrnes, 72 N. H. 96, 62 L. R. A. 603, footnote, p. 602, 54 Atl. 945, upholding statute making private nuisance of boundary fence exceeding 5 feet, erected solely to annoy; Brostrom v. Lauppe, 179 Mass. 317, 60 N. E. 785, holding act relating to height of fences applies only to fence on or near division line; Spaulding v. Smith, 162 Mass. 544, 39 N. E. 189, holding act regulating height of fences does not apply to fence on opposite side of highway; United States v. Douglas-Willan Sartoris Co. 3 Wyo. 301, 22 Pac. 92 (dissenting opinion), majority holding act forbidding inclosure of public lands invalid so far as it forbids erection of fence wholly on owner's land; Camfield v. United States 167 U. S. 523, 42 L. ed. 261, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 864, holding owner cannot build fence on his own land so as to inclose public lands forbidden by Congress.

Cited in notes (36 L. R. A. 593) on power of municipal corporation to define, prevent, and abate nuisances; (52 L. R. A. 940) on constitutionality of retroactive statute creating right of action, or of set-off on account of past acts or transactions.

Building structure on own land.

Cited in Metzger v. Hochrein, 107 Wis. 270, 50 L. R. A. 307, 81 Am. St. Rep. 941, 83 N. W. 308, and Bordeaux v. Greene, 22 Mont. 256, 74 Am. St. Rep. 600 56 Pac. 218, holding owner can build on his own land fence to any height.

Malevolence in maintaining nuisance.

Cited in Lord v. Langdon, 91 Me. 222, 39 Atl. 552, holding building fence above legal height was malicious act; Hunt v. Coggin, 66 N. H. 141, 20 Atl. 250, holding structure for signboard for store not shown to have been erected for purpose of annoying; Smith v. Morse, 148 Mass. 409, 19 N. E. 393, holding illegal fence being maliciously allowed to stand, owner liable even if nothing done since passage of act.

Cited in notes (40 L. R. A. 178, 182) on liability for the malicious erection of a fence; (62 L. R. A. 686) on effect of bad motive to make actionable what would otherwise not be.

Injunction to prevent nuisance.

Cited in Middlesex Co. v. McCue, 149 Mass. 104, 14 Am. St. Rep. 402, 21 N. E. 230, holding owner will not be enjoined from cultivating his land, although solid matter carried into neighbor's pond; Karasek v. Peier, 22 Wash. 427, 50 L. R. A. 348, 61 Pac. 33, authorizing injunction against erection of fence where malevolence shown.

Cited in footnote to Hague v. Wheeler, 22 L. R. A. 141, which denies liability to adjoining owner for permitting escape of gas from well.

Police restraint on business.

Cited in Com. v. Gilbert, 160 Mass. 160, 22 L. R. A. 442, 35 N. E. 454, holding valid act forbidding catching and selling fish artificially propagated and maintained.

Cited in note (21 L. R. A. 794) on police restraints upon business.

Declaration of wife against husband's interest.

Cited in Fourth Nat. Bank v. Nichols, 43 Mo. App. 390, holding unsworn declaration by wife against husband's interest inadmissible.

Damages for maintaining nuisance.

Cited in Taft v. Com. 158 Mass. 547, 33 N. E. 1046, holding damages for quasi nuisance not allowable in taking land for sewer; Miller v. Horton, 152 Mass. 547, 10 L. R. A. 119, 23 Am. St. Rep. 850, 26 N. E. 100, holding horse cannot be condemned to be killed without compensation, unless it has a contagious disease.

2 L. R. A. 83, DODGE v. BOSTON & B. S. S. CO. 148 Mass. 207, 12 Am. St. Rep. 541, 19 N. E. 373.

Beginning and ending of relation of carrier and passenger.

Cited in June v. Boston & A. R. Co. 153 Mass. 82, 26 N. E. 238, holding person walking toward station intending to buy ticket not a passenger; Seawell v. Carolina C. R. Co. 132 N. C. 859, 44 S. E. 610, holding person waiting at station to take train entitled, as passenger, to protection from assault.

Distinguished in Webster v. Fitchburg R. Co. 161 Mass. 300, 24 L. R. A. 524, 37 N. E. 165, holding running to board train outside station not proper presentation for carriage; Creamer v. West End Street R. Co. 156 Mass. 322, 16 L. R. A. 491, 32 Am. St. Rep. 456, 31 N. E. 391, holding relation of passenger to carrier terminates as soon as he alights from street car in street.

— Leaving and returning at intermediate points.

Cited in Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Coggins, 32 C. C. A. 5, 60 U. S. App. 140, 88 Fed. 459, holding person alighting at intermediate station for usual and reasonable purposes still a passenger; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sattler, 64 Neb. 640, 57 L. R. A. 892, 97 Am. St. Rep. 666, 90 N. W. 649, holding rule inapplicable where passenger leaves train at point not intended for such purpose.

Cited in footnote to De Kay v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 4 L. R. A. 632, which holds that passenger leaving train at intermediate station assumes responsibility for his movements.

Cited in note (15 L. R. A. 399) on rights and liability of parties when passenger temporarily leaves vehicle before completing journey.

Distinguished in Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sattler, 64 Neb. 640, 97 Am. St. Rep. 666, 90 N. W. 649, holding one leaving train sidetracked at intermediate station to get water not entitled to protection as passenger.

Degree of care, skill, and diligence due passenger.

Cited in Gilbert v. West End Street R. Co. 160 Mass. 406, 36 N. E. 60, holding carrier not responsible for all accidents by any means preventable; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Kuhn, 107 Tenn. 111, 64 S. W. 202; Olds v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 172 Mass. 77, 51 N. E. 450; Montgomery & E. R. Co. v. Mallette, 92 Ala. 215, 9 So. 363,—holding law requires carrier to use highest care, diligence, and skill known to careful, diligent, and skilful carriers; Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Johnston, 106 Ga. 136, 32 S. E. 78, upholding charge that carrier should exercise "extra high degree of care" toward passengers; Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Hill, 93 Ala. 521, 30 Am. St. Rep. 65, 9 So. 722, upholding charge implying that law requires carrier to use "strict diligence;" Galligan v. Old Colony Street R. Co. 182 Mass. 215, 65 N. E. 48, holding street railway company bound to exercise highest degree of care to guard against landslide in cut on highway; Nichols v. Lynn & B. R. Co. 168 Mass. 530, 47 N. E. 427, holding it question for jury whether street car was started with due care.

Cited in notes (2 L. R. A. 252) on liability of railroads as carriers, as insurers of lives and safety of passengers; (6 L. R. A. 241) on care and diligence required of carrier of passengers; (8 L. R. A. 674) on duty of carriers to use care for safety of passengers; (12 L. R. A. 746) on duty of railroad company to furnish proper cars.

— In and about stations.

Cited in Jordan v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 165 Mass. 347, 32 L. R. A. 102, 52 Am. St. Rep. 522, 43 N. E. 111, upholding recovery for injury received, by person intending to become passenger, in station toilet room; Brooks v. Old Colony R. Co. 168 Mass. 167, 46 N. E. 566, holding carrier not liable to passenger struck upon station platform by runaway horse; Bethmann v. Old Colony R. Co. 155 Mass. 354, 29 N. E. 587, holding carrier owes person alighting on station platform utmost care and diligence consistent with the business; Daniel v. Petersburg R. Co. 117 N. C. 610, 23 S. E. 327, holding carrier liable for wrongful shooting of traveler by depot agent; Young v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 171 Mass. 34, 41 L. R. A. 193, 50 N. E. 455, holding person at station intending to take train entitled to safe access.

Cited in notes (6 L. R. A. 193) on duty of carrier to keep platforms and approaches in safe condition; (20 L. R. A. 521) on measure of care which a carrier must take to keep its platforms and approaches safe.

— Car platforms.

Cited in Gilman v. Boston & M. R. Co. 168 Mass. 455, 47 N. E. 193, holding carrier liable to passenger injured by slipping on snow on car platform.

— Passenger elevators.

Cited in footnote to Goodsell v. Taylor, 4 L. R. A. 673, which holds manager of passenger elevator to same degree of care as common carrier.

Reasonableness of carrier's regulations.

Cited in Sweetland v. Lynn & B. R. Co. 177 Mass. 579, 51 L. R. A. 784, 59 N. E. 443, holding rule forbidding use of platform by passengers may be waived or abandoned; Jackson v. Grand Ave. R. Co. 118 Mo. 220, 24 S. W. 192, holding passengers should learn carrier's reasonable regulations for their safety.

Cited in note (3 L. R. A. 134) on passenger's rights to proper treatment by carrier.

2 L. R. A. 87, ATTY. GEN. ex rel. ADAMS v. TARR, 148 Mass. 309, 19 N. E. 358.

Rights in public waters.

Cited in footnotes to California Nav. & Improv. Co. v. Union Transp. Co. 46 L. R. A. 825, which holds public use as landing place of shore of navigable waters outside municipality not included in dedication for highway; Com. v. Man- chester, 9 L. R. A. 236, which holds state may regulate fishing in bay within its borders.

L. R. A. AU.—VOL. I.—11.

Cited in note (9 L. R. A. 807) on fishery rights.

Title by custom.

Cited in Becker v. Hall, 116 Iowa, 593, 56 L. R. A. 557, 88 N. W. 324, holding custom to appropriate ice in public stream insufficient to support title contrary to public right.

Cited in notes (2 L. R. A. 836) on usages and customs; (3 L. R. A. 860) on binding force of custom and usage; (13 L. R. A. 439, 440) on custom and usage as law; (6 L. R. A. 261) on estate created by dedication.

Title by possession adverse to public right.

Cited in Atty. Gen. v. Vineyard Grove Co. 181 Mass. 509, 64 N. E. 75, holding one year's possession insufficient.

Cited in note (53 L. R. A. 902) on prescriptive right to maintain public nuisance.

Procedure by attorney general.

Cited in Atty. Gen. v. Williams, 174 Mass. 484, 47 L. R. A. 319, 55 N. E. 77, holding information in equity by attorney general proper method to prevent violation of building regulations in Boston.

Cited in note (42 L. R. A. 823) on abatement of buildings, fences, etc., as nuisances by injunctions at suit of municipal authorities.

Title to provincial settlements by royal grant.

Cited in Concord Mfg. Co. v. Robertson, 66 N. H. 2, 18 L. R. A. 681, 25 Atl. 718, holding grant of township by provincial executive in name of King passed title to grantees as owners and tenants in common.

2 L. R. A. 92, PEOPLE ex rel. ATTY. GEN. v. STANFORD, 77 Cal. 360, 19 Pac. 693, 18 Pac. 85.

Actions for usurpation of corporate powers.

Cited in People v. Reclamation Dist. No. 136, 121 Cal. 529, 50 Pac. 1068, holding state not estopped from questioning validity of corporation by suffering, for twenty years, exercise of corporate rights; People ex rel. Stone v. Jefferds, 126 Cal. 302, 58 Pac. 704, holding dismissal of action for usurpation of franchise for laches in prosecution, no bar to subsequent action.

Parties to action to test corporate existence.

Cited in People v. Gunn, 85 Cal. 244, 24 Pac. 718, holding municipal corporation necessary party to proceeding to test validity of its charter; State ex rel. Sanche v. Webb, 97 Ala. 119, 38 Am. St. Rep. 151, 12 So. 377, holding alleged corporation not proper party to action for fraudulent usurpation of corporate powers; People ex rel. Sels v. Reclamation Dist. No. 551, 117 Cal. 117, 48 Pac. 1016, raising, without deciding, question whether action of quo warranto can be maintained against reclamation district whose corporate existence is questioned.

Assignment of franchise to legally organized corporation.

Cited in Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 177 U. S. 575, 44 L. ed. 894, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736, holding contract made by municipality at time when decisions established right of legislature to grant franchise by special legislation not affected by subsequent decisions or change of Constitution.

2 L. R. A. 96, ATLANTA NAT. BANK v. BURKE, 81 Ga. 597, 7 S. E. 738.

Liability of bank paying forged paper.

Cited in Kenneth Invest. Co. v. National Bank, 96 Mo. App. 145, 70 S. W. 173, holding bank liable to depositor for money paid out on forged checks.

Cited in footnotes to Critten v. Chemical Nat. Bank, 57 L. R. A. 529, which holds bank paying plainly altered check to clerk of drawer without asking explanation liable for loss from subsequent payment of similar checks; Pickle v. People's Nat. Bank, 7 L. R. A. 93, which holds acceptance of check necessary to give right of action against bank; Janin v. London & S. F. Bank, 14 L. R. A. 320, which holds depositor's delay in returning forged check no defense to bank not injured thereby.

Cited in notes (12 L. R. A. 793) on liability of bank paying on forged signature; (27 L. R. A. 428) on duty of depositor in respect to checks bearing forged indorsements charged against account; (50 L. R. A. 80) on loss in case of issue or indorsement of check or bill to impostor.

Duty to know signature.

Cited in footnotes to Kummel v. Germania Sav. Bank, 13 L. R. A. 786, which holds vigilance to detect forgery due to depositor by savings bank officers; First Nat. Bank v. Northwestern Nat. Bank, 26 L. R. A. 289, which holds genuineness of indorsement not admitted by drawee accepting or paying check.

Cited in notes (6 L. R. A. 724) on obligations of banker; (6 L. R. A. 626) on duty and obligation of bankers.

Rights of payer of forged paper.

Cited in footnotes to Northwestern Nat. Bank v. Bank of Commerce, 15 L. R. A. 102, which holds bank crediting forged draft to payee and forwarding for collection a bona fide holder; Iron City Nat. Bank v. Ft. Pitt Nat. Bank, 23 L. R. A. 615, which denies right of recovery by payer of forged check.

2 L. R. A. 99, BIRDSEYE v. BAKER, 82 Ga. 142, 14 Am. St. Rep. 142, 7 S. E. 863.

Conflict of laws.

Cited in notes (2 L. R. A. 328) on conflict of laws as affecting validity of contract; (6 L. R. A. 110) on conflict of laws in regard to validity of insolvent's assignment; (23 L. R. A. 34) on extraterritorial effect of voluntary assignment of personal property.

Situs of debt.

Cited in note (6 L. R. A. 109) on validity of assignment for benefit of creditors.

2 L. R. A. 102, WESTERN & A. R. CO. v. EXPOSITION COTTON MILLS, 81 Ga. 522, 7 S. E. 916.

Appeal from judgment sustaining demurrer to amended complaint in 83 Ga. 441, 10 S. E. 113.

Liability of connecting roads.

Cited in Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. v. Commercial Guano Co. 103 Ga. 597, 30 S. E. 555, holding railway using spur track of another company to obtain goods from warehouse, initial carrier, though compensation for trackage paid to another; Kerr v. Georgia R. Co. 105 Ga. 372, 31 S. E. 114, holding company not contemplated as connecting carrier not liable as such, though transporting goods to destination; Atlanta Nat. Bank v. Southern R. Co. 106 Fed. 628, holding carrier receiving cotton at way station for delivery to its compress not connecting carrier on through contract; Susong v. Florida C. & P. R. Co. 115 Ga. 364, 41 S. E. 566, holding burden is on connecting carrier receiving car without exception to show shipment was not then in good order.

Conflict of laws.

Cited in Illinois C. R. Co. v. Beebe, 174 Ill. 26, 43 L. R. A. 214, 66 Am. St. Rep. 253, 50 N. E. 1019, holding contract of carriage performable in more than one jurisdiction, governed by lex loci celebrationis.

Cited in note (63 L. R. A. 525) on conflict of laws as to carrier's contracts.

Carrier's lien.

Cited in note (4 L. R. A. 376) on lien of carrier.

2 L. R. A. 105, STERNBERGER v. CAPE FEAR & Y. VALLEY R. CO. 29 S. C. 510, 7 S. E. 836.

Interstate commerce.

Cited in State ex rel. Railroad & W. Commission v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 40 Minn. 272, 3 L. R. A. 240, 12 Am. St. Rep. 730, 41 N. W. 1047, holding state commission cannot fix rates between two points in same state over route extending across another state; Hanley v. Kansas City Southern R. Co. 187 U. S. 621, 47 L. ed. 336, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214, denying authority of state commissioners to fix rates between points within state over railroad passing in part through adjoining territory.

Cited in notes (60 L. R. A. 644, 646) on corporate taxation and the commerce clause; (17 L. R. A. 443) on whether shipments between points in the same state lose their character of domestic commerce by passing out of the state during transportation.

Disapproved in State ex rel. Railroad Comrs. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 113 N. C. 223, 22 L. R. A. 571, 18 S. E. 389, holding telegraph messages between points in same state, although partially traversing another state, not interstate commerce.

2 L. R. A. 106, LEE v. MOSELEY, 101 N. C. 311, 7 S. E. 874.

Residence as affecting homestead right.

Cited in Fulton v. Roberts, 113 N. C. 427, 18 S. E. 510, holding instruction confounding "residence" and "domicil" harmless where jury understands homestead right is abandoned by removal; Jones v. Alsbrook, 115 N. C. 52, 20 S. E. 170, holding residence must be actual to entitle citizen to homestead; Chitty v. Chitty, 118 N. C. 654, 32 L. R. A. 396, 24 S. E. 117 (dissenting opinion), majority holding fugitive from justice not debarred from homestead right by absence from state.

Cited in footnote to Bosquett v. Hall, 9 L. R. A. 351, which refuses homestead exemption because of residence of children strangers in blood.

Scope of homestead exemption.

Cited in Vanstory v. Thornton, 112 N. C. 214, 34 Am. St. Rep. 483, 17 S. E. 566 (dissenting opinion), majority holding homestead right salable or assignable; Hughes v. Hodges, 102 N. C. 249, 9 S. E. 437, holding homestead right may be abandoned without wife joining in deed.

Cited in footnote to Wilkinson v. Merrill, 11 L. R. A. 632, which holds householder not deprived of homestead right by death of entire family.

Cited in notes (11 L. R. A. 705) on effect of judgment liens on homestead right; (6 L. R. A. 818) on homestead exemption.

2 L. R. A. 110, ANDERSON v. WELLINGTON, 40 Kan. 173, 10 Am. St. Rep. 175, 19 Pac. 719.

Legislative power of cities.

Cited in Trotter v. Chicago, 33 Ill. App. 210, holding ordinance making it misdemeanor to parade street without permit, not within powers; Sioux Falls v. Kirby, 6 S. D. 68, 25 L. R. A. 623, 60 N. W. 156, holding ordinance prohibiting building without permit of city inspector, not within powers; Re Pryor, 55 Kan. 727, 29 L. R. A. 400, 49 Am. St. Rep. 280, 41 Pac. 958, holding city of third class without power to regulate price of gas or water by ordinance.

Cited in notes (2 L. R. A. 142) on municipal corporations as agencies of government; (20 L. R. A. 722) on delegation of municipal power as to license; (36 L. R. A. 596) on extent of power of municipal corporation to define nuisance; (39 L. R. A. 672) on municipal power over nuisances relating to use of streets.

Reasonableness and uniformity of ordinances and statutes.

Cited in Bennett v. Pulaski (Tenn.) 47 L. R. A. 281, 52 S. W. 913, holding ordinances which are oppressive, repugnant to fundamental rights, or obnoxious to general laws, invalid; State v. Tenant, 110 N. C. 609, 15 L. R. A. 424, 28 Am. St. Rep. 715, 14 S. E. 387, holding ordinance prohibiting building without permission of aldermen void, because arbitrary; Richmond v. Dudley, 129 Ind. 116, 13 L. R. A. 589, 28 Am. St. Rep. 180, 28 N. E. 312, holding void an ordinance restricting keeping and storing of oils as not uniform; Simrall v. Covington, 90 Ky. 450, 9 L. R. A. 557, 29 Am. St. Rep. 398, 14 S. W. 369, holding statute imposing on agents of foreign insurance companies tax not required of local companies invalid; Marshall & B. Co. v. Nashville, 109 Tenn. 511, 71 S. W. 815, holding municipal ordinance requiring union label on city printing invalid; State v. Gerhardt, 145 Ind. 484, 33 L. R. A. 329, 44 N. E. 469 (dissenting opinion), majority holding conditions upon which license to sell liquors may issue sufficiently specified in statute.

Cited in note (2 L. R. A. 723) on reasonableness of ordinance subject of judicial inquiry.

Distinguished in State v. White, 44 Kan. 517, 25 Pac. 33, holding statute punishing mere fornication as rape not invalid.

— Restricting use of streets.

Cited in Trotter v. Chicago, 33 Ill. App. 210, holding ordinance making it misdemeanor to parade street without permit of police department unreasonable; State ex rel. Garrabad v. Dering, 84 Wis. 590, 19 L. R. A. 861, 36 Am. St. Rep. 948, 54 N. W. 1104, holding ordinance prohibiting parades, without permit, except by persons specified, unreasonable; Re Gribben, 5 Okla. 389, 47 Pac. 1074, holding ordinance prohibiting noise in streets by means of drums unreasonable; Kansas City v. McDonald, 60 Kan. 484, 45 L. R. A. 431, 57 Pac. 123, holding ordinance making fast driving misdemeanor unreasonable when applied to fire department; Emporia v. Shaw, 6 Kan. App. 812, 51 Pac. 237, holding ordinance prohibiting solicitation of patronage at railway depots, except by persons specified, not lacking in uniformity; Re Flaherty, 105 Cal. 570, 27 L. R. A. 533, 38

Pac. 981 (dissenting opinion), majority holding ordinance prohibiting beating of drum on street, without permit of officer named, not unreasonable.

Cited in note (19 L. R. A. 858, 860) on validity of ordinances as to street parades.

Distinguished in Wilkes-Barre v. Garabed, 11 Pa. Super. Ct. 370, holding ordinance prohibiting beating of drum in street without permit of mayor valid.

Disapproved, in effect, in Wilson v. Eureka City, 173 U. S. 35, 43 L. ed. 605, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 317, holding ordinance requiring permit of mayor to move building through street not unreasonable.

2 L. R. A. 113, LAMPERT v. HAYDEL, 96 Mo. 439, 9 Am. St. Rep. 358, 9 S. W. 780.

Trusts, when active.

Cited in Schoeneich v. Field, 73 Mo. App. 455, holding, where estate is limited to trustee to pay rents and profits to another for life trustee takes legal estate.

Restraint upon alienation by cestui que trust.

Cited in Seymour v. McAvoy, 121 Cal. 442, 41 L. R. A. 547, 53 Pac. 946; Roberts v. Stevens, 84 Me. 333, 17 L. R. A. 270, 24 Atl. 873; Brown v. Macgill, 87 Md. 166, 39 L. R. A. 808, 67 Am. St. Rep. 334, 39 Atl. 613; Leigh v. Harrison, 69 Miss. 932, 935, 18 L. R. A. 51, 52, 11 So. 604; Partridge v. Cavender, 96 Mo. 456, 9 S. W. 785; Bank of Commerce v. Chambers, 96 Mo. 466, 10 S. W. 38; Weller v. Noffsinger, 57 Neb. 462, 77 N. W. 1075; Schoeneich v. Field, 73 Mo. App. 458,—holding limitation upon alienation to protect income from creditors and purchasers, valid.

Cited in footnotes to Roberts v. Stevens, 17 L. R. A. 266, which authorizes establishment of spendthrift trust free from rights of creditors; Wales v. Bowdish, 4 L. R. A. 819, which holds devise in trust for life with power of appointment not subject to devisee's debts; Leigh v. Harrison, 18 L. R. A. 49, which denies creditor's right to reach debtor's interest under spendthrift trust; Murphy v. Delano, 55 L. R. A. 727, which holds income of spendthrift trust not within reach of creditors by void agreement of trustee to pay certain portion of income absolutely to beneficiary; Hutchinson v. Maxwell, 57 L. R. A. 384, which denies power to create equitable life estate free from debts of beneficiary.

Cited in note (11 L. R. A. 565) on policy of law as to spendthrift trusts.

Distinguished in Henson v. Wright, 88 Tenn. 508, 12 S. W. 1035, holding joint deed of trustee and beneficiary valid as to life estate.

Purchase for benefit of another.

Cited in Clark v. Cox, 118 Mo. 659, 24 S. W. 221, holding purchase of property with intent to hold for enjoyment and benefit of former owner valid.

Conveyance for benefit of grantor.

Cited in Brown v. Macgill, 87 Md. 168, 39 L. R. A. 809, 67 Am. St. Rep. 334, 39 Atl. 613, holding conveyance to trustee, whereby grantor retains enjoyment of income, exempt from claims of creditors, invalid.

Cited in footnote to Brown v. McGill, 39 L. R. A. 806, which denies power to create trust placing one's property beyond reach of creditors while retaining full enjoyment of revenues.

Intent of testator controlling.

Cited in Jarboe v. Hey, 122 Mo. 348, 26 S. W. 968, and Schoeneich v. Field, 73

Mo. App. 458, holding due regard must be given direction of will and intent of testator in determining right of alienation.

Cited in note (10 L. R. A. 757) on creation of life estate by will.

2 L. R. A. 118, GUNTHER v. NEW ORLEANS COTTON EXCH. MUT. AID ASSO. 40 La. Ann. 776, 8 Am. St. Rep. 554, 5 So. 65.

Forfeiture in benefit association.

Cited in Modern Woodmen v. Jameson, 48 Kan. 721, 30 Pac. 460, holding forfeiture waived by benefit association, notice of reinstatement not having been given; Elgutter v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 52 La. Ann. 1739, 28 So. 289, holding no forfeiture when notice was not given according to custom of company; Maginnis v. New Orleans Cotton Exch. Mut. Aid Asso. 43 La. Ann. 1138, 10 So. 180, holding death of member during suspension, after notice, created forfeiture.

Cited in footnote to McQuillan v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 56 L. R. A. 233, which holds forfeiture of policy waived by retaining payment made after default without notice of any condition affixed.

Cited in note (9 L. R. A. 189) on forfeitures not favored in the law.

2 L. R. A. 120, LANGDON v. CENTRAL R. & BKG. CO. 37 Fed. 449.

Consolidation of competing railroads.

Cited in Hamilton v. Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. 49 Fed. 422, holding transfer of one railroad to another void; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. 97 Ky. 695, 31 S. W. 476, and Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 703, 40 L. ed. 860, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714, enjoining the consolidation of competing railways; Clarke v. Central R. & Bkg. Co. 50 Fed. 339, 15 L. R. A. 684, restraining the voting power of stock of one railroad held by another railroad.

Cited in notes (45 L. R. A. 273) on restrictions on consolidation of parallel or competing railroads; (64 L. R. A. 694) on illegal trusts under modern anti-trust laws; (7 L. R. A. 606) on corporation's lack of power to deal in stock of other corporations; (8 L. R. A. 237) on foreign corporation; law of comity.

2 L. R. A. 129, BYAM v. COLLINS, 111 N. Y. 143, 7 Am. St. Rep. 727, 19 N. E. 75.

Privileged communications.

Cited in Mattice v. Wilcox, 147 N. Y. 636, 42 N. E. 270; Sickles v. Kling, 60 App. Div. 516, 69 N. Y. Supp. 944; Stern v. Barrett Chemical Co. 29 Misc. 613, 61 N. Y. Supp. 221,—holding privilege question of law; Norfolk & W. S. B. Co. v. Davis, 12 App. D. C. 328, holding privilege question for court where all disputed facts determined by jury; Webber v. Vincent, 29 N. Y. S. R. 606, 9 N. Y. Supp. 103, holding communication to interested person loses privileged character if made in presence of others; Moore v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 123 N. Y. 432, 11 L. R. A. 757, 25 N. E. 1048 (dissenting opinion), majority holding irrelevant charges against teller in action on bond of defaulting cashier not privileged as charge in prosecution of action; Knapp v. Campbell, 14 Tex. Civ. App. 205, 36 S. W. 765, holding newspaper charge that candidate for public office had been indicted for keeping gambling house not privileged; Reynolds v. Plumbers' Material Protective Asso. 30 Misc. 713, 63 N. Y. Supp. 303, holding communication of refusal to pay debts, to other members of association, qualifiedly privileged where by-law provides therefor; Howland v. Flood, 160 Mass. 516, 36 N. E. 482, holding report of public investigating committee charging plaintiff with dishonesty and insolvency qualifiedly privileged; Henry v. Moberly, 6 Ind. App. 494, 33 N. E. 981, holding school trustee's written protest in board meeting against employment of plaintiff as teacher qualifiedly privileged; Hemmens v. Nelson, 138 N. Y. 523, 20 L. R. A. 443, footnote p. 440, 34 N. E. 342, Affirming 36 N. Y. S. R. 906, 13 N. Y. Supp. 176, holding communication of defamatory matter to board of trustees, written by teacher about wife of principal of school, privileged; Finley v. Steele, 159 Mo. 305, 52 L. R. A. 853, 60 S. W. 108, holding charges in communication from school board to commissioner on removal of teacher qualifiedly privileged; McCarty v. Lambley, 20 App. Div. 267, 46 N. Y. Supp. 792, holding accusation of theft privileged when made by manager at time of plaintiff's discharge, in presence of others, after information of confession; McClellan v. New York Press Co. 46 N. Y. S. R. 708, 19 N. Y. Supp. 262, holding publication, in interest of social order, of plaintiff's house, by typographical error, as disorderly, not privileged; Ross v. Ward, 14 S. D. 245, 86 Am. St. Rep. 746, 85 N. W. 182, holding charge to jury omitting question of privilege in action for libelous accusation of larceny erroneous.

Cited in footnotes to Buisson v. Huard, 56 L. R. A. 296, which holds privileged, answers to inquiries by interested persons as to defamatory remarks by others; Fresh v. Cutter, 10 L. R. A. 67, which holds voluntary communication in good faith to neighbor about to employ servant that he had stolen privileged; Nissen v. Cramer, 6 L. R. A. 780, which holds relevant words spoken by party to action during trial privileged.

Cited in notes (2 L. R. A. 405) on privileged communications; (4 L. R. A. 280) on communications in discharge of duty, privileged; (13 L. R. A. 98) on privilege of fair criticism of public men; (13 L. R. A. 420) on incidents of libel; (9 L. R. A. 621) on definition of libel.

Malice.

Cited in Mattson v. Albert, 97 Tenn. 235, 36 S. W. 1090, holding malice implied in publication of false statements concerning theater manager libelous per se; St. James Military Academy v. Gaiser, 125 Mo. 527, 28 L. R. A. 676, 46 Am. St. Rep. 502, 28 S. W. 851, holding malice implied in publication of charge of immoral and unreligious administration of institution of learning; Hartman v. Morning Journal Asso. 46 N. Y. S. R. 182, 19 N. Y. Supp. 399, holding malice implied from unprivileged publication of charge of immoral complicity in insurance swindle; McDonald v. Nugent, 122 Iowa, 655, 98 N. W. 506, holding malice in charging another with having venereal disease is presumed; Lally v. Emery, 59 Hun, 239, 12 N. Y. Supp. 785, holding actual malice question for jury, where communication prima facie privileged; Davey v. Davey, 22 Misc. 669, 50 N. Y. Supp. 161, holding substantial damages properly awarded on implied malice, where article libelous per se.

Cited in footnotes to Pollasky v. Minchener, 9 L. R. A. 102, which authorizes inference of malice from sending false statement as to mortgage, advising caution, to patrons of commercial agency; Street v. Johnson, 14 L. R. A. 203, which holds deliverer presumed to know that paper contains libel.

Cited in notes (6 L. R. A. 364) on malice as element in libel; (3 L. R. A. 69) on copies from other papers to disprove malice.

Distinguished in Warner v. Press Pub. Co. 15 Daly, 546, 8 N. Y. Supp. 341, holding evidence to show reporter's belief in truth of published love letter inadmissible to rebut presumption of malice.

2 L. R. A. 137, SKINNER v. HARRISON TWP. 116 Ind. 139, 18 N. E. 529.

Charitable uses and trusts.

Cited in footnotes to Re John, 36 L. R. A. 242, which sustains bequest for maintenance of free public schools; People ex rel. Ellert v. Cogswell, 35 L. R. A. 269, which sustains trust for educating boys and girls not confined to poor ones; Crerar v. Williams, 21 L. R. A. 454, which holds gift of free public library in great city charitable; Kelly v. Nichols, 19 L. R. A. 413, as to what constitutes charitable use or trust.

Cited in note (5 L. R. A. 107) on gifts to promote public good as charities.

Trustees.

Cited in Rush County v. Dinwiddie, 139 Ind. 134, 37 N. E. 795, holding board of commissioners capable to act as trustees under will establishing charitable home; Re John, 30 Or. 520, 36 L. R. A. 251, 47 Pac. 341, holding trust dependent upon appointment of trustees by court at stated periods not void for uncertainty.

Removal of latent ambiguity in gift.

Cited in Indianapolis & V. R. Co. v. Reynolds, 116 Ind. 359, 19 N. E. 141, holding parol evidence admissible to limit 100 feet right of way to 40 feet where width in original deed not defined, and only 40 feet fenced; Chappell v. Missionary Soc. 3 Ind. App. 359, 50 Am. St. Rep. 276, 29 N. E. 924, holding evidence admissible to show Church of Christ intended by bequest to "Christian Missionary Society;" Daugherty v. Rogers, 119 Ind. 259, 3 L. R. A. 851, 20 N. E. 779, holding notes to amount of $6,000 extinguished by provision, in connection with small bequest, "in addition to what I have already given him;" Pate v. Bushong, 161 Ind. 540, 63 L. R. A. 597, 69 N. E. 291, holding error in description of land will not avoid bequest, where testator's intention appears with reasonable certainty, and extrinsic evidence admissible to remove ambiguity.

Distinguished in Taylor v. Horst, 23 Wash. 452, 63 Pac. 231, holding parol testimony inadmissible to add omitted land to devise of land adjoining in absence of ambiguity.

Judicial notice.

Cited in footnotes to Com. v. King, 5 L. R. A. 536, which authorizes taking judicial notice that river not a public highway; Richardson v. Buhl, 6 L. R. A. 458, taking notice sua sponte of contravention of public policy by contract in suit.

Cited in notes (4 L. R. A. 44) on rules applicable to judicial notice in particular states; (7 L. R. A. 765) on capacity of municipal corporation to administer public charity.

2 L. R. A. 139, CRAWFORD v. HAZELRIGG, 117 Ind. 63, 18 N. E. 603.

Married woman's right of redemption.

Cited in Union Nat. Bank v. McConaha, 14 Ind. App. 84, 42 N. E. 495, holding married woman redeeming from foreclosure of husband's mortgage can enforce against other owners their equitable share.

Married woman's contract.

Cited in Heiney v. Lontz, 147 Ind. 421, 46 N. E. 665, holding note by married woman to secure money advanced to husband void.

Effect on mortgage of extension of time of payment of debt.

Cited in Wilson v. Pickering, 28 Mont. 440, 72 Pac. 821, holding renewal of note secured presumptively renews mortgage lien.

Mortgage foreclosure.

Cited in notes (16 L. R. A. 468) on effect on mortgage of alteration of note secured by it; (21 L. R. A. 556) on effect of statutory bar of principal debt on the right to foreclose a mortgage or deed of trust securing the same; (10 L. R. A. 509) on limitation of action for foreclosure of mortgage.

2 L. R. A. 142, COM. v. PLAISTED, 148 Mass. 375, 12 Am. St. Rep. 566, 19 N. E. 224.

Legislative control over municipalities.

Cited in Kingman, Petitioner, 153 Mass. 573, 12 L. R. A. 421, 27 N. E. 778, holding apportionment of cost of sewerage system among benefited towns properly intrusted by legislature to commissioners appointed by court; State ex rel. Bulkeley v. Williams, 68 Conn. 149, 48 L. R. A. 491, 35 Atl. 24, holding city bound to pay assessment of expense of maintaining bridge outside municipal limits, levied by commissioners appointed by state; Martin v. Tyler, 4 N. D. 302, 25 L. R. A. 847, 60 N. W. 392, holding apportionment of benefits of drain by state commissioners final; State ex rel. Caldwell v. Wilson, 121 N. C. 470, 28 S. E. 554, holding statutory requirement of qualifications for railroad commissioner in addition to those provided by Constitution valid; State ex rel. Hawes v. Mason, 153 Mo. 46, 54 S. W. 524, holding statute creating and providing for state control of municipal police force supported by city constitutional; Americus v. Perry, 114 Ga. 878, 57 L. R. A. 234, 40 S. E. 1004, holding statute providing for municipal police board under control of governor constitutional, in spite of prior conflicting charter provisions; Gooch v. Exeter, 70 N. H. 416, 85 Am. St. Rep. 637, 48 Atl. 1100, and Newport v. Horton, 22 R. I. 208, 50 L. R. A. 338, 47 Atl. 312, holding statute creating municipal police board appointed by governor constitutional; Mt. Hope Cemetery v. Boston, 158 Mass. 520, 35 Am. St. Rep. 515, 33 N. E. 695, holding unconstitutional statute providing for transfer of municipal cemetery property without compensation or relief from obligation to bury dead; State ex rel. Jameson v. Denny, 118 Ind. 418, 4 L. R. A. 92, 21 N. E. 252 (dissenting opinion), majority holding statute creating board of public works, appointed by governor to control city streets, etc., unconstitutional.

Cited in footnotes to State ex rel. McCausland v. Freeman, 47 L. R. A. 67, which sustains statute arbitrarily establishing high school, and requiring its maintenance by people of county; Davock v. Moore, 28 L. R. A. 783, which sustains legislative power to provide for city board of health with power to incur expenses without city's consent; Rathbone v. Wirth, 34 L. R. A. 408, which holds void statute for bipartisan police board of four members to be selected by all members of common council voting for two members only.

Cited in note (48 L. R. A. 481) on power of legislature in respect to municipal officers, etc.

Distinguished in State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Moores, 55 Neb. 518, 41 L. R. A. 636, 76 N. W. 175, holding statute providing for appointment of municipal board of fire and police commissioners by governor unconstitutional.

Delegation of legislative authority.

Cited in Com. v. Page, 155 Mass. 230, 29 N. E. 512, holding license regulation of hackney carriages by board of police valid; Brodbin v. Revere, 182 Mass. 601, 66 N. E. 607, upholding statute empowering park commissioners to make regulations for use of parkways, breaches of which shall be punishable as breaches of peace.

Cited in note (20 L. R. A. 722) on delegation of municipal power as to licenses.

Abridgment of right of local self-government.

Cited in Goodrich v. Mitchell (Kan.) 64 L. R. A. 948, 75 Pac. 1034, upholding statute giving veterans preference for appointment to public office over other persons of equal qualifications.

Reasonableness of regulation.

Cited in Com. v. Mulhall, 162 Mass. 499, 44 Am. St. Rep. 387, 39 N. E. 183, holding ordinance restricting weight of loads carried over streets of Boston reasonable and valid; Com. v. Cutter, 156 Mass. 56, 29 N. E. 1146, holding ordinance compelling removal of all filth from private passageway by abutting owner, irrespective of manner of accumulation, reasonable; Com. v. Ellis, 158 Mass. 556, 33 N. E. 651, holding ordinance forbidding unlicensed sales in streets refers only to sales at standstill or with frequent stops and is reasonable and valid; Wilkes-Barre v. Garabed, 11 Pa. Super. Ct. 374, holding ordinance prohibiting beating of drum in streets to collect crowd for religious purposes valid; Chariton v. Simmons, 87 Iowa, 233, 54 N. W. 146, holding ordinance punishing disobedience to order of city marshal in regard to processions or bands of music reasonable.

Cited in notes (19 L. R. A. 863) on validity of ordinances as to street parades; (39 L. R. A. 673) on municipal power over nuisances in streets; (21 L. R. A. 792) on constitutionality of class legislation.

Impeachment of title of board of police to office.

Cited in Prince v. Boston, 148 Mass. 287, 19 N. E. 218, holding quo warranto only proper proceeding to impeach title to office of board of police.

2 L. R. A. 146, FINK v. UMSCHIED, 40 Kan. 271, 19 Pac. 623.

Effect of trust on land.

Cited in Baird v. Williams, 4 Okla. 180, 44 Pac. 217, holding judgment against party holding land in trust in his own name not encumbrance; Rayl v. Rayl, 58 Kan. 589, 50 Pac. 501, holding trustee required to transfer title to beneficiary.

Cited in footnotes to Cook v. Patrick, 11 L. R. A. 573, which holds resulting trust in favor of one paying for land deeded to another extends only to life interest, when such his intent; Edwards v. Culbertson, 18 L. R. A. 204, which holds woman purchasing land with money fraudulently obtained by promise to marry, trustee on refusal to do so.

2 L. R. A. 148, PEOPLE ex rel. NEW YORK v. BROOKLYN, 111 N. Y. 505, 19 N. E. 90.

Taxation of public property.

Cited in Board of Improvement v. School District, 56 Ark. 360, 16 L. R. A. 421, 35 Am. St. Rep. 108, 19 S. W. 969, holding public-school property not assessable for local improvement; Re Thrall, 30 App. Div. 273, 51 N. Y. Supp. 595, holding legacy to city liable to transfer tax; Croner v. Cowdrey, 46 N. Y. S. R. 561, 19 N. Y. Supp. 909, holding sale of state land for nonpayment of city tax void; Wells v. Johnston, 55 App. Div. 487, 67 N. Y. Supp. 112, holding county-tax sale subject to prior vested rights of people; Smith v. Buffalo, 159 N. Y. 432, 54 N. E. 62, Affirming 90 Hun, 122, holding public streets not assessable for local improvements; People ex rel. Amsterdam v. Hess, 157 N. Y. 44, 51 N. E. 410, and Rochester v. Coe, 25 App. Div. 304, 49 N. Y. Supp. 502, holding city property outside its limits liable to state and county tax; People ex rel. Atkins v. Buffalo, 63 App. Div. 565, 71 N. Y. Supp. 1145, Affirming 33 Misc. 172, 68 N. Y. Supp. 409, holding purchaser at city tax sale takes subject to prior tax liens held by city; Edwards & W. Constr. Co. v. Jasper County, 117 Iowa, 374, 94 Am. St. Rep. 301, 90 N. W. 1006, holding county liable for assessment for paving streets around courthouse square.

Cited in footnote to Gate City Guards v. Atlanta, 54 L. R. A. 806, which denies exemption, as public property, to armory owned by volunteer military force.

Cited in notes (19 L. R. A. 81) on power of state legislature to exempt from taxation; (48 L. R. A. 493) on power of legislature to impose burdens upon municipalities, and to control their local administration and property.

Ferries.

Cited in note (59 L. R. A. 523) on establishment, regulation, and protection of ferries.

2 L. R. A. 150, HARNICKELL v. NEW YORK L. INS. CO. 111 N. Y. 390, 18 N. E. 632.

Conditions in contracts.

Cited in Travis v. Nederland L. Ins. Co. 43 C. C. A. 656, 104 Fed. 488, holding no recovery on policy which had never taken effect through failure to accept proposal of insured; Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Wilson, 187 U. S. 476, 47 L. ed. 265, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 189, holding operation of insurance policy may, by agent's oral agreement, be made to depend on company's acceptance of risk; Key v. National L. Ins. Co. 107 Iowa, 451, 78 N. W. 68, holding refusal by insurance company to loan on property insured, as condition precedent to application, authorized recovery of premium; Shields v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. 121 Mich. 695, 80 N. W. 793, holding parol agreement between applicant and party advancing premium did not show conditional delivery; Wilson v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. 17 App. D. C. 25, holding insurance contract cannot be shown by verbal conditional delivery; Blewitt v. Boorum, 27 Jones & S. 329, 14 N. Y. Supp. 298, holding parol evidence of conditional delivery of contract under seal to manufacture patented article admissible; Moore v. Farmers' Mut. Ins. Asso. 107 Ga. 203, 33 S. E. 65, holding evidence admissible to show conditional delivery of policy.

Cited in footnote to Hicks v. British America Assur. Co. 48 L. R. A. 424, which holds rights of one whose property was destroyed after oral contract to insure it, but before policy issued, subject to provisions of standard policy prescribed by law.

Distinguished in Westerfeld v. New York L. Ins. Co. 129 Cal. 77, 61 Pac. 667, holding company not estopped to deny authority of agent to make an agreement as to conditional delivery.

2 L. R. A. 153, FECHHEIMER v. BAUM, 37 Fed. 167.

Federal administration of equitable rights under state statutes.

Cited in note (18 L. R. A. 267) on adoption by Federal courts of equitable remedies enlarged by state statutes.

Fraud.

Cited in 43 Fed. 719, decision on exceptions to master's report, holding agreement to prefer creditor not rendered fraudulent by failure to record;

Stein v. Hill, 100 Mo. App. 43, 71 S. W. 1107, holding evidence of purchaser's insolvency not conclusive as to fraudulent intent not to pay for goods.

Cited in notes (9 L. R. A. 609) on action for rescission of contract for fraud; (14 L. R. A. 265) on concealment of insolvency as fraud in obtaining credit.

2 L. R. A. 159, KEYSER'S APPEAL, 124 Pa. 80, 16 Atl. 577.

Statute of limitations.

Distinguished in Reber's Appeal, 125 Pa. 23, 17 Atl. 189, holding adjudication and allowance of claim against decedent's estate tolls statute of limitations.

2 L. R. A. 161, ALEXANDER v. NORTHWESTERN MASONIC AID ASSO. 126 Ill. 558, 18 N. E. 556.

Who entitled to insurance payable to heirs or devisees.

Cited in Lyons v. Yerex, 100 Mich. 217, 43 Am. St. Rep. 452, 58 N. W. 1112, holding widow of intestate entitled to share in proceeds of benefit certificate payable to heirs; People use of Brooks v. Petrie, 191 Ill. 508, 85 Am. St. Rep. 268, 61 N. E. 499, Affirming 94 Ill. App. 657, holding proceeds of beneficiary certificate payable to "legal heirs or devisees of holder" not estate assets.

Cited in notes (30 L. R. A. 596) on widow as "heir" within meaning of life insurance policies; (8 L. R. A. 114) on contract of mutual benefit association.

2 L. R. A. 164, JAMES v. STEERE, 16 R. I. 367, 16 Atl. 143.

Illegal contracts and remedies on same.

Cited in footnote to Och v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 36 L. R. A. 442, which holds release of carrier by injured woman while dazed and nervous from recent shock, obtained by misrepresenting contents, which she did not read, voidable only, not void.

Cited in note (12 L. R. A. 122) on remedy of parties in pari delicto.

Fiduciary relation between attorney and client.

Cited in footnote to Elmore v. Johnson, 21 L. R. A. 366, which holds voidable, irrespective of fairness, contract between attorney and client pending litigation to give part of property involved as compensation for attorney's services.

2 L. R. A. 166, DEWIRE v. BOSTON & M. R. CO. 148 Mass. 343, 19 N. E. 523.

Who are passengers.

Cited in Jones v. Boston & M. R. Co. 163 Mass. 246, 39 N. E. 1019, holding one with ticket, endeavoring without knowledge of trainmen to board train where not customary to receive passengers, not passenger; Chattanooga R. & C. R. Co. v. Huggins, 89 Ga. 504, 15 S. E. 848, holding one in car switched, according to custom, to defendant's connecting line, a passenger, whether he has ticket or not; Chicago & E. I. R. Co. v. Jennings, 190 Ill. 498, 54 L. R. A. 835, 60 N. E. 818, Reversing 89 Ill. App. 349 (dissenting opinion), majority holding one with ticket, crossing railroad tracks on public highway to board train, not having reached platform, not passenger; Fitzgibbon v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 108 Iowa, 623, 79 N. W. 477 (dissenting opinion), majority holding one not an excursionist, knowingly boarding special excursion train, not presumed to have been passenger.

Cited in footnotes to Woolsey v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 25 L. R. A. 79, which holds person riding on freight locomotive without conductor's consent not a passenger; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Headland, 20 L. R. A. 822, which holds presumption that person on train a passenger not applicable to caboose attached to freight train.

Cited in notes (7 L. R. A. 688) on who are passengers; (11 L. R. A. 483) on express company agents as passengers; (11 L. R. A. 486) on postal clerks as passengers; (24 L. R. A. 522) on when one who has started for train becomes passenger; (12 L. R. A. 340) on passengers; stipulation in contract of carriage.

Riding on car platform as contributory negligence.

Cited in Kansas & A. V. R. Co. v. White, 14 C. C. A. 484, 32 U. S. App. 192, 67 Fed. 483, holding one injured standing on car platform entitled to recover if such negligence did not contribute to injury; Sickles v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 13 Tex. Civ. App. 436, 35 S. W. 493, holding passenger may pass from one car to another, assuming ordinary risks incident thereto; Woods v. Southern P. Co. 9 Utah, 153, 33 Pac. 628, holding whether act of one riding on car platform contributed to injury question for jury.

Cited in notes (34 L. R. A. 721) on assumption of incidental risk by passenger passing from one car to another; (24 L. R. A. 710) on liability of carrier for injuries to passenger riding on platform of crowded train; (11 L. R. A. 130) on contributory negligence of passenger, defeating recovery for injury; (22 L. R. A. 260) on right of passenger to seat.

2 L. R. A. 168, CHEMICAL ELECTRIC LIGHT & P. CO. v. HOWARD, 148 Mass. 352, 20 N. E. 92.

Second appeal, 150 Mass. 495, 23 N. E. 317.

Note given for void patent.

Cited in Chemical Electric Light & P. Co. v. Howard, 150 Mass. 497, 23 N. E. 317, holding note given for patent warranted "in full force and effect," but void in fact, not binding; Clemshire v. Boone County Bank, 53 Ark. 514, 14 S. W. 901, holding note given for interest in business valueless, because infringing on patent right, without consideration.

Cited in note (20 L. R. A. 605) on validity of notes given for invalid patents.

2 L. R. A. 172, HURLEY v. HURLEY, 148 Mass. 444, 19 N. E. 545.

Partition, when maintainable.

Cited in Wilmot v. Lathrop, 67 Vt. 680, 32 Atl. 861, holding cotenant not contributing to redeem from tax sale cannot maintain partition; O'Brien v. Bailey, 163 Mass. 326, 39 N. E. 1109, holding partition cannot be had of land in possession of mortgagee.

Cited in note (20 L. R. A. 627) on effect of adverse possession on right to partition.

Rights of cotenants among themselves.

Cited in Barnes v. Boardman, 152 Mass. 393, 9 L. R. A. 572, 25 N. E. 623, holding cotenant of reversion, acquiring life estate, cannot cut off others by foreclosure of mortgage without giving opportunity to contribute; Kerse v. Miller, 169 Mass. 47, 47 N. E. 504, holding life tenant of portion of mortgaged estate, redeeming the whole, entitled to possession until repaid amount advanced above his share; Re Hagan, 33 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. 51, holding presumption of payment of mortgage owned by one cotenant does not arise from lapse of time; Mc

Pheeters v. Wright, 124 Ind. 576, 9 L. R. A. 181, 24 N. E. 734, holding one cannot acquire title against cotenant at sale under encumbrance created by owner, through whom both claim; Harris v. Lloyd, 11 Mont. 401, 28 Am. St. Rep. 475, 28 Pac. 736, holding one cotenant under no obligation to disclose to others that upon sale he receives larger amount.

Cited in note (9 L. R. A. 740) on right of tenant in common, paying lien, to contribution among cotenants.

2 L. R. A. 173, HARDMAN v. BRETT, 37 Fed. 803.

Right of common carrier to recover for injury to property in its possession.

Cited in Chicago v. Pennsylvania Co. 57 C. C. A. 516, 119 Fed. 504, holding common carrier may maintain action for injury of cars of other companies temporarily in its possession.

2 L. R. A. 175, ANDERSON v. APPLETON, 112 N. Y. 104, 19 N. E. 427.

Appealability of order.

Cited in Birge v. Berlin Iron Bridge Co. 133 N. Y. 483, 31 N. E. 609, holding order vacating injunction because plaintiff not entitled to sue, reviewable; Schneider v. Rochester, 155 N. Y. 621, 50 N. E. 291, and Kreizer v. Allaire, 16 Misc. 7, 37 N. Y. Supp. 687, holding order which fails to state ground on which it was determined not appealable.

Jurisdiction of equity to construe, establish, or invalidate wills.

Cited in Hemmje v. Meinen, 20 N. Y. Supp. 621; Whitney v. Whitney, 63 Hun, 70, 18 N. Y. Supp. 3; Bradhurst v. Field, 32 N. Y. S. R. 432, 10 N. Y. Supp. 454, —holding power of equity to construe wills results from its jurisdiction over trusts; Adams v. Becker, 28 N. Y. S. R. 912, 8 N. Y. Supp. 261, holding action to construe will does not lie unless construction necessary; Benner v. Benner, 35 N. Y. S. R. 604, 12 N. Y. Supp. 474, holding action to construe will should be brought by all the executors; Mellen v. Mellen, 139 N. Y. 218, 34 N. E. 925, holding grantee of testator cannot sue to construe will; Anderson v. Carr, 65 Hun, 180, 19 N. Y. Supp. 992, holding equity without jurisdiction to establish will; Nelson v. McDonald, 61 Hun, 409, 16 N. Y. Supp. 273, holding action to correct mistake of decedent in signing wrong will not maintainable; Delabarre v. McAlpin, 71 App. Div. 593, 76 N. Y. Supp. 301, holding supreme court will not determine which of two wills should be probated; Kalish v. Kalish, 166 N. Y. 371, 59 N. E. 917, sustaining jurisdiction of suit to invalidate will involving trust; Thomas v. Thomas, 9 App. Div. 489, 41 N. Y. Supp. 276, and Wallace v. Payne, 14 App. Div. 600, 43 N. Y. Supp. 1119, holding heir at law may sue to set aside fraudulent will; Cobb v. Hanford, 88 Hun, 24, 34 N. Y. Supp. 511, sustaining jurisdiction of suit to enjoin probate of will made in violation of a promise; Long v. Rodgers, 79 Hun, 443, 29 N. Y. Supp. 981, holding next of kin cannot sue to invalidate probate after one year; Higgins v. Union Trust Co. 32 N. Y. S. R. 197, 10 N. Y. Supp. 389, holding heirs at law cannot sue to construe will for purpose of invalidating it; Jones v. Richards, 24 Misc. 627, 54 N. Y. Supp. 126, and Kalish v. Kalish, 45 App. Div. 530, 61 N. Y. Supp. 448, holding heir at law cannot sue to invalidate trust in will.

Cited in note (10 L. R. A. 766) on jurisdiction of suit for construction of will.

Jurisdiction of equity over settlement of estates.

Cited in Weston v. Goodrich, 86 Hun, 196, 33 N. Y. Supp. 382, holding equity has concurrent jurisdiction to settle estates; Morse v. Smith, 42 N. Y. S. R. 170, 17 N. Y. Supp. 386, holding action to compel delivery to and inventory of property by executor not maintainable; Sanders v. Soutter, 126 N. Y. 200, 27 N. E. 263, refusing to entertain action for executor's accounting; Steinway v. Von Bernuth, 59 App. Div. 269, 69 N. Y. Supp. 1146 (dissenting opinion). majority sustaining jurisdiction of executor's accounting.

Cited in note (3 L. R. A. 813) on jurisdiction of surrogate court as to accounting and distribution of estate.

Repeal of statute.

Cited in Stack v. Brooklyn, 150 N. Y. 345, 44 N. E. 1030; Quinlan v. Welch, 141 N. Y. 163, 36 N. E. 12; Gabel v. Williams, 39 Misc. 496, 80 N. Y. Supp. 489; People ex rel. Ellett v. O'Grady, 46 App. Div. 215, 61 N. Y. Supp. 577. — holding repeal by implication depends on legislative intent; People ex rel. Fleming v. Dalton, 24 Misc. 90, 53 N. Y. Supp. 291, holding general statute regarding tenure of office abrogates provisions of city charter; Buffalo v. Neal, 86 Hun, 83, 33 N. Y. Supp. 346, holding repugnant general act repeals prior local act; Cromwell v. MacLean, 123 N. Y. 485, 25 N. E. 932, holding prior statute repealed by subsequent act introducing new system; Opinion of the Justices, 66 N. H. 668, 33 Atl. 1076, holding prior act repealed by later act revising whole subject-matter; Wallace v. Payne, 9 App. Div. 35, 41 N. Y. Supp. 111, holding that Laws 1853, chap. 238, and Laws 1879, chap. 316, have been repealed; Colby v. Colby, 81 Hun, 223, 30 N. Y. Supp. 677, holding Laws 1879, chap. 316, repealed; Casterton v. Vienna, 17 App. Div. 109, note, 44 N. Y. Supp. 868 (dissenting opinion), majority holding special act not repealed by general statute.

2 L. R. A. 180, PEOPLE ex rel. UNION INS. CO. v. NASH, 111 N. Y. 310, 7 Am. St. Rep. 747, 18 N. E. 630.

Effect of agreement to arbitrate.

Cited in New York, Lumber & W. Working Co. v. Schnieder, 119 N. Y. 478, 24 N. E. 4, holding arbitrament binding; Sartwell v. Sowles, 72 Vt. 277, 82 Am. St. Rep. 943, 48 Atl. 11, holding submission to arbitration no bar to action after revocation; New Jersey & P. Concentrating Works v. Ackermann, 15 Misc. 609, 37 N. Y. Supp. 489, holding provision in employer's liability policy limiting right of action to one defendant unenforceable.

Cited in footnote to Union Ins. Co. v. Central Trust Co. 44 L. R. A. 227, which holds deposit to secure payment of award forfeited on revocation of arbitration.

Cited in notes (10 L. R. A. 560) on fire insurance; revocation of submission to arbitration; (11 L. R. A. 623) on arbitration and award.

2 L. R. A. 183, KERNOCHAN v. MURRAY, 111 N. Y. 306, 7 Am. St. Rep. 744, 18 N. E. 868.

Effect on contract of death of contracting party.

Cited in Brown v. Cushman, 173 Mass. 370, 53 N. E. 860, holding contract to manufacture, requiring personal supervision, terminated by death; Chamberlain v. Dunlop, 126 N. Y. 52, 22 Am. St. Rep. 807, 26 N. E. 966, holding contract in lease to rebuild binds executor; Drummond v. Crane, 159 Mass. 579, 23 L. R. A. 714, 38 Am. St. Rep. 460, 35 N. E. 90, holding obligation to take water for certain time survived to administrator; Kernochan v. Murray, 53 Hun, 51, 5 N. Y. Supp. 869, holding guaranty not terminated by death of person to whom it ran; Williams v. Williams, 35 N. Y. S. R. 201, 12 N. Y. Supp. 601, sustaining action against administratrix of copartner upon agreement of dissolution; Matteson v. Dent, 176 U. S. 528, 44 L. ed. 574, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419, holding allottees of deceased holder of bank stock liable to assessment for debts of insolvent corporation; Wattengel v. Schultz, 11 Misc. 168, 32 N. Y. Supp. 91, holding insurance policies were presumptively taken out by administratrix to execute covenant of deceased.

Primary or secondary responsibility.

Cited in Wysong v. Meyer, 58 App. Div. 426, 69 N. Y. Supp. 286, holding bond to procure discontinuance of foreclosure primary obligation; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Keokuk & H. Bridge Co. 46 C. C. A. 645, 107 Fed. 788, holding railroads not discharged by change in contract with bridge company on ground that they were guarantors or sureties for its bonds; De Remer v. Brown, 165 N. Y. 419, 59 N. E. 129, holding agent contracting in own name personally bound.

Cited in footnote to Staver & Walker v. Locke, 17 L. R. A. 652, which holds payment of notes taken by agent for goods sold not covered by guaranty of full performance of agent's engagements.

Cited in notes (6 L. R. A. 383; 8 L. R. A. 381) on contract of guaranty.

2 L. R. A. 185, WIGHTMAN v. CHICAGO & N. W. R. CO. 73 Wis. 169, 9 Am. St. Rep. 778, 40 N. W. 689.

Refusal to receive verdict.

Cited in Sherman v. Menominee River Lumber Co. 77 Wis. 21, 45 N. W. 1079, holding court may decline to receive special verdict, and direct further consultation.

Railroads, liability in respect to tickets.

Cited in Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Rather, 3 Tex. Civ. App. 78, 21 S. W. 951, holding, passenger entitled to stand on contract as made, although not contained in ticket through fault of agent; Pennsylvania Co. v. Bray, 125 Ind. 237, 25 N. E. 439; and Northern P. R. Co. v. Pauson, 30 L. R. A. 733, 17 C. C. A. 291, 44 U. S. App. 178, 70 Fed. 589, holding passenger's failure to have return coupon stamped does not deprive him of right to return passage, when he has done all he could to get it stamped; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Wright, 2 Tex. Civ. App. 469, 21 S. W. 399, holding railroad responsible for wrongful act of agent in unreasonably limiting time for return trip; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Martino, 2 Tex. Civ. App. 642, 18 S. W. 1066, holding right to transportation not lost by agent refusing to sign and stamp return ticket.

Cited in footnote to Watson v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 49 L. R. A. 454, which holds condition requiring return coupon of round-trip ticket to be stamped reasonable.

Cited in notes (12 L. R. A. 340) on effect of stipulation in contract of carriage; (15 L. R. A. 817) on right of railroad company to charge additional fare for neglect to procure ticket; (9 L. R. A. 688) on expulsion of passenger from train for want of ticket.

Distinguished in Anderson v. Union Traction Co. 7 Pa. Dist. R. 43, 4 Lack. Legal News, 10, holding street railway not responsible for error of conductor in issue of transfer ticket.

Damages — For ejection of passenger.

Cited in Phettiplace v. Northern P. R. Co. 84 Wis. 418, 20 L. R. A. 487, 54 N. W. 1092, holding verdict of $300 for injury similar to that in principal case not excessive.

— For injury to feelings.

Cited in Reinke v. Bentley, 90 Wis. 459, 63 N. W. 1055, holding recovery for physical pain and suffering and mental suffering proper in action for personal injury.

Distinguished in Summerfield v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 87 Wis. 12, 41 Am. St. Rep. 17, 57 N. W. 973, holding mental anguish alone, from delay of telegram, not independent basis for compensatory damages.

2 L. R. A. 188, CASS COUNTY v. CHICAGO, B. & Q. R. CO. 25 Neb. 348. 41 N. W. 246.

When property taxable.

Followed without discussion in Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. School Dist. No. 1. 25 Neb. 359, 41 N. W. 249.

Cited in Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Nebraska City, 53 Neb. 454, 73 N. W. 952, holding railroad bridge not within city limits cannot be taxed by city; Cowen v. Aldridge, 51 C. C. A. 676, 114 Fed. 50, holding railroad bridge a structure to be taxed locally.

Cited in footnote to State v. Virginia & T. R. Co. 35 L. R. A. 759, which holds earning capacity of railroad main consideration in determining taxable value; Knoxville & O. R. Co. v. Harris, 53 L. R. A. 921, which holds exemption from privilege tax not included in exemption from ad valorem tax; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 18 L. R. A. 729, which holds state tax on railroad track within state and proportionate part of its rolling stock not tax on interstate commerce.

Cited in note (29 L. R. A. 71) on jurisdiction as to taxation of bridge over river forming boundary of state or its divisions.

Overruled in Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Richardson County, 61 Neb. 525, 85 N. W. 532, holding railroad bridge part of its continuous line, taxable by state board only.

Statute of limitations on note depending on bridge completion.

Cited in Garner v. Hall, 122 Ala. 230, 25 So. 187, holding bridge not completed, so that statute of limitations ran against note depending upon completion of railroad.

What included in roadbed of railroad.

Cited in Standard Ins. Co. v. Langston, 60 Ark. 386, 30 S. W. 427, holding roadbed, in an accident insurance policy, does not include ends of ties of unusual length.

Obstruction to navigation.

Cited in note (59 L. R. A. 36) on right to obstruct or destroy rights of navigation.

2 L. R. A. 192, MUHLMAN v. UNION P. R. CO. 37 Fed. 189.

Who are fellow servants.

Cited in Borgman v. Omaha & St. L. R. Co. 41 Fed. 668, holding foreman in charge of, and having entire control of, all wrecking gangs, vice principal.

Cited in footnotes to St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Rice, 4 L. R. A. 173, which holds yard inspector and yard foreman fellow servants; Fagundes v. Central Pacific R. Co. 3 L. R. A. 824, which holds laborer removing snow from track fellow servant of track walker and conductor; Elliot v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 3 L. R. A. 363, which holds section foreman and freight conductor fellow servants; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Martin, 3 L. R. A. 282, which holds brakeman fellow servant of engineer; Daniel v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 16 L. R. A. 383, which holds conductor and brakeman on different trains not fellow servants; Fisher v. Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. 16 L. R. A. 519, which holds section foreman and conductor not fellow servants; Palmer v. Michigan C. R. Co. 17 L. R. A. 637, which holds assistant road master not fellow servant of gang of men working under him; Clarke v. Pennsylvania Co. 17 L. R. A. 811, which holds section boss of one gang and member of another gang fellow servants; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Andrews, 17 L. R. A. 190, which holds conductor and engineer fellow servants of brakeman on other train.

Cited in notes (4 L. R. A. 795) on master and servant; fellow servants, who are; (7 L. R. A. 503) on master liable for acts of agent or representative; (51 L. R. A. 576) on limits of departmental control in vice principalship considered with reference to the superior rank of a negligent servant; (8 L. R. A. 818) on vice principals and agents; (6 L. R. A. 585) on employee not assuming risk of master's representative; (3 L. R. A. 560) on master not liable for negligence of fellow servant; (4 L. R. A. 852) on liability of master in case of contributing agencies.

2 L. R. A. 193, Re PIFFARD, 111 N. Y. 410, 18 N. E. 718.

Power of appointment in will.

Cited in Condit v. De Hart, 62 N. J. L. 81, 40 Atl. 776, holding will of son with power of appointment should be referred to in carrying out father's will.

2 L. R. A. 195, RAILROAD COMRS. v. OREGON R. & NAV. CO. 17 Or. 65, 19 Pac. 702.

Governmental regulation of railroads.

Cited in State v. Rogers, 22 Or. 357, 30 Pac. 74, holding indictment under railroad rate act quashed by repeal of act during pendency of prosecution.

Cited in footnote to State ex rel. Tompkins v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 47 L. R. A. 569, which sustains railroad commissioner's authority to require building of depot.

2 L. R. A. 199, PITTSBURG, C. & ST. L. R. CO. v. BOSWORTH, 46 Ohio St. 81, 18 N. E. 533.

Rights running with land.

Cited in Jones Fertilizing Co. v. Chicago, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 7 Ohio N. P. 251, holding right to crossing, in agreement with railroad, runs with land; American Strawboard Co. v. Haldeman Paper Co. 27 C. C. A. 640, 54 U. S. App. 416, 83 Fed. 624, holding restriction on use of leased land for a particular business attaches to and runs with leasehold.

Cited in footnotes to Mott v. Oppenheimer, 17 L. R. A. 409, which construes as running with the land agreement for party wall, expressly declared to run with land; Mygatt v. Coe, 11 L. R. A. 646, which holds covenants of warranty and quiet enjoyment by owner and husband do not run with land as against husband; Bald Eagle Valley R. Co. v. Nittany Valley R. Co. 29 L. R. A. 423, which holds intention of parties controlling in determining whether covenant runs with land; Brown v. Southern P. Co. 47 L. R. A. 409, which holds covenant by grantors for railroad to build fences or not hold company for injury to stock personal only.

Constructive notice from possession.

Cited in footnotes to Rock Island & P. R. Co. v. Dimick, 19 L. R. A. 105, which holds open and exclusive possession of passageway through railroad embankment notice of rights to purchaser of railroad; Brinser v. Anderson, 6 L. R. A. 205, which holds purchaser required to inquire into rights of possessor, though he knows of lease to him.

Cited in note (8 L. R. A. 211) on title to land; constructive notice by possession.

2 L. R. A. 203, WARREN v. BOARD OF REGISTRATION, 72 Mich. 398, 40 N. W. 553.

Effect of residence on elective franchise.

Cited in Beecher v. Detroit, 114 Mich. 230, 72 N. W. 206, holding temporary abode not establishment or residence; Powell v. Spackman, 7 Idaho, 717, 54 L. R. A. 387, 65 Pac. 503 (dissenting opinion), majority holding inmate of soldiers' home gains no voting residence there.

Cited in notes (23 L. R. A. 216) on acquiring residence as a voter while attending school or public institution; (12 L. R. A. 364) on state citizenship.

Distinguished in Wolcott v. Holcomb, 97 Mich. 368, 23 L. R. A. 219, 56 N. W. 837, holding residence of elector not changed by presence and support in soldiers' home.

— Schools.

Cited in note (13 L. R. A. 162) on domicil as affecting common-school privileges.

— Registration.

Cited in notes (7 L. R. A. 99) on rights of voters to be registered for elections; (10 L. R. A. 226) on election law; registration.

Impeachment of law by legislative journals.

Cited in Ritchie v. Richards, 14 Utah, 353, 47 Pac. 670, holding enrolled bill duly signed, approved, and deposited unimpeachable.

Usage and custom.

Cited in note (13 L. R. A. 438) on custom and usage as law.

2 L. R. A. 206, LORSCHER v. SUPREME LODGE, K. OF H. 72 Mich. 316, 40 N. W. 545.

Proof of death.

Cited in National Union v. Thomas, 10 App. D. C. 289, holding beneficiary under no obligation to see that death report required by insurance association is made.

Contract of insurance.

Cited in Wagner v. Supreme Lodge, K. & L. of H. 128 Mich. 668, 87 N. W. 903, holding delivery of benefit certificate to subordinate lodge completes the contract.

Cited in footnotes to McLendon v. Sovereign Camp of Woodmen, 52 L. R. A. 444, which holds reasonable delay in delivering benefit certificate gives no right to recover on certificate delivered after death of insured; Hicks v. British America Assur. Co. 48 L. R. A. 424, which holds rights of one whose property destroyed after oral contract to insure it, but before policy issued, subject to provisions of standard policy prescribed by law.

Cited in notes (9 L. R. A. 189) on forfeiture of benefit certificate for nonpayment of assessment; (8 L. R. A. 114) on contract of mutual benefit association.

2 L. R. A. 212, LOUISVILLE ASPHALT VARNISH CO. v. LORICK, 29 S. C. 533, 8 S. E. 8.

Written evidence of contract.

Cited in Atlantic Phosphate Co. v. Sullivan, 34 S. C. 309, 13 S. E. 539, holding terms of a contract may be contained in several instruments of writing; Freeland v. Ritz, 154 Mass. 259, 12 L. R. A. 561, 26 Am. St. Rep. 244, 28 N. E. 226, holding parol evidence admissible to identify paper relating to contract.

Sufficiency of memorandum under statute of frauds.

Cited in Melchers v. Springs, 33 S. C. 282, 11 S. E. 788, holding private letter of agent to principal forwarding order not sufficient to bind principal.

Cited in footnotes to Freeland v. Ritz, 12 L. R. A. 561, which holds series of papers, only one of which signed, may constitute memorandum; White v. Breen, 32 L. R. A. 127, which authorizes reading different writings together as constituent parts of memorandum.

Cited in note (11 L. R. A. 143) on defective memorandum of contract.

2 L. R. A. 217, LEROY & W. R. CO. v. ROSS, 40 Kan. 598, 20 Pac. 197.

Followed without discussion in Kansas City & S. W. R. Co. v. Baird, 41 Kan. 71, 21 Pac. 227.

Condemnation.

Cited in footnote to Jacksonville, T. & K. W. R. Co. v. Adams, 14 L. R. A. 533, which authorizes condemnation of land irregularly entered upon.

Full compensation.

Cited in Florence, E. D. & W. Valley R. Co. v. Shepherd, 50 Kan. 440, 31 Pac. 1002; Chicago, K. & W. R. Co. v. Woodward, 47 Kan. 193, 27 Pac. 836; Kansas C. R. Co. v. Jackson County, 45 Kan. 719, 26 Pac. 394; Chicago, K. & W. R. Co. v. Emery, 51 Kan. 18, 32 Pac. 631; Inter-State Consol. Rapid Transit R. Co. v. Simpson, 45 Kan. 715, 26 Pac. 393,—holding owner's damages for right of way cannot be diminished by benefits.

Cited in footnotes to Schroeder v. Joliet, 52 L. R. A. 634, which authorizes consideration of benefit from improvement in assessing damages from cutting down street; Beveridge v. Lewis, 59 L. R. A. 581, which denies right to deduct benefits from damages in exercise of eminent domain by individual.

Testimony as to value of, or injury to, land.

Cited in Ottawa, O. C. & C. G. R. Co. v. Fisher, 42 Kan. 678, 22 Pac. 713, holding farmers in vicinity of farm, unacquainted with its market or productive value, incompetent to testify as to depreciation; Kansas City & S. W. R. Co. v. Ehret, 41 Kan. 26, 20 Pac. 538, holding farmers residing in vicinity of and acquainted with particular farm may give opinions as to its value; Ottawa,

O. C. & C. G. R. Co. v. Adolph, 41 Kan. 602, 21 Pac. 643, holding improper to give estimate of amount of damage to pasture and corrals injured, but not destroyed, by right of way for railroads.

Cited in note (3 L. R. A. 83) on evidence of value of land taken in condemnation proceedings.

Damage from fire.

Cited in Kay v. Glade Creek & R. R. Co. 47 W. Va. 475, 35 S. E. 973, holding danger, to affect damages, must be real and imminent.

Measure of damages.

Cited in Chicago, K. & W. R. Co. v. Brunson, 43 Kan. 374, 23 Pac. 495, holding erroneously received testimony as to amount of damage per acre harmless, being unobjected to as to competency; Leavenworth, N. & S. R. Co. v. Herley, 45 Kan. 536, 26 Pac. 23, discussing, but not deciding, whether witness can testify directly as to amount of damages sustained; Chicago, K. & W. R. Co. v. Parsons, 51 Kan. 413, 32 Pac. 1083, holding measure of damages difference in value of land before and after taking right of way; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Wilkinson, 55 Kan. 85, 39 Pac. 1043, holding witness may not state his opinion as to damages to be recovered.

Cited in footnotes to Cameron v. Pittsburgh & L. E. R. Co. 22 L. R. A. 443, which holds farm not divided for estimation of damages from construction of railroad by previous condemnation of strip for canal; Becker v. Philadelphia & R. Terminal R. Co. 35 L. R. A. 583, which holds diminution in profits and value of merchandise by removal of business from condemnation of land not element of damages.

Cited in note (11 L. R. A. 605) on market price as an element of damages in condemnation proceedings.

2 L. R. A. 223, COM. ex rel. KEELY v. PERKINS, 124 Pa. 36, 16 Atl. 525, 528.

Contempt of court.

Cited in Re Garis, 185 Pa. 501, 39 Atl. 1110, holding contempt proceedings rest upon the necessity of maintaining dignity and authority of courts; Com. v. Green, 185 Pa. 647, 40 Atl. 96, approving practice of granting special writ of certiorari ancillary to habeas corpus in proper cases; Tolman v. Leonard, 6 App. D. C. 235, holding jurisdictional facts need not be shown in commitment, if disclosed in record; Jack v. Twyford, 10 Pa. Super. Ct. 481, holding court's order to defendant to restore frame dwelling enforceable by attachment; Leslie v. Mahoning R. Co. 22 Pa. Co. Ct. 301, holding court of equity, having jurisdiction, can enforce by attachment its lawful orders; Com. ex rel. Thornley v. Friends' Home for Children, 22 Pa. Co. Ct. 62, 7 Pa. Dist. R. 653, holding it duty of one to whom writ of habeas corpus is issued to produce body of person detained if within his power.

Cited in note (8 L. R. A. 588) on contempt of court in presence of court.

Protection of witness.

Cited in note (11 L. R. A. 591) on protection of witness on examination.

2 L. R. A. 225, RICH v. BRAY, 37 Fed. 273.

Equity jurisdiction of Federal courts.

Cited in Hale v. Tyler, 115 Fed. 838, holding, in cases of fraud, state court administrator may be proceeded against in Federal court; Hagge v. Kansas City S. R. Co. 104 Fed. 393, holding several landowners affected by same nuisance might unite in action, provided injury to each amounted to the $2,000 limit.

Cited in note (18 L. R. A. 269) on adoption by Federal courts of remedies created by state statutes.

— Disputed title to real estate.

Cited in Fuller v. Montague, 8 C. C. A. 105, 16 U. S. App. 391, 59 Fed. 216, holding Federal chancery courts do not decide questions of controverted real-estate title; American Asso. v. Eastern Kentucky Land Co. 68 Fed. 722, holding Federal court of equity cannot entertain partition suit where plaintiff's title is denied; Elder v. McClaskey, 17 C. C. A. 265, 37 U. S. App. 199, 70 Fed. 543, holding actual notice of ouster not necessary to establish adverse possession; Heinze v. Butte & B. Consol. Min. Co. 61 C. C. A. 90, 126 Fed. 28, by Ross, J., dissenting, who holds Federal courts cannot try controverted questions of title in partition suit.

When partition suit maintainable.

Cited in note (20 L. R. A. 624, 628) on right of one out of possession to partition.

Arranging parties.

Cited in Claiborne v. Waddell, 50 Fed. 369, permitting withdrawal of action as to one defendant with interests identical to complainants' so as not to oust court of jurisdiction; Cilley v. Patten, 62 Fed. 500, holding court will arrange parties according to their actual interests on question of jurisdiction.

2 L. R. A. 229, ERWIN v. UNITED STATES, 37 Fed. 470.

What fees allowable to United States officers.

Cited in Marvin v. United States, 114 Fed. 227, holding charge for entering in minute book memorandum as to court business and adjournment proper. Marvin v. United States, 114 Fed. 227, holding charge for certified copy of mittimus allowable; Marsh v. United States, 88 Fed. 888, holding fees for entering orders approving accounts, and for certified copies, certificates, and seals, proper; Puleston v. United States, 85 Fed. 576, holding mileage in removing prisoners under order of court proper; Van Hoorebeke v. United States, 46 Fed. 459, holding presentation of accounts of district attorneys, etc., not condition precedent to action; Taylor v. United States, 45 Fed. 534, holding fees for certificates and seals to copies of orders allowable; Davis v. United States, 45 Fed. 163, holding fees disallowed by treasury proper; Marvin v. United States, 44 Fed. 407, stating amount of clerk's fees chargeable upon orders to pay accounts of officers, for administering oaths, and filing vouchers; Goodrich v. United States, 47 Fed. 268, holding charge for services of deputy clerk as jury commissioner proper; United States v. King, 147 U. S. 683, 37 L. ed. 330, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 439, holding charge for making separate reports of mileage fees of jurors and witnesses improper; United States v. Harmon, 147 U. S. 274, 37 L. ed. 167, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327, Affirming 43 Fed. 563, holding circuit court has jurisdiction over claims disallowed by comptroller of treasury; Goodrich v. United States, 42 Fed. 395, holding costs of attachment proceedings chargeable to United States; Goodrich v. United States, 42 Fed. 394, holding clerk's fees for entering orders, etc., chargeable to United States; Jones v. United States, 39 Fed. 414, holding clerk of district court entitled to fees; United States v. Warren, 12 Okla. 360, 71 Pac. 685, holding clerk of territorial district court entitled to statutory compensation for each day court was actually in session, whether business was transacted or not.

Common-law procedure in United States courts.

Cited in Howard v. United States, 75 Fed. 991, 34 L. R. A. 514, holding United States courts governed by rules of common law in imposing cumulative sentences; Withaup v. United States, 62 C. C. A. 328, 127 Fed. 534, raising, without determining question, whether, in absence of Federal statute or established rules of evidence in state when admitted, common-law rules of evidence would govern United States courts.

2 L. R. A. 242, FLOYD v. PERRIN, 30 S. C. 1, 8 S. E. 14.

Township bonds.

Cited in Hicks v. Cleveland, 45 C. C. A. 435, 106 Fed. 465, holding mandamus will lie to compel levy of tax to pay judgment recovered by holder of township bonds; Massachusetts & S. Const. Co. v. Cherokee Twp. 42 Fed. 752, holding bonds of township for railroad construction, held by trustee, should be delivered to owners; Massachusetts & S. Const. Co. v. Cane Creek Twp. 45 Fed. 336, holding bonds for railroad construction cannot be issued to an amount exceeding constitutional limit; Granniss v. Cherokee Twp. 47 Fed. 428, holding coupons on township bonds issued for construction of railroad prior to completion, invalid, and all subsequent thereto valid; Finance Co. v. Charleston, C. & C. R. Co. 52 Fed. 679, holding lawyers cannot recover for gratuitous services in obtaining legislation validating township bonds; Jack v. Williams, 113 Fed. 825, holding purchaser of railroad constructed on township bonds, whose franchise had been revoked by legislation, might remove rails; State ex rel. Charleston, C. & C. R. Co. v. Whitesides, 30 S. C. 583, 3 L. R. A. 777, 9 S. E. 661, holding mandamus will lie to compel county officer to indorse certificate of construction engineer authorizing issue of township bonds; Holstein v. Edgefield County, 64 S. C. 382, 42 S. E. 180, denying injunction against payment of railroad-aid bonds, adjudged legal by Federal court, contrary to determination of state courts.

Limited in Darlington v. Atlantic Trust Co. 16 C. C. A. 33, 25 U. S. App. 354, 68 Fed. 855, holding town bonds issued in construction of railway valid; State ex rel. Dickenson v. Neely, 30 S. C. 603, 3 L. R. A. 678, 9 S. E. 664, holding legislature may levy tax to aid in construction of railroad upon assent of territory to be taxed.

Distinguished in Allen v. Adams, 66 S. C. 356, 44 S. E. 938, holding incorporated town may issue bonds for school building.

Disapproved in Pickens Twp. v. Post, 41 C. C. A. 3, 99 Fed. 661, holding owner of township bonds a bona fide holder.

Overruled in Folsom v. Township Ninety Six, 159 U. S. 622, 40 L. ed. 282, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174, holding township bonds issued in construction of railroad valid.

Grant of corporate powers.

Cited in Folsom v. Township Ninety Six, 159 U. S. 628, 40 L. ed. 284, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174, holding legislature might grant corporate powers to cities, counties, towns, and townships; Congaree Constr. Co. v. Columbia Twp. 49 S. C. 537, 27 S. E. 570, holding statute authorizing townships to subscribe to stock of railroads, and making them corporations for that purpose, invalid; White v. Rock Hill, 34 S. C. 245, 13 S. E. 416, holding license tax cannot be collected from one not shown to intend to engage in business for shorter period than one year.

Cited in footnote to Dell Rapids v. Irving, 29 L. R. A. 861, which holds township organized under state law not a "municipal corporation."

Title of act.

Cited in note (2 L. R. A. 789) on title of statute must fairly suggest subjects dealt with in the acts.

2 L. R. A. 252, PALMER v. PENNSYLVANIA CO. 111 N. Y. 488, 18 N. E. 859.

Degree of care required to prevent injury from accident.

Cited in Palmer v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. 120 N. Y. 177, 17 Am. St. Rep. 629, 24 N. E. 302, holding carrier must use utmost care and diligence to prevent defects in operative machinery, appliances, and apparatus; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Shields, 9 Tex. Civ. App. 656, 28 S. W. 709, and Jensen v. Hamburg-American Packet Co. 23 App. Div. 167, 48 N. Y. Supp. 630, holding rule as to highest care applies only to appliances and machinery; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Kuhn, 107 Tenn. 111, 64 S. W. 202, holding rule as to highest care applies to operative machinery and appliances, roadbed, and tracks; Kelly v. Manhattan R. Co. 112 N. Y. 451, 3 L. R. A. 76, 20 N. E. 383, holding less degree of care required as to approaches to cars than in regard to roadbed, machinery, or car construction; Conroy v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 96 Wis. 256, 38 L. R. A. 423, 70 N. W. 486, holding carrier not bound to use highest degree of care to prevent passenger awaiting train from exposure to danger; Buck v. Manhattan R. Co. 15 Daly, 552, 10 N. Y. Supp. 107, holding carrier only bound to use reasonable care to prevent injury to passenger getting on or off vehicles; McKeon v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 94 Wis. 485, 35 L. R. A. 257, 59 Am. St. Rep. 909, 69 N. W. 175, holding wrongful instruction as to degree of care required of carrier harmless, when no care was shown; Dochtermann v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co. 32 App. Div. 21, 52 N. Y. Supp. 1051 (dissenting opinion), majority holding question for jury whether car was negligently started before passenger had taken seat.

Distinguished in Cobb v. Lindell R. Co. 149 Mo. 151, 50 S. W. 310, holding highest degree of care applies to service, as well as construction and equipment.

— Approaches, platforms, car steps, etc.

Cited in Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Aldridge, 27 Ind. App. 500, 61 N. E. 741, holding carrier not responsible for injury from snow on car steps, without reasonable opportunity to remove; Gilman v. Boston & M. R. Co. 168 Mass. 455, 47 N. E. 193, upholding finding of jury that carrier was negligent in not properly clearing car steps of ice and snow; Proud v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 64 N. J. L. 707, 50 L. R. A. 470, 46 Atl. 710, holding carrier not bound to know at each moment the condition of every part of the train.

Cited in footnote to Proud v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 50 L. R. A. 468, which denies liability for injury by slipping on filth on car step in nighttime, within half hour after car inspected.

Cited in note (3 L. R. A. 74) on duty of railroads, as carriers, to furnish safe approaches, platforms, etc.

— Street railway companies.

Cited in Stierle v. Union R. Co. 156 N. Y. 73, 50 N. E. 419, holding street car company not bound to exercise highest degree of care and skill in switching; Leyh v. Newburgh Electric R. Co. 41 App. Div. 220, 58 N. Y. Supp. 479, holding electric railway company not bound to use highest care in respect to curtain rods.

Distinguished in Stierle v. Union R. Co. 13 Misc. 134, 34 N. Y. Supp. 185, holding rule as to highest degree of care and skill inapplicable to operation of street horse cars.

— Steamship companies.

Cited in Bruswitz v. Netherlands American Steam Nav. Co. 64 Hun, 266, 19 N. Y. Supp. 75, holding steamship company not bound to exercise highest care to prevent passenger from tripping on floor sockets in rolling sea.

— Landlord and tenant.

Cited in Harkin v. Crumbie, 20 Misc. 570, 46 N. Y. Supp. 453, holding apartment owner only required to remove ice from courtyard within reasonable time.

— Act of God as defense.

Cited in note (11 L. R. A. 616) on act of God as defense for loss by carrier.

Carrier's liability as to passenger riding on platform.

Cited in Cincinnati, L. & A. Electric Street R. Co. v. Lohe, 68 Ohio St. 111, 67 N. E. 161, holding passenger injured while voluntarily riding on platform of inter-urban electric car, cannot recover damages.

Contributory negligence.

Cited in Hanrahan v. Manhattan R. Co. 53 Hun, 424, 6 N. Y. Supp. 395, holding passenger guilty of contributory negligence in stumbling on station platform known to her to have been higher than car platform.

2 L. R. A. 255, PEOPLE v. O'BRIEN, 111 N. Y. 1, 7 Am. St. Rep. 684, 18 N. E. 692.

Nature of right created by corporate franchise — Railroads.

Cited in Ingersoll v. Nassau Electric R. Co. 157 N. Y. 463, 43 L. R. A. 239, 52 N. E. 545; Coney Island, Ft. H. & B. R. Co. v. Kennedy, 15 App. Div. 591, 44 N. Y. Supp. 825; Pape v. New York & H. R. Co. 74 App. Div. 189, 77 N. Y. Supp. 725 (concurring opinion); Roddy v. Brooklyn City & N. R. Co. 32 App. Div. 314, 52 N. Y. Supp. 1025,—holding franchise to construct and operate street railway is property; Herzog v. New York Elev. R. Co. 37 N. Y. S. R. 569, 14 N. Y. Supp. 296, 59 N. Y. S. R. 343, holding grant of right to use streets for elevated railway gives grantee estate in street; Southern Boulevard R. Co. v. North New York City Traction Co. 16 Misc. 271, 39 N. Y. Supp. 266, holding railway franchise is in nature of easement in public highway; Syracuse Water Co. v. Syracuse, 116 N. Y. 182, 5 L. R. A. 552, 22 N. E. 381, holding corporate rights and means of exercising them constitute single body, consisting of property, corporeal and incorporeal; Africa v. Knoxville, 70 Fed. 734, 737, and Mercantile Trust & Deposit Co. v. Collins Park & B. R. Co. 101 Fed. 350, holding privileges in streets granted street railway company constitute contract, which cannot be impaired; Mason v. Ohio River R. Co. 51 W. Va. 187, 41 S. E. 418, holding municipal grant, accepted by railroad, of right to use street, a binding contract; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 26 L. R. A. 673, 12 C. C. A. 370, 22 U. S. App. 570, 64 Fed. 634, Reversing 56 Fed. 883, holding street railway company capable of taking franchise for term beyond corporate life is not restricted by charter; Parker v. Elmira, C. & N. R. Co. 165 N. Y. 280, 59 N. E. 81, holding right of railroad, under statute, to charge fare at rate of 4 cents per mile, property entitled to protection.

Cited in footnote to Belleville v. Citizens' Horse R. Co. 26 L. R. A. 681, which holds consent to use streets for tracks of railway company is mere license.

Cited in notes (5 L. R. A. 371; 8 L. R. A. 453) on right of railroad to construct and operate line on street; (4 L. R. A. 624) on use of public streets for horse railroads; (8 L. R. A. 539) on electric railways in city streets; (9 L. R. A. 101) on use of streets in municipalities; (50 L. R. A. 143) on privilege of using streets as a contract, within constitutional provision against impairing obligation of contracts.

— Water companies.

Cited in Re Long Island Water Supply Co. 30 Abb. N. C. 52, 24 N. Y. Supp. 813, holding company organized under general statute exists by virtue of contract with town, and has exclusive franchise for full term of charter; Skaneateles Waterworks Co. v. Skaneateles, 161 N. Y. 167, 46 L. R. A. 691, 55 N. E. 562, holding reserved right to grant franchise to another corporation not authority for invasion of that first granted; Re Water Comrs. 71 App. Div. 552, 554, 76 N. Y. Supp. 11, holding franchise includes rights to collect and store water, and to convey same to consumers for compensation.

Cited in note (9 L. R. A. 196) on franchises of water companies.

Distinguished in Re Brooklyn, 143 N. Y. 616, 26 L. R. A. 277, 38 N. E. 983, Affirming 73 Hun, 506, 26 N. Y. Supp. 198, holding grant of franchise, not exclusive in terms, does not preclude similar franchise to another company.

— Gas companies.

Cited in People ex rel. Woodhaven Gaslight Co. v. Deehan, 11 App. Div. 176, 42 N. Y. Supp. 1071, holding franchise to lay mains in streets is property, and not affected by change in form of government from town to village; People ex rel. Woodhaven Gaslight Co. v. Deehan, 153 N. Y. 532, 47 N. E. 787, holding franchise cannot be destroyed by village arbitrarily refusing to permit company to place conductors under streets.

— Telegraph companies and other corporations.

Cited in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Syracuse, 24 Misc. 342, 53 N. Y. Supp. 690, holding franchise for construction of subway by telegraph company is property, which cannot be taken away or impaired by municipality; Hudson River Teleph. Co. v. Watervliet Turnp. & R. Co. 135 N. Y. 408, 17 L. R. A. 679, 31 Am. St. Rep. 838, 32 N. E. 148, holding telephone company has no easement in streets used by it, but franchise is property while it continues; Andrus v. National Sugar Ref. Co. 72 App. Div. 554, 76 N. Y. Supp. 530, holding franchise to erect docks is property capable of conveyance.

Elements necessary to complete corporate franchise.

Cited in Re Union Elev. R. Co. 112 N. Y. 74, 2 L. R. A. 362, 19 N. E. 664; Suburban Rapid Transit Co. v. New York, 128 N. Y. 520, 28 N. E. 525; White v. Manhattan R. Co. 139 N. Y. 26, 34 N. E. 887; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 64 Fed. 645,—holding municipal consent to construct street railway is muniment of title to enjoyment of rights acquired thereunder; Andrews v. National Foundry & Pipe Works, 10 C. C. A. 67, 18 U. S. App. 458, 61 Fed. 788, holding corporation organized to construct and operate waterworks acquires no complete franchise without grant from municipality; Underground R. Co. v. New York, 116 Fed. 957, holding street railroad company filing map of proposed line, failing to obtain city's consent, has no contract rights to be impaired by subsequent legislation; People v. Adirondack R. Co. 39 App. Div. 52, 55, 56, 56 N. Y.

Supp. 869 (dissenting opinion), majority holding railroad filing map and profile of proposed route, and giving requisite notice to answer, acquires right in route as against subsequent purchase by state.

Franchises limited as to time.

Cited in Citizens' Street R. Co. v. City R. Co. 64 Fed. 650, holding limitation of thirty years in city ordinance consenting to use of streets for operation of railway invalid.

Rights and obligations incident to corporate franchises in general.

Cited in Opinion of the Justices, 66 N. H. 830, 33 Atl. 1076, holding rights of corporate property under Constitution same as those of individuals; New York Cement Co. v. Consolidated Rosendale Cement Co. 38 Misc. 523, 77 N. Y. Supp. 1093, holding franchise of corporation and its property are inseparable, and grantee assumes obligations attaching to property; Weatherly v. Capital City Water Co. 115 Ala. 179, 22 So. 140, holding contract to furnish water runs with franchise, and is obligatory on assignee of recipient of grant; Re Water Comrs. 71 App. Div. 550, 76 N. Y. Supp. 11, holding reservation of right to purchase, in consent of municipal corporation to use of streets by water company, not lacking in mutuality; Boyer v. Little Falls, 5 App. Div. 7, 38 N. Y. Supp. 1114, holding purchaser of stock of business corporation may become substantial owner of its property.

Cited in footnotes to Theobald v. Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. 4 L. R. A. 735, which holds steam railroad cannot be operated in street without condemnation, or consent of abutting owner; Chicago G. W. R. Co. v. First M. E. Church, 50 L. R. A. 488, which holds that grant of right to operate railroad in street gives no authority to erect and maintain water tank therein.

Regulation of use of franchises.

Cited in Re Seaboard Teleg. & Telep. Co. 68 App. Div. 285, 74 N. Y. Supp. 15, holding city cannot destroy franchise of telegraph company by refusing permit to repair wires.

Distinguished in Lake Roland Elev. R. Co. v. Baltimore, 77 Md. 367, 20 L. R. A. 129, 26 Atl. 510, holding street railway franchise for use of streets for double track may be restricted to single track.

Leases and other contracts between railroads.

Cited in Tate v. Neary, 52 App. Div. 84, 65 N. Y. Supp. 40, holding lease by corporation extending beyond term of its existence not invalid; Frank v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 122 N. Y. 214, 25 N. E. 332, holding agreement transferring railroad, and all rights, powers, and privileges appurtenant thereto, conveys leasehold carved out of fee; Beveridge v. New York Elev. R. Co. 112 N. Y. 21, 2 L. R. A. 652, 19 N. E. 489, and Roddy v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co. 23 Misc. 376, 52 N. Y. Supp. 885, holding street railway incorporated before 1874 entitled to contract with another railroad for use of respective roads; Barnett v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co. 53 App. Div. 441, 65 N. Y. Supp. 1068, and Ingersoll v. Nassau Electric R. Co. 157 N. Y. 459, 43 L. R. A. 239, 52 N. E. 545, holding Laws 1839, chap. 218, permitting contracts between railroads for use of respective roads, in force, and authority for traffic agreements and leases by both steam and street railways; Roddy v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co. 23 Misc. 377, 52 N. Y. Supp. 885, holding Laws 1839, chap. 218, not repealed by Laws 1884, chap. 252, prohibiting traffic agreements between parallel lines.

Cited in note (45 L. R. A. 273) on restrictions on consolidation of parallel or competing railroads.

Distinguished in Ingersoll v. Nassau Electric R. Co. 157 N. Y. 477, 43 L. R. A. 239, 52 N. E. 545 (dissenting opinion), majority holding street railway may operate cars on track of another company under contract, without consent of abutting property owners.

Crossing of one railroad by another.

Cited in People's R. Co. v. Syracuse, B. & N. Y. R. Co. 22 Abb. N. C. 438, 6 N. Y. Supp. 326, holding street railroad cannot construct road across track of steam railway until compensation and manner of crossing determined.

Revocation or repeal of charter or franchise.

Cited in West Jersey Traction Co. v. Camden Horse R. Co. 52 N. J. Eq. 482, 29 Atl. 333, holding legislature may, by repeal of charter, resume franchise of street railway, either in whole or in part; Hudson River Teleph. Co. v. Watervliet Turnp. & R. Co. 135 N. Y. 408, 17 L. R. A. 679, 31 Am. St. Rep. 838, 32 N. E. 148, holding legislative grant to telephone company to occupy streets is revocable at pleasure; Barnes v. Arnold, 23 Misc. 205, 51 N. Y. Supp. 1109, holding legislature may modify or repeal charter of bank incorporated by filing certificate under general law; Ingersoll v. Nassau Electric R. Co. 157 N. Y. 463, 43 L. R. A. 239, 52 N. E. 545; Sandham v. Nye, 9 Misc. 546, 30 N. Y. Supp. 552; Coney Island, Ft. H. & B. R. Co. v. Kennedy, 15 App. Div. 591, 44 N. Y. Supp. 825; Roddy v. Brooklyn City & N. R. Co. 32 App. Div. 314, 52 N. Y. Supp. 1025; Pape v. New York & H. R. Co. 74 App. Div. 189, 77 N. Y. Supp. 725; Africa v. Knoxville, 70 Fed. 734; People v. Phyfe, 48 N. Y. S. R. 350, 20 N. Y. Supp. 461, — holding franchise of railroad company is irrepealable and vested property; Avoca v. Pittston, J. & A. Street R. Co. 7 Kulp, 476, holding city cannot revoke street-railway franchise after acceptance and exercise of privileges granted; Herzog v. New York Elev. R. Co. 37 N. Y. S. R. 568, 14 N. Y. Supp. 296, Affirmed in 59 N. Y. S. R. 343, 27 N. Y. Supp. 1034, holding municipal consent to construction of elevated railway vests irrevocably in railroad right to use street for such purpose.

Cited in footnotes to Milwaukee Electric R. & Light Co. v. Milwaukee, 36 L. R. A. 45, which denies city's right to prevent relaying of street railway tracks by company whose franchise not declared forfeited; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 26 L. R. A. 667, which holds express power to grant irrevocable consent to use street for street railway given city by statute.

Cited in notes (9 L. R. A. 37) on forfeiture of corporate franchises; (8 L. R. A. 498) on forfeiture and dissolution for misuser of franchise.

Reservation of power to amend or repeal charter or franchise.

Cited in Hudson River Teleph. Co. v. Watervliet Turnp. & R. Co. 135 N. Y. 408, 17 L. R. A. 679, 31 Am. St. Rep. 838, 32 N. E. 148, holding franchise of telephone company revocable at will of legislature; Rochester & C. Turnp. Road Co. v. Joel, 41 App. Div. 49, 58 N. Y. Supp. 346, holding statute depriving turnpike company of right to charge tolls previously authorized unconstitutional, although power of repeal reserved; Citizens' Street R. Co. v. City R. Co. 64 Fed. 651, holding, when charter of corporation repealed under power, provision must be made for disposition of property without confiscation.

Effect of dissolution of corporation, or revocation of charter.

Cited in Sandham v. Nye, 9 Misc. 546, 30 N. Y. Supp. 552, holding franchise of street railway attaches to tracks, and not to right of corporation to exist; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 395, 46 L. ed. 610, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410, holding corporation capable of taking extension of franchise beyond limit of corporate life; Brown v. Schleier, 55 C. C. A. 478, 118 Fed. 984, holding lease to corporation not invalid because for term outlasting lessee's corporate life; Nelson v. Hubbard, 96 Ala. 248, 17 L. R. A. 379, 11 So. 428, holding statute providing for dissolution of corporation, and administration of assets through trustee, does not impair obligation of contract; Opinion of the Justices, 66 N. H. 640, 33 Atl. 1076, holding property, on dissolution of corporation, held by stockholders as tenants in common; People ex rel. New York Underground R. Co. v. Newton, 26 Jones & S. 463, 11 N. Y. Supp. 782, holding only rights of third persons vested in contracts with corporation within rule that legislature cannot destroy by directing dissolution; Berwind-White Coal Min. Co. v. Ewart, 11 Misc. 494, 32 N. Y. Supp. 716, holding legislature may repeal or amend laws pertaining to business corporations organized under act 1875; Dow v. Northern R. Co. 67 N. H. 37, 36 Atl. 510, holding corporate property cannot be diverted from equitable owners by escheat or revert upon repeal of charter; New York v. Twenty-third Street R. Co. 113 N. Y. 317, 21 N. E. 60, holding, under right to repeal charter, legislature cannot deprive corporation of property, or annul contracts; Woodward v. Central Vermont R. Co. 180 Mass. 604, 62 N. E. 1051, holding reservation of right to amend charter does not authorize requirement that company pay debts of corporation whose property it acquires.

Cited in note (9 L. R. A. 34) on dissolution of corporations.

Taxation of corporate franchises.

Cited in People ex rel. Coney Island & B. R. Co. v. Neff, 15 App. Div. 587, 44 N. Y. Supp. 810, holding, notwithstanding franchise of street railway is property, it is not subject to taxation.

Cited in note (57 L. R. A. 36, 37, 38) on taxation of corporate franchises.

Taking property without compensation.

Cited in West Jersey Traction Co. v. Camden Horse R. Co. 52 N. J. Eq. 482, 29 Atl. 333, and Brooklyn Elev. R. Co. v. Brooklyn, 2 App. Div. 99, 37 N. Y. Supp. 560, holding franchise of street railway cannot be abrogated without compensation; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 690, 43 L. ed. 861, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565, holding state cannot take away or destroy property, or annul contracts of railroad with third persons; Manhattan R. Co. v. New York, 89 Hun, 432, 35 N. Y. Supp. 505, holding city cannot compel alteration in elevated railway station, to permit crossing of viaduct, without compensating railway for expense.

Statutes impairing obligation of contract.

Cited in People ex rel. Reynolds v. Buffalo, 140 N. Y. 307, 37 Am. St. Rep. 563, 35 N. E. 485, holding property right acquired by statute cannot be devested by repeal; Re Long Island Water Supply Co. 30 Abb. N. C. 52, 24 N. Y. Supp. 815, holding attempt to avoid corporate franchise by legislation impairs force and effect of contract; People ex rel. Reynolds v. Buffalo, 48 N. Y. S. R. 635, holding award under act for relief of relator not affected by subsequent repeal of act; People ex rel. Long Island v. Dohling, 6 App. Div. 90, 39 N. Y. Supp. 765, holding right under act authorizing religious corporation to acquire and hold lands exempt from taxation cannot be impaired by subsequent legislation repealing exemption; Roddy v. Brooklyn City & N. R. Co. 32 App. Div. 313, 52 N. Y. Supp. 1025, holding right of railroad to lease tracks cannot be impaired in hands of lessee, either by legislation or change in Constitution, except under right of eminent domain.

Cited in footnotes to International Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Hardy, 24 L. R. A. 284, which denies legislative power to change remedy for enforcing trust deed; Kirkman v. Bird, 58 L. R. A. 670, which sustains, as to prior obligations, statute exempting wages for sixty days preceding levy.

Distinguished in People ex rel. Schurz v. Cook, 148 U. S. 410, 37 L. ed. 503, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 645, holding statute imposing tax on corporation organized to purchase property pursuant to authority previously conferred by legislature violates no contract.

Retroactive operation of statutes.

Cited in Geneva & W. R. Co. v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 163 N. Y. 232, 57 N. E. 498, holding procedure by which street railway may acquire right to cross steam railroad not affected by statute enacted after commencement of proceedings; Walker v. Walker, 155 N. Y. 82, 49 N. E. 663, holding statute authorizing change in decree of divorce as to alimony, after final judgment, not retroactive; Re Delaware & H. Canal Co. 129 N. Y. 112, 29 N. E. 237, holding statute providing fraudulent or defective assessment for taxation may be vacated or reduced by county judge, applicable to future assessments only; Mahoney v. Bernhardt, 27 Misc. 345, 58 N. Y. Supp. 748, holding statute requiring action to enforce individual liability of stockholders of dissolved bank to be brought by permanent receiver not applicable to action previously begun by creditors; Barnes v. Arnold, 23 Misc. 208, 51 N. Y. Supp. 1109, holding banking law, 1892, making bank stockholders individually liable for debts of corporation, not applicable to debts previously contracted.

Cited in footnote to Jones v. German Ins. Co. 46 L. R. A. 860, which sustains statute shortening time of insurance company's immunity from suit without extending period of limitations.

Distinguished in Re Brooklyn, 73 Hun, 506, 26 N. Y. Supp. 198, holding franchise of water company not increased by annexation act, requiring purchase of property before annexing city can extend waterworks into annexed territory.

Due process of law.

Cited in Re Muehlfeld, 16 App. Div. 403, 45 N. Y. Supp. 16, holding assignee of corporation not required to deliver property to receiver appointed in proceeding to which he was not party; Brooks v. Tayntor, 17 Misc. 539, 40 N. Y. Supp. 445, holding statute authorizing claimant of unpaid purchase money for monument to remove and sell same at auction, without legal process or hearing, unconstitutional; People ex rel. Nisbet v. Amsterdam, 90 Hun, 495, 36 N. Y. Supp. 59, holding investigation of claim against city by committee designated by law, without affording claimant opportunity to participate, not due process of law; Buffalo v. Chadeayne, 27 N. Y. S. R. 63, 7 N. Y. Supp. 501, Affirmed 134 N. Y. 165, 31 N. E. 443, holding rescission, after work commenced, and without notice of permit to build frame houses within fire limit, is taking property without due process of law.

Cited in footnote to Carleton v. Rugg, 5 L. R. A. 193, which holds statute authorizing injunction against liquor nuisance does not unlawfully deprive of property or privileges.

Cited in notes (5 L. R. A. 359; 11 L. R. A. 224; 13 L. R. A. 68) on due process of law.

Appointment of receiver.

Cited in note (6 L. R. A. 792) on appointment of receivers in general.

Powers of municipal corporations.

Cited in Mt. Hope Cemetery v. Boston, 158 Mass. 512, 35 Am. St. Rep. 515. 33 N. E. 695, holding cities may have private ownership of property which cannot be wholly controlled by state government.

Distinguished in New Orleans, City & Lake R. Co. v. New Orleans, 44 La. Ann. 733, 11 So. 78, holding city without power to make exclusive grant of right to use streets for railway, unless expressly conferred by legislature; Detroit v. Detroit City R. Co. 56 Fed. 888, holding city council cannot grant vested right to build and operate street railway.

2 L. R. A. 270, POWELL v. OREGONIAN R. CO. 13 Sawy. 535.

Stockholders' liability for corporate acts.

Cited in Kelly v. Clark, 21 Mont. 343, 42 L. R. A. 635, 69 Am. St. Rep. 668. 53 Pac. 959, holding stockholders liable for tortious acts of company after judgment against it, coupled with insolvency.

Cited in footnotes to Rider v. Fritchey, 15 L. R. A. 513, which holds stockholder assigning to insolvent person not relieved from liability; Powell v. Oregonian R. Co. 3 L. R. A. 201, which holds judgment against corporation conclusive against stockholder.

2 L. R. A. 273, FARMERS DEPOSIT NAT. BANK v. PENN BANK, 123 Pa. 283, '16 Atl. 761.

Set-off to claims of bank.

Cited in Salladin v. Mitchell, 42 Neb. 863, 61 N. W. 127, holding certificate of deposit may be set off against mortgagee held by assignee of insolvent bank; Stone v. Dodge, 96 Mich. 516, 21 L. R. A. 284. 56 N. W. 75, holding certificate of deposit of debtor of insolvent bank could not be set off against action by receiver; Thompson v. Union Trust Co. 130 Mich. 510, 97 Am. St. Rep. 494. 90 N. W. 294, holding deposit may be set off against depositor's notes to insolvent bank, not due at time of insolvency.

Cited in footnotes to Grissom v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 3 L. R. A. 273, which holds bank has no right to pay to third party note made by depositor; Henry v. Allen, 36 L. R. A. 658, which holds cashier's check negotiable.

2 L. R. A. 277, TURNER v. STEPHENSON, 72 Mich. 409, 40 N. W. 735.

How adverse possession shown.

Cited in Walsh v. Wheelwright, 96 Me. 190, 52 Atl. 649, holding adverse occupation of part of land must be shown to extend that occupation to adjoining land.

Distinguished in Clark v. Campau, 92 Mich. 578, 52 N. W. 1026, holding adverse possession by occupation of part of land shown.

2 L. R. A. 278, ST. LOUIS v. BELL TELEPH. CO. 96 Mo. 623, 9 Am. St. Rep. 370, 10 S. W. 197.

Power to prescribe rates for public-service corporations.

Cited in Re Pryor, 55 Kan. 729, 29 L. R. A. 400, 49 Am. St. Rep. 280, 41 Pac. 958, holding ordinance fixing maximum gas rates to private consumers invalid:

State ex rel. Wisconsin Teleph. Co. v. Sheboygan, 111 Wis. 39, 86 N. W. 657, holding power to regulate rates of telephone company is not included in power to regulate use of streets; Wabaska Electric Co. v. Wymore, 60 Neb. 202, 82 N. W. 626, holding city of second class without authority to regulate electric light charges to private consumers when not expressly conferred; Crosby v. Montgomery, 108 Ala. 504, 18 So. 723, holding ordinance fixing water rates under power granted subsequent to contract with water company does not take away vested right, nor deprive of due process of law; Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co. v. Bowling Green, 57 Ohio St. 345, 41 L. R. A. 427, 49 N. E. 121, holding electric lighting company with franchise from town cannot arbitrarily fix rates for lighting.

Cited in notes (5 L. R. A. 161) on state regulation of telephone companies; (33 L. R. A. 181) on legislative power to fix tolls, rates, or prices of public-service corporations; (31 L. R. A. 803) on police regulation of electric companies.

Charter limitations of cities.

Cited in Nevada use of Gilfillan v. Eddy, 123 Mo. 558, 27 S. W. 471; State ex rel. St. Louis Underground Service Co. v. Murphy, 134 Mo. 574, 34 L. R. A. 374, 56 Am. St. Rep. 515, 34 S. W. 51 (supplemental opinion); Markley v. Mineral City, 58 Ohio St. 439, 65 Am. St. Rep. 776, 51 N. E. 28; Union Depot R. Co. v. Southern R. Co. 105 Mo. 575, 16 S. W. 920, — holding city can exercise only such powers as are expressly granted, necessarily implied, or essential to declared purposes of corporation; State ex rel. Peck v. Hermann, 84 Mo. App. 10, holding charter provisions for security to city for works of construction cannot be changed by ordinance; Plattsburg v. Trimble, 46 Mo. App. 461, holding city of fourth class may impose penalty upon keeper of billiard table for permitting minor to play without consent of parents.

— Construction of powers.

Cited in Knapp v. Kansas City, 48 Mo. App. 492, holding reasonable doubt concerning existence of power to be resolved against corporation; Houstonia v. Grubbs, 80 Mo. App. 437, holding doubt as to authority to create tax lien upon abutting property should be resolved against lien; St. Paul v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 63 Minn. 346, 34 L. R. A. 188, 65 N. W. 649, holding doubt as to power to grant privileges in streets to be resolved against municipality; Tacoma Gas & Electric Light Co. v. Tacoma, 14 Wash. 291, 44 Pac. 655, holding delegation of power will not be presumed in favor of municipal corporation, unless necessary to corporate existence; Carthage v. Carthage Light Co. 97 Mo. App. 24, 70 S. W. 936, holding authorization of city to grant franchise to light streets by gas does not give power to grant electric lighting franchise.

— Regulating use of streets.

Cited in State ex rel. St. Louis Underground Service Co. v. Murphy, 134 Mo. 561, 34 L. R. A. 374, 56 Am. St. Rep. 515, 34 S. W. 51, holding, under power to regulate streets, city may permit erection of telegraph and telephone poles; State ex rel. National Subway Co. v. St. Louis, 145 Mo. 588, 42 L. R. A. 126, 46 S. W. 981, holding use of street for telephone poles not private use; St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 149 U. S. 471, 37 L. ed. 814, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 990, holding city of St. Louis may impose upon telegraph company charge for use of street for poles; State ex rel. National Subway Co. v. St. Louis, 145 Mo. 574, 42 L. R. A. 126, 49 S. W. 981, holding city has no concern with right of telephone company to charge tolls, or making of agreements with other companies for the use of its subway.

Cited in note (24 L. R. A. 722) on telegraph or telephone poles as additional burden on highway.

— Street improvements.

Cited in Guinotte v. Egelhoff, 64 Mo. App. 367, holding proceedings for improvement of street at expense of abutting property must strictly conform to statute; Sedalia Gaslight Co. v. Mercer, 48 Mo. 651, holding ordinance providing indemnity fund from sewer tax for payment of damages from sewer construction not within powers; Kansas City v. Bacon, 147 Mo. 318, 48 S. W. 860 (dissenting opinion), majority holding Kansas City has power to condemn land for park, and assess cost to district.

Revisory power of courts over ordinances.

Cited in Tarkio v. Cook, 120 Mo. 9, 42 Am. St. Rep. 678, 25 S. W. 202, holding ordinances subject to revision in respect to existence of power, and whether reasonably exercised.

2 L. R. A. 281, GULF, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. SMITH, 72 Tex. 122, 9 S. W. 865.

What covenants run with land.

Cited in Ft. Wayne Water Power Co. v. Allen County, 24 Ind. App. 519, 57 N. E. 146, holding duty imposed upon trustees to keep bridges in repair over canal not covenant running with land; Ruddick v. St. Louis, K. & N. W. R. Co. 116 Mo. 30, 38 Am. St. Rep. 570, 22 S. W. 499, holding covenants in deeds to railroad to furnish passes, coupled with condition of forfeiture, run with the land.

Cited in footnotes to Mott v. Oppenheimer, 17 L. R. A. 409, which construes as running with the land agreement for party wall, expressly declared to run with land; Doty v. Chattanooga Union R. Co. 48 L. R. A. 160, which holds covenant for running certain trains binding on subsequent purchaser of railroad; Brown v. Southern Pacific Co. 47 L. R. A. 409, which holds covenant by grantors for railroad to build fences, or not hold company for injury to stock, personal only.

2 L. R. A. 282, INNIS v. CEDAR RAPIDS, I. F. & N. W. R. CO. 76 Iowa, 165, 40 N. W. 701.

When nuisance abated.

Cited in Fogg v. Nevada C. O. R. Co. 20 Nev. 435, 23 Pac. 840, holding public nuisance in construction of railroad will not be abated, unless special damage to complainant shown; Redway v. Moore, 3 Idaho, 320, 29 Pac. 104, holding house of prostitution will not be enjoined, unless special damage shown.

Cited in footnote to State v. Stark, 54 L. R. A. 910, which denies right of private person to abate liquor nuisance without process of law.

Cited in notes (9 L. R. A. 715) on abatement of nuisance by action; (6 L. R. A. 255) on improper use of street by railroad company; (59 L. R. A. 83) on right to obstruct or destroy rights of navigation.

2 L. R. A. 284, RICHLAND & D. R. CO. v. REIDSVILLE, 101 N. C. 404, 8 S. E. 124.

Appeal.

Cited in Thornton v. Lambeth, 103 N. C. 89, 9 S. E. 432, dismissing appeal, with opinion on new matter introduced.

Power of municipality to require licenses.

Cited in footnotes to Perry v. Salt Lake City, 11 L. R. A. 446, which holds city council has wide discretion as to granting of licenses; Hoefling v. San Antonio, 16 L. R. A. 608, which holds city cannot levy occupation tax on persons not similarly taxed by state; State ex rel. Beek v. Wagener, 46 L. R. A. 442, which sustains statute regulating business of commission merchants handling agricultural products; State v. Robinson, 6 L. R. A. 339, which construes charter provision as to licensing hackmen, etc., as not applying to one hiring rigs to persons using same; Knoxville & O. R. Co. v. Harris, 53 L. R. A. 921, which holds exemption from privilege tax not included in exemption from ad valorem tax.

Cited in notes (4 L. R. A. 810) on license fees, not taxes; (6 L. R. A. 509; 9 L. R. A. 787) on license of occupations and privileged taxes; (60 L. R. A. 340, 346, 355) on constitutional equality in the United States in relation to corporate taxation; (60 L. R. A. 687) on corporate taxation and the commerce clause.

2 L. R. A. 285, BOWLING v. BURTON, 101 N. C. 176, 7 S. E. 701.

Rights passing with title.

Cited in Scheel v. Alhambra Min. Co. 79 Fed. 825, holding grant of tunnel rights with appurtenances includes, by implication, every necessary incident and appurtenance thereto; Scott v. Michael, 129 Ind. 254, 28 N. E. 546, holding right to maintain milldam as when conveyed, part of thing sold.

Defective statement of good cause of action.

Cited in Mizzell v. Ruffin, 118 N. C. 71, 23 S. E. 927, holding insufficient statement of good cause of action cured if not demurred to.

2 L. R. A. 287, HEYE v. NORTH GERMAN LLOYD, 36 Fed. 705.

General average.

Cited in Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 413, 39 L. ed. 753, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657, Reversing 37 Fed. 894, holding claim of general average not sustained when fire put out by order of port commissioners.

2 L. R. A. 289, KENTUCKY & I. BRIDGE CO. v. LOUISVILLE & N. R. CO. 37 Fed. 567.

Pleadings.

Cited in Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 83 Fed. 251, holding rules of pleading and practice apply to equity proceeding to enforce commission order.

Power of United States courts under Act to Regulate Commerce.

Cited in Interstate Commerce Commission v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 50 Fed. 304; Shinkle, W. & K. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 62 Fed. 693; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 56 Fed. 935; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 49 Fed. 180,—holding Interstate Commerce Commission's findings of fact not conclusive in Federal court; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Southern P. Co. 123 Fed. 601, holding court, in suit to enforce order of Interstate Commerce Commission, is not limited to issues of evidence before Commission; United States v. Missouri P. R. Co. 65 Fed. 907, defining district attorney's power to institute proceedings, under amendment, to enforce Interstate Commerce Act; Detroit G. H. & M. R. Co. v. Inter- state Commerce Commission, 21 C. C. A. 141, 43 U. S. App. 308, 74 Fed. 841, holding court can only grant or refuse compulsory obedience to Commission's orders; Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 47 Fed. 773, holding Federal court has jurisdiction of subject-matter arising under Interstate Commerce Act; Tift v. Southern R. Co. 123 Fed. 793, sustaining jurisdiction of United States circuit court, in cases arising under Interstate Commerce Act, irrespective of citizenship of parties.

Distinguished in Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 112 Fed. 827, holding remedies under §§ 8, 9, of Interstate Commerce Act exclusive.

What constitutes common carriers.

Distinguished in Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. South Covington & C. Street R. Co. 93 Ky. 141, 15 L. R. A. 829, 19 S. W. 403, holding toll company cannot exclude from bridge horse cars offering fair toll.

Requirement as to reasonable facilities.

Cited in Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 63 L. R. A. 217, 55 C. C. A. 68, 118 Fed. 118, holding carrier with reasonable facilities for delivery and care of stock may refuse delivery elsewhere.

Unlawful regulation of commerce.

Cited in Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 592, 43 L. ed. 296, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40, Reversing 82 Fed. 539, holding charges for facilities furnished not a regulation of commerce; Minnesota v. Northern Securities Co. 123 Fed. 700, holding corporation organized to hold stock of two competing railroads does not violate state law against combination in restraint of commerce.

Distinguished in Inman v. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. 14 Tex. Civ. App. 52, 37 S. W. 37, holding carrier bound, upon payment of freight, to deliver goods to connecting carrier chosen by him.

Unforbidden discriminations and preferences.

Cited in footnote to Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. St. Louis & S. W. R. Co. 26 L. R. A. 192, which holds not undue disadvantage to require prepayment of freight charges by connecting carriers without requiring from other shippers or carriers.

Reasonable and just charges.

Cited in Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 83 Fed. 259, holding reasonableness and justice sole requirements upon rates.

Right to track connections.

Cited in Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. 26 L. R. A. 195, 11 C. C. A. 422, 27 U. S. App. 380, 63 Fed. 778, Affirming 59 Fed. 402, and Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 51 Fed. 473, holding common carrier not required to furnish use of tracks or terminal facilities to another carrier.

Cited in footnote to Re Stillwater & M. Street R. Co. 59 L. R. A. 489, which holds electric railways entitled to track connections with intersecting steam roads.

Through routes and through rates.

Cited in Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 765, 41 Fed. 563, holding court has no power to compel railroad companies to make joint through rates.

Cited in footnote to Jacobson v. Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. 40 L. R. A. 389, which sustains making of joint rates for through shipments over connecting railroads.

Cited in notes (12 L. R. A. 437) on carriers as to through traffic rates; (12 L. R. A. 438) as to connection with bridge company.

Discrimination in rates and charges.

Cited in Post v. Southern R. Co. 103 Tenn. 207, 55 L. R. A. 487, 52 S. W. 301; State ex rel. Board of Transportation v. Sioux City, O. & W. R. Co. 46 Neb. 699, 31 L. R. A. 53, 65 N. W. 766; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Nelson. 4 Tex. Civ. App. 349, 23 S. W. 732; Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 192 U. S. 570, 48 L. ed. 569, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339, Affirming 63 L. R. A. 217, 55 C. C. A. 68, 118 Fed. 119,—holding railroad having stock yards under no obligation to accept shipment from other states consigned to stock yards of physically connected railroad in same city; Paxton & H. Irrig. Canal & Land Co. v. Farmers' & M. Irrig. & Land Co. 45 Neb. 901, 29 L. R. A. 858, 50 Am. St. Rep. 585, 64 N. W. 343, and Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Miami S. S. Co. 30 C. C. A. 154, 52 U. S. App. 132, 86 Fed. 419, holding carrier not bound to make similar through-rate contracts with connecting lines; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Osborne, 3 C. C. A. 350, 10 U. S. App. 430, 52 Fed. 915, holding connecting companies not bound to abandon full control of separate roads or unite in joint tariff.

Contracts with connecting lines for through rates.

Cited in Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Whitehead, 6 Tex. Civ. App. 598, 26 S. W. 172, holding receipt of out-of-state shipment from connecting line not alone an act of interstate commerce.

Who may complain of discrimination.

Cited in Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 9 C. C. A. 412, 15 U. S. App. 479, 61 Fed. 161, holding that discrimination as to freight prepayment against traffic and localities by one railroad company cannot be invoked by another company.

Powers of Congress.

Cited in Bullard v. Northern P. R. Co. 10 Mont. 179, 11 L. R. A. 249, 25 Pac. 120, holding constitutionality of act not affected because incidentally preventing enforcement of pre-existing contracts.

2 L. R. A. 328, DRUCKER v. WELLHOUSE, 82 Ga. 129, 8 S. E. 40.

Partnership as legal entity.

Cited in Green v. Willingham, 100 Ga. 226, 28 S. E. 42, holding judgment against partnership, erroneous where members are different from those alleged in complaint; Page v. Citizens' Bkg. Co. 111 Ga. 79, 51 L. R. A. 471, 78 Am. St. Rep. 144, 36 S. E. 418, holding partnership may be liable in action for malicious prosecution; Marlow v. Hughes Lumber Co. 92 Ga. 554, 17 S. E. 922, holding petition by partnership for certiorari properly dismissed where affidavit showing reason for dispensing with bond was made by partner as individual.

When partnership deemed insolvent.

Cited in Ransom v. Wardlaw, 99 Ga. 542, 27 S. E. 158, holding creditor's petition against partnership as insolvent lies, though member be solvent.

Partnership assignments not including individual property.

Cited in Birdsall, W. & P. Mfg. Co. v. Schwarz, 3 App. Div. 304, 38 N. Y. Supp. 368, holding judgment creditors, and not assignee of partnership, may attack conveyance of individual partner's property; Wilson v. Sullivan, 17 Utah, 348. 53 Pac. 994, holding partnership assignment need not include individual property of partners.

Distinguished in McCord-Brady Co. v. Mills, 8 Wyo. 265, 46 L. R. A. 741, footnote, p. 737, 56 Pac. 1003, holding partnership assignment for creditors, not including separate property, void.

Effect on assignment of preference to attorney.

Cited in Bank of Little Rock v. Frank, 63 Ark. 27, 58 Am. St. Rep. 65, 37 S. W. 400, holding preference in favor of attorney for services to be rendered in connection therewith will not avoid entire assignment; Cortland Wagon Co. v. Gordy, 98 Ga. 530, 25 S. E. 574, sustaining mortgage given by insolvent trader to attorneys for services to be rendered in litigation over winding up of his affairs.

2 L. R. A. 332, Re CHAPMAN, 37 Fed. 327.

Enlistment of minor.

Cited in Re Falconer, 91 Fed. 650, discharging enlisted minor on his father's application.

Cited as overruled in United States v. Reaves, 60 C. C. A. 680, 126 Fed. 132. Reversing 121 Fed. 850, holding minor's enlistment in Navy without father's consent voidable only, and at father's instance.

2 L. R. A. 334, BARRY v. GUILD, 126 Ill. 439, 18 N. E. 759.

Covenants in deeds.

Cited in Cream City Mirror Plate Co. v. Swedish Bldg. & L. Asso. 74 Ill. App. 366, holding no eviction where vendee's possession of fixture and title were undisturbed.

Cited in footnotes to Mygatt v. Coe, 11 L. R. A. 646, which holds covenants of warranty and quiet enjoyment by owner and husband do not run with land as against husband; Mott v. Oppenheimer, 17 L. R. A. 409, which construes as running with the land agreement for party wall expressly declared to run with land; Wiggins v. Pender, 61 L. R. A. 772, which holds assignee entitled to benefit of covenant of warranty not naming him, if assigns named in habendum clause of deed.

Cited in note (6 L. R. A. 107) on covenants defined and construed.

2 L. R. A. 336, PERIN v. PARKER, 126 Ill. 201, 9 Am. St. Rep. 571, 18 N. E. 747.

Implied knowledge of usages and customs of the business.

Cited in Pardridge v. Cutler, 68 Ill. App. 573, holding person dealing with board of trade intends business to be conducted according to its usage and custom.

Implied undertaking to indemnify, and promise to pay.

Cited in Bibb v. Allen, 149 U. S. 501, 37 L. ed. 827, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 950, holding employing broker to sell for future delivery implies undertaking to indemnify, and promise to reimburse; Re Filer, 125 Fed. 263, holding claim against employee inducing employers, by pretended orders from customers, to purchase stocks for his benefit, provable in bankruptcy.

Waiver.

Cited in Keller v. Robinson, 153 Ill. 468, 38 N. E. 1072, holding stipulation as to nature of defense in replevin no waiver of demand; Star Brewery Co. v. Primas, 163 Ill. 662, 45 N. E. 145, holding proof must be clear to show waiver of covenant, verbally or by acquiescence.

Harmless error in instructions.

Cited in Hayes v. Todd, 34 Fla. 243, 15 So. 752, holding charge unobjected to as error of law harmless, judgment being only proper one.

2 L. R. A. 340, PEOPLE v. PEOPLE'S INS. EXCHANGE, 126 Ill. 466, 18 N. E. 774.

Who are agents of insured.

Cited in United Firemen's Ins. Co. v. Thomas, 47 L. R. A. 456, 34 C. C. A. 244, 92 Fed. 131, holding agent in fact of insured was not agent of insurer under statute; Continental Ins. Co. v. Ruckman, 127 Ill. 377, 11 Am. St. Rep. 121, 20 N. E. 77, holding clerk of general agent might insert, in policy, clause relating to nonoccupancy.

Cited in note (8 L. R. A. 129) on foreign insurance companies; conditions imposed by statute.

Licensing insurance companies.

Cited in Indiana Millers' Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. People, 65 Ill. App. 358, holding foreign insurance company can be prohibited from doing business without license.

What questions are for jury.

Cited in Roberts v. Chicago & G. T. R. Co. 78 Ill. App. 529, and Groszewski v. Chicago Sugar Ref. Co. 84 Ill. App. 587, holding instruction to find, error; McClary v. Warner, 69 Ill. App. 225, holding instruction to jury to find is error if evidence sufficient; Finley v. West Chicago Street R. Co. 90 Ill. App. 370, holding court may direct verdict if evidence insufficient; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Meyer, 65 Ill. App. 535, holding insufficiency of unsupported verdict question of law; National Syrup Co. v. Carlson, 155 Ill. 216, 40 N. E. 492, holding instruction to find for defendant should be refused if facts sustain verdict; Goldie v. Werner, 151 Ill. 555, 38 N. E. 95, holding case should have been submitted to jury; Cohen v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 104 Ill. App. 322, holding evidence for jury which tends to prove locomotive bell was not rung nor whistle sounded.

Practice.

Cited in Hopkins v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. 96 Tenn. 432, 32 L. R. A. 361, 34 S. W. 1029, holding demurrer to evidence proper practice when facts undisputed.

Cited in notes (20 L. R. A. 409) as to criminal prosecutions when the statutes regulating the business of foreign insurance companies have not been complied with; (10 L. R. A. 237) on directing verdict under scintilla doctrine; (4 L. R. A. 776, 778) on practice in trial directing verdict where municipal regulations of rate of speed of railroads is in question.

2 L. R. A. 343, ARTMAN v. FERGUSON, 73 Mich. 146, 16 Am. St. Rep. 572, 40 N. W. 907.

Partnership between husband and wife.

Cited in Haggett v. Hurley, 91 Me. 557, 41 L. R. A. 367, 40 Atl. 561; Chamberlain v. Murrin, 92 Mich. 365, 52 N. W. 640; Vail v. Winterstein, 94 Mich. 233, 18 L. R. A. 517, 34 Am. St. Rep. 334, 53 N. W. 932; Board of Trade v. Hayden, 4 Wash. 269, 16 L. R. A. 533, 31 Am. St. Rep. 924, 30 Pac. 87; Fuller & F. Co. v. McHenry, 83 Wis. 581, 18 L. R. A. 515, 53 N. W. 896; Doolittle v. Gavagan, 74 Mich. 14, 41 N. W. 846, — holding husband and wife cannot become copartners; Hoffman v. Goldsmith, 131 Mich. 295, 91 N. W. 158, denying liability of wife holding bill of sale as security for saloon fixtures furnished on husband's credit; Suau v. Caffé, 122 N. Y. 319, 9 L. R. A. 596, 25 N. E. 488 (dissenting opinion), majority holding wife liable upon debt contracted with husband in business carried on by them as partners.

Cited in notes (9 L. R. A. 593; 16 L. R. A. 527) on partnership between husband and wife.

Distinguished in Hoaglin v. Henderson, 119 Iowa, 725, 61 L. R. A. 756, 97 Am. St. Rep. 335, 94 N. W. 247, holding wife may become husband's business partner, under married woman's enabling acts.

Joint contracts of husband and wife.

Cited in Caldwell v. Jones, 115 Mich. 130, 73 N. W. 129, holding wife not liable on note given for property purchased jointly.

Cited in footnote to Yerkes v. Hadley, 2 L. R. A. 363, which holds married woman, executing mortgage with husband, estopped from setting up subsequently acquired title.

Contracts of married women in relation to joint property.

Cited in Speier v. Opfer, 73 Mich. 39, 2 L. R. A. 348, 16 Am. St. Rep. 556, 40 N. W. 909, holding wife not liable upon contract for improvement of property held jointly with husband.

Contracts of married women as to separate property.

Cited in Chamberlain v. Murrin, 92 Mich. 365, 52 N. W. 640, holding married woman may contract for purchase or sale of property.

Cited in footnote to Vail v. Winterstein, 18 L. R. A. 515, which holds married woman may enter firm in which husband not a partner.

Cited in note (2 L. R. A. 347) on statutes removing disability of married women to contract.

Contracts between husband and wife.

Cited in Corcoran v. Corcoran, 119 Ind. 140, 4 L. R. A. 783, 12 Am. St. Rep. 391, 21 N. E. 468, holding contract of wife to support husband in consideration of conveyance invalid.

Action by married women for tort.

Cited in Bandfield v. Bandfield, 117 Mich. 83, 40 L. R. A. 759, 72 Am. St. Rep. 550, 75 N. W. 287, holding action cannot be maintained against husband, after divorce, for tort committed during coverture.

2 L. R. A. 345, SPEIER v. OPFER, 73 Mich. 35, 16 Am. St. Rep. 556, 40 N. W. 909.

Contracts of married women in general.

Cited in footnotes to Roop v. Real Estate Investment Co. 7 L. R. A. 211, which holds married woman not empowered to bind herself by judgment note; Wilder v. Wilder, 9 L. R. A. 97, which holds married woman estopped to claim vendor's lien by representing that one loaning to vendee should have first mortgage; Hunt v. Reilly, 59 L. R. A. 206, which holds wife's failure to notify purchaser of rights after learning of forgery of her name to husband's deed does not estop her to claim dower.

Cited in notes (7 L. R. A. 640) on wife's capacity to contract; (2 L. R. A. 343) on power of married woman to enter into partnership; (4 L. R. A. 334; 8 L. R. A. 407) on estoppel of married woman.

Conveyance to husband and wife jointly, nature of estate.

Cited in Re Lewis, 85 Mich. 345, 24 Am. St. Rep. 94, 48 N. W. 580, holding that husband and wife take as tenants by entireties; Dickey v. Converse, 117 Mich. 455, 72 Am. St. Rep. 568, 76 N. W. 80, holding crops grown on lands subject to same law as land, and exempt from execution against either tenant; Michigan Beef & Provision Co. v. Coll, 116 Mich. 262, 74 N. W. 475, holding that husband has no separable portion in estate so as to make his testimony competent against his half of land; Fowles v. Hayden, 130 Mich. 50, 89 N. W. 571, holding that wife cannot recover for trespass to land owned by entireties.

Cited in footnote to Re Albrecht, 18 L. R. A. 329, which denies tenancy by entirety in bond and mortgage to husband and wife.

Contracts of married women in relation to joint property.

Cited in Doane v. Feather, 119 Mich. 693, 78 N. W. 885, and Curtis v. Crowe, 74 Mich. 100, 41 N. W. 876, holding contract for erection of building on property owned jointly with husband invalid.

Cited in note (30 L. R. A. 329) on disposition or encumbrance of entirety property.

Joint contracts of husband and wife.

Cited in Doane v. Feather, 119 Mich. 692, 78 N. W. 884, and Caldwell v. Jones, 115 Mich. 130, 73 N. W. 129, holding wife not liable on note given with husband for property purchased jointly; Kohn v. Collison, 1 Marv. (Del.) 113, 27 Atl. 834, holding married woman not liable upon indorsement of husband's note, given for his debts.

Cited in footnotes to Yerkes v. Hadley, 2 L. R. A. 363, which holds married woman, executing mortgage with husband, estopped from setting up subsequently acquired title.

Disapproved, in effect, in Schofield v. Jones, 85 Ga. 823, 11 S. E. 1032, holding pledge of wife's separate property as security for joint lease, valid.

Contracts between husband and wife.

Cited in Gilkerson-Sloss Commission Co. v. Salinger, 56 Ark. 297, 16 L. R. A. 529, 35 Am. St. Rep. 105, 19 S. W. 747, holding married woman cannot form partnership with husband.

Cited in footnote to National Granite Bank v. Tyndale, 51 L. R. A. 447, which holds relief by way of estoppel not available to holders of notes of married woman who had received proceeds, against defense that they were void because payable to husband, who indorsed them.

Cited in note (16 L. R. A. 527) on partnership between husband and wife.

2 L. R. A. 349, HARRIS v. CORLIES, CHAPMAN & DRAKE, 40 Minn. 106, 41 N. W. 940.

Effect on tenant's liability of untenable condition.

Cited in Railton v. Taylor, 20 R. I. 283, 39 L. R. A. 248, 38 Atl. 980, holding lessor not exempted by term of lease from liability for his own negligence.

Cited in notes (53 L. R. A. 673) on what constitutes damage "by the elements" within the meaning of contracts with stipulations referring thereto; (9 L. R. A. 799) on agreement by landlord to keep premises in repair.

2 L. R. A. 350, STATE, DARCY, PROSECUTRIX, v. DARCY, 51 N. J. L. 140, 16 Atl. 160.

Affirmed, without opinion, in 52 N. J. L. 222, 20 Atl. 319.

When property taxable.

Cited in Holland v. Silver Bow County, 15 Mont. 462, 27 L. R. A. 798, 39 Pac. 575, holding mortgages on land within, but owned without, state not taxable; State ex rel. Dwinnell v. Gaylord, 73 Wis. 325, 41 N. W. 521, holding mortgages owned by resident, on nonresident lands and in hands of nonresident agent, not taxable; Savings & Loan Soc. v. Multnomah County, 169 U. S. 428, 42 L. ed. 805, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392, holding act taxing nonresident mortgagee's interest in land as real estate valid; State, Smith, Prosecutor, v. Ramsey, 54 N. J. L. 548, 24 Atl. 445, holding assessment for taxes upon stock of foreign corporation held by resident void.

2 L. R. A. 353, GRIFFIN v. MACON COUNTY, 36 Fed. 885.

Coupons as instruments distinct from bond.

Cited in footnotes to Internal Improvement Fund v. Lewis, 26 L. R. A. 743, which holds interest coupons on negotiable bonds transferable separately by delivery; Internal Improvement Fund v. Lewis, 26 L. R. A. 743, which holds cancellation or payment of bond before maturity does not affect rights of bona fide holder of coupon.

Cited in note (6 L. R. A. 562, 563) on coupons as distinct and separate instruments.

2 L. R. A. 355, BACON v. HORNE, 123 Pa. 452, 16 Atl. 794.

Transfer of title to personal property.

Cited in Loftus v. Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank, 133 Pa. 112, 7 L. R. A. 315, 19 Atl. 347, holding state may regulate transfer of personal property within its borders; Van Wyck v. Read, 43 Fed. 718, and De Turck v. Woefel, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 270, holding Maryland debt of Pennsylvania corporation passes to assignee of creditor, and not subsequently attachable in Pennsylvania; Hilliard v. Enders & Co. 196 Pa. 593, 46 Atl. 839, holding foreign general assignment passes title to assignor's personalty in sister state; Swedish-American Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 89 Minn. 115, 99 Am. St. Rep. 549, 94 N. W. 218, holding obiter, creditors residing in debtor's state cannot acquire lien by attaching grain in another state, as against assignee for creditors.

Comity of states.

Cited in Wing v. Bradner, 162 Pa. 77, 29 Atl. 291, and Long v. Girdwood, 150 Pa. 419, 23 L. R. A. 47, 24 Atl. 711, holding foreign creditor cannot obtain preference in Pennsylvania over foreign assignment for creditors; Deni v. Penn- sylvania R. Co. 181 Pa. 529, 59 Am. St. Rep. 676, 37 Atl. 558, holding statutory cause of action not available to resident of foreign state; E. F. Kirwan Mfg. Co. v. Truxton, 2 Penn. (Del.) 60, 44 Atl. 427, holding foreign corporation in hands of foreign receiver cannot sue in its own name in Pennsylvania; Gilman v. Ketcham, 84 Wis. 68, 23 L. R. A. 57, 36 Am. St. Rep. 899, 54 N. W. 395, holding foreign creditor enjoined from suit in his own state cannot sue in Pennsylvania; Lett v. Thurber Whyland Co. 15 Pa. Co. Ct. 669, 4 Pa. Dist. R. 241, upholding claim of resident debtor as against foreign receiver.

Cited in notes (2 L. R. A. 328) on contract as to conflict of laws; (6 L. R. A. 108; 8 L. R. A. 170) on law of place as governing validity of contract; (17 L. R. A. 85) on supremacy of state or nation over devolution of property, as to law of domicile governing validity of assignment; (23 L. R. A. 38) on transfer of property out of the state by bankruptcy or insolvency proceedings or assignment for creditors.

2 L. R. A. 357, UNDERWOOD v. GERBER, 37 Fed. 682.

Motion to amend and leave to take proofs in 37 Fed. 796.

Prior patent covering process alleged to be infringed.

Cited in Universal Winding Co. v. Willimantic Linen Co. 82 Fed. 239, holding no infringement where there is a prior process patent of device alleged to be infringed.

— Right to use of universal knowledge.

Affirmed in 149 U. S. 224, 37 L. ed. 710, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 854, holding plaintiff's patent devoid of patentable novelty or invention.

Cited in Bowman v. De Grauw, 60 Fed. 910, holding application for patent must be read in light of all knowledge of the world.

2 L. R. A. 359, Re UNION ELEV. R. CO. 112 N. Y. 61, 19 N. E. 664.

Condemnation proceedings.

Cited in Rochester & H. Valley R. Co. v. Rochester, 17 App. Div. 260, 45 N. Y. Supp. 687, holding railroad lands cannot be taken for public street by general condemnation law; Re Mt. Vernon, 34 Misc. 231, 68 N. Y. Supp. 823, holding appointment of commissioners to condemn necessarily includes fact that improvement was allowed; Re Buffalo, 46 N. Y. S. R. 83, 18 N. Y. Supp. 771, Reversing 39 N. Y. S. R. 284, 15 N. Y. Supp. 858, holding city court had no jurisdiction of proceedings to take land outside of city for park purposes.

Notice of public proceedings.

Cited in Re Mt. Vernon, 34 Misc. 230, 231, 68 N. Y. Supp. 823, holding notice by publication effectual to confer jurisdiction in street opening; Appleton v. Newton, 178 Mass. 282, 59 N. E. 648, holding constructive notice by filing instrument taking land for public use, coupled with time to protect rights thereafter, sufficient; Re Oneida Street Opening, 22 Misc. 237, 49 N. Y. Supp. 828, holding mortgagee of land to be taken for street entitled to notice; Hornellsville Electric R. Co. v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 83 Hun, 411, 31 N. Y. Supp. 745, holding jurisdiction acquired by service of petition with notice to extend surface railroad tracks; Hennessey v. Volkening, 30 Abb. N. C. 110, 22 N. Y. Supp. 533, holding notice essential in tax proceedings; Robert v. Kings County, 3 App. Div. 369, 38 N. Y. Supp. 521, holding statutory notice was complied with in assessment proceedings; Re Hirsh, 14 Misc. 380, 36 N. Y. Supp. 19, holding legality of ballot established by requirement to have sample ballots open to public inspection, and giving due notice; Colon v. Lisk, 13 App. Div. 200, 43 N. Y. Supp. 364, holding act providing for forfeiture of oyster boat for trespassing provided sufficient notice.

Elevated railways.

Cited in Nutting v. Kings County County Elev. R. Co. 21 App. Div. 75, 47 N. Y. Supp. 327, holding elevated railroad bound by act of agent in settling claims; Brooklyn Elev. R. Co. v. Nagel, 75 Hun, 591, 27 N. Y. Supp. 669, holding valid the franchise to build and maintain elevated railroad.

Rights acquired under municipal permission.

Cited in Buffalo v. Chadeayne, 134 N. Y. 165, 31 N. E. 443, Affirming 27 N. Y. S. R. 63, 7 N. Y. Supp. 501, holding common council cannot rescind permit to construct wooden building after construction begun.

2 L. R. A. 363, YERKES v. HADLEY, 5 Dak. 324, 40 N. W. 340.

Estoppel of married women.

Cited in notes (8 L. R. A. 407) on estoppel of married women; (22 L. R. A. 781) on estoppel of married women, by covenant, from acquiring superior title.

2 L. R. A. 366, ROBINSON v. ROHR, 73 Wis. 436, 9 Am. St. Rep. 810, 40 N. W. 668.

Liability of municipalities, public officers, and contractors for mistake or tort.

Cited in Gates v. Young, 82 Wis. 276, 52 N. W. 178, holding lumber inspector not liable on bond for mistakes of judgment of himself or deputies; Kempster v. Milwaukee, 103 Wis. 423, 79 N. W. 411, holding if city common council is guilty of tort, its members individually are alone liable; Bates v. Horner, 65 Vt. 474. 22 L. R. A. 829, 27 Atl. 134, holding municipal officer not liable to individual for result of official acts; Sells v. Dermody, 114 Iowa, 348, 86 N. W. 325, holding road supervisor liable for negligence in keeping roads in repair.

Cited in footnotes to Culver v. Streator. 6 L. R. A. 270, which holds city liable for negligence of employee enforcing ordinance against unmuzzled dogs running at large; Curran v. Boston, 8 L. R. A. 243, which holds city not liable for negligence of workhouse officers.

Cited in notes (22 L. R. A. 824-826, 830, 834) on personal liability of highway officers for negligence; (9 L. R. A. 210) on drains and sewers, as to liability of municipality for neglect of its officers or agents; (5 L. R. A. 254) on liability of municipal corporations for injuries resulting from defective streets, bridges, etc.

Distinguished in Britton v. Green Bay & Ft. H. Waterworks Co. 81 Wis. 55, 29 Am. St. Rep. 856, 51 N. W. 84, holding water company not liable to individuals for breach of contract with municipality; Lawton v. Waite, 103 Wis. 254, 45 L. R. A. 620, 79 N. W. 321, holding liability to third person of sureties of subcontractor to carry mail, dependent solely upon contract of suretyship.

2 L. R. A. 368, MEDFORD v. LEVY, 31 W. Va. 649, 13 Am. St. Rep. 887, 8 S. E. 302.

Nuisance.

Cited in Powell v. Bentley & G. Furniture Co. 34 W. Va. 808, 12 L. R. A. 55, 12 S. E. 1085, holding great caution should be used in restraining operation of factory because of noise.

Cited in footnote to Pfingst v. Senn, 21 L. R. A. 569, which denies right to enjoin as nuisance prospective use of premises as beer garden.

Parties must come into court of equity with clean hands.

Cited in Barnes v. Starr, 64 Conn. 155, 28 Atl. 980, holding agreement to destroy antenuptial contract, made to deceive husband's relatives, not enforceable.

Cited in footnote to Duncan v. Flanagan, 7 L. R. A. 412, which holds failure to set up joint debtor's discharge in bankruptcy defense to action against him for contribution.

Cited in note (11 L. R. A. 458) on valid trusts as to suitor coming into equity with clean hands.

2 L. R. A. 372, McNUTT v. McNUTT, 116 Ind. 545, 19 N. E. 115.

Antenuptial contracts and marriage settlements.

Cited in Moore v. Harrison, 26 Ind. App. 411, 59 N. E. 1077, and Ragsdale v. Barnett, 10 Ind. App. 485, 37 N. E. 1109, holding law favors antenuptial contracts; Spurlock v. Brown, 91 Tenn. 255, 18 S. W. 868, and Carr v. Lackland, 112 Mo. 463, 20 S. W. 624, holding marriage good consideration for agreement; Alkire v. Alkire, 134 Ind. 359, 32 N. E. 571, holding conveyance to children not shown to have been made in fraud of antenuptial agreement; Wind v. Haas, 8 Pa. Co. Ct. 648, holding antenuptial contract does not require formal words; Thompson v. Tucker-Osborn, 111 Mich. 478, 69 N. W. 730, holding antenuptial agreement can be enforced in equity; Carr v. Lackland, 112 Mo. 457, 20 S. W. 624, holding antenuptial agreement should be construed according to intention of parties and surrounding circumstances; Bowen v. Swander, 121 Ind. 168, 22 N. E. 725, holding intention of parties to antenuptial agreement was to deprive themselves of all rights in each other's property; Kennedy v. Kennedy, 150 Ind. 642, 50 N. E. 756, holding parties by antenuptial contract intended the provisions should be in lieu of wife's legal interest; Buffington v. Buffington, 151 Ind. 202, 51 N. E. 328, holding antenuptial contract to release all claims to property of intended husband had reference to disposition on death; Ragsdale v. Barnett, 10 Ind. App. 489, 37 N. E. 1109, holding antenuptial agreement intended only life estate in personal property; Mannan v. Mannan, 154 Ind. 12, 55 N. E. 855, holding acceptance of deed of land in lieu of interest in husband's estate at death barred such interest; Leach v. Rains, 149 Ind. 159, 48 N. E. 858, holding acceptance of deed by husband in lieu of interest in wife's land bars his right therein as survivor under statute.

Cited in footnotes to Hunt v. Hunt, 59 L. R. A. 306, which holds parol contract to convey land in consideration of marriage not validated by marriage; Wright v. Wright, 55 L. R. A. 261, which holds marriage sufficient to support promise by groom's father to maintain bride and child if groom fails to.

Cited in note (13 L. R. A. 712) on antenuptial settlement.

Limited in Lamb v. Lamb, 130 Ind. 277, 30 Am. St. Rep. 227, 30 N. E. 36, holding antenuptial agreement fraudulently procured should be set aside.

How action to quiet title triable.

Cited in Puterbaugh v. Puterbaugh, 131 Ind. 294, 15 L. R. A. 345, 30 N. E. 519, holding action to quiet title triable by jury.

In what capacity widow takes interest in husband's estate.

Cited in Amos v. Amos, 117 Ind. 39, 19 N. E. 543, holding under statute widow takes interest by virtue of marital rights, and not as heir.

How judgment corrected.

Cited in Evans v. State, 150 Ind. 656, 50 N. E. 820, holding form or substance of judgment must be first corrected by motion to modify in court below.

Discretion in admission of evidence.

Cited in Roush v. Roush, 154 Ind. 572, 55 N. E. 1017, holding admission of evidence discretionary; Calkins v. Seabury-Calkins Consol. Min. Co. 5 S. D. 306, 58 N. W. 797, holding discretionary to reopen case; Re Devoe, 113 Iowa, 11, 84 N. W. 923, holding secondary evidence of lost instrument admissible.

2 L. R. A. 380, THE CITY OF SALEM, 37 Fed. 846.

Adhered to on subsequent hearing, 4 L. R. A. 125, 13 Sawy. 614, 38 Fed. 762.

Navigable waters.

Cited in note (5 L. R. A. 687) on ownership of banks and shores of navigable waters.

2 L. R. A. 384, BUFFALO EAST SIDE STREET R. CO. v. BUFFALO STREET R. CO. 111 N. Y. 132, 19 N. E. 63.

Construction of contracts.

Cited in Grand v. Livingston, 4 App. Div. 595, 38 N. Y. Supp. 490, construing release for negligence by lex loci, where contrary not intended by carrier or reasonable for shipper.

Presumption of constitutionality.

Cited in Beardsley v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 17 Misc. 259, 40 N. Y. Supp. 1077, holding constitutionality of regulation of railroad fares presumed.

Impairing contract obligations.

Cited in Blume v. Interurban Street R. Co. 41 Misc. 174, 83 N. Y. Supp. 989, sustaining statute requiring railroad to give transfers over all lines of system within city; Topham v. Interurban Street R. Co. 42 Misc. 510, 86 N. Y. Supp. 295, holding corporation leasing street railroads receiving franchises before enactment of statute requiring free transfers liable for refusing transfers; Budd v. New York, 143 U. S. 531, 36 L. ed. 251, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468, Affirming People v. Budd, 117 N. Y. 11, 5 L. R. A. 564, 15 Am. St. Rep. 460, 22 N. E. 670, upholding legislative regulation of elevator charges; White v. Farmers' Highline Canal & Reservoir Co. 22 Colo. 200, 31 L. R. A. 831, 43 Pac. 1028, holding legislature may regulate distribution of water by ditch companies for hire, without impairing existing contracts; New York v. Herdje, 68 App. Div. 374, 74 N. Y. Supp. 104, holding law destroying inchoate right to build tenement contracted for, within police power; Regan v. Foadick, 19 Misc. 493, 43 N. Y. Supp. 1102, holding tenant quarantined under health laws not liable for penalty for holding over; Coxe v. State, 144 N. Y. 407, 39 N. E. 400, holding legislative grant of land under tide waters revocable by subsequent legislature; State ex rel. Payne v. Kinloch Teleph. Co. 93 Mo. App. 358, 67 S. W. 684, holding that courts may compel telephone company to render service; Board of Education v. Phillips, 67 Kan. 552, 73 Pac. 97, holding change in statute so as to permit issuance of additional school bonds not unconstitutional as impairing contract of holder of former bonds.

Cited in notes (19 L. R. A. 571) on regulation of carriage by street railroad; (33 L. R. A. 180) on legislative power to fix tolls, rates, or prices.

Distinguished in Bronk v. Barckley, 13 App. Div. 80, 43 N. Y. Supp. 400, holding authorized contract for convict labor cannot be impaired by state.

2 L. R. A. 387, Re McGRAW, 111 N. Y. 66, 19 N. E. 233.

Affirmed sub nom. Cornell University v. Fiske, 136 U. S. 176, 34 L. ed. 434, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 775.

Inclusion of "purchase."

Cited in Fosdick v. Hempstead, 29 N. Y. S. R. 546, 8 N. Y. Supp. 772, holding town with power to purchase and hold personalty may take by bequest.

General laws indicate policy as to mortmain.

Cited in Scott v. Ives, 22 Misc. 755, 51 N. Y. Supp. 49, and Amherst College v. Ritch, 151 N. Y. 333, 37 L. R. A. 324, 45 N. E. 876, both holding such policy appears in few general and many special acts; Re Lampson, 33 App. Div. 59, 53 N. Y. Supp. 531, holding special enactment to be looked to in absence of general statute.

Forfeiture for taking property over charter limit.

Cited in Lancaster v. Amsterdam Improvement Co. 140 N. Y. 586, 24 L. R. A. 331, 35 N. E. 964, holding corporate deed presumed valid.

Cited in note (5 L. R. A. 109) on sustaining trust where purposes separable.

Devise in excess of limitation upon corporate property.

Cited in Norton v. House of Mercy, 41 C. C. A. 403, 101 Fed. 389, stating principle; Wood v. Hammond, 16 R. I. 118, 17 Atl. 324, holding corporation cannot take as devisee in excess of charter limit.

Cited in footnote to Joseph Bancroft & Sons Co. v. Bloede, 52 L. R. A. 734, which sustains power of cotton manufacturing company to purchase stock in company manufacturing dyes used by former.

Cited in note (21 L. R. A. 793) on constitutionality of statutes restricting contracts and business.

Distinguished in Hornberger v. Miller, 28 App. Div. 203, 50 N. Y. Supp. 1079, holding devise to corporation good as against objection of excess over power to take, where excess not shown; Farrington v. Putnam, 90 Me. 423, 38 L. R. A. 346, 37 Atl. 652, holding bequest to incorporated charitable institution in excess of statutory limit not void, but voidable.

Review of surrogate's decision on undisputed facts.

Cited in Re Moulton, 32 N. Y. S. R. 642, 10 N. Y. Supp. 717, reviewing questions of fact which were before surrogate.

Who may question power to take devise.

Cited in House of Mercy v. Davidson, 90 Tex. 523, 39 S. W. 924, holding that heirs may set up incapacity of devisee in will to accept devise; South & North Ala. R. Co. v. Highland Ave. & Belt. R. Co. 119 Ala. 117, 24 So. 114, refusing specifically to enforce contract for property complainant incapacitated to hold.

Cited in note (32 L. R. A. 297) on right of private persons to contest corporate power to take or hold property.

Distinguished in Heiskell v. Chickasaw Lodge, No. 8, I. O. O. F. 87 Tenn. 686, 4 L. R. A. 706, 11 S. W. 825, holding that state only can question legal capacity of corporation as trustee; Moskowitz v. Hornberger, 20 Misc. 562, 46 N. Y. Supp. 462, holding apparently legal devise to corporation not subject to attack by purchaser from intermediate grantee.

Disapproved in Hanson v. Little Sisters of the Poor, 79 Md. 440, 32 L. R. A. 298, 32 Atl. 1052, and Re Stickney, 85 Md. 106, 35 L. R. A. 697, 60 Am. St. Rep. 308, 36 Atl. 654, both holding capacity of corporation as devisee, in excess of charter limit, not to be questioned by heirs.

Liability for interest.

Cited as obiter in People ex rel. Cornell University v. Davenport, 117 N. Y. 563, 23 N. E. 664, holding state only obligated to pay income from safe investments.

2 L. R. A. 405, BRADSTREET CO. v. GILL, 72 Tex. 115, 13 Am. St. Rep. 768, 9 S. W. 753.

How question of agency determined.

Cited in Walsh v. Peterson, 59 Neb. 651, 81 N. W. 853, holding question of agency for jury under instructions of court, where evidence disputed and inference doubtful.

Distinguished in Olsen & Walke v. California Ins. Co. 11 Tex. Civ. App. 372, 32 S. W. 446, holding court to determine question of agency, where no plea filed, for determining jurisdiction to render default judgment.

When agency exists.

Cited in English v. Mitchell Cattle Co. 8 Wyo. 90, 55 Pac. 310, and Harrison v. Legore, 109 Iowa, 620, 80 N. W. 670, holding agency established by conduct, irrespective of assertions; Norwood v. Alamo F. Ins. Co. 13 Tex. Civ. App. 480, 35 S. W. 717, holding agency not within contract of appointment, only provable independently thereof, by showing acceptance.

Cited in note (23 L. R. A. 497) on who may be served with process in suit against foreign corporation.

Sufficiency of allegation in libel suit.

Cited in Brown v. Durham, 3 Tex. Civ. App. 250, 22 S. W. 868, holding petition should specify libelous words of exhibits by direct allegation; Dunn v. State, 43 Tex. Crim. 40, 63 S. W. 571 (dissenting opinion), majority holding indictment showing threatening notice, alleged to be sent to frighten recipient, sufficient without averments explanatory of drawings and language therein.

Necessity of alleging damages.

Cited in Hirshfield v. Ft. Worth Nat. Bank, 83 Tex. 456, 15 L. R. A. 641, 29 Am. St. Rep. 660, 18 S. W. 743, holding petition for libel, not alleging special damages, insufficient unless words actionable per se; Burton v. O'Neill, 6 Tex. Civ. App. 616, 25 S. W. 1013, holding special damages need not be alleged where alleged words libelous per se.

Parol evidence as to writing.

Cited in note (6 L. R. A. 43) on admissibility of parol evidence to show meaning of words and phrases.

Privileged communications.

Cited in Mitchell v. Bradstreet Co. 116 Mo. 239, 20 L. R. A. 142, 38 Am. St. Rep. 592, 22 S. W. 358, and Pollasky v. Minchener, 81 Mich. 286, 9 L. R. A. 105, and footnote p. 102, 21 Am. St. Rep. 516, 46 N. W. 5, holding commercial agency's false communications to subscribers generally not privileged; Runge v. Franklin, 72 Tex. 589, 3 L. R. A. 423, 13 Am. St. Rep. 833, 10 S. W. 721, holding all proceedings in civil courts privileged as against suit for libel; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Behee, 2 Tex. Civ. App. 109, 21 S. W. 384, holding employer's false statement in communication for own business privileged where without malice.

Cited in footnotes to Douglass v. Daisley, 57 L. R. A. 475, which denies privilege, as matter of law, to communication by commercial agency that assignor, to secure indorser, had made assignment for creditors; Mitchell v. Bradstreet Co. 20 L. R. A. 138, which holds voluntary publication by mercantile agency of false statement that firm has assigned not privileged; Pollasky v. Minchener, 9 L. R. A. 102, which holds false communication by commercial agency to uninterested members not privileged; Woodruff v. Bradstreet Co. 5 L. R. A. 555, which holds publication that judgment recovered against merchant or trader libelous; Conroy v. Pittsburgh Times, 11 L. R. A. 725, which holds privileged communication one properly made, on proper occasion, from proper motive, on probable cause; Nissen v. Cramer, 6 L. R. A. 780, which holds relevant words spoken by party to action during trial privileged.

Cited in note (9 L. R. A. 821) on definition of "libel."

Inference of malice from publication.

Cited in Coles v. Thompson, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 668, 27 S. W. 40, and St. James Military Academy v. Gaiser, 125 Mo. 527, 28 L. R. A. 676, 46 Am. St. Rep. 502, 28 S. W. 851, holding malice to be implied from false publication.

2 L. R. A. 408, STATE v. INTOXICATING LIQUORS, 76 Iowa, 243, 41 N. W. 6.

Intoxicating liquors.

Cited in Com. v. Brelsford, 161 Mass. 63, 36 N. E. 677, holding within power of legislature to define "intoxicating liquors."

Cited in footnotes to Carl v. State, 4 L. R. A. 380, which holds medicinal biters containing alcohol intoxicating or not, according to other ingredients; Com. v. Reyburg, 2 L. R. A. 415, which holds it question for jury whether cider vinous or spirituous.

Cited in notes (6 L. R. A. 669) on beer as intoxicating liquor; (7 L. R. A. 297) on construction of statutes forbidding manufacture and sale of spirituous liquors; (20 L. R. A. 645) on what liquors within statutory restrictions as to sale of "spirituous," "vinous," "fermented," and other intoxicating liquors.

2 L. R. A. 409, NASH v. BREWSTER, 39 Minn. 530, 41 N. W. 105.

Sales; when title passes.

Cited in Rail v. Little Falls Lumber Co. 47 Minn. 425, 50 N. W. 471, holding L. R. A. AC.—VOL. I.—14.

ing actual delivery not necessary to pass title to chattels designated in contract; Mackellar v. Pillsbury, 48 Minn. 401, 51 N. W. 222, holding title passes on sale of certain number of articles out of greater number, if parties so intend, without actual separation; Loud v. Pritchett, 104 Ga. 653, 30 S. E. 870, holding sale of standing timber, to be felled by vendee, passes title; Jennison v. Thompson, 68 Minn. 335, 71 N. W. 380, holding whether title passes before delivery of wheat to be taken from greater quantity question for jury.

Cited in footnote to Tyler Lumber Co. v. Charlton, 55 L. R. A. 301, which holds title does not pass by acceptance of offer to sell lumber piled at mill to be inspected by common employee.

Seed-grain notes; rights of holder.

Cited in Scofield v. National Elevator Co. 64 Minn. 531, 67 N. W. 645, holding owner of seed-grain note may, upon allegation of facts, maintain action for conversion against purchaser; Warder-Bushnell & G. Co. v. Minnesota & D. Elevator Co. 44 Minn. 391, 46 N. W. 773, holding payee of seed-grain note, furnishing grain covered by maker's chattel mortgage, has valid lien on crop; Smith v. Roberts, 42 Minn. 343, 46 N. W. 336, holding ante-dated seed-grain note given after grain delivered not valid lien on crop.

2 L. R. A. 411, NEW YORK & C. GRAIN STOCK & EXCHANGE v. CHICAGO BD. OF TRADE, 127 Ill. 153, 11 Am. St. Rep. 107, 19 N. E. 855.

Compulsory service.

Cited in Willoughby v. Chicago Junction R. & U. S. Co. 50 N. J. Eq. 695, 25 Atl. 277, holding private corporation charged with public duty obliged only to serve all alike, at uniform rate; Board of Trade v. C. B. Thompson Commission Co. 103 Fed. 903, and Board of Trade v. Hadden-Krull Co. 109 Fed. 706, holding "public interest," entitling applicants to receive quotations without unjust discrimination, does not deprive compiler of property right prior to publication; Inter-Ocean Pub. Co. v. Associated Press, 184 Ill. 450, 48 L. R. A. 574, 75 Am. St. Rep. 184, 56 N. E. 822, holding private news gathering corporation, having devoted its business to public use, cannot discriminate against purchasers of news; Board of Trade v. Riordan, 94 Ill. App. 308, holding board, in disciplining member, cannot deprive him of use of market quotations.

Cited in footnote to State v. Edwards, 25 L. R. A. 504, which holds valid limitation of amount of toll for grinding.

Cited in notes (31 L. R. A. 804) on public regulation as to operation of electric lines; (15 L. R. A. 322) on compulsory service by party whose business it is to serve public.

Distinguished in American Live Stock Commission Co. v. Chicago Live Stock Exchange, 143 Ill. 239, 18 L. R. A. 200, 36 Am. St. Rep. 385, 32 N. E. 274, holding courts will not interfere with private business affecting public interests through its magnitude, but never devoted to public use; State ex rel. Star Pub. Co. v. Associated Press, 159 Mo. 463, 51 L. R. A. 169, 81 Am. St. Rep. 368, 60 S. W. 91, holding business of news gathering not impressed with public use, making indiscriminating service compulsory; Re Renville, 46 App. Div. 44, 61 N. Y. Supp. 549, holding telegraph company not required to furnish quotations furnished to it by stock exchange for specific purpose.

Limited in Christie Street Commission Co. v. Board of Trade, 92 Ill. App. 606, 94 Ill. App. 237, holding equity will not compel furnishing of market quotations, though impressed with public interest, for unlawful purpose; Cen- tral Stock & G. Exchange v. Board of Trade, 196 Ill. 409, 63 N. E. 740, holding board of trade cannot be compelled to furnish quotations used in unlawful business.

2 L. R. A. 415, COM. v. REYBURG, 122 Pa. 299, 16 Atl. 351.

Prosecutor's liability for costs; when question for court.

Cited in Com v. Kocher, 8 Del. Co. Rep. 574, 8 Northampton Co. Rep. 341, holding court may withdraw from jury matter of costs, whenever it appears prosecutor ought not to pay them.

Liquor laws.

Cited in notes (9 L. R. A. 814) on construction of Pennsylvania liquor laws; (20 L. R. A. 646, 649) on what liquors within statutory restrictions as to sale of "spirituous," "vinous," "fermented" and other intoxicating liquors.

2 L. R. A. 417, MONTROSE PICKLE CO. v. DODSON & H. MFG. CO. 76 Iowa, 172, 14 Am. St. Rep. 213, 40 N. W. 705.

Garnishment.

Cited in Shaver Wagon and Cart Co. v. Halsted, 78 Iowa, 736, 43 N. W. 623, holding relation of creditor and debtor does not exist between garnisher and assignee of defendant's insurance policies.

Cited in note (28 L. R. A. 602) on liability of carriers to garnishment of property in transit.

Distinguished, in effect, in German Bank v. American F. Ins. Co. 83 Iowa, 496, 32 Am. St. Rep. 316, 50 N. W. 53, holding courts of another state may acquire jurisdiction in garnishment of debt owing by nonresident.

2 L. R. A. 418, MINNESOTA LOAN & T. CO. v. BEEBE, 40 Minn. 7, 41 N. W. 232.

Followed without special discussion in Northern Trust Co. v. Jackson, 60 Minn. 116, 61 N. W. 908.

Corporation as guardian, trustee, etc.; constitutionality of act.

Cited in Roane Iron Co. v. Wisconsin Trust Co. 99 Wis. 275, 67 Am. St. Rep. 856, 74 N. W. 818, holding act authorizing trust company to act as assignee not unconstitutional as special or class legislation.

Cited in note (48 L. R. A. 588) on granting special or exclusive privileges to surety and trust companies.

Constitutional requirement that subject of act be expressed in title.

Cited in Ek v. St. Paul Permanent Loan Co. 84 Minn. 249, 87 N. W. 844, holding such provision to be construed liberally, with reference to purpose intended; Winters v. Duluth, 82 Minn. 132, 84 N. W. 788, holding act constitutional if subjects embraced therein are naturally connected with subject expressed in title; State ex rel. Olsen v. Board of Control, 85 Minn. 174, 88 N. W. 533, and Allen v. Pioneer Press Co. 40 Minn. 119, 3 L. R. A. 533, 12 Am. St. Rep. 707, 41 N. W. 936, holding provisions of act, germane to subject expressed and proper to accomplishment of purpose indicated in title, constitutional.

Cited in note (2 L. R. A. 789) on title of statute must fairly suggest subjects dealt with in act.

Probate-court proceedings not collaterally assailable.

Cited in Lyon v. Gleason, 40 Minn. 435, 42 N. W. 286, holding probate of will conclusive evidence in collateral action of testator's death and of devise; Dennis v. Bint, 122 Cal. 42, 68 Am. St. Rep. 17, 54 Pac. 378, holding letters of administration conclusive in collateral action as to qualification and authority of administrator.

Necessity of guardian's bond.

Cited in note (33 L. R. A. 765) on necessity of bond by domestic guardian appointed by court to make acts valid.

Effect of inquisition as to insanity.

Cited in note (19 L. R. A. 493) on effect of inquisition to establish insanity.

2 L. R. A. 420, ROCKHOLD v. CANTON MASONIC MUT. BENEV. ASSO. (Ill.) 19 N. E. 710.

Ultra vires acts of corporations.

Cited in Corey v. Sherman (Iowa) 32 L. R. A. 512, 60 N. W. 232, holding insurance contract not within terms of articles of incorporation of benefit association, void.

Cited in notes (6 L. R. A. 290) on corporate power to contract; doctrine of ultra vires; (12 L. R. A. 168) on estoppel of corporation to deny liability on its contracts.

Mutual benefit associations.

Cited in Clark v. Schromeyer, 23 Ind. App. 567, 55 N. E. 785, holding benefit certificate, unilateral contract of insurance, terminable at option of holder.

Cited in notes (4 L. R. A. 382) on benefit association; enlarged powers conferred by statute; (7 L. R. A. 189) on transfer of mutual benefit certificates; (38 L. R. A. 49, 50) as to whether a benefit association is an insurance company, under statutes exempting benevolent societies.

2 L. R. A. 422, ATCHISON, T. & S. F. R. CO. v. SCHNEIDER, 127 Ill. 144, 20 N. E. 41.

Jurisdiction of appeal.

Cited in Metropolitan West Side Elev. R. Co. v. Siegel, 181 Ill. 644, 44 N. E. 276, holding not necessary that freehold be involved to give supreme court jurisdiction of appeal.

Damages in eminent domain.

Cited in notes (8 L. R. A. 124) on measure of damages on condemnation for public use; (51 L. R. A. 330) on damages in eminent domain cases as affected by loss of profits from suspension of business while moving.

Distinguished in Braun v. Metropolitan West Side Elev. R. Co. 166 Ill. 438, 46 N. E. 974, holding only in exceptional cases cost of removal of business an element of damage.

Right to possession in eminent domain on giving security.

Cited in Davis v. Northwestern Elev. R. Co. 170 Ill. 605, 48 N. E. 1058, holding petitioner may, upon filing bond, enter into possession of land sought to be condemned pending appeal; Johnson v. Metropolitan West Side Elev. R. Co. 160 Ill. 479, 45 N. E. 680, holding where judgment for damages has been affirmed, court will not reverse decree dissolving injunction against possession pending appeal; Ex parte Reynolds, 52 Ark. 338, holding act authorizing entry upon deposit of security fixed by court pending condemnation proceedings not in conflict with constitutional provision that no property be appropriated until compensation ascertained by jury.

Personal view as basis of verdict.

Cited in Peoria Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Peoria Terminal R. Co. 146 Ill. 383, 21 L. R. A. 377, 34 N. E. 550, holding jury in condemnation proceedings cannot base estimate solely upon view of premises, disregarding testimony; Chicago v. Spoor, 91 Ill. App. 488 (approved by dissenting judge in 190 Ill. 366, 60 N. E. 540), holding that verdict supported by personal view need not wholly harmonize with testimony; Stockton v. Chicago, 136 Ill. 436, 26 N. E. 1095; Metropolitan West Side Elev. R. Co. v. Johnson, 159 Ill. 439, 42 N. E. 871; Sanitary District v. Loughran, 160 Ill. 365, 43 N. E. 359,—holding verdict in condemnation proceedings, rendered upon conflicting evidence and view of premises, sustainable.

Cited in note (42 L. R. A. 389, 390) on nature and effect of view by jury; theory that view must be supported by evidence.

2 L. R. A. 425, LOCKWOOD v. LOCKWOOD, 51 Hun, 337, 3 N. Y. Supp. 887.

Record of exemplified copy of probate of foreign will.

Cited in Meiggs v. Hoagland, 68 App. Div. 187, 74 N. Y. Supp. 234, holding record of exemplified copy of probate of foreign will only creates rebuttable presumption of due execution; Re Nash, 37 Misc. 708, 76 N. Y. Supp. 453, holding foreign will and copy of probate proceedings, not conformed to state law, not entitled to be recorded; Meiggs v. Hoagland, 41 Misc. 7, 83 N. Y. Supp. 603, holding record of foreign will, not showing attestation in statutory manner, does not show title to land in devisee.

Cited in notes (48 L. R. A. 133) on effect in various states of probate of will in another state; (48 L. R. A. 133) on effect of probate in another state of will of real estate.

2 L. R. A. 426, BARNARD v. KNOX COUNTY, 37 Fed. 563.

Indebtedness exceeding constitutional limit.

Cited in Rauch v. Chapman, 16 Wash. 579, 36 L. R. A. 411, 58 Am. St. Rep. 52, 48 Pac. 253, holding county warrants issued to meet indebtedness imposed by Constitution or legislature in connection with maintenance of county government valid, though exceeding debt limit.

Cited in footnotes to Barnard v. Knox County, 13 L. R. A. 244, which holds limitation on county indebtedness applicable to books and stationery for county clerk's office; Jay County v. Taylor, 7 L. R. A. 160, which holds employment of legal adviser for term extending beyond terms of county commissioners employing him invalid.

Cited in notes (23 L. R. A. 403, 404) on what constitutes "indebtedness" within constitutional provision.

Disapproved in Barnard v. Knox County, 105 Mo. 387, 13 L. R. A. 246, 16 S. W. 917, holding county warrant issued for indebtedness in excess of constitutional limit void, though incurred for necessary stationery and supplies.

2 L. R. A. 428, NATIONAL BANK v. DORSET MARBLE CO. 61 Vt. 106, 17 Atl. 42.

Indorsement in blank—Before issue.

Cited in Ballard v. Burton, 64 Vt. 396, 16 L. R. A. 667, 24 Atl. 769, holding bank director indorsing in blank new certificate of deposit issued by bank on its request for time liable as joint maker; Young v. Sehon, 53 W. Va. 136, 62 L. R. A. 505, 97 Am. St. Rep. 970, 44 S. E. 136, holding person making loan on non-negotiable note, indorsed by promisee and another, may treat them as comakers or guarantors; Salisbury v. First Nat. Bank, 37 Neb. 876, 40 Am. St. Rep. 527, 56 N. W. 727, holding notice of nonpayment at maturity not necessary to hold indorsers in blank before issue.

— After issue.

Cited in Bowler v. Braun, 63 Minn. 35, 56 Am. St. Rep. 449, 65 N. W. 124, holding parol evidence inadmissible, as against subsequent holder, to vary liability as second indorser of party signing in blank below payee; Lyndon Sav. Bank v. International Co. 75 Vt. 232, 54 Atl. 191, holding indorser of note in blank, on back, after execution, assumes, prima facie, obligation of a maker.

Negotiability.

Cited in footnote to Witty v. Michigan Mut. L. Ins. Co. 8 L. R. A. 365, which holds note negotiable although blank in body as to amount and place of payment.

2 L. R. A. 429, RANKIN'S APPEAL, 1 Monaghan (Pa.) 308, 16 Atl. 82.

Right of tenant for life to income from mines.

Cited in Koen v. Bartlett, 41 W. Va. 567, 31 L. R. A. 130, 56 Am. St. Rep. 884, 23 S. E. 664, holding life tenant entitled to product of oil or gas wells open, or lawfully opened, during tenancy.

Curtesy.

Cited in note (7 L. R. A. 694) on entry to establish title as tenant by curtesy.

Rights incidental to grant of mine.

Cited in Ingle v. Bottoms, 160 Ind. 78, 66 N. E. 160, sustaining right of lessee of coal mine to construct railroad switch thereto.

2 L. R. A. 434, BAKER v. STEWART, 40 Kan. 442, 10 Am. St. Rep. 213, 19 Pac. 904.

Tenancy by entirety.

Approved in Shinn v. Shinn, 42 Kan. 7, 4 L. R. A. 226, 21 Pac. 813, holding judgment for alimony not encumbrance upon land held by parties thereto in entirety.

Cited in Simons v. McLain, 51 Kan. 160, 32 Pac. 919, holding estates by joint tenancy, with accompanying right of survivorship, to exist in Kansas prior to chap. 203, Laws 1891, abolishing survivorship; Noble v. Teeble, 58 Kan. 400, 49 Pac. 598, holding prior to 1891, devise to daughter-in-law "and her children," created joint tenancy; Boyer v. Sims, 61 Kan. 596, 60 Pac. 309, holding surviving trustee in joint tenancy entitled to maintain ejectment in his own name; Wilson v. Johnson, 4 Kan. App. 751, 46 Pac. 833, holding consent of husband to devise by wife of land held "as tenant in common" does not operate to create tenancy in common in land held in entirety; Reynolds v.

Strong, 82 Hun, 203, 31 N. Y. Supp. 329, holding widow entitled to whole estate as tenant by the entirety of property conveyed to husband and wife; Re Lewis, 85 Mich. 342, 24 Am. St. Rep. 94, 48 N. W. 580, holding tenancy by entirety unaffected by divorce; Helvie v. Hoover, 11 Okla. 694, 69 Pac. 958, holding husband and wife tenants in common of real estate conveyed to them; McNeeley v. South Penn Oil. Co. 52 W. Va. 627, 62 L. R. A. 569, 44 S. E. 508, holding conveyance to husband and wife does not create estate by entirety, under statutes abolishing survivorship in such estates, and relating to married women's separate property.

Cited in footnotes to Mittel v. Karl, 8 L. R. A. 655, which holds life estate with fee to survivor passes by deed to husband and wife, and to survivor in his own right; Shinn v. Shinn, 4 L. R. A. 224, which holds judgment for alimony encumbrance on land held by entirety; Donahue v. Hubbard, 14 L. R. A. 123, which holds husband's title as tenant by entirety may be conveyed to wife through third person; Thornburg v. Wiggins, 22 L. R. A. 42, which holds tenancy by entirety not created by conveyance to husband and wife "in joint tenancy;" Re Albrecht, 18 L. R. A. 329, which denies tenancy by entirety in bond and mortgage to husband and wife.

Cited in notes (12 L. R. A. 514) on definition of tenancy by entirety; (13 L. R. A. 326) on attitude of courts towards estates by entirety; (30 L. R. A. 314) on where and to what extent estate exists; (30 L. R. A. 324) on creation of estate by limitation to husband and wife as tenants in common; (30 L. R. A. 330) on disposition or encumbrance of entirety property.

Effect of statutes on estate by entirety.

Cited in Howard v. Schneider, 10 Kan. App. 139, 62 Pac. 435, holding statute abolishing "survivorship in joint tenancy" ineffectual as to estates by entirety; Stewart v. Thomas, 64 Kan. 514, 68 Pac. 70, holding statute abolishing "survivorship in joint tenancy" applies to tenancy by entirety, though not named in title of act; Stilphen v. Stilphen, 65 N. H. 139, 23 Atl. 79, holding statute enabling married woman to hold property as if single abolished only after-acquired estates by entirety.

Cited in notes (8 L. R. A. 407) on construction of Indiana Code, § 5119, in respect to married woman's rights; (30 L. R. A. 316) on construction of statutes as to existence and extent of estate.

2 L. R. A. 444, UNITED STATES v. TOZER, 37 Fed. 635.

Charge to jury in 39 Fed. 369.

Appeal from judgment of conviction in 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 245, 52 Fed. 917.

Discriminations.

Cited in footnote to Fitzgerald v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 13 L. R. A. 70, which holds no vested right in law existing when contract as to interstate transportation made.

Cited in notes (4 L. R. A. 332) on justification of discrimination by carrier; (12 L. R. A. 436) on rates of freight in long and short hauls.

Liability of employee.

Cited in Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co. 19 L. R. A. 390, 54 Fed. 736, holding executive of engineers' union while employee bound by mandatory injunction to carry interstate freight.

2 L. R. A. 447, BUTTERFIELD v. BOSTON, 148 Mass. 544, 20 N. E. 113.

Negligence.

Cited in footnote to Feeney v. Long Island R. Co. 5 L. R. A. 544, which holds railroad company liable for negligence of gateman.

Municipal Liability.

Cited in Lincoln v. Boston, 148 Mass. 580, 3 L. R. A. 258, 12 Am. St. Rep. 601, 20 N. E. 329, holding city not liable for injuries resulting from firing of cannon on Boston Common under license of authorities; Daly v. New Haven, 69 Conn. 649, 38 Atl. 397, holding liability of city for negligence in maintenance or operation of bridge purely statutory.

Cited in note (9 L. R. A. 208) on municipal liability for acts or omissions of its agents.

Distinguished in Stephani v. Manitowoc, 89 Wis. 471, 62 N. W. 176, holding city liable for death resulting from unprotected drawbridge.

2 L. R. A. 448, COVENY v. McLAUGHLIN, 148 Mass. 576, 20 N. E. 165.

Contingent remainders.

Cited in Hills v. Barnard, 152 Mass. 72, 9 L. R. A. 217, 25 N. E. 96, holding devise to nephews living on son's death in equal shares, "the issue of any deceased legatee to take parent's share," vested per capita in nephews alive at son's death, and in issue of deceased nephews by right of representation; Bigelow v. Clap, 166 Mass. 91, 43 N. E. 1037, holding testamentary provision for equal division among nephews and grandnephews, "who may then be living," on death of daughter, entitles nephews and grandnephews to share per capita alone; Pulse v. Osborn, 30 Ind. App. 633, 64 N. E. 59, construing devise to surviving grandchildren should first taker die before them as meaning those surviving first taker.

Cited in note (3 L. R. A. 817) on contingent remainders.

2 L. R. A. 449, HAAS v. SACKETT, 40 Minn. 53, 41 N. W. 237.

Contract of indorsement.

Cited in Hathway v. Rogers, 112 Iowa, 640, 84 N. W. 674, holding memorandum, "sold half of this note to R.," signed by payee on back of note, not an indorsement; Gregg v. Groesbeck, 11 Utah, 320, 32 L. R. A. 269, 40 Pac. 202, holding oral evidence admissible to prove plaintiff's knowledge of agreement between payee and defendant for erasure of latter's name as indorser before negotiation.

Conversion of negotiable instrument.

Cited in Nashville Lumber Co. v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 94 Tenn. 381, 27 L. R. A. 522, 45 Am. St. Rep. 727, 29 S. W. 368, holding bank transferring negotiable paper to bona fide purchaser liable to party whose indorsement thereon had been forged to its knowledge.

Cited in footnote to Griggs v. Day, 18 L. R. A. 130, which holds pledgee liable for only actual value of notes converted.

Measure of damages in conversion.

Cited in footnote to Woods v. Nichols, 48 L. R. A. 773, which holds measure of recovery in trover by one retaining title as security for purchase price limited to balance due, less depreciation by use.

2 L. R. A. 450, EVANSVILLE & T. H. R. CO. v. CRIST, 116 Ind. 446, 9 Am. St. Rep. 865, 19 N. E. 310.

Negligence in maintaining crossings of highway.

Cited in Louisville, E. & St. L. Consol. R. Co. v. Pritchard, 131 Ind. 566, 31 Am. St. Rep. 451, 31 N. E. 358, holding railway company responsible for injuries received from jolt of wagon crossing tracks 15 inches above highway; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. McIntosh, 140 Ind. 278, 38 N. E. 476, holding railroad company liable for injury caused by washed-out crossing, negligently left in such condition; Cincinnati, H. & I. R. Co. v. Claire, 6 Ind. App. 394, 33 N. E. 918, holding railway company liable for injury due to failure to guard and light raised footway; Seybold v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. 18 Ind. App. 379, 46 N. E. 1054, holding railway company liable for injury resulting from lack of guards beside highway necessarily raised to cross tracks; Terre Haute & I. R. Co. v. Clem, 123 Ind. 16, 7 L. R. A. 588, 18 Am. St. Rep. 303, 23 N. E. 965, holding no presumption of negligent construction or maintenance from mere fact of injury at crossing; Moundsville v. Ohio River R. Co. 37 W. Va. 105, 20 L. R. A. 170, 16 S. E. 514, and State ex rel. Muncie v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 83 Fed. 286, holding mandamus lies to compel railroad to maintain street crossing in suitable condition; Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. State, 158 Ind. 192, 63 N. E. 224, holding railroad company may be compelled to construct underground crossing, where surface crossing is dangerous; Chicago & S. E. R. Co. v. State, 159 Ind. 240, 64 N. E. 860, holding city may compel railroad company to lower track at street crossing to conform to street grade.

Negligence, concurring acts.

Cited in Cincinnati, I. St. L. & C. R. Co. v. Cooper, 120 Ind. 472, 6 L. R. A. 245, 16 Am. St. Rep. 334, 22 N. E. 340, holding company liable for death caused by sudden starting of one train throwing off plaintiff, and negligent failure of second train to stop before reaching place of fall.

General allegation of negligence sufficient.

Cited in Pennsylvania Co. v. Horton, 132 Ind. 192, 31 N. E. 45, holding statement of particulars of freedom from contributory negligence necessary only on demand of defendant; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Kurtz, 10 Ind. App. 63, 35 N. E. 201, holding any facts to show negligence admissible under general averment.

Specific averments control general averments.

Cited in Queen Ins. Co. v. Hudnut Co. 8 Ind. App. 27, 35 N. E. 397, holding answer denying loss by tornado controlled by specific allegation that loss resulted from shock of boat blown by wind.

Contributory negligence, knowledge of defect.

Cited in Poseyville v. Lewis, 126 Ind. 82, 25 N. E. 593, holding knowledge of defective condition of sidewalk no bar to recovery; Hoggatt v. Evansville & T. H. R. Co. 3 Ind. App. 443, 29 N. E. 941, holding driver of team on highway parallel to railway not guilty of contributory negligence, though aware of horses' skittishness; Evansville & T. H. R. Co. v. Athon, 6 Ind. App. 298, 51 Am. St. Rep. 303, 33 N. E. 469, holding plaintiff not guilty of contributory negligence in alighting under directions of brakeman after signal rope pulled; Sledge v. Gayoso Hotel Co. 43 Fed. 464, holding it not negligence per se to enter elevator in conductor's absence; Morrison v. Shelby County, 116 Ind. 433, 19 N. E. 316.

holding plaintiff guilty of contributory negligence in driving loaded wagon upon defective bridge when long aware of condition, though used by public.

— Averment of freedom from.

Cited in Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Sandford, 117 Ind. 266, 19 N. E. 770, holding general averment that plaintiff without fault sufficient; Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Bennett, 9 Ind. App. 95, 35 N. E. 1033; Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Spahr, 7 Ind. App. 26; 33 N. E. 446; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Hobbs, 3 Ind. App. 447, 29 N. E. 934; Evansville & T. H. R. Co. v. Krapf, 143 Ind. 652, 36 N. E. 901; Pennsylvania Co. v. O'Shaughnessy, 122 Ind. 590, 23 N. E. 675; Elkhart v. Witman, 122 Ind. 540, 23 N. E. 796, — holding general averment that plaintiff was without fault sufficient, unless contradicted by facts specifically stated; Romona Oolitic Stone Co. v. Tate, 12 Ind. App. 62, 37 N. E. 1065, holding general allegation of freedom from fault overcome by facts pleaded showing contributory negligence.

Opinion evidence.

Cited in Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Hendricks, 128 Ind. 463, 28 N. E. 58, holding opinion of nonexpert witness as to rate of train's speed competent; Kansas City, M. & B. R. Co. v. Crocker, 95 Ala. 423, 11 So. 262, holding plaintiff's testimony as to relative speed of car and man running competent, though indefinite; Budd v. Salt Lake City R. Co. 23 Utah, 520, 65 Pac. 486, holding opinion of physician as to percentage of patients recovering from similar injuries competent; Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Hall, 105 Ala. 606, 17 So. 176, holding nonexpert character of opinion testimony of speed of engine goes to weight, not competency, of evidence.

Cited in note (4 L. R. A. 555) on expert opinions.

Submission of special instructions.

Cited in Shelby County v. Blair, 8 Ind. App. 588, 36 N. E. 216, and Ransbottom v. State, 144 Ind. 255, 43 N. E. 218, holding special instructions must be submitted to court before argument to jury commenced; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Ward, 147 Ind. 257, 45 N. E. 325, holding failure to give requested instruction not considered on appeal, unless record shows request therefor at close of evidence; Duckwall v. Williams, 29 Ind. App. 654, 63 N. E. 232, holding error cannot be predicated upon refusal of instruction requested during closing argument.

2 L. R. A. 455, VANOLINDER v. CARPENTER, 127 Ill. 42, 11 Am. St. Rep. 92, 19 N. E. 868.

Rule in Shelley's Case.

Cited in Hageman v. Hageman, 129 Ill. 167, 21 N. E. 814, holding fee vested in sons under devise to them, with restriction against sale or mortgage during lives, and gift to "their heirs after them;" Silva v. Hopkinson, 158 Ill. 388, 41 N. E. 1013, holding devise to daughters "and their lawful heirs, but in the event of their death without lawful issue" then over, creates unconditional fee simple in daughters; Wolfer v. Hemmer, 144 Ill. 559, 33 N. E. 751, holding devise to wife, her heirs and assigns, carries fee in spite of subsequent clause providing for distribution among children of all realty undisposed of by wife at her death; Ewing v. Barnes, 156 Ill. 68, 40 N. E. 325, holding that fee created by devise to party and his heirs not affected by subsequent clause in will providing for disposition of property in case of death without heirs of his body;

Palmer v. Cook, 159 Ill. 303, 50 Am. St. Rep. 165, 42 N. E. 796, holding grant to daughters in fee creates tenancy in common, unaffected by subsequent clause in deed providing for reversion of interest of one first dying without heirs, to survivor; Vangieson v. Henderson, 150 Ill. 121, 36 N. E. 974, holding fee in daughter, under devise to wife for life, on her death to daughter during natural life, remainder to her heirs; Fowler v. Black, 136 Ill. 375, 11 L. R. A. 673, footnote p. 671, 26 N. E. 596, holding deed of vested remainder to grantee for life, on his death to his heirs in fee, vested fee in grantee; Deemer v. Kessinger, 206 Ill. 63, 69 N. E. 28, holding devise to son, and at his death to his lawful heirs, vests fee in son; Grimes v. Shirk, 169 Pa. 76, 32 Atl. 13, holding devisee of estate for natural life, remainder to lawful issue, if any; if not to testator's heirs, takes fee.

Cited in footnotes to Grainger v. Grainger, 36 L. R. A. 186, which holds rule in Shelley's Case not applicable to devise to one for life, and after his death to heirs of his body, if any survive him, with devise over otherwise; Starnes v. Hill, 22 L. R. A. 598, which holds indefeasible fee not vested in one to whom life estate given with estate in fee to his "heirs;" Re Browning, 3 L. R. A. 209, which gives first takers fee simple under devise to persons for life, and then to their children and their heirs; Glover v. Condell, 35 L. R. A. 360, which holds ownership of fund subject to limitation, given by bequest to son and over in case of death without living heirs.

Cited in notes (12 L. R. A. 723) on rule in Shelley's Case; (4 L. R. A. 117) on devise of life estate by will.

Construction of instrument.

Cited in Gannon v. Peterson, 193 Ill. 380, 55 L. R. A. 704, 62 N. E. 210, holding devise using "children" and "heirs" indiscriminately read interchangeably by courts to effect intention of testator; Strain v. Sweeny, 163 Ill. 607, 45 N. E. 201, holding devise to son "and his heirs, . . . but in case he die without issue" then over to mean "children," so as to effectuate executory devise; Griswold v. Hicks, 132 Ill. 502, 22 Am. St. Rep. 549, 24 N. E. 63, holding term "heirs," in habendum of deed, limited by following clause expressing intention to convey to children for life, "and at their death to go to their children."

Execution of dry trust by statute.

Cited in Barclay v. Platt, 170 Ill. 388, 48 N. E. 972, holding devise in trust for son and daughter and their children creates vested life estates in undivided half of property in son and daughter, remainder to children.

2 L. R. A. 461, SYKES v. PEOPLE, 127 Ill. 117, 19 N. E. 705.

Cited on second appeal in 132 Ill. 49, 23 N. E. 391, stating former judgment reversed for erroneous exclusion of evidence.

Parol modification of receipt.

Cited in Thompson v. Thompson, 78 Minn. 386, 81 N. W. 543, holding storage receipt for grain cannot be modified by parol.

Intent to defraud.

Cited in Block v. Oliver, 102 Ky. 277, 43 S. W. 238, to contention, intent to defraud by issuance of duplicate receipts immaterial.

Cited in note (19 L. R. A. 304) on estoppel by wording of warehouse receipt.

Criminal liability.

Cited in note (7 L. R. A. 532) on criminal liability of warehousemen.

2 L. R. A. 465, TOOLE v. TOOLE, 112 N. Y. 333, 8 Am. St. Rep. 750, 19 N. E. 682.

Defective or doubtful title.

Cited in Moore v. Williams, 115 N. Y. 586, 5 L. R. A. 656, 12 Am. St. Rep. 844, 22 N. E. 233, holding purchaser need not take defective or doubtful title; Schwencke v. Haffner, 18 App. Div. 185, 45 N. Y. Supp. 937, to point, purchaser at judicial sale need not take doubtful title; Heller v. Cohen, 154 N. Y. 306, 48 N. E. 527, holding purchaser at judicial sale need not take defective title requiring proceedings to cure it; Correll v. Lauterbach, 14 Misc. 473, 36 N. Y. Supp. 615, holding purchaser need not await result of action by vendor against strangers to perfect title; Haggerty v. Wagner, 148 Ind. 672, 39 L. R. A. 398, 48 N. E. 366 (dissenting opinion), to point that purchaser need not take doubtful title he may have to defend; Moot v. Business Men's Invest. Asso. 157 N. Y. 212, 45 L. R. A. 670, 52 N. E. 1, holding rejection of title for defect in record cured by corrected judgment roll on file unwarranted.

Cited in note (21 L. R. A. 46) as to objections on account of doubtful title.

Allienage and escheat.

Cited in notes (31 L. R. A. 85, 146, 177, 32 L. R. A. 177) as to disability of aliens and escheat of property.

2 L. R. A. 467, GIBSON v. RICHMOND & D. R. CO. 37 Fed. 743.

Suit by pledgee or purchaser to invalidate transfer.

Cited in Elyea v. Lehigh Salt Min. Co. 45 App. Div. 237, 60 N. Y. Supp. 1050, holding pledgee of stock cannot sue to set aside contract for sale of corporate property and stock; McCaleb v. Goodwin, 114 Ala. 623, 21 So. 967, holding purchaser of stock estopped to question deed of trust given to secure bonds issued with stockholder's consent.

Cited in notes (6 L. R. A. 566) on rights of bondholders; (6 L. R. A. 643) as to mortgage of railroad stock.

2 L. R. A. 469, FIRST NAT. BANK v. MERCHANTS BANK, 37 Fed. 657.

Removal of action between nonresident parties.

Cited in Burck v. Taylor, 39 Fed. 583; Uhle v. Burnham, 42 Fed. 3; Koshland v. National Ins. Co. 31 Or. 214, 49 Pac. 845; Craven v. Turner, 82 Me. 389, 19 Atl. 864; American Finance Co. v. Bostwick, 151 Mass. 25, 23 N. E. 656; Rome Petroleum & Iron Co. v. Hughes Specialty Well Drilling Co. 130 Fed. 588,—holding cause removable, although neither party resides in district; Duncan v. Associated Press, 81 Fed. 421, holding action between nonresident parties of diverse citizenship removable; Whitworth v. Illinois C. R. Co. 107 Fed. 558 holding cause will not be remanded to state court because neither party resides within state; Alley v. Edward Hines Lumber Co. 64 Fed. 904, holding cause removable although one of the plaintiffs resides without state; Sherwood v. Newport News & M. Valley Co. 55 Fed. 5, holding suit by aliens against corporation not chartered in state removable.

Not followed in Foulk v. Gray, 120 Fed. 157, holding suit brought in courts of state where neither party resides not removable to Federal court, except by consent.

Citizenship of stakeholder.

Cited in Reeves v. Corning, 51 Fed. 778, holding citizenship of mere stakeholder does not defeat real party defendant's right of removal.

2 L. R. A. 471, WELLES v. LARRABEE, 36 Fed. 866.

Statute rights and liabilities of real and apparent owners of corporate stock.

Cited in Lewis v. Switz, 74 Fed. 382, holding person who knowingly permits name on national bank-stock books as owner cannot deny ownership as against creditors; Hecht v. Phenix Woolen Co. 121 Fed. 190, holding persons acquiescing in issuance of stock to them without consideration, transferred to another as collateral for loan to corporation, liable as stockholders; Andrews v. National Foundry & Pipe Works, 36 L. R. A. 152, 22 C. C. A. 120, 46 U. S. App. 281, 76 Fed. 175, holding stockholders by direct issue as collateral security for debt not liable to creditors; Baker v. Old Nat. Bank, 86 Fed. 1007, holding notice afforded on stock books by words "collateral," "in escrow," "trustee," or "agent," prevent liability by estoppel; Houghton v. Hubbell, 33 C. C. A. 575, 63 U. S. App. 31, 91 Fed. 454, holding real owner of stock in name of another person on stock books liable to creditors; Geyser-Marion Gold Min. Co. v. Stark, 53 L. R. A. 689, 45 C. C. A. 471, 106 Fed. 563, holding transfer of stock in name of trustee without inquiry for cestui que trust actionable negligence; Morse v. Pacific R. Co. 93 Ill. App. 39, holding legal, although not equitable, owner of corporate stock liable to creditors.

Cited in note (36 L. R. A. 139) on liability of pledgee of stock as a shareholder.

2 L. R. A. 475, HUDMON BROS. v. DU BOSE, 85 Ala. 446, 5 So. 162.

Warehousemen.

Cited in note (7 L. R. A. 530) on warehousemen as bailees.

Lien of mortgagee.

Cited in Truss v. Harvey, 120 Ala. 641, 24 So. 927, holding mortgage on crops, recorded in county where grown, notice to purchaser in another county; Chapman v. First Nat. Bank, 98 Ala. 532, 22 L. R. A. 80, 13 So. 764, holding lien of livery-stable keeper subordinate to prior recorded mortgage with law day passed and mortgagor in possession.

2 L. R. A. 476, SIMMONS v. HILL, 96 Mo. 679, 10 S. W. 61.

Liability of owners of legal title to corporate stocks.

Cited in Bagley v. Tyler, 43 Mo. App. 203, holding courts will not look beyond registered shareholders in fixing liability to respond to creditors.

2 L. R. A. 480, PHILADELPHIA NAT. BANK v. DOWD, 38 Fed. 172.

Trusts and trust funds.

Cited in Merchants' & F. Bank v. Austin, 48 Fed. 28, holding trust funds can only be pursued when clearly distinguishable from other property of trustee. Wasson v. Hawkins, 59 Fed. 237, holding deposit in insolvent bank a few moments before closing recoverable from receiver; Independent District v. Beard, 83 Fed. 11, holding rule not requiring deposit to be traced into any specific funds in insolvent bank receiver's hands binding on Federal courts in Iowa.

Cited in footnotes to Ferchen v. Arndt, 29 L. R. A. 664, which denies power of consignors to impress with trust lien funds of consignees in hands of receiver; Indiana, I. & I. R. Co. v. Swannell, 30 L. R. A. 290, which holds property purchased by trustee for bondholders under reorganization arrangement not discharged as to bondholders failing to pay assessments; Central Stock & Grain Exchange v. Bendinger, 56 L. R. A. 875, which holds broker liable to refund to principal money illegally taken from agent as margins on gambling transaction; Bohle v. Hasselbroch, 61 L. R. A. 323, which sustains right of cestui que trust to elect remedy where trustee buys land in own name with trust funds mingled with own funds.

Cited in note (8 L. R. A. 789) on commingling of trust funds.

Distinguished or disregarded in Massey v. Fisher, 62 Fed. 960, holding money paid to insolvent bank to take up note recoverable from funds in hands of receiver.

Banks and banking.

Cited in New Farmers' Bank v. Cockrell, 106 Ky. 588, 51 S. W. 2; Union Nat. Bank v. Citizens' Bank, 153 Ind. 55, 54 N. E. 97; Hallam v. Tillinghast, 19 Wash. 27, 52 Pac. 329,—holding collection of draft by bank establishes merely the relation of debtor and creditor between it and owner thereof.

Cited in footnotes to First Nat. Bank v. Payne, 3 L. R. A. 284, which holds partner of insolvent banking firm cannot pay checks received from collecting bank by charging to drawers and crediting to latter bank; Pickle v. People's Nat. Bank, 7 L. R. A. 93, which holds acceptance of check necessary to give right of action against bank.

Cited in notes (2 L. R. A. 699) on usages and customs as to bank collections; (7 L. R. A. 859) on bank collections; (32 L. R. A. 719) on trust in proceeds of collection made by bank when insolvent.

Right of cestui que trust to preference.

Cited in Re Mulligan, 116 Fed. 718, refusing preference where misappropriated funds could not be traced to particular stocks in hands of bankrupt's trustee; St. Louis Brewing Asso. v. Austin, 100 Ala. 322, 13 So. 908, holding collections and deposits induced by fraud not preferred, unless identified in bank receiver's hands; Windstanley v. Second Nat. Bank, 13 Ind. App. 548, 41 N. E. 956, holding person for whom insolvent collected and retained money not entitled to preference, without showing what was done with such money; Evangelical Synod v. Schoeneich, 143 Mo. 661, 45 S. W. 647, holding where trustee indistinguishably mixes trust money with his own, that cestui que trust will be preferred over creditors; Pearson v. Haydel, 90 Mo. App. 261, holding cestui que trust will be preferred so long as indistinguishably mixed property can be traced into trustee's estate; Anheuser-Busch Brewing Asso. v. Clayton, 6 C. C. A. 110, 13 U. S. App. 295, 56 Fed. 761, and Freiberg v. Stoddard, 161 Pa. 263, 28 Atl. 1111, Affirming 7 Kulp, 161, holding drawer of accepted draft charged as paid by drawee's bank not entitled to preference on bank's insolvency; Richelieu Hotel Co. v. Miller, 50 Ill. App. 393; Drovers' & M. Nat. Bank v. Roller, 85 Md. 500, 36 L. R. A. 769, 60 Am. St. Rep. 344, 37 Atl. 30; Bishop v. Mahoney, 70 Minn. 240, 73 N. W. 6; Burnham v. Barth, 89 Wis. 370, 62 N. W. 96; Thuenmiller v. Barth, 89 Wis. 389, 62 N. W. 94; Union Nat. Bank v. Goetz, 138 Ill. 136, 32 Am. St. Rep. 119, 27 N. E. 907; Northern Dakota Elevator Co. v. Clark, 3 N. D. 33, 53 N. W. 175, — holding owner not a preferred creditor where his property is indistinguishably mingled with another's in whose hands it was.

Cited in note (25 L. R. A. 547) on exceptions to the prohibition of preferences by insolvent national banks.

2 L. R. A. 487, HOUSTON v. SLEDGE, 101 N. C. 640, 8 S. E. 145.

Pleadings.

Cited in Nims Mfg. Co. v. Blythe, 127 N. C. 326, 37 S. E. 455, holding complaint might be amended to conform to facts proved; Mayes v. Stephens, 38 Or. 516, 63 Pac. 760, holding error to strike out new matter in reply.

2 L. R. A. 489, JOHNSON v. BROOKLYN & C. R. CO. 37 Fed. 147.

Patent on combination.

Cited in Vermilya v. Erie R. Co. 89 Fed. 96, holding injunction pendente lite should not be granted where patent is for combination of old parts.

Cited in note (12 L. R. A. 107) on patent for combination.

2 L. R. A. 489, PITTSBURG, C. & ST. L. R. CO. v. LYON, 123 Pa. 140, 16 Atl. 607.

Reasonableness of railroad's regulations.

Cited in Muckle v. Rochester R. Co. 79 Hun, 35, 29 N. Y. Supp. 732, holding reasonableness of street railroad's regulation as to time limit for transfers a question of law.

Cited in note (43 L. R. A. 363) on duties of master and servant with regard to rules promulgated for the safe conduct of a business.

Exemplary damages.

Cited in Huling v. Henderson, 161 Pa. 560, 29 Atl. 276, holding exemplary damages recoverable for wilfully killing trees; Gallagher v. Burke, 13 Pa. Super. Ct. 251, sustaining instruction that jury might award exemplary damages for malicious eviction of tenant; Lynch v. Troxell, 207 Pa. 172, 56 Atl. 413, holding question of exemplary damages for flooding land wrongfully submitted to jury, in absence of evidence that injury was wilful or malicious.

Regulations as to baggage.

Distinguished in Howell v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 92 Hun, 426, 36 N. Y. Supp. 544, holding railroad's rule against extending stop-over privilege to baggage reasonable.

Powers of corporations.

Cited in Connecticut River Lumber Co. v. Olcott Falls Co. 65 N. H. 379, 13 L. R. A. 831, 21 Atl. 1090, holding corporations may exercise only powers conferred expressly or by necessary implication.

2 L. R. A. 491, FIFTH NAT. BANK v. ASHWORTH, 123 Pa. 212, 16 Atl. 596.

Duty of collecting agents.

Cited in American Exch. Nat. Bank v. Metropolitan Nat. Bank, 71 Mo. App. 457, holding bank receiving worthless check in payment of one sent to it for collection liable to sender; National Bank v. American Exch. Bank, 151 Mo. 330, 74 Am. St. Rep. 527, 52 S. W. 265, holding bank surrendering for check draft sent for collection, liable to sender; Gowling v. American Exp. Co. 102 Mo. App. 372, 76 S. W. 712, holding agent to collect check, accepting draft, personally liable to principal; Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank v. Cuyler, 18 Pa. Super. Ct. 437, 9 Pa. Dist. R. 539, holding bank receiving check for collection, and taking another in payment, is liable for amount of deposited check; Pepperday v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 183 Pa. 522, 39 L. R. A. 530, 63 Am. St. Rep. 769, 38 Atl. 1030, holding bank liable for receiving worthless check in payment on securities of depositor; Irwin v. Reeves Pulley Co. 20 Ind. App. 115, 48 N. E. 601, holding bank only bound to reasonable diligence to collect draft; Lowenstein v. Bresler, 109 Ala. 329, 19 So. 860, holding one receiving check in payment must duly present it and give notice of dishonor; Industrial Trust, Title & Sav. Co. v. Weakley, 103 Ala. 466, 49 Am. St. Rep. 45, 15 So. 854, holding delay in presentment of check received in payment by agent is at his risk; National Bank v. Johnson, 6 N. D. 186, 69 N. W. 49, holding owner of certificate of deposit, for which draft taken by bank collecting it, entitled to dividends on draft from receiver of drawer; Kirkham v. Bank of America, 26 App. Div. 121, 49 N. Y. Supp. 767, holding bank crediting the amount of draft for collection to sender cannot cancel the credit without returning draft; Paul v. Grimm, 165 Pa. 147, 44 Am. St. Rep. 648, 30 Atl. 721, holding agent liable to principal for amount for which lands sold received in bonds; Anderson v. Gill, 79 Md. 318, 25 L. R. A. 204, 47 Am. St. Rep. 402, 29 Atl. 527, holding drawer of check discharged by insolvency of bank on which it is drawn if check by it on third bank, accepted in payment, was not presented with diligence.

Cited in footnotes to St. Nicholas Bank v. State Nat. Bank, 13 L. R. A. 241, which holds collecting bank's duty not fulfilled by delivering correspondent's draft on third person to itself; First Nat. Bank v. Payne, 3 L. R. A. 284, which holds partner of insolvent banking firm cannot pay checks received from collecting bank by charging to drawers and crediting to latter bank; Bank of Antigo v. Union Trust Co. 23 L. R. A. 611, which holds bank takes risk of accepting check in payment of note received for collection; State Bank v. Byrne, 21 L. R. A. 753, which holds drawee's acceptance of draft presented by collecting bank not payment; Corn Exch. Bank v. Farmers' Nat. Bank, 7 L. R. A. 559, which holds only first of several banks receiving check for collection agent of payee; Grissom v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 3 L. R. A. 273, which holds bank has no right to pay to third party note made by depositor.

Cited in notes (4 L. R. A. 422) on bank receiving paper for collection; duty and liability; (7 L. R. A. 858) on duties, rights, obligations, and liabilities of bank for collection; (9 L. R. A. 109) on relations between depositor and bank; (8 L. R. A. 44) on liability of agent of collecting bank.

2 L. R. A. 494, PEOPLE v. SOULE, 74 Mich. 250, 41 N. W. 908.

Who engaged in selling liquor.

Cited in State v. Austin Club, 89 Tex. 26, 30 L. R. A. 503, 33 S. W. 113, holding social club not engaged in business of selling liquor; People v. Adelphi Club, 140 N. Y. 13, 31 L. R. A. 513, 52 Am. St. Rep. 705, 43 N. E. 410, holding social club does not require license to sell its liquor to members; Mohrman v. State, 105 Ga. 716, 43 L. R. A. 401, 70 Am. St. Rep. 80, 32 S. E. 143, holding social club a tippling house to be closed on Sunday; State v. Boston Club, 45 La. Ann. 592, 20 L. R. A. 187, 12 So. 895, holding the furnishing of drinks to members of social club, sales, within meaning of act requiring license; Barden v. Montana Club, 10 Mont. 335, 11 L. R. A. 595, 24 Am. St. Rep. 27, 25 Pac. 1042, holding social club not liable to pay license tax for sale of liquor to members.

Cited in footnotes to State ex rel. Bell v. St. Louis Club, 26 L. R. A. 573, which holds valid, distribution of liquor among members by social club; People v. Adelphi Club, 31 L. R. A. 510, which holds distribution of liquor by social club to members not illegal sale; State ex rel. Stevenson v. Law & Order Club, 62 L. R. A. 884, holding social club cannot dispense liquors without license to members presenting checks delivered upon payment of special assessment; Barden v. Montana Club, 11 L. R. A. 593, which holds social club not subject to license tax; State v. Boston Club, 20 L. R. A. 185, which holds incorporated institutions selling liquor to members owe license; State v. Horacek, 3 L. R. A. 687, which holds officers and members of association selling drinks to members liable to prosecution.

Cited in notes (12 L. R. A. 413) on intoxicating liquors; social club; (6 L. R. A. 128) on social clubs; evasion of liquor law by.

Distinguished in State ex rel. Bell v. St. Louis Club, 125 Mo. 330, 26 L. R. A. 581, 28 S. W. 604, holding social club's charter not forfeited for furnishing liquor to members without license as dramshop.

Who liable for selling liquors.

Cited in State v. Neis, 108 N. C. 792, 13 S. E. 225, upholding conviction for furnishing liquor for pay to member of unorganized syndicate of owners; People v. De Groot, 111 Mich. 247, 69 N. W. 248, holding one who, without paying tax, sells liquor, as agent of brewing company, may be informed against as principal; Krnavek v. State, 38 Tex. Crim. Rep. 49, 41 S. W. 612, upholding conviction of steward of social club for selling liquor to members.

Cited in note (10 L. R. A. 82) on late decisions under liquor laws of Michigan.

2 L. R. A. 498, JOHN S. HANES & CO. v. WADEY, 73 Mich. 178, 41 N. W. 222.

Remedial statutes.

Cited in footnotes to International Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Hardy, 24 L. R. A. 284, which denies legislative power to change remedy for enforcing trust deed; Jones v. German Ins. Co. 46 L. R. A. 860, which sustains statute shortening time of insurance company's immunity from suit without extending period of limitations; Kirkman v. Bird, 58 L. R. A. 670, which sustains as to prior obligations statute exempting wages for sixty days preceding levy.

Distinguished in John Spry Lumber Co. v. Sault Sav. Bank, Loan & T. Co. 77 Mich. 202, 6 L. R. A. 205, 18 Am. St. Rep. 396, 43 N. W. 778, holding lien law of 1887 unconstitutional.

Repeal of remedial statutes.

Cited in Angell v. West Bay City, 117 Mich. 690, 76 N. W. 128, holding without saving clause repeal of law giving statutory right destroys such existing right; Orman v. Crystal River R. Co. 5 Colo. App. 500, 39 Pac. 434, holding proceedings in action to enforce lien must comply with statutes in force when right accrues; Barton v. Steinmitz, 37 Ill. App. 142, holding enforcement of mechanic's lien governed by laws in force when mechanic seeks benefit of lien; Wilson v. Simon, 91 Md. 9, 80 Am. St. Rep. 427, 45 Atl. 1022, holding change in statutory remedy does not impair obligation of contract; Mack v. Degraff & R. Quarries, 57 Ohio St. 483, 63 Am. St. Rep. 729, 49 N. E. 697, holding foreign material man has equal rights with state material man under lien laws.

Disapproved in Waters v. Dixie Lumber & Mfg. Co. 106 Ga. 595, 71 Am. St. Rep. 284, 32 S. E. 636, holding material man's lien, when fixed and secured under statute, cannot be taken away; Garneau v. Port Blakely Mill Co. 8 Wash. 470, 36 Pac. 463, holding logger's lien for labor unaffected by repeal of statute pending enforcement.

2 L. R. A. 500, NEFF v. WELLESLEY, 148 Mass. 487, 20 N. E. 111.

Overseers of poor as agents of municipality.

Cited in Fitzgerald v. Lewis, 164 Mass. 500, 41 N. E. 687, holding overseers of poor in control of poor farm may exclude trespassers.

Duties of corporation as affecting liability for acts of servants.

Cited in Howard v. Worcester, 153 Mass. 428, 12 L. R. A. 161, 25 Am. St. Rep. 651, 27 N. E. 11, holding city engaged in building schoolhouse not liable for servant's negligence; Fox v. Chelsea, 171 Mass. 300, 50 N. E. 622, holding city liable for negligence of water commissioners acting as city's agents in laying water pipes; Watson v. Needham, 161 Mass. 411, 24 L. R. A. 288, 37 N. E. 204, holding question of plaintiff's fault, or nonliability of town for neglect of water commissioners, not raised; Collins v. Greenfield, 172 Mass. 81, 51 N. E. 454, holding town liable for negligence in connection with macadamizing done voluntarily as private enterprise; Hughes v. Monroe County, 79 Hun. 126, 29 N. Y. Supp. 495, holding county not liable for injuries to employee in insane asylum; Chicago v. Selz, S. & Co. 104 Ill. App. 381, holding municipality liable for damages in operation, partly for profit, of waterworks system; Mt. Hope Cemetery v. Boston, 158 Mass. 513, 35 Am. St. Rep. 615, 33 N. E. 695, holding legislature could not compel Boston to transfer title to cemetery to private corporation, without compensation; Hall v. Concord, 71 N. H. 373, 58 L. R. A. 460, 52 Atl. 864 (dissenting opinion), majority holding municipality not liable for negligence in repairing highway, although individual taxpayer bore part of expense.

Cited in footnotes to Culver v. Streator, 6 L. R. A. 270, which holds city liable for negligence of employee enforcing ordinance against unmuzzled dogs running at large; Howard v. Worcester, 12 L. R. A. 160, which holds city not liable for negligence in blasting for schoolhouse; Snider v. St. Paul, 18 L. R. A. 161, which holds city not liable for negligence of agents in providing and maintaining city hall.

Cited in notes (23 L. R. A. 201) on liability of charitable institution for negligence; (9 L. R. A. 210) on drains and sewers, as to liability of municipality for its own negligence only; (5 L. R. A. 254) on liability of municipal corporations for injuries resulting from defective streets, bridges, etc.

Distinguished in Taggart v. Fall River, 170 Mass. 327, 49 N. E. 622, holding city not liable for negligence connected with work of opening street through its land; Ulrich v. St. Louis, 112 Mo. 144, 34 Am. St. Rep. 372, 20 S. W. 466, holding corporation not liable to prisoner in workhouse for negligence.

Effect of contributory negligence.

Cited in Foy v. Winston, 126 N. C. 384, 35 S. E. 609, holding it not, of itself, negligence for blind man to pass along street without a guide; Robbins v. Springfield Street R. Co. 165 Mass. 36, 42 N. E. 334, holding defendant not relieved from liability for unnoticed defects in plaintiff's eyesight, contributing to injury.

Cited in note (12 L. R. A. 281) on contributory negligence as defense to action for damages for personal injuries caused by negligence.

Instruction as to part only of the evidence.

Cited in Shattuck v. Eldredge, 173 Mass. 168, 53 N. E. 377; Hicks v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 164 Mass. 428, 49 Am. St. Rep. 471, 41 N. E. 721; Hopcraft v. Kittredge, 162 Mass. 12, 37 N. E. 768; Moseley v. Washburn, 167 Mass. 302, 45 N. E. 753; Com. v. Cosseboom, 155 Mass. 301, 29 N. E. 463; Murray v. Knight, 156 Mass. 522, 31 N. E. 646,—holding trial judge not bound to single out particular part of evidence for special comment.

2 L. R. A. 502, LITTLEJOHN v. FITCHBURG R. CO. 148 Mass. 478, 20 N. E. 103.

Statutory liability for killing passenger.

Cited in Worcester & S. Street R. Co. v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 180 Mass. 266, 57 L. R. A. 630, 91 Am. St. Rep. 275, 62 N. E. 364, holding statute fixing penalty for negligent killing of passenger is new right of action to executor or administrator; Boston & M. R. Co. v. Hurd, 56 L. R. A. 208, 47 C. C. A. 619, 108 Fed. 120, holding section of statute fixing penalty for railroad company negligently killing passenger not strictly penal; Doyle v. Fitchburg R. Co. 162 Mass. 71, 25 L. R. A. 159, 44 Am. St. Rep. 335, 37 N. E. 770, holding intestate could not have released railroad company from liability for negligence resulting in death by accepting free ticket with such proviso.

Liability of carrier to passenger riding on free pass.

Cited in Quimby v. Boston & M. R. Co. 150 Mass. 368, 5 L. R. A. 848, 23 N. E. 205, holding valid, agreement to assume risks of travel on accepting free pass.

Carrier's liability for other carrier's negligence.

Approved in Frazier v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 180 Mass. 429, 62 N. E. 731, holding railroad liable for injuries to passenger in terminal station of another railroad used by it.

Cited in footnote to Murray v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 32 L. R. A. 539, which holds carrier liable to passenger for negligence of servant of other company over whose track train runs.

Liability for defects.

Cited in Reynolds v. Merchants' Woolen Co. 168 Mass. 504, 47 N. E. 406, holding mill owner not negligent in putting into his mill machinery made by reputable makers.

2 L. R. A. 504, McWHORTER v. PENSACOLA & A. R. CO. 24 Fla. 417, 12 Am. St. Rep. 220, 5 So. 129.

Suit against state.

Cited in Bloxham v. Florida C. & P. R. Co. 35 Fla. 712, 17 So. 902, holding suit against comptroller to recover taxes, suit against state, and cannot be brought.

Delegation of power.

Cited in State ex rel. Godard v. Johnson, 61 Kan. 843, 49 L. R. A. 675, 60 Pac. 1068 (dissenting opinion), majority holding that court of visitation has no legislative power to fix railroad rates; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 495, 42 L. ed. 252, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896, holding Interstate Commerce Commission has no power to determine that railroad rates are reasonable; Storrs v. Pensacola & A. R. Co. 29 Fla. 623, 11 So. 296, holding act authorizing railroad commissioners to fix rates valid.

Cited in notes (33 L. R. A. 183) on legislative power to fix tolls, rates, or prices; (2 L. R. A. 195) on authority of railroad commissioners.

2 L. R. A. 510, HORNUNG v. STATE, 116 Ind. 458, 19 N. E. 157.

Fiduciary capacity of county official.

Cited in McCollow v. Shaw, 21 Ind. App. 68, 51 N. E. 488, holding county commissioners not entitled to compensation for services for which other persons might have been employed.

Decision as to vote at election.

Cited in note (47 L. R. A. 562) on decision of tie vote at election.

2 L. R. A. 512, GAGE v. HAMPTON, 127 Ill. 87, 20 N. E. 12.

Who is a trespasser.

Cited in Mickey v. Barton, 194 Ill. 456, 62 N. E. 802, holding one entering upon land rightfully held by another, who had cleared a part of it, mere trespasser; Phelps v. Randolph, 45 Ill. App. 494, holding entry with several men, taking away property, cutting wire fence, and threatening to shoot one attempting to enter, forcible; Eichengreen v. Appel, 44 Ill. App. 20, holding owner may peaceably eject tenant on sufferance; Harding v. Sandy, 43 Ill. App. 445, holding owner might take from another possession of his own land; Prouty v. Tilden, 164 Ill. 170, 45 N. E. 445, holding mere trespass upon land of one in possession under deed for twenty years not act of dispossession; Wahl v. Laubersheimer, 174 Ill. 343, 51 N. E. 860, holding violent entry on land not lawful, though breach of peace may not result.

Limited in Bloomington v. Brophy, 32 Ill. App. 403, holding city with title can take possession without actual force.

When bar of statute of limitations complete.

Cited in Stalford v. Goldring, 197 Ill. 166, 64 N. E. 395, holding bar of statute not complete by mere payment of taxes without possession before entry by paramount title; Mickey v. Barton, 194 Ill. 455, 62 N. E. 802, holding grantee from one who had been in possession under colorable title for sufficient time can remove cloud from title; Keppel v. Dreier, 187 Ill. 303, 58 N. E. 386, holding statutory title under color of title, with possession and payment of taxes, need not be pleaded if proved; Coverdale v. Curry, 48 Ill. App. 216, holding taking possession by removing and resetting fence sustains action of forcible entry and detainer; Sexton v. Carley, 47 Ill. App. 320, holding one claiming under lease, after attempted forfeiture of prior ninety-five-year lease with possession of forty years, does not acquire possession; Mecartney v. Morse, 137 Ill. 484, 24 N. E. 576, holding owner can maintain action to set aside tax deed, no possession under it being shown; Travers v. McElvain, 181 Ill. 385, 55 N. E. 135, holding possession under statute must be open, notorious, and exclusive to maintain ejectment; McCauley v. Mahon, 174 Ill. 388, 51 N. E. 829, holding ejectment will not lie if possession does not concur with bar of prior paid taxes; Miller v. Stalker, 158 Ill. 523, 42 N. E. 79, holding color of title, possession, and payment of taxes will maintain action to remove cloud on title; Coward v. Coward, 148 Ill. 274, 35 N. E. 759, and Chicago v. Middlebrooke, 143 Ill. 270, 32 N. E. 457, holding action to remove cloud on title, by one claiming under color of title, payment of taxes, and possession, maintainable; Gage v. Smith, 142 Ill. 195, 31 N. E. 430, holding possession must be coupled with color of title under tax deed and payment of taxes for term of years, to bar true owner; White v. Harris, 206 Ill. 586, 69 N. E. 519, holding ejectment plaintiff, claiming under § 7, limitation law, must show payment of taxes for seven successive years after acquiring color of title, and possession thereafter taken.

Cited in footnotes to Alexander v. Wilcox, 9 L. R. A. 735, which holds title acquired as against lien of tax deed by ten years' adverse possession; Sontag v. Bigelow, 16 L. R. A. 326, which holds master's deed in partition proceedings sufficient color of title.

Cited in notes (9 L. R. A. 773, 774) on tax title; adverse possession under color of title; (13 L. R. A. 207) on defenses in actions of ejectment; (6 L. R. A. 433) on adverse possession; (4 L. R. A. 647) on adverse possession; statutory bar.

Who may maintain action to quiet title.

Distinguished in Montana Ore Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 27 Mont. 541, 71 Pac. 1005, holding equity suit to quiet title maintainable by possessor of apex of vein claiming extra-lateral rights.

2 L. R. A. 517, McINTIRE v. LEVERING, 148 Mass. 546, 12 Am. St. Rep. 594, 20 N. E. 191.

Evidence of character.

Cited in Howland v. George F. Blake Mfg. Co. 156 Mass. 589, 31 N. E. 656, holding evidence of good reputation of plaintiff in libel action properly excluded; Glace v. Hummel, 4 Dauphin Co. Rep. 7, 24 Pa. Co. Ct. 556; Olson v. Trete, 46 Minn. 226, 48 N. W. 914; Bank of Miller v. Richmon, 64 Neb. 113, 89 N. W. 627,—holding proof of plaintiff's general reputation admissible in first instance in action for malicious prosecution; Hlubek v. Pinske, 84 Minn. 365, 87 N. E. 939, holding evidence as to plaintiff's bad character may be given in action for malicious prosecution; Stubbs v. Mulholland, 168 Mo. 79, 67 S. W. 650, holding, in action for malicious prosecution, malice may be inferred from failure to inquire as to character of accused.

Distinguished in Geary v. Stevenson, 169 Mass. 32, 47 N. E. 508, holding evidence of plaintiff's good reputation inadmissible in action for false imprisonment; Richard v. Boland, 5 Misc. 554, 26 N. Y. Supp. 57, holding evidence as to plaintiff's good character inadmissible in action for malicious prosecution for act not involving moral turpitude.

2 L. R. A. 519, LORD v. EDWARDS, 148 Mass. 476, 12 Am. St. Rep. 581, 20 N. E. 161.

Sales of personal property.

Cited in Alden v. Hart, 161 Mass. 581, 37 N. E. 742, holding it unnecessary to decide question whether, in contract for sale and delivery, title to coal passes when put aboard vessel for shipment; Mobile Fruit & Trading Co. v. McGuire, 81 Minn. 235, 83 N. W. 833, holding buyer assumes risk of deterioration incident to course of transportation; McKee v. Wild, 52 Neb. 12, 71 N. W. 958, holding warranty of quality in sale of corn applied to corn when delivered for shipment.

Cited in footnotes to Anderson v. Crisp, 18 L. R. A. 419, which holds contract for sale of certain number of unsegregated brick to be taken from kiln does not pass title; Tyler Lumber Co. v. Charlton, 55 L. R. A. 301, which holds title does not pass by acceptance of offer to sell lumber piled at mill to be inspected by common employee.

Cited in notes (5 L. R. A. 703) on sale of goods by sample; (17 L. R. A. 177, 180) on essentials of a valid sale of goods; (62 L. R. A. 798) on effect of contract to ship goods f. o. b.

Distinguished in Carleton v. Lombard, 149 N. Y. 604, 44 N. E. 1121, holding manufacturers liable for latent defects in goods corresponding in description to those ordered. .

2 L. R. A. 520, LOUISVILLE, N. A. & C. R. CO. v. BUCK, 116 Ind. 566, 9 Am. St. Rep. 883, 19 N. E. 453.

Pleading.

Cited in Chicago & E. R. Co. v. Lee, 17 Ind. App. 219, 46 N. E. 543, holding complaint insufficient because no allegation of want of knowledge of change in railroad roadbed making it unsafe to work in; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Sandford, 117 Ind. 266, 19 N. E. 770, holding allegation of ignorance of baggage master of defect in railroad bridge essential to recovery; Evansville & T. H. R. Co. v. Duel, 134 Ind. 158, 33 N. E. 355, holding knowledge by master, actual or imputed, of defective condition of engine, must be alleged.

When master liable.

Cited in Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Heck, 151 Ind. 308, 50 N. E. 988, holding train despatcher vice principal; Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co. v. McMullen, 117 Ind. 444, 10 Am. St. Rep. 67, 20 N. E. 287, holding railroad company must provide and maintain in good condition brake handles; Cincinnati, I. St. L. & C. R. Co. v. Roesch, 126 Ind. 447, 26 N. E. 171, holding railroad company liable for putting cable used in unloading car to unusual strain; Indiana, I. & I. R. Co. v. Snyder, 140 Ind. 653, 39 N. E. 912, holding railway company liable for defective handle made by carpenter in its shops; Indiana Natural & Illuminating Gas Co. v. Marshall, 22 Ind. App. 124, 52 N. E. 232, holding master undertakes that appliance for electric-light-pole climbing is fit for that use; Cincinnati, I. St. L. & C. R. Co. v. Lang, 118 Ind. 583, 21 N. E. 317, holding servant sent on special order not bound to know of the running of irregular train; Rogers v. Leyden, 127 Ind. 58, 26 N. E. 210, holding servant can recover, although aware of unsafe place, if ignorant that peril is increased; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Woodward, 9 Ind. App. 172, 36 N. E. 442, holding brakeman does not assume risk of latent defect in track and cars; Salem Stone & Lime Co. v. Tepps, 10 Ind. App. 519, 38 N. E. 229, holding quarry stripper not required to inspect machinery to discover latent defect; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Howell, 147 Ind. 270, 45 N. E. 584, holding employee not bound to discover broken coupling link when he had not used it, and break was not obvious; Pennsylvania Co. v. Burgett, 7 Ind. App. 346, 33 N. E. 914, holding that servant cannot recover when aware of defects; Levey v. Bigelow, 6 Ind. App. 694, 34 N. E. 128, holding minor with knowledge of danger of handling safe appliance takes risk of employment.

Cited in footnotes to Sweet v. Ohio Coal Co. 9 L. R. A. 861, which holds master may conduct business in own way, though other method less hazardous; Minty v. Union P. R. Co. 4 L. R. A. 409, which holds that it will be presumed, in case of derailment, that suitable instrumentalities provided; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Hall, 4 L. R. A. 710, which holds company liable to brakeman for injury by low bridge; Goodrich v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 5 L. R. A. 750, which holds master liable for using foreign cars with defective coupling apparatus; Lehigh & W.

Coal Co. v. Hayes, 5 L. R. A. 441, which holds master furnishing ordinary appliances not liable for failure to furnish unusual one; Tennessee Coal, I. & R. Co. v. Kyle, 12 L. R. A. 103, which holds running freight train without cow-catcher negligence; Pittsburg & L. E. R. Co. v. Henley, 15 L. R. A. 384, which holds use of two coupling devices not negligence per se; Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Huber, 5 L. R. A. 439, which holds brakeman not negligent per se in using brake manifestly defective.

Cited in notes (17 L. R. A. 77) on action by parent for death of child caused by negligence; (41 L. R. A. 40) on actual knowledge as an element of an employer's liability to an injured servant; (41 L. R. A. 46) on liability of employer predicated on constructive knowledge as to the condition of machinery and apparatus; (41 L. R. A. 128) on obligation of master and servant as to inspection of instrumentalities in use; (5 L. R. A. 172) on action for damages for death caused by negligence; (4 L. R. A. 797) on duty of employer to provide safe machinery, tools, and appliances; (4 L. R. A. 261) on liability for death caused by negligence; (13 L. R. A. 375) as to when servant assumes risk of implements furnished; (5 L. R. A. 340) on the law of the land.

Effect of Sunday law.

Cited in Gross v. Miller, 93 Iowa, 80, 26 L. R. A. 608, 61 N. W. 385, holding Sunday hunting no bar to action for being shot; Kansas City v. Orr, 62 Kan. 68, 50 L. R. A. 786, 61 Pac. 397, holding city cannot defend for negligence on ground that work was performed on Sunday; Solarz v. Manhattan R. Co. 8 Misc. 658, 29 N. Y. Supp. 1123, holding Sunday law cannot be pleaded as defense; Hoadley v. International Paper Co. 72 Vt. 81, 47 Atl. 169, holding no defense that decedent was working on Sunday; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Yopst, 118 Ind. 254, 3 L. R. A. 227, 20 N. E. 222, holding allegation of necessity essential to valid Sunday contract.

Cited in footnotes to Gross v. Miller, 26 L. R. A. 605, which holds violation of Sunday law by hunting no defense to action for negligent injury; Dugan v. State, 9 L. R. A. 321, which holds pilot on board, carrying pleasure parties on Sunday, punishable; Handy v. Globe Pub. Co. 4 L. R. A. 466, which holds it unnecessary to plead illegality of contract for publishing Sunday newspapers; Van Auken v. Chicago & W. M. R. Co. 22 L. R. A. 33, which holds riding home from station quietly on Sunday evening not labor.

When action for damages maintainable.

Cited in Clore v. McIntire, 120 Ind. 264, 22 N. E. 128, holding action by administrator for death by negligence of interstate maintainable.

Cited in footnote to O'Reilly v. New York & N. E. R. Co. 6 L. R. A. 719, holding action may be maintained in one state by personal representative of one killed by carrier in another state, where cause of action survives by statute of the two states.

(Cited in note (7 L. R. A. 154) on action for damages for death caused by negligence.

Damages.

Cited in Hunt v. Conner, 26 Ind. App. 50, 59 N. E. 50, holding damages to wife and children for loss of services of father might include value of personal services and paternal assistance; Wabash R. Co. v. Oregan, 23 Ind. App. 4, 54 N. E. 767, holding pecuniary loss not implied from decease of younger brother not bound to contribute to support of older brothers; Tuteur v. Chicago & N. W. R.

Co. 77 Wis. 509, 46 N. W. 897, holding jury can consider reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefit to children, from loss of mother, by way of support or otherwise; Korraday v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 131 Ind. 262, 29 N. E. 1069, holding presumption that father's services are of value to wife and infant children; Pape v. Wright, 116 Ind. 504, 19 N. E. 459, holding middleman can recover commission for procuring purchaser of patented articles, although sale by owner illegal.

Cited in footnotes to Fordyce v. McCants, 4 L. R. A. 296, which holds only nominal damages recoverable for death of child not shown to have assisted father; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Slater, 6 L. R. A. 418, which authorizes allowance to infant for loss, by injury, of earnings during minority.

Questions for jury.

Cited in Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Burton, 139 Ind. 378, 47 Am. St. Rep. 274, 37 N. E. 150, holding jury should determine amount of damages for loss of services of husband by death; Indiana, I. & I. R. Co. v. Bundy, 152 Ind. 596, 53 N. E. 175, holding jury should decide whether rear-end brakemen knew of open wires over which he tripped in uncoupling car; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. McIntosh, 140 Ind. 269, 38 N. E. 476, holding court, and not jury, should draw conclusion as to proximate cause of death from facts found; Wabash & W. R. Co. v. Morgan, 132 Ind. 440, 31 N. E. 661, holding instruction as to duty of master and servant to ascertain defects and look out for danger proper.

Special verdict.

Cited in Sult v. Warren School Twp. 8 Ind. App. 659, 36 N. E. 291, holding special verdict should have found facts upon which subscription to school was conditioned; Cincinnati, I. St. L. & C. R. Co. v. Grames, 8 Ind. App. 134, 34 N. E. 613, holding special verdict does not call for instructions on law; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Hart, 119 Ind. 281, 4 L. R. A. 553, 21 N. E. 753, holding special verdict, silent as to condition and operation of locomotive, to be regarded as finding against plaintiff; Rietman v. Stolte, 120 Ind. 317, 22 N. E. 304, holding special verdict having found servant's knowledge of defect, he cannot recover; Nicodemus v. Simons, 121 Ind. 569, 23 N. E. 521, holding objection as to silence of verdict upon material fact waived; O'Neal v. Chicago & I. Coal R. Co. 132 Ind. 113, 31 N. E. 669, holding special verdict required finding of peril of notoriously uneven track as incident to service; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Bates, 146 Ind. 567, 45 N. E. 108, holding special verdict did not find facts showing foreign car was not duly inspected; Boyer v. Robertson, 144 Ind. 607, 43 N. E. 879, holding special verdict defective which found evidence, but not inference from it; Evansville & R. R. Co. v. Maddux, 134 Ind. 579, 33 N. E. 345, holding special verdict silent as to manner of loading car, fact must be held to be found against one bound to prove it; Evansville & T. H. R. Co. v. Taft, 2 Ind. App. 242, 28 N. E. 443, holding venire de novo will not be granted when special verdict sustained by facts found; Fisher v. Fisher, 8 Ind. App. 666, 36 N. E. 296, holding illegality of consideration must be found in special verdict to sustain defense in action on note; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Kurtz, 10 Ind. App. 63, 35 N. E. 201, holding complaint defective for lack of averment of knowledge of defect by master, not cured by special findings of jury.

Declaration as part of transaction.

Cited in Slavens v. Northern P. R. Co. 38 C. C. A. 158, 97 Fed. 262, holding declaration of deceased workman before accident, that he understood the danger of place he was working in, admissible; State v. Murphy, 16 R. I. 531, 17 Atl. 998, holding declaration of deceased as to his assailants, made within fifteen minutes thereafter, admissible; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Stein, 133 Ind. 253, 19 L. R. A. 749, 31 N. E. 180, holding declaration of engineer of locomotive drawing train, made within few minutes of accident, admissible; Keyes v. State, 122 Ind. 530, 23 N. E. 1097, holding remark made in quarter of a minute after shot fired admissible; Green v. State, 154 Ind. 658, 57 N. E. 637, holding exclamation of deceased, immediately after shot fired, admissible; Louisville, E. & St. L. R. Co. v. Berry, 2 Ind. App. 433, 28 N. E. 714, holding declaration of deceased, immediately after accident, admissible; Cross Lake Logging Co. v. Joyce, 28 C. C. A. 252, 55 U. S. App. 221, 83 Fed. 991, holding statement by injured man, accusing first man coming to his assistance of being indirect cause of accident, admissible; Patterson v. Hochster, 38 App. Div. 401, 56 N. Y. Supp. 467, holding declaration of deceased as to injury, while lying on sidewalk with leg in coal hole, admissible; Peirce v. Van Dusen, 24 C. C. A. 293, 47 U. S. App. 339, 78 Fed. 707, holding declaration of engineer of locomotive that backed the car by which hand injured admissible; Washington & G. R. Co. v. McLane, 11 App. D. C. 223, holding declaration of deceased boy of fourteen, while lying between tracks with legs severed, admissible as to cause of accident; Metropolitan R. Co. v. Collins, 1 App. D. C. 387, holding declaration of transfer agent of street car line, that conductor started car without his authority, inadmissible; Hinchcliffe v. Koontz, 121 Ind. 424, 16 Am. St. Rep. 403, 23 N. E. 271, holding letter in reference to hiring, written day before and received day after contract made, admissible.

Cited in note (19 L. R. A. 749) on declarations of injured party and third persons, when admissible.

Disapproved in Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Johnson, 36 Ill. App. 566, holding statement of injured woman, made to her daughter immediately after accident as to its cause, inadmissible.

Public policy affecting action.

Cited in Levy v. Spencer, 18 Colo. 538, 36 Am. St. Rep. 303, 33 Pac. 415, holding action to enforce illegal executory contract will not be sustained; Winchester Electric Light Co. v. Veal, 145 Ind. 511, 41 N. E. 334, holding county treasurer cannot recover on notes given for public money illegally loaned by him.

2 L. R. A. 526, ROYAL v. AULTMAN-TAYLOR CO. 116 Ind. 424, 19 N. E. 202.

Demand of performance.

Cited in Van Horn v. Mercer, 29 Ind. App. 283, 64 N. E. 531, holding demand unnecessary before suit for breach of agreement to support grantor in consideration of land conveyed, which grantee has sold.

Distinguished in Bonniwell v. Madison, 107 Iowa. 89, 77 N. W. 530, holding where there is an evident waiver of performance of condition subsequent demand is necessary before forfeiture.

Conditions subsequent.

Distinguished in Van Horn v. Mercer, 29 Ind. App. 280, 64 N. E. 531, holding estate upon condition subsequent not created by deed providing that grantee's agreement to support grantor should be a lien for certain sum.

2 L. R. A. 528, ST. JOHNSBURY & L. C. R. CO. v. WILLARD, 61 Vt. 134, 15 Am. St. Rep. 886, 17 Atl. 38.

Ownership of improvements after foreclosure.

Cited in St. Louis, K. & S. W. R. Co. v. Nyce, 61 Kan. 412, 48 L. R. A. 249, 59 Pac. 1040, holding owner of land by foreclosure cannot claim value of improvements by railroad, made before foreclosure.

Cited in notes (11 L. R. A. 727) on whatever is affixed to the soil belongs thereto; (16 L. R. A. 805) on value of improvements made by one taking property by eminent domain as an element of damages.

How senior mortgage affected by foreclosure of junior.

Cited in Buzzell v. Still, 63 Vt. 495, 25 Am. St. Rep. 777, 22 Atl. 619, holding senior mortgagee not barred by junior mortgagee's foreclosure, though party to action.

2 L. R. A. 529, McCLEEREY v. WAKEFIELD, 76 Iowa, 529, 41 N. W. 210.

Parol authority to insert grantee's name in deed.

Cited in Lafferty v. Lafferty, 42 W. Va. 789, 26 S. E. 262, holding agent with parol authority may fill blank in deed with grantee's name; Exchange Nat. Bank v. Fleming, 63 Kan. 142, 65 Pac. 213, upholding deed with grantee's name filled in by equitable owner under parol authority of legal owner.

Estoppel.

Cited in note (5 L. R. A. 121) on estoppel by deed.

Effect of notice on purchaser's title.

Cited in Zuber v. Johnson, 108 Iowa, 277, 79 N. W. 76, holding purchaser at execution sale bound to take notice of asserted claim to title by one in possession; Mason Lumber Co. v. Collier, 74 Mich. 249, 41 N. W. 913, holding holder of legal title with notice and in fraud of equitable title is trustee for equitable owner.

Cited in footnote to Odom v. Riddick, 7 L. R. A. 118, which holds bona fide purchaser's title not impaired by grantor's undeclared lunacy.

Cited in note (10 L. R. A. 677) on protection of bona fide holder of commercial paper.

2 L. R. A. 532, WEEKS v. TRASK, 81 Me. 127, 16 Atl. 413.

2 L. R. A. 534, MARSHALL v. FARMERS & M. SAV. BANK, 85 Va. 676, 17 Am. St. Rep. 84, 8 S. E. 586.

Personal liability of corporation officer.

Cited in Prescott v. Haughey, 65 Fed. 658, holding national bank directors individually liable for damages caused by false and fraudulent representations; Toledo Sav. Bank v. Johnston, 94 Iowa, 217, 62 N. W. 748, holding director responsible to bank for gross neglect or inattention to official duties; Union Nat. Bank v. Hill, 148 Mo. 391, 71 Am. St. Rep. 615, 49 S. W. 1012, holding directors chargeable with knowledge of illegal loans; Campbell v. Watson, 62 N. J. Eq. 440, 50 Atl. 120, holding bank directors failing to observe by-law requiring quarterly examination of banks, relying upon cashier's statements and state examination, liable to receiver for cashier's speculations; Briggs v. Spaulding, 141 U. S. 171, 35 L. ed. 677, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 924 (dissenting opinion), majority holding defendant directors not responsible for wrongful acts of other directors or agents under the evidence; Kemp v. National Bank, 48 C. C. A. 220, 109 Fed. 54, referring to, but not deciding, question of individual liability of bank officer to depositor for fraud.

Cited in footnote to Boyd v. Mutual Fire Asso. 61 L. R. A. 918, which sustains right of directors to benefit of limitations in action for misfeasance or malfeasance in office.

Cited in notes (4 L. R. A. 747) on equitable suits against directors; (9 L. R. A. 652) on purchase of shares of stock of corporation by another corporation, as to liability of directors of corporation; (13 L. R. A. 371) on banking a legitimate object of copartnership as to relation between bank officials and depositors; (55 L. R. A. 756, 759, 760, 769) on liability of directors of corporation to corporation.

Right to sue.

Cited in Union Nat. Bank v. Hill, 148 Mo. 394, 71 Am. St. Rep. 615, 49 S. W. 1012, holding bank directors liable to shareholders and creditors for negligence on failure of assignee to sue.

Cited in footnote to Pickle v. People's Nat. Bank, 7 L. R. A. 93, which holds acceptance of check necessary to give right of action against bank.

Degree of care required of bank officer.

Cited in Warren v. Robison, 19 Utah, 318, 75 Am. St. Rep. 734, 57 Pac. 287, holding bank directors not excusable for ignorance, inexperience, or honesty of intentions; Warren v. Robison, 19 Utah, 308, 75 Am. St. Rep. 734, 57 Pac. 287, holding bank directors must exercise ordinary care, skill, and diligence.

Cited in note (15 L. R. A. 306) on care required of bank directors.

Bank directors as trustees for depositors.

Cited in Foster v. Bank of Abingdon, 88 Fed. 607, holding directors of a bank trustees for depositors.

2 L. R. A. 540, GREEN & B. RIVER NAV. CO. v. CHESAPEAKE, O. & S. W. R. CO. 88 Ky. 1, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 515, 10 S. W. 6.

Damages incidental to repair of bridge.

Cited in Rhea v. Newport News & M. Valley R. Co. 50 Fed. 23, holding railroad company, in legally rebuilding bridge for benefit of public, not liable for obstructing navigation; East Montpelier v. Wheelock, 70 Vt. 398, 41 Atl. 432, holding municipality, in making required repairs to bridge, not liable for necessarily lowering ponded water.

Cited in notes (59 L. R. A. 39, 72) on right to obstruct or destroy rights of navigation; (8 L. R. A. 787) on damnum absque injuria.

Navigable waters.

Cited in footnote to Olive v. State, 4 L. R. A. 33, which holds non-navigable river not made public highway by statute declaring it to be such without providing for compensation to riparian owners.

Cited in notes (8 L. R. A. 92) on title to soil below ordinary high-water mark; (5 L. R. A. 62) on riparian rights of owners bounding on navigable streams.

2 L. R. A. 544, CHISM v. SCHIPPER. 51 N. J. L. 1, 14 Am. St. Rep. 668, 16 Atl. 316.

When approval necessary in building contract.

Cited in Curley v. Hudson County, 66 N. J. L. 408, 49 Atl. 471, holding claim for work on building public road not allowable without engineer's approval; Bernz v. Marcus Sayre Co. 52 N. J. Eq. 282, 30 Atl. 21, holding architect's certificate or its waiver necessary to recover on building contract; Welch v. Hubschmitt Bldg. & Woodworking Co. 61 N. J. L. 64, 38 Atl. 824, holding certificate of architect not final, except as to matters specified in contract; Crane Elevator Co. v. Clark. 26 C. C. A. 102, 53 U. S. App. 257, 80 Fed. 707, holding jury should decide whether work had been accepted when architect expressed satisfaction with it; Bowe v. United States. 42 Fed. 780, holding discretion of umpire as to whether workmanship and materials were satisfactory should be exercised reasonably; Bradner v. Roffsell, 57 N. J. L. 416, 31 Atl. 387, Reversing 57 N. J. L. 33, 29 Atl. 317, holding refusal of architect to give certificate not fraudulent where there was deviation from contract.

Cited in footnote to Arnold v. Bournique, 20 L. R. A. 493, which holds contractor entitled to payment on delivery of architect's certificate handed back without presentation to owner.

Cited in note (17 L. R. A. 211) on contract, promise to give full satisfaction: subject to judgment of promisee.

2 L. R. A. 549, CHICAGO MUT. LIFE INDEMNITY ASSO. v. HUNT, 127 Ill. 257, 20 N. E. 55.

Jurisdiction of court.

Cited in Wheeler v. Pullman Iron & Steel Co. 143 Ill. 205, 17 L. R. A. 820, 32 N. E. 420, holding court of chancery without jurisdiction to dissolve corporation for cause other than specified in statute; J. W. Butler Paper Co. v. Robbins, 151 Ill. 621, 38 N. E. 153, holding jurisdiction waived in suit brought by creditor of corporation; Parmelee v. Price, 208 Ill. 558, 70 N. E. 709, holding chancellor may determine questions of fact without jury in creditor's proceeding against stockholder for unpaid subscription; Chicago Steel Works v. Illinois Steel Co. 153 Ill. 17, 38 N. E. 1033, holding order appointing receiver of corporation not reviewable where franchise not involved; Bixler v. Summerfield, 195 Ill. 152, 62 N. E. 849, holding allegation that a finishing company used its funds to purchase real estate ultra vires, and praying for its dissolution, states a cause of action for relief in equity.

Dissolution of benefit societies.

Cited in Robinson v. Raulston, 33 Ill. App. 167, holding attaching stockholder not affected by bill to dissolve corporation and appoint receiver; Hunt v. Le Grand Roller Skating Rink Co. 143 Ill. 122, 32 N. E. 525, holding attorney general cannot file bill in equity to dissolve corporation for acts subjecting it to forfeiture of charter.

Cited in footnote to Republic L. Ins. Co. v. Swigert, 12 L. R. A. 328, which holds corporation, in suit to wind it up, entitled to object to order directing suits for unpaid stock subscriptions.

Cited in note (8 L. R. A. 858) on dissolution of corporation.

Character of contract with benefit society.

Cited in Calkins v. Bump, 120 Mich. 343, 79 N. W. 491, holding endowment insurance in excess of power of fraternal society; Lehman v. Clark, 174 Ill. 284, 43 L. R. A. 651, 51 N. E. 222, holding receiver of benefit society cannot recover assessment made by him under order of court, for contract is unilateral; L'Union St. Jean Baptiste v. Ostigny, 25 R. I. 481, 64 L. R. A. 159, 56 Atl. 681, holding mutual benefit society cannot sue ex-member for dues, for nonpayment of which he was expelled.

Cited in footnotes to Re Globe Mut. Ben. Asso. 17 L. R. A. 547, which holds receiving infants as members of assessment insurance company unlawful; Shaw v. Davis, 23 L. R. A. 294, which denies minority stockholder's right to enjoin legal contract.

Cited in notes (9 L. R. A. 275) on restraining exercise of corporate franchise; action by one in behalf of others; (46 L. R. A. 620) on charter restrictions on eligibility to become a shareholder in a corporation; (57 L. R. A. 504) on insurance on the life of a minor; (23 L. R. A. 436) on liability of member of benefit society to action for assessment; (7 L. R. A. 189) on mutual benefit certificate; transfer of; (4 L. R. A. 382) on benefit association; enlarged powers conferred by statute.

Distinguished in Re Globe Mut. Ben. Asso. 63 Hun, 264, 17 N. Y. Supp. 852, holding co-operative insurance company cannot insure infants.

Tontine fund.

Distinguished in Wheeler v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 102 Ill. App. 57, holding foreign corporation not required to conform to provisions of statute relating to tontine accumulations.

Penalty for failure to pay dues.

Cited in Betts v. Connecticut Indemnity Asso. 71 Conn. 753, 44 Atl. 65, holding assets of benefit association in proceeding to dissolve would not include assessments not already levied; Gray v. Daly, 40 App. Div. 42, 57 N. Y. Supp. 527, holding resigned member, not in arrears, not liable for assessment by receiver of dissolved accident association.

2 L. R. A. 556, LEE v. STURGES, 46 Ohio St. 153, 19 N. E. 560.

What should be included in taxable list.

Cited in State Board v. Holliday, 150 Ind. 250, 42 L. R. A. 838, 49 N. E. 14, holding prior omission from list of taxable property no excuse for continued omission; Lee v. Dawson, 8 Ohio C. C. 371, holding appearance before auditor of owner's agent sufficient to authorize him to make additions to return; Christian Moerlein Brewing Co. v. Hagerty, 8 Ohio C. C. 335, holding act valid providing that return by manufacturer for taxation shall be based on average monthly value of material, determined on last day of month; Lander v. Burke, 65 Ohio St. 541, 63 N. E. 69, holding "capital stock" includes personal property which corporations must return for taxation; Hubbard v. Brush, 61 Ohio St. 262, 55 N. E. 829, holding foreign corporation with business and property wholly in state must list capital stock for taxation; Gager v. Prout, 48 Ohio St. 107, 26 N. E. 1013, holding act providing for additions to taxes for false return of property valid; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Poe, 61 Fed. 455, holding that telegraph plant in one state has added value for taxation because it is part of a large system; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Poe, 61 Fed. 461, holding act providing that value of shares of capital stock should be used in determining value of property of corporation, invalid; Bacon v. State Tax Comrs. 126 Mich. 27, 60 L. R. A. 333, 86 Am. St. Rep. 524, 85 N. W. 307, holding stock in foreign corporation, owned by resident, subject to taxation; Lander v. Burke, 65 Ohio St. 542, 63 N. E. 69, holding shares of resident stockholder in domestic corporation with property out of state not exempt from taxation; Western Assur.

Co. v. Halliday, 61 C. C. A. 275, 126 Fed. 261, holding municipal bonds deposited as security by foreign insurance company with superintendent of insurance, taxable by state.

Cited in notes (58 L. R. A. 613) on practice and procedure of assessors in taxation of capital stock of corporations in United States; (58 L. R. A. 579) on taxation of capital stock of stockholders in foreign corporations.

Collection of back taxes.

Cited in Adams v. Kuykendall, 83 Miss. 595, 35 So. 830, holding back taxes may be assessed upon property theretofore omitted from tax rolls.

Equal protection and privileges.

Cited in Humphreys v. State, 70 Ohio St. 87, 70 N. E. 957, holding statute subjecting legacies to foreign charitable institutions to inheritance tax, from which domestic charities are exempt, constitutional.

Consolidation of railroads.

Cited in Ashley v. Ryan, 49 Ohio St. 529, 31 N. E. 721, holding act requiring fee upon filing articles of agreement of consolidation of railways not invalid because consolidation included companies out of state; Robison v. Cleveland City R. Co. 5 Ohio N. P. 301, holding consolidation of railway companies abolished them in creation of new corporation.

2 L. R. A. 564. STATE ex rel. LEESE v. CHICAGO, B. & Q. R. CO. 25 Neb. 156, 41 N. W. 125.

Followed without discussion in State ex rel. Leese v. Missouri P. R. Co. 25 Neb. 165, 41 N. W. 127; State ex rel. Leese v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 25 Neb. 166, 41 N. W. 128.

Eminent domain.

Cited in Trester v. Missouri P. R. Co. 33 Neb. 178, 49 N. W. 1110, holding new railway company by consolidation of companies organized in different states, can acquire property by eminent domain; Koenig v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 27 Neb. 704, 43 N. W. 423, holding foreign railway company cannot acquire real estate until it becomes a domestic corporation; Southern Illinois & M. Bridge Co. v. Stone, 174 Mo. 32, 63 L. R. A. 311, 73 S. W. 453, holding foreign bridge corporation cannot exercise power of eminent domain without authority from legislature.

Cited in note (24 L. R. A. 328) on right of foreign corporations to own real estate.

Consolidation of corporations.

Cited in Walters v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 104 Fed. 379, holding foreign corporation formed by consolidation of railways, and becoming a domestic corporation, was determined as to citizenship by that of its constituents; Chevra Bnai Israel v. Chevra Bikur Cholin, 24 Misc. 190, 52 N. Y. Supp. 712, holding religious corporations cannot consolidate without legislative authority.

Cited in notes (3 L. R. A. 435, 436) on corporations; consolidation and its effect; (8 L. R. A. 500) on consolidation of corporations creating a trust is ultra vires; (15 L. R. A. 85) on consolidated interstate corporation as domestic corporation of one of the states; (52 L. R. A. 391) on right of corporations to consolidate; (52 L. R. A. 377) on interpretation, application, and construction of statutes restrictive of the right of corporations to consolidate; (8 L. R. A. 239) on foreign corporations, law of comity.

2 L. R. A. 568, HUSTON v. BYBEE, 17 Or. 140, 20 Pac. 51.

Prescription and adverse user.

Cited in Wimer v. Simmons, 27 Or. 19, 50 Am. St. Rep. 685, 39 Pac. 6, holding use of water under license or permission not prescription or adverse user; Carson v. Hayes, 39 Or. 107, 65 Pac. 814, holding invasion of right of owner of water necessary to create prescriptive right to use; Union Mill & Min. Co. v. Dangberg, 81 Fed. 91, holding adverse use of water must be open, notorious, peaceable, continuous, and under claim or color of right.

Vested rights under parol license.

Cited in Ewing v. Rhea, 37 Or. 586, 52 L. R. A. 142, 82 Am. St. Rep. 783, 62 Pac. 790; Lavery v. Arnold, 36 Or. 86, 57 Pac. 906; Bowman v. Bowman, 35 Or. 281, 57 Pac. 546,—holding parol license irrevocable after licensee has expended money or made valuable improvements on faith thereof.

Cited in note (49 L. R. A. 511) on revocability of license to maintain a burden on land after the licensee has incurred expense in creating the burden.

2 L. R. A. 571, LOPEZ v. UNITED STATES, 24 Ct. Cl. 84.

Transfer of claims against United States.

Cited in Howes v. United States, 24 Ct. Cl. 182, 5 L. R. A. 67, holding transfer of specific claim to receiver by decree of state court invalid.

Power of attorney to collect moneys due from United States.

Cited in Hitchcock v. United States, 27 Ct. Cl. 204, holding power given to collect last instalment due contractor for erection of public buildings void.

2 L. R. A. 576, DONAHUE v. STATE, 112 N. Y. 142, 19 N. E. 419.

Presumption of grant.

Cited in Deshong v. New York, 176 N. Y. 484, 68 N. E. 880, holding grant of permanent right to construct sidewalk vault will not be presumed.

Owner's duty to mere licensee to prevent injury.

Cited in Cusick v. Adams, 115 N. Y. 59, 60, 61, 12 Am. St. Rep. 772, 21 N. E. 673, holding owner not liable to bare licensee for injury through mere defect in premises; Wells v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co. 34 Misc. 46, 68 N. Y. Supp. 305, holding owner liable for neglect to use reasonable vigilance to prevent killing licensee.

Cited in note (42 L. R. A. 69) on claims constituting valid demands against a state.

2 L. R. A. 577, AYARS'S APPEAL, 122 Pa. 266, 16 Atl. 356.

Title to act.

Cited in note (8 L. R. A. 858) on dissolution of corporation, as to construction of title to statute.

Special legislation.

Cited in Larimer & L. Street R. Co. v. Larimer Street R. Co. 137 Pa. 546, 20 Atl. 570, holding corporation without right to occupy street cannot question validity of street franchise of rival; Clark's Estate, 195 Pa. 525, 48 L. R. A. 594, 46 Atl. 127, Reversing 10 Pa. Super. Ct. 436, holding act authorizing trustees to include cost of bond in expenses of administration of trust valid;

Com. ex rel. Dart v. Reichard, 5 Kulp, 542, 8 Pa. Co. Ct. 563, holding section of act constituting each city of the third class a single school district unconstitutional; Frain v. Lancaster County, 11 Lane. L. Rev. 158, holding act concerning constable's fees, excluding certain counties, local; Com. v. Lackawanna County, 7 Pa. Co. Ct. 174, holding act providing for non-uniform method of collecting taxes unconstitutional; Miller v. Cunningham, 7 Pa. Co. Ct. 502, holding act making taxes liens on real estate, except in cities of the first, second, and fourth classes, unconstitutional; Re Reading's Constables, 8 Pa. Co. Ct. 102, holding act providing for election of constables in cities of second and third classes constitutional; School District v. School District, 22 Pa. Co. Ct. 236, holding act relating to education of nonresident soldiers' children only, unconstitutional; Com. v. Clark, 14 Pa. Super. Ct. 440, holding act prohibiting corporations from discharging employees because of membership in lawful organizations unconstitutional; Baker v. McKee, 6 Pa. Dist. 600, 20 Pa. Co. Ct. 11, holding sections of act requiring voucher for school district of city to be countersigned by comptroller unconstitutional.

Cited in footnotes to Stockton v. Powell, 15 L. R. A. 42, which holds courts without power to inquire as to notice of application to legislature for local legislation; Milwaukee County v. Isenring, 53 L. R. A. 635, which holds act regulating sheriff's fees for particular county local.

— Object and scope of classification.

Cited in Re Wyoming Street, 137 Pa. 503, 21 Atl. 74; Safe Deposit & T. Co. v. Fricke, 152 Pa. 240, 25 Atl. 530; Philadelphia v. Westminster Cemetery Co. 162 Pa. 108, 29 Atl. 349; Van Loon v. Engle, 171 Pa. 165, 33 Atl. 77; Re Ruan Street, 132 Pa. 275, 7 L. R. A. 196, 19 Atl. 219, — holding classification should be for municipal purposes only; Com. v. Gilligan, 195 Pa. 510, 46 Atl. 124, Reversing 8 Kulp, 568, holding public convenience proper reason for classification, in upholding act classifying school districts; Com. v. Moir, 199 Pa. 561, 53 L. R. A. 848, 85 Am. St. Rep. 801, 49 Atl. 351 (dissenting opinion), majority holding steady tendency of court has been to broaden applicability of earlier rules of classification; Darcy v. San José, 104 Cal. 646, 38 Pac. 500, and Edmonds v. Herbrandson, 2 N. D. 273, 274, 14 L. R. A. 727, 50 N. W. 976, holding classification must not be arbitrary; Allentown v. Gross, 132 Pa. 323, 19 Atl. 269, holding rule as to classification inapplicable to question as to right to license under constitutional act.

Cited in notes (7 L. R. A. 193, 195) on constitutional statutory classification of cities.

— Acts declared constitutional.

Cited in State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Miller, 100 Mo. 449, 13 S. W. 677, upholding act fixing number, and prescribing qualifications and manner of election, of school directors in cities of over 300,000 inhabitants; Philadelphia & R. Coal & I. Co.'s Petition, 200 Pa. 356, 49 Atl. 797, upholding classification of townships into two classes according to population; Com. ex rel. Jones v. Blackley, 198 Pa. 374, 52 L. R. A. 368, 47 Atl. 1104, Affirming 30 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. 376, upholding act classifying townships according to density of population; Com. use of Titusville v. Clark, 195 Pa. 639, 57 L. R. A. 350, 86 Am. St. Rep. 694, 46 Atl. 286, Affirming 21 Pa. Co. Ct. 500, 10 Pa. Super. Ct. 512, upholding ordinance of city of third class classifying wholesale and retail merchants for license tax; Bennett v. Norton, 171 Pa. 238, 32 Atl. 1112, Affirming 7 Kulp, 460, holding for some purposes law for coextensive county and city, and a different law for other counties, constitutional; Com. v. Winkelman, 12 Pa. Super. Ct. 517, holding act making dying declarations competent in prosecutions for abortion constitutional. Com. v. Hanley, 15 Pa. Super. Ct. 280, holding undertakers' license act applicable to cities of first, second, and third classes constitutional; Shenk v. McKennan, 11 Pa. Super. Ct. 88, Affirming 28 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. 464, 11 Pa. Super. Ct. 86, holding building act relating to cities of the second class constitutional; Richardson v. Mehler, 111 Ky. 426, 63 S. W. 957, holding statute providing what shall be prima facie evidence in actions by cities of first class to enforce liens for cost of street improvements valid.

Cited in footnote to Com. ex rel. Jones v. Blackley, 52 L. R. A. 367, which sustains classification of townships by density of population.

— Acts declared unconstitutional.

Cited in Meadville v. Dickson, 129 Pa. 7, 8, 18 Atl. 513, holding no part of specified acts sustainable, because interwoven with unnecessary and excessive classification; Pittsburgh's Petition, 138 Pa. 435, 27 W. N. C. 468, 21 Atl. 761, holding classification of cities with reference to collections of municipal liens unconstitutional; Perkins v. Philadelphia, 156 Pa. 564, 27 Atl. 356, holding classification intended to support legislation that could only apply to one city unconstitutional; Costello v. Wyoming, 49 Ohio St. 209, 30 N. E. 613, holding act authorizing villages in any county containing city of first grade to construct sidewalks unconstitutional; Wilkes-Barre v. Ricketts, 5 Kulp, 430, and Wilkes-Barre v. Felts, 134 Pa. 531, 19 Atl. 676, holding classification act of May 24, 1887, wholly unconstitutional; Bradford City v. Pennsylvania & N. Y. Teleg. & Teleph. Co. 26 Pa. Co. Ct. 335, holding act relating to telegraph wires, exempting cities of the first class, unconstitutional; Com. ex rel. United Presby. Women's Asso. v. Heckert, 28 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. 297, 7 Pa. Dist. R. 187, holding act regulating cemeteries and hospitals in cities of second class unconstitutional; Re Coal Twp. 23 Pa. Co. Ct. 591, declaring act classifying townships of county into two classes, for purposes of government, unconstitutional; Groves v. County Court, 42 W. Va. 594, 595, 26 S. E. 460, declaring unconstitutional, act general in terms, but which could never apply except to a single place.

Cited in footnotes to Hamilton County v. Rasche Bros. 19 L. R. A. 584, which holds statute as to taxes, not applying to all parts of state, unconstitutional; State v. Elizabeth, 23 L. R. A. 525, which holds invalid, special statute discriminating between municipalities already having, and those not having, race course; Sutton v. State 33 L. R. A. 589, which holds classification of counties according to previous census, without respect to actual population, void.

Consequences of unconstitutional acts and remedial legislation.

Cited in Berghaus v. Harrisburg, 122 Pa. 291, 16 Atl. 365, and Shoemaker v. Harrisburg, 122 Pa. 288, 16 Atl. 366, holding municipal lien depending solely on unconstitutional classification act invalid; Chester v. Cunliffe, 7 Del. Co. Rep. 98; Chester v. Bullock, 187 Pa. 551, 41 Atl. 452; Chester v. Black 132 Pa. 570, 6 L. R. A. 804, 19 Atl. 276; Chester v. Pennell, 169 Pa. 303, 32 Atl. 408,—upholding assessment under unconstitutional act cured by subsequent legislation; Com. v. Smulter, 126 Pa. 138, 17 Atl. 532, holding Wilkes-Barre city of third class because of unconstitutionality of classifications of 1876 and 1877; Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Harrisburg, 29 L. R. A. 402, 12 C. C. A. 101, 28 U. S. App. 108, 64 Fed. 284, holding city liable for street paving, although contractor agreed to accept payment in property assessments only, afterwards declared invalid; Gable v. Altoona, 200 Pa. 20, 49 Atl. 367, holding city liable on bonds payable out of property assessments afterwards declared illegal; Com. v. La Bar, 5 Lack. Legal News, 230, 7 Northampton Co. Rep. 86; Dunbar v. Williamsport, 9 Pa. Co. Ct. 451; Melick v. Williamsport, 35 W. N. C. 39,—holding acts of council under unconstitutional act of May 24, 1887, validated by acts of May 13 and 23, 1889; Devers v. York City, 150 Pa. 211, 24 Atl. 668. holding city assessor under unconstitutional act of May 24, 1887, entitled to salary under curative statute of May 13, 1889; Lancaster County v. Stormfeltz, 8 Lanc. L. Rev. 195, holding tax lien under act not applicable to whole state invalid; Easton v. Drake, 9 Kulp, 324, 6 Northampton Co. Rep. 122, holding provisions in act as to registration of tax lien merely directory; Trach v. McCauley, 6 Northampton Co. Rep. 195, holding unconstitutionality of act of 1876 not affecting rights of holder of bond issued in 1886; Ellis v. Kies, 1 Dauphin Co. Rep. 202, holding lien act applicable to cities of fourth class nullity, there never having been cities of fourth class; Melan v. McNulty, 6 Kulp, 524, holding acts of May 17, 1887, and May 24, 1887, relating to tax liens, inapplicable to case because declared unconstitutional.

Act partly good and partly bad.

Cited in Re Morrellville, 7 Pa. Super. Ct. 543, as to validity of part of statute though other part void.

Acts passed prior to constitutional prohibition.

Cited in Hulsizer v. Northampton County, 6 Northampton Co. Rep. 136, holding act passed before constitutional prohibition protected from its operation.

2 L. R. A. 586, INSURANCE CO. OF N. A. v. FIDELITY TITLE & T. CO. 123 Pa. 523, 10 Am. St. Rep. 546, 16 Atl. 791.

Subrogation of insurer to rights of insured.

Cited in Fidelity Title & T. Co. v. People's Natural Gas Co. 150 Pa. 14, 24 Atl. 339, holding that insurer may recover loss from one whose negligence caused fire, notwithstanding release by insured of all claims except against insurers; Packham v. German F. Ins. Co. 91 Md. 526, 50 L. R. A. 831, 80 Am. St. Rep. 461, 46 Atl. 1066, holding that destruction of remedy of subrogation against wrongdoer by insured relieves insurer; Stoughton v. Manufacturers' Natural Gas Co. 165 Pa. 433, 35 W. N. C. 521, 30 Atl. 1001, holding that verdict against one causing loss presumptively represents entire loss, and insurer entitled under statute to entire amount of insurance paid; Phenix Ins. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 134 Ind. 218, 20 L. R. A. 410, 33 N. E. 970, holding insurer subrogated to rights of owner against one causing loss, to extent of loss paid; Packham v. German F. Ins. Co. 91 Md. 528, 50 L. R. A. 832, 80 Am. St. Rep. 461, 46 Atl. 1066, holding surety cannot demand subrogation before discharging liability.

Distinguished in Sims v. Mutual F. Ins. Co. 101 Wis. 592, 77 N. W. 908, holding release to one causing fire, of all claims arising from loss, releases insurance company.

2 L. R. A. 587, STATE USE OF JANNEY v. HOUSEKEEPER, 70 Md. 162, 14 Am. St. Rep. 340, 16 Atl. 382.

Negligence; physicians and surgeons.

Cited in Pettigrew v. Lewis, 46 Kan. 82, 83, 26 Pac. 458, holding plaintiff must affirmatively prove lack of care or skill.

Cited in notes (11 L. R. A. 701) on physician's liability for negligent treatment and want of skill; (37 L. R. A. 832) on degree of care and skill required from physician or surgeon.

2 L. R. A. 589, HARMON v. LEHMAN, 85 Ala. 379, 5 So. 197.

Usury; loans by commission merchants.

Cited in Patillo v. Allen-West Commission Co. 47 C. C. A. 644, 108 Fed. 730, holding whether contract to pay constructive commissions in default of cotton delivered, besides interest on loan, is usurious, question for jury; Blackburn v. Hayes, 59 Ark. 369, 27 S. W. 240, holding constructive commissions on cotton not delivered, besides interest on loan, not usurious device, but liquidated damages.

Stipulation for payment of attorneys' fees on foreclosure.

Cited in Lehman v. Comer, 89 Ala. 583, 8 So. 241, holding stipulation to pay attorneys' fees and other expenses in collecting sums secured by mortgage extends to fees on foreclosure; Ginn v. New England Mortg. Secur. Co. 92 Ala. 138, 8 So. 388, holding stipulation for payment of attorneys' fees on foreclosure does not render mortgage usurious; Boyd v. Jones, 96 Ala. 309, 38 Am. St. Rep. 100, 11 So. 405, holding stipulation for payment of attorneys' fees and reasonable storage not illegal.

2 L. R. A. 594, BOTTS v. SIMPSONVILLE & B. C. TURNP. CO. 88 Ky. 54, 10 S. W. 134.

Consolidation of corporations.

Cited in Cherva Bnai Israel v. Chevra Bikur Cholim, 24 Misc. 190, 52 N. Y. Supp. 712, holding corporations cannot consolidate without legislative authority.

Cited in notes (8 L. R. A. 500) on consolidation of corporations, creating trust; (52 L. R. A. 391) on right of corporations to consolidate; (52 L. R. A. 381) on necessity of stockholder's consent to corporate consolidation; (52 L. R. A. 388) on rights and remedies of stockholders upon unauthorized consolidation; (3 L. R. A. 437) on rights, duties, and obligations of consolidated corporations.

Right of stockholder to enjoin illegal act of directors.

Cited in Forrester v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 21 Mont. 549, 55 Pac. 229, holding minority stockholders may enjoin illegal act without proof of exhaustion of remedies within corporation.

2 L. R. A. 596, HARTMAN v. YOUNG, 17 Or. 150, 11 Am. St. Rep. 787, 20 Pac. 17.

Election contest not retriable on appeal.

Cited in Breding v. Williams, 33 Or. 393, 54 Pac. 206, and Hughes v. Holman, 23 Or. 483, 32 Pac. 298, holding election contests tried by court without jury not equity cases retriable on appeal.

Contested election; ballots as evidence.

Cited in Dent v. Taylor County, 45 W. Va. 758, 32 S. E. 250, holding ballots highest evidence of result when identity as cast established; Fenton v. Scott, 17 Or. 190, 11 Am. St. Rep. 801, 20 Pac. 96, holding genuineness of ballots sought to be recounted question of fact for trial court; Davenport v. Olerich, 104 Iowa, 196, 73 N. W. 603, holding ballots must be shown safely kept by proper custodian before allowed in evidence against official return; Farrell v. Larsen, 26 Utah, 291, 73 Pac. 227, holding ballots in unsealed packages, kept in place to which unauthorized persons had access, inadmissible.

Burden of proof.

Cited in Fenton v. Scott, 17 Or. 191, 11 Am. St. Rep. 801, 20 Pac. 96, holding burden of proof on one seeking to overthrow official count, to show ballots genuine.

2 L. R. A. 601, WESTERN U. TELEG. CO. v. MUNFORD, 87 Tenn. 190, 10 Am. St. Rep. 330, 10 S. W. 318.

Common carrier; connecting lines.

Cited in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Stratemeier, 6 Ind. App. 128, 32 N. E. 871, and Bird v. Southern R. Co. 99 Tenn. 722, 63 Am. St. Rep. 856, 42 S. W. 451, holding initial carrier may limit liability to own line; Post v. Southern R. Co. 103 Tenn. 206, 55 L. R. A. 487, 52 S. W. 301, holding carrier, not shipper, has right to designate route of through shipments at special rates.

Duty to deliver telegrams.

Cited in footnote to Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Adams, 6 L. R. A. 844, which holds ignorance of relations between parties to message does not excuse neglect in delivering.

Cited in note (15 L. R. A. 130) on duty of telegraph company to find person addressed.

2 L. R. A. 603, O'HARA v. STATE, 112 N. Y. 146, 8 Am. St. Rep. 726, 19 N. E. 659.

Claims against state.

Cited in People v. Corner, 59 Hun, 302, 12 N. Y. Supp. 936, holding in action by state, defendant not entitled to set up counterclaim, since state can be prosecuted only by its consent; American Bank Note Co. v. State, 64 App. Div. 227, 71 N. Y. Supp. 1049, holding act conferring jurisdiction upon court of claims to audit claim virtually ratifies unauthorized contract.

Cited in notes (42 L. R. A. 38) on what claims, arising on contracts, constitute valid demands against state; (42 L. R. A. 56, 57) on validity of claims against state on contracts on public buildings and improvements.

— As affected by statute of limitations.

Cited in Parmenter v. State, 135 N. Y. 163, 31 N. E. 1035, holding claim against state not barred by lapse of time during which no tribunal existed in which it could be prosecuted; Cayuga County v. State, 153 N. Y. 292, 47 N. E. 288, raising, without deciding, question whether doctrine that statute of limitations runs against claim from date of ratification by legislature, is applicable.

Cited in note (42 L. R. A. 40) on validity of claims against state affected by statute of limitations.

Constitutional prohibition of allowance of claims by legislature.

Cited in Cayuga County v. State, 153 N. Y. 291, 47 N. E. 288, holding act giving authority to board of claims to hear and adjust claim not allowance thereof by legislature.

Distinguished in Roberts v. State, 30 App. Div. 111, 51 N. Y. Supp. 691, holding legislature cannot authorize allowance of claim for wrongful imprisonment, thereby invalidating unreversed conviction; Re Greene, 166 N. Y. 494, 60 N. E. 183, Affirming 55 App. Div. 481, 67 N. Y. Supp. 291, holding act virtually reversing judgment on merits, granting new trial, and authorizing tax levy, unconstitutional.

Extent of exemption.

Cited in Coxe v. State, 144 N. Y. 410, 39 N. E. 400, holding exemption of existing claims from constitutional prohibition against allowing barred claims cannot apply to subsequent claim.

2 L. R. A. 606 PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH v. ANAMOSA, 76 Iowa, 538, 41 N. W. 313.

Exercise of municipal power to change street grade.

Cited in McManus v. Hornaday, 99 Iowa, 511, 68 N. W. 812, holding power conferred on city to change street grade must be exercised in manner prescribed; Richardson v. Webster City, 111 Iowa, 429, 82 N. W. 920; Paine v. Lettsville, 103 Iowa, 483, 72 N. W. 693; Blanden v. Fort Dodge, 102 Iowa, 444, 71 N. W. 411,—holding municipal corporation not exercising power to change street grade in manner prescribed by statute liable for damages occasioned thereby; Eckert v. Walnut, 117 Iowa, 630, 91 N. W. 929, holding municipality changing grade of street before passing ordinance establishing it liable for damages to abutting owner; Caldwell v. Nashua, 122 Iowa, 181, 97 N. W. 1000, holding city reducing sidewalk to level of street without adopting ordinance establishing grade liable to abutter.

Cited in note (9 L. R. A. 210) on municipality, when liable for neglect of officers or agents.

Distinguished in Cooper v. Cedar Rapids, 112 Iowa, 370, 83 N. W. 1050, holding law requiring ordinance to authorize construction of sewer does not apply to construction of temporary gutter; Reilly v. Ft. Dodge, 118 Iowa, 640, 92 N. W. 887, denying liability to abutting owner of city filling street to established grade before passing resolution ordering the work; Wilber v. Ft. Dodge, 120 Iowa, 557, 95 N. W. 186, denying liability of city bringing street to grade without adopting resolution ordering work done, to abutter not alleging or proving special damage from such failure.

2 L. R. A. 608, McCARTHY v. BOSTON & L. R. CO. 148 Mass. 550, 20 N. E. 182.

Circumstantial evidence of intent.

Cited in O'Brien v. Cunard S. S. Co. 154 Mass. 273, 13 L. R. A. 331, 28 N. E. 266, holding consent of passenger to vaccination determinable only by overt acts; Norton v. Brookline, 181 Mass. 364, 63 N. E. 930, holding employee's consent to temporary stoppage of pay is presumed by continuance in office after notice; Hobbs v. Massasoit Whip Co. 158 Mass. 197, 33 N. E. 495, holding retention of skins sent in accordance with standing offer, for an unreasonable time, amounts to acceptance.

Emancipation or adoption of child.

Cited in Nugent v. Powell, 4 Wyo. 200, 20 L. R. A. 205, 63 Am. St. Rep. 17, 33 Pac. 23, holding mother only necessary party to adoption proceedings where father deserted family in destitute condition.

2 L. R. A. 609, PEOPLE ex rel. HART v. McELROY, 72 Mich. 446, 40 N. W. 750.

Presumption of validity of statute.

Cited in People ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Burch, 84 Mich. 413, 47 N. W. 765, holding mistake in journal as to nature of vote taken in senate corrected by errata does not invalidate bill; Detroit v. Dertoit, 91 Mich. 81, 16 L. R. A. 63, 51 N. W. 787, holding record of passage of bill as printed in official bound journal amending mistake in current issue presumptively authorized; Ritchie v. Richards, 14 Utah, 371, 47 Pac. 670, holding mere silence of journals as to compliance with mandatory requirement of Constitution insufficient to overcome presumption of validity, where no record required.

Cited in footnote to Norman v. Kentucky B. of Managers, 18 L. R. A. 556, which holds presumption that statute constitutionally enacted not conclusive.

Cited in note (23 L. R. A. 344) on conclusiveness of general expressions in enrolled bill as to fact of passage.

Passage of act.

Cited in Detroit v. Chapin, 108 Mich. 143, 37 L. R. A. 398, 66 N. W. 587, holding bill passed by legislature prior to last five days of session and approved by governor within ten days, but not until after adjournment, valid.

Cited in note (11 L. R. A. 491) on passage of bill through legislature.

Journals as evidence of proceedings of legislature.

Cited in Auditor General v. Menominee County, 89 Mich. 579, 51 N. W. 483, holding affidavits of senators entered "present" in journal incompetent, though entered in journal, to rebut prior entry; Sackrider v. Saginaw County, 79 Mich. 66, 44 N. W. 165, holding parol evidence of representatives as to contents of bill, inadmissible; People v. Dettenthaler, 118 Mich. 599, 44 L. R. A. 166, 77 N. W. 450, holding parol evidence inadmissible to show amendment of act by supplying omitted enacting clause before presenting to governor for approval.

Cited in note (11 L. R. A. 492) on printed journals as evidence.

Judicial cognizance of legislative journals.

Followed in Rode v. Phelps, 80 Mich. 609, 45 N. W. 493, holding void duly certified law containing material proviso appearing from journals to have been stricken out by both branches of legislature.

Cited in State v. Wray, 109 Mo. 598, 19 S. W. 86; and Ritchie v. Richards, 14 Utah, 371, 47 Pac. 670, holding journals admissible to determine validity of act duly authenticated and approved; Union Bank v. Oxford, 119 N. C. 214, 34 L. R. A. 489, 25 S. E. 966, holding failure of journals to show mandatory requirement of reading and vote by yea and nay renders certified and enrolled act, void.

Cited in note (8 L. R. A. 326) on passage of bills by legislature.

Title of statute.

Cited in footnotes to Judson v. Bessemer, 4 L. R. A. 742, which holds provision authorizing issue of municipal bonds within title; Wardle v. Townsend, 4 L. R. A. 511, which holds provision for winding up corporation within title; Thomas v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 7 L. R. A. 145, which holds provision limiting rights in water to railroad companies owning landings not within title; State v. Snow, 11 L. R. A. 355, which holds prohibition of article intended for use as lard, containing other ingredients than swine's flesh, within title; Winona v. School Dist. No. 82, 3 L. R. A. 46, which holds mention in title of all other acts repealed or altered unnecessary; Millvale v. Evergreen R. Co. 7 L. R. A. 369, which holds act chartering freight and passenger railway sufficiently entitled where shows purpose to charter passenger railway only; State v. Burgdoerfer, 14 L. R. A. 846, which holds regulation of "bookmaking" within title to "prohibit" same.

Cited in note (8 L. R. A. 858) on construction of title to statute.

Amendments after fifty-day limit.

Followed in Caldwell v. Ward, 83 Mich. 18, 46 N. W. 1024, and Davock v. Moore, 105 Mich. 134, 28 L. R. A. 788, 63 N. W. 424, holding germane amendment of bill in material point valid after expiration of fifty days; Toll v. Jerome, 101 Mich. 471, 59 N. W. 816, holding bill providing by title for vacation of judicial circuit amendable after limit by provision for reorganization of circuit; Detroit v. Schmid, 128 Mich. 384, 92 Am. St. Rep. 468, 87 N. W. 383, holding substitution of bill amending another section of city charter than one originally introduced not obnoxious to provision against introduction of bill after fifty days; Brake v. Callison, 122 Fed. 724, holding call of senate not necessary, under Florida Constitution, on substitute bill sent up by house.

Distinguished in Atty. Gen. v. Detroit & S. Pl. Road Co. 97 Mich. 592, 56 N. W. 943, holding substitution of bill not germane to the object expressed in original title invalid; Sackrider v. Saginaw County, 79 Mich. 65, 44 N. W. 165, holding bill providing by title for discontinuance of specific road not amendable by substitution of provision for maintenance of other roads.

2 L. R. A. 614, STRINGER v. FROST, 116 Ind. 477, 9 Am. St. Rep. 875, 19 N. E. 331.

Care requisite in use of street.

Cited in Green v. Eden, 24 Ind. App. 592, 56 N. E. 240, holding pedestrian crossing street not required to look and listen for ambulance rapidly driven without gong; Eaton v. Cripps, 94 Iowa, 181, 62 N. W. 687, holding woman preparing to take car on crowded thoroughfare not negligent in failing to see rapidly approaching train; Scofield v. Myers, 27 Ind. App. 376, 60 N. E. 1005, holding party driving on street entitled to presume that train rapidly approaching from rear is under control and in competent hands; Henry v. Grand Ave. R. Co. 113 Mo. 536, 21 S. W. 214, holding greater care requisite when crossing street at unusual place; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Martin, 157 Ind. 223, 61 N. E. 229, holding engineer entitled to presume that employees of another company, using common tracks in union station, will observe usual signals; Schwartz v. New Orleans & C. R. Co. 110 La. 545, 34 So. 667, holding person standing between car tracks not bound to anticipate lateral movement bringing cars passing on curve close together.

Cited in footnote to State v. Lauer, 20 L. R. A. 61, which holds it contributory negligence to leave surveyor's transit set up in street.

Cited in notes (7 L. R. A. 678) on contributory negligence as defense; (11 L. R. A. 35) on excessive speed in streets; (17 L. R. A. 124) on deviation from usual thoroughfare as negligence in pedestrian.

Distinguished in Evans v. Adams Exp. Co. 122 Ind. 366, 7 L. R. A. 680, 23 N. E. 1039, holding party standing still in conversation in street not entitled to recover for injuries inflicted by wagon driven inattentively.

General and special verdicts.

Cited in note (6 L. R. A. 574) on when special verdict controls general.

Objections and exceptions.

Cited in note (8 L. R. A. 609) on insufficiency of general exception.

Liability of infant for tort.

Cited in note (57 L. R. A. 674) on general liability of infant for torts.

2 L. R. A. 615, POWELL v. CAMPBELL, 20 Nev. 232, 19 Am. St. Rep. 350, 20 Pac. 156.

Lis pendens.

Cited in Wilkinson v. Elliott, 43 Kan. 594, 19 Am. St. Rep. 158, 23 Pac. 614, holding lis pendens ineffectual where divorce petition file-marked but not left on file, nor issued with summons.

Cited in note (4 L. R. A. 718) on lis pendens generally.

Distinguished in Sun Ins. Co. v. White, 123 Cal. 202, 55 Pac. 902, holding bona fide mortgage of separate property by husband pending divorce suit valid, where no intent to prevent enforcement of decree.

Jurisdiction of equity.

Cited in footnote to Ada County v. Bullen Bridge Co. 36 L. R. A. 367, which denies right to maintain equitable action to cancel county warrants.

Cited in note (11 L. R. A. 69) on equity jurisdiction where remedy at law available.

Alimony.

Cited in footnote to Hooper v. Hooper, 44 L. R. A. 725, which sustains allowance of gross sum from husband's estate in addition to monthly alimony.

2 L. R. A. 621, PENNSYLVANIA R. CO. v. BOWERS, 124 Pa. 183, 16 Atl. 836.

Acceptance of statute.

Distinguished in Gloninger v. Pittsburgh & C. R. Co. 139 Pa. 35, 21 Atl. 211, holding railway whose charter authorized increase of indebtedness not limited by legislation of 1874 where its benefits not taken advantage of.

2 L. R. A. 623, COM. v. DONAHUE, 148 Mass. 529, 12 Am. St. Rep. 591, 20 N. E. 171.

Forceful retaking of property.

Cited in Heminway v. Heminway, 58 Conn. 445, 19 Atl. 766, holding secretary justified in forcibly regaining possession of letter file from director using same for purposes hostile to corporation; State v. Hartley, 75 Conn. 108, 52 Atl. 615, holding owner may reasonably resist officer attempting to attach exempt property; State v. Dooley, 121 Mo. 598, 26 S. W. 558, holding recovery of possession of horses at point of revolver excessive force; State ex rel. Rhodes v. Saunders, 66 N. H. 80, 18 L. R. A. 653, 25 Atl. 588, holding statute authorizing injunction against maintenance of liquor nuisance valid exercise of governmental right of self-protection.

Cited in notes (14 L. R. A. 317, 318) on assault in recapture of property; (45 L. R. A. 687) on plea of self-defense in prosecution of crime.

Larceny by fraud.

Cited in Com. v. Lannan, 153 Mass. 289, 11 L. R. A. 451, 25 Am. St. Rep. 629, 26 N. E. 858, holding attorney guilty of larceny, who, through trickery, retains money handed him by client for transfer to third party; Trecy v. Jefts, 149 Mass. 212, 21 N. E. 360, holding debtor double paying creditor by latter's fraud may maintain action to recover particular money so paid.

2 L. R. A. 625, BARTLETT v. STANCHFIELD, 148 Mass. 394, 19 N. E. 549.

Substitution of oral for written contract.

Cited in McNeil v. Boston Chamber of Commerce, 154 Mass. 280, 13 L. R. A. 560, 28 N. E. 245, holding "notice to bidders" on submitted plans and specifications, retaining right to reject any and all bids, may be varied by parol agreement to accept lowest bid; Thomas v. Barnes, 156 Mass. 584, 31 N. E. 683, holding evidence admissible to show oral warranty of refrigerator built under bilateral written contract; Goodhue v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. 175 Mass. 190, 55 N. E. 1039, holding stipulation of insurance policy against removal of goods without written consent may be varied by oral agreement; Leverone v. Arancio, 179 Mass. 448, 61 N. E. 45, allowing recovery for extras ordered with defendant's consent, though architect's certificate not given as per contract; The Sappho, 36 C. C. A. 400, 94 Fed. 550, Reversing 89 Fed. 370, holding corporation accepting benefit bound by oral contract for extra work in repair of vessel entered into by master with knowledge and consent of directors and officers; Copeland v. Hewett, 96 Me. 529, 53 Atl. 36, holding builder entitled to extras supplied in pursuance of alterations and additions agreed upon, though not reduced to writing and signed by parties as required by contract; Crowley v. United States Fidelity & G. Co. 29 Wash. 274, 69 Pac. 784, holding owner orally directing and contractor acting upon changes waive contract provision requiring written authority for deviations from plans.

Distinguished in Merritt v. Peninsular Constr. Co. 91 Md. 466, 46 Atl. 1013, disallowing claim for extra work not reduced to writing in pursuance of contract, though oral contract entered into for payment therefor at time of execution of original contract; Stillman v. Wickham, 106 Iowa, 599, 76 N. W. 1008, holding sureties on builder's contract not liable for failure to perform oral contract substituted therefor.

2 L. R. A. 626, PHELPS v. NEW YORK, 112 N. Y. 216, 19 N. E. 408.

Followed without discussion in Van Nest v. New York, 113 N. Y. 652, 21 N. E. 414, and Vaughn v. Portchester, 115 N. Y. 637, 21 N. E. 1116.

Recovery of money paid under mistake of law.

Cited in People ex rel. Edison Electric Illuminating Co. v. Wemple, 69 Hun, 372, 23 N. Y. Supp. 661, holding comptroller not authorized to readjust account against corporation for illegal taxes where same voluntarily paid; Baker v. Bucklin, 43 App. Div. 337, 60 N. Y. Supp. 294, holding payment of liquor tax under mistake of law not recoverable; Pooley v. Buffalo, 122 N. Y. 601, 26 N. E. 16, holding payment of assessment void on face not recoverable; Redmond v. New York, 125 N. Y. 638, 26 N. E. 727, holding payment of void paving assessment, made to secure loan on property, not recoverable; Vanderbeck v. Rochester, 122 N. Y. 289, 25 N. E. 408, holding assessment on land subject to dower voluntarily paid by widow not recoverable, though purpose of assessment not fulfilled; Boston Mfrs. Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Hendricks, 41 Misc. 489, 85 N. Y. Supp. 44, holding tax illegal on face, paid by foreign insurance company in apprehension of suit, cannot be recovered; Smyth v. New York, 26 Jones & S. 359, 11 N. Y. Supp. 583, holding assessment paid after order vacating same not recoverable; Pennock v. Douglas County, 39 Neb. 301, 27 L. R. A. 125, 42 Am. St. Rep. 579, 58 N. W. 117, and Budge v. Grand Forks, 1 N. D. 316, 10 L. R. A. 168, footnote p. 165, 47 N. W. 390, holding purchaser at sale for void tax cannot recover purchase money from city; Converse v. Sickles, 74 Hun, 431, 26 N. Y. Supp. 590, holding money paid in satisfaction of valid judgment, not appealed, not recoverable; Harrington v. New York, 40 Misc. 169, 81 N. Y. Supp. 667, holding fine imposed by magistrate without jurisdiction, voluntarily paid, cannot be recovered.

Cited in footnotes to Walser v. Board of Education, 31 L. R. A. 329, which denies right to recover back school taxes paid by mistake to district not entitled to same; Rogers v. St. Paul, 47 L. R. A. 537, which denies right to recover back money paid on assessment for uncompleted street improvement; McConville v. St. Paul, 43 L. R. A. 584, which authorizes property owner to recover back assessments which he has been compelled to pay city for improvement wholly abandoned without completion.

What is "voluntary" payment.

Cited in New v. New Rochelle, 91 Hun, 217, 36 N. Y. Supp. 211, holding payment after issuance of distress warrant for collection of tax void on face voluntary, and not recoverable; State ex rel. Sanborn v. Stonestreet, 92 Mo. App. 220, holding payment of illegal fee bill after notice of impending enforcement against property voluntary where no threat of immediate seizure; Van Hise v. Rensselaer County, 21 Misc. 576, 48 N. Y. Supp. 874, holding issuance of tax warrants enforceable against assessed property not sufficient to render payment of illegal tax involuntary; Tripler v. New York, 125 N. Y. 631, 26 N. E. 721, holding payment of void sewer assessment voluntary where the only coercion proved is running of interest and imposition of lien; Palmer v. Syracuse, 26 Misc. 567, 57 N. Y. Supp. 600, holding provision for addition of interest and fees to unpaid local assessments does not render payment involuntary; Matthews v. William Frank Brewing Co. 26 Misc. 48, 35 N. Y. Supp. 241, holding fact of protest at time of payment does not save right to contest tax subsequently.

Cited in footnote to St. Anthony & D. Elevator Co. v. Soucie, 50 L. R. A. 262, which sustains right to recover illegal taxes paid under protest to prevent tax collector's sale of personal property constructively.

Cited in note (4 L. R. A. 304) on recovery of money paid under mistake of law.

Delegation of discretionary powers.

Cited in Greater New York Athletic Club v. Wurster, 19 Misc. 447, 43 N. Y.

Supp. 703, holding power of common council to regulate and license theaters, etc., cannot be delegated to mayor; Bolton v. Gilleran, 105 Cal. 248, 45 Am. St. Rep. 33, 38 Pac. 881, holding sewer assessment based on contract leaving matters of construction and resultant expense to discretion of engineer invalid; Chase v. Scheerer, 136 Cal. 252, 68 Pac. 768, holding tax sale based upon assessment for improvement of street under contract permitting change of plans and allowance for "settling" by city engineer void.

Distinguished in Loughry v. Pittsburgh, 29 Pittab. L. J. N. S. 431, holding selection of material to be used in paving may be delegated by council to director of public works; Burchell v. New York, 30 N. Y. S. R. 419, 9 N. Y. Supp. 196, holding assessment not invalid where evidence does not show its levy for pavements the reconstruction of which is irregularly left to discretion of commissioners.

Right to equitable relief.

Distinguished in Pooley v. Buffalo, 124 N. Y. 208, 26 N. E. 624, holding party entitled to equitable relief against assessment presumptively valid by statute, but void by matter dehors record.

2 L. R. A. 629, BEDLOW v. NEW YORK FLOATING DRY DOCK CO. 112 N. Y. 263, 19 N. E. 800.

Regulation and control of public ways.

Cited in Sun Printing & Pub. Asso. v. New York, 8 App. Div. 281, 40 N. Y. Supp. 607, holding construction of municipal rapid transit works proper subject of municipal enterprise; People v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 117 N. Y. 156, 22 N. E. 1026, holding statute authorizing erection of sheds upon piers or bulkheads, after obtaining license, constitutional.

Cited in note (59 L. R. A. 45) on extent of sovereign's right, as against subject generally, to obstruct navigation.

Riparian rights.

Cited in Kerr v. West Shore R. Co. 127 N. Y. 278, 27 N. E. 833, holding owner of upland not entitled to compel draw in railroad bridge cutting off access to docks in river bay; Re New York, 168 N. Y. 145, 56 L. R. A. 504, 61 N. E. 158, Reversing 60 App. Div. 125; 69 N. Y. Supp. 994, holding municipality not authorized to construct driveway on tideway, cutting off riparian easements, without compensation.

Adverse possession by tenant.

Cited in Church v. Wright, 4 App. Div. 315, 38 N. Y. Supp. 701, holding Code, § 373, applicable to tenant continuing in possession under deed recognizing lease, after unexecuted judgment in ejectment for nonpayment of rent; Bissing v. Smith, 85 Hun, 569, 33 N. Y. Supp. 123, holding grantee of tenant returning after eviction in adverse possession so as to render conveyance of owner within twenty years champertous; Lewis v. New York & H. R. Co. 162 N. Y. 222, 56 N. E. 540, holding party in possession under conflicting instruments, one hostile, the other consistent, with title in true owner, presumptively tenant of latter; Merritt v. Smith, 27 Misc. 370, 58 N. Y. Supp. 851, holding attornment by tenant to stranger does not destroy tenancy; Shneider v. Mahl, 84 App. Div. 6, 82 N. Y. Supp. 27, holding mortgagee not chargeable with notice of rights of prior equitable mortgagee in possession as tenant.

Cited in footnote to Davis v. Williams, 54 L. R. A. 749, which sustains agent's right to acquire adverse title to principal's property occupied as part of contract of service.

Cited in notes (53 L. R. A. 945) on power of tenant to initiate adverse possession during term; (53 L. R. A. 949) on presumption as to possession of tenant holding over; (40 L. R. A. 605) on upland owner's right of access to navigable water as against private individual.

Landlord's title to fixtures.

Cited in notes (6 L. R. A. 249) on what constitute fixtures; (9 L. R. A. 701) on tenant's right to remove fixtures after expiration of term; (11 L. R. A. 498) on what operates at law as surrender of leasehold estate.

Riparian owner's estate in pier erected under municipal authority.

Cited in Bedlow v. Stillwell, 91 Hun, 385, 36 N. Y. Supp. 129, Affirmed on appeal, 158 N. Y. 298, 53 N. E. 26, holding widow entitled to dower in husband's interest in pier.

Cited in note (40 L. R. A. 647) on effect of constructing wharf in front of property.

Authority to maintain pier.

Cited in Bell v. New York, 77 App. Div. 452, 79 N. Y. Supp. 347, holding common council could give consent to construction of pier on lands under East river owned by state; Bell v. New York, 77 App. Div. 452, 79 N. Y. Supp. 347, holding prescriptive right to maintain pier on state lands acquired from twenty-year use; Bell v. New York, 77 App. Div. 452, 79 N. Y. Supp. 347, holding ordinance vesting right to grant lands under water in commissioners of sinking fund has no application to pier constructed by abutting owner with common council's consent.

Description of riparian boundary of property.

Cited in People ex rel. Burnham v. Jones, 112 N. Y. 605, 20 N. E. 577, holding conveyance "to the beach" not to include beach itself, where boundary is described as straight line.

Review on appeal of exceptions to findings of fact.

Followed in Morris v. Wells, 26 N. Y. S. R. 11, 7 N. Y. Supp. 61, holding refusal to find material fact established by undisputed proof reviewable on appeal; Styles v. Tyler, 64 Conn. 474, 30 Atl. 165 (dissenting opinion), holding to the same effect.

Cited in Naser v. First Nat. Bank, 116 N. Y. 497, 22 N. E. 1077, holding sufficiency of evidence to support finding of fact not subject to review in absence of exception; Halpin v. Phenix Ins. Co. 118 N. Y. 172, 23 N. E. 482, holding certificate that case on appeal contains all the evidence not essential to review unsupported finding of fact duly excepted to; Larkin v. McMullin, 120 N. Y. 212, 24 N. E. 447, holding exceptions to findings of fact not reviewable on appeal, where it does not appear that judgment was reversed and new trial granted on questions of fact; Woodman v. Penfield, 2 Silv. Sup. Ct. 248, 6 N. Y. Supp. 803, holding refusal of referee to respond to request for findings not ground of reversal, where not prejudicial to appellant; Rehberg v. Grierser, 24 Mont. 493, 63 Pac. 41, holding specification of errors in findings of fact requisite to review by court of appeals as question of law.

2 L. R. A. 636, ROBINSON v. OCEAN STEAM NAV. CO. 112 N. Y. 315, 19 N. E. 625.

Residence as affecting jurisdiction.

Cited in O'Reilly v. New Brunswick, A. & N. Y. S. S. Co. 28 Misc. 116, 59 N. Y. Supp. 261, holding averment of plaintiff's residence, essential to complaint against foreign corporation in action, not available to nonresident; Hoes v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 173 N. Y. 441, 66 N. E. 119, Reversing 73 App. Div. 370, 77 N. Y. Supp. 117, holding administrator of nonresident, whose assets were brought into state for purpose of obtaining letters of administration, cannot prosecute cause of action arising in another state for causing intestate's death, against foreign corporation; Gurney v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 37 N. Y. S. R. 561, 13 N. Y. Supp. 645, holding complaint by local administrators of foreign decedent against foreign corporation for injuries received out of state not demurrable where plaintiff's nonresidence not apparent from complaint; Gundlin v. Hamburg-American Packet Co. 8 Misc. 296, 28 N. Y. Supp. 572, upholding judgment rendered on general verdict where plaintiff's residence submitted to jury.

Cited in notes (56 L. R. A. 215, 218) on right of local representative to sue on foreign cause of action; (14 L. R. A. 583) on constitutional equality as to privileges in litigation.

Distinguished in Smith v. Crocker, 14 App. Div. 249, 43 N. Y. Supp. 427, retaining jurisdiction in action of contract between nonresidents; Hopper v. Hopper, 125 N. Y. 400, 12 L. R. A. 238, 26 N. E. 457, holding foreign executor taking out local ancillary letters subject to suit as resident; Herbert v. Montana Diamond Co. 81 App. Div. 214, 80 N. Y. Supp. 717, holding complaint against foreign corporation, not alleging plaintiff's residence, not demurrable.

Jurisdiction over subject-matter of suit.

Cited in Monda v. Wells, F. & Co. 20 Misc. 687, 46 N. Y. Supp. 682, Affirmed in 21 Misc. 309, 47 N. Y. Supp. 182, nolding court without jurisdiction of action between nonresidents on through contract of shipment made and performable out of state; Perry v. Erie Transfer Co. 28 Abb. N. C. 432, 19 N. Y. Supp. 239, 22 N. Y. Civ. Proc. Rep. 181, dismissing complaint between nonresidents on contract made and broken in another state though performable in part within jurisdiction; Hatfield v. Sisson, 28 Misc. 256, 59 N. Y. Supp. 73, dismissing complaint for slander between nonresidents where words spoken outside state; Smith v. Empire State Idaho Min. & Development Co. 127 Fed. 465, holding nonresident widow may sue foreign corporation negligently causing husband's death in another state, in courts of state where it maintains principal office; Ferguson v. Neilson, 33 N. Y. S. R. 815, 11 N. Y. Supp. 524, dismissing action between nonresidents for tort outside state; Anglo-American Provision Co. v. Davis Provision Co. 50 App. Div. 275, 63 N. Y. Supp. 987, Affirmed in 169 N. Y. 513, 88 Am. St. Rep. 608, 62 N. E. 587, holding foreign judgment not enforceable between nonresidents, since it is not a cause of action arising within state; Selser Bros. Co. v. Potter Produce Co. 77 Hun, 314, 28 N. Y. Supp. 428, holding attachment in proceeding between nonresidents erroneously granted where affidavit fails to show contract made or broken in jurisdiction; Potter v. New York City Baptist Mission Soc. 23 Misc. 680, 52 N. Y. Supp. 294, holding appearance of parties insufficient to cure complaint failing to state cause of action; Dayton v. Board of Equalization, 33 Or. 136, 50 Pac. 1009, holding jurisdiction of board not dependent upon appearance in record of fact of due preparation of tax rolls; Barker v. Cunard S. S. Co. 91

Hun, 501, 36 N. Y. Supp. 256 (concurring opinion), majority holding jurisdiction of court of general jurisdiction in action against foreign corporation presumed, where contrary is not shown on trial or by record on appeal.

Distinguished in Flynn v. Central R. Co. 2 Misc. 510, 27 Abb. N. C. 33, 15 N. Y. Supp. 328, retaining jurisdiction of action by resident against foreign corporation for injuries received outside state; Colorado State Bank v. Gallagher, 76 Hun, 311, 27 N. Y. Supp. 688, holding action by nonresident corporation against nonresident on foreign contract, within court's jurisdiction; Ladenburg v. Commercial Bank, 24 N. Y. Civ. Proc. Rep. 235, 32 N. Y. Supp. 873, holding failure of affidavit in attachment against foreign corporation to show facts bringing case within Code provisions not void where defect supplied by affidavit filed nunc pro tunc; Wertheim v. Clergue, 53 App. Div. 124, 65 N. Y. Supp. 750, holding nonresident entitled to trial of action arising out of state for fraudulent breach of contract; Barrow S. S. Co. v. Kane, 170 U. S. 110, 42 L. ed. 968, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526, holding right of citizens of diverse residence to sue in Federal courts not controlled by state legislation.

Taking of objection to jurisdiction.

Cited in Gillin v. Canary, 19 Misc. 599, 44 N. Y. Supp. 313, holding party consolidating claims not estopped to object on appeal that amount of consolidated claims exceeds jurisdiction of court; Tyroler v. Gummersbach, 28 Misc. 158, 59 N. Y. Supp. 266, reversing judgment on appeal where record failed to show jurisdiction of inferior court over defendant; Baird v. Sheehan, 38 App. Div. 15, 56 N. Y. Supp. 228, where appellate court ex mero motu refused relief on contract void as against public policy; Miller v. Sunde, 1 N. D. 4, 44 N. W. 301, reversing sua sponte on appeal judgment rendered after transfer of cause to Federal court; Levy v. Swick Piano Co. 17 Misc. 147, 39 N. Y. Supp. 409, holding party not estopped to attack validity of order in supplementary proceedings against corporation by institution of like proceeding himself.

2 L. R. A. 638, BRYAN v. UNIVERSITY PUB. CO. 112 N. Y. 382, 19 N. E. 825. Propriety of order for publication.

Cited in Von Hesse v. Mackaye, 55 Hun, 370, 8 N. Y. Supp. 894, Reversing 5 N. Y. Supp. 791, holding publication against nonresident claimant of bond not within state unauthorized; Paget v. Stevens, 143 N. Y. 177, 38 N. E. 273, Reversing 8 Misc. 238, 28 N. Y. Supp. 549, holding publication unauthorized in action by plaintiffs, of whom one alien, for nonresident's foreign misconduct; Montgomery v. Boyd, 60 App. Div. 136, 70 N. Y. Supp. 139, holding publication against nonresident unauthorized unless complaint shows that plaintiff has a cause of action against defendant; Chesley v. Morton, 9 App. Div. 463, 41 N. Y. Supp. 463, holding publication authorized in suit to enforce partner's lien upon dissolved partnership's domestic assets; Hartzell v. Vigen, 6 N. D. 132, 35 L. R. A. 458, 66 Am. St. Rep. 589, 69 N. W. 203, holding that "subject of action," of which affiant must show that the court has jurisdiction to warrant publication, relates to the controversy, and not property attached; Foster v. Electric Heat Regulator Co. 16 Misc. 148, 37 N. Y. Supp. 1063, holding publication unauthorized without plaintiff's residence alleged in verified complaint; Scharmann v. Schoell, 23 App. Div. 402, 48 N. Y. Supp. 306, holding cause of action stated in action upon bond of administrator not made party, where his absconding or concealment after collecting property alleged; O'Reilly v. New Brunswick, A. & N. Y. S. S. Co. 28 Misc. 118, 59 N. Y.

Supp. 261, holding no cause of action stated against foreign corporation unless plaintiff's residence alleged.

Distinguished in Taylor v. Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. 38 Misc. 577, 77 N. Y. Supp. 1012, holding publication good against foreign pledgee of insurance policy payable within state in action to ascertain payee; Bragg v. Gaynor, 85 Wis. 488, 21 L. R. A. 168, 55 N. W. 919, holding debt authorized basis for publication in action to reach nonresident's domestic property.

Remedy for improper order.

Cited in Everett v. Everett, 22 App. Div. 475, 47 N. Y. Supp. 994, holding defendant may appear specially for substantial objection to jurisdiction, before general appearance.

2 L. R. A. 642, HONDURAS v. SOTO, 112 N. Y. 310, 8 Am. St. Rep. 744, 19 N. E. 845.

Inclusion of "person."

Cited in West Coast Mfg. & Invest. Co. v. West Coast Improv. Co. 25 Wash. 642, 62 L. R. A. 771, 66 Pac. 97, holding the state within warranty of title generally against all persons; Giddings v. Holter, 19 Mont. 267, 48 Pac. 8, holding United States a person within covenant of warranty.

Cited in note (19 L. R. A. 223) on nature of a sovereignty as a person.

Requirement of security for costs statutory.

Cited in Bonnett v. Townsend, 63 Hun, 47, 17 N. Y. Supp. 566, holding authority to require security for costs must be found in statute, if existent.

Requiring additional security.

Cited in Newhall v. Appleton, 25 Jones & S. 164, 6 N. Y. Supp. 4, holding where money paid into court in lieu of undertaking, additional undertaking cannot be required; Dunk v. Dunk, 177 N. Y. 267, 69 N. E. 539, Affirming 88 App. Div. 298, 85 N. Y. Supp. 25, holding court cannot order additional security where undertaking for costs was voluntarily given, after service of motion, therefor; United States Land & Invest. Co. v. Bussey, 53 Hun, 519, 6 N. Y. Supp. 416, holding court cannot order additional undertaking in replevin; McHugh v. Astrophe, 1 Misc. 219, 20 N. Y. Supp. 878, holding defendant, substituted by order of interpleader, cannot be required to furnish security for costs as condition for asserting claim.

Cited as changed by statute and distinguished in Brewster v. Wooster, 9 Misc. 692, 30 N. Y. Supp. 546, sustaining authority to require of nonresident additional undertaking for costs where sum in original insufficient.

2 L. R. A. 644, DEOBOLD v. OPPERMANN, 111 N. Y. 531, 684, 7 Am. St. Rep. 760, 19 N. E. 94.

Privy of sureties.

Cited in Altman v. Hofeller, 152 N. Y. 503, 46 N. E. 961, holding judicial settlement of administrator's account conclusive upon sureties; Greer v. McNeal, 11 Okla. 531, 69 Pac. 893, holding sureties on administrator's bond concluded by probate court decree rendered upon final accounting, to which they were not parties; Re Gall, 42 App. Div. 257, 59 N. Y. Supp. 254, holding administrator's surety bound by certificate establishing claim against estate; Judge of Probate.

v. Sulloway, 68 N. H. 515, 49 L. R. A. 349, 73 Am. St. Rep. 619, 44 Atl. 720, holding sureties liable for executor's personal debt to testator, made asset by statute; Re Gall, 47 App. Div. 494, 62 N. Y. Supp. 420, holding sureties and administrator liable, after distribution duly presented, to person not notified of final accounting.

Cited in note (7 L. R. A. 745) on suretyship and bearing of loss by one who causes it.

— Notice.

Cited in Botkin v. Kleinschmidt, 21 Mont. 6, 69 Am. St. Rep. 641, 52 Pac. 563, holding sureties bound by judgment, without notice to them, against guardian.

Cited as modified by statute in McMahon v. Smith, 24 App. Div. 28, 49 N. Y. Supp. 93, holding surety liable for administrator's failure to obey lawful order upon compulsory accounting without notice.

Distinguished in Thomson v. American Surety Co. 170 N. Y. 114, 62 N. E. 1073, holding surety for money which "shall come" into trustee's hands, not liable for previous infidelity.

Liability of sureties.

Cited in Beckett v. Place, 12 Misc. 327, 33 N. Y. Supp. 634, holding non-compliance with order for administrator personally to pay expense of second reference of accounts, official default within bond; Chard v. Hamilton, 56 Hun, 267, 9 N. Y. Supp. 575, holding mere surety, known as such by obligee and unsecured by principals, discharged of all liability by death before principals; Johnson v. Ayres, 18 App. Div. 500, 46 N. Y. Supp. 132, holding sureties for moneys legally received not estopped to question decree making principal liable for moneys wrongfully received.

Cited in footnotes to Probate Judge v. Sulloway, 49 L. R. A. 347, which holds sureties on insolvent executor's bond liable for his personal debt to testator; Abshire v. Salyer, 56 L. R. A. 936, which holds sureties on guardian's bond given to obtain silence from future liabilities of surety on prior bond liable for past defalcations.

Cited in note (52 L. R. A. 188) on effect, against surety on official bond, of judgment against officer.

Distinguished in Cook v. Shull, 35 App. Div. 123, 54 N. Y. Supp. 696, holding sureties may retain loan payable upon discharge of bond for money paid committee, until such discharge.

Use of administration funds.

Cited in Dutcher v. Dutcher, 88 Hun, 225, 34 N. Y. Supp. 653, holding administrator's personal agreement, not by way of adjustment, invalid; Lawyers' Surety Co. v. Reinach, 25 Misc. 157, 54 N. Y. Supp. 205, Affirming 23 Misc. 246, 51 N. Y. Supp. 162, holding false representations of administrator no defense to conversion of assets paid by mistake; Moss v. Cohen, 158 N. Y. 253, 53 N. E. 8, Reversing 11 Misc. 187, 32 N. Y. Supp. 1078, holding legatee liable upon agreement to repay unauthorized advancement by executor.

Cited in note (4 L. R. A. 746) on trust funds as impressed with trust obligations.

— Business purposes.

Cited in Re Myers, 131 N. Y. 415, 30 N. E. 135, holding that the use of trust funds in stock brokerage is unauthorized; Re Cozzens, 2 Connoly, 630, 39 N. Y. S.

R. 391, 15 N. Y. Supp. 771, holding knowing employment of trust fund in business, with only promissory note for security, devastavit; English v. McIntyre, 29 App Div. 447, 51 N. Y. Supp. 697, holding trustee's fund not for speculation when expenses discretionary and trustee residuary legatee upon cestui's prior death; Warren v. Union Bank, 157 N. Y. 268, 43 L. R. A. 260, 68 Am. St. Rep. 777, 51 N. E. 1036, holding general guardian cannot engage ward's capital or credit in business.

— Trust nature.

Cited in Wiggins v. Stevens, 33 App. Div. 88, 53 N. Y. Supp. 90, holding cestui que trust may follow trust moneys into bank's assets, where received with knowledge of trust.

Distinguished in Washburn v. Benedict, 46 App. Div. 489, 61 N. Y. Supp. 387, holding executor with unrestricted management of personalty may sell and transfer security in which invested.

Essentiality of damage to action of deceit.

Cited in Aron v. De Castro, 36 N. Y. S. R. 718, 13 N. Y. Supp. 372, holding damage essential in equity to rescinding sale fraudulently procured; Hewlett v. Saratoga Carlsbad Spring Co. 84 Hun, 252, 32 N. Y. Supp. 697, holding evidence of no loss competent upon right to equitable relief for fraud.

Cited in notes (6 L. R. A. 573, 8 L. R. A. 787) on damnum absque injuria.

2 L. R. A. 648, BEVERIDGE v. NEW YORK ELEV. R. CO. 112 N. Y. 1, 19 N. E. 489.

When judgment not res judicata between defendants.

Cited in Warren v. Boston & M. R. Co. 163 Mass. 486, 40 N. E. 895, and O'Connor v. New York & Y. Land Improv. Co. 8 Misc. 245, 28 N. Y. Supp. 544, holding judgment not res judicata as to defendants not joined in interest, and between whom no issue litigated.

Railroad corporation, right to lease.

Cited in Prospect Park & C. I. R. Co. v. Brooklyn B. & W. E. R. Co. 84 Hun, 518, 32 N. Y. Supp. 857; Re Brooklyn Elev. R. Co. v. Nagel, 75 Hun, 591, 27 N. Y. Supp. 669; Roosa v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co. 28 Misc. 387, 69 N. Y. Supp. 664, holding power of railroad corporation to contract for use of road involves right to lease; Ingersoll v. Nassau Electric R. Co. 157 N. Y. 477, 43 L. R. A. 245, 52 N. E. 545 (dissenting opinion), majority holding right to contract for use of tracks not subject to consent of abutting owners.

Cited in footnote to Van Steuben v. Central R. Co. 34 L. R. A. 577, which holds unauthorized lease of railroad void.

Distinguished in Durfee v. Johnstown, G. & K. Horse R. Co. 71 Hun, 282, 24 N. Y. Supp. 1016, holding power of railroad corporation to lease to another does not authorize lease to individual.

Stockholder without title to undivided earnings.

Cited in Spooner v. Phillips, 62 Conn. 73, 16 L. R. A. 467, 24 Atl. 524, holding one entitled to income from stock has no title to undivided earnings for which increased stock issued.

Action on agreement by one not party.

Cited in Carrier v. United Paper Co. 73 Hun, 290, 26 N. Y. Supp. 414, holding L. R. A. AU.—VOL. I.—17.

mortgagee cannot recover from grantee assuming mortgage when grantor not liable.

Distinguished in Merritt v. Booklover's Library, 89 App. Div. 456, 85 N. Y. Supp. 797, holding assignee of contract to supply horses and wagons to deliver merchandise may enforce it.

— Beneficial intent must appear.

Cited in O'Beirne v. Allegheny K. R. Co. 151 N. Y. 384, 45 N. E. 873, holding bondholder may enforce mortgage made to trustee for his benefit; Spingarn v. Rosenfeld, 4 Misc. 525, 24 N. Y. Supp. 733, holding partnership agreement to assume indebtedness for merchandise contributed by partner enforceable by creditor; Riordan v. First Presby. Church, 6 Misc. 87, 26 N. Y. Supp. 38, holding agreement to "pay for attendance in case of illness" inures to benefit of one thereafter furnishing it; Street v. Goodale, 77 Mo. App. 321, holding promise by bank to customer to pay checks will not support action by payee; Ireland v. United States Mortg. & T. Co. 72 App. Div. 100, 76 N. Y. Supp. 177, holding agreement by lessee's agent to pay rent out of income not intended for benefit of lessor; Martin v. Peet, 92 Hun, 138, 36 N. Y. Supp. 554, holding agreement "to indemnify" not "to pay debts," does not inure to benefit of creditor; Feist v. Schiffer, 79 Hun, 277, 29 N. Y. Supp. 423, holding promise to indemnify defendant not intended for benefit of judgment creditor.

Distinguished in Anthony v. American Glucose Co. 49 N. Y. S. R. 862, 21 N. Y. Supp. 667, holding action maintainable by stockholder on consolidation agreement providing for issuance of stock to stockholders of constituent companies.

— Corporate powers exercisable by directors.

Cited in Flynn v. Brooklyn City R. Co. 9 App. Div. 275, 41 N. Y. Supp. 566, holding power of railroad company to lease exercisable by directors without assent of stockholders; Vanderpoel v. Gorman, 140 N. Y. 576, 24 L. R. A. 552, 37 Am. St. Rep. 601, 35 N. E. 932, holding assignment corporate act performable under authority of directors in absence of statute or by-law providing otherwise; Schaefer v. Scott, 40 App. Div. 439, 57 N. Y. Supp. 1035, holding general assignment by president invalid, power of management being committed to directors; Skinner v. Walter A. Wood Mowing & Reaping Mach. Co. 47 N. Y. S. R. 507, 20 N. Y. Supp. 251, holding corporation can terminate contract only by action of trustees; Louisville Trust Co. v. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. 22 C. C. A. 395, 43 U. S. App. 550, 75 Fed. 449, holding power to guarantee bonds may be exercised by directors without stockholders' consent; Bayles v. Vanderveer, 11 Misc. 211, 32 N. Y. Supp. 1117, holding directors not bound to comply with request because made by majority stockholders.

— What justifies intervention of equity.

Cited in Small v. Minneapolis Electro Matrix Co. 32 N. Y. S. R. 889, 10 N. Y. Supp. 456, holding equity will not enjoin exercise of lawful power by directors in good faith; Lewisohn Bros. v. Anaconda Copper Min. Co. 26 Misc. 625, 56 N. Y. Supp. 807, holding only fraud or adverse personal interest of directors justifies interference in determining propriety of which wishes of majority stockholders entitled to great weight.

Distinguished in part in Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. New York & N. R. Co. 150 N. Y. 432, 34 L. R. A. 84, 55 Am. St. Rep. 689, 44 N. E. 1043, holding equity will not permit majority stockholders to manipulate corporate affairs to injury of minority.

Limited in Hennessy v. Muhleman, 27 Misc. 233, 57 N. Y. Supp. 114, holding stockholder may enjoin lease involving practical abandonment during its term of corporate purposes.

2 L. R. A. 655, KUNTZ v. SUMPTION, 117 Ind. 1, 19 N. E. 474.

Followed without special discussion in Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Marion County, 19 Ind. App. 66, 49 N. E. 51.

Due process of law.

Cited in Walsh v. State, 142 Ind. 363, 33 L. R. A. 394, 41 N. E. 65, with statement that constitutional defect in statute from nonrequirement of notice had been remedied by amendment; Loesch v. Koehler, 144 Ind. 282, 35 L. R. A. 683, 41 N. E. 326, holding act authorizing humane society to kill injured animal, not providing for notice to owner, unconstitutional; McGavock v. Omaha, 40 Neb. 79, 58 N. W. 543, holding law giving city power to change grades must provide for notice, which must be given as prescribed; Evansville & I. R. Co. v. Hays, 118 Ind. 218, 20 N. E. 736, holding assessments, without notice by board of equalization, invalid; Campbell v. Monroe County, 118 Ind. 120, 20 N. E. 772, holding notice essential in reassessment proceedings; Scudder v. Jones, 134 Ind. 551, 32 N. E. 221, holding assessment, without statutory notice, of abutting property for improvement, ineffective; Kirsch v. Braun, 153 Ind. 261, 53 N. E. 1082, holding opportunity for hearing of parties interested necessary to sustain assessments for improvement; Power v. Larabee, 2 N. D. 153, 49 N. W. 724, holding omission of equalization board to meet at time fixed by law for hearing defeats assessment.

Cited in footnotes to Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 17 L. R. A. 286, which holds valid act authorizing attorneys' fees against railroad corporations in suits on claims; Carleton v. Rugg, 5 L. R. A. 193, which holds statute authorizing injunction against liquor nuisance does not unlawfully deprive of property or privileges; State v. Sponaugle, 43 L. R. A. 727, which sustains forfeiture of land for five years' failure to enter for taxation; Davis v. St. Louis County, 33 L. R. A. 432, which holds void act authorizing location and marking of section corners without notice to persons to be assessed for cost of same; Branson v. Gee, 24 L. R. A. 355, which holds act authorizing taking of gravel from private lands without notice for highway repairs valid.

Cited in notes (3 L. R. A. 194, 11 L. R. A. 296) on constitutional protection of property rights; (4 L. R. A. 724, 5 L. R. A. 359, 11 L. R. A. 224) on due process of law; (11 L. R. A. 225) on due process of law; necessity of opportunity for hearing.

Assessment proceedings, what notice sufficient.

Cited in Tucker v. Sellers, 130 Ind. 519, 30 N. E. 531, holding notice of original assessment does not validate second assessment; Eaton v. Union County Nat. Bank, 141 Ind. 163, 40 N. E. 693, holding appearance of one subpoenaed as witness before tax board not waiver of statutory notice; Adams v. Shelbyville, 154 Ind. 545, 49 L. R. A. 825, 57 N. E. 114, 77 Am. St. Rep. 484 (dissenting opinion), majority holding act providing for hearing of persons aggrieved impliedly authorizes assessment for improvements conforming to benefits; Pulaski County v. Senn, 117 Ind. 413, 20 N. E. 276; Hubbard v. Goss, 157 Ind. 487, 62 N. E. 36, holding requirement of special notice of change of assessment of individual does not apply to general order of equalization; Klein v. Tuhey, 13 Ind. App. 76, 40 N. E. 144, holding general notice by publication, as prescribed by statute, of hearing on proposed improvement, validates assessment; Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Edgerton, 125 Ind. 463, 25 N. E. 436, holding substantial compliance with statute requiring notice of proposed improvement validates assessment of abutting owners; McEnaney v. Sullivan, 125 Ind. 409, 25 N. E. 540, holding notice to abutting owners to make objection to street improvement authorizes assessment therefor.

Distinguished in Hyland v. Brazil Block Coal Co. 128 Ind. 340, 26 N. E. 672, holding no notice to corporation required of meeting of board directed by law to value and assess corporation property; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 133 Ind. 538, 18 L. R. A. 741, 33 N. E. 421, and Smith v. Rude Bros. Mfg. Co. 131 Ind. 153, 30 N. E. 947, holding law requiring statement by corporation to be presented to board directed to assess capital stock sufficient notice.

— Notice not authorized by law, no notice.

Cited in Cummings v. Stark, 138 Ind. 101, 34 N. E. 444, holding notice by state tax board, not authorized by law, not legal notice validating assessment; Terre Haute & I. R. Co. v. Baker, 122 Ind. 441, 24 N. E. 83, holding notice not authorized by law cannot give court jurisdiction; United States v. American Lumber Co. 80 Fed. 313, holding service of subpoena outside of court's jurisdiction no notice.

— Constitutionality of law not expressly providing for notice of assessment.

Disapproved, in effect, in Allman v. District of Columbia, 3 App. D. C. 25, holding notice necessary to validate assessment for street need not be provided for in act; Carroll v. Alsup, 107 Tenn. 277, 64 S. W. 193, holding statute fixing time and place of meeting of equalization board sufficient notice to validate change in individual assessment.

Powers of board of equalization.

Cited in Satterwhite v. State, 142 Ind. 20, 40 N. E. 654 (dissenting opinion), majority holding that equalization board may require witness to testify in preliminary examination before giving notice of assessment to taxpayer; Jones v. Rushville Natural Gas Co. 135 Ind. 598, 35 N. E. 390, holding board of equalization quasi-judicial tribunal whose assessment of corporation stock is binding.

Legislature cannot confer judicial powers.

Cited in State ex rel. Hovey v. Noble, 118 Ind. 355, 4 L. R. A. 105, 10 Am. St. Rep. 143, 21 N. E. 244, holding legislature cannot confer judicial powers; Smythe v. Boswell, 117 Ind. 366, 20 N. E. 263, holding powers of courts derived from Constitution, not from legislature; State v. Runyan, 130 Ind. 209, 29 N. E. 779, holding town trustee not judicial officer; therefore presentation of false affidavit to him not perjury; Langenberg v. Decker, 131 Ind. 480, 16 L. R. A. 113, 31 N. E. 190, holding board of tax commissioners quasi-judicial body, on which power to punish for contempt not conferrable; Ellis v. Steuben County, 153 Ind. 92, 54 N. E. 382, holding statute requiring exercise of judgment and discretion by ministerial officer not unconstitutional as imposing judicial functions.

2 L. R. A. 659, LEE v. SIMPSON, 37 Fed. 12.

Final hearing. 39 Fed. 235, which was affirmed in 134 U. S. 572, 33 L. ed. 1038, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 631.

Execution of power of appointment.

Cited in Lee v. Simpson, 39 Fed. 240, holding power of appointment by will executed by reference thereto followed by general bequest.

Right to follow trust funds.

Cited in footnote to Central Stock & Grain Exchange v. Bendinger, 56 L. R. A. 875, which holds broker liable to refund to principal money illegally taken from agent as margins on gambling transaction.

2 L. R. A. 662, GILPATRICK v. GLIDDEN, 81 Me. 137, 10 Am. St. Rep. 245, 16 Atl. 464.

Second appeal, 82 Me. 202, 19 Atl. 166.

Resulting trusts.

Cited in Cross v. Bean, 83 Me. 64, 21 Atl. 752, holding legal title of land subject to trust in favor of vendee, except in hands of bona fide purchaser for value; Von Trotha v. Bamberger, 15 Colo. 10, 24 Pac. 883, holding resulting trust may be established by parol where legal title held in fraud of equitable owner; Ahrens v. Jones, 169 N. Y. 561, 88 Am. St. Rep. 620, 62 N. E. 666, holding property conveyed on promise of grantee to pay sum to third person impressed with trust; Grant v. Bradstreet, 87 Me. 596, 33 Atl. 165, holding promise to pay annuity inducing decedent not to make will enforceable in equity; Ransdel v. Moore, 153 Ind. 408, 53 L. R. A. 759, 53 N. E. 767, holding property impressed with trust where heir, by promising to convey, prevents disposal by decedent; Lawrence v. Oglesby, 178 Ill. 129, 52 N. E. 945, holding promise by beneficiary in will previously made to pay sum of money, enforceable; Amherst College v. Ritch, 151 N. Y. 323, 37 L. R. A. 321, 45 N. E. 876, Affirming 10 Misc. 523, 31 N. Y. Supp. 885, holding promise to dispose of bequest as indicated by testator creates trust.

Cited in footnote to Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Shepard, 58 L. R. A. 115, which holds implied trust arises in favor of grantor reserving right of action against elevated railroad for damages to property, against subsequent purchaser recovering such damages.

Cited in note (20 L. R. A. 467) on gifts by will as affected by promises made to testator.

Distinguished in Whitehouse v. Bolster, 95 Me. 463, 50 Atl. 240, holding assent of heir to proposed disposition of property creates no trust where decedent did not rely thereon; Orth v. Orth, 145 Ind. 197, 32 L. R. A. 306, 57 Am. St. Rep. 185, 42 N. E. 277, holding parol promise by beneficiary of will to carry out testator's wishes does not create trust.

Not followed in Moore v. Campbell, 102 Ala. 450, 14 So. 780, holding parol trust not enforceable against real property devised.

Enforceability of verbal agreements within statute of frauds.

Cited in Hallowell Nat. Bank v. Marston, 85 Me. 493, 27 Atl. 529, holding indorser estopped by conduct to assert invalidity of waiver of protest not in writing.

Cited in note (5 L. R. A. 245) on enforceability of verbal contract for exchange of lands.

Facts found by trial court prevail in appellate.

Cited in Gardiner Sav. Inst. v. Emerson, 91 Me. 539, 40 Atl. 551, and Cross v.

Bean, 83 Me. 63, 21 Atl. 752, holding findings of fact by trial judge prevail, unless clearly shown erroneous.

2 L. R. A. 667, PHENIX INS. CO. v. FIRST NAT. BANK, 85 Va. 765, 17 Am. St. Rep. 101, 8 S. E. 719.

Right of subrogated insurer.

Cited in footnote to New Hampshire F. Ins. Co. v. National L. Ins. Co. 57 L. R. A. 692, which denies right of insurer, subrogated to mortgagee's claims against mortgagor, to insist on charging mortgagee, retaining more than its share from other policy, with amount paid to mortgagor.

2 L. R. A. 668, KERR v. LUNSFORD, 31 W. Va. 659, 8 S. E. 493.

Burden of proof.

Cited in Seebrook v. Fedawa, 30 Neb. 433, 46 N. W. 650, holding burden of proving testator's sanity is upon proponent; Eakin v. Hawkins, 52 W. Va. 126, 43 S. E. 211, holding burden is on attacking parties to show insanity of grantor in deed.

Interest of witness.

Cited in Trowbridge v. Stone, 42 W. Va. 458, 26 S. E. 363, holding testimony of interested nonexpert witnesses inadmissible as to mental capacity to do valuable labor.

Distinguished in Coffman v. Hendrick, 32 W. Va. 125, 9 S. E. 65, holding witness unprovided for in will, who would inherit in its absence, may testify in its support.

Opinion of witness.

Cited in State v. Musgrave, 43 W. Va. 684, 28 S. E. 813, holding opinion of witness on question within common knowledge or experience inadmissible; Shepherd v. Snodgrass, 47 W. Va. 83, 34 S. E. 879, holding opinion of nonexpert witness of slight value unless coupled with facts sustaining it; Aultman Co. v. Ferguson, 8 S. D. 464, 66 N. W. 1081, holding expert witness cannot state value of article based on description of it.

Cited in notes (36 L. R. A. 70) on opinions as to testamentary capacity; (38 L. R. A. 729) as to who may give testimony as to mental capacity; (36 L. R. A. 68) on testimony of expert witness as to testator's sanity; (42 L. R. A. 766) on weight of expert testimony.

Hypothetical questions.

Cited in State v. Privitt, 175 Mo. 226, 75 S. W. 457, sustaining hypothetical question, in accordance with counsel's theory, leaving out essential ingredients in case.

Cited in note (39 L. R. A. 313, 314) on hypothetical statements or questions.

Error in excluding evidence.

Cited in Tower v. Whip, 53 W. Va. 162, 63 L. R. A. 945, 44 S. E. 179, holding rejection of admissible evidence error.

Reversal for illegal evidence.

Cited in Taylor v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 33 W. Va. 58, 10 S. E. 29, holding erroneous admission of evidence not prejudicial not ground for reversal; Bartlett v. Patton, 33 W. Va. 83, 5 L. R. A. 529, 10 S. E. 21, holding improper evidence does not justify reversal when other testimony requires verdict given; Michaelson v. Cautley, 45 W. Va. 542, 32 S. E. 170, holding judgment will be reversed if illegal evidence admitted may have been prejudicial.

Evidence of attesting witnesses as to testator's sanity.

Cited in notes (38 L. R. A. 746) as to evidence of attesting witnesses as to testamentary capacity; (39 L. R. A. 720) as to weight of opinion of attesting witness as to testamentary capacity.

Distinguished in Ward v. Brown, 53 W. Va. 255, 44 S. E. 488, holding instruction that evidence of attesting witnesses, testifying against testator's sanity, is entitled to peculiar weight, erroneous.

Capacity to make deed.

Cited in Dean v. Dean, 42 Or. 298, 70 Pac. 1039, holding greater degree of mental capacity required to make deed than to execute will; Eakin v. Hawkins, 52 W. Va. 127, 43 S. E. 211, holding feebleness of mind will not invalidate deed of grantor understanding nature of act.

Time of evidence as to capacity.

Cited in Martin v. Thayer, 37 W. Va. 52, 16 S. E. 489, holding testamentary capacity determined by testator's mental condition when will was executed; Bever v. Spangler, 93 Iowa, 597, 61 N. W. 1072, holding testimony as to mental soundness for six years after execution of will admissible.

Old age not proof of incapacity.

Cited in Buckey v. Buckey, 38 W. Va. 173, 18 S. E. 383, and Bowdoin College v. Merritt, 75 Fed. 488, holding old age does not disqualify one to execute deed.

Testamentary capacity.

Cited in Roller v. Kling, 150 Ind. 164, 49 N. E. 948, to contention that testamentary capacity depends on ability to know and understand, and not on actual knowledge; Perkins v. Perkins, 116 Iowa, 260, 90 N. W. 55, holding testamentary capacity consists in understanding nature of will and ability to recollect property, objects of bounty, and manner of distribution.

Cited in notes (4 L. R. A. 738) as to testamentary capacity; (12 L. R. A. 162) on testamentary capacity as affected by insane delusion.

Inference of undue influence.

Cited in footnote to Re Shell, 53 L. R. A. 387, which holds undue influence in procuring will not inferable from motive and opportunity alone.

Repetition in instructions.

Cited in State v. Bingham, 42 W. Va. 240, 24 S. E. 883; and State v. Sheppard 49 W. Va. 611, 39 S. E. 676, holding instruction properly refused if already substantially given.

Instruction must not assume facts.

Cited in Carrico v. West Virginia C. & P. R. Co. 39 W. Va. 101, 24 L. R. A. 55, 19 S. E. 571; Fisher v. West Virginia & P. R. Co. 39 W. Va. 373, 23 L. R. A. 761, 19 S. E. 578; Bentley v. Standard F. Ins. Co. 40 W. Va. 747, 23 S. E. 584; Oliver v. Ohio River R. Co. 42 W. Va. 723, 26 S. E. 444, — holding instructions must be based on facts in evidence.

Control of verdict by special findings.

Cited in Bess v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 35 W. Va. 499, 29 Am. St. Rep. 820, 14

S. E. 234, holding inconsistent special findings control general verdict; Gillingham v. Ohio River R. Co. 35 W. Va. 601, 14 L. R. A. 803, 29 Am. St. Rep. 827, 14 S. E. 243, holding immaterial special finding does not control general verdict; Peninsular Land Transp. & Mfg. Co. v. Franklin Ins. Co. 35 W. Va. 669, 14 S. E. 237, holding special interrogatories properly refused if immaterial.

Interrogatories consistent with verdict.

Cited in Wheeling Bridge Co. v. Wheeling & Bridge Co. 34 W. Va. 170, 11 S. E. 1009, sustaining refusal of interrogatories calling for special findings consistent with general verdict; Peninsular Land Transp. & Mfg. Co. v. Franklin Ins. Co. 35 W. Va. 669, 14 S. E. 237, holding interrogatories should be propounded if findings would be inconsistent with general verdict.

Review of discretion.

Cited in McKelvey v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 35 W. Va. 508, 14 S. E. 261, holding court's discretion in submitting interrogatories reviewable.

Joining incompatible prayers for relief.

Cited in Mathews v. Tyree, 53 W. Va. 301, 44 S. E. 526, holding probate cannot be affirmed in suit to construe will, to which heirs, as devisees, are parties; Ward v. Brown, 53 W. Va. 232, 44 S. E. 488, holding alleged invalidity of bequest does not affect legatee's right to appeal from decree declaring will void; Day v. National Mut. Bldg. & L. Asso. 53 W. Va. 554, 44 S. E. 779, holding borrower from building association cannot include in bill to have his stock declared void a demand for appointment of receiver in interests of shareholders.

Newspaper comment.

Cited in Copeland v. Wabash R. Co. 175 Mo. 683, 75 S. W. 106, holding reading by jurors, pending trial of negligence case, of newspaper account of former trial no ground for reversal.

2 L. R. A. 680, PITTSBURG, W. & K. R. CO. v. BENWOOD IRON WORKS, 31 W. Va. 710, 8 S. E. 453.

Eminent domain.

Cited in Great Western Natural Gas & Oil Co. v. Hawkins, 30 Ind. App. 567, 66 N. E. 765, holding gas company cannot condemn land for pipe line without showing it is furnishing gas for public use; F. B. R. Cemetery Asso. v. Redd, 33 W. Va. 265, 10 S. E. 405, holding application to condemn land for cemetery must distinctly state that it is needed for public use; Board of Health v. Van Hoesen, 87 Mich. 539, 14 L. R. A. 116, also footnote p. 114, 49 N. W. 894, which holds power of eminent domain not conferrable on rural cemetery corporation.

Cited in notes (4 L. R. A. 785, 789, 792) on right of eminent domain; (7 L. R. A. 152) on exercise of right of eminent domain a political, not a judicial, question; (3 L. R. A. 176) on title to land taken for public use; (11 L. R. A. 286) on constitutional protection of property rights.

What constitutes "public use."

Cited in Kyle v. Texas & W. O. R. Co. (Tex. App.) 4 L. R. A. 279, denying railroad's right to condemn land for spur track running to private mills and wharves.

Cited in footnotes to Ré Barre Water Co. 9 L. R. A. 195, which holds running of motors for light manufacturing not a public purpose for which water of stream may be appropriated; Bridal Veil Lumbering Co. v. Johnson, 34 L. R. A. 368, which sustains right of railroad built through timbered region for few miles to sawmill to exercise of eminent domain; Paxton v. H. Irrigating Canal & Land Co. v. Farmers' & M. Irrig. & Land Co. 29 L. R. A. 853, which holds condemnation of land for irrigating ditches to be "for" public purpose; Wisconsin Water Co. v. Winans, 20 L. R. A. 682, which denies water-supply company's right to condemn land for pipe line.

Cited in note (20 L. R. A. 438) on power to condemn right of way for railroad sidings to private establishments; (14 L. R. A. 480) on public purposes for which money may be appropriated or raised by taxation.

Distinguished in Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Morehouse, 112 Wis. 7, 56 L. R. A. 243, 88 Am. St. Rep. 918, 87 N. W. 849, sustaining railroad's right, under statute, to condemn land for spur track to single industry, open to all desiring service.

Disapproved in Ulmer v. Lime Rock R. Co. 98 Me. 590, 57 Atl. 1001, sustaining railroad's right to condemn land for branch track to lime quarry.

Appeal in condemnation proceedings.

Cited in Wheeling Bridge & T. R. Co. v. Wheeling Steel & I. Co. 41 W. Va. 752, 24 S. E. 651, holding writ of error to interlocutory order in condemnation proceedings, that applicant has right to take property upon paying compensation improperly allowed.

Private corporations, what are.

Cited in State v. Peel Splint Coal Co. 36 W. Va. 845, 17 L. R. A. 399, 15 S. E. 1000, by English, J., dissenting, who holds coal mining company a private corporation.

2 L. R. A. 691, McCOULL v. MANCHESTER, 85 Va. 579, 8 S. E. 379.

Duty to keep streets in safe condition.

Cited in notes (10 L. R. A. 737) as to duty of city to keep streets in safe condition; (8 L. R. A. 829, 10 L. R. A. 474) on obstruction of street for building purposes.

2 L. R. A. 694, LOUISVILLE & N. R. Co. v. BALLARD, 88 Ky. 159, 10 S. W. 429.

Punitive damages.

Cited in Memphis & C. Packet Co. v. Nagel, 97 Ky. 15, 29 S. W. 743, holding carrier liable in punitive damages for insulting and wrongfully taking passenger past her destination.

2 L. R. A. 695, SMETHURST v. INDEPENDENT CONG. CHURCH, 148 Mass. 261, 12 Am. St. Rep. 550, 19 N. E. 387.

Use of highway by adjoining owner.

Cited in Morris v. Whipple, 183 Mass. 29, 66 N. E. 199, raising without deciding, question whether carpet and canopy across sidewalk to street is a reasonable use by adjoining owner.

Negligence.

Cited in Shepard v. Creamer, 160 Mass. 498, 36 N. E. 475, holding it negligence to maintain building so constructed that snow or ice is liable to fall upon travelers; Cork v. Blossom, 162 Mass. 333, 26 L. R. A. 258, 44 Am. St. Rep. 362, 38 N. E. 495, holding one liable for injury due to fall of high chimney in a not unusual gale; Manning v. West End Street R. Co. 166 Mass. 231, 44 N. E. 135, holding one momentarily stopping on street not negligent if struck by switch stick flying from hands of car conductor.

Cited in footnote to Davis v. Niagara Falls Tower Co. 57 L. R. A. 545, which sustains right to injunction against maintaining tower so that ice forming on it falls on adjoining property.

Cited in note (12 L. R. A. 322) on duty as essential element of negligence: (12 L. R. A. 190) as to liability of owner for injury caused by materials falling into street.

Proximate cause.

Cited in McCauley v. Norcross, 155 Mass. 587, 30 N. E. 464, holding leaving beams where they might fall on some one below proximate cause of injury, although careless person toppled them over.

Cited in footnotes to Schumaker v. St. Paul & D. R. Co. 12 L. R. A. 257, which hold master's neglect to furnish transportation proximate cause of injury in walking to find shelter; McClain v. Garden Grove, 12 L. R. A. 482, which holds narrowness of bridge and insufficiency of railings not proximate cause of injury from horse falling on account of disease or choking; Vallo v. United States Exp. Co. 14 L. R. A. 743, which holds throwing trunk from delivery wagon in highway proximate cause of traveler falling over another trunk; Herr v. Lebanon, 16 L. R. A. 106, which holds want of barrier not proximate cause of omnibus going over wall, horse attempting to rise; Southwestern Teleg. & Teleph. Co. v. Robinson, 16 L. R. A. 545, which holds telephone company liable for injury by electricity generated by thunder storm in low hanging telephone wire; Kieffer v. Hummelstown, 17 L. R. A. 217, which holds borough not liable for injury to one thrown on stone pile on roadside by fall of horse, due to struggles of other horse frightened by shooting; McKenna v. Baessler, 17 L. R. A. 310, which holds original fire proximate cause of destruction of property by back fire; Gibney v. State, 19 L. R. A. 365, which holds unsafe bridge cause of drowning of father trying to save child falling into water through defect; Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. v. Elliott, 20 L. R. A. 582, as to proximate cause of injury to shipper while stepping from stock car to caboose; Mueller v. Milwaukee Street R. Co. 21 L. R. A. 721, which holds sudden stopping of street car in front of funeral procession cause of injury to first carriage by pole of second; Wood v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 35 L. R. A. 199, which holds failure to give warning of approach of train not proximate cause of injury to one struck by body of other person hit by train.

Cited in notes (12 L. R. A. 280, 17 L. R. A. 38) as to proximate cause of injury; (45 L. R. A. 87) on rule of proximate cause in malicious torts; (7 L. R. A. 132, 13 L. R. A. 733) as to proximate and remote cause of injury; (12 L. R. A. 283) as to concurrent or co-operative cause of injury; (8 L. R. A. 85) as to effect produced by intervening cause; (8 L. R. A. 82) as to liability for consequential injuries due to negligent act.

Rights of traveler.

Cited in Nead v. Roscoe Lumber Co. 54 App. Div. 622, 66 N. Y. Supp. 419, holding one run into while tightening canvas cover to his cart a traveler.

Cited in note (10 L. R. A. 737) as to who is protected as traveler.

Nature of rejected testimony.

Cited in Com. v. Smith, 163 Mass. 429, 40 N. E. 189, and Shinners v. Locks & Canals, 154 Mass. 169, 12 L. R. A. 557, 26 Am. St. Rep. 226, 28 N. E. 10, holding exclusion of testimony not reviewable unless bill of exceptions shows its nature; Boykin v. State, 40 Fla. 492, 24 So. 141, holding exclusion of testimony not reviewable unless its nature is indicated by the question or an offer made.

2 L. R. A. 697, STARRATT v. MULLEN, 148 Mass. 570, 20 N. E. 178.

Evidence disproving fact or contract alleged.

Cited in Lansky v. West End Street R. Co. 173 Mass. 20, 53 N. E. 129, holding defendant's proof that injury happened at place other than alleged does not make new case plaintiff entitled to meet; Frost v. Sumner, 149 Mass. 100, 21 N. E. 231, holding evidence of agreement to accept legacy in payment of services sued for admissible; Stewart v. Thayer, 170 Mass. 562, 49 N. E. 1020, holding defendant, to disprove contract alleged, may show he made different one; Cargill v. Atwood, 18 R. I. 308, 27 Atl. 214, holding defendant may show goods charged to him were furnished in payment of debt due him.

Burden of proof.

Cited in Hunting v. Downer, 151 Mass. 278, 23 N. E. 832, to point that plaintiff must show that note sued on was given for loan as alleged; Johnson v. Kimball, 172 Mass. 401, 52 N. E. 386, holding plaintiff must show that money paid and services rendered were furnished as consideration for a legal obligation; Milliken v. Randall, 89 Me. 207, 36 Atl. 75, holding plaintiff must show performance of agreement to care for ice until shipment, in action for purchase price; Johnson v. Wanamaker, 17 Pa. Super. Ct. 306, holding plaintiff in quantum meruit must show facts from which law will infer promise to pay.

2 L. R. A. 698, DELANO v. BRUERTON, 148 Mass. 619, 20 N. E. 308.

Inheritance by adopted child.

Cited in Fiske v. Pratt, 157 Mass. 84, 31 N. E. 715, to point that adopted son in absence of will, inherits the estate; Stearns v. Allen, 183 Mass. 410, 97 Am. St. Rep. 441, 67 N. E. 349, holding adopted daughter inherits as sister, from son of one of adopting parents.

Cited in footnote to Van Matre v. Sankey, 23 L. R. A. 665, which authorizes descent of land to child adopted in other state.

Cited in note (17 L. R. A. 436) as to effect of adoption on relationship to others.

Distinguished in Re Reel, 33 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. 130, holding adopted grandchild may share in adopting father's estate as child and grandchild.

2 L. R. A. 699, MANUFACTURERS NAT. BANK v. CONTINENTAL BANK, 148 Mass. 553, 12 Am. St. Rep. 598, 20 N. E. 193.

Credit.

Cited in Beal v. Somerville, 17 L. R. A. 295, 1 C. C. A. 601, 5 U. S. App. 14, 50 Fed. 650, holding bank bailee of checks deposited, although immediately credited to depositor and bank; National Bank of Commerce v. Johnson, 6 N. D. 185, 69 N. W. 49, holding indorsement for credit creates, on collection, relation of creditor and debtor between depositor and bank; Fifth Nat. Bank v. Armstrong, 40 Fed. 49, holding title to uncollected paper before provisional credit is drawn against depends on intent.

Distinguished in Franklin County Nat. Bank v. Beal, 49 Fed. 607, holding collecting and forwarding banks debtor and creditor after collection and credit of amount.

Indorsement "for account of."

Cited in People's Bank v. Jefferson County Sav. Bank, 106 Ala. 534, 54 Am. St. Rep. 59, 17 So. 728, holding indorsement "for account of" gives notice of ownership in indorser.

Indorsement "for collection."

Cited in First Nat. Bank v. Armstrong, 42 Fed. 197; Citizens' Nat. Bank v. City Nat. Bank, 111 Iowa, 215, 82 N. W. 464; National Bank of Commerce v. Johnson, 6 N. D. 184, 69 N. W. 49,—holding indorsement for collection passes no title; Bank of Clarke County v. Gilman, 81 Hun, 491, 30 N. Y. Supp. 1111, holding paper, until paid, remains the property of the owner, who indorses it for collection; Freeman's Nat. Bank v. National Tube Works Co. 151 Mass. 417, 8 L. R. A. 46, 21 Am. St. Rep. 461, 24 N. E. 779, holding owner after indorsement for collection may control paper until paid, and intercept proceeds in hands of intermediate agent.

Cited in footnotes to Tyson v. Western Nat. Bank, 23 L. R. A. 161, which holds title does not pass by "indorsing for collection;" Corn Exchange Bank v. Farmers' Nat. Bank, 7 L. R. A. 559, which holds only first of several banks receiving check for collection agent of payee.

Cited in notes (7 L. R. A. 845) as to receiving paper for collection; (4 L. R. A. 422) as to agency of bank receiving paper for collection.

Insolvency.

Cited in Exchange Bank v. Sutton Bank, 78 Md. 586, 23 L. R. A. 176, 28 Atl. 563, holding insolvent concern cannot make transfer of credit; Nash v. Second Nat. Bank, 67 N. J. L. 267, 51 Atl. 727, holding insolvency terminates agency of bank to collect; Stevenson v. Fidelity Bank, 113 N. C. 488, 18 S. E. 695, holding collecting bank cannot, after forwarding bank's assignment, credit latter with proceeds; Bruner v. First Nat. Bank, 97 Tenn. 546, 34 L. R. A. 535, 37 S. W. 286, holding depositor in insolvent bank may recover sums collected and credited to it after its failure; Commercial Nat. Bank v. Armstrong, 148 U. S. 57, 37 L. ed. 366, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533, holding receiver of insolvent bank liable for proceeds of paper indorsed to it for collection and received by him.

Cited in footnotes to Armstrong v. Boyertown Nat. Bank, 9 L. R. A. 553, which denies right of receiver or creditors of bank crediting owner with draft received for collection to demand proceeds from collecting bank; First Nat. Bank v. Payne, 3 L. R. A. 284, which holds partner of insolvent banking firm cannot pay checks received from collecting bank by charging to drawers and crediting to latter bank.

Cited in notes (7 L. R. A. 859) as to effect of insolvency of collecting bank; (25 L. R. A. 547) as to preference by insolvent bank because of trust character of deposit; (2 L. R. A. 482) as to following trust fund in the hands of third person; (32 L. R. A. 717) as to trust in proceeds of collection made by insolvent bank.

Acceptance of check.

Cited in footnote to Pickle v. People's Nat. Bank, 7 L. R. A. 93, which holds acceptance of check necessary to give right of action against bank.

Application of money due depositor.

Cited in footnote to Grissom v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 3 L. R. A. 273, which holds bank has no right to pay to third party note made by depositor.

Cited in note (4 L. R. A. 111) as to application of money due depositor.

2 L. R. A. 701, STATE ex rel. DAVIDSON v. GORHAM, 40 Minn. 232, 41 N. W. 948.

Constitutionality of inheritance tax.

Cited in footnote to Ferry v. Campbell, 50 L. R. A. 92, which holds succession tax void for want of notice of proceedings to fix amount of tax.

— Uniformity of taxation.

Cited in Drew v. Tift, 79 Minn. 182, 47 L. R. A. 527, 79 Am. St. Rep. 446, 81 N. W. 839, holding constitutional provision requiring equality of taxation applies to inheritance tax; State ex rel. Sanderson v. Mann, 76 Wis. 480, 45 N. W. 526, holding tax on estates of stated value or over, in counties having more than given population, invalid for want of uniformity.

Cited in footnotes to Drew v. Tift, 47 L. R. A. 525, which requires uniformity and equal application in exemption from inheritance tax; State ex rel. Garth v. Switzler, 40 L. R. A. 280, which holds succession tax at different rates on legacies of different amounts invalid; Billings v. People, 59 L. R. A. 807, which sustains transfer tax on lineal descendants to whom life estate given with remainder to lineal descendants, but exempting lineal descendants taking fee; Re Swift, 18 L. R. A. 709, as to what is subject to succession tax.

Distinguished in Drew v. Tift, 79 Minn. 183, 47 L. R. A. 527, 79 Am. St. Rep. 446, 81 N. W. 839, holding principal case not authority for or against right to levy inheritance tax.

Disapproved, in effect, in Knowlton v. More, 178 U. S. 58, 44 L. ed. 976, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747, 9 Pa. Dist. R. 309, holding greater privilege of taxation exists as to state inheritance taxes than as to tax on property; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 291, 292, 42 L. ed. 1042, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594, holding inheritance tax based on classification of legatees and devisees, and value of estate transmitted, not in conflict with United States Constitution; State v. Alston, 94 Tenn. 684, 28 L. R. A. 181, 30 S. W. 750, holding inheritance tax making discrimination between direct descendants and collateral heirs and strangers not unconstitutional; Union Trust Co. v. Wayne Probate Judge, 125 Mich. 493, 84 N. W. 1101, holding inheritance tax is tax on privilege, and not subject to constitutional provision requiring uniformity.

Recovery of probate tax paid county treasurer.

Cited in Mearkle v. Hennepin County, 44 Minn. 547, 47 N. W. 165, holding tax paid under void statute to secure probate of will may be recovered back; Rand v. Hennepin County, 50 Minn. 392, 52 N. W. 901, holding, payment cannot be recovered back unless made under compulsion; De Graff v. Ramsey County, 46 Minn. 320, 48 N. W. 1135, holding under facts, payment of tax was voluntary, and could not be recovered back.

2 L. R. A. 703, PENNEGAR v. STATE, 87 Tenn. 244, 10 Am. St. Rep. 648, 10 S. W. 305.

Validity of marriages prohibited by local law.

Cited in Stull's Estate, 183 Pa. 625, 39 L. R. A. 542, 63 Am. St. Rep. 776, 39 Atl. 16, holding intended evasion of local law may be ground for declaring marriage performed in another state invalid; McLennan v. McLennan, 31 Or. 486, 38 L. R. A. 864, 65 Am. St. Rep. 835, 50 Pac. 802, holding marriage by divorced resident of Oregon, in another state, within time for taking appeal, which is prohibited by laws of Oregon, is void; State use of Newman v. Kimbrough (Tenn. Ch. App.) 52 L. R. A. 670, 59 S. W. 1061, holding marriage between divorced man and paramour in another state, contrary to local law, invalid, although intention to evade statute not shown; State v. Tutty, 41 Fed. 760, 7 L. R. A. 53, holding marriage of white person with negro, prohibited by law of Georgia, is invalid in that state, although good where contracted; Re Wilbur, 8 Wash. 37, 40 Am. St. Rep. 886, 35 Pac. 407, holding marriage of white man with Indian woman on reservation, contrary to statute of Washington, void in that state.

Cited in footnotes to Jackson v. Jackson, 34 L. R. A. 773, which sustains marriage valid in other state where contracted; Re Stull, 39 L. R. A. 539, which holds invalid marriage between man and paramour in other state to avoid laws of domicile; Norman v. Norman, 42 L. R. A. 343, which holds marriage on high seas, by parties leaving land to evade laws of residence, invalid.

Cited in notes ( 57 L. R. A. 161, 162, 166, 169) on conflict of laws as to validity of marriage; (24 L. R. A. 834) on effect of statutes forbidding remarriage of guilty party after divorce upon remarriage in another state.

Distinguished in Jackson v. Jackson, 82 Md. 30, 34 L. R. A. 775, 33 Atl. 317, holding marriage valid where contracted, will be recognized in another state, if not in contravention of declared policy of state.

Disapproved, in effect, in State v. Shattuck, 69 Vt. 403, 40 L. R. A. 429, 60 Am. St. Rep. 936, 38 Atl. 81, holding intended evasion of local law not sufficient to invalidate marriage good where celebrated, unless statute expressly so provides.

Evidence of marriage.

Cited in Jackson v. Jackson, 82 Md. 30, 34 L. R. A. 775, 33 Atl. 317, holding proof of marriage in another state by general reputation only, sufficient, in absence of local statute to contrary.

2 L. R. A. 708, ROWE v. FOGLE, 88 Ky. 105, 10 S. W. 426.

Attorney's lien on land.

Cited in Keehn v. Keehn, 115 Iowa, 471, 88 N. W. 957, holding attorney's lien did not attach at common law to land in controversy.

Cited in footnote to Loofbourow v. Hicks, 55 L. R. A. 874, holding attorneys' fees allowed by judgment on foreclosure of mortgage is lien on land.

2 L. R. A. 709, LINDLEY v. FIRST NAT. BANK, 76 Iowa, 629, 14 Am. St. Rep. 254, 41 N. W. 381.

Variance between agreement and demand for performance.

Cited in Tansey v. Peterson, 88 Iowa, 548, 55 N. W. 577, holding agreement to "indorse draft as heretofore" does not require indorsement of draft bearing interest; Garrettson v. North Atchison Bank, 47 Fed. 870, holding bank agreeing to accept check for stated sum cannot refuse payment because check presented concludes with words "with exchange."

Cited in notes (7 L. R. A. 209) on acceptance of bill of exchange or draft; (23 L. R. A. 836) on liability of bank as accommodation indorser.

Admissibility of evidence of custom or usage.

Cited in McKee v. Wild, 52 Neb. 14, 71 N. W. 958, holding custom relied on to prove meaning other than ordinary significance of words used in contract must be pleaded; Lewis v. Metcalf, 53 Kan. 227, 36 Pac. 345, holding local usage in stock market, of placing money to credit of shipper, must be pleaded in action to recover proceeds of shipment; Eller v. Loomis, 106 Iowa, 280, 78 N. W. 686, holding custom of bricklayers to build their own scaffolds not available in action for injury from fall of scaffold unless pleaded.

Cited in note (13 L. R. A. 440) on admissibility of evidence of custom to vary written contract.

2 L. R. A. 711, STEWART v. GORTER, 70 Md. 242, 16 Atl. 644.

Redemption of leases.

Cited in Swan v. Kemp, 97 Md. 689, 55 Atl. 441, holding statute permitting lessee for more than fifteen years to redeem lease applies to lease of improved land.

2 L. R. A. 712, ANDERSON v. EAST, 117 Ind. 126, 10 Am. St. Rep. 35, 19 N. E. 726.

Municipal corporation, liability for wrongful acts of officers.

Cited in Vaughtman v. Waterloo, 14 Ind. App. 652, 43 N. E. 476, and Monticello v. Fox, 3 Ind. App. 488, 28 N. E. 1025, holding city liable for omission or negligent performance of ministerial duty, but not for failure to exercise discretionary powers; Funke v. St. Louis, 122 Mo. 140, 26 S. W. 1034, holding city not liable for damage to land resulting from acceptance and approval of plat of adjoining property; Laurel v. Blue, 1 Ind. App. 131, 27 N. E. 301, holding city not liable for illegal arrest by marshal without warrant, and under void ordinance; Simpson v. Whatcom, 33 Wash. 405, 63 L. R. A. 820, 99 Am. St. Rep. 951, 74 Pac. 577, denying municipality's liability for arrest and prosecution of person under invalid ordinance.

Cited in footnotes to Snider v. St. Paul, 18 L. R. A. 151, which holds city not liable for negligence of agents in providing and maintaining city hall; Howard v. Worcester, 12 L. R. A. 160, which holds city not liable for negligence in blasting for schoolhouse; Culver v. Streater, 6 L. R. A. 270, which holds city liable for negligence of employee enforcing ordinance against unmuzzled dogs running at large.

Cited in notes (9 L. R. A. 209, 210) on nonliability of municipal corporations for acts or omissions of officers or agents; (19 L. R. A. 454) on distinction between public and private functions of municipal corporations in respect to liability for negligence; (5 L. R. A. 254) on liability of municipal corporations for injuries from defective streets, bridges, etc.; (44 L. R. A. 801) on liability of municipal corporations for false imprisonment and unlawful arrest.

Owner of falling wall liable for injury.

Cited in Ainsworth v. Lakin, 180 Mass. 400, 57 L. R. A. 135, 91 Am. St. Rep. 314, 62 N. E. 746, holding owner liable for injury from fall of wall of burned building.

Cited in footnotes to Dettmering v. English, 48 L. R. A. 106, which holds person constructing wall liable for failure to use due care to prevent its fall; Cork v. Blossom, 26 L. R. A. 256, which holds one maintaining high chimney liable for fall on adjoining building.

Cited in notes (34 L. R. A. 558) on liability of owner or occupant for falling wall; (5 L. R. A. 795) on damages for injury caused by defective premises.

Allegations as to negligence.

Cited in Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Washington, 49 Fed. 349, and Lafayette v. Ashby, 8 Ind. App. 218, 34 N. E. 238, holding general averment of negligence sufficient to withstand demurrer.

Cited in note (59 L. R. A. 218) on sufficiency of general allegations of negligence.

— As to freedom from contributory negligence.

Cited in Pennsylvania Co. v. Horton, 132 Ind. 192, 31 N. E. 45, holding general averment sufficient, in absence of motion for more specific statement; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Levy, 134 Ind. 344, 32 N. E. 815, holding ignorance of excavation into which plaintiff fell need not be pleaded, in action for injury, when alleged plaintiff was without fault.

2 L. R. A. 715, DOOLEY v. MONTGOMERY, 72 Tex. 429, 10 S. W. 451.

Conveyance of community property.

Cited in Stiles v. Japhet, 84 Tex. 95, 19 S. W. 450, holding husband may convey community property without wife's joining in deed.

2 L. R. A. 716, RICHARDSON v. LOUISVILLE & N. R. CO. 85 Ala. 559, 5 So. 308.

2 L. R. A. 717, FRENCH v. WILLER, 126 Ill. 611, 9 Am. St. Rep. 651, 18 N. E. 811.

Confession of judgment on warrant of attorney.

Cited in note (13 L. R. A. 796) on conclusiveness of judgments confessed on warrants of attorney.

Statutory rights and remedies.

Cited in Fitzgerald v. Quinn, 165 Ill. 360, 46 N. E. 287, holding statutory jurisdictional facts must exist, and statutory procedure be followed, to sustain forcible entry and detainer action; Fay v. Seator, 88 Ill. App. 421, holding appeal statutes must be strictly complied with.

2 L. R. A. 721, PEOPLE v. ARMSTRONG, 73 Mich. 288, 16 Am. St. Rep. 578. 41 N. W. 275.

Test of reasonableness in determining validity of ordinance.

Cited in People v. Wagner, 86 Mich. 600, 13 L. R. A. 289, 24 Am. St. Rep. 141, 49 N. W. 609, holding bread ordinance clearly authorized by charter not subjectable to test of reasonableness; Re Smith, 143 Cal. 373, 77 Pac. 180, holding conditions and circumstances may be considered in determining whether ordinance is a valid exercise of police power; Grand Rapids v. Powers, 89 Mich. 114, 14 L. R. A. 507, 28 Am. St. Rep. 276, 50 N. W. 661, holding legislature cannot infringe individual rights by authorizing municipality to declare that a purpresture or nuisance is not so in fact; Bennett v. Pulaski (Tenn. Ch. App.) 47 L. R. A. 281, holding ordinance regulating saloon screens and admission and egress of persons during certain hours void for unreasonableness.

Cited in footnotes to Simrall v. Covington, 9 L. R. A. 556, which holds ordinance requiring license from agents representing nonresident insurance companies only, void; Kosciusko v. Slomberg, 12 L. R. A. 528, which holds ordinance restricting importation of second-hand clothing in absence of epidemic void; Beiling v. Evansville, 35 L. R. A. 272, which refuses to hold void ordinance prohibiting maintenance of slaughterhouse within city when authorized by statute; Slaughter v. O'Berry, 48 L. R. A. 442, which holds void ordinance that city may provide materials and do work of making sewer connections to within 3 feet of building; Philadelphia v. Brabender, 58 L. R. A. 220, which sustains ordinance against casting advertisements, etc., into vestibules of dwellings.

Cited in note (6 L. R. A. 268) on powers of municipalities to be exercised impartially.

Distinguished in People v. Baker, 115 Mich. 200, 73 N. W. 115, upholding ordinance requiring hawkers and peddlers to pay weekly license fee of $5; Grand Rapids v. Braudy, 105 Mich. 678, 32 L. R. A. 121, 55 Am. St. Rep. 472, 64 N. W. 29, upholding ordinance providing for licensing pawnbrokers, junk and secondhand dealers; Wettengel v. Denver, 20 Colo. 555, 39 Pac. 343, upholding ordinance prohibiting distribution of hand bills etc., tending to litter streets and frighten horses; Philadelphia v. Brabender, 201 Pa. 577, 58 L. R. A. 221, 51 Atl. 374, Affirming 17 Pa. Super. Ct. 337, upholding ordinance forbidding casting hand bills etc., upon streets and in vestibules of houses.

Partial invalidity of ordinance.

Cited in St. Ignace v. Snyder, 75 Mich. 652, 42 N. W. 1130, holding defendant can only complain of invalidity of ordinance as to particular part under which he was convicted.

2 L. R. A. 724, DOE ex dem. HITCH v. PATTEN, 8 Houst. (Del.) 334, 16 Atl. 558.

2 L. R. A. 734, CONSTANT v. UNIVERSITY OF ROCHESTER, 111 N. Y. 604, 7 Am. St. Rep. 769, 19 N. E. 631.

Second appeal in 133 N. Y. 641, 4 Silv. Ct. App. 235, 31 N. E. 26.

Mortgagees for value.

Cited in note (13 L. R. A. 390) on chattel mortgage, novation.

When agent's knowledge imputable to principal.

Cited in Slattery v. Schwannecke, 118 N. Y. 548, 23 N. E. 922, holding mortgagee not chargeable with knowledge of attorneys conducting foreclosure, of unrecorded deed, not shown to have been then in attorneys' minds; McCutcheon v. Dittman, 164 N. Y. 357, 58 N. E. 97, holding attaching creditor, purchasing collateral at sale conducted by his attorney acted for lender, chargeable with attorneys' knowledge of want of due notice to debtor; Melms v. Pabst Brewing Co. 93 Wis. 167, 57 Am. St. Rep. 899, 66 N. W. 518, holding attorneys' knowledge of invalidity of sale by interested executor, gained while acting for parties, not imputable to client subsequently buying land; Equitable Securities Co. v. Shepard, 78 Miss. 234, 28 So. 842, holding knowledge acquired by attorney six years before, not shown to have been in mind when conducting client's business not imputable to client; Sweeney v. Pratt, 70 Conn. 282, 66 Am. St. Rep. 101, 39 Atl. 182, holding knowledge gained by attorney in client's business imputable to client; Brinkerhoff v. Sartwell, 85 Hun, 560, 33 N. Y. Supp. 162, holding agent's knowledge of corporation's condition at time of selling stock imputable to vendor; German American Mut. Life Asso. v. Farley, 102 Ga. 740, 29 S. E. 615, holding agent's knowledge of facts material to risk, gained before employment, present in mind when effecting insurance, imputable to insurer; Re Plankinton Bank, 87 Wis. 383, 58 N. W. 784, holding bank not chargeable with knowledge of ownership of funds deposited by president to private account; George v. Butler, 16 Utah, 116, 50 Pac. 1032, holding husband's knowledge of prior lien gained shortly before lending wife's money on mortgage, imputable to wife; Anderson v. Hernandez, 8 Misc. 644, 29 N. Y. Supp. 1027, holding knowledge gained by agents in investigating property imputable to purchaser; Anderson v. Blood, 86 Hun, 251, 33 N. Y. Supp. 233 (dissenting opinion) majority holding knowledge of suspicious circumstances, coming to agent at moment of closing sale, not imputable to purchaser; Crooks v. People's Nat. Bank, 72 App. Div. 338, 76 N. Y. Supp. 92 (dissenting opinion), majority holding bank chargeable with knowledge of intent of president, acting for it and for his insolvent firm, to give preference.

Cited in footnotes to Birmingham Trust & Sav. Co. v. Louisiana Nat. Bank, 20 L. R. A. 600, which holds cashier's notice imputable to savings company; Wittenbrock v. Parker, 24 L. R. A. 197, which holds knowledge by one member of firm of lawyers while transacting firm business imputed to other members.

Distinguished in Bienestok v. Ammidown, 155 N. Y. 59, 49 N. E. 321, Reversing 11 Misc. 82, 32 N. Y. Supp. 1138, holding partner's knowledge of fraud committed by him in individual transaction not imputable to his firm, with which proceeds were deposited; Scott v. Scott, 2 App. Div. 243, 38 N. Y. Supp. 613, holding principal chargeable with agent's knowledge of want of consideration, acquired in purchasing note; Wiegmann v. Morimura, 12 Misc. 39, 33 N. Y. Supp. 39, holding notice to attorney of rights of third persons in property sold under attachment not imputable to client receiving proceeds.

Burden of showing agent's knowledge chargeable to principal.

Cited in Sergeant v. Liverpool & L. & G. Ins. Co. 66 App. Div. 51, 73 N. Y. Supp. 120, holding burden of proof is on one seeking to charge insurer with agent's knowledge, acquired before employment; Denton v. Ontario County Nat. Bank, 150 N. Y. 137, 44 N. E. 781, holding burden of proof is on person seeking to charge client with knowledge of attorney, gained in another transaction.

Possession as notice of rights in real property.

Cited in footnotes to Brinser v. Anderson, 6 L. R. A. 205, which holds purchaser required to inquire into rights of possessor, though he knows of lease to him; Rock Island & P. R. Co. v. Dimick, 19 L. R. A. 105, which holds open and exclusive possession of passageway through railroad embankment notice of rights to purchaser of railroad.

Cited in note (8 L. R. A. 211, 212) on title to land; construction notice by possession.

2 L. R. A. 741, STULL v. HARRIS, 51 Ark. 294, 11 S. W. 104.

Action for assignment of dower by appellant's widow, in Stull v. Graham, 60 Ark. 468, 31 S. W. 46.

Statute of limitations.

Cited in Fox v. Drewry, 62 Ark. 319, 35 S. W. 533, holding married women's act does not, by implication, repeal saving clause in their favor in statute of limitations.

Return of consideration as prerequisite of rescinding transfer of title.

Cited in State v. Morgan, 52 Ark. 157, 12 S. W. 243, holding state, to recover title to land in possession of citizen under void patent, must return consideration.

Cited in note (26 L. R. A. 183) on necessity of returning consideration in order to disaffirm infants' contracts.

2 L. R. A. 743, DEMING v. DARLING, 148 Mass. 504, 20 N. E. 107.

Opinions, and estimates, and representations, as basis for action for deceit.

Cited in Lilienthal v. Suffolk Brewing Co. 154 Mass. 188, 12 L. R. A. 823, 26 Am. St. Rep. 234, 28 N. E. 151, holding seller's statement as to market value, to experienced dealer in article sold, not actionable; Burns v. Dockray, 156 Mass. 137, 30 N. E. 551, holding false statement, absolutely made, that title to real estate was good, deceiving buyer, actionable; Lynch v. Murphy, 171 Mass. 308, 50 N. E. 623, holding representations largely of future value, of stock as an investment not actionable; People's Sav. Bank v. James, 178 Mass. 325, 59 N. E. 807, holding false representations as to means and ability to raise money, inducing transfer of property, not actionable against execution-sale purchaser; Handy v. Waldron, 18 R. I. 570, 49 Am. St. Rep. 794, 29 Atl. 143, holding false and fraudulent warranty of value of bonds and stocks, deceiving purchaser, actionable; Mosher v. Post, 89 Wis. 605, 62 N. W. 516, holding false statement of value of goods by seller not actionable; Ansley v. Bank of Piedmont, 113 Ala. 479, 59 Am. St. Rep. 122, 21 So. 59, holding mere representations as to present pecuniary value of lot not actionable; Andrews v. Jackson, 168 Mass. 269, 37 L. R. A. 403, 60 Am. St. Rep. 390, 47 N. E. 412, holding false representations as to value of notes, deceiving vendor of land, actionable.

Cited in notes (15 L. R. A. 795) on effect of representing things sold to be "good;" (35 L. R. A. 426) on expression of opinion as fraud; (37 L. R. A. 610) on right to rely upon representations made to effect contract as a basis for a charge of fraud.

Distinguished in Roberts v. French, 153 Mass. 63, 10 L. R. A. 657, 25 Am. St. Rep. 611, 26 N. E. 416, holding false representations as to measurement of land, deceiving buyer, actionable.

Requisites of action for deceit.

Cited in Ruohs v. Third Nat. Bank, 94 Tenn. 74, 28 S. W. 303, holding right of action for deceit may be lost by laches.

Cited in footnote to Nash v. Minnesota Title Ins. & T. Co. 28 L. R. A. 753, which requires intent to deceive to sustain action for false representations inducing execution of contract.

Cited in notes (6 L. R. A. 149, 151) on right of action for deceit.

2 L. R. A. 745, CAVERLY v. ROBBINS, 149 Mass. 16, 20 N. E. 450.

2 L. R. A. 746, REPUBLIC IRON MIN. CO. v. JONES, 37 Fed. 721.

Suit by assignee in Federal court on ground of diverse citizenship.

Cited in footnote to Wonderly v. Lafayette County, 45 L. R. A. 386, which sustains suit in state court, to set aside Federal judgment obtained by fraudulent pretense of diverse citizenship.

Cited in note (12 L. R. A. 692) on suits by assignee of choses in action.

2 L. R. A. 749, FRADLEY v. HYLAND, 37 Fed. 49.

Principal's liability for agent's acts.

Cited in notes (2 L. R. A. 810) on liability of principal for acts of agent; (2 L. R. A. 811) as to when principle as to liability applied; (2 L. R. A. 824) on private restrictions on agent's authority as affecting third persons.

2 L. R. A. 751, BRADY v. NEW YORK, 112 N. Y. 480, 20 N. E. 390.

Effect of delivery of architect's certificate.

Cited in footnote to Arnold v. Bournique, 20 L. R. A. 493, which holds contractor entitled to payment on delivery of architect's certificate handed back without presentation to owner.

2 L. R. A. 753, MANNIX v. PURCELL, 46 Ohio St. 102, 19 N. E. 572.

Petition in error.

Cited in Wade v. Kimberley, 5 Ohio C. C. 35, holding filing of petition in error properly styled a proceeding.

Trusts.

Cited in Dillenbeck v. Pinnell, 121 Iowa, 203, 96 N. W. 860, holding no trust exists in favor of heir in proceeds of property sold by devisee for life.

Parol evidence to establish trust.

Cited in Vance v. Park, 15 Ohio C. C. 716, holding parol evidence admissible to establish trust as to deed absolute on its face.

Vagueness and uncertainty of trust.

Cited in O'Neal v. Caulfield, 5 Ohio N. P. 151, holding bequests to charity will be upheld if objects intended can be ascertained.

Gifts for religious and charitable purposes.

Cited in notes (32 L. R. A. 626) on validity of gift to unincorporated charity; (5 L. R. A. 107) on bill for construction of will and for directions to trustee.

Creditor's rights in assigned estates.

Cited in State Nat. Bank v. Esterly, 69 Ohio St. 36, 68 N. E. 582, holding creditor realizing on security after proving claim entitled to dividend only on unpaid balance.

Bona fide purchaser for value.

Cited in Adlard v. Stockstill, 5 Ohio N. P. 489, holding assignee not a bona fide purchaser for value.

Advances made by trustee.

Cited in Woodard v. Wright, 82 Cal. 206, 22 Pac. 1118, holding trustee's right to reimbursement not dependent upon knowledge or consent of cestui que trust.

2 L. R. A. 766, WESTERN U. TELEG. CO. v. BROWN, 71 Tex. 723, 10 S. W. 323.

Recovery for mental distress.

Cited in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Ferguson, 157 Ind. 75, 54 L. R. A. 850, 60 N. E. 674, holding recovery cannot be had for mental anguish due to delay in delivering message; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Wood, 21 L. R. A. 713, 6 C. C. A. 453, 13 U. S. App. 317, 57 Fed. 480, holding mental anguish no element in damages for delay in delivering message; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Wilson, 93 Ala. 35, 30 Am. St. Rep. 23, 9 So. 414, holding nominal damages and damages for distress of mind recoverable for delay in delivering message; Chapman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 88 Ga. 765, 17 L. R. A. 431, 30 Am. St. Rep. 183, 15 S. E. 901, holding sender of message cannot recover for mere pain and anguish of mind caused by nondelivery of message; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Rogers, 68 Miss. 759, 13 L. R. A. 863, 24 Am. St. Rep. 300, 9 So. 823, holding recovery cannot be had for mental suffering only due to lack of prompt delivery of message; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Ayers, 131 Ala. 394, 90 Am. St. Rep. 92, 31 So. 78, holding father of dying child cannot recover damages for mental anguish arising from nondelivery of telegram summoning brother-in-law.

Cited in footnotes to Western U. Teleg. Co. v. North Packing & Provision Co. 52 L. R. A. 274, which holds agent purchasing live stock through delay in delivering telegram not required to resell before communicating with principal, to reduce damages; Chapman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 17 L. R. A. 430, which denies recovery to person addressed for mental suffering from failure to deliver telegram; Wilcox v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 17 L. R. A. 804, which denies recovery for mental anguish from nonperformance of contract; Connell v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 20 L. R. A. 172, which denies recovery for mental distress for failure to deliver telegram; International Ocean Teleg. Co. v. Saunders, 21 L. R. A. 810, which holds mental suffering not element of damage for failure promptly to deliver telegram; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Wood, 21 L. R. A. 706, which denies recovery for mental anguish from delay in delivering telegram; McPeck v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 43 L. R. A. 214, which holds loss of reward offered for capture of criminal within damages recoverable for failure to deliver telegram; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Adams, 6 L. R. A. 844, which holds ignorance of relations between parties to message does not excuse neglect in delivering; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Short, 9 L. R. A. 744, which holds company prima facie liable for failure to deliver telegram.

Cited in notes (7 L. R. A. 583) on telegraph company; damages for neglect to deliver message; (13 L. R. A. 859, 860) on damages for mental anguish alone not recoverable; (9 L. R. A. 669) on telegraph company; degree of diligence required in delivery of message.

Breach of contract.

Cited in notes (6 L. R. A. 552; 11 L. R. A. 681) on damages for breach of contract; (18 L. R. A. 386) on measure of damages for breach of implied warranty.

Overruled in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Carter, 85 Tex. 585, 34 Am. St. Rep. 826, 22 S. W. 961, holding relationship of parties named in message not necessary to subject company to liability for failure promptly to deliver.

2 L. R. A. 768, RE CHAPIN, 148 Mass. 588, 20 N. E. 195.

Effect of testamentary trust on real estate.

Cited in Hart v. Allen, 166 Mass. 81, 44 N. E. 116, holding proceeds of sale of real estate subject to terms of testamentary trust.

2 L. R. A. 769, COOK v. WALLING, 117 Ind. 9, 10 Am. St. Rep. 17, 19 N. E. 532.

Married woman's contracts.

Cited in Voreis v. Nussbaum, 131 Ind. 273, 16 L. R. A. 48, 31 N. E. 70, holding note executed by married woman as surety for husband void in hands of bona fide purchaser; Johnson v. Jouchert, 124 Ind. 107, 8 L. R. A. 796, 24 N. E. 580, holding deed by married woman directly to husband void; Ellison v. Branstator, 153 Ind. 152, 54 N. E. 433, holding valid a deed of married woman executed through attorney, who omitted husband's name by mistake; Essex v. Meyers, 27 Ind. App. 639, 62 N. E. 96, holding specific performance of agreement to sell land by married woman in which her husband did not join not enforceable; Shirk v. Stafford, 31 Ind. App. 250, 67 N. E. 542, holding married woman's individual contract to sell land constitutes no consideration for purchase-money notes; Bundy v. McClarnon, 118 Ind. 166, 20 N. E. 718, stating married woman's deed in which husband not joined void.

Cited in footnote to Roop v. Real Estate Investment Co. 7 L. R. A. 211, which holds married woman not empowered to bind herself by judgment note.

Cited in notes (6 L. R. A. 559) on husband and wife; contracts between; (7 L. R. A. 640) on wife's capacity to contract; (8 L. R. A. 795) on mortgage to secure husband's debts.

Estoppel.

Cited in Percifield v. Black, 132 Ind. 386, 31 N. E. 955, holding married woman not estopped from setting up her incapacity to enter into parol contract to convey her land; Chaplin v. Baker, 124 Ind. 390, 24 N. E. 233, holding one not misled cannot plead estoppel; Long v. Crosson, 119 Ind. 5, 4 L. R. A. 784, 21 N. E. 450, holding married woman, with separate real estate transferred to husband to enable him to mortgage, she joining, estopped to deny title; Dudley v. Pigg, 149 Ind. 371, 48 N. E. 642, holding strangers to transaction cannot set it up as estoppel; McKinney v. Lanning, 139 Ind. 177, 38 N. E. 601, holding party claiming interest in land cannot set up estoppel by recitals in transfer to another to which he was not party or privy; Hickman v. Green, 123 Mo. 177, 29 L. R. A. 45, 27 S. W. 440, holding notice of defect in title to agent employed only to exchange land not binding on married woman; Warner v. Watson, 35 Fla. 421, 17 So. 654, holding married woman estopped, against husband's creditors, from setting up claim to property acquired with her money, but in husband's name.

Cited in footnotes to Hunt v. Reilly, 59 L. R. A. 206, which holds wife's failure to notify purchaser of rights after learning of forgery of her name to husband's deed does not estop her to claim dower; Wilder v. Wilder, 9 L. R. A.

97, which holds married woman estopped to claim vendor's lien by representing that one loaning to vendee should have first mortgage; National Granite Bank v. Tyndale, 51 L. R. A. 447, which holds relief by way of estoppel not available to holder of married woman's notes against defense that they are void because payable to husband, who indorsed them.

2 L. R. A. 770, PEOPLE ex rel. JOHNSON v. EICHELROTH, 78 Cal. 141, 20 Pac. 364.

Regulations as to practice of medicine.

Cited in footnotes to State v. Pennoyer, 5 L. R. A. 709, which holds void for discrimination act exempting old practitioners and nonresidents from requirements as to license; State v. Bair, 51 L. R. A. 776, which sustains statute requiring examination before state board of examiners, practice in the state for five years, or certificate from medical school, before practising medicine.

2 L. R. A. 772, PEOPLE ex rel. COMMONWEALTH INS. CO. v. COLEMAN, 112 N. Y. 565, 20 N. E. 389.

Taxation of corporations.

Cited in People ex rel. Second Ave. R. Co. v. Barker, 72 Hun, 131, 25 N. Y. Supp. 340, and People ex rel. Cornell S. B. Co. v. Dederick, 161 N. Y. 204, 55 N. E. 927, holding indebtedness of corporation should be deducted in assessment of personal property.

Cited in note (58 L. R. A. 613) on practice and procedure of assessors in taxation of capital stock of corporation in United States.

2 L. R. A. 773, TRACY v. REED, 13 Sawy. 622, 38 Fed. 69.

To whom property assessed.

Cited in Allen v. Portland, 35 Or. 442, 58 Pac. 509, holding assessment valid if petition for improvement signed by beneficial, though not record, owner; State Trust Co. v. Chehalis County, 24 C. C. A. 588, 48 U. S. App. 190, 79 Fed. 286, holding assessors can assess rails against the apparent owner; Leigh v. Green, 62 Neb. 353, 89 Am. St. Rep. 751, 86 N. W. 1093, holding word "owner" was used in popular sense in provision to foreclose tax liens.

Cited in footnote to Minneapolis & N. Elevator Co. v. Traill County, 50 L. R. A. 267, which sustains statute taxing grain in elevators, etc., in proprietor's name.

Who is an "owner."

Cited in Re Fifth Street, 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 218, holding vendee in land contract not an owner entitled to damages for change of grade in street before receiving deed.

Foreclosure of tax liens.

Cited in Wells v. Johnston, 55 App. Div. 487, 67 N. Y. Supp. 112, holding tax sale by treasurer under county act subject to prior vested rights of people.

What law determines validity of tax sale.

Cited in Sheafer v. Mitchell, 109 Tenn. 211, 71 S. W. 86, holding tax sale, valid by law then existing, cannot be affected by subsequent legislation.

2 L. R. A. 779, ATTRILL v. HUNTINGTON, 70 Md. 191, 14 Am. St. Rep. 344, 16 Atl. 651.

By what court corporation charter forfeited.

Cited in Com. ex rel. Kirkpatrick v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 1 Dauphin Co. Rep. 150, holding Federal courts have no jurisdiction of actions by state to forfeit corporation charter.

Enforcing statute of another state.

Cited in Jones v. Fidelity Loan & T. Co. 7 S. D. 132, 63 N. W. 553, holding penal laws of state not binding on residents of another state.

Cited in footnote to Midland Co. v. Broat, 17 L. R. A. 312, which holds contracts valid where made enforceable in other state.

Cited in notes (8 L. R. A. 269) on foreign judgments not subject to collateral impeachment; (4 L. R. A. 132) on constitutional law; effect and validity of foreign judgments.

Statute of limitations.

Cited in footnote to State Sav. Bank v. Johnson, 33 L. R. A. 552, which holds action to enforce liability of corporate trustees for failure to make reports one for penalty, within rule as to limitations.

Disapproved in Kilton v. Providence Tool Co. 22 R. I. 614, 48 Atl. 1039, holding action against stockholders to enforce debt of company barred only by twenty years' statute of limitations.

2 L. R. A. 784, BENTZ v. NORTHWESTERN AID ASSO. 40 Minn. 202, 41 N. W. 1037.

Claim against mutual accident company.

Cited in Union Mut. Acci. Asso. v. Frohard, 134 Ill. 239, 10 L. R. A. 386, 23 Am. St. Rep. 664, 25 N. E. 642, holding presumption is that claim would have been paid in full had assessment been made by mutual accident association.

Cited in notes (44 L. R. A. 855) on mutual benefit association; remedy for refusal to levy assessment to meet death claims; (8 L. R. A. 116) on contract of mutual benefit association; (2 L. R. A. 788) on actions on certificate of mutual benefit association.

Estoppel of insured or beneficiary.

Cited in Modern Woodmen v. Davis, 184 Ill. 238, 56 N. E. 300, holding beneficiary not estopped, by affidavit of physician filed by her, to show true cause of death; Hogan v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 164 Mass. 440, 41 N. E. 663, holding beneficiary in policy not estopped to show deceased did not have disease at time of application.

Cited in note (44 L. R. A. 855) on conclusiveness of proof of loss as against insured or his beneficiaries.

2 L. R. A. 786, JACKSON v. NORTHWESTERN MUT. RELIEF ASSO. 73 Wis. 507, 41 N. W. 708.

Legal action to compel benefit society to make assessment.

Cited in Silvers v. Michigan Mut. Ben. Asso. 94 Mich. 47, 53 N. W. 935; Covenant Mut. Life Asso. v. Kentner, 89 Ill. App. 498; O'Brien v. Home Benefit Soc.

117 N. Y. 319, 22 N. E. 954, — holding action at law maintainable upon refusal of benefit society to make assessment.

Cited in footnote to Bentz v. Northwestern Aid Asso. 2 L. R. A. 784, which holds action at law remedy for breach of contract to make death assessments.

Cited in notes (4 L. R. A. 382; 7 L. R. A. 189) as to remedy for refusal to levy assessment; (8 L. R. A. 115) as to damages for neglect to make assessment.

Sufficiency of complaint.

Cited in Johns v. Northwestern Mut. Relief Asso. 87 Wis. 113, 58 N. W. 76, holding complaint states facts entitling plaintiff to money judgment on contract for substantial damages.

2 L. R. A. 789, ASTOR v. NEW YORK ARCADE R. CO. 113 N. Y. 93, 20 N. E. 594.

Title of statute.

Followed without opinion in Bailey v. New York Arcade R. Co. 113 N. Y. 615.

Cited in Parker v. Elmira, C. & N. R. Co. 165 N. Y. 278, 59 N. E. 81, holding "to authorize railroad company to extend road, and confirm purchase, and for other purposes" covers provision for maximum rate chargeable per mile; Re Clinton Ave. 57 App. Div. 169, 68 N. Y. Supp. 196, holding "in relation to Clinton avenue" covers proper provisions relating to increase in width of street; Van Brunt v. Flatbush, 128 N. Y. 54, 27 N. E. 973, holding "local improvements in town of Flatbush" sufficient to cover provision for necessary construction of outlet trunk sewer through town of Flatlands; Sweet v. Syracuse, 129 N. Y. 332, 27 N. E. 1081, holding "establish and maintain water department in and for Syracuse" to embrace establishment and detailed organization of water department; People v. Duxtater, 75 Hun, 479, 27 N. Y. Supp. 481, holding "to prevent taking fish from waters of Lake Ontario adjacent to shore or inland waters of county" covers private lake in county; Curtin v. Barton, 139 N. Y. 513, 34 N. E. 1093, holding "establish municipal court" embraces abolition of justice of peace and justice's court; Sweet v. Syracuse, 60 Hun, 33, 14 N. Y. Supp. 421, holding "establish and maintain water department" covers provisions for supplying city with water; New York v. Gorman, 26 App. Div. 193, 49 N. Y. Supp. 1026, holding "in relation of office of sheriff" covers new system of management and administration of office; Wilcox v. Baker, 22 App. Div. 303, 47 N. Y. Supp. 900, holding "to facilitate construction of railroad and to authorize towns to subscribe to capital stock thereof" covers amendment providing for continued assessment of property subject to tax at time of original act; People ex rel. Dee v. Backus, 11 App. Div. 149, 42 N. Y. Supp. 899, holding "in relation to office of district attorney, providing for election of district attorney," etc., covers express repeal of act creating office of county detective; Dyker Meadow Land & Improv. Co. v. Cook, 3 App. Div. 168, 38 N. Y. Supp. 222, holding "amendment of title and act relating to assessment of real property in Brooklyn" covers exemption of any land in county of Kings; State ex rel. Standish v. Nomland, 3 N. D. 432, 44 Am. St. Rep. 572, 57 N. W. 85, holding "creating office of state board of auditors and prescribing duties thereof" not indicative of provision for security and augmentation of state funds; Fort v. Cummings, 90 Hun, 485, 36 N. Y. Supp. 36, holding legislature authorized to pass any act germane to subject intrusted to its supervision by Constitution; Re Buffalo, 46 N. Y. S. R. 85, 18 N. Y. Supp. 771, holding "select and locate grounds desirable for park" not indicative of provision changing method of procedure in exercise of right of eminent domain under charter; Coxe v. State, 144 N. Y. 409, 39 N. E. 400, holding "drain marsh lands" not indicative of grant of lands under water; Rogers v. Union R. Co. 10 Misc. 59, 30 N. Y. Supp. 855, holding "to amend act," etc., "as subsequently amended" not indicative of ratification of all proceedings under the act; Lindsay v. United States Sav. & L. Asso. 120 Ala. 173, 42 L. R. A. 788, 24 So. 171, holding "to regulate business of building and loan association" not indicative of legalization of past transactions of associations; Coiscadden v. Haswell, 41 Misc. 62, 82 N. Y. Supp. 347, holding provision for removal of superintendent of penitentiary not within title purporting to relate to his salary only.

Cited in footnotes to Judson v. Bessemer, 4 L. R. A. 742, which holds provision authorizing issue of municipal bonds within title; Thomas v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 7 L. R. A. 145, which holds provision limiting rights in water to railroad companies owning landings not within title; Millvale v. Evergreen R. Co. 7 L. R. A. 369, holding title referring merely to title of prior act sufficient where subject-matter merely supplemental; Hronek v. People, 8 L. R. A. 837, holding statute regulating manufacture, as well as prohibiting same for certain purpose, not invalid.

Grant of new rights under guise of amendment.

Cited in Auchincloss v. Metropolitan Elev. R. Co. 69 App. Div. 69, 74 N. Y. Supp. 534, holding act conferring upon railroad company right to lay tracks in addition to those authorized by charter acquired by it from previous company unconstitutional.

Distinguished in Re Third Ave. R. Co. 121 N. Y. 541, 9 L. R. A. 126, 24 N. E. 951, holding statute authorizing change of motor power not in conflict with constitutional provision that consent of local authorities be obtained for "construction" of railway.

2 L. R. A. 795, LIBBEY v. MASON, 112 N. Y. 525, 20 N. E. 355.

Special proceeding — Final order.

Cited in Tilden v. Aitkin, 37 App. Div. 30, 55 N. Y. Supp. 735, to point, proceeding to compel accounting by administrator is a special proceeding; Re Board of Education, 34 N. Y. S. R. 493, 11 N. Y. Supp. 780, holding proceeding to acquire lands for school purposes a special proceeding, terminating in final order.

Necessity of entry of judgment.

Cited in note (28 L. R. A. 629) as to what entry necessary to complete judgment.

Right to letters of administration.

Cited in Re Moulton, 32 N. Y. S. R. 637, 10 N. Y. Supp. 717, holding widow has prior statutory right to letters of administration.

2 L. R. A. 796, TILGE v. BROOKS, 124 Pa. 178, 16 Atl. 746.

Nature of partnership association.

Cited in footnote to Edwards v. Warren Linoline & Gasline Works, 38 L. R. A. 791, which holds partnership association organized under laws of Pennsylvania regarded as partnership, instead of corporation, in Massachusetts.

2 L. R. A. 798, COM. v. DELAWARE DIVISION CANAL CO. 123 Pa. 594, 16 Atl. 584.

Followed without discussion in Com. v. J. Langdon & Co. 1 Dauphin Co. Rep. 125; Com. v. Chester, 123 Pa. 640, 16 Atl. 591; Com. v. Hillside Coal & I. Co. 1 Pa. Dist. R. 742.

Collection of tax by corporation.

Cited in Com. v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. 150 Pa. 249, 24 Atl. 599; and Com. v. Union Traction Co. 192 Pa. 514, 43 Atl. 1010, holding corporation responsible for collection of tax; Com. v. Wilkes-Barre & S. R. Co. 14 Pa. Co. Ct. 210, and Com. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 129 Pa. 457, 18 Atl. 406, holding corporation responsible for failure of its treasurer to collect and pay over to state the tax on loans; Com. v. Union Traction Co. 1 Dauphin Co. Rep. 177, to point that act June 30, 1885, makes corporations responsible for collection of tax by deducting it from interest paid by its treasurer upon evidences of indebtedness issued by corporation; Com. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 186 Pa. 246, 40 Atl. 491, holding corporation chargeable as collector, and upon failure to collect; Com. v. Pennsylvania Salt Mfg. Co. 145 Pa. 55, 22 Atl. 215, to point that corporate treasurer may be required by statute to assess tax; Wilkes-Barre Deposit & Sav. Bank v. Wilkes-Barre, 148 Pa. 603, 24 Atl. 111, holding corporate treasurers required by statute to assess and collect tax; Com. v. Philadelphia & R. Coal & I. Co. 137 Pa. 491, 20 Atl. 531, Affirming 2 Dauphin Co. Rep. 405, holding it duty of treasurer of corporation in hands of receiver to assess tax, and of receiver to pay it; Com. v. Philadelphia, 33 W. N. C. 107, holding municipal corporation liable for the failure of its treasurer to collect and pay tax on loans; Com. v. Wilkes-Barre & S. R. Co. 162 Pa. 619, 29 Atl. 696, to point that same tax assessed by corporation should be retained and paid to state; Com. v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 150 Pa. 239, 24 Atl. 609, holding statute requiring deduction of state tax by corporate officers on payment of interest on bonds constitutional; Com. v. Jarecki Mfg. Co. 204 Pa. 40, 53 Atl. 517, holding act exempting companies holding bonds as part of capital stock from tax thereon relieves debtor company from duty to deduct tax from interest; Coal Ridge Improv. & Coal Co. v. Jennings, 127 Pa. 399, 17 Atl. 986, holding act 1885, requiring corporation to collect tax on its securities, does not violate uniformity rule.

Classification of subjects of taxation.

Cited in Com. v. Westinghouse Electric Mfg. Co. 151 Pa. 272, 24 Atl. 1107; Williamsport v. Wenner, 172 Pa. 182, 33 Atl. 544; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. State, 146 Ind. 61, 44 N. E. 793,—holding legislature has power to classify subjects for taxation; Com. use of Titusville v. Clark, 195 Pa. 639, 57 L. R. A. 350, 86 Am. St. Rep. 694, 46 Atl. 286, holding that classification for taxation should avoid gross inequality.

— Classification of corporations.

Cited in Com. v. Germania Brewing Co. 145 Pa. 87, 22 Atl. 240, Affirming 4 Dauphin Co. Rep. 56, holding exception of classes of corporations from taxation does not violate uniformity; Com. v. Sharon Coal Co. 164 Pa. 304, 30 Atl. 127, holding that legislature cannot discriminate between corporations in same class.

Cited in note (60 L. R. A. 340, 341, 345, 348, 353) on classification of corporations for purpose of taxation.

— Dealers or peddlers.

Cited in Knisely v. Cotterel, 196 Pa. 619, 50 L. R. A. 90, 46 Atl. 81, Affirming 3 Dauphin Co. Rep. 123, holding vendors or dealers in merchandise may, for purposes of taxation be classified as wholesalers and retailers; Com. use of Titusville v. Clark, 195 Pa. 638, 57 L. R. A. 350, 86 Am. St. Rep. 694, 46 Atl. 286, Affirming 21 Pa. Co. Ct. 500, 10 Pa. Super. Ct. 511, upholding classification for taxation of wholesale and retail dealers in accordance with amount of business transacted; New Castle v. Cutler, 15 Pa. Super. Ct. 624, holding classification of peddlers for taxation according to amount of goods carried, with additional tax upon horse and wagon, except gardeners, does not violate constitutional requirement of uniformity.

— Lodging houses.

Cited in Com. v. Muir, 1 Pa. Super. Ct. 581, 38 W. N. C. 331, upholding right to classify lodging houses for purpose of taxation.

— Tax on capital stock.

Cited in Com. v. Brush Electric Light Co. 145 Pa. 154, 22 Atl. 844, holding act 1879, § 4, as to method of rating corporate stock for taxation, does not violate uniformity; Com. v. National Oil Co. 167 Pa. 523, 27 Atl. 374, holding statute making capital stock distinct class of investments for taxation does not violate uniformity; Com. v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. 1 Dauphin Co. Rep. 274, holding tax on capital stock imposed by acts 1877, 1879, not objectionable for want of uniformity; Com. v. Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank, 168 Pa. 314, 31 Atl. 1065, holding provision exempting from local taxation banks paying specified state tax on par value of their shares, but imposing on those which do not tax upon actual value of shares, not unconstitutional for want of uniformity.

Corporate liability to taxation.

Followed in Com. v. Philadelphia & R. Coal & I. Co. 137 Pa. 491, 20 Atl. 531, as to liability of corporation to taxation.

Cited in Com. v. William Cramp & Sons, Ship & Engine Bldg. Co. 2 Dauphin Co. Rep. 399, holding indebtedness due to and held by Pennsylvania corporations in their own right not taxable; Com. v. Thirteenth & F. Streets Pass. R. Co. 2 Dauphin Co. Rep. 393, holding corporation liable to tax upon whole amount of indebtedness upon treasurer's failure to show any part due to non-residents.

Cited in footnotes to Re Whiting, 34 L. R. A. 232, which holds bonds of foreign corporation within state, though owned by nonresident, subject to transfer tax; Vermont & C. R. Co. v. Vermont C. R. Co. 10 L. R. A. 562, which holds railroad lessor liable for gross earnings tax; State, Singer Mfg. Co., Prosecutor, v. Heppenheimer, 32 L. R. A. 643, which holds company exempt from taxation under exemption of its shares.

Cited in note (57 L. R. A. 87) on conditions upon privilege of exercising corporate franchises.

Pennsylvania revenue system.

Cited in Perry County v. Troutman, 8 Pa. Co. Ct. 428, Affirmed in 144 Pa. 362, 22 Atl. 705, to point that act of 1844 is beginning of present Pennsylvania revenue system.

When tax payable.

Cited in Com. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 129 Pa. 447, 18 Atl. 406, holding statute requiring annual payment of state tax refers to calendar year if no date set for its commencement.

Taxation of judgments.

Cited in footnote to Hamilton v. Wilson, 48 L. R. A. 238, which holds void statute for taxation of personal judgments with specified exceptions.

2 L. R. A. 805, UNITED STATES v. HUTCHESON, 39 Fed. 540.

Adjustment of postmaster's accounts.

Cited in United States v. Miller, 8 Utah, 34, 28 Pac. 957, holding postmaster's compensation cannot be withheld after his accounts have been adjusted; United States v. Case, 49 Fed. 271, holding Postmaster General cannot charge postmaster with commission on false returns when accounts have been allowed; Norton v. United States, 26 C. C. A. 639, 52 U. S. App. 296, 81 Fed. 821, holding postmaster can defend suit on bond by showing that money never came to his hand, without having same disallowed by auditor.

2 L. R. A. 808, WHEELER v. MCGUIRE, 86 Ala. 398, 5 So. 190.

Liability of principal.

Cited in Sweetser v. Shorter, 123 Ala. 522, 26 So. 298, holding principal bound by agreement of general agent to construct houses; Kansas City, M. & B. R. Co. v. Higdon, 94 Ala. 290, 14 L. R. A. 518, 33 Am. St. Rep. 119, 10 So. 282, holding railroad responsible for loss of dog accepted by baggage master for conveyance; Drennan v. Boice, 19 Misc. 643, 44 N. Y. Supp. 394, holding action against agent after disclosure of principal barred action against principal; Fowle v. Outcalt, 64 Kan. 358, 67 Pac. 889, holding owner of note who allowed another to collect moneys on it bound by payments; Continental F. Ins. Co. v. Brooks, 131 Ala. 620, 30 So. 876, holding waiver by general agent of insurance company, with power, binding, where party ignorant of termination of agency.

Cited in footnote to Slater v. Capital Ins. Co. 23 L. R. A. 181, which holds binding on company waiver of proofs of loss as to building, by adjuster sent to adjust loss on contents.

Cited in notes (8 L. R. A. 74) on what constitutes waiver of conditions in fire insurance; (2 L. R. A. 749) on principal not liable when credit given exclusively to agent.

Constructive notice to principal.

Cited in Goodbar v. Daniel, 88 Ala. 590, 16 Am. St. Rep. 76, 7 So. 254, holding knowledge of husband of fraudulent deed, while agent of wife, constructively imputed to her.

Agent's authority.

Cited in Montgomery Furniture Co. v. Hardaway, 104 Ala. 115, 16 So. 29, holding general agent's authority prima facie coextensive with employment; Aldrich v. Wilmarth, 3 S. D. 528, 54 N. W. 811, holding agent had ostensible authority to order work, and contractor justified in believing him authorized; Insurance Co. of N. A. v. Thornton, 130 Ala. 237, 55 L. R. A. 551, 89

Am. St. Rep. 39, 30 So. 614 (dissenting opinion), majority holding that general agent for prescribed area cannot bind company outside of it.

Cited in footnote to Fay v. Slaughter, 56 L. R. A. 564, which denies authority of agent, empowered to indorse principal's checks for deposit, to ratify deposit of checks received for securities on which agent has forged transfers.

Cited in note (2 L. R. A. 824) on private restrictions on agent's authority not to affect third persons.

Distinguished in Witcher v. Gibson, 15 Colo. App. 170, 61 Pac. 192, holding power inferred from what principal knowingly permitted agent to do.

Ratification of agent's acts.

Cited in Sullivan v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 128 Ala. 104, 30 So. 528, holding unauthorized acts of agent not shown to have been ratified.

Cited in footnotes to Daniels v. Brodie, 11 L. R. A. 81, which holds agent's acceptance of goods ratified by keeping part of same; Thompson v. New South Coal Co. 62 L. R. A. 551, holding principal's acceptance of portion of purchase money no ratification of agent's unauthorized sale.

Cited in note (7 L. R. A. 405) on principal and agent; effect of ratification of acts of agent.

Admissibility of evidence.

Cited in Cawthon v. Lusk, 97 Ala. 676, 11 So. 731, holding usages of trade admissible to interpret powers under written instrument of agency; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Cunningham, 99 Ala. 317, 14 So. 579, holding private instructions by telegraph company to agent, forbidding him to waive payment for message till following day, inadmissible; Lytle v. Bank of Dothan, 121 Ala. 218, 26 So. 6, holding the giving of other notes competent to show agent's implied power to give notes in suit; A. G. Rhodes Furniture Co. v. Weeden, 108 Ala. 257, 19 So. 318, holding secret instructions to general manager to rent by month only inadmissible.

Agent's liability.

Cited in note (12 L. R. A. 346) on responsibility of agent on his contracts.

2 L. R. A. 813, BIELLENBERG v. MONTANA UNION R. CO. 8 Mont. 271, 20 Pac. 314.

Followed without discussion in Thompson v. Northern P. R. Co. 8 Mont. 283, 21 Pac. 25.

Validity of statutes making railroad company absolutely liable for injury.

Cited in Cateril v. Union P. R. Co. 2 Idaho, 543, 21 Pac. 416, Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Outcalf, 2 Colo. App. 405, 31 Pac. 177; Jensen v. Union P. R. Co. 6 Utah, 258, 4 L. R. A. 726, 21 Pac. 994,—holding act making railroad company liable for killing animals on track invalid; Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Smalley, 1 Wash. 211, 22 Am. St. Rep. 143, 23 Pac. 1008, holding act making railroad companies liable for killing animals on track, unless fence maintained, invalid; McCauley v. Montana C. R. Co. 11 Mont. 485, 28 Pac. 730, holding railroad company which took cow injured by its train, killed, and sold it, prima facie liable.

Cited in footnote to Wadsworth v. Union P. R. Co. 23 L. R. A. 812, which holds unconstitutional act creating absolute liability for stock killed or injured by trains.

Cited in notes (5 L. R. A. 359) on due process of law; (25 L. R. A. 162) on constitutionality of statutes making railroad companies absolutely liable for damage by fires set by them, or stock killed by them, irrespective of negligence.

Distinguished in Sullivan v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 19 Or. 327, 24 Pac. 408, holding act making railroad company liable for killing animals on unfenced track valid; Central R. Co. v. Murphey, 116 Ga. 869, 60 L. R. A. 820, 43 S. E. 265, sustaining statute making initial carriers liable for lost or damaged freight on which they fail to report within thirty days after application.

Negligence.

Cited in Hopkins v. Butte & M. Commercial Co. 13 Mont. 225, 40 Am. St. Rep. 438, 33 Pac. 818, holding negligence must be shown in actions for submerging land by log jam.

2 L. R. A. 816, McCLINTOCK v. LOISSEAU, 31 W. Va. 865, 8 S. E. 612.

When trust shown.

Cited in Deck v. Tabler, 41 W. Va. 335, 56 Am. St. Rep. 837, 23 S. E. 721, holding no resulting trust in favor of husband by conveyance to wife of land purchased with his money.

Cited in note (12 L. R. A. 566) on doctrine of advancements to heirs.

Evidence to show resulting trust.

Cited in Lahey v. Broderick, 72 N. H. 182, 55 Atl. 354, holding presumption of gift arising from deed to wife of land paid for by husband rebuttable by parol evidence.

Fraudulent conveyance.

Cited in Edgell v. Smith, 50 W. Va. 355, 40 S. E. 402, holding deed to hinder creditors void; Urpman v. Lowther Oil Co. 53 W. Va. 512, 97 Am. St. Rep. 1027, 44 S. E. 433, holding equity will not decree specific performance of agreement made to defraud creditors.

Cited in note (6 L. R. A. 458) on no relief in law or equity in case of fraudulent contracts.

Distinguished in Goldsmith v. Goldsmith, 46 W. Va. 431, 33 S. E. 266, holding there must be liability chargeable on the land to prevent cancelation of a deed alleged to have been given in fraud of creditors for grantee's failure to keep agreement.

Contracts against public policy.

Cited in footnotes to Leonard v. Poole, 4 L. R. A. 728, which holds one engaging in plot to raise price of lard cannot be aided by court as against co-plotter; Wassermann v. Sloss, 38 L. R. A. 176, which holds illegality of transfer of stock to president for corrupting government officials does not prevent recovery where taken by president for own use instead.

Cited in note (6 L. R. A. 615) on contracts against public policy void.

2 L. R. A. 820, PENNSYLVANIA R. CO. v. MacKINNEY, 124 Pa. 462, 10 Am. St. Rep. 601, 17 Atl. 14.

Carrier's liability to passenger injured by missile.

Cited in Fewings v. Mendenhall, 88 Minn. 342, 60 L. R. A. 604, 97 Am. St.

Rep. 519, 93 N. W. 127, denying street railroad's liability to passenger injured by missile thrown into car by strike sympathizer.

Presumption of negligence.

Cited in Thomas v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 148 Pa. 182, 15 L. R. A. 417, 30 W. N. C. 10, 23 Atl. 989, holding no presumption of negligence where passenger is injured by missile in unexplainable manner; Keller v. Hestonville, M. & F. Pass. R. Co. 149 Pa. 68, 30 W. N. C. 417, 24 Atl. 159, Affirming 1 Pa. Dist. R. 198, holding mere fact that passenger was injured not presumption of negligence, so as to shift burden of proof; Herstine v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 151 Pa. 253, 31 W. N. C. 52, 25 Atl. 104, holding burden of proving negligence is on passenger injured in car by jolt caused by coupling; Fredericks v. Northern C. R. Co. 157 Pa. 124, 22 L. R. A. 312, 27 Atl. 689, holding carrier not liable for wrongful acts of strangers, not reasonably preventable; Bernhardt v. West Pennsylvania R. Co. 159 Pa. 364, 28 Atl. 140 holding negligence not presumed in injury to passenger by stepping on small piece of wood on station platform; Benedick v. Potts, 88 Md. 56, 41 L. R. A. 480, 40 Atl. 1067, holding mere fact that passenger fell from car on switchback railway not sufficient evidence of negligence; Whalen v. Consolidated Traction Co. 61 N. J. L. 610, 41 L. R. A. 837, 68 Am. St. Rep. 723, 40 Atl. 645, holding nonsuit improper where passenger was knocked off car and injured by conductor stumbling against him; Nelson v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 25 App. Div. 545, 50 N. Y. Supp. 63, holding presumption of negligence not raised by tipping of passenger out of chair in rounding curve, others keeping their seats; Western Maryland R. Co. v. State, 95 Md. 652, 53 Atl. 969, holding instruction that fact that person was killed while a passenger is prima facie evidence of carrier's negligence, erroneous; Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Fotheringham, 17 Colo. App. 416, 68 Pac. 978, holding fact that passenger was injured by swinging shut of car door not prima facie evidence of carrier's negligence.

Cited in note (15 L. R. A. 38) on presumption of negligence from occurrence of accidents.

Distinguished in Long v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 147 Pa. 347, 14 L. R. A. 743, 29 W. N. C. 377, 30 Am. St. Rep. 732, 23 Atl. 459, holding no presumption of negligence where baggage is lost through unprecedented flood; Buehler v. Union Traction Co. 200 Pa. 179, 49 Atl. 788, holding company liable for injury to passenger from falling wall, through employee's disregard of timely warning.

2 L. R. A. 823, HUBBARD v. TENBROOK, 124 Pa. 291, 10 Am. St. Rep. 585, 16 Atl. 817.

Liability of principal for acts of agent.

Cited in Wachter v. Phoenix Assur. Co. 132 Pa. 439, 19 Am. St. Rep. 600, 19 Atl. 289, holding principal bound by acts or conduct of agent within scope of apparent authority, to one without notice; Romeo v. Martucci, 72 Conn. 516, 47 L. R. A. 607, 77 Am. St. Rep. 327, 45 Atl. 199 (dissenting opinion), majority holding consignor of goods may assert title against bona fide purchaser under fraudulent sale; Lamb v. Thompson, 31 Neb. 453, 48 N. W. 58, and Steele Smith Grocery Co. v. Potthast, 109 Iowa, 417, 80 N. W. 517, holding undisclosed principal liable for goods sold agent in latter's name.

Cited in footnote to Slater v. Capital Ins. Co. 23 L. R. A. 181, which holds binding on company waiver of proofs of loss as to building by adjuster sent to adjust loss on contents.

Cited in notes (2 L. R. A. 810, 811) on general and special agents, as to liability of principal for acts of agent; (2 L. R. A. 749) on nonliability of principal when credit is given exclusively to agent; (10 L. R. A. 355) on principal bound by acts of agent; (12 L. R. A. 346) on responsibility of agent on his contracts.

Distinguished in Brown v. German-American Title & T. Co. 174 Pa. 448, 34 Atl. 335, holding assignment of building contract to surety does not constitute such assignee undisclosed principal.

2 L. R. A. 825, Re HOWE, 112 N. Y. 100, 19 N. E. 513.

Succession and inheritance taxes.

Cited in Re Sherwell, 11 N. Y. Supp. 897, holding under inheritance tax law of 1887, taxable legacies exempt to extent of $500; Taylor's Estate, 6 Misc. 280, 27 N. Y. Supp. 232; Re Hall, 88 Hun, 70, 34 N. Y. Supp. 616; Re Corbett, 171 N. Y. 518, 64 N. E. 209; Re Hoffman, 143 N. Y. 330, 38 N. E. 311, Modifying 76 Hun, 403, 27 N. Y. Supp. 1086,—holding transfer tax of 1892 is imposed upon aggregate of property descending from decedent; Re Clark, 1 Connoly, 433, 5 N. Y. Supp. 199, holding tax on contingent remainder under act of 1885 remains suspended until estate takes effect; State v. Alston, 94 Tenn. 681, 28 L. R. A. 180, 30 S. W. 750, holding inheritance tax one on the privilege of receiving by inheritance or will; Black v. State, 113 Wis. 212, 90 Am. St. Rep. 853, 89 N. W. 522, holding unconstitutional inheritance tax law exempting legacies of less than $10,000.

Cited in footnotes to People v. Sherwood, 3 L. R. A. 464, which holds non-resident not subject to succession tax; Re Stewart, 14 L. R. A. 836, which authorizes succession on contingent interests under power of appointment after vesting of same; Re Swift, 18 L. R. A. 709, as to what is subject to succession tax.

Cited in notes (3 L. R. A. 372) on collateral inheritance tax; (4 L. R. A. 171) on exemption from general taxation, as to succession or inheritance tax not being tax on property; (10 L. R. A. 241) on collateral inheritance tax under laws of Pennsylvania.

Distinguished in Dixon v. Ricketts, 26 Utah, 222, 72 Pac. 947, holding collateral inheritance tax imposable on estate exceeding, though each legacy is less than, amount exempt; Stellwagen v. Wayne Probate Judge, 130 Mich. 169, 89 N. W. 728, holding exemption from inheritance tax applies to entire estate, and not to each share.

Disapproved in Howell's Estate, 147 Pa. 168, 23 Atl. 403, Affirming 48 Phila. Leg. Int. 296, 10 Pa. Co. Ct. 238, 28 W. N. C. 275, holding collateral inheritance tax of 1887 to be ascertained by aggregate of decedent's taxable estate; McGhee v. State, 105 Iowa, 14, 74 N. W. 695, holding collateral inheritance tax on estates in excess of $1,000 applies to aggregate of decedent's taxable estate.

Time statutes take effect.

Cited in Lane v. Kolb, 92 Ala. 661, 9 So. 873 (dissenting opinion), majority holding statute changing appointive to elective office, providing dates of election, did not take effect until date of first election named.

Distinguished in People ex rel. Onondaga County Sav. Bank v. Butler, 147 L. R. A. Av.—VOL. I.—19.

N. Y. 176, 41 N. E. 416, holding salary act taking effect on certain date applied to official taking office on that date.

Statutory construction.

Cited in People v. England, 91 Hun, 156, 36 N. Y. Supp. 534, holding intent of legislature governs in determining effect on previous offense of statute changing punishment for crime.

Constitutionality of succession or transfer tax statutes.

Cited in State v. Alston, 94 Tenn. 681, 28 L. R. A. 180, 30 S. W. 750, holding inheritance tax constitutional.

Cited in footnotes to State v. Hamlin, 25 L. R. A. 632, which holds succession tax valid; State ex rel. Schwartz v. Ferris, 30 L. R. A. 218, which holds void, for lack of uniformity, act exempting estates less than $20,000 in value; Ferry v. Campbell, 50 L. R. A. 92, which holds succession tax void for want of notice of proceedings to fix amount of tax; Billings v. People, 59 L. R. A. 807, which sustains transfer tax on lineal descendants to whom life estate given with remainder to lineal descendants, but exempting lineal descendants taking fee.

Cited in note (12 L. R. A. 402, 407) on right of legislature to impose succession and collateral inheritance taxes.

2 L. R. A. 828, JOHNSTON v. WALLIS, 112 N. Y. 230, 8 Am. St. Rep. 742, 19 N. E. 653.

Suits by or against foreign executors, etc.

Cited in Flandrow v. Hammond, 13 App. Div. 326, 43 N. Y. Supp. 143, holding suit cannot be continued against foreign executrix appointed pending suit to recover money paid deceased without consideration; Le Fevre v. Matthews, 39 App. Div. 234, 57 N. Y. Supp. 128, holding foreign receiver subject to action by resident on agreement with former in official capacity within state; Lee v. Terbell, 40 Fed. 44, holding special commissioners appointed by foreign court to sell realty may maintain action on purchase-money bonds taken in official capacity, without obtaining ancillary letters; Hopper v. Hopper, 125 N. Y. 403, 12 L. R. A. 238, 26 N. E. 457, holding foreign executor subjects himself to suit as domestic executor by taking out local ancillary letters of administration; Hentz v. Phillips, 23 Abb. N. C. 22, 6 N. Y. Supp. 16, holding foreign administratrix not proper party to proceeding by creditors of decedent to reach fund derived from sale of realty in jurisdiction; Jefferson v. Beall, 117 Ala. 439, 67 Am. St. Rep. 177, 23 So. 44, holding judgment in foreign jurisdiction against local administrator in representative capacity void and unenforceable in local courts.

Cited in notes (9 L. R. A. 218) on ancillary administration of estates; (9 L. R. A. 245, 246) on power and authority of foreign executors and administrators; (27 L. R. A. 102) on general rule as to foreign judgments against executor or administrator.

Agreements in behalf of estate.

Cited in Eames v. Bagg, 8 App. Div. 545, 40 N. Y. Supp. 858, holding stipulation by assignee for creditors, in action on promissory note, binding upon estate; Sanford v. Story, 15 Misc. 542, 38 N. Y. Supp. 104, holding executor's agreement to release debt may be specifically enforced.

2 L. R. A. 829, DIEFFENBACH v. ROCH, 112 N. Y. 621, 20 N. E. 560.

Limitation of justices' judgment.

Cited in Herrman v. Stalp, 15 Daly, 293, 6 N. Y. Supp. 514, holding execution, as well as action on docketed judgment, barred; Warner v. Bartle, 22 Misc. 490, 50 N. Y. Supp. 940, holding bar of Code Civ. Proc. § 382, applies to "special proceedings," as well as to "action" to enforce judgment; Re Warner, 39 App. Div. 93, 56 N. Y. Supp. 585, holding special proceeding to enforce docketed judgment of justice of peace barred by six years' limitation to "action" thereon; Re Depuy, 28 N. Y. S. R. 42, 8 N. Y. Supp. 229, holding proceeding in surrogate's court to enforce judgment barred as an "action," within meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 382; Re Guttroff, 39 Misc. 484, 80 N. Y. Supp. 219, holding judgment of city district court, docketed in county clerk's office, barred in six years; Pierce v. Davidson, 58 Mo. App. 111, holding that filing of justice's judgment in office of court of record does not increase period of limitation; Gray v. Seeber, 53 Hun, 613, 6 N. Y. Supp. 802, holding Code Civ. Proc. § 376, which declares presumption of payment of judgment from lapse of twenty years to be statute of limitations; Agar v. Tibbets, 56 Hun, 276, 9 N. Y. Supp. 591, holding plaintiffs, discontinuing in consequence of unexpected decision, bound to pay costs to date of application.

Cited in note (8 L. R. A. 481) on application of statute of limitations to equitable actions.

Cited as nullified in Andrews v. Mastin, 22 Misc. 265, 49 N. Y. Supp. 1118, holding duration of lien runs, by virtue of chap. 342, Laws 1892, from date of filing transcript.

Distinguished in Raphael v. Mencke, 28 App. Div. 92, 50 N. Y. Supp. 920; Agar v. Curtiss, 8 App. Div. 339, 40 N. Y. Supp. 815; Bolt v. Hauser, 57 Hun, 568, 11 N. Y. Supp. 366; Becker v. Porter, 17 App. Div. 184; Brown v. Hyman, 27 N. Y. Supp. 437; Townsend v. Tolhurst, 57 Hun, 42, 10 N. Y. Supp. 378; Anderson v. Porter, 7 Misc. 220, 27 N. Y. Supp. 646,—holding execution may issue on municipal or district court judgment docketed in clerk's office, though action thereon barred; Bolt v. Hauser, 10 N. Y. Supp. 398, holding supplementary proceedings available to enforce judgment after expiration of six years within which action thereon allowed.

Effect of docketing judgment in clerk's office.

Cited in Re Phelps, 6 Misc. 402, 1 Power, 545, 56 N. Y. S. R. 629, 26 N. Y. Supp. 774, holding only effect of docketing justice's judgment in county clerk's office to enlarge scope of enforcement; Daniels v. Southard, 23 Misc. 238, 51 N. Y. Supp. 1136, holding sphere of enforcement of justice's judgment enlarged by docketing with clerk, to include all processes available in case of county-court judgment; Andrews v. Mastin, 22 Misc. 265, 49 N. Y. Supp. 1118, holding no additional force as lien on realty given to docketed transcript by chap. 342, Laws 1892, extending period of duration; Baldinger v. Turkowsky, 36 Misc. 822, 74 N. Y. Supp. 897, holding docketing of district court judgment in clerk's office does not render necessary leave to sue thereon in municipal court; Harris v. Clark, 65 Hun, 363, 20 N. Y. Supp. 232, holding prohibition of Code Civ. Proc. § 1913, against action on judgment rendered in court of record, not applicable to judgment of justice, though docketed in clerk's office; Johnson v. Manning, 75 App. Div. 286, 78 N. Y. Supp. 96, holding while supreme court has not power to vacate municipal-court judgment docketed with county clerk, it may set aside proceedings to enforce same; Erb v. Hendricks Co. 50 W. Va. 32, 40 S. E. 338, raising, without deciding, question whether justice of peace may issue execution on judgment certified to clerk of circuit court.

Distinguished in Sill Stove Works v. Scott, 62 App. Div. 571, 71 N. Y. Supp. 181, holding jurisdiction of justice prima facie established by proof of filing transcript of judgment in county clerk's office.

2 L. R. A. 832, HUNTER v. COOPERS'TOWN & S. VALLEY R. CO. 112 N. Y. 371, 8 Am. St. Rep. 752, 19 N. E. 820.

Subsequent appeal in 126 N. Y. 24, 12 L. R. A. 430, 26 N. E. 958.

Contributory negligence.

Cited in Myers v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 82 Hun, 38, 31 N. Y. Supp. 153, holding party attempting to board moving train after it has left station guilty of contributory negligence; Walthers v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 72 Ill. App. 363, holding it negligence per se for party to attempt to board moving train at point beyond platform; Scully v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 80 Hun, 199, 30 N. Y. Supp. 61, holding passenger alighting in disregard of conductor's warning, from train moving 6 to 10 miles an hour after passing station, guilty of contributory negligence; Lewis v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. 80 Hun, 195, 30 N. Y. Supp. 28, holding it negligence per se for passenger to alight from moving train on wrong side, though at conductor's suggestion; Worthington v. Central Vermont R. Co. 64 Vt. 114, 15 L. R. A. 328, 23 Atl. 590, holding negligence per se to stand on platform of rapidly moving train on rough road, though interior of car crowded; Redmond v. Rome, W. & O. R. Co. 31 N. Y. S. R. 368, 10 N. Y. Supp. 330, holding conductor standing on tracks in car yard watching brakeman, struck by backing engine, guilty of contributory negligence; Salmon v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 1 Silv. Sup. Ct. 240, 5 N. Y. Supp. 225, holding pedestrian crossing tracks in disregard of attendant's warning, and lowered gates, guilty of contributory negligence; Sias v. Rochester R. Co. 92 Hun, 148, 36 N. Y. Supp. 378, holding it not negligence per se to ride upon platform or to lean out beyond side of trolley car; Walker v. Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. 41 La. Ann. 806, 7 L. R. A. 117, 17 Am. St. Rep. 417, 6 So. 916 (dissenting opinion), majority holding it contributory negligence to alight from train moving from station before giving time for passengers to alight; Bertram v. Peoples R. Co. 154 Mo. 665, 52 S. W. 1119 (dissenting opinion), majority holding it not negligence per se to board slowly moving grip car near pile of bricks.

Cited in footnote to Western Maryland R. Co. v. Herold, 14 L. R. A. 75, which holds entering of car with brakes set before time for starting not negligence per se.

Cited in notes (8 L. R. A. 674) on contributory negligence of passenger; (11 L. R. A. 396) on passenger's negligence in alighting from moving train; (21 L. R. A. 356) on injuries in boarding moving train.

Distinguished in Lewis v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. 145 N. Y. 516, 40 N. E. 248, holding it not contributory negligence, as matter of law, to alight from slowly moving train at request of conductor; Distler v. Long Island R. Co. 151 N. Y. 427, 35 L. R. A. 764, 765, 45 N. E. 937, holding it not negligence per se to board train moving at rate of 2 or 3 miles an hour at invitation of conductor; Weiler v. Manhattan R. Co. 53 Hun, 377, 6 N. Y. Supp. 320, holding it not negligence per se to alight, at conductor's invitation, from blocked elevated train at short distance from station, and proceed along narrow walk to reach stairway; Van Fleet v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 27 N. Y. S. R. 67, 7 N. Y. Supp. 636, holding it not negligence per se for track hand to board slowly moving train under order of foreman to "hurry up;" Reid v. New York, 68 Hun, 112, 22 N. Y. Supp. 623, holding it not negligence per se for passenger of cable car to get off in response to conductor's warning to "hurry up or he would start;" Northern P. R. Co. v. Egeland, 163 U. S. 99, 41 L. ed. 86, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 975, Affirming 5 C. C. A. 473, 12 U. S. App. 271, 56 Fed. 202, holding it not negligence per se for track laborer to jump, in compliance with conductor's orders, from train moving 4 miles an hour.

Disapproved in Murphy v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 43 Mo. App. 349, holding it not negligence per se to board slowly moving train at invitation of conductor.

2 L. R. A. 836, EAST BIRMINGHAM LAND CO. v. DENNIS, 85 Ala. 565, 7 Am. St. Rep. 73, 5 So. 317.

Usage contrary to legal right.

Cited in Davis v. State, 92 Ala. 26, 9 So. 616, holding custom of parties to enter neighbor's house uninvited not admissible in evidence to justify trespass against express orders to keep out; Becker v. Hall, 116 Iowa, 593, 56 L. R. A. 575, 88 N. W. 324, holding unreasonable custom as to appropriation of ice in public waters not sustained; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Naive (Tenn.) 64 L. R. A. 448, 79 S. W. 124, holding custom to suspend business on 4th of July excuses carrier from immediately notifying consignee of arrival of perishable goods.

Cited in notes (10 L. R. A. 785) on validity of usage; (3 L. R. A. 860) on binding force of usage and custom; (10 L. R. A. 366) on custom and usage on question of negligence; (13 L. R. A. 438, 439) on usage and custom in conflict with rules of law.

Fraudulent transfer of stock.

Cited in Farmers' Bank v. Diebold Safe & Lock Co. 66 Ohio St. 377, 58 L. R. A. 624, 90 Am. St. Rep. 586, 64 N. E. 518, holding owner of stock assigned in blank by original holder entitled thereto as against bona fide pledgee for value from one fraudulently obtaining possession of same without assignee's negligence.

Distinguished in Winter v. Montgomery Gaslight Co. 89 Ala. 550, 7 So. 773, holding purchase in good faith for value of stock sold in breach of trust, not apparent from face of certificate, good as against beneficiary, though transfer not registered; Nelson v. Owen, 113 Ala. 380, 21 So. 75, holding purchaser for value without notice from pledgee, of stock indorsed in blank by pledgeor, owner thereof as against pledgeor.

2 L. R. A. 839, ST. LOUIS, A. & T. R. CO. v. WELCH, 72 Tex. 298, 10 S. W. 529.

Who are fellow servants.

Cited in Texas & P. R. Co. v. Rogers, 6 C. C. A. 406, 13 U. S. App. 547, 57 Fed. 381, holding laborer acting as temporary foreman fellow servant with laborer in gang; Ell v. Northern P. R. Co. 1 N. D. 349, 12 L. R. A. 101, 26 Am. St. Rep. 621, 48 N. W. 222, holding train hand and foreman fellow servants; St. Louis, S. W. R. Co. v. Henson, 61 Ark. 307, 32 S. W. 1079, holding foreman of bridge-building gang and engineer, fellow servants; Austin & N. W. R. Co. v. Beatty, 6 Tex. Civ. App. 652, 24 S. W. 934, holding brakeman and man employed to nail numbers on bridges fellow servants; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Farmer, 73 Tex. 87, 11 S. W. 156, holding brakeman and station agent fellow servants; Grattis v. Kansas City, P. & G. R. Co. 153 Mo. 406, 48 L. R. A. 408, 77 Am. St. Rep. 721, 55 S. W. 108, holding fireman, conductor, and engineer fellow servants; Wells, Fargo & Co. v. Page, 29 Tex. Civ. App. 490, 68 S. W. 528, holding express messenger and guard fellow servants; Direct Nav. Co. v. Anderson, 29 Tex. Civ. App. 67, 69 S. W. 174, holding deck hands on tugboat, serving in different watches, fellow servants; International & G. N. R. Co. v. Ryan, 82 Tex. 570, 18 S. W. 219, holding carpenter at rest in caboose after working hours, fellow servant with switchman; Dishon v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 126 Fed. 200, holding section hand, living in section house, leaving it after working hours, a fellow servant of train operatives by whose negligence he was injured; Oriental Investment Co. v. Sline, 17 Tex. Civ. App. 695, 41 S. W. 130, holding chambermaid and elevator man fellow servants in hotel where both employed.

Cited in notes (5 L. R. A. 735) on who are fellow servants; (18 L. R. A. 796) on what constitutes "common employment;" (50 L. R. A. 426) on diversity of duty as affecting common employment; (50 L. R. A. 428) on contiguity as factor in common employment; (18 L. R. A. 797) on servants not on duty as fellow servants; (50 L. R. A. 462) on control by master as factor in determination of relation of master and servant; (50 L. R. A. 433) on illustrations of common employment.

2 L. R. A. 841, MERRILL LODGE, NO. 299, I. O. G. T. v. ELLSWORTH, 78 Cal. 166, 20 Pac. 399.

Mutual benefit association.

Cited in notes (7 L. R. A. 189) on transfer of mutual benefit certificate; (4 L. R. A. 382) on benefit association, enlarged powers conferred by statute.

2 L. R. A. 843, FLUKER v. GEORGIA R. & BKG. CO. 81 Ga. 461, 12 Am. St. Rep. 328, 8 S. E. 529.

Dominion of railroad company over its property.

Cited in Kates v. Atlanta Baggage & Cab Co. 107 Ga. 646, 46 L. R. A. 435, 34 S. E. 372, holding railroad company may grant exclusive privilege of entering depot for purpose of handling baggage on claim checks; Brown v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 75 Hun, 362, 27 N. Y. Supp. 69, holding railroad company may grant exclusive privilege to cab company of soliciting patronage on trains and in yards of railroad.

Distinguished in State v. Reed, 76 Miss. 222, 43 L. R. A. 136, 71 Am. St. Rep. 528, 24 So. 308, holding grant by railroad company to hackman of exclusive privilege of entering depot grounds to solicit patronage unlawful; Memphis News Pub. Co. v. Southern R. Co. (Tenn.) 63 L. R. A. 155, 75 S. W. 941, denying right of railroad company to exclude others from use of newspaper train established upon certain publisher's guarantee of minimum revenue.

— Over depot grounds.

Cited in Cosgrove v. Augusta, 103 Ga. 839, 840, 42 L. R. A. 714, 68 Am. St. Rep. 149, 31 S. E. 445, holding city ordinance prohibiting drummers and cabmen from entering union passage depot to solicit custom invalid; Godbout v. St. Paul Union Depot Co. 79 Minn. 198, 47 L. R. A. 536, 81 N. W. 835, holding railroad company may prohibit hackman from soliciting patronage within depot building; Lucas v. Herbert, 148 Ind. 66, 37 L. R. A. 377, 47 N. E. 146, holding railroad company may designate places cabs and omnibuses shall occupy on depot grounds; Donovan v. Pennsylvania Co. 61 L. R. A. 143, 57 C. C. A. 364, 120 Fed. 217, and New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Bork, 23 R. I. 224, 49 Atl. 965, holding railroad company may exclude from station all hackmen soliciting passengers without its license; Hedding v. Gallagher, 72 N. H. 394, 64 L. R. A. 821, 57 Atl. 225, holding railroad company may grant to teamster exclusive right to solicit baggage in depot.

Cited in note (8 L. R. A. 754) on dominion of railroad company over its stations and grounds.

Prohibition against use of elevator.

Cited in Springer v. Byram, 137 Ind. 27, 23 L. R. A. 250, 45 Am. St. Rep. 159, 36 N. E. 361, holding proprietor of elevator not bound to carry newsboy, although permitted to enter building.

2 L. R. A. 844, RITTLER v. SMITH, 70 Md. 261, 16 Atl. 890.

Insurance; insurable interest.

Cited in footnotes to Adams v. Reed, 35 L. R. A. 692, which holds that woman has insurable interest in life of son-in-law; Hurd v. Doty, 21 L. R. A. 746, which denies right of trustee receiving proceeds of insurance policy to refuse payment to beneficiaries as having no insurable interest; Exchange Bank v. Loh, 44 L. R. A. 372, which holds creditor's insurable interest limited to amount of indebtedness.

Cited in notes (6 L. R. A. 136, 7 L. R. A. 219) on who has insurable interest in life of another; (13 L. R. A. 433, 434) on insurable interest essential to validity of policy.

Nature of contract for life insurance.

Cited in Cahill v. Maryland L. Ins. Co. 90 Md. 347, 47 L. R. A. 617, 45 Atl. 180, holding contract for life annuity is mere chose in action for payment of money.

Endowment policy as asset.

Cited in Re Slingluff, 106 Fed. 156, holding policy payable to insured if he survives term, and which in terms is assignable, passes to trustee in bankruptcy.

Assignment of life-insurance policy.

Cited in Preston v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 95 Md. 114, 51 Atl. 838; Nye v. Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W. 9 Ind. App. 146, 36 N. E. 429; Steinback v. Diepenbrock, 158 N. Y. 30, 44 L. R. A. 419, 70 Am. St. Rep. 424, 52 N. E. 662; Souder v. Home Friendly Soc. 72 Md. 516, 20 Atl. 137, — holding assignment to one without insurable interest valid when policy taken out by insured or by one having insurable interest; Clement v. New York L. Ins. Co. 101 Tenn. 36, 42 L. R. A. 251, 70 Am. St. Rep. 650, 46 S. W. 561, holding assignment must be in good faith, and not as colorable evasion of wagering contract; Clogg v. McDaniel, 89 Md. 422, 43 Atl. 795, holding assignment to creditor of certificate in benefit association not wager, although debt canceled thereby; Hewlett v. Home for Incurables, 74 Md. 354, 17 L. R. A. 448, 24 Atl. 324, holding assignment in consideration of advances in money and hospital treatment to beneficiary valid; Farmers & T. Bank v. Johnson, 118 Iowa, 286, 91 N. W. 1074, sustaining assignment of insurance policy to beneficiary's creditor, without insurable interest in life of insured; Mechanics' Nat. Bank v. Comins, 72 N. H. 19, 55 Atl. 191, sustaining assignment of life-insurance policy to secure corporation's creditor without insurable interest in insured's life.

Cited in footnotes to Steinback v. Diepenbrock, 44 L. R. A. 417, and Chamberlain v. Butler, 54 L. R. A. 338, which sustain right to assign policy to one without insurable interest; Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. v. Hurst, 20 L. R. A. 761, which holds assignee's insurable interest as creditor not condition to recovery on policy; Steele v. Catlin, 59 L. R. A. 129, which holds complete gift not made by verbal assignment of life policy accompanied with words indicating intent to give, and delivery of policy; Opitz v. Karel, 62 L. R. A. 982, which holds valid gift of proceeds of policy payable to insured's personal representative made by delivery of policy; American Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Bertram, 64 L. R. A. 935, holding bona fide assignee of life insurance policy taken by one without insurable interest may recover premiums.

Cited in note (9 L. R. A. 660) on assignability of life policies.

Amount to which assignee of policy entitled.

Cited in Hays v. Lapeyre, 48 La. Ann. 758, 35 L. R. A. 654, 19 So. 821 (dissenting opinion), majority holding assignee not entitled to take more than amount invested.

Cited in footnotes to Morris v. Georgia Loan, Sav. & Bkg. Co. 46 L. R. A. 506, which holds creditor taking assignment of policy entitled to retain from proceeds sufficient to pay debt and advances only; McQuillan v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 56 L. R. A. 233, which upholds provision that assigned policy shall be void as to all above debt due assignee.

Disapproved in Exchange Bank v. Loh, 104 Ga. 453, 44 L. R. A. 376, 31 S. E. 459, and Cheeves v. Anders, 87 Tex. 293, 47 Am. St. Rep. 107, 28 S. W. 274, holding creditor, as assignee, may recover only amount of debt and interest, and amount paid to keep policy alive, with interest.

2 L. R. A. 847, McCROY v. TONEY, 66 Miss. 233, 5 So. 392.

Parol lease for one year.

Cited in Higgins v. Gager, 65 Ark. 607, 47 S. W. 848, holding parol lease for a year, to begin at subsequent date, valid.

Cited in note (8 L. R. A. 221) on tenancy from year to year.

Disapproved in A. G. Rhodes Furniture Co. v. Weeden, 108 Ala. 255, 19 So. 318, holding possession under contract and part payment renders agreement valid.

2 L. R. A. 848, COFFMAN v. HEATNOLE, 85 Va. 459, 17 Am. St. Rep. 69, 8 S. E. 672.

Intention of testator to disinherit heirs.

Cited in Hurst v. Von De Veld, 158 Mo. 247, 58 S. W. 1056; Zimmerman

v. Hafer, 81 Md. 357, 32 Atl. 316; Lawrence v. Smith, 163 Ill. 166, 45 N. E. 259, — holding mere intention of testator to disinherit, although clearly expressed, not sufficient; Todd v. Gentry, 109 Ky. 708, 60 S. W. 639, holding will limiting heir's inheritance to $2 does not disinherit him as to property undistributed of by will.

Cited in note (11 L. R. A. 767) on "disinheritance."

Distinguished in Murphy's Estate, 104 Cal. 567, 38 Pac. 543, upholding holographic will disinheriting part of children, but devising property to others.

2 L. R. A. 853, SOUTH NASHVILLE STREET R. CO. v. MORROW, 87 Tenn. 406, 11 S. W. 348.

Legislative control of taxation.

Cited in Adams v. Kuykendall, 83 Miss. 594, 35 So. 830, sustaining statute authorizing state revenue agent to assess municipal taxes on property omitted by municipal officers; Pryor v. Bryan, 11 Okla. 366, 66 Pac. 348, holding statute exempting property on Indian reservation from taxation, except for territorial and court funds, not unconstitutional.

Taxation of corporation — Franchise.

Cited in State ex rel. Milwaukee Street R. Co. v. Anderson, 90 Wis. 566, 63 N. W. 746, holding franchise property, included with personalty, taxable as entirety where statute fails to specify manner of valuation and taxation; Africa v. Knoxville, 70 Fed. 734, holding easement in street acquired under railway franchise taxable as property; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 125 Mich. 687, 84 Am. St. Rep. 589, 85 N. W. 96, holding franchise property included under statute requiring assessment of street railway "tracks."

Cited in notes (57 L. R. A. 37, 38) on nature of franchises as subjects of taxation; (57 L. R. A. 40) on taxability of franchises; (58 L. R. A. 564) on taxation of corporate franchises; (60 L. R. A. 333) on taxation of franchises, privileges, and occupations.

— Stock.

Cited in Memphis v. Union & Planters' Bank, 91 Tenn. 550, 19 S. W. 758, holding that payment of tax on shares of stock "in lieu of all other taxes" under charter exempts capital stock from taxation; Memphis v. Memphis City Bank, 91 Tenn. 578, 19 S. W. 1045, and Memphis v. Home Ins. Co. 91 Tenn. 561, 19 S. W. 1042, holding payment of tax on "amount of capital actually paid in" under charter exempts capital stock from further taxation, but not shares of stock; State v. Bank of Commerce, 95 Tenn. 227, 31 S. W. 993, holding tax on capital stock in lieu of all other taxes does not exempt shares of stock, surplus, or undivided profits; German American Sav. Bank v. Burlington, 118 Iowa, 86, 91 N. W. 829, holding bank cannot deduct from shares of its stock assessed to it, government bonds held as part of capital.

Cited in notes (58 L. R. A. 590) on double taxation of corporation and stockholder; (60 L. R. A. 367) on double taxation; (58 L. R. A. 588) on duty of corporation to collect tax on share stock.

Not followed in Stroh v. Detroit, 131 Mich. 116, 90 N. W. 1029, holding taxation of shares in foreign corporation whose property is situated and taxed in state double.

Exemptions.

Cited in Union & Planters' Bank v. Memphis, 101 Tenn. 159, 46 S. W. 557, holding exemption of capital stock constitutional, but not exemption of shares of stock; Knoxville & O. R. Co. v. Harris, 99 Tenn. 697, 53 L. R. A. 927, 43 S. W. 115, holding franchise and surplus fund not included in exemption of capital stock, road, fixtures, etc.; Grundy County v. Tennessee Coal, I. & R. Co. 94 Tenn. 304, 29 S. W. 116, holding suit properly brought by owner, if valuation contested, but by collector, if right to assess denied.

Valuation for taxation.

Cited in Carroll v. Alsop, 107 Tenn. 293, 64 S. W. 193, holding actual cash value proper basis of assessment; Reelfoot Lake Levee Dist. v. Dawson, 97 Tenn. 161, 34 L. R. A. 728, 36 S. W. 1041, holding Acts 1895, Ex. Sess. chap. 1, §§ 6, 21, unconstitutional for disregard of requirement of taxation according to value; State v. Weyerhauser, 68 Minn. 368, 71 N. W. 265, upholding validity of statute providing for reassessment of undervalued property and enforcement of additional tax; Railroad & Teleph. Co. v. Board of Equalizers, 85 Fed. 317, enjoining collection of tax where assessment unequal, though complainants' property not overvalued.

Cited in footnote to State ex rel. Davis & S. Lumber Co. v. Pors, 51 L. R. A. 917, which authorizes reassessment of personalty omitted in previous year, though no longer in existence.

Denied in Galusha v. Wendt, 114 Iowa, 611, 87 N. W. 512, suggesting reassessment of mistakenly undervalued property in same year unjust in view of honest diversity of opinion.

Definition of "capital stock."

Cited in Tradesman Pub. Co. v. Knoxville Car Wheel Co. 95 Tenn. 656, 31 L. R. A. 600, 49 Am. St. Rep. 943, 32 S. W. 1097, holding limit to amount of capital stock does not restrict amount of property that corporation may acquire.

Situs of personalty for taxation.

Cited in Jack v. Walker, 79 Fed. 142, holding bond and mortgage owned by nonresident not taxable, though in hands of resident agent for collection; Minneapolis & N. Elevator Co. v. Traill County, 9 N. D. 221, 50 L. R. A. 271, 82 N. W. 727, holding elevator company taxable for grain therein, though owners nonresidents; Western Assur. Co. v. Halliday, 61 C. C. A. 273, 126 Fed. 259, upholding taxation of municipal bonds deposited with superintendent of insurance by foreign insurance company.

— Stock.

Cited in State v. Kidd, 125 Ala. 421, 28 So. 480, holding situs of stock of foreign corporation at owner's domicile, unless otherwise fixed by statute; Greves v. Shaw, 173 Mass. 208, 53 N. E. 372, holding stock of domestic corporations and national banking corporations located in state subject to taxation under general tax law; Augusta v. Kimball, 91 Me. 607, 41 L. R. A. 476, 40 Atl. 666, holding stock in foreign corporation held by nonresident trustees for resident beneficiaries not subject to taxation.

Cited in note (58 L. R. A. 582) on taxation of stock in domestic corporation held by nonresident.

2 L. R. A. 863, HAWES v. NICHOLAS, 72 Tex. 481, 10 S. W. 558.

Revocation of will.

Cited in footnotes to Miles's Appeal, 36 L. R. A. 176, which holds erasure of specific legacy from will not revocation of legacy; Billington v. Jones, 56 L. R. A. 654, which holds will revoked by writing on it statement that it is void, stating that it is killed, and filing it away; Cutler v. Cutler, 57 L. R. A. 209, which holds will revoked by adopting mutilations by vermin.

Cited in notes (7 L. R. A. 486) on revocation, revival, and republication of will; (37 L. R. A. 577) on revocation of will by subsequent will, and revival of former by destruction of the latter; (38 L. R. A. 439) on evidence to establish lost or destroyed wills.

Revival of earlier will by destruction of later testament.

Disapproved in Re Gould, 72 Vt. 318, 47 Atl. 1082, holding destruction of subsequent revoking will may revive former will without republication, if so intended; Stetson v. Stetson, 200 Ill. 608, 612, 61 L. R. A. 262, 66 N. E. 262, holding destruction of will revives former will therein revoked, if uncanceled.

2

3 6105 063 243 724

7

